Legislator Denies Charge

Christensen Says Selph Punched Him

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

A Casselberry man has filed a complaint with the Casselberry Police Department alleging that a state legislator earlier this week punched him in the back. And the legislator, Carl D. Selph, R-Casselberry, vigorously denied the allegation today.

Dale Christensen, son of County Commissioner Barbara Christensen, in a complaint filed with the Casselberry Police Department said Selph struck him from behind in the right rear kidney area as the two were waiting Tuesday night to go into the Prince Phillip Drive home of Casselberry Council candidate Richard Russo.

Christensen said that he and Selph had been invited to a victory party at Russo's home. Russo, an aerospace engineer, qualified in Tuesday's city election for a Dec. 21 runoff election with Jim Hill, a Mathematics teacher.

They are running for the council seat formerly held by Jim Lavigne.

Casselberry Police Chief Fred McGowan said today Christensen's complaint will be forwarded to State Attorney Douglas Cheshire's Sanford office.

McGowan said that the complaint alleges battery which is a misdemeanor. The alleged incident was not committed in the presence of a police officer nor was there a witness, thus the Casselberry department can take no action on the complaint, McGowan said.

He said Cheshire's office will review the complaint to see if there is sufficient cause for prosecution. If so Cheshire's office will take action, McGowan said.

In a brief statement today Selph said, "This is another unfounded accusation from people who have an ax to grind."

Christensen said while he didn't bring the incident to Russo's attention Tuesday night, he did discuss the matter with Lavigne.

"I told Jim what happened and told him I didn't want to make a scene," he said. Christensen added that any further action he takes will be dependent upon whether Selph can be prosecuted.

"I don't know the specifics of what I am going to do," he said.

"There were no immediate witnesses behind me," he said, adding he must discuss the matter further with Lavigne.

There was some indication today that Christensen or his mother might contact the Seminole County Legislative Delegation or the state Ethics Commission to determine whether complaints could be filed with either body.

However, state Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, chairman of the Seminole County Legislative Delegation, said today the delegation has no legal status and has been formed over the years as a method for legislators to cooperatively pass laws to benefit their local areas.

"This is strictly a legal matter that would have to be pursued through proper channels and it sounds as if those channels are being followed," Brantley said.

He added that it would not be appropriate for the matter to be brought to the delegation at a 2 p.m. meeting with Seminole County Commissioners Monday.

"I think it would be out of order for anyone to use Monday's workshop as a forum against someone," Brantley said.

"The meeting was called at County Commissioners' request to discuss local problems. I don't want to get into the posture at the workshop of having other matters brought up," Brantley

He noted that state Sen. Richard Langley, R-Clermont, had wanted to bring up rules for the operation of the delegation at the Monday meeting and it was made clear to him that it would not be the appropriate time.

State Ethics Commission Director Larry Gonzalez said today that battery would be a criminal or civil offense or both and the ethics commission has jurisdiction over employees or officers only in the areas of financial disclosure, conflicts of interest, or misuse of office or official resources.

"A criminal charge should go to the state attorney or a suit for damages could be filed by hiring a private attorney," said Gonzalez.

Christensen was an unsuccessful candidate for the Casselberry City Council two years ago. He is currently employed in water conservation with the Orlando Public Works Selph received the Republican nomination for the State Legislature in September in a hard fought primary battle with Lavigne, who resigned from the Casselberry Council to run for the legislative seat.

In November, Selph won a close victory for the Florida House of Representatives against then Winter Springs Mayor

Schools Resist Program Changes

Secondary Schools recommended this week the setting of a mandatory minimum school day for all students and more strenuous graduation requirements.

The commission's report said the Legislature should set these minimum standards for high school graduation: - Four years of English, concentrating on composition and literature. - Three years of math, including one semester of microcomputer literacy in the ninth grade.

- Three years of science, including two courses that offer lab work.

- Three years of social science, dropping the high school requirement of Americanism vs. Communism. Under the commission's plan, the three credits would be earned by one year of American history, one year of world history, a semester of economics and a semester of American government. - One semester of practical arts, such as typing; one semester of fine arts, such as music or drama; one semester of personal health that would include instruction about nutrition, parenting and drugs; and one semester of physical education.

"I think we need to be requiring more of our college-bound students," Mrs. Warren said. "The colleges are demanding more of our students."

Students should receive more training in English and mathematics and should have fewer elective subjects, Mrs. Warren said.

Mrs. Warren said she also could go along with the recommendation to establish a mandatory six-hour school

Some high school students are allowed to leave achool early to work but Mrs. Warren said most of those students do not need to work to support their families. "

"They work to support themselves, for a car or clothes," she said. The more strenuous standards suggested by the committee are evidence that "the pendulum is swinging back to where people think education is im-

Seminole County's court system has been severely impacted by population growth over the last decade and is expected to be affected even more over the next 20 years. Currently, there are five circuit judges and three county judges serving the 180,000 residents of Seminole County. A University of Central Florida study projects that at least 10 circuit judges and five county judges will be needed by the year 2000 when the county's population is expected to be double

The commissioners and their staff agencies are planning to move into the old hospital by March 1, clearing the way for conversion of existing offices to be converted into courtroom space. Other constitutional offices are expected to move into the hospital later in 1983.

The decision to coordinate all the court-related activities in the courthouse was central to the commissioners' plan to provide adequate space for the courts, state attorney and public defender.

Public Defender James Russo filed a lawsuit earlier this year seeking relief to that office's space problem. Commissioners recently moved the office from its space in the Masonic Building to Sanford City Hall.

The courtroom problem also has been a sore spot with commissioners and the courts sharing time in a second floor

Rosenbluth said he has been retained by the judges to render advice to the judges in the matter. He said the county has failed to keep the judges informed of their plans for additional space.

Best Friend Killed

Perry Given Life Sentence For Murder

By TENI YARBOROUGH

Herald Staff Writer 48-year-old Altamonte Springs mechanic has been found guilty of firstprison for the shooting death of his former best friend and neighbor.

After 31/2 hours of deliberation, the 12member Seminole circuit court jury found Edward Lee Perry guilty of killing David Castor, 41, of 607 Sherwood Court in Altamonte Springs.

According to testimony during the four-day trial before Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis Jr., Perry said Castor contributed to his divorce from his wife. Rosa, after 16 years of marriage. Perry said he felt that Castor "had taken my

The fatal incident occurred at about midnight June 24 as Castor, Mrs. Perry, 39, of 603 Sherwood Court and family friends Dennis and Linda Murphy sat at a table in Mrs. Perry's home. Castor had just finished repairing Mrs. Perry's leaking refrigerator and the Murphys had returned to pick up their children, who Mrs. Perry was babysitting and who were asleep on the couch.

Perry had been drinking all day and evening and sald he didn't know how he came to be standing outside the patio sliding glass door of Mrs. Perry's home, holding a 9mm automatic gun in his hand. He testified he looked through the door into the family room where his were talking and laughing "and it seemed to me David was sitting in my place." The Perrys had been divorced for less than two weeks and separated for before he is eligible for parole.

Perry then walked into the home, stood at a table in front of the foursome, the degree murder and sentenced to life in came up and he shot Castor in the forehead, Mrs. Perry said.

Mrs. Perry added that she tried to flee but as the Murphys and she scampered away, Perry ordered her: "Don't move, you're next."

Perry walked around the table to where Castor's body lay, bent over him then fired the gun twice more, sending two bullets into his head. According to the Seminole County medical examiner. any one of the three firings could have been the fatal shot.

While Perry said he remembered being at the home and recognizing Castor, he didn't recognize anyone else in the home. He said he heard the gun go off once and then twice more, and recalls saying, "Oh my God, what did I do?' and I threw the gun against the wall."

Perry said he then went back into the family room where the two children had awakened because of the shooting, hugged them, apologized for having to shoot Castor in front of them and told them to tell Mrs. Perry that he loved her.

Mrs. Perry had fled from the home for Perry could have faced the death penalty for his conviction of first-degree murder. But prosecutors declined to ask former wife, Castor and the Murphys for it saying Perry's single act did not justify capital punishment.

According to state law, Perry must serve a minimum of 25 years in prison

Poisoned Anacin Pulled From California Stores

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) - Stores throughout California pulled Maximum Strength Anacin III off the shelves and authorities tried to determine if a woman's illness was caused by cyanide-tainted capsules.

Cyanide was found in at least one of the remaining captules in the woman's Anacin bottle but police Chief Joseph McNamara said Thursday he did not immediately compare it with the deaths of seven people in the Chicago area who took cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules.

Sue Bowen, 30, was reported in serious but stable condition at Good Samaritan Hospital. She was admitted to the hospital Nov. 26 when her condition was diagnosed as a stroke.

Authorities said her husband, Richard, 29, a circulation driver for the San Jose Mercury-News, was suspicious and turned over to state officials a bottle of Anacin III. The state Department of Health Service said at least one of the capsules in the bottle contained cyanide. A spokesman said three others were suspected of being poisoned but tests were incomplete.

A settlement would end a strike by 9,600 Canadian workers as early as Monday and would allow 4,600 U.S. workers laid off by the strike in Canada to go back to work at Chrysler plants in the United States "almost immediately."

UAW President Douglas Fraser said Thursday the U.S. agreement was "substantially better than the original agreement," referring to the pack rejected two months ago by workers in both countries. Union sources said both Canadian and U.S. contracts would include a $1 an hour raise.

Wholesale Prices Up A Bit In November

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Wholesale price inflation grew at an annual 7.9 percent in November with energy prices climbing and food prices going down, the Labor Department said

Gasoline, home heating oil and jewelry prices contributed much of the wholesale index increase while auto prices stayed about the same. Dealer prices went down for pork, chicken, eggs and home electronic equipment from stereos to com-

The government's Producer Price Index climbed 0.6 percent for the month, close to the 0.5 percent increase for the previous month, October.

Raw materials prices, most sensitive to any rebound in demand in a weak economy, climbed 0.9 percent, the first increase in that category in six months.

But the year's wholesale inflation rate, at 3.7 percent through Novemder, is running well below its 7.1 percent

Before seasonal adjustment the Producer Price Index was 284.9, equivalent to a prices of $2,849 for the same goods and services that cost business $1,000 in 1967.

The government adjusts the price index so that it reflects only changes beyond what are typical for the season. So while many prices actually dropped - gasoline was down 1.4 percent — they did not drop as much as expected. That meant that after adjustment gasoline prices in the index went up 1.1 percent, carrying the index higher.

Before seasonal adjustment the entire index climbed only 0.3 percent in November.

The index for natural gas turned up sharply in November, up 5 percent, as did the index for home heating oil, up 6.4 percent

Prices for passenger cars and light motor trucks showed little change, with new model prices that had been a heavy influence in September now absorbed in the pricing system.

The index for finished consumer foods moved down 0.2 percent, the same as in October. In addition to the 3.9 percent decline in the cost of pork products and the 12.8 percent drop in egg prices, the department said rice, pepper, fish and poultry prices also were down significantly.

Wholesale prices for fresh fruits, candy hars and bakery

Wholesale or business inflation, which eventually influences cash register costs for consumers, has been tamed because of stable world oil prices, ample harvests and, perhaps most important, because the economy is far too weak to drive up prices, analysts said. But raw materials prices, up for the first time since May, seemed to reflect some new strength in the economy, analysts said, although the change was mostly caused by natural gas and unprocessed farm products.

Jaworski had been cutting firewood at his Circle J ranch in Wimberly Thursday and was stricken about 3 p.m. CDT as he and ranch foreman Jon Clayton loaded the wood onto a jeep.

Jaworski was retired from active practice, with the firm of Fulbright & Jaworski, one of the largest in the country, but still maintained an office there for consultations with the firm, McDade said.

Jaworski had not argued a case since July 1974 when, as special prosecutor, he asked the U.S. Supreme Court to order Nixon to surrender subpoenaed Watergate tapes the embattled president was withholding.

The attorney won a unanimous decision and Nixon, his claims of confidentiality and national security shattered, resigned 15 days later amid the uproar that followed exposure of the tapes revealing his long involvement in the burglary cover-up.

Pilot Charged In Sale Of Secret Drug Info

MIAMI (UPI) - A Coast Guard reserve helicopter pilot has been charged with selling federal drug-fighting plans to an undercover informant posing as a smuggler.

Federal agents say the sale of classified information has forced them to change operating methods in the Caribbean. Derrick Warren James, 36, was arrested Wednesday in Fort Lauderdale. He is charged with soliciting a bribe in his capacity as a Coast Guard reserve lieutenant. If convicted, he faces a possible 15-year sentence and a $30,000 fine. James allegedly pocketed $15,000 after selling documents detailing the locations, cruising ranges and electronic equipment of military and U.S. Customs Service boats and planes in the Caribbean.

Coast Guard officials say they don't know how many smugglers have bought the information from James. But officials are modifying cruising patterns and operational plans ahead of schedule as a precaution, said Lt. Gil Fonger, a Coast Guard spokesman.

During two tape-recorded meetings last month, James allegedly sold plans for Operation SOFOCAR, a major investigation designed to intercept smuggling ships bound for the United States. "SOFOCAR so far has seized over 21/2 million pounds of marijuana," said Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Brent Eaton. "If you can stop a project that effective by selling secrets, it has a terrific impact on the whole interdiction effort. "Thousands if not millions, of dollars are being spent on these projects," Eaton said. "If the traffickers have the inside track on where to send their boats and where not to send their boats, it's all money wasted." Among the documents allegedly sold by James were two

Winter Springs Seeks City Commission Applicants

in New Orleans."

Applications will be accepted until 5 p.m. on Dec. 17 by the city of Winter Springs from city residents who would like to serve on the City Commission for the next two years to replace Maureen Boyd, who resigned a week ago.

Deputy Mayor Burley "Buck" Adkins said today that the majority of the commission wants resumes of prospective candidates from which to choose a new commissioner.

City Commissioner Leanne Grove said the idea is to get the best qualified candidate for the job, rather than a personal friend of one of the current commissioners.

"There may be somebody who is very qualified out there who has not been mentioned and because he is not a friend would have been ruled out," she said.

"If a person truly wishes to serve he won't mind submitting a resume," Mrs. Grove of the ordinances," he said.

Mrs. Boyd resigned last week to accept a police officer position with the Winter Park Police Department. According to an attorney general's opinion, she could not remain a city commissioner and be a police officer in another city, at the same time. She chose to accept the $15,000 annually salaried police officer post. Mrs. Grove said 10 or 11 names have been "floating around" on possible candidates for the appointment including Mrs. Boyd's husband, Mike Boyd, a Baptist minister at an Apopka church.

"I don't think Boyd is a serious consideration," Mrs. Grove said, adding that so many names have been thrown out that she doesn't really know which are serious considerations and which are not.

City Clerk Mary Norton said as of this morning no resumes have been received. She said while the application deadline is 5 p.m. on Dec. 17, a decision is expected to be made by the City Commission on an appointment at the 7 p.m. Dec. 20 City Commission meeting. Adkins said he could not get support from his colleagues to call a special election to fill the commission seat. "Two years is kind of a long time for an appointee to hold office," Adkins said. "The others were opposed to the cost — about $1,500 — for a special election," he said.

"There are people out there who would have run if another election had been called." Adkins said, noting $1,500 is not too much to ask the city to pay in the interests of democracy.

Adkins said he feels some of his colleagues were considering appointing Boyd. "I know he discussed city business with his wife, but I don't think that was good enough. This should not be a personality contest."

Mrs. Grove insisted the City Commission does not have the choice of calling a special election on the matter. She said the commission must follow the city charter which requires an appointment rather than an

Adkins said prospective candidates, in his view, include Wilfred "Hap" Arnold, a former commissioner, and John Hatfield, both of Tuskawilla, Hatfield is currently serving on a city board and is an insurance man. Adkins said the appointment of either would give Tuskawilla, which comprises about half of the city, a majority vote on the council. Adkins and Commissioner Inex Linville, both

Supreme Court Hints It May Sidestep A Controversial Drunk Driving Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court is dropping strong hints that it may sidestep a test of the constitutional rights of drunken driving defendants who refuse to take blood alcohol tests.

At least four justices Wednesday, in questions from the bench, indicated they are having second thoughts about whether the high court has any business settling a drunken driving dispute from South Dakota.

The Supreme Court agreed last May to test a South Dakota law - similar to those in 11 other states — that allow a driver's refusal to take a blood alcohol test to be used against him in court.

The South Dakota Supreme Court ruled it is unconstitutional to introduce such evidence at trial because it violates the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination. The state appealed.

But during an hour of arguments on the appeal, the debate over drunken drivers regenerated into a lengthy discussion of whether the case was fit to be decided by the justices.

"I just want to know if we know we have something we must decide," Justice John Paul Stevens interjected.

The problem is whether a ruling actually would affect motorist Mason Neville's trial on drunken driving charges. The court ganerally refuses to issue rulings unless it will resolve a specific con-

Neville's case is peculiar because the state courts found other reasons - besides the Fifth Amendment - to ban use of his refusal.

Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices Byron White and William Rehnquist also hammered away at whether they should bypass ruling on the constitutional question.

Questioned outside the court chambers, state Attorney General Mark Meierhenry held out hope the court will rule and uphold South Dakota's law "This is not an issue that will go away. Some other state will bring it up," Meierhenry said. "But I hope the court would decide this case."

The defendant's attorney also urged the justices to clearly decide the issue.

David Gienapp, whose client told police he was "too drunk" to "pass the test," maintained the state court was right in ruling the law unconstitutional.

"The only reason prosecutors wanted (the refusal submitted as evidence) is to show . . . an inference of guilt," Gienapp argued.

The high court could rule on the case — or dismiss it — anytime before its term ends in July.

Other states with similar laws are Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Florida, Louisiana, Maine, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oregon, Vermont and

The Edsel 13 Years After Remembering

NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

"Looks right! Built right! !friced right!!" trumpeted the Ford Motor Co. as it prepared the American public for the epitome of the push-button era, the 1958 Edsel.

After sifting through 6,000 suggested names for the medium-priced ($2,400 to $3,600) car, the company decided to name it after Henry Ford II's

Though not the most expensive car on the market, the Edsel was promoted as the most luxurious. On or near the dashboard were push-buttons that operated the trunk lid, hood lever and parking brake. It had a speedometer that emitted a red glow when the driver exceeded his chosen speed.

There was a single dial control for both heating and air conditioning, a button to raise or lower the radio antenna, plus an assortment of lights to warn that the engine was too cold or too hot, the generator was not functioning, the parking brake was on, the the oil and gas levels were low.

The control box of the transmission—on top of the steering post in the center of the wheel-had five buttons.

Eighty inches wide and just 57 inches high, the Edsel was overpowered, with a 345 horsepower engine. The radiator grille, later to become infamous and almost synonymous with automotive ugliness, was mounted vertically with the letters

"EDSEL" in gleaming aluminum on the middle.

Comedians likened it to a toilet or a horse collar. In addition to being saddled with this liability, the Edsel did not perform very well. Shortly after the 1957 models hit the market. Tom McCahill of Mechinix Illustrated wrote: "On ribbed concrete, every time I shot the throttle to the floor quickly, the wheels spun like a gone-wild Waring Blender...I couldn't help but wonder what this salami would really do if it had enough road adhesion."

Added Consumer Reports: "Combined with the car's tendency to shake like jelly, Edsel's handling represents retrogression rather than progress. To look at the Edsel buttons pulls the driver's eyes clear down off the road...most gadget-bedecked, more hung with expensive accessories than any car in its price class."

The Edsel purchased by Consumer Reports also had the wrong axle ratio, an expansion plug in the cooling system that blew out, a leaky power- costly Type 41 Bugatti. steering system and a heater that emitted blasts of hot air after it was turned off.

But the worst reviews came from the American public, which came, looked, nodded and left. "The Ford Motor Co. has laid an egg," said the manager of a New York franchise.

He was right. In two years, two months and 15 days, Ford sold only 109,466 Edsels, losing about enough teachers each year, and a University of Florida education professor says the shortage may affect the quality of state public school education.

Florida hires about 10,000 new teachers a year, but there are only about 2,000 students expected to graduate each year from the state's 23 colleges that train teachers," Dr. David Smith, dean of UF's College of Education, says. "You don't need to be a genius to see there's a shortage." During the teacher glut in the 1970s, some teachers, especially in mathematics and physics, were in short supply. Today, said

Smith, even subjects usually in oversupply are beginning to feel the pinch. He said students majoring in English education are down 26 percent in the state's schools and elementary education students are down 24 percent. Enrollment in Florida's College of Education totals about 600 undergraduate and GAINESVILLE (UPI)-Florida's 900 graduate students, down 40 percent from Florida schools statewide now hire 60 percent of their new teachers from out-of-state.

Although a shortage means better job prospects for new teachers, Smith said it could also signal a long-term reduction in the quality of education in Florida's public schools. As in the past, teacher shortages may prompt the state to give teaching certificates to unqualified teachers.

"That leaves a residual of inadequately trained but fully certified teachers," said

Job prospects, he said, are now good for graduating education majors, especially in math, science, elementary education and vocational education.

He also said a new graduate willing to go where the jobs are most abundant, especially in more rural counties, has a better chance of being hired than those who concentrate only on Florida's big cities.

Kennedy's Discretion

We do not doubt that Sen. Edward Kennedy's concern for his three growing children and his impending divorce figured in his decision to withdraw from the 1984 presidential race, as he emphasized in his dramatic announcement.

But there has to be much more behind this stunning development than family considerations.

Sen. Kennedy's marriage was on the rocks and his children needed him just as much two years ago when he ignored political axioms and vainly sought to seize the White House from Jimmy Carter, the leader of his own party.

Kennedy entered the tratricidal primary contest with President Carter because he had simply deluded himself into believing the outcome would have to be in his favor.

In that bitter defeat, he undoubtedly developed a much sharper eye for the odds and difficulties inherent in winning the presidency. Next time, he must win. His national political career could not survive another such disaster.

A significant clue about this fear and uncertainty is to be found in a prescient Wall Street Journal article of Oct. 5. This related to Kennedy's all-out $2.5 million campaign to win big in his November re-election bid as a prelude for the 1984 presidential sweepstakes.

Nevertheless, the Journal pointed out: "...he (Kennedy) is said to have told confidents that if the economy rebounds strongly, it might be better to let former Vice President Walter Mondale or some other Democrat take on Ronald Reagan."

Kennedy knows that even in Massachusetts, polls showed a majority of voters stated that, while they gladly voted to return Kennedy to the Senate, they would not like to see him as president of the United States.

And he knows that during the last election campaign throughout the South from the Potomac to the Rio Grande his name, as Columnist Patrick Buchanan reported, was "political arsenic."

In some important ways, Kennedy's announcement simplifies the Democrats' presidential strategy.

It removes controversial Kennedy baggage from the 1984 campaign early on. It permits the Democratic Party to drift back toward the national mainstream and away from the discredited, spend-and-spend liberalism of yesteryear that Sen. Kennedy espouses most notably.

And, of course, it accelerates the nomination chances of other Democratic presidential hopefuls, especially former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, who are perceived to be the current front-runners.

The liberal, extremist minority that now dominates the Democratic Party is likely to have its influence deluted as its members coalesce around other candidates who are more centrist

Meanwhile, we must assume that Republican calculations are being complicated in about the same degree as the Democratic campaign strategy is being simplified.

The Story

NEW YORK (NEA) - Once again I take pleasure in calling to your attention the results of some extremely interesting research by Professors Stanley Rothman and S. Robert Lichter, of Smith College and George Washington University, respectively. This time they have demonstrated that although the overwhelming majority of scientists, and especially nuclear scientists, strongly favor the development of nuclear energy and discount its alleged dangers, America's liberal journalists have succeeded in tilting public opinion against it by stressing the doubts of a minority of publicity-oriented scientific critics of nuclear power.

Lichter and Rothman are the team who reported in the October-November 1981 issue of Public Opinion magazine that a random sampling of America's "media elite" turns out to have voted Democratic by at least 4 to 1 in every presidential election from 1964 through 1976 — a far cry indeed from the performance of the voters as a whole, who twice in those years sent a Republican to the White House.

Now this persistent pair has trained its gaze on a random sample of 1,000 scientists listed in American Men and Women of Science, and reported their conclusions in Public Opinion's issue for August-September 1982. Of the 1,000 scientists, an impressive 741 filled out and returned a detailed questionnaire.

To gauge their confidence in nuclear energy, they were first asked how fast America should proceed in this direction. Of the whole group of 741, 53 percent said "rapidly" and 36 percent "slowly;" 7 percent wanted to halt development and 3 percent favored dismantling existing plants. Among scientists in energy-related disciplines, however, pro-nuclear views were more pronounced, the corresponding figures being 70 percent, 25 percent, 4 percent and 1 percent respectively. And among nuclear experts themselves, 92 percent favor proceeding rapidly and 8 percent slowly, with none opting to halt development or dismantle existing

(To the Naderite charge that nuclear experts are biased because they are direct or indirect beneficiaries of the nuclear industry, Lichter and Rothman respond that attitudes among nuclear scientists employed by industry were not significantly different from those of nuclear scientists employed by the government or by universities.)

Why, then, did public support for building more nuclear power plants fall from 69 percent in 1977 to 46 percent in 1979? The accident at Three Mile Island played a part, but the decline had begun earlier.

Rothman and Lichter first note that the relatively small number of scientists with strongly anti-nuclear views are much readier to write for publication in non-professional journals than their strongly pro-nuclear colleagues: 37 percent of the former, but only 13 percent of the latter, have published one or more articles on science policy in nonprofessional journals. Thus, "Only one out of ten scientists who have published professionally on nuclear energy think that the possibility of an accidental release of radioactivity from reactors is a very serious problem. On the other hand, four of the ten who have published only in popular journals hold this view."

Secondly, they discovered that "key science journalists are far more skeptical of nuclear energy than are scientists... This is especially true of science journalists at major national media outlets, including the television networks, the New York Times, and the Washington Post."

New Test Rates Teachers

By PATRICIA McCORMACK UPI Education Editor

American folk wisdom holds: "Those who can, do; those who can't, teach; those who

But folk wisdom has no place in the nation's classrooms or teachers' colleges, and there is a crisis of competence on the teaching front, as a result.

A newly revised National Teacher Examination is supposed to help solve the crisis, providing a kind of key guaranteeing that "those who can" get the teaching jobs and that those who can't are kept out until they can meet high standards.

The test examines teacher candidates in reading, writing and arithmetic. It also tests general knowledge, including science.

Listening and other communication skills also are probed.

One would hope that new teachers know how to write and listen, but any number in recent years have not been schooled in such basics to a sufficient degree. That is the view recently expressed to the Education Testing Service by some 3,000 teachers, parents and administrators concerned with the quality of teaching. The ETS in Princeton, N.J., administers the National Teacher Examination.

As a result, the NTE, given since 1950, has been revised top to bottom for the first time. Some 10,000 college seniors majoring in education sat through the first administration of the new and tougher test Nov. 13 across the nation. Among other firsts in the history of the NTE, the teachers-to-be had to write an

By year's end, all yearlings headed for teaching jobs will have taken the harder test. Scores will help when they apply for a job providing evidence they have the competence needed to function in today's complex schoolhouse.

The essay comes in the communications skills "core battery" section of the test. Teacher candidates also were tested on their ability to listen to, comprehend, analyze and evaluate messages about teacher-related and general topics.

The "core battery" test - three tests of two hours each — is in addition to tests that future teachers must take to prove competency in subjects they intend to teach.

In addition to communication skills, the core battery includes tests in general and professional knowledge.

Gregroy R. Anrig, president of ETS, the outfit that also runs the Scholastic Aptitude Tests taken by more than 1 million high school students each year, said the NTE and 25 specialized subject area exams are used in six states for teacher certification.

These include Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia. In addition, Anrig said 25 states use the examination for other reasons, including selection, licensure and program evalulation.

School districts making use of scores from one part or more of the NTE tests in selecting new teachers include Baltimore City, Md.; Jersey City, N.J.; Pittsburgh, Scranton, Philadelphia and Williamsport in Pennsylvania; Memphis, Tenn.; Fairfax County, Va., and Milwaukee, Wis.

The NTE scores are accepted as an alternative to some requirements for regular certification in California, Colorado, Maine, New Hampshire, West Virginia and Pennsyl-Anrig said the NTE Policy Committee's decision to expand the basic skills testing of new teachers is a spillover from public worries over poor basic skills of many high school graduates.

Anrig was asked if the better National Teacher Examination might be of use to school districts wanting to test the competency of teachers on the payroll.

"This test is good for measuring knowledge needed for entry to the teaching profession," he said. "But after that, nothing can take the place of direct observation, supervision and assistance to the teacher by the principal and others in the administration.

"I say this as a former principal, as a former superintendent and as former commissioner of education in Massachusetts."

A recent survey showed education majors have the lowest SAT verbal and math scores among 12 groups of college majors.

ROBERT WAGMAN Amendment Fever Hits Congress

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The Constitution has been amended only 26 times in almost 200 years. Congress has always been loath to tamper with that document, which represents the basic framework of our democracy. But this reluctance has softened recently, and more than 200 proposed constitutional amendments are now pending in Congress. Just before it adjourned in October so that members could campaign, Congress voted down the amendment which has garnered the most publicity - the so-called "balance-thebudget" amendment. This failed amendment was a version proposed by Sen. Orrin Hatch,

R-Utah, and introduced into the House by

Reps. Kent Hance, D-Texas, and Barber

Conable, R-N.Y., with 241 cosponsors. This Hatch amendment was only one of some 81 different amendments that would have required Congress to pass a balanced budget each year. Most of these proposed amendments differ; the Hatch version, which was defeated, would have required that Congress spend no more in any fiscal year than it takes in, except when it votes other-

Numerous balance-the-budget amendments are set up that way: requiring a balanced budget, but permitting Congress to operate at a deficit. These amendments differ in the circumstances that would allow a deficit (war, "national emergency," etc.) or in the number of votes required to pass a deficit budget (simple majority, two-thirds or

But some proposals are absolute: Congress would be forbidden to incur a deficit under any circumstances - or, in one introduced by Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., the government would be required to operate at a surplus each year, with that surplus being used to reduce the national debt.

Many of the other amendments fall into categories. Abortion has been the subject of more than 25 amendments introduced; more than a dozen involve bans on busing to achieve racial balance in schools; another half-dozen deal with prayer in the schools; two dozen would set up new terms of office for the president and members of Congress, or would set new standards for incumbents to continue in office - prohibiting persons with criminal records from serving or, if convicted while in office, from continuing to serve.

Other proposed amendments reflect their sponsors' pet peeves. One proposed by Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohlo, would set up a whole new federal court - a 50-judge "Court of the states," with one judge from each state - that would be superior to the Supreme Court in matters of "states' rights." An amendment introduced by Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., would prohibit the federal government from any undertaking that would compete with citizens' business. Another amendment offered by the California conservative, who was defeated in his re-election bid, would require congressional approval of every regulation proposed by any federal branch or department. Given the number of regulations the government proposes each day, the mind boggles at what this would do to the congressional workload.

It's amusing to compare the proposers' actions with the amendments they have introduced, since the situation is very much one of "do as I say, not as I do."

For instance, most of those who propose balanced-budget amendments are fiscal conservatives who voted for both the Reagan tax cuts and the Reagan budget, which have caused the largest deficits in the history of the Republic.

JACK ANDERSON

Hoods Avoid Paying Millions In Fines

WASHINGTON - The Justice Department made a big show recently out of forcing Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy to pay off the remaining $23,000 of his $40,000 criminal fine, imposed in 1973.

Unfortunately, the department hasn't been nearly so enthusiastic about collecting millions of dollars in fines slapped on convicted Mafia figures and drug dealers. Though many of these crooks are still raking in big bucks, they have successfully thumbed their noses at the government's collection agents.

In fact, the government's own ledgers show that of nearly $5 million in fines levied in more than 800 criminal tax-evasion cases since 1970, only $1.8 million had been paid off by September of last year.

The government has been equally lenient in its handling of the unpaid taxes that led to the convictions in the first place. Internal Revenue Service studies analyzed by Jack Key, former chief investigator of Sen. Sam. Nunn, D-Ga., show the same pattern of indifference toward collection of back taxes. My associate Tony Capaccio has studied raw government data and court records and come up with some shocking examples of the Justice Department's lassitude in making criminals pay for their tax cheating:

- Paul Vario Sr., a publicly identified "consigliere" of the Thomas Lucchese organized-crime family, was fined $20,000 in a criminal tax case in 1973. He still hasn't paid up. Investigators say Vario has pleaded that his income is meager, supplemented by Social Security disability payments. Despite this poor-mouthing, law-enforcement sources say, Vario has an interest in at least 30 businesses in the New York area.

- Anthony J. Giacalone Sr., a "capo" in the Zerilli crime family of Detroit, was fined $30,000 in a tax · case in October 1979. Collection records show that at least $22,000 of the fine has still not been paid. - Mob figure James "Jimmy the Nap"

Pulleday law or in the first bullet a re-

Napoli, suspected of having made 17 false accusations during the investigation of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, was convicted on two counts of tax evasion nearly three years ago and fined $20,000. He had paid no taxes on his more than $500,000 income from 1968-1976. He still hasn't paid a nickel of his

- Joseph Gambino, cousin of the late Mob boss Cafio Gambino, was convicted on several tax counts in July 1977 and fined $50,000. As of September 1981, he still owed $39,000 of the fine. Court records are unclear on how much is still due.

- Anthony Scotto, former high official in the International Longshoreman's Association and a capo in the Gambino crime family, was convicted in January 1980 on numerous charges, including acceptance of payoffs without reporting them on his incometax return. He was fined $75,000. Though he had paid nothing as of September 1981, his lawyers claim he is now paying $3,000 a month on the fine.

-Francis E. King, who shook down people when he was a member of the New York Coty Police Department's special investigations unit, was convicted of tax evasion in April 1979 and fined $30,000. He still owes the government $29,000.

- Seymour Gopman, an attorney who handles the benefit plan for several unions in Florida, was convicted of failing to report $1 million of income on his 1972 tax return. He was fined $15,000 in May 1978. The fine is still outstanding. - Michael D. Pokorney, a heroin dealer prosecuted in Michigan, pleaded guilty in March 1979 to several charges, including cheating on his 1974-76 taxes. He was given a prison sentence and a $60,000 fine. The fine is still not paid.

Balanced Seminole Wins 4th Straight

Herald Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH - A balancedscoring attack and outstanding rebounding enabled Seminole High's Lady Seminoles to claim their fourth straight victory Thursday night, 54-46, over Daytona Beach Mainland.

The Tribe, 4-1 overall and 3-0 in the Five Star Conference, was led by Mona Benton's 15 points. Diedre Hillary collected 11 points and 15 rebounds and Maxine Campbell added 10 points and 11 rebounds. Patricia Campbell was also tough underneath as she pulled down 14

Neither team was able to gain an advantage in the first half, Seminole led late in the second quarter but Mainland came back to tie it at 25-25 at halftime.

The third quarter was much like the first half with the teams playing a transition game and neither squad being able to pull away. Mainland held a slim lead going into the fourth quarter but the Tribe quickly erased it and took the lead with about five minutes remaining.

"After we took the lead the game seesawed back and forth and then we pulled away with about four minutes left," Seminole coach Ron Merthie said. "I was very pleased with our performance, we are steadily improving with each game."

Hayes For Trillo... Hooton For Sundberg... Collins For Murray

HONOLULU (UPI) - After five days of virtual inactivity at the baseball meetings, players changed hands faster than bubble-gum cards Thursday with 21 of them going to new teams.

free agent to their illustrious collection signing outfielder Steve Kemp to a fiveyear, $5.5 million contract.

The Yankees also were one of eight teams involved in Thursday's trade

The whirlwind of activity looked like

-Philadelphia sent second baseman Manny Trillo, shortstop Julio Franco, outfielder George Vukovich, pitcher Jay Baller and catcher Gerry Willard to Cleveland for outfielder Von Hayes. In a separate deal, the Indians dealt infielder player to be named later. To make room on their roster, the Indians shipped former American League Rookie of the Year Joe Charboneal to Charleston of the International League along with pitcher Silvio Martinez and outfielder Ed Saavedra.

-The Yankees traded outfielder In addition, the Yankees added another Collins, pitcher Mike Morgan and first baseman Fred McGriff plus a sizable amount of cash to Toronto for relief pitcher Dale Murray and outfieldercatcher Tom Dodd.

> Yankee third baseman Graig Nettles also was supposed to be included in the deal but he would only agree to go if the Blue Jays came up with a hefty bonus and they refused. Toronto had wanted to send pitcher Jerry Garvin to the Yankees, but they didn't want him and so Toronto will reassign him to the minor leagues.

-Texas shipped catcher Jim Sundberg to Los Angeles for pitchers Burt Hooton, Larry Milbourne to the Phillies for a Dave Stewart, Orel Hershiser and outfielder Mark Bradley.

The Dodgers and Rangers agreed to the deal, but it will not be officially announced until today because final details were still being worked out between

Sundberg's agent and the Dodger at--The Chicago Cubs traded outfielder

Steve Henderson to the Seattle Mariners for pitcher Rich Bordi. With the inter-league trading deadline expiring at 10 p.m. EST, more deals are expected today. The Phillies may have Milbourne on their roster for less than 24 hours. They have begun talking to the San Francisco Giants about the possibility of obtaining second baseman Joe Morgan and relief pitcher Al Holland for Milbourne and pitcher Dick Ruthven.

In another development, the Houston Astros were on the verge of signing freeagent outfielder Omar Moreno.

The Phillies-Indians trade, which was in the works for some time, proved costly in terms of numbers for Philadelphia, but Manager Pat Corrales feels the trade was justified because of Hayes' superstar potential.

"People are going to criticize us and say we gave up a lot and we did," said Corrales. "But there was only one of those players who was going to make the club and that's Trillo.

Trillo, a three-time All-Star, is a big loss to the Phillies but his contract expires after next season and the club was not prepared to meet his demand for a five-year, $5 million deal.

Indians' General Manager Phil Seghi said he had not talked to Trillo about his contract demands

"There's a lot of water over the dam before next season ends and the problem can be solved," said Seghi.

The Yankees solved a couple of their problems with the moves they made Thursday. Besides signing one of baseball's best hitters and run producers in Kemp, they got a solid long reliever in Murray and got rid of Collins' $830,000 m year salary, although they will still be obligated to pay part of Collins' salary.

The Blue Jays felt they benefitted tremendously from the deal, even though they lost a quality reliever.

"Collins gives us a little more speed to go with a guy like (Damaso) Garcia," said Blue Jays' Manager Bobby Cox.

Weaver Battles Favored Challenger Tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)-World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Mike Weaver, appearing in his annual boxing match, takes on unbeaten and favored Michael Dokes in a scheduled 15-round championship fight tonight.

If Weaver follows his schedule, he won't appear again until November 1963. His last fight, in which he scored a decision over James Tillis, was 11 months ago. Since then he has done many, many situps and beat up on dozens of stationary punching bags and sparring

Boxing

It will be just the third defense in 32 months, of the crown he won by knocking out John Tate. In his first defense he knocked out Gerry Coetzee in South Africa, then outpointed Tillis.

But Weaver, one of the most dedicated fighters of all time, will be in top shape for Dokes. And Weaver's style - heavy punching, medicore boxing skills and aggressiveness - probably hasn't been impaired by the long stretch between Weaver, 30, is 24-9 with 16 knockouts, but in his last 11 fights he has lost only to Holmes. And he was pounding away at Holmes in that bout before the WBC champion rallied for a knockout.

The quiet, almost mute, Weaver has been overshadowed in the weeks leading up to the fight by the outspoken Dokes, a former sparring partner of Muhammad Ali who has stolen some of his former boss's lines as well as ring style.

The quick 24-year-old challenger, the WBA's top contender, has been listed a strong favorite. He is 25-0-1 and he avenged his only blemish, a draw with Ossie Ocasio, by Knocking Ocasio out in one round in a rematch.

Dokes is as talkative as Weaver is quiet. He recently said the heavyweight division was in "a shambles," adding, "There are no competent contenders besides me. None."

While expressing no love for Weaver, he at least has shown the champion some

"Mike don't fight much," Dokes correctly assessed, "but he must have done something to get where he is."

The fight will be held at Caesars P lace with no home television.

Cheeseman Vies For Title In Kinney Nationals Saturday

Lake Howell's standout distance runner, Ken Cheeseman will be among 64 of the nation's top prep cross country runners, selected on a time basis from four regional qualifying meets, competing for the prestigious Kinney National Cross Country Champlonships to be held at the Orlando Hyatt on Saturday

Cheeseman, who finished second at the 4A State Championships, joins live other runners from Florida. They include the state's top runner in Winter Park's Brian Jaeger and the best girls runner, Carmen Gardner of Spruce Creek.

The 3.2 mile event will be held adjacent to the Hyatt Orlando just off I-4 at the Disney World exit on Highway 192 East. The women's race will begin at 11:30 a.m., followed by the men's race at 12:15 p.m.

Steve Scott, America's greatest miler and fastest miler in the world in 1982, will serve as official starter for the event.

Rams Frosh, Girls JV Win

Two of Lake Mary's younger teams, the freshman boys and the junior varsity girls, claimed their fourth wins of the season Thursday night against Lake Howell at Lake May.

Karen DeShetler paved the way for the Lady Rams JV with a game high 20 points as Lake Mary ran away with a 55-28 victory. Lisa Simpkins added 13 points as the Rams' upped their record to 4-1.

Lake Mary breezed to a 35-11 halftime lead and cruised to victory. The JV Rams will play Oviedo's JV Tuesday night at 6.

In freshman action, three Rams scored in double figures to lead Lake Mary to a 68-47 victory over Lake Howell. Matt Newby led Lake Mary with 18 points while Alan Reid and Byron Washington added 12 points aplece.

It was the fourth straight regular season win for the Rams' frosh who go up against Crooms next Tuesday at Lake Mary with game time starting at 4:30 p.m

"I'm really glad it's over," Gretzky said. "Now I can get back to normal. I'm disappointed, but I'm glad. It was a great thrill just to tie Guy Lafleur. I hope I can live up to the record like he did.

Los Angeles became the first team to hold the 21year-old superstar without a point in 31 games this season, but the Oilers salvaged the tie on Pat Hughes' breakaway goal in the final period.

Gretzky was shut out by the team against which he broke Lafleur's previous record of 28 Sunday night at Edmonton, Alberta.

More To Life Than Baseball, Bochte Turns Back On Million

HONOLULU (UPI) - Talk to Rene Lachemann about Bruce Bochte and you can see the pain in his eyes. You can also see the happiness he feels for his friend.

No other ballplayer maybe in all history has ever done what Bruce Bochte has done. He has looked at better than $1 million he could have had, turned his back on it and walked away.

Four clubs were, and still are, greatly interested in having the 32-year-old first baseman-outfielder play for them. The clubs are the Yankees, Royals, Blue Jays and Mariners, for whom he has played the past five years.

Bochte was making $200,000 a year with the Mariners. He became a free agent at the end of the season and wouldn't have had any trouble getting a threeyear contract for at least $1.2 million. He was assured that and he knew that. Nonetheless, he quit. Just like that.

He did it coming off a good year, too. a year in which he hit .382 with men in scoring position and finished up with .297, 70 RBI and 12 homers in 144

Nobody wanted Bochte to quit. Especially not Lachemann. But the big, left-handed hitter from Woodinville, Wash., said he had had it with baseball.

He wasn't happy over the fragmented relationship between players and management and he didn't care to play their game anymore. His agent has told everyone no amount of money is about to bring him back.

"This is the type person he is," Lachemann explained, sitting on the year. Maler started off well, then began may be more to life than just baseball."

Milton Richman

UP1 Sports Editor

hotel veranda at the baseball meetings Wednesday, "Baseball is my life, but to Bruce, there's more to life than baseball. And I don't think he's wrong."

Scattle President Dan O'Brien was so eager to have Boche back, he offered him a number of options, including a no-trade clause in his contract because Bochte said how much he loved playing in Seattle, or a one-year contract if he wanted that. But Bochte said no thanks.

He didn't want anything from baseball. All he wanted to do was take his wife, Linda, and two daughters, Sara and Dana, buy some acreage off the coast of Seattle and see if he couldn't be happy just working the land and living off it. He thought he could.

"I've been close with Bruce since I became manager of the Mariners." said Lachemann, who replaced Maury Wills in May of 1981 and is the major's youngest pilot at 37. "He was one of the leaders on our ballclub this year as far as I'm concerned. He was the best percentage hitter I had, the best hitter I had with people in scoring position and the best on-base percentage hitter. But I don't look at him only as a ballplayer, I look at him as a good friend."

Bochte played left field most of this to struggle and was sent back to Salt Lake City in August. That was when Bochte returned to first base.

Elaborating on the high-type character Bochte has, Lachemann said the 6-foot-3 Pasadena, Calif., native raised his average above .300 three different times the last week of the season and since the games the Mariners were playing weren't of that much consequence, Lachemann offered to remove him from the lineup as to keep him from dipping below that figure.

"He told me, 'No way." When the season was over, Bochte and his family had Lachemann and his family over to the house for dinner.

"We talked about a lot of things," Lachemann said, "He told me his decision to quit had been made over a year ago. I told him some people were going to say he was doing this to try and get more money, even though I knew in my heart that wasn't true and he said he realized that and was ready to accept it.

"A lot of people say Bruce is going off the deep end. I don't think so. I think I know him well enough to make that judgment. He's a very intelligent

"He doesn't know if he's doing the right thing. He'd like to find out. Maybe I've lost a fine player, but I'm not losing a friend. It may be wrong for a manager to say this but I know all the happiness I feel for him because he's going to do something he likes. You know, Bruce could be right," Lachemann said, gazing off into the Pacific Ocean in the distance. "There

Rimington Adds Lombardi To Trophies

HOUSTON (UPI)-All-American center Dave Rimington of Nebraska has added the Lombardi Award to an already crowded trophy room.

The previous winner of an unprecedented two Outland trophies, Rimington, 22, of Omaha, Neb., Thuraday night was named the choice of 124 head coaches and the media as the outstanding lineman in college football, event spokesmen said.

As he raised the 40-pound, block-ofgranite trophy listing the 12 previous winners, the 290-pound Rimington said: "Of all the years of weight training, this is probably the most important 40 pounds I've ever lifted." He was as nervous as if it was the first map against Oklahoma, but he thought to praise Rotary Club of Houston members who raised $250,000 for cancer research at a blacktie announcement dinner. "Thank you for what you are doing,"

he said. "This is a special moment for me. I'm happy for myself, my family and my school. His blocking helped the No. 3 Cornhuskers become the top rushing team in America this past season. Nebraska won 11 of 12 games and earned an Orange Bowl berth as champion of the Big Eight

Also honored at the dinner for the four Lombardi finalists were Arkansas defensive tackle Billy Ray Smith, Southern California nose guard George Achica and Arizona State linebacker Vernon Maxwell.

Rimington was the second Nebraska player to win the Lombardi. In 1972, Cornhusker nose guard Rich Glover won it. No school has ever had three winners. Rimington was only the third offensive player selected. He gained so much attention this year that Smith, the son of former Baltimore Colts' all-pro Billy Ray Smith, failed to win the Lombardi despite becoming a finalist for the second straight year.

Oddly, Rimington was not among the top 12 vote getters for the Lombardi in 1981 despite winning the Outland Trophy. "I was totally surprised to win the Outland so it didn't bother me that I wasn't a (Lombardi) finalist last year,"

He told of a personal meeting with the Lombardi winner last year, New England Patriots' defensive tackle Kenneth Sims, who played at Texas.

Steve Thurmond broke into the open and marched 70 yards for their second score.

"I met Ken Sims and he whispered, 'So you're the guy who stole the Outland from me last year.' He was joking of

KSU Gets Bowl Berth After 87-Year Wait

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — It may have taken Kansas State 87 years to get to its first bowl game, but the Wildcats are not going to get any sympathy from the Wisconsin Badgers.

In four previous bowl trips the Badgers have come away winless and have dedicated themselves to altering that pattern Saturday night in the Independence Bowl.

Kansas State (6-4-1) and Wisconsin (6-5) will open the bowl season Saturday evening in the seventh edition of a bowl that has struggled to obtain top teams Last year Wisconsin made its first bowl

Vance Sets Up Blood Bank In Saudi Arabia

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, including a stopover on "cloud nine," is the destination of Joann Vance of Central Florida Regional Hospital, Sanford. She was chosen from thousands of applicants to set up a blood bank at the new Hospital Corporation of America's medical facility in that country.

"Everything is happening so fast. It's just fantastic to be able to go. I'm so excited." said Mrs. Vance concerning her one- to three-month stint overseas.

After 13 years of experience with various blood banks, including her most recent three years with Central Florida Regional and HCA, Mrs. Vance was competitively selected to solely set up a new blood center at the new HCA medical center in Saudi Arabia. She began her journey Monday.

The 39-year-old woman is part of an HCA recruiting project to establish the center, while offering its stateside employees the opportunity and challenge to work overseas. "We'll be setting everything up and training the new employees " explained the CFRH Blood Bank supervisor. "No one is sure how long it will take. It may be anywhere from 30 days to three months."

In an interview before she left for Arabia, Mrs. Vance said she would be flying to HCA headquarters in Nashville, Tenn., for two days of orientation, then on to New York City for one day of touring prior to takeoff for Riyadh, where a 500-bed facility awaits the team of approximately 50 men and women. chosen to prepare for its opening.

"I feel very honored that they chose me," said an excited and energetic Mrs. Vance. "From what I understand, the number of lab people competing for this job was in the thousands."

21-Year-Old Student Needs Mom's Unconditional Love

DEAR ABBY: Help, please! I think my beautiful 21-year-old son is gay! (I'll call him Gary.)

While looking for a notebook for one of my other children, I found three books about gay relationships in Gary's room. They were in a bottom drawer, well-covered with other things, apparently hidden. He is 300 miles away - in his senior year at

I am shaking like a leaf as I write this. My husband has a heart condition and I'm reluctant to discuss this with him because I'm afraid he couldn't handle it. We don't attend any church, so there isn't a clergyman I feel close to.

Gary is in the middle of a very demanding academic schedule and I don't want to jeopardize his college career by getting him into an emotional unheaval right now. I don't know where to turn. I want to know if he is gay - and yet I don't want to know. I don't know how long I can keep this inside. Where do I turn? DEAR SICK: Don't jump to any conclusions. Just because you found books about "gay relationships" in Gary's drawer does not necessarily mean he is gay. And if he is, it's not the end of the world, either. For now, you need someone to talk to. I recommend a specialist in family counseling. When Gary comes home, and the pressure of his senior year is over, discuss it with him calmly. Straight or gay, he is your son and he needs your unconditional love. (P.S. And please reconsider sharing this with your husband. Gary is his son, too.)

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man who "playfully" pokes his pregnant wife in the abdomen even though she has told him that she doesn't like it? He also teases her about how "fat" she's become. She can see for herself that she's lost her figure and doesn't need this kind of needling from her husband to remind her that she isn't attractive to him anymore. Don't men understand that this is a difficult time for women?

Please print this. Maybe he will see himself and wise up. DEAR NO NAME: Men understand it, boys den't. Your

Miss Richards Bride Of David E. Wenner

Susan Ellen Richards and David Evan Wenner announce their marriage today. They were married Sept. 24, at 7 p.m. in the Sanford Church of Christ.

The bride is the daughter of Clodene Richards Richards, 1904 W. 4th St., Sanford. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. and Mrs. Louis Wenner, 790 Timberlane St., Deltona.

The bride chose for her vows a formal gown of Chantilly lace and bridal satin fashioned with a cathedral train. Her floorlength mantilla veil of illusion was secured to a seed pearl head band. She carried a formal bouquet of plum, lavender and white roses.

Kim Clayton attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a plum-colored dress with matching jacket and carried one plum colored silk rose and one lavender silk rose. Cathy Covington and Ronda West were the bridesmaids.

Their attire and flowers were similar to the honor attendant's. Ron McVay served the bridegroom as best man. Groomsmen were: Doug Phillips and Ivan Tabor.

Erica Zaccour was the flower girl and Ben Galloway the ring The reception was held in the church annex. Following a beach wedding trip, the newlyweds are making their home at

IN BRIEF

Gunter Advises Patients To 'Shop Around' For Price

FLORIDA

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Criticizing the lack of competition in the health care industry, Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter has released the first of what will be a series of brochures comparing Florida hospital costs.

"I am here to (say) there is something they can do . . in consultation with their physicians, shop around,"

Gunter predicted that if rising medical costs are not curtailed the state will eventually take a more direct hand in controlling medical costs.

He said he hoped public awareness of the differences in charges between hospitals would get the attention of hospital management and begin to educate physicians.

Labor Crackdown Begun

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) - The Florida Department of Labor and Employment security will continue its crackdown on farm-labor violations that have so far led to sanctions against more than 100 labor contractors, officials said.

The unprecedented sanctions against 117 labor contractors Thursday ranged from revocation of certificates to refusal to renew permits, according to Zeke Sims, administrator of the department's Rural Manpower Services Division.

"Only since 1980 have we taken steps to actually enforce the law," against unscrupulous crew leaders, Sims said. The sanctions were applied in cases that occurred between July 1980 and last Nov. 20.

Sims said 88 crew leaders had their certificates revoked, 22 were refused renewal, six were refused permits and one crew leader's license was suspended. By TENI YARBOROUGH Herald Staff Writer

A 45-year-old Lake Mary man was being held in the Seminole County jail without bond today following his arrest at about midnight Thursday for molesting young girls.

Alfred Frederick Wagner, of 331E Lake Mary Blvd., was arrested by sheriff's deputies and charged with two counts of sexual assault on a child.

Deputies said they arrested Wagner after an 8-year-old girl told them she was sexually molested by Wagner in his home on Oct. 9. A 9-year-old girl said she was also molested by Wagner in his home in September.

MURDER SUSPECTS RETURNING MONDAY

A former Altamonte Springs woman and her boyfriend are expected to be returned from California next week to face charges of first-degree murder in Seminole County in connection with the death of the woman's five-year-old daughter.

Susan Barrett Assaid, 29, who has been held by Riverside, Calif. police since her arrest last week in the death of Ursula Sunshine Assaid, will be flown from California to Orlando then transported to the Seminole County jail at about 5 p.m. Monday, according to sheriff's spokesman John Spolski.

"Her boyfriend, Donald Glenn McDougall, 26, will return on Tuesday," Spolski said.

Spolski said the reason officials are transporting the couple separately "is for security reasons." He declined to elaborate

The couple, who lived a 817 E. Highland Drive, Altamonte Springs, before leaving Florida on Thanksgiving to seek employment in California, were indicted by a Seminole grand jury last week in the young girl's murder.

Riverside police arrested the two after Ms. Assaid walked into police headquarters there and told police that her daughter's body could be found in a burlap bag at the bottom of an Altamonte Springs pond.

After a nine-hour search of the muck-filled retention pond near Ballard Street, Altamonte Springs police and fire personnel found the badly decomposed body in the sack along with two 10-pound weights.

County medical examiners said the girl had been in the water since Sept. 26 and had suffered numerous blows to the head and may possibly have been the victim of extensive child

SANFORD CHILD HURT A 6-year-old Sanford boy was listed in satisfactory condition at Central Florida Regional Hospital today after being struck by a car along U.S. Highway 17-92 Thursday. Ryan K. Bailey, of 606 Park Ave., is being treated for a gash to his leg and multiple cuts and bruises after he apparently ran in front of a van driven by Donald W. Doering of 1516 E. Second St., Sanford, at 3:47 p.m. Thursday, hospital officials said.

Doering was not injured, police said. Police said Doering was driving his 1973 Chevrolet van northbound along U.S. 17-92 near Park Avenue when a child darted in front of him. Doering told police he attempted to stop, skidded and swerved in an effort to miss the child but couldn't.

DUI ARRESTS

The following people were arrested in Seminole County and charged with driving under the influence (DUI) of alcoholic

No charges were filed in the accident, police said.

- Roy Paul Dedalis, 30, of 721 Royal Palm, Casselberry, arrested 1:43 a.m., Friday. Dedalis was arrested by Casselberry police in the rear parking lot of the ABC Liquor lounge, at U.S. Highway 17-92. - Michael John Wilson, 51, of Cocoa Beach, arrested 4:08 p.m. Thursday, charged with DUI and failure to maintain a single lane. Wilson was arrested by deputies along Lake Mary Blvd. near Rinehart Road in Lake Mary. - James Robert LaPlante, 28, of 1111 E. Clemson Drive, Altamonte Springs, arrested 2 a.m. Friday, charged with DUI, and possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana. Deputies arrested LaPlante after they observed a man trying to drive his vehicle out of a ditch at State Road 427 and Garden Drive near Sanford.

SANFORD FIRE CALLS

The Sanford Fire Department responded to the following fire calls Wednesday: - 7:58 a.m., 1216 W. 13th St., person down.

- 10:56 a.m., U.S. Highway 17-92 at Seminole Community College, car fire, extinguished.

- 2:11 p.m., 1722 Hanger Road, man down.

- 10:37 p.m., 2101 S. French Ave., woman down. The Sanford Fire Department responded to the following fire calls Thursday: - 12:53 p.m., U.S. Highway 17-92 and Lake Mary Blvd., auto accident with possible injuries.

- 2:16 p.m., 1525 Mellonville Ave., false alarm.

- 3:47 p.m., Sixth St. and Park Ave., child hit by car, taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital for treatment.

- 5:28 p.m., 2930 Orlando Drive, auto accident with injuries,

- 5:39 p.m., 13 Lake Monroe, false alarm.

- 5:38 p.m., Airport Blvd., and McCracken Road, auto accident, truck in ditch, driver's leg pinned, transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital for treatment.

Radio-Controlled Model Plane Flying:

'Next Best Thing To Being There'

By BRITT SMITH Herald Staff Writer

Those daring young men and their flying machines are at it again, buzzing across the sky at breakneck speed or gracefully looping and diving in mock dogfights, surely frustrated Red Barons every one.

But before you grab your rusty combat helmet and rush out to the nearest air raid shelter, these latter-day aces aren't war-hardened pilots turning the peaceful skies of Central Florida into another Battle of Britain.

In fact, most of them don't even know how to fly.

They are ground-bound aviators who fulfill their love of flight by putting a miniature airplane through its paces via remote control.

Radio-controlled model flying is, in the words of 43-yearold Bob Schuster of Winter Springs, "the next best thing to being there."

He is not alone in his assessment. Across the country, an estimated 100,000 enthusiasts have switched on to radio-control flying, most of them in the last five years or so. And many of these 'flyers' reside in Central Florida.

Want to get a closer look at this scaled-down version of the flying craze? You'll have an opportunity Dec. 28-Jan. 2 when the Remote Control Association of Central Florida holds its 15th annual Tangerine Invitational Champlonships.

The event, which is expected to attract up to 200 radioers from all over the country, will begin at 8 a.m. each morning at the R-C World field on Dean Road off State Road 50 in Orlando.

There will be scale models, racers, and stunt flyers. Entries will be judged on how closely they resemble their real-life counterparts both in appearance and flight. There may also be a few simulated air battles and a 'fun fly' where pilots will perform tricks like flying their relic replicas under a ribbon only a few feet above the ground.

Admission is free.

But be advised, one session with the pros may be enough to get you hooked on the sport, one which has been known to drain many a fan's pocketbook and tax his patience.

If you've ever dreamed of learning to fly a plane, but lacked the nerve or money to get started, a radio-controlled model may be just the thing, Schuster says.

He warns that putting together a model from scratch takes a bit more manual dexterity than assembling one of those stick and tissue paper creations with a rubberbandpowered propellor you may have built back in grammar school.

"Kits are available that make it possible for even the all-

When not selling electronics equipment, Bob Schuster likes to race radio-controlled model airplanes. Here, he tunes up his racer for the thumbs person to own a plane that looks and runs pretty good," Schuster says. "You can also get them fresh from the box ready to fly for anywhere from $100 to $500. You get what you pay for." But most of these are of less than desirable quality and "can fall apart on the first bumpy leading."

Models come in a variety of shapes, sizes, materials, and capabilities. Balsa wood is a common framing material and is frequently used as an overall covering as well.

Bodies also may be made of rayon and silk fabric fiberglass, or plastic sheet pressed over wing struts with an 15th annual Tangerine Invitational to be held Dec. 28-Jan. 2 in Orlando.

For the beginner with a do-it-yourself flair, Schuster recommends a trainer kit "which you can buy and build for about $60, an engine for another $60 and a radio unit which can be adapted for better aircraft for about $200."

Every trick a radio-controlled model plane performs is in response to signals from its 'brain,' a hand-held, battery-powered transmitter with sometimes as many as 12 channels which allows the pilot to make his craft perform a whole host of feats of derring-do.

The transmitter has two sticks which closely resemble the controls of an actual airplane. In the cockpit, beneath the plastic canopy, is a mass of electronic receiving gizmos, lending the craft the sinister appearance of a miniature U-2

By moving the sticks in the appropriate manner, the flyer See FLYING, Page 2

The transition

'Here's one of those tidbits of information that falls into the No-One-Really-Cares-But-Here-It-Is-Anyway category: Gordon Sumner, also known as Sting, the lead singer of the 'Police' rock group, has made his dramatic acting debut in 'Brimstone and Treacle.' Page 2.

Maritime merriment

Evoking memories of Christmas past when a toy boat was just about all any child wanted to see under the Christmas tree, PBS will offer 'Titanic In A Tub' Monday, featuring more than 300 rare boats dating from 1890 to the 1930s. Page 7.

Endangered specials

The television ratings game has gotten so cutthroat in recent years that animated specials, particularly those featuring those old favorites — Snoopy and Bugs Bunny, and newcomer Garfield — may soon become extinct. But why? Find out on Page 8.

can move the rudder, ailerons, and throttle. The plane will take off, circle, stunt, and land in exact accord with the instructions transmitted.

While all this electronic wizardry may be fascinating, Schuster warns, "go slowly. If you fly, you're going to crash and it's no fun sending $500 worth" of high-density styrofoam, cross-linked polyethylene, ABS plastic and some rather sophisticated electronic gear into an unceremonious meeting with a tree on your first trip out.

Also, "this is no backyard sport," he says. "You have to have a fair size strip for a runway and several acres to fly around in." In other words, "find yourself a fairly large, open field to fly in or risk scraping your prize plane out of some high-voltage wires or your neighbor's TV antenna."

The sport is also not necessarily a young person's game. Most of the 100 or so members of the Remote Control Association of Central Florida are middle age, several of them in their 80s. And they come from all walks of life doctors, mechanics, retirees.

But most importantly, radio-controlled flying can mean a sizable outlay of cash. Even though the radio unit may be a once-in-a-lifetime expense, other items like starters, battery rechargers, fuel, tools, and repair parts mount up steadily over the long haul.

And all that doesn't include the hours upon hours of time a model flying afficionado pours lovingly into his craft. Schuster, for example, owns a half dozen planes (built them mostly himself), puts close to 150 hours of work into building each one, and has owned more than two dozen planes since he took up the hobby 15 years ago.

He travels as far away as Nashville to compete in radiocontrolled model air shows, and is, by his own admission, "a radio model plane junkie."

He also falls into that category of mini-pilot known as a racer, persons who get a thrill out of souping up an engine the size of their hand until it sounds like a giant bumblebee and can power a plane with a wingspan of usually less than

OK, be honest. At first glance, you thougt this was a real P-51, right? Well, it is...sort of. It's a model of a real P-51. And it's planes like it six feet to speeds approaching 200 miles per hour.

There are also the scalers, enthusiasts who love building and flying scale models of actual aircraft. The upcoming meet will feature many of these hobbyists with their Fokker tri-planes, Sopwith Camels (Snoopy's favorite), and Deliaviland bombers, all old war birds.

Also on hand will be the aerobatic flyers, barnstormers who firmly believe that the most exciting way of getting from here to there is with a few lazy loops, a death-defying power dive or two, and maybe an uncontrolled spin thrown that have attracted thousands to the growing sport of radio-controlled model airplane flying.

in for kicks.

Most radio model flyers do their thing primarily for fun and pride, boring holes in the sky for a few hours on

But there can be more to all this craziness than just that. There's at least one event held annually in Las Vegas with a purse of $50,000, Schuster says.

So, if you're good enough, you can fly for both fun and profit.

No Naked Selleck In 'Playgirl' Article

DEAR DICK: There is a rumor going around that Tom Selleck posed naked for Playgiri magazine. I don't believe it, but I have to know for sure. I'm very fond of him and it would really disgust me if this was true. L.F., Norwood, Mo.

Rest easy. Playgirl, in its September issue, did print an article about Tom and a picture of him. But the picture was just a head shot. Neither article nor picture were authorized, but they were not destructive in any way.

Sabu died in '63 and Driscoll, who was in many films including "Treasure Island" and was the voice of the cartoon "Peter Pan" in '53, died in '68. As far as I know, Hill is still rolling along merrily.

There is, however, considerable interest in certain circles that this 31-year-old Gordon's professional name success.

Sting, ne Gordon, summed his pale English epidermis at the swimming pool of the Chateau Narmont hotel, unconcerned that he was staying in the same cottage in which John Belushi overdosed earlier this year.

Sting had stopped briefly in Hollywood on a nationwide tour to deliver the news that he is starring in "Brimstone and Treacle" with a pair of respected English actors, Joan Plowright and Denholm Elliott.

Sting is a friendly chap one would like to see succeed, a rock star who is alarmingly normal in mein and manner.

"A good many rock stars have tried to make a go in cinema," he observed, "but generatigener bandtuere

"It's a difficult transition. If you fail in films, rock and roll doesn't want you back. The fans feel you've betrayed them. So you must choose your filsm carefully."

Part of "Brimstone and Treacle's" appeal to Sting was the adult nature of the film which received an X rating in England, thereby eliminating the possibility of millions of Police fans from seeing it.

The picture, however, is rated R in the United States. Sting explained, or tried to Sting knew "Brimstone and Treacle" would face hard going in Blightly. When it was produced for BBS a decade ago it was banned

Sailing Into Christmas

There was a time, before "dreadnoughts" of World youthful imagination War I to the sleek passenger climbed aboard Millenium Falcon and headed for the stars, when a toy boat was just about all any child wanted to see under the Christmas tree.

For those who remember, PBS and Forbes magazine presents of the video season on Dec. 13.

"Titanic in a Tub," produced by Timothy Forbes, one of the four sons of multi-millionaire publisher, sportsman and balloon enthusiast Malcolm Forbes, is many things — all of them as charming and colorful as one of the wonderful Faberge eggs in the Forbes collection.

This one, however - produced for PBS stations by WNET, New York features another of the. famous Forbes family collections, which includes more than 300 rare toy boats, most built and marketed between 1890 and the 1930s when fascination with things maritime equalled today's fascination with space.

All the ships - and their toy counterparts — are

Plimpton Nixes Pia

NEW YORK - George Plimpton was invited to do a cameo in the next Pia Zadora epic. The role called for Plimpton to bring Pia to the height of passion. But since it was only a small part Plimpton razzberry'd it, although he admitted: "I wouldn't have minded the rehearsals... Lauren Tewes better not rock her "Love Boat." It enabled her to buy a $1.5 million palazzo in Hancock Park, Calif.

Sophia Loren's dropping hints that she'd make top guest-star appearances on top TV shows for top loot... Kenny Rogers decided to cool it and not strain himself this past summer. Considering he only did a few concerts it wasn't bad. He knocked off $8 million... Phyllis George (wife of Kentucky's Gov. John Brown) is settin' on her porch in Frankfurt, Ky. contemplat-ing "The Phyllis George Brown Kentucky Craft Book.' It'll be done in first person. Author is Alfred Allen Lewis who wrote Sylvin Sidney's needlepoint book, Maggie Hayes' jewelry book and Sharon Rockefeller's quilting book... Scrap of dialogue between Nancy Reagan and me the other day: First Lady: "Did you receive the letter I sent you?" Me: "No." First Lady: "I sent it last week." Me: "In that case I can't understand why I didn't get it yet." First Lady: "Oh, you know the mails." CONTRACTORES

NEW YORK (UPI) - there, from the mighty the liners that once ran the trans-Atlantic race for the blue ribbon of speed under such christenings as the Lusitania, the Queen Mary. the Bremen, the Rex and the Normandie.

To present the boat collecwill present one of the most tion. Forbes uses archival evocative Christmas film footage interspersed with idyllic scenes of children at play, mimicking the events of their day with toy boats on sylvan ponds or in bathtubs where many stayed until they were wrinkled as prunes for the sake of the fantasy adventure.

> They lived in the days when one could cruise in the Byzantine luxury of a floating palace from New York to Europe in six days or return, if he happened to be a poor immigrant, in steerage, below decks.

> They also lived through the world's first massive arms race in which England and Germany strove for mastery of the seas by launching hundreds of warships in the prelude to World War I and played out their own deadly game in the sinking of the Lusitania and in the battle of Jutland.

> The resulting segue between the stark black and white historical flim footage and the richly colored segments with the children is a brilliant ploy that makes the world of the children somehow more real than the one they mimicked.

Narrated by Rex Harrison, the film traces sea power from its zenith to the advent of the submarine and the warplane, adding the latter to the children's arsenal of toys as the headlines of the day mandated. Never has a history lesson been more palatable.

Not everyone, however, was happy with the making of "Titanic in a Tub." Professional collectors, Forbes said, greeted the shooting the way a museum director might greet the use of a rare crusader's broadsword to chop wood.

"They were horrified," he said. "We were putting these great collectables in the water! They said, 'you can't do that.' They want them on a shelf, behind glass. Don't touch!

"It's ridiculous. Toy boats were made to play with."

And play with them, Forbes and the young actors he recruited for his exquisite 30-minute special do - with gusto.

They even sink a couple of them as every child who ever played with a toy boat has done, with two proud owners engaging in a "sea battle" in which pebbles are substituted for the 12-inch shells fired by the early battlewagons.

Only PBS gives such Christmas presents and "Titanic in a Tub" is the nicest one in years.

Nielsens Snub Snoopy; Put Animated Specials On The Endangered List

By KENNETH R. CLARK problem, however, soaring UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) -Mention "endangered where thousands of "cells" species," and things like whales and baby seals leap to mind — unless the mind in question happens to belong to Lee Mendelson. He thinks of Snoopy, Garfield and Bugs Bunny.

For two decades, Mendelson has engineered the passage of such universally adored creatures from the comic strips into prime-time television.

The annual "Charlie Brown" special is his production, and his latest client — a lazy, lovable feline named "Garfield" — landed in the Nielsen Top 10 this season for CBS, but Mendelson is not optimistic about the rest of his cat's nine Animated specials, he said, are in trouble, and the ubiquitous Nielsen families are to blame.

"All television ratings have gone down recently ratings and audience shares both — but particularly affected have been the specials, both live and animated," he said.

"For someone who has spent 20 years of his life doing specials and thinking this is an important American way of life, this gives me great concern."

"It's still a craftsman's job," said Mendelson. "You're dealing with thousands of cells on evey show. It's still manpower. There are computer animations and other new technologies coming along, but for the time being, there's a lot more people involved now than there ever

"If it's quality animation, you can't do it on the cheap. A good animated feature film nowadays can cost anywhere from four to 10 million dollars."

Walt Disney would have shuddered and, according to Mendelson, the world probably would be denied much of his artistry if he were turning out such extravaganzas as "Fantasia"

Disney, too, would have had to buck the Nielsen ratings, and "Fantasia" on television probably wouldn't do any better against "Dallas" or "60 Minutes" than other hapless challengers have done in recent years.

"It's 100 per cent ratings and each year it seems to get worse and worse," Mendelson said.

"Shows I got on 10 years ago — we took Paul Newman especially in animation, and Joanne Woodward through the wilderness; we still have to be handpainted took George C. Scott out to all the national parks and did Red Baron — are another. Steinbeck's 'Travels With Charlie" — wouldn't even get on the air now because the ratings have gotten so deliberate.

> "But you have to live with it. That's the name of the game."

In an effort to "live with it," and in the process save Snoopy, Garfield, Bugs Bunny and all the other little creatures who dwell in his animation stable from extinction. Mendelson said he is trying to crack Saturday morning television.

He said independent television stations and cable systems, which have even less money to spend on special programming than the networks, offer no help at all.

"For the immediate future they are not viable entities," he said. "The only game is the three major nets.

"All specials are in jeopardy," he said. "It may be audiences are so locked into a series like 'Dallas" that you can't shake them loose ... If this trend continues, in a few years there may not be any prime-time animated specials.

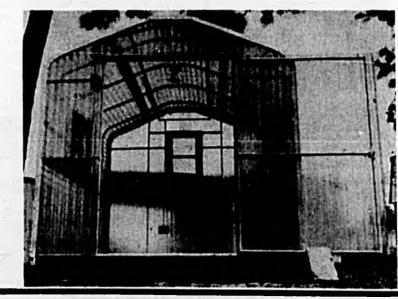

"I think this would be a tragedy."
