Sandefur named as chairman

SANFORD — Stanley Sandefur has been named as the new chairman of Seminole National Bank. Sandefur, operator of Sandefur Properties, Inc., in Sanford, replaced F.W. "Buzz" Thurston, who served in that position for the past year.

Sandefur serves as chairman for the total Seminole National Bank with its main office at 2439 Airport Boulevard, as well as an office on First Street in Downtown Sanford.

The election took place during the bank's annual meeting, held in March.

Wilmot saddened by closing

ORLANDO — Rear Admiral Louise Wilmot, who ends her two-year stint as commander of Orlando's Naval Training Center in June, says she's saddened by the Navy's recommendation to close the facility.

"I enjoy the community. I loved being the commander of this base," said Wilmot, only the second woman to command the Orlando base since it opened in 1968.

"I feel enormous compassion for all of us, for the problems that this is going to cause — both professionally and personally in everyone's life," she said.

On June 4, Wilmot will be succeeded by Admiral Select Leonard Oden, commanding officer of the aircraft carrier Constellation. Wilmot will go to Pensacola to become the Navy's vice chief of education and training.

The Defense Department has recommended shutting the training center — the only Navy boot camp that trains women — and 30 other facilities in the next six years. Officials estimate the closings will save $1.7 billion a year beginning in 1998.

The Defense Base Closure and Readignment Commission must recommend a final list to President Bush by July 1, and Florida politicians are lobbying heavily to save the base.

Brothel theme park idea costly

CARSON CITY, Nev. — A Northern Nevada Correctional Center psychologist who wanted to open a wild west brothel theme park near the old mining camp of Silver City has been fired.

William Mace Knapp said Monday that his last official work day will be Friday. He already is on administrative leave. The proposal also cost Knapp's wife, Peggy, her job as a Nevada Women's Prison warden.

Karl Samuels, assistant director of operations for the state Department of Prisons, confirmed the dismissal stemming from Knapp's plan for the park.

Mrs. Knapp said she didn't know yet whether she would appeal her firing. Knapp said he would appeal his dismissal.

Knapp also said he's dropping his proposed brothel theme park. "At this point, it's on hold," he said. "Building a brothel 10 miles from the Nevada Capitol was a bad idea."

SANFORD — The best and the brightest of Seminole County's teachers were gathered at the Sanford Civic Center last evening to be lauded by district administrators and their peers.

Nearly 700 friends, family and well-wishers were in attendance at the celebration at which Jeanne Guppy, a fourth grade teacher at Sanford's Wilson Elementary School, the 1991 Teacher of the Year, was the top honoree.

According to a spokesman for the Seminole County school district, last night's crowd was the largest to ever attend the teacher of the year celebrations.

CableVision of Central Florida recorded the activities to be broadcast on their public access Channel 16 tonight at 8 p.m. on May 15 at 4:30 p.m. and May 23 at 8:30 p.m.

Diane Lewis, last year's Teacher of the Year, passed her title on to this year's winner while the two runners up and nominees from each of the district's 10 other schools were named by Dr. Marion Daily, assistant superintendent for in-

Fourth of July fireworks up in the air

Fireworks dilemma divides Lake Mary

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The question of whether or not to hold the July 4th fireworks display in Lake Mary is still undecided. Parks and Recreation Director John Holland says however, "We'll have one. It's just a question of finding a suitable location."

The city was informed last month by Deborah Miner, of the Crossings Master Community Association that the group would be willing to host the display this year. Primavera also offered property to be used as the site for the fireworks.

The main problems however, involve traffic, emergency vehicle access and the size of the property required for a fireworks impact area.

At last Thursday's city commission meeting, Primavera, which would have had sufficient land on which to hold the program, was tentatively turned down because of traffic problems expected the night of July 4. Holland had suggested an event held at Primavera would stop traffic on F.L. Lake Mary Boulevard, Lake Emma Road and Richland Road. Additionally, there would be

People's Fireworks in Sanford seeks aid

SANFORD — The 2nd Annual People's Fireworks Fourth of July event is still being planned for the Sanford Lakelmont area but according to the organizer, Steven D. Alford, there is still a need for additional donations with which to purchase the fireworks.

Although a number of donations have been made from various businesses as well as civic and fraternal groups, and several fund raising events have already helped raise some money, Alford said, "The more money we receive, the bigger display we'll have."

The previous Sanford fireworks displays had been financed by funds from the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, but that practice was stopped in 1989. Last year, Alford began the first fund raiser and was able to obtain $4,100 worth of fireworks to entertain an estimated 10,000 persons.

This year, with the 215th birthday of the United States, he said, "We should celebrate it as best as we can." He plans to not only have fireworks, but a number of displays

SANFORD — A five year old Sanford girl died Sunday from head injuries sustained in an April auto accident.

Sarah Sims was pronounced dead at Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women Sunday at 5:20 p.m., according to a hospital spokesman. The cause of the death was listed as complications from a head injury she received during the April 17 accident.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Old Lake Mary Road and West 25th Street at 4:54 p.m., said Sanford Police Chief Steven Burnett. Sarah, along with her eight year old sister Lauren Sims, was riding in the backseat of the car driven by her mother, Deborah A.A. Sims, 44, 104 Dredwood

Lake Mary artist 'Best of Show'

By VICKI DeSORMIER

LAKE MARY — Robert Jones, a junior at Lake Mary High School, will be traveling to Washington, D.C. in June to see his drawing entitled "Lee-Mary" hung at the U.S. Capitol.

Jones' work was among the Best of Show at the 1991 Metropolitan Art and Congressional District High School Art Competition in Washington.

Over 100 pieces of art from 10 high schools in the Metropolitan Congressional District were entered in the contest.

There were 100 entries in the district contest and Melissa Hudler, youth assistant to Metropolitan Art Director Barbara Washington, D.C., was the judge.

Jones said that as he traveled to the artists' who displayed in the contest, he was struck by the quality of the work. "I was very impressed with the talent of the artists," he said. "I was very impressed with the talent of the artists."

School. Harris was given a first place ribbon and will be given $70 in gift certificates from ARTSystems of Florida and Orlando Frame and Art.

Fabi Murrugu, a junior at Lake Brantley High School will be given the opportunity to intern for one week with artist Edson Campos of Orlando.

The internships are really unique opportunities, Burns said. The students will have the chance to work one-on-one with people who are in the art field.

Honorable Mention ribbons were also given to three students from Seminole County schools.

Robin Hunke of Lake Brantley High School, Kyle Jackson of Seminole High School and Patricia DeFrancis of Lake Mary High School.

McClure said that he was impressed with the talent of the artists in the three county exposure of his district.

With education high on our agenda in Washington, he said, it is gratifying to see what these high school art teachers are achieving with their students.

Sales tax election for sure

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Although Longwood and Oviedo rejected the plan last night, the Seminole County commission today was expected to officially declare July 9 as the date for voters to decide if they want a 1-cent increase in the sales tax.

The county already has received approval of city governments representing enough population to allow it to keep all of the money obtained through the tax increase.

Seminole County Manager Ron Rabun has been seeking support from cities throughout the county which would represent at least 50 percent of the population. With approval already granted by Sanford, Winter Springs, Altamonte Springs and Lake Mary, Rabun has accomplished his goal with approximately 70 percent of the population now represented.

If the voters in the county approve the proposal, the 1-cent tax increase ordinarily shared by cities and the county could be retained by the county to be used in a massive road-building project.

At the Longwood meeting last night, the City Commission didn't reject it, they just didn't accept it. Because of the lack of a second on a motion in favor adoption, the City of Longwood did not

Anderson named as deputy mayor

LONGWOOD — Rex Anderson moved into the deputy mayor's seat for Monday night's city commission meeting, taking over the position vacated through the resignation of Gary Heffer. The city charter is presently structured to allow for a rotation according to district number to fill the position. Heffer represented District 3, and Anderson represents District 4.

As Mayor Hank Hardy welcomed Anderson to his new position, the commissioner said, "The charter speaks for itself." He added, "I feel like this is just another way to serve the contents of the city charter. I don't foresee any problems. I'm just here to serve the people."

Later in the commission meeting, Anderson went against an ordinance that would have changed the way deputy mayors are chosen. Rather than a rotation according to district numbers, the proposal would have the position

Barbara Bush makes appearance

STUART — An admittedly relieved Barbara Bush made a scheduled appearance at a literacy program and said she doesn't expect her husband to cut back his agenda.

"Do I think he should slow down?" Mrs. Bush repeated while talking with reporters Monday. "Look, I've been married to him 46 years. I'm not going to try to change him now."

She said her husband wasn't the type "to lie around," and she added that the irregular heartbeat that sent him to the hospital Saturday apparently wasn't linked to his lifestyle.

Mrs. Bush flew here from Washington to keep the planned visit to the Martin County Literacy Council, which helped teach about 300 people to read last year and also is helping boost literacy programs in state prisons after State budget cuts curtailed such efforts for inmates.

As hundreds of people packed into the Ocean East Mall for the half-hour visit, they cheered and one person shouted "How's George?" Mrs. Bush beamed and replied, "He's great."

Raids on gay nightclubs criticized

FORT LAUDERDALE — Raids on two gay nightclubs in Broward County resulted in a number of drug-related arrests, but critics say discrimination and politics played a role.

"It was an incredible abuse of law enforcement activity," said Norman Kent, a lawyer who represents Club 21.

About 100 sheriff's deputies and drug enforcement agents, backed by a helicopter, swarmed Club 21 in Pembroke Park and Copa Cabaret in northern Hollywood on Friday night. Six people were arrested on narcotics charges, and alcohol licenses at both clubs were suspended.

Sheriff's spokesman Jim Lejeda said the raid culminated an investigation that began in February. Officials plan to arrest about 20 others on drug-related charges, he said.

Lejeda denied that the sexual orientation of the patrons played a role in the decision to raid the clubs.

"We would take the same action if the straight clubs were selling cocaine openly from the bar stools," he said.

Pen pals to marry

HURLEBURT FIELD, Fla. — When Airman Tim Masters was in Saudi Arabia for the Persian Gulf war he found the perfect pen pal through a letter addressed to "any soldier."

Masters, 21, of Austin, Texas, and his "write woman," so to speak, are getting married Tuesday at his home in nearby Navarre Beach.

"I fell in love from the letters," said the bride, Allison Dodd, 24, of Paducah, Ky. "We told each other everything. We were very honest and open, and we were able to get very close."

The Air Force's gain is the 101st Airborne Division's loss. Ms. Dodd, then a student at Murray State University, had sent her "any soldier" letter in care of the Kentucky-based Army unit. But the letter got lost and ended up with the Air Force.

Divers save mom; dad, daughter die

HUDSON — Divers saved the mother but a father and his 8-year-old daughter died in a boating accident apparently caused by a broken steering cable.

Florida Marine Patrol officials believe the cable snapped an 18-foot fishing boat Sunday, tossing overboard Kevin Bowman, 30, his wife Theresa, 37 and their daughter, Rachel.

Two divers saw a woman treading water while holding a little girl in the boat circled aimlessly in the Gulf of Mexico about a mile from Hudson, a small town roughly 20 miles north of Ft. Pierce.

"We saw a little girl bobbing," said Terry Steponaitis, a master diver from Spring Hill. "It was just luck we saw her. She was so far from the boat."

Bowman and Rachel never regained consciousness.

A nut that holds the cable to the engine apparently came undone, causing the cable to shake loose, said Don Tyre, a Marine Patrol investigator.

It jolted the Sea Lion to the side, tossing Bowman about 200 yards from the boat. Investigators think the boat may have hit the girl.

Plan to help homeless unveiled

MIAMI — Miami Mayor Xavier Suarez unveiled an initiative that calls on local governments to contribute $6 million annually for new homeless shelters and for churches and businesses to "adopt" homeless men and women.

The mayor's plan, which he outlined in a luncheon speech before the Miami Coalition for Care to the Homeless Monday, would create 2,000 more beds for the homeless, double the number now available in Dade County.

Suarez also called for individual Dade churches, temples and businesses to pick out and sponsor a homeless man or woman "so throughout the nation they'll know Miami is a community that cares for its homeless."

Suarez pledged to urge his colleagues on the City Commission to contribute $1 million annually and he called on the county to donate $5 million a year.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Name checks irk gun dealers

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
 Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — It only takes an average 3½ minutes to check the names of gun buyers against computerized criminal records, the state has reported three months after starting the program.

Gun dealers, however, say they're being kept on the line with customers waiting at the counter more than twice that long.

"The firearm purchase program has been operating with a minimum of trouble and complaints and is accomplishing its intent, to help keep firearms out of the hands of criminals," said Tim Moore, commissioner of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

FDLE has gotten the checks down to an average 3½ minutes, according to Martha Wright, who is in charge of the FDLE information systems bureau.

-Herb Stratton

"That's absolutely bogus," Herb Stratton, owner of Action Gun Outfitters in Melbourne, said Monday. "That's a big falsehood. It's ludicrous that they'd even say that."

Stratton said the typical call takes eight to 12 minutes.

Bob Griggs, with B&H Gun Rack in nearby Melbourne, said he saw an improvement after the first month but that checks are still causing too much of a delay.

"After the first 30 days, we got a remarkable increase in the speed in which the calls were processed — most of the time," he said. "However, on any given day, particularly Friday and Saturday ... the calls would sometimes grow to the same old seven, eight minutes."

On top of that, the FDLE computer goes down frequently, Griggs said.

Stratton estimated that his clerks had spent at least 12 hours on the phone since Feb. 1. He said he had sold a gun Monday morning after clearing the sale with FDLE. The call began at 11:06 a.m. and finished at 11:14 a.m., he said.

That eight-minute wait is typical, he said. Both Griggs and Stratton also reported customer disapproval of the $10 fee.

Heat wave: electricity, water conservation programs clash

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — During last week's heat wave, hundreds of huge water-cooled air conditioners chugged along in drought-prone Florida, gurgling away millions of gallons of water.

That has led to a head-on collision between water and electricity conservation programs in Florida, creating a dilemma for local officials.

The evaporation-prone systems were even allowed to run at the height of drought restrictions across the state last year — because they save electricity.

The large, commercial air-conditioning systems at issue use millions of gallons a year. To dilute the minerals left behind by evaporation, two fresh gallons are pumped in for every gallon that evaporates.

The water could be conserved — but only by substituting an electrically cooled system.

"What's a mother to do?" asks Jim Jackson of the South Florida Water Management District's Government Assistance Division.

Florida Power & Light advises big businesses on how to best air-condition their buildings, but "the primary purpose is to look at reducing electricity use," FP&L spokesman Gary Mehalik acknowledged.

Woman, toddler drown in canal

Associated Press

POMPANO BEACH — A woman and her 3-year-old daughter were killed Monday morning when their car plunged into a 15-foot-deep canal only 25 yards from her front door, law enforcement officials said.

Ivrae Joseph was on her way to drop her daughter, Susanne, off at pre-school when she made a U-turn and lost control of her car, according to the Florida Highway Patrol.

"I jumped in the water, she called, 'Help me, help me!' from the window," said William Ramos, one of several neighbors who jumped in the canal in a failed rescue attempt. "So I tried to open the door or break the glass."

It took rescue divers 20 minutes to get the two from the car after it sank in the canal, according to FHP Lt. Michael Matz.

"The divers were able to get them out ... but as far as I know they were both pronounced dead at the hospital," said Matz.

Neighbors were angry that there is no fence around the canal, where a man died on Christmas day last year when he mistook the canal for a road during a heavy rainstorm.

Two beaten, cars damaged in rock-bottle throwing

Associated Press

TAMPA — About 100 young people hurled rocks and bottles at cars and beat two motorists after police shut off water to area fire hydrants.

Trouble flared Sunday evening in College Hill, a predominantly black housing development where violence broke out in 1987 following the death of a black man who was subdued by white officers using the since-banned choke-hold.

Nine people were injured in three nights of rock-throwing, burning and looting four years ago.

In Sunday's outburst, several people driving through the area were forced from their cars. Two men were beaten, treated at a hospital for cuts and bruises and released, Steve Cole, spokesman for the Tampa Police Department, said Monday.

Teens and young adults had turned on four or five hydrants and were playing in the water on a hot afternoon. Cole said officers let the hydrants run for more than three hours, then began shutting them off.

POLICE BRIEFS

Inmate faces new charges

Titus Manning, 30, of 1016 Olive Ave. in Sanford is currently in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility serving time for other crimes.

He was arrested again on Thursday in connection with a burglary. The warrant for his arrest was under another name which he had previously used as an alias.

Man of many names arrested

Seminole County Sheriff's deputies, checking the records of a prisoner at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility, found the man was not only wanted on other charges, but had been known to use 16 separate aliases.

Wesley Wright III, 43, 1009 Orange Avenue, was already confined to jail on drug related charges, when it was found he was also wanted on an outstanding warrant for violation of parole. The parole, for a ten year period, was connected to cases involving burglary to an occupied building and throwing a deadly missile into a dwelling. That warrant had been issued in June of 1989.

Wright was also wanted on a charge of perjury during an official proceeding, dated October 7, 1988, when he reportedly gave false information during a trial.

Man fights with officer and runs

When Altamonte Springs Police officers tried to stop a Ford pickup truck early Saturday morning, the driver reportedly traveled a considerable distance before he brought the vehicle to a stop west of the intersection of Clempson and Michigan Street.

According to a police report, the driver, Michael Wayne McKague, 24, of 458 W. Clempson Drive, then left the vehicle and attempted to escape. Two police officers were able to stop him as he tried to scale a wooden fence, but he reportedly kicked each of them as they tried to subdue him.

Officers later found a bag containing a green leafy substance in the vehicle, which was identified as marijuana. He has been placed in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on charges of battery to a law enforcement officer, fleeing and attempting to elude a law enforcement officer, possession of cannabis, and driving with a suspended drivers license.

Fire alarm but no fire

After officers at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility stopped a fight between two inmates, they attempted to move one to another cell area. As David Thomas Hampton, 23, of 1904 S. Summerlin Avenue was being moved, he set off a fire alarm by activating the alarm lever. As officers tried to subdue him, he reportedly attempted to start a second alarm. He was finally moved to another cell block where he will now stand additional charges connected with attempting to obstruct the move by falsely setting off the alarm mechanism.

Undercover operation nets seller

A combined City and County Investigation Bureau undercover operation at the Interstate-6 Mall in Altamonte Springs Sunday, resulted in the arrest of Penny Leigh King, 6119 Westgate Drive in Orlando. King was charged with the sale of LSD, 1,000 units for which the undercover agent was to pay $1,200. She was placed under arrest by bureau officers and taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Stolen car recovered

Seminole County law enforcement officers driving past the Kings Inn, on State Road 46 near I-4, early Saturday morning found a motor vehicle listed as having been stolen.

When officers arrived they found the car being driven by Charles Joseph Cattone, 58 of Miami, a Cadillac sedan, had been stolen in Fort Lauderdale, and Cattone was wanted for escape from Beckham Hall Community Correctional Center in Dade County. Four stolen credit cards were also found in his possession by the officers. Cattone is being held in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on charges of grand theft auto, and dealing with stolen property.

Assistance ends in drug arrest

Sanford police were willing to render assistance to an automobile parked on West 1st Street, near the Circle-K store Saturday afternoon, but after checking the vehicle, they found a plastic container inside it that contained crack cocaine. Arrested on charges of possession of a controlled substance were Karelle Vernon Slater, 24, 1201 W. 11th Street, owner of the vehicle, and his passenger, Sherman D. Allison, 35, of 1817 Landing Drive, Sanford. Both men were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Through the swamp to avoid arrest

Law officers were called to the Comfort Inn, at Lake of the Woods near Fern Park Friday, to check on what was suspected as a stolen credit card used to obtain a room. When officers arrived, the suspect, Salvatore Joseph Lupu, 27 of Ocala, had left the area, but returned soon to find the officers waiting for him. According to the police report, Lupu ran into a nearby wooded area, and after attempting to walk through swampland with a 4 foot water depth, officers were able to nab him. He then reportedly struck the officer and escaped again, running through another 50 yards of muddied area. After a half hour chase during which the area was surrounded by additional officers, he was finally apprehended.

Lupu was wanted on a number of outstanding warrants including a misdemeanor charge in Ocala, failure to appear for a DUI charge, bribery, a felony connected with violation of parole on burglary to a dwelling charge, uttering a forged instrument, grand theft auto charges in Ocala, and failure to appear on a DUI charge in Seminole County.

Lupu is being held without bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Woman charged with residential burglary

A witness reported seeing a person leave a house at 903 E. Orange Avenue in Longwood Saturday night and reported it to Longwood Police. Judith Ann Flarity, 36 of 136 Ocean Drive, Miami, was apprehended by the officers and charged with burglary to a residence. The property taken, through an unlocked door, was estimated to be valued at $3,063.

Flarity was taken to the Longwood Police headquarters for booking, then confined to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Man wanted in Virginia for auto theft

After receiving information regarding a man wanted in connection with the theft of a 1989 Ford Mustang, police contacted Joseph Anthony Quintana, 23, at his Longwood home, 1705 Aidarado Court in Longwood.

A warrant had been issued against Quintana for grand theft auto by the Fairfax County, Virginia Police Department.

He is being held in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility pending arrangements of transportation to Virginia.

Longwood students top Latin scholars

By VICKI DeSORMEN

LONGWOOD — Ten Lyman High School students are among the top Latin scholars in the country.

Of the Lyman winners, one student, Marc Pinsky, received a summa cum laude ranking which qualified him for a gold medal. Three students, Kelly Register, Donna Goggin and Mitchell Nix, received silver maximum cum laude medals.

The 10 Lyman students, among 80,000 nationwide to take the National Latin Exam, scored in the top five percent of those participants.

Lyman High School is located at 1141 S.E. County Road 427 in Longwood.

The National Latin Exam consists of 42 questions and the average participant across the country got 27 questions correct. Those that scored above that average were honored with awards.

Naomi Davis, who developed and now teaches the four-year course in Latin at Lyman, said that the winning students are all "diligent workers and enthusiastic about their studies."

Latin, once considered a staple of a well-rounded education, is not often the foreign language of choice for today's students, though Davis said she thinks a background in the language would better prepare students to study other languages, including English.

"It really helps them with their SAT scores," Davis said. "It's a good college preparatory course for vocabulary."

There are about 50 students enrolled in the Latin program at Lyman, the majority of them are first year students.

"Latin is holding its own," Davis said. "Spanish is still the most popular language, but Latin is hanging in there."

Computer sleuth tracks bad guys, witnesses

Associated Press

ORLANDO — When police absolutely can't locate someone — from a bad guy to a trial witness — they call on Ron Hill.

So do lawyers looking for heirs to estates and finance companies trying to find those who skip out on their bills.

The Seminole County Sheriff's Office honored Hill, of Orlando, Saturday as auxiliary deputy sheriff of the year. Sheriff's spokesman George Proechel said Hill became a volunteer auxiliary deputy after expressing an interest in police work to a friend who serves as a deputy.

Hill has helped agencies across Florida, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U.S. Marshal's Service and Orlando police. Recently, Hill was paging through a magazine when he saw a list of the state's most-wanted criminals and decided this was the ultimate challenge to his investigative skills.

Sitting at a computer at home, searching through databases, he soon came up with a clue to one of the fugitives: Willie Norris Griffith, who escaped from prison while serving a life sentence for killing an Orlando cab driver.

Griffith had used his Social Security number for identification in 1988 in California.

Hill called the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, and FDLE agents were soon working with Hill to track down the killer. Griffith, using a new name and with a wife and two children, was arrested in Utah. Chalk up another success for Hill, who makes his living by finding people who have dropped out of sight.

Hill, 45, is new to computers but not to investigations. He is a former military intelligence officer, private investigator and radio reporter and started up the computer business, called InfoTrak, with his son in 1988.

He learned the value of computers in his work for an Orlando law firm, locating auto accident witnesses years after the crashes, when many had moved.

"I needed a way of tracking somebody who's been gone more than a year or left no forwarding address," Hill said on Saturday.

His son, Charles, 23, a University of Central Florida computer sciences student, helped find the databases that held information on millions of people, filed by Social Security numbers.

Up in the air

In an effort to boost business back to pre-gulf war levels, America's airlines have been advertising deep discounts on their fares. But consumers have found that actually getting one of those cheap tickets can be harder than figuring out the rules for using frequent-flyer coupons. Their frustration is fueling demands in Washington D.C. for renewed regulation of the airline industry.

Some former industry executives, consumer activists and state attorneys general compare the discount-ticket offers to classic bait-and-switch operations. The airlines counter that what is involved is a new pricing theory called "yield management," in which computers scan the ticket sales on each upcoming flight and continuously adjust the pricing on the seats available according to which combination is likely to fill up the plane.

That kind of efficiency helps to keep the overall costs of air travel down for everyone and it promotes better fuel economy. Yield management has also been credited with boosting profits enough to keep some troubled carriers in business.

But it does mean that if the offer of a lower fare prompts a lot of calls, the computer may actually begin reducing the number of seats available at the price. And if it begins adjusting back the other way later on, the cheap seat you didn't get when you called one morning may turn out to be available a few days later to someone else.

A group called the Aviation Consumer Action Project has already asked the federal Transportation Department to require the airlines to offer at least 10 percent of their seats at the prices they advertise. But because all of those offerings could come at off-peak hours, the attorneys general in 34 states are trying to persuade the airlines to accept guidelines that would guarantee enough seats to meet "reasonably foreseeable demand" on every flight every day.

The place for the Transportation Department to start is with the ads themselves and the false expectations they have apparently created. If there are ways of making the restrictions on discount offers more explicit, the airlines should do so.

Setting a minimum standard along the lines that the Consumer Action Project recommends might also make sense. But the more rigid requirements proposed by the states would defeat most of the benefits of the yield management system.

If the airlines can fill their planes charging full fare at the most popular commute hours, there's no reason for bargain hunters to complain — especially if it means that more discount tickets may be available on a later flight.

Don't print names of rape victims

Give clever people enough time and they can talk themselves into anything. If the clever folk happen to be journalists, some of them can even convince themselves that rape victims won't mind — or at least shouldn't mind, once society has been properly "educated" — if we start publishing their names in newspapers.

"Once we routinely name rape victims," says Stephen Isaacs, associate dean of Columbia University's School of Journalism, "the stigma associated with being a rape victim would be abolished fairly quickly. To get name them alongside them in the stigma of being dirty."

Alan Dershowitz, a Harvard law professor and syndicated columnist, agrees. "The reasons offered by those who would justify the nearly uniform policy of not reporting the names of rape victims are totally throwbacks to 1950 and days when rape victims were believed — in the sexist language of a bygone age — to be 'damaged goods,' or to have 'asked for it,'" Dershowitz argues.

I've only quoted men here, but some female journalists are also having second thoughts — especially in the wake of the William Kennedy Smith case in Florida — about the nearly uniform policy in the news media against naming alleged rape victims. They, too, characterize the policy as paternalistic, suggesting it reinforces the "stigma" associated with those who've been raped.

Now, I don't deny that a stigma survives among a sadly large number of Americans, with the rape victim indirectly being blamed for her experience. Marriages have even broken up over the fact that some men can't adjust to the fact that their wives have been sexually assaulted.

Yet I would argue that even if this stigma could be exorcised entirely, the news media still shouldn't — except on rare occasions — name alleged rape victims. It simply won't do for us to declare rape a crime of violence and then pretend it is equivalent to non-sexual assaults. It is not equivalent, and not merely because of sexist, Victorian hangups. Being forced into sex is fundamentally more traumatic and, yes, humiliating, than most other assaults (except, perhaps, those that leave permanent injury), because the sense of violation is more personal.

Even in this ostensibly secular age, most people do not view sex as merely another physical activity, on a par with, say, strolling or eating. And many still consider sex something that, if not sacred, at least deserves profound respect.

True, there is at least one good argument in favor of releasing names. Both Dershowitz and Sam Archibald, a journalism professor specializing in communications law at the University of Colorado, point out that revealing the name of a citizen who accuses someone else of a crime constitutes basic fairness. Says Archibald: "It may well be that somebody says, 'Oh, well, Sally says she was raped? She couldn't have been. We were out drinking that night.'"

But how often is this sort of revelation likely to occur? Is it likely to occur at all, for that matter, if thousands of rape victims refuse to report their assaults because of fear of publicity?

Idleness impedes technology

WASHINGTON — In 1980, this country enjoyed a 75 percent share of the global market for semiconductors, the thumb-nail-size chips that are the foundation of modern computer technology. Japan's share at the time was limited to 24 percent.

By 1990, this country's share had shriveled to 36.5 percent — less than half of what it was a decade earlier. Japan's share, however, had more than doubled to 49.5 percent — in great measure because that nation's government has long targeted the rapidly expanding industry as crucial to its export-driven economic growth.

Japan's government played a similar role in snatching control of video recording technology from the United States — after the California-based Ampex Corp. invented the means of preserving television images on magnetic tape.

Ampex introduced the videotape recorder (for commercial use) in 1956 and the videocassette recorder (for home use) in 1970. Although the firm held virtually all the patents in the field, mass production in this country was thwarted by a lack of interest in commercializing the technology.

But government and corporate leaders in Japan recognized the VCR's sales potential, assumed control of the product and now ship millions of units to the United States — and other countries around the world — every year.

Now unfolding are similar developments that could allow the Japanese to dominate future production and marketing of advanced technologies ranging from flat panel displays — already widely used in portable computers — to high-definition television.

In the future, Japan's reliance upon public-private cooperation to target and aggressively pursue the development of nascent technologies is likely to help it assume similar control of superconductivity, X-ray lithography, robotics, optical, biotechnology and other 21st-century advances.

One indication that President Bush has belatedly recognized a crisis in the making was the recent White House designation of 22 technologies considered crucial to the country's economic prosperity and national security — a move that could lead to increased federal funding in those fields.

But dominating the domestic debate for years have been opponents of the government-industry cooperation that might make this country competitive in many fields. That approach, they argue, constitutes "picking winners and losers" — a task anathema to free-market economists and politicians.

In fact, federal policy-makers already engage in that practice. The Energy Department, for example, is prepared to spend $8 billion on a superconducting supercollider — even though many members of the scientific community argue that the project allocates far too large a share of the government's limited resources to high-energy physics.

Similarly, the White House supports the modification or elimination of many restrictions and prohibitions on export sales of military aircraft and other major weapons systems. That initiative is specifically designed to provide assistance to a defense industry fearful of losing domestic sales because of constricted Pentagon budgets in future years.

But the Bush administration has displayed little similar concern for other industries. Indeed, it has allowed Japanese corporations to purchase approximately 20 of this country's manufacturers of semiconductor production equipment and materials.

Says the chairman of one of the numerous federal advisory commissions that in recent years have warned of the dire consequences likely to stem from the current approach: "If this vital industry is allowed to wither away, the nation will pay a price measured in millions of jobs across the entire electronics field, technological leadership in many allied industries such as telecommunications and computers and the technical edge we depend on for national security."

Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., is far more blunt in his analysis: "We have a frightening situation in which the ideologues in this administration are trying to dismantle the most important programs ... which focus on the key technologies of the future."

Mass production in this country was thwarted by a lack of interest.

JACK ANDERSON

She loses goods, court-martialed

WASHINGTON — When U.S. troops invaded Panama in December 1989, everything Air Force Sgt. Delphyna Bruner and her family owned was destroyed in the fighting. These things happen in war time. But what happened to Delphyna Bruner after the fighting stopped is not so easily explained. She was court-martialed when she asked the U.S. government to cover her losses.

Bruner was not in Panama at the time of the invasion, but nearly all of her worldly goods were. She had just been transferred from Howard Air Force Base in Panama to Bolling Air Force Base in Washington, D.C. The government had not yet shipped all of the family's belongings to her new post. They were stored in a warehouse in Panama, and that warehouse went up in smoke.

In the months since the invasion, Bruner has lived with the possibility of spending years in the stockade and seeing her husband and two daughters only from behind bars, all because the Air Force thought she was lying about the value of her goods. "When I went to bed at night, I was staring at 45 years in prison," Bruner told our associate Scott Steck. "I cannot put into words the trauma on this family."

After the invasion, the Bruners were still reeling from the shock of losing everything in the warehouse fire. They were told to file a claim for compensation, but were warned that the government limit was $40,000. When they made an inventory of their possessions, their bottom line was $60,000. The Bruners knew they would not get full compensation, but they turned in the full claim anyway, just for the record.

The Air Force paid them $15,000 up front, and then launched a six-month investigation that ended with a court martial of Bruner last October for submitting what the Air Force said was $22,000 worth of fraudulent claims.

Bruner was stunned. She had juggled her family and an Air Force career for 16 years. Her performance evaluations were exemplary. When she left Panama she was in line for a promotion.

Bruner realizes that $60,000 in household goods seems unusual for an Air Force staff sergeant, but she said she and her husband, Jesse, an Air Force retiree, saved to buy top-of-the-line furnishings. They also had unique items from overseas tours and a valuable collection of china, some received as a wedding present and some inherited from Bruner's mother-in-law.

As the trial date approached, word spread around Bolling Air Force Base among Bruner's co-workers. She felt humiliated by the scornful reaction of some.

After a six-day trial, the Air Force court found her guilty of only one of 17 counts — misrepresenting the brand of her china and overvaluing it by $4,189. The punishment was to have $75 deducted from her paycheck every month for one year. Bruner said the china pattern was no longer sold so she had to base her estimate of its value on a comparable brand. For that, the Air Force took her to the mat.

Bruner, who is black, suspects that her race may have had something to do with her ordeal. She believes some Air Force officials became suspicious of her claim because they didn't think a black family would have such fine things.

The Air Force has refused to pay the rest of her claim despite the outcome of the trial. The Bruners made a down payment on a house, but it is nearly devoid of furnishings. A borrowed love seat and a few floor pillows constitute the living room furniture.

I cannot put into words the trauma on this family.

approve it's support of the Seminole County's Interlocal Agreement on the one cent sales tax increase. The Oviedo City Council, also meeting last night, voted 3 to 2 against it.

"I was surprised in both cities," Rabun said this morning. "Longwood's Commissioner Paul Lovstrand, and Oviedo Council Chairman Ida Coombs were both at a recent Council of Local Governments meeting where we discussed this and answered their questions, and I thought they were both in support of it."

In Longwood, only Mayor Hank Hardy, Deputy Mayor Rex Anderson and Commissioner Lovstrand were in attendance when the resolution was brought up for city approval. Commissioner Adrienne Perry was not present at the time of the vote.

Rabun was on hand to make his presentation to the city, calling the tax "the equitable way to finance it."

In responding to a specific question regarding financing possibilities other than the 1-cent sales tax increase, he said, "The alternative would be an ad valorem tax that, in order to pay for this project, would have to be an increase of 2.3 mils, or a cost of approximately $175 per person in Seminole County each year. The sales tax however, would only cost the average person an estimated $72 per year, as the tax is also paid by others who travel through the county."

Earlier, City Administrator Donald Terry had informed the Commissioners that the city staff had reviewed the proposal and found that such a road project would be best utilized through cooperating with the County. Terry said the staff recommended approval. Mayor Hank Hardy also expressed his belief that the agreement would be good for the city.

When the Mayor called for the commission's decision, Commissioner Rex Anderson moved to accept the measure. Commissioner Paul Lovstrand however, remained silent and refused to second the motion. As the mayor was unable to second the motion, he declared, "The motion therefore, is dead, due to the lack of a second."

County Manager Rabun said, "In case you are expecting another Commissioner to show up soon, I'll be glad to stay longer." There was no response to his request however, and Rabun left the meeting. Approximately 10 minutes after he had left, Commissioner Perry, who had been detained, arrived.

During a later recess, Perry said, "I thought the one cent tax matter would be brought up during a later part of the agenda." She said that had she been there, she would have seconded Anderson's motion, and voted in favor of the agreement. "Everyone knows how I feel about it," she said. "I've mentioned it before in these meetings."

Lovstrand said this morning, "I didn't second the motion because I think it's the county's job to sell the people on the project, not ours." He said, "I look on this as an agreement to share nothing in highways. Longwood wouldn't get much of what is proposed."

The final city, Casselberry, is scheduled to vote on the agreement at its next meeting, May 13.

Future of Florida dams debated

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Four North Florida dams, two of which once were to become part of the never-finished Cross Florida Barge Canal, are now at the center of a battle between environmentalists and boosters.

Rodman Reservoir in Putnam County and Inglis Dam in Citrus County are targeted by environmentalists because they were planned segments of the abandoned canal project. The canal, which has been deauthorized by Congress, and all the land set aside for its defunct federal project, will return to state control next year.

Majorie Carr, president emerita of the Florida Department of the Environment, has said Rodman dam should be torn down to restore the natural flow of the Ocklawaha River.

But others fear that tearing down the dam could harm birds and fish that have adapted to the area since the reservoir was filled in 1968. But they also acknowledge that the lake has a recurring problem with channel-choking water weeds.

The Rodman reservoir became the center of discussion last week at the first meeting of the group studying how to manage a 110-mile-long, 300-yard-wide state park that will be created when canal lands are turned over in 1992.

At the other end of the canal route are Inglis Dam and Lake Rousseau. The dam was built in the 1920s for hydroelectric power and was modified in the 1960s for the barge canal. The lake also is a popular fishing location.

Environmentalists blame the dams for fouling the lakes and ruining rivers, while others say the dams provide boating and fishing areas that are important to local economies.

Officials with the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission recently used a crowbar to pry off several boards damming Newnans Lake in Alachua County so some muck could be flushed from the small fishing and boating lake.

At Newnans Lake, the problem is easy to see if you have a long pole, said Jerry Krummrich, the agency's regional fisheries administrator. The lake is only about five feet deep in the middle, but he has sunk a 20-foot pole down into the muck without hitting anything solid.

All lakes collect muck as nutrients such as nitrogen and phosphorus from farms and septic tanks provide food for algae and water plants, such as hydrilla. When the plants die and decay, muck builds up.

Another lake which is filling with muck and hydrilla is Orange Lake in Alachua County. Low water over the past two years has severely hurt business at local fish camps.

Some people advocate removing the dam and flushing out the lake. Others say the fishing industry is already crippled by the low water and the dam is needed to retain what little is left.

In the 1950s and 1960s, people thought they could make natural lakes better by using dams to keep water levels consistent during drought and rainy seasons, but they never anticipated the muck problems, Krummrich said.

And after years of studying natural lakes that have been dammed, Krummrich thinks rains cycles, not dams, should be left to dictate water levels.

But Krummrich said fishermen don't believe that. "Everyone seems to fear the wrath of the public that believes that removing dams is parallel to removing water," he said.

more traffic coming from Daytona Beach, involving thousands of motorists going home after the major races at the Daytona International Speedway.

The city staff opinion, stated by City Manager John Litton, was "Not to have it at all because of the amount of traffic involved. It's a matter of safety," he said.

Commissioner David Meador said, "With the traffic and crowd control problems we would have, I see absolutely no way we could have a fireworks display." Commissioner Paul Tremel agreed.

The problem of finding the proper impact area however, may be alleviated. "If we look toward getting a smaller fireworks display," Holland said, "we would need a much smaller impact area, and we would have no trouble in finding the location for it." He said the smaller display would basically involve the use of a lower caliber of fireworks than originally planned, but would still allow a fireworks event to take place. "They just wouldn't be quite as spectacular."

At the present time, the commission has not voted to either hold or forget about the city's July 4th Fireworks display.

But Parks and Recreation Director John Holland says, "I still hope we have it, it's something Lake Mary needs."

structural services and Dick Hofmann, coordinator of community relations and public information.

"The business community really came through for us," Hofmann said.

Guppy received more than $1,300 in cash and prizes from program sponsors.

Teacher of the year runners up James Helmick, a physics teacher at Lake Brantley High School in Altamonte Springs and Mary Ann Kinsey, a resource specialist at South Seminole Middle School in Casselberry, each received $850 in gifts. The American Automobile Association (AAA), a new program supporter, provided master memberships, valued at $100 apiece, to the top 10 teachers of the year.

Local restaurants, including Burger King, Red Lobster and Pebbles, provided gift certificates for each of the winners.

According to Hofmann the cash value of the prizes was in excess of $9,000.

Rep. Art Grindle made an unexpected presentation to Guppy during the celebration last night.

Rounding out the top ten finalists were Linda Kay Dillard, an art teacher at Eastbrook Elementary School in Winter Park; Zenaida Rollins, a second grade teacher at Idylwild Elementary School in Sanford; Deborah Wright, a second grade teacher at Longwood Elementary School in Longwood; Deborah Trigg, a music teacher at Stenstrom Elementary School in Oviedo; Sharon Thornhill, an art teacher at Brantley Middle School in Lake Mary; Anne Campbell, a chorus teacher at Rock Lake Middle School in Longwood and Lance Abney, a psychology teacher at Seminole High School in Sanford.

According to some in attendance, the lights for the television recording and the lack of air conditioning in the civic center forced a great majority of the audience away before the conclusion of the ceremonies.

A proclamation, passed by the House of Representatives, called for Guppy to be honored as the top teacher in Seminole County.

The state Department of Education gave Guppy $500 as a county winner. She was not among the regional finalists announced this morning in the state competition.

Commissioner Paul Lovstrand made the motion to approve the measure. Anderson however, expressed his concern that if a person was next in line to become deputy mayor, it might make him ineligible to become mayor, a position also selected by the vote of the commissioners. "It just isn't clearly defined," he said. "I just can't support this measure." The ordinance died because of the lack of a second.

Columbia next: 7 astronauts, 30 rats, more

By Barbara Brown
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — The seven astronauts on NASA's next shuttle flight will have company in orbit later this month. Aboard Columbia, crumpled into cages and flasks, will be 30 white rats and 2,000 jellyfish.

NASA is aiming to get Columbia off the ground around May 23. An official launch date for the scientific research mission will be set early next week.

"What this mission is trying to do is to evaluate the acute adaptation of humans to space flight," said Ronald White, chief scientist for NASA's life sciences division.

Ten of the 18 gravity investigations will concentrate on the human system. Seven others, involving the rats, are designed to verify animal equipment, White said.

The jellyfish investigation will focus on the animals' metamorphosis in a gravity-free environment. Only tiny, young specimens will fly.

Jellyfish are well suited for Columbia's nine-day mission because of their swift development. Jellyfish polyps, an early form of the creature, develop into the more mature ephyra stage in five to six days when iodine is added to their water.

It will be the first time jellyfish have flown in space. NASA has sent up rats, flies, bees, moths, spiders and fish, but never jellyfish.

The jellyfish experiment may benefit humans, too. Scientists hope to learn more about astronauts' calcium loss during space flight by measuring how much calcium some of the jellyfish lose.

All the animals will be kept in a laboratory that will encompass Discovery's entire cargo bay. The astronauts will float from the cabin through a tunnel into the Spacelab module, where they will conduct the experiments.

The Spacelab module has not been used since 1985. It will contain about $150 million worth of experiments and equipment, White said.

As Columbia orbits 184 miles above Earth, the astronauts will monitor each other's nervous system, heartbeat and blood pressure. The crew includes three physicians, a chemist and an astronomer.

White said the mission will pick up, in a sense, where the 1973 Skylab missions left off. The third and final Skylab crew spent 84 days in space.

"We came up with a whole series of questions we need to address in order to understand the adaptation process" of people in space, White said. "These investigations really take off from that point."

Columbia's astronauts were at Kennedy Space Center on Monday for a countdown test that ends Tuesday. They interrupted their training to watch Discovery make a rare Florida landing.

Columbia's trip will be NASA's 41st shuttle flight.

Discovery lands safely at KSC

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL — Discovery and its seven astronauts returned home safely Monday from a long "Star Wars" research mission, landing in Florida because of high wind at the main shuttle touchdown site.

The spaceship glided through a slightly cloudy sky and touched down at 2:55 p.m.

"Welcome back to sunny Florida, and congratulations on an outstanding mission," Mission Control's Ken Bowersox told the crew.

"Thank you, and thank everybody there who worked so hard to pull this one off," shuttle commander Michael Coats replied.

The astronauts circled the world 134 times and traveled 3,475,000 miles during their eight days in space. The mission was the first of eight military shuttle missions to be conducted without a news blackout.

The mission encountered several problems, including the failure of two data recorders shortly after liftoff on April 28 and pointing problems with an orbiting "Star Wars" research probe.

Nevertheless, Air Force Col. John Armstrong, deputy mission director, said he was elated by the flight's overall success.

He said the research "promises to be a giant step forward" for the Strategic Defense Initiative, better known as "Star Wars," which is working on designs for a space defense system.

NASA decided Monday afternoon to bring Discovery back to Kennedy Space Center after the wind picked up suddenly at Edwards Air Force Base in California, preventing a landing at the desert base's concrete runway.

Discovery needed to land on a concrete strip to protect the Pentagon's heavy instruments in the cargo bay and to assure a smoother landing. The cargo is valued at more than $260 million.

It was only the seventh time in 40 flights that a space shuttle landed at Kennedy. The last time was in November, when Atlantis was diverted because of bad weather at Edwards.

About 200 people gathered at the Florida landing site to welcome Discovery back. Among them were the seven astronauts slated for the next shuttle flight later this month.

"We got a double bonus. It was the safest thing to do, and we saved money," said Kennedy director Forrest McCartney.

It usually takes about a week and costs $1 million for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to transport a shuttle across the country.

The concrete runway on Edwards' expansive dry lakebed is the same size as the one at Kennedy — 2.8 miles long. NASA prefers Edwards for shuttle landings because of all the extra room the lakebed provides.

NASA considered Discovery's trip one of the most complicated flights in shuttle history because of all the maneuvering that was required during a series of plume observations.

The Strategic Defense Initiative's orbiting probe examined the plumes from one to six miles away as Coats guided the ship through split-second somersaults and twists. The satellite spent 1 1/2 days in orbit, studying rocket fuel and gas discharges, before being retrieved by the crew.

Another SDI instrument on board captured startling scenes of atmospheric light, or aurora.

Everyone gathers for a leisurely dinner in the gracious Arbor Room.

A New Resident Looks At The New Howell Place

"You can tell the difference by just walking through the door!" The residents are saying so — their families are saying so — their Seminole County friends and visitors are saying so — all because of the many improvements made in the past ten months under new management. They're referring to an all-over change from the cosmetic to the life style.

Even visitors new to Howell Place say they can sense the difference from other retirement centers. There's an attitude of hospitality — an attitude of home — that permeates every department.

That residents are telling this news is evident in the success of sixteen new residents in the past three months, limiting availability to under twenty apartments!

A typical day in the life of a new resident might read as follows:

It's early Monday morning. Mary awakens, first seeing strange surroundings, but then she smiles, remembering the events of the past weekend. She has just moved into Howell Place. It was a hard decision to make, but she felt she could no longer live alone in her own home. She had visited Howell Place several times, having lunch and dinner with her friends and had seen how happy they were and how lovely and spacious their "new homes" were. Their apartments resembled their old homes; many familiar pieces of furniture and other treasured items had accompanied them on their move to Howell Place. Mary looks around her own apartment and all is again very familiar.

She dresses and goes down to breakfast in the bright and open Arbor Room, located in the center of the two wings. She looks up at the now familiar chandeliers and exposed wood beams and waves to Betty who is on the second story loft. She knows that she will stop by there later and grab a mid-morning snack of fruit or cookies and a fresh cup of coffee. The loft on her floor, the third floor, also overlooks the dining room and houses the library reading.

After breakfast, Mary opts to skip the morning shopping trip and attend the daily exercise class. After lunch she and Betty decide to take a walk around the grounds. They walk down to the pond and feed scraps of bread to the geese and ducks, then find Harold working in a flower garden he has started behind his apartment. Now she knows where the fresh cut flowers have come from that mysteriously appeared at her door. Mary and Betty's walk ends just in time to catch the afternoon shopping trip. There are a few things she needs for the small kitchen in her apartment. It might be nice to fix her own lunch one day, invite a few friends in — some of them still living alone, and have a nice visit. Wouldn't it be nice if her old neighbors moved in and became her new neighbors?

Hearing singing coming from the movie room she peeks in to see the chorus rehearsing for their latest musical, an Americana Singalong, which will be presented at area clubs and nursing homes this summer. There's as much laughter as there is music so she joins in on a twangy version of "Home On The Range." What joyful fun!

Then, on her way to dinner, Mary stops by the Activity Calendar to see what is planned for the month. Lunch Bunch, shopping, bowling, bridge, chorus, pokeno, bingo, entertainment and parties are all regularly scheduled.

When she returns to her apartment after dinner, Mary thinks about her first full day at Howell Place. All of her original reservations have completely disappeared. She knows how lucky she is to have found a place that can meet her needs for the rest of her life. "Aging in place," they call it. She remembers the slogan she read on the Howell Place brochure, "Catered Living for Seniors" and she knows now that what Howell Place offers her is a lifestyle of independent living. She knows that some of her friends have different problems than she has, and at Howell Place, she knows they can continue their independent lifestyle, with the necessary assistance to get them through the day. She has peace of mind knowing that Howell Place is fully licensed by the State of Florida as an Adult Congregate Living Facility, that there are emergency call buttons located in the apartments and that there are security guards who patrol the building at night.

Howell Place is conveniently located in Sanford, on Airport Boulevard, just off Highway 17-92. Mary knows she will make new friends of the people who have lived in Sanford many years and also the people who have moved here from the north to be closer to their families. And just before she turns out her light for the night, she knows how honestly glad she is that she was led to make the call to Howell Place, 322-7700, just one short week ago. Tomorrow morning she will wake up feeling truly "at home."

Senior need own sex revolution

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Older people can revitalize their sex lives by being more open with their partners and less concerned about societal attitudes about youth and sex, a University of Florida professor says.

"I'm not advocating everyone who is 65 coming from the chastity, but people need to know they can be an equally active as they want to be," said Sandra Brynauer, a UF sex educator.

One reason older people have difficulty dealing with sexuality is that their generation is much more private about these issues than today's teenagers and young adults, Ms. Brynauer said.

The elderly can enhance their sex lives by learning to be more open with their partners, especially about physical changes that occur with aging and may slow sexual response, she said.

"There are folks who begin to turn away from one another in bed," she said. "The next thing you know they're in twin beds and then separate bedrooms because they cannot find the flat that their sexual functioning is changing and they're not able to talk to one another."

Most sexual problems older people face are greatly overestimated and those that do exist are often caused by prescription drugs taken for various maladies, such as high blood pressure, Ms. Brynauer said.

An elderly man who wonders why he is impotent may be taking 16 different medications, many of which have the potential to cause the condition, she said.

Older people often fail to get help for these problems because society narrowly defines sexual rights as limited to the young, thin and healthy, she said.

"Many elderly buy into the myth that as they age they lose their sexual functioning. They take their hypertension medication, become impotent and think, 'Oh well, that's the way it's supposed to be.' Or their body thickens, they slow down and they think, 'I simply have to contend with this,'" she said.

"They tell me in very strong and emotional terms how they want intimacy in their lives and how they feel cheated if it," she said.

Want to make your home more energy-efficient? Call Spears Insulation today at 321-7428.

"Know What I Mean, Vern?"

A lesson in how to make your home more energy-efficient and comfortable: "Insulation keeps heat where it belongs: outside where it's hot. Insulation helps keep you more comfortable all year round. Proper insulation means your cooling and heating equipment works less and lasts longer, saving you money. It will probably even increase the value of your home.

Existing homes or older homes will probably qualify for FLORIDA POWER & LIGHT's energy saving program that will pay for half, up to $300, of the cost of insulating. Anyone that lives within an FPL service area should call Spears Insulation now for a free estimate. Chances are the small amount it costs you to insulate your home, you will save this summer on your utility bill."

Vern Spears is a local man, born and raised in Sanford. He even had a Sanford Herald paper route. He retired from the Army three years ago and came back to his home town. He has been in the insulation business for 15 years now, 13 years while in the Army, working nights and weekends.

Vern says if you want to stay comfortable, have cheaper utility bills and save wear and tear on your air conditioner, give him a call today at 321-7428 for a free estimate on insulating your home.

Fifth-graders write The Book on Sanibel

Associated Press

SANIBEL ISLAND — Fifth-graders hoping to learn about writing, editing and teamwork instead ended up authoring an oral history of Sanibel Island.

The 12 pupils in Lee County Teacher-of-the-Year Susie Kinkead's 1989-90 Sanibel Elementary School conducted a series of interviews that shed light not only on the island's past, but also everything from its fragile environment to traffic congestion.

The result, "A Collection Of Reflections: True Stories of Sanibel by Children of the Island," is now for sale with proceeds going to fund writing projects in the county.

"We wanted to learn about the history of the island," says 10-year-old Scooter Reynolds, explaining that the class decided to interview older island residents.

"I was sort of scared of older people," says Brooke Pickard, 10, expressing a sentiment echoed by many children in the class. "But now I realize they're just normal people."

And their view of Sanibel changed, too.

"When the island had just started, there was no bridge," says Amanda Hawkins, 11. "There was a mailboat, and there were no paved roads."

Amanda is talking about Sanibel as it was years before she was born, a far cry from the bumper-to-bumper traffic on Periwinkle Way.

Bush is back

He resumes schedule with no repeat of heart problem

By GONNOROUGH GONNOROUGH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush "slept like a log" through the night and began a full work schedule today with no recurrence of the irregular heartbeat that put him in the hospital over the weekend, the White House said today.

Presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said that Bush's heart rate was monitored throughout the night. "It was perfectly normal all night long and this morning," Fitzwater said.

In addition, Bush had a complete electrocardiogram test this morning immediately after getting up. The ECG test showed no irregularities, Fitzwater said.

The president, who went to bed at 8:40 p.m. Monday night, was up at 5:20 a.m. today and arrived at the Oval Office for a full day's work at 7:23 a.m. Fitzwater said. "He looks good," the spokesman said. "He slept good and feels rested. Mrs. Bush said this morning 'he slept like a log.'" Fitzwater said.

The president's heartbeat registered normal within 25 minutes of his return to the White House on Monday morning from a two-night stay at Bethesda Naval Hospital brought on by an irregular beat.

It has remained normal ever since. Fitzwater said that the president has a monitor strapped to him at all times. He wears a device on his waist the size of a pager, attached by wires to pads on his chest.

It sends a signal to a viewing monitor "that a nurse monitors continually" from an adjacent room.

During the day, the monitor is in the study of the Oval Office. During the night, the monitor is set up in a room across the hall from the president's bedroom.

Fitzwater said that Bush remains on medication to control the uneven heart beat.

Today Bush was honoring the Small Business Person of the Year in a Rose Garden ceremony, mapping strategy with Senate leaders on a free trade pact with Mexico and welcoming Finnish President Mauno Koivisto for talks and a luncheon.

He also planned to meet this afternoon with Italy's President Francesco Cossiga and Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti.

Dr. Burton Lee, the White House physician, said Monday evening that Bush was in "good humor and good health" on his first day back on the job. "No problems of any kind have arisen since he left the hospital," the doctor added.

Bush, dropping by an East Room reception for educators, said "I really do feel wonderfully well... I'm glad to be here in more ways than one."

A White House nurse monitored the president's heartbeat between meetings Monday as Bush welcomed a stream of visitors, including former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, Cameroon President Paul Biya and former Minnesota Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, back from a presidential mercy mission to Ethiopia.

Blizzard of new products confuses consumers

By DIANE BUSTON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — Ever stand in a grocery store aisle, unable to choose a single box of cereal from the hundreds lining the shelves?

Last year more than 13,000 new products were introduced in American supermarkets. This year, expect 15,000 more.

"We don't need 16 flavors of health bars," said Joseph Palmer, owner of Palmer's Supermarkets in Stamford, Conn. "The redundancy is out of control."

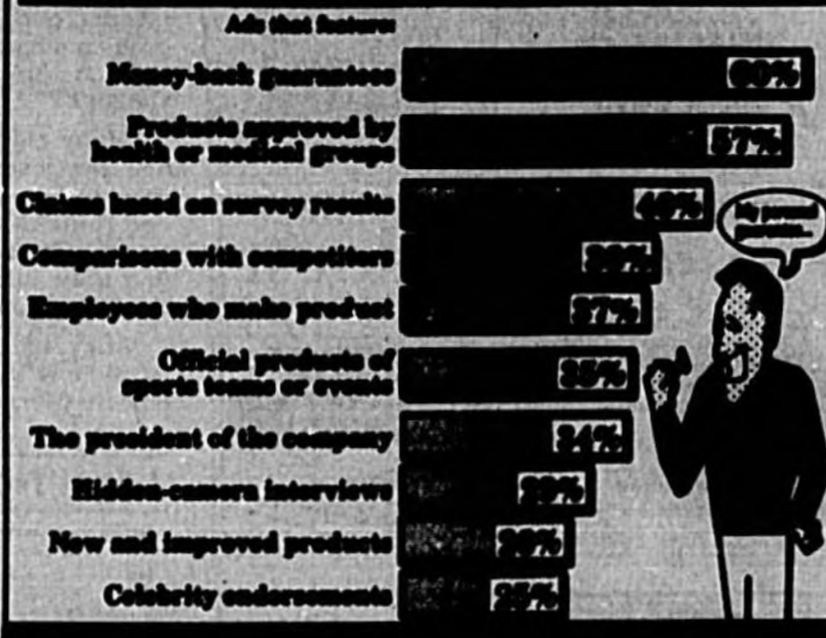

Palmer and thousands of other grocery store operators are literally getting a taste this week of what's new as more than 1,000 companies offer samples of their latest products at the Food Marketing Institute's annual trade show, the largest of its kind in the world.

Iced coffee in a can is a big item this year. Scores of new "light" and "low-fat" versions of time-honored favorites will be on your shelves. Food for people on the run, like microwavable sausage on a stick wrapped in a pancake, are hitting the market along with a plethora of other microwavable goodies.

There will be added varieties of packaged food that can be thrown into a briefcase or school

Commercial claims

Percent of adults who find certain types of advertising believable lunch box and heated by microwave. So-called "microwave helpers" that offer special seasonings or containers for cooking will be on the shelves.

Single-serving microwavable lunch suggestions for everyone from baby to old folks are being emphasized.

The number of new products in some ways reflects the changing American lifestyle — families with separate eating times, lots of single people cooking for themselves and kids who fix their own snacks.

If you count the new flavors of existing products, items released only to test markets, gourmet and health foods as well as those products going to supermarkets nationwide, the number of new products in 1990 reached 13,244, a 9.8 percent increase over 1989's level of 12,056.

This year's total is expected to top 15,000.

But because of regional or specialized marketing, an individual grocery store sees about 3,000 new products a year, said Palmer.

So what products already in the stores will have to go to make room for all this?

"One of the most difficult problems we have is keeping up with new products," said Charles Carson, owner of three Piggly Wiggly supermarkets in Corinth, Miss.

Carson and Palmer said grocers try to stock whatever their customers see advertised.

"We're the battleground for manufacturers," said Palmer.

The battle for space has gotten so furious that grocers no longer will take risks on products they doubt will move. Some now negotiate "slotting fees," paid by the manufacturer for a spot on the shelf.

Manly Molpus, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America Inc., rejects the notion that there may be too many products.

"It's what makes America great," he said. "Everyone wants something different today."

IN BRIEF

Orlando splits

WILSON, N.C. — Greg Edge and Mandy Romero doubled in the first inning as Carolina scored four runs en route to an 8-4 Southern League victory over Orlando. But the second game went to the SunRays.

In the first of Monday's games, Edge doubled, John Wehner singled, Greg Sparks drew a base on balls and Ed Yacopino scored. Edge, when he drew the base, then came Romero's double, which drove in all runners on base for a 4-0 Mudcats lead.

Tim Wakefield (3-2) picked up the win, while the loser was Pat Mahomes (3-1).

In the nightcap, Carolina moved to an early 3-1 lead after the sixth inning. But the SunRays' four runs in the seventh inning proved to be too much.

Olmedo, Valdez and Derek Parra led the bases on singles and scored on errors before Carlos Capellan was driven in on Dan Masteller's single as the SunRays took a 5-3 lead.

The Mudcats rallied in the bottom of the seventh, as Edge scored when Yacopino hit into a double play.

Orlando's Rob Wassenaar (1-2) was credited with the victory and Greg Johnson, who came in in the seventh, picked up his fifth save of the season.

Carolina's Mike Roessler slipped to 2-3.

Jacksonville sweeps

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Shawn Barton and Dave Richards combined on a three hitter as Jacksonville blanked Memphis 9-0 in the nightcap to sweep a Southern League doubleheader Monday.

The Suns (18-9) took the opener 6-3 behind a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly by Ken Pennington.

Barton gave up only two hits over three innings of the closer before giving way to Richards (1-0) who pitched four innings, giving up one hit.

Andres Cruz (1-4) was tagged with the loss for Memphis (6-19).

In the first game, Pennington gave Jacksonville a 2-1 second inning lead with his second homer of the season, a two-run shot off loser Terry Taylor (1-2).

Pennington gave the Suns an insurance point, for a 4-1 Jacksonville lead, in the third on a sacrifice fly.

David Evans (2-2) got the victory and Fernando Figueroa picked up his first save.

Scott 3rd in rookie vote

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Winning the NBA Rookie of the Year award is not going full Derrick Coleman's pockets with money from endorsements or make him run to the New Jersey Nets for a new contract, his agent says.

Coleman, the No. 1 player taken in the NBA draft, led all first-year players in scoring (18.4) and rebounding (10.3). He had 40 games in which he scored in double figures in points and rebounds, 32 games of 20 or more points and 42 of 10 or more rebounds.

Coleman received 69 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters — three from each NBA city and 15 representing national media.

Lionel Simmons of Sacramento (18 points, 8.8 rebounds) finished second with 22 votes. Dennis Scott of Orlando was third with three votes. Dee Brown of Boston got the final two votes.

BASEBALL

Dykstra injured

PHILADELPHIA — In the span of a few seconds, the Philadelphia Phillies watched their newfound optimism collapse as a late-night car accident injured outfielder Lenny Dykstra and catcher Darren Daulton.

Dykstra faces drunken-driving charges and the Phillies face two months without one of the league's top hitters.

Dykstra slammed his new red sports car into two trees while driving home from a bachelor party for teammate John Kruk early Monday, causing multiple injuries to himself and Daulton, police said.

Tests showed that his blood alcohol level was .178, above 0.10 percent, the state's legal limit. The Philadelphia Inquirer reported in today's editions. Based on the test, police in Radnor Township issued a summons requiring Dykstra to appear in district court. No date has been set.

Daulton, a passenger in the car, was not tested.

Dykstra, 28, sustained three broken ribs, a broken right collarbone and a broken right cheekbone. A broken rib punctured a lung and his heart was bruised, doctors said.

Robinson paces Dodgers over Orioles in LML

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Lorenzo Robinson's one out double in the bottom of the sixth inning scored Chad Sheffield with the winning run as the Rinker Materials Dodgers edged the Ace Hardware Orioles 8-7 in Sanford Recreation Department Little Major League action at Roy Holter Field Monday night.

Robinson's hit capped a sixth inning rally that saw the Dodgers score three times and erase a 7-5 deficit and give the defending City Champions their first win over the season.

Doing the damage for the Dodgers were Robinson (double, two singles, run), Gerald Bishop (double, single, two runs), Sheffield (double, single, run), J.J. Bryant (home run) and Tarell Bender, Mike Villalobos and Barry Porter (one single and one run each).

Providing the offense for the Orioles were Brent Templeton (two singles), Rashad Doctor (double, run), Eric Sperry (single, three runs), Chris Woodward (single, run), Cedric Church and Amos Mitchell (one single each) and Daniel Bohannon (run).

In games played Saturday, the Marshall USA Expos won the battle of the unbeaten 5-3 over the First Federal Cardinals, the Disabled American Veterans Royals blasted the Orioles 16-2, the K & D Trailer Sales Red Sox ripped the First Union Bank A's 15-6, the Sunland Pirates bopped the Fisher, Laurence and Deen Blue Jays 10-3 and the Railroaders Cubs whipped the Dodgers 17-8.

The standings in the National League have the Expos on top at 4-0, followed by the Cardinals (3-1), the Pirates (2-2), the Cubs (1-2) and the Dodgers (1-4).

In the American League the Red Sox are 4-0, followed by the Royals (2-2), the A's (1-2), the Orioles (1-4) and the Blue Jays (0-4).

Tonight at Roy Holter Field there will be a National League doubleheader with the Cubs playing the Expos at 5:45 p.m. and the Pirates taking on the Cardinals at 7:45 p.m.

Tommy Raines capped a 10 run third inning as the Royals ripped the Orioles. Raines also had a triple and a single plus scored three times to lead the Royals offense.

Also contributing were Walter Brian (triple, two singles, three runs), Melvin Holt (two singles, run), Randy Casey, Robert Hampton and Tim Wynn (one single and two runs each), Travis Hampton (single, run) and Marcus Beasley and Steve Brown (one run each).

For the Orioles Robert Reed had two singles and scored a run, Cedric Church singled and scored a run and Albert Harris singled.

Richard Badger ripped a three run home run and a two run home run to give the A's a 6-3 lead over the Red Sox, but the league-leaders responded with a 10 run third inning to erase the deficit and post the win.

Providing the offense for the Red Sox were Terrance Perkins (triple, single, three runs), Trellis Smith (two singles, two runs), Brett Counts (home run), Antonio White and Bert Counts (two-run each) and Donald White, Robert Randall, James Thomas and Nicolas Ireland (one run each).

In addition to Badger, Sylvester Wynn had a single and scored a run, Wesley Winkle had a single, Shane Rowland scored two runs and Ricky Anderson scored one run for the A's.

Lerniel Fayson struck out 10 Blue Jays over the final four innings and the Pirates broke the game open with a four run fourth.

Doing the damage for the Pirates were Jonathan Justice (four singles, three runs), Fayson (home run, single, two runs), Bruce Carter (two singles, run), Ernest Anderson (single, two runs), Lawrence Rudolph and Lonnie Fuller (one single and one run each) and Andy Heabrin, Joseph Davis and Eric Golden (one single each).

Luncheon fashion show honors moms

LAKE MARY — Moms and their kids from Church of the Nativity, Lake Mary, have preened, polished and practiced for the upcoming Nativity Fashion Show, to be held Saturday, May 11 in the church social hall.

Coordinator for the event, Asia Saltmarsh, said the public is invited to the luncheon show. She said it's a perfect opportunity to treat a mom and allow her to pick a Mother's Day gift.

"We'll be selling right off the rack," she said of the clothing to be modeled by Nativity Mother's Support Group members and their children.

Saltmarsh said the group is open to all women in the community. Members meet to address issues pertaining to women, including childrearing, marriage, career, health and beauty.

"This group is for mothers of all ages and is open to the community," Saltmarsh said. "It's very informative. We talk about our problems and our joys."

The moms include their children in many activities, such as visiting nursing homes during the holidays.

The group is also in the process of working in conjunction with Dr. Marissa Pantis, a pediatrician, to sponsor monthly meetings especially for mothers who work outside the home. With over 25 active members, Saltmarsh said money raised from the fashion show and luncheon will aid children's causes and enable the group to meet overhead expenses.

She said support from the community has been wonderful. Many area businesses donated time and merchandise to make the event a success, including Forever Fashions Bridal, Sanford; La Woman, Lake Mary; Elegant Fashion on Wheels; Nothing to Wear, Lake Mary; Halverson Originals and Little Rascals, Wekiva. Vanity at Heathrow styled hair and make-up. Mannequin International, Longwood, conducted pose and posturing classes for all the model moms.

"It's a dream come true to be a model," Saltmarsh confided. "They told us to suck in and hold our breath a lot," she added.

Cindy Lind and Asia Saltmarsh practice modeling under the watchful gaze of Victoria Churchill, director of Mannequin International.

The luncheon menu includes homemade chicken salad decorated with edible flowers, a large croissant, a miniature cheesecake and iced tea. Entertainment will be provided by Lake Mary Dance Academy. Numerous businesses also donated door prizes. Tickets are $5 and available by calling 322-3961.

Child abuse should be everyone's problem

DEAR ABBY: As staff of the Exchange Club Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse of Southern Minnesota Inc., we would like people to know that America's national disgrace and most chilling crime is turning into an epidemic! A total of 2.4 million reports of child abuse and neglect were recorded by the nation's child welfare system last year. Child abuse continues to get worse, and our response as a nation has not always been the most effective. According to recent estimates, up to 5,000 children die each year as a direct result of abuse by a parent or guardian. More than 50 percent of the victims are less than a year old!

Abby, please publish this prayer to show that child abuse is everyone's problem, and that we need to work together to break the cycle.

A PRAYER FOR CHILDREN

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

"We pray for children who put chocolate fingers everywhere, who like to be tickled, who stomp in puddles and ruin their new pants, who sneak Popsicles before supper, who erase holes in math workbooks, who can never find their shoes.

"And we pray for those who stare at photographers from behind barbed wire, who can't bound in the street in a new pair of sneakers, who never go to the circus, who live in an X-rated world.

"We pray for children who bring us sticky kisses and fistfuls of dandelions, who sleep with the dog and bury the goldfish, who hug us in a hurry and forget their lunch money, who cover themselves with Band-Aids and sing off-key, who squeeze toothpaste all over the sink, who slurp their soup.

"And we pray for those who never get dessert, who have no safe blanket to drag behind them, who watch their parents watch them die, who can't find any bread to steal, who don't have any rooms to clean up, whose pictures aren't on anybody's dresser, whose monsters are real.

"We pray for children who spend all their allowance before Tuesday, who throw tantrums in the grocery store and pick at their food, who like ghost stories, who shove dirty clothes under the bed and never rinse the tub, who get visits from the tooth fairy, who don't like to be kissed in front of the carpool, who squirm in church and scream in the phone, whose tears we sometimes laugh at, and whose smiles can make us cry.

"We pray for those whose nightmares come in the daytime, who will eat anything, who aren't spoiled by anybody, who go to bed hungry and cry themselves to sleep, and who live and move, but have no being.

"We pray for children who want to be carried and for those who must, for those we never give up on, and for those who don't get a second chance. For those we smother...and for those who will grab the hand of anybody kind enough to offer it."

PROJECT GRADUATION

It was only a short time ago that my son graduated from high school. I remember how proud and excited I was. But I also remember worrying about the partying - the drinking.

But now there's an alternative. It's called "Project Graduation!"

It's a wonderful all night adventure completely drug and alcohol free. So contact your school about "Project Graduation!"
