SANFORD — The Seminole County Sheriff's department will auction 37 vehicles tomorrow beginning at 10 a.m., at the office parking lot at the Orlando Sanford Airport. The vehicles were either driven by deputies and personnel, or seized from criminals. All vehicles are sold "as-is" and must be removed by Wednesday, Aug. 23.

Among the vehicles are 19 Chevrolet Caprices, two Dodge ramchargers, a 1988 BMW, a 1979 Datsun 280Z, as well as vans and pickup trucks.

House is free to anyone who can move it to nearby property

SANFORD — A three-bedroom house located at 211 S. French Ave. (U.S. Highway 17-92), can be yours, free. All you have to do is have it moved.

The home was purchased by Roy Zimmer and his wife. Although Zimmer is a businessman with an office in Winter Park, he said he and his wife purchased the property for the land rather than the building. Once the home is moved, he plans to offer it for sale.

"We had originally thought it might be a good place for a strip mall," he said, "but after we checked into the property rental situation

Making the trash disappear

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

SANFORD — Setting the filled garbage can and recycling bin out on the curb on pickup day and stowing them back in the garage at night is a routine many residents accomplish without any further thought to the multi-million dollar operation involved in making the trash (solid waste) disappear.

During a work session this week, the Seminole County Commissioners agreed to pursue the idea of competitive bidding, allowing private companies as well as the county's public works department the opportunity to bid on operating the county's solid waste transfer and disposal site.

County Manager Ron Rabun said the county will advertise for requests for qualifications from private companies to bid on the operation. Once qualified companies are identified, the county may seek proposals, selecting the lowest and best bid for running the operation.

During the current fiscal year, county officials estimate 254,838

Safety tips follow tragic bike accidents

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Blood has been shed on the streets of Sanford the last two days.

Two people were killed in Sanford when their bicycles collided with cars on busy highways.

The first fatality occurred on Tuesday when Jesse P. Mitchell, 42, swerved into the path of a delivery truck driven by Mark Harvey on State Road 46.

The second accident happened on County Road 427 Wednesday afternoon when 14-year-old Shane Haynes suddenly swerved into the path of a car driven by Brian E. Smith.

Neither bicyclist was wearing a protective helmet.

"That's the most important rule," said bicycle mechanic Orlando Morales of Lake Mary Cycles. "You gotta wear a helmet to be safe."

Helmets are especially invaluable to those who plan to ride their bikes in heavy traffic.

A helmet, experts agree could mean the difference between life and death.

Morales suggests that wherever possible, riders should make their way along sidewalks in order to avoid heavy traffic.

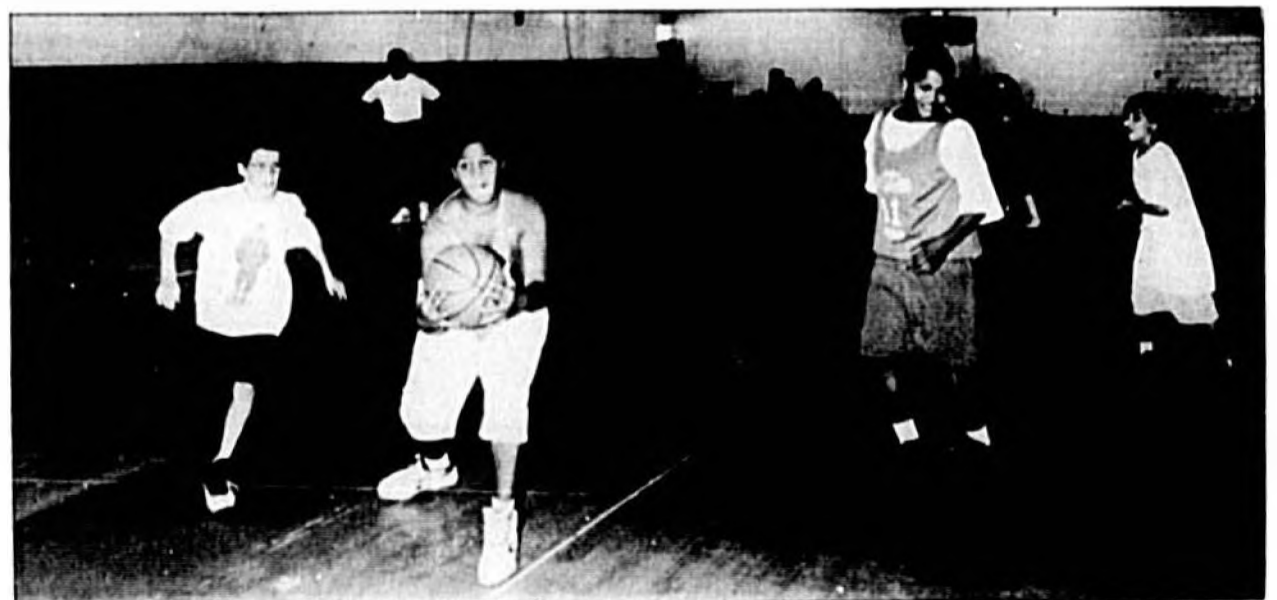

Other experts suggest that sidewalks are designed for walkers and that wheeled vehicles should be on the road.

"Bikes should be on the road, not competing with walkers," Tracy Blakemon, manager of the Bicycle Castle in Casselberry.

When on the road, bicyclists should always ride with the flow of the traffic.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

FLORIDA BRIEFS

6 arrested for auto repairs fraud

BARTOW — The owners and employees of auto transmission businesses in Polk County were arrested in an undercover sting into bogus repairs.

Six people were charged with violations of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act and grand theft. Some also were charged with scheming to defraud, misleading advertising and violating the state's motor vehicle act.

Authorities from Polk sheriff's office and the Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services began investigating after motorists complained about being overcharged and receiving unauthorized and unnecessary repairs and shoddy work. Undercover officers posing as customers were charged for parts that weren't replaced and had work done that wasn't needed.

Charged were Mason Smith Benfield, 51, of Lakeland; Larry Earl Brinkman, 44, of Lakeland; Frederick Joseph Crisante, 36, of Orlando; Stephen Mark Crisante, 32, of Orlando; Brian Kent Lalon, 32, of Mulberry; and Victor Rivera, 39, of Kissimmee.

Jackson impersonator sentenced

ORLANDO — A Michael Jackson impersonator who faced life imprisonment on child-molestation charges will serve a five-year sentence because many of the victims refused to testify or recanted.

Prosecutor Robin Wilkinson said many youngsters were too scared of other gang members to testify and changed their stories.

The sentence for Michael Johnson, 30, a dancer featured on television as a Jackson impersonator, infuriated several women who said the gang leader has terrorized their families.

Minutes before his trial Wednesday, Johnson pleaded no contest to eight counts of performing a lewd act upon a child. The charges dealt with three boys. All other charges were dropped.

Arrested for counterfeiting

DAYTONA BEACH SHORES — Police alerted by local merchants arrested two men they believe to be Britons on counterfeit charges, and Secret Service agents later confiscated a large number of bogus bills.

Additional charges were expected after agents obtained positive identifications and determined whether $6,400 in traveler's checks were forged.

The two men identified themselves as John Stephen Uter, 32, and Gerald Frederick Walsh, 35, from London, England.

Merchants called the 911 emergency number after spotting a fake $20 bill. Officers chased one man for several blocks and arrested the other as he was trying to dispose of a large bundle of bills in a storm sewer opening, authorities said.

'Later Today' TV show coming

LAKE BUENA VISTA — A daily TV show dubbed "Later Today," to be produced at Disney-MGM Studios by a Connecticut firm, will focus on news and events before they actually take place.

The show is to be a nationally syndicated, weekday morning newscast from a Disney-MGM soundstage, beginning in March 1996. The target audience is homemakers.

"Everything in the newscast is about what is happening later," said Glenn Barbour, founder and chief executive officer of Later Today Television Newsgroup of Norwalk, Conn.

Bob Allen, vice president in charge of production operations at Disney-MGM Studios, said the show was "exactly the kind of long-term paradigm opportunity that we've been looking for in Florida."

He anticipates a number of cross-promotions between the show and the Disney theme parks.

Police officer injured

Sanford police officer Gary Smith suffered from a severely sprained ankle Thursday, as the result of a collision between his patrol car and another vehicle. The incident occurred at a stop street at Ninth Street and Palmto Avenue. Sanford police Commander Dennis Whitmire said the accident was investigated by the Florida Highway Patrol. No charges were immediately filed, and damage to the police car was not considered serious.

Study indicates farmers are more environmentally aware

GAINESVILLE — A new study says Florida farmers and ranchers are becoming more environmentally responsible, both for aesthetic and economic reasons.

"We are asking farmers to be the custodians of most of the nation's land and water for the rest of us," said University of Florida home economics professor M.E. Swisher. "If we want that, we need to take a long-term look at public policy and farming."

A first-of-its-kind study by the university's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences shows more water conservation and chemical reduction than expected, Swisher said. It shows a big change in farming methods over the past decade.

The study showed 52 percent of tomato growers check soil moisture to determine plant need before irrigating. It also says 80 percent of citrus groves are irrigated with water-conserving micro-sprinkler or drip irrigation systems.

The survey by Swisher and several colleagues was designed to reveal how farmers' approach to raising crops and cattle has changed since 1985. It shows a distinct environmental shift among farmers, although researchers say it's often for economic reasons.

For example, integrated pest management helps farmers decide how much of a pesticide to use or whether to use one at all. The practice often saves farmers money, but also spares the environment the side effects of pesticides.

"We had a concern, for example, about tropical soda apple, which is causing major problems in South Florida pastures," Swisher said. "The survey shows that they (farmers) are doing the right thing — spot-treating infested areas — which achieves control of the weed without large-scale herbicide application."

Pastureland is the single biggest land use in the Florida. For the state's environment to remain healthy, experts say it's important for producers to make wise use of natural resources.

The survey shows a mere 1 percent of North Florida pastures and 7 percent of South Florida pastures are treated with pesticides.

"One of the biggest concerns of farmers is environmental regulation," Swisher said. "But if we do it right in the first place, then hopefully there won't have to be more regulation."

Agriculture is worth $18 billion a year to Florida's economy, Swisher said.

Emergency rooms underwent 65 probes last year

MIAMI — Florida's emergency rooms are under increasing federal scrutiny for violations ranging from turning away anyone who can't pay for treatment to sending patients to other hospitals.

In 1994, Florida hospitals underwent 65 federal investigations, more than tripling the previous year's average. The Miami Herald reported Thursday.

At least four patients died recently after being initially turned away or neglected in the emergency room. In each case, the hospital was cited for acting improperly.

In one case, a Fort Walton Beach man suffered massive internal injuries Aug. 3, 1994, when a jet skier hit him. He was rushed to Destin Hospital, where the emergency medical crew was physically blocked by emergency room staff from entering the hospital. From his stretcher, the 59-year-old man pleaded for help. He died, three days later, after being transferred to a Pensacola hospital.

The U.S. Health Care Financing Administration and the state Agency for Health Care Administration brought charges and the hospital was shut down.

Florida hospitals fall under state and federal laws, enacted nine years ago, to prevent so-called patient dumping. In recent years, the laws have been expanded to require hospitals to: — Post signs in English and Spanish informing patients of their right to be screened and stabilized regardless of their ability to pay.

— Call ahead to get approval before a patient is transferred to another hospital.

— Stabilize patients before releasing them.

Before the laws were enacted, private hospitals could decide whether or not to accept a patient, according to Carlos Milanes, executive vice president at Hialeah's Palm Springs General Hospital.

"The public hospitals felt dumped on. They felt they were getting the lion's share of indigent patients," he said.

The Florida Hospital Association, in a recent report, documented $170,800 in state fines levied against 28 hospitals between 1989-94 for violating those laws. The average fine was $6,100.

The Herald interviewed 30 hospital officials who agreed with the reason behind laws protecting patients in the emergency room. But they question the manner in which they are enforced.

"It's perfection or violation," said Linda Magno, of the American Hospital Association. "I think any federal employee who got evaluated in the same way and had an error entered into their personnel file would make strenuous objections."

Health executives and health care experts will consider solutions to the increasing number of emergency room problems Friday during a conference in Orlando.

Many officials say the rules seem to be stacked against hospitals. Investigators scrutinize hospital records, they say, but don't tell hospital officials which patient they are investigating.

"If it turns out to be a wild goose chase, there's no repercussions," said Kenneth Dykes, administrator at Emerald Coast Hospital in Apalachicola.

Net ban lawsuit filed

TV stations sued over running ads

JACKSONVILLE — Commercial fishermen are suing 16 television stations that broadcast ads last fall urging voters to approve the state's net ban.

The five lawsuits filed Wednesday claim the stations knew the advertisements, produced by Save Our Sealife and aired in five Florida cities, were false.

"People were deceived, deceived," said Jamie Thomas, a Fernandina Beach fisherman who is a plaintiff in a suit filed in Jacksonville. "They did not know what they were voting on."

The ads purported to show dead fish and other marine life trapped in nets that were used to catch other fish. But the video was taken aboard a University of Georgia research vessel that was testing new methods of catching shrimp without harming sea turtles, the lawsuits allege.

Florida voters overwhelmingly approved the amendment to ban fishing with gill nets and other types of nets last November.

Lawsuits were filed Wednesday against stations in Jacksonville, Orlando, Tampa, Fort Myers and Miami by Fernandina Beach attorney Arthur Jacobs. Jacobs declined comment Thursday, saying, "I try my cases in court."

Jerry Sansom, executive director of Melbourne-based Organized Fishermen of Florida, said the stations had the responsibility not to run the ads once they knew the scenes in them were misrepresented.

"These stations, by knowingly broadcasting those false and defamatory advertisements by electronic media, have injured the business and reputations of thousands of Florida commercial net fishermen and destroyed a traditional means of sustenance dating back to the earliest inhabitants of Florida," he said.

All 16 stations were contacted by the AP for comment Wednesday. Some station officials said they had not seen the lawsuit, others had and had forwarded them to station attorneys. None had direct comment on the contents.

Ted Forsgren, executive director of the Florida Conservation Association, which backed the net-banning constitutional amendment, said the allegations do not concern him.

"This is the kind of stuff they were doing in the campaign," he said.

The lawsuit acknowledges there are several legal questions about whether the stations were liable for the advertisements but says the stations were notified of the disparities and continued to air the ads before the November election.

Alzheimer's gene mutation isolated

By PAUL REICER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Researchers sorting through the genes of a family of German-Russian immigrants have identified another mutated gene that causes an inherited form of Alzheimer's disease before age 65.

In a study published today, scientists at Massachusetts General Hospital and the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Seattle said the flawed gene, in chromosome 1, closely resembles another Alzheimer's gene and this similarity could accelerate the search for new treatment of the brain-destroying disease.

The gene was found to be inherited in a small group of families that descended from Germans who migrated to the Volga River in Russia in the 18th century and then to the United States in this century. Alzheimer's occurs in this small group before the age of 65 in generation after generation.

Rudolph T. Tanzi of Massachusetts General, a principal collaborator in the research, said the new Alzheimer's gene makes a protein resembling the protein produced by an Alzheimer's gene his team found earlier on chromosome 14.

This similarity, said Tanzi, puts researchers on a fast track for understanding what causes formation in the brain of amyloid-beta, a glue-like substance that is toxic to brain cells and is a primary feature of Alzheimer's.

Once the function of these proteins is found, he said, researchers can develop a drug to block the disease.

"This is an incredibly important discovery," said Marcelle Morrison-Bogorad, a professor of neurology at the University of Texas, Southwestern Medical School in Dallas. "This means that genetics has pretty much solved the mystery of early-onset AD (Alzheimer's disease) and it clears a path for scientific research that wasn't there before." Tanzi and his team in 1987 found the first Alzheimer's gene on chromosome 21. They isolated the chromosome 14 gene in June.

People who inherit one of these three rare mutations develop Alzheimer's before the age of 65 and sometimes as young as 40.

Alzheimer's is a progressive disorder that slowly disables the brain. It first erodes memory and eventually wipes out all brain function, causing death.

About 4 million Americans have Alzheimer's, but more than 90 percent develop the disease after age 65.

Researchers found the mutations by analyzing the genetic makeup of family groups in which early-age Alzheimer's occurred in generation after generation.

The chromosome 1 gene was tracked down after scientists led by Gerard D. Schellenberg of the Seattle Veteran's Affairs Medical Center recognized that the Volga German families had an inherited form of Alzheimer's and that the gene was somewhere on chromosome 1.

About the same time, Tanzi and his group found evidence of an unidentified gene that was similar to the Alzheimer's gene they had found earlier on chromosome 14.

Tanzi and Schellenberg pooled their early findings. Within days of each other, the two teams isolated the new mutation.

About 70 percent of early-onset Alzheimer's patients are in families with the chromosome 14 defect, Tanzi said. The chromosome 1 defect accounts for about 25 percent of such cases, and the chromosome 21 flaw for about 5 percent.

Post Office to test new bulk mail

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A new local bulk-mail service will be available to small businesses in three cities, under a year-long test by the Postal Service that will begin next month.

For a low mailing rate, small businesses will be able to send as few as 200 advertising circulars in a neighborhood, post office spokesman Frank Brennan said.

Currently larger volumes are needed to get the low third-class rates and small companies often cannot afford the cost of mass mailing, he explained.

Under the Neighborhood Mail system, companies will be allowed to bring advertising circulars to a local post office for delivery at every stop on a letter carrier's route. The cost is expected to average 11.7 cents per item, he said.

The Postal Service saves the cost of sorting the mail and doesn't have to transport it except to take it to homes.

Brennan said the test will start Sept. 11 in Rochester, N.Y., New Orleans, La., and Sacramento, Calif.

As part of the test, Brennan said, the Postal Service will provide small neighborhood businesses with a brochure giving hints on preparing advertising mail and could provide census-type data about various neighborhoods for a fee ranging from $30 to $50.

Simplified addresses would be used on the Neighborhood Mail, omitting the names of people and simply using addresses, which can be obtained from the Postal Service.

Why are best cities best?

Money magazine has released its annual listing of the nation's cities considered as the best places in which to live. The list may have received more publicity than in the past this year because five Florida cities were listed among the top ten.

For the cities named near the top, the list will be an excellent promotional or marketing tool, and as such, will probably be well promoted.

Gainesville was number one on the list of 300 cities. It, as well as the other four, Jacksonville, Ocala, Fort Lauderdale and Naples, each moved up considerably since last year's list.

The list was compiled using only cities with larger populations, so Sanford, Lake Mary, Altamonte Springs or others in Seminole County were not included.

It was based on a compilation of considerations including economy, health, crime, housing, education, weather, transit, leisure, and the arts.

It's comforting for people living in the top listed cities to know that their community has been recognized. We believe however, that this listing is not doing justice to other cities. It may not reflect the opinions of what some people believe constitutes a top-rated community.

Would the surfing crowd have listed Gainesville as number one or Rochester, Minn. as number two? Would retirees recommend Jacksonville, (no. 3) over Venice or St. Petersburg?

Rather than overall listings, we would prefer to see individual, one-subject only studies made. What is the safest city, the healthiest city, the one with the best educational offerings?

In this way, people may have a better idea of what needs to be improved in the various communities.

As an example of this present list, Brevard County as a whole, is listed as 53rd in the nation. It was listed 133rd last year. Detroit, Michigan however, is now 56th, moving up from 259th.

Does this mean Brevard County and Detroit now have less crime, more healthy living conditions, better economy, improved education? What improved? What still needs to be dealt with in order to make these areas better?

The Money magazine list is nice. It's a bragging point for those who came out at the top. But it doesn't really tell us much. It doesn't say what we should be told.

Let's watch the various polls, but let's look closely at what they really reveal about a community, if anything.

Is Gingrich Lite Clinton's brew?

It's been said that Newt Gingrich and Bill Clinton are really identical twins. That's too strong. But fraternal twins? There is some evidence for that in Gingrich's famous and infamous No. 1 best seller "To Renew America."

Gingrich starts out with American civilization, which is the proper place to begin. He sees that America is great, different and in trouble.

"America is a series of romantic folk tales that just happen to be true," he writes. "We are a unique civilization. We stand on the shoulders of Western European civilization, but we are far more futuristic, more populist and more inclusive. American civilization is not merely a subset of Western Europe's. We have drawn people and cultures from across the planet and integrated them into an extraordinary shared opportunity to pursue happiness."

No argument there. America is off the charts, which is why scholars write about "American exceptionalism."

And what's the trouble? "[American] civilization is based on a spiritual and moral dimension," says Gingrich. "It emphasizes personal responsibility as much as individual rights. Since 1965, however, there has been a calculated effort by cultural elites to discredit

this civilization and replace it with a culture of irresponsibility that is incompatible with American freedoms as we have known them."

Not much argument on substance there, either. Gingrich gets in trouble about motivation. I don't think cultural elitists actually calculated a way to take America toward a culture of irresponsibility. They are neither that smart nor that malign. Anyway, it's bad politics to say it. Better call them wrong than evil.

Gingrich has remedies for our ailments. We have to replace the welfare state with an opportunity state, decentralize the government, balance the budget, get more competitive in the world marketplace, and accelerate our entry into the information age. Mostly, he believes, this can happen by getting government off our backs and letting free market individualism play a greater role. Breathlessly told, "To Renew America" offers the basic creed of what was once an oxymoron: conservative optimism.

These are not brand new thoughts. As a matter of fact, Clinton campaigned on most of Gingrich's grand themes in 1992. In milder versions, Clinton stressed opportunity, reciprocity and responsibility. He wanted to end welfare as we know it. He wanted to decentralize and to get more competitive. He favored free markets. He wanted to reduce the deficit and ultimately balance the budget. His vice president was a technocrat. It was all part of Clinton's campaign to show America he was a New Democrat.

But for two years, with a Democratic Congress, Clinton did not govern that way. He and his party were re-identified with liberal big government, and were repudiated at the polls. Now, in trouble, Clinton has been trying to turn back toward those New Democrat views. Alas, today those themes have a diluted taste — call it Gingrich Lite.

JOSEPH SPEAR

Flash: Sen. Byrd has good idea

Robert C. Byrd, one of the most portentous and self-infatuated gasbags in the Senate, has come up with an idea that could be of great benefit to the entire nation. This is highly unusual, as he customarily concerns himself with the seizure of vast quantities of taxpayer monies, which he then reinvests in projects that benefit his West Virginia constituents.

Byrd thinks journalists who cover the Senate should be required to file financial disclosure statements, detailing their sources of income. He is particularly interested in the "honoraria" they receive for speaking before groups whose activities they might cover. He recently introduced a "sense of the Senate" resolution to this effect. It passed 69 to 39, with nary a word being uttered in defense of the Fourth Estate.

I generally agree with this sentiment, and I'll detail the reasons in a moment. But first, there are some things that need to be said in the interest of truth and fair play. It is a fact that the House in 1989 and the Senate in 1991 curtailed the practice of accepting fees for speeches — which, when you think about it, was sort of like paying sharks to swim in the first place. But both Houses liked their pay 35 percent before they did it, and arranged for an annual cost-of-living adjustment.

And of course, Bobby Byrd didn't mention a little conflict of interest he has, to wit, he hates the media. Last year, an ABC "PrimeTime Live" crew confronted him outside his Virginia home, and he took his revenge on the Senate floor, denouncing his tormentors as "vultures," "buzzards," and "predators."

And of course, there's the little matter of the First Amendment, which has been interpreted to mean the press is not accountable to the U.S. Senate and that if the U.S. Senate doesn't like what the press does, the U.S. Senate can just stick it in their car. Indeed, if the media had any moxie at all, they would quit covering the posturing and prancing in that baronial body for a month or two and see how the polls like that.

But all this is beside the main point, which is that Byrd has come up with a good idea. The holler-than-thou motormouths in the media ought to tell us who is tickling their palms and let us decide whether it diminishes their credibility.

Hundreds of Washington journalists, print and broadcast, speak for money. One of the hottest gabbers on the lecture circuit for the past few years has been ABC's Cokie Roberts. Why this dispenser of clichés and nuggets of extremely mediocre conventional wisdom is regarded as a sage worthy of $35,000 fees, I'll never be able to understand. According to Chicago Tribune Washington bureau chief James Warren, who maintains a "Cokie Watch" in his weekly column, the ABC correspondent and her husband, U.S. News & World Report senior writer Steve Roberts, once pulled down $45,000 to host "forums" for Chicago bankers.

Cokie is only the most egregious example. Among her ABC colleagues, Sam Donaldson gets as much as $30,000 for a speech, and David Brinkley pulls down $18,000. A year ago, the network was getting so much grief about its well-paid correspondents getting big bucks for talking that it banned paid speeches to trade associations and for-profit corporations. But there is no rule forbidding them from taking large sums from organizations which are then reimbursed by lobbyists and businesspersons.

But all this is beside the main point, which is that Byrd has come up with a good idea.

DONNA BRITT

Some lies, and Hollywood lies

WASHINGTON — In a scene in the new movie "Dangerous Minds," a naive, new teacher played by Michelle Pfeiffer gains some measure of control over her unruly students by admonishing them that "there are no victims in this classroom."

LouAnne Johnson, the U.S. Marine-turned-teacher whose experiences inspired the book "My Posse Don't Do Homework," on which "Minds" is based, says that happened. But in her new role as the subject of a movie, the teacher learned a lesson.

There are lies, and there are Hollywood lies. Hollywood lies often seem bigger, perhaps because they're told on huge, soul-imprinting screens with music and visual effects to match. For years, novels and history books painted certain pretenses: Strong men never cry; threatened women require rescuing by men; blacks and other minorities are either impossibly noble, insupportably evil or plain incompetent.

Hollywood gave such lies flesh, color and substance. Watching its more recent fabrications, I still wonder: What's wrong with the truth? And why must Hollywood turn vivid, real-life stories such as Johnson's into fiction?

"Dangerous Minds" offers several telling untruths. In the movie, students in "The Academy" — the tough, California school-within-a-school whose students' economic and academic problems set them frighteningly apart from other kids — are overwhelmingly Latino and black. In truth, a third of the Academy's students were white.

Pfeiffer's early reactions to threatening kids are laughably meek for an ex-Marine. In one scene, a Latino hunk stands before the class, stares smokily at the cowed Pfeiffer and says, "I'll eat you." Laughs Johnson. "If a kid had said that to me, he'd be picking himself up off the floor." Among her mottoes: "I'm too mean to quit and too young to retire, so sit down."

In "Minds," hostile students call Johnson "white bread" and otherwise put her down for being white; a black grandmother curses Johnson and suggests that she's pulled her grandsons out of school because no idealistic white woman can teach blacks. In truth, negative reactions to Johnson's color were extremely rare; nobody called her names. The grandmother made the boys quit school to help run the family business. Johnson later received a rose from one of the boys and a card that read: "I am still reading poetry, and I will always think of you as my teacher."

The truth can be as dramatic as the lie — if folks bother to learn it.

Filmmakers, Johnson suspects, "were in love with the idea of Michelle being white and the kids not. ... They have this notion that school is only a problem for poor minority kids. ... But any group of kids is going to resist any teacher who comes into a class after they've driven a teacher out."

The cursing grandmother scene, says Johnson, is "really insulting. Most of these black grandmothers are churchgoing women. ... And it taps into a misconception ... that black parents are going to be antagonistic toward white people, which wasn't my experience."

For all that, Johnson likes the movie "a lot." Ultimately, she said, it captured "the essence of what I was trying to teach kids — that if nothing else, they have a choice."

Some of the movie's fictions seem due to ignorance. Filmmakers may have had Pfeiffer portray Johnson as passive because they equated delicate looks with meekness — through the real-life teacher is pretty and feminine looking herself.

Johnson suspects the rap music she uses in lessons was changed to Bob Dylan (!) songs, because the filmmakers "don't know anything about rap — they went to private schools. Most people in the movie industry, their perception of non-whites is what they get from movies. They think they're breaking the stereotype, but are creating another."

So why don't they just talk to the folks they're making movies about?

"It's the same way men will try to tell you what women think — they don't know, don't understand and don't believe what you tell them. If an African American said the (grandmother) scene wasn't realistic, they wouldn't believe him."

Johnson, 42, now lives in Las Cruces, N.M., where she's lecturing and working on a novel. She's taking a year off from teaching because working with kids "wears you out."

"Once a boy threw a dictionary at my head. The easy thing to do is to kick him out. But he was trying to get out of that room before I discovered he couldn't read. ... You can't deal with such things, year after year, without a break."

Moving to New Mexico taught her that students' problems are universal. "Kids ... have the same fears. The problems of kids in school are not economic or racial. It's just adolescents dealing with the world we've given them."

Maybe Hollywood will grow up enough to tell that truth.

Hollywood lies often seem bigger, perhaps because they're told on huge, soul-imprinting screens.

Correction

In the Sanford Herald Editorial on Aug. 16, a prize in an essay contest was incorrectly identified. Jennifer Zelenak did win a trip to Valley Forge in a district Optimist Club contest which qualified her to win a $5,000 scholarship. However, she did not win that competition. The Herald regrets the error.

Trash

Tons of solid waste is taken to the transfer station near Longwood while 22,500 tons go directly to the landfill. With the addition of 140,000 tons of recyclables, 417,338 aggregate tons are processed. An estimated 9.5 million gallons of leachate is collected and disposed.

The landfill is projected to reach capacity in about 36 to 40 years servicing Seminole County residents. The cities of Winter Park and Maitland are also in the county solid waste service area. The county has one of the lowest landfill dumping fees at $36 a ton. The state average is $48 a ton.

Although the county staff was informally approached by Brevard County officials about buying space in the Seminole County landfill for out-of-county trash, further study is necessary. Rabun said Brevard County is seeking requests for proposals on their solid waste disposal options and is not prepared to move forward. The importation of out-of-county solid waste would shorten the life expectancy of the landfill but might be considered if it provided a clear benefit to Seminole County customers.

Where there's smoke...

When Elizabeth Southdale and her two children, ages 4 and 2, went to Chuck E. Cheese to celebrate the youngest's birthday, they came back to find their Radio Street house smoldering after a fire there was extinguished by the Sanford and Seminole County fire departments. According to county fire investigator Bob Christianson, the fire began in a bedroom where the four-year-old had unknowingly ignited something before the family left. Damage to the house, estimated at about $30,000, included a great deal of smoke and heat damage. No injuries resulted from the fire.

Bike

Riding against the traffic flow makes navigation difficult and increases the risk of injury.

There are other important safety checks one should perform before taking a bicycle on the road, Morales suggested.

"You've got to make sure that everything is running as it should," he said. "Make sure that all the nuts and bolts are tight and that the brakes are in good working order."

Properly inflated tires are essential to bike safety, Morales added. Poorly inflated tires can cause a wobble in the ride. And when a cyclist is travelling in heavy traffic, inches count. Even a little wobble could propel a biker into the path of an oncoming car.

Many bicycle repair shops offer safety inspections for a price.

Lake Mary Cycles will do a basic inspection for $10. Bicycle Castle offers a basic inspection for $20 and a more thorough check for $30.

Though both fatalities this week occurred during the day, additional safety precautions need to be taken when riding at night.

One should always wear light colored clothing and reflectors on both the bicycle and the rider.

Autos and bicycles can co-exist on the roads, experts said.

"You need to be careful out there," said Morales.

Governor, Whitewater partners charged

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Gov. Jim Guy Tucker and two of President Clinton's Whitewater partners have been charged with lying about the real purposes of $3 million in federally backed loans and using some of the money for themselves.

The same special grand jury indicted Tucker in June on charges he lied about a loan and tried to avoid taxes. After Thursday's indictment, the governor denied the latest charges.

"They are false. I have violated no law," a grim-faced Tucker said at a news conference, his voice trembling. "I have engaged in no conspiracy."

Speaking from two pages of scribbled notes, the first-term Democrat said he had no intention of resigning. "I expect to do my job fully, effectively and honorably as I have been elected to do it."

James B. McDougal and his ex-wife, Susan H. McDougal, Clinton's partners in the failed Whitewater land development deal, were charged with concocting a series of fraudulent loans from the thrift they owned, Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan. Madison collapsed in 1989, costing taxpayers more than $60 million.

Fickle Felix drifts into Atlantic

NAGS HEAD, N.C. — After faking thousands into evacuating the Outer Banks, fickle Hurricane Felix drifted into the Atlantic as residents trickled back home and wondered whether they would have to do it all over again.

"We took 'em down, we can put 'em back up," Bill Shaver said philosophically as he removed boards from the windows of his Pigman's Bar-b-que restaurant. "It's been a strange one."

It could get stranger if the storm turns back toward the coast. The National Hurricane Center warned that the storm that dawdled offshore for days "may just be executing a clockwise loop."

At 5 a.m., Felix was about 300 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras and its winds had slowed to 75 mph, just 1 mph over hurricane strength. Forecasters expected little movement through tonight.

People began returning by road and ferries Thursday after hurricane warnings were dropped for North Carolina and Virginia and authorities lifted an evacuation order for the thin crescent of Outer Banks islands.

The storm blew by during one of the peak weeks of the tourist season, costing area businesses an estimated $4 million a day in lost revenue.

Abortion opponents celebrating

WASHINGTON — Abortion opponents are celebrating a round of restrictions won in the House, tantalized by the prospect of more to come.

Tucked away in massive, must-pass spending bills, the Republican majority systematically pushed through the House several restrictions on abortion. The House voted to:

- Allow states to deny Medicaid coverage of abortions for poor women, even in cases of rape and incest.
- End foreign-aid payments to overseas family planning programs that provide abortion counseling or referrals.
- Allow residency programs to deny abortion training to medical students.
- Exclude abortion coverage from federal workers' health insurance plans, except in cases where the mother's life is endangered.
- Ban the use of federal funds to pay for abortions for women in federal prisons.

The House also voted to end funding for the office of surgeon general. President Clinton's nominee for the post, Dr. Henry Foster, was rejected by the Senate after it was reported he had performed abortions.

Radiation experiments

WASHINGTON — Without flatly condoning the practice, the Energy Department says some of the government's Cold War-era radiation experiments on people led to important, even heroic, advances in medical science.

The federal government has been pulling together records — some long held secret, others simply forgotten or obscure — to quantify the experimentation that began in the early 1940s and continued into the 1970s.

The Energy Department announced Thursday that it has documented 435 such experiments involving an estimated 16,000 men, women and children. Other government agencies that did experiments haven't released tallies.

Though questions about the ethics of the experimentation persist, Energy Department officials said their inquiry has shown that most of the human research was justifiable and relatively little was classified secret.

"Much of it was to go after breakthroughs on the medical front," Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary told a news conference. But, she added, "There is a dark side," too.

The question remains whether people used in the experiments gave their consent, and whether, in cases of volunteers, they knew the health risks.

Faulkner pronounced fit to return to duty

CHARLESTON, S.C. — After spending most of her first week in the infirmary, The Citadel's first female cadet has been cleared to resume military training.

Shannon Faulkner was to report to her company this morning. She was admitted to the infirmary Monday with an apparent heat-related illness after marching in 100-degree heat.

Ms. Faulkner, who waged a 2½-year court battle to join the cadet corps at the 152-year-old publicly funded college, was taken to Roper Hospital on Thursday for undisclosed tests.

She was later returned to the infirmary, and school doctors decided she could return to duty. She will resume training without restrictions, said college spokesman Terry Leedom.

Ed Faulkner said his 20-year-old daughter had been vomiting and was treated for dehydration.

"She couldn't keep anything down until last evening and I am told she was able to keep some toast down last night," said Citadel spokeswoman Judith Fluck.

Ms. Faulkner missed a large part of "hell week," the first week of training for freshmen, and will have to catch up on her study of the honor manual and cadet regulations.

WORLD BRIEFS

Serb leader says he share beliefs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The Serb leader widely blamed for instigating the war in former Yugoslavia said he shares the U.S. belief that peace should be pursued with "greater urgency." Hours later today, Croats claimed a new victory over Serbs.

Serbian leader Slobodan Milosevic met for five hours Thursday with U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke. More talks were scheduled today but before they were underway, Croatian radio reported an important victory for Croats.

Croatian forces captured the western Bosnian town of Drvar, the radio said, claiming heavy Serb casualties. There was no independent confirmation of the report, which would mean Croats are within striking distance of Bosanski Petrovac, the last Serb-held town in western Bosnia.

Tabloid: Lisa Marie to divorce Michael

LONDON — Lisa Marie Presley plans to divorce Michael Jackson after just 15 months of marriage for taking two teen-age boys on a trip to Paris, the Daily Mirror reported today.

Jackson denied the claims as "garbage." In a front-page story, the tabloid quoted an unnamed Presley aide as saying, "Lisa Marie thought she loved the guy, but now she thinks she can never get close to him."

"She was really angry when he went abroad with the small boys," the aide was quoted as telling Britain's second-largest newspaper.

Answering fans' questions during the Internet Thursday night, Jackson denied the report that his wife has contacted lawyers to get a "quicker divorce" next month in the Dominican Republic, where the couple wed in May 1994.

"Never believe the tabloid garbage," he said. "Don't waste your time or money."

In today's story, the Mirror said Jackson took two brothers, ages 11 and 14, to Disneyland Paris and then Switzerland. Jackson "is an old friend," the paper quoted their father as saying.

The newspaper published a photograph of Jackson, his face covered with a surgical-type mask, apparently walking through an airport with two boys wearing track suits and baseball caps, their heads bowed.

In 1993, a 13-year-old boy claimed Jackson molested him during a five-month relationship. The pop star denied the allegations and has not been charged. The boy and Jackson settled a lawsuit last year for a reported $15 million.

Jackson is suing the Mirror for reports it published in 1992 that his features had become "hideously distorted" by plastic surgery. In January, he announced he was suing two other British tabloids, The Sun and Today, over reports there is a videotape showing him having sex with a boy.

Two cases of rare AIDS virus caught by blood donations

By A. J. HORTYLER
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — A test for a rare type of AIDS virus found two infected blood donors last year, keeping the nation's blood supply free of the virus.

Just 62 of 476,899 people with AIDS in the United States are infected with HIV-2, which strikes mostly in West Africa and is a cousin of the primary AIDS virus, HIV-1, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Most of those 62 people had some connection to West Africa.

The first of the two cases of blood donors found to have HIV-2 was detected in June 1994, when a woman born in the United States who had never traveled outside the country tried to donate, the CDC said Thursday. She didn't report any high-risk behavior.

The second case, a Frenchman who had lived in West Africa before moving to the United States, was more typical of HIV-2 infections in this country. In both cases, the blood was discarded and the donors were told not to donate blood, tissue or organs.

"It shows how international travel makes the world a very small place ... and HIV-2 can show up in our back yard," said Dr. Jeffrey Laurence of Cornell University and the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

Three-quarters of HIV-2 infections here occur in people born in West Africa, people who had traveled there or people who had sex with someone linked to the region, the CDC said.

No one in the United States has been infected with HIV-2 through a blood transfusion, and the nation's blood supply remains safe, said Dr. John Ward, chief of the CDC's AIDS surveillance branch.

Although more cases of HIV-2 infection are likely, there's no evidence that it is becoming an increasing problem in the United States, Ward said.

The CDC did not have the numbers of HIV-2 cases detected each year in the United States.

Blood banks began screening for HIV-1 in 1985 when a test for signs of the virus became available. But the virus already had spread unchecked through the nation's blood supply and about 6,400 Americans, including tennis player Arthur Ashe, got AIDS from transfusions or other blood products.

The blood banks and FDA were criticized for not finding better ways to screen donors earlier. In 1992, the blood banks willingly began testing for HIV-2 at an estimated yearly additional cost of $20 million, or $1.50 per pint of blood.

The CDC said about 74 million donations of blood and blood products have been made since June 1992, when the FDA ordered blood banks to begin testing for HIV-2. AIDS develops more slowly in people infected by HIV-2.

Gordon widens lead

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH — Jeff Gordon avoided the shuffling that took place behind him in the NASCAR Winston Cup point standings to maintain his lead after the Bud at the Glen in Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Several drivers lost ground — most notably seven-time series champion Dale Earnhardt — but Gordon held firm at the top with a third-place finish in Sunday's event.

He now holds a 152-point lead over Sterling Marlin (3,030-2,878) with 11 races left on the 31-event schedule.

Race winner Mark Martin made the biggest strides. Shooting for his first championship, he moved past Earnhardt into third place, 159 points out of first and just seven behind Marlin, who finished 21st at Watkins Glen. Earnhardt was 23rd and dropped to fourth in the season standings with 2,833 points, 67 ahead of fifth-place Ted Musgrave.

Terry Labonte (2,484) moved up three spots to sixth, seven points in front of Rusty Wallace and 20 ahead of Michael Waltrip. Morgan Shepherd (2,432) and Bill Elliott (2,417) are ninth and 10th, respectively.

The NASCAR Winston Cup Series will be at the Michigan International Speedway this weekend for the GM Goodwrench Services 400.

Are medications causing nosebleed?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 88-year-old mother was hospitalized for five days in March because of complications associated with congestive heart failure. Since then, she's been given a staggering array of medications and for the past month, has had daily nosebleeds. An ENT specialist indicated cautery wasn't indicated. Is it the medication or are her doctors overlooking something?

DEAR READER: My answer depends on what medicines your mother is taking. If she were prescribed an anti-coagulant (even aspirin) to prevent further heart damage, the drug could certainly cause nosebleeds. In addition, if she has hypertension, she may be bleeding from excessive blood pressure.

The brushing prohibition, you may be helped by using a gentle mouthwash (such as a teaspoonful of salt in a glass of warm water).

A whitish coating on the tongue is generally a reaction to irritation, although such a coating may normally be present in the morning, especially in mouth-breathers, whose saliva dries out during the night.

I urge you to address the issue of her multiple medications with her doctor. He may have unknowingly given her a combination that has affected her badly. For example, some cardiac drugs interact with one another to cause side effects. A prime example of this is Lasix (and other diuretics) that slow kidney function, causing other medicines to accumulate inappropriately in the body, leading to toxicity. Her doctor should be able to sort this out and, I hope, reduce the number of prescriptions your mother is taking.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm writing to you about a problem I have not seen covered in your column. My tongue gets a coating on it every day. I brush it vigorously even to the extent that my tongue bleeds a little. But this condition comes right back the next day. My dentist sees no cancer, but I get no answer as to why the coating appears. Can you help me?

DEAR READER: Don't brush your tongue. You may be unnecessarily irritating this sensitive organ. If your dentist has checked for a tongue infection (glossitis) and agrees with

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Sir William Oaker, the Canadian physician, said, "When schemes are laid in advance, it is surprising how often the circumstances fit in with them."

That is usually true in bridge, but occasionally awkward deals force you to devise an unusual scheme on the spur of the moment.

North had enough points to open two no-trump, but with two unguarded suits he decided that if his partner couldn't respond to one diamond, they probably didn't have a good game.

West led his fourth-highest spade, giving South an immediate problem.

It is normal in this situation to put in dummy's nine, which generates two spade tricks whenever West has led from a suit headed by the king-10 or queen-10. Going up with dummy's jack only works when West has led from the king-queen of spades.

However, here there are other circumstances to consider. Suppose the spade nine does drive the king (queen) out of the East hand. When South wins with the ace and leads a spade back toward the jack, it won't be difficult for West to go in with his spade winner and switch to hearts. South will be very lucky not to lose five quick tricks.

If only South could keep the spade ace in his hand, he would have no trouble getting home. So, South took the unusual step of calling for dummy's spade jack. When that held, he unblocked dummy's three club honors, played a spade to his ace, cashed the club jack, pointed to dummy's four diamond winners and conceded the last three tricks.

Don't play by rote; always consider the deal as a whole.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 18, 1995

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could be luckier than usual today dealing with new ideas. Give them top priority and temporarily shelve the ones with less potential. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10183.

VIRO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Starting today, raise your sights a bit higher concerning your material goals. You are now in a very good cycle for adding to your resources and holdings.

past experience can now be utilized in a profitable, constructive manner. Use your wisdom to improve your lot in life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have a dedicated, diligent supporter busy working on your behalf behind the scenes today. This person can do things for you that you can't do for yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will favorably impress persons who meet you for the first time today. They will have an inkling of your finer qualities and want to know you better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Career breaks previously denied you might be available today. Stay alert because more than one opportunity is likely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Substantial strides can be made today in furthering your personal interests. Think in grand terms instead of wasting time on issues of small consequence.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You are well-equipped today to manage the affairs and resources of others. When you look out for their welfare, they, in turn, will look out for yours.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have an important matter to discuss with an associate today, don't do it by phone or mail. The results will be better if you meet face-to-face.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You mustn't sell yourself short today when working for another. Your client will be willing to pay a fair price for valuable services rendered.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Persons with whom you're involved today will look to you for leadership. You mustn't let them down. When you see the weaker begin to falter, assume command.

The bride is the daughter of Vicki and Walter H. Meriwether Jr. of Sanford. The groom is the son of John R. and Irene Lommerse of Sanford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white delustered satin gown with Venetian lace trim. The fitted bodice featured a sculptured sweetheart neckline decorated with seed pearls and white sequins. The gown had long tapered sleeves embellished with Venetian lace and pearls. The full flowing skirt extended to a chapel-length train caught at the back with a multiple-tiered bow. The fingertip veil was held by a modified tiara with sunbursts of pearls and white sequins. She carried a large formal, cascading bouquet of all white dendrobium orchids, bouvardia, carnations, mini carnations and ivy.

Ashley Schanel Grimshaw of Sanford, lifelong friend of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a tea-length royal blue dress with lace upper bodice. The back of the dress was V-shaped with accompanying bow. She carried a bouquet of light blue delphinium, pink bouvardia, pink mini carnations, rosario alstroemeria, white dendrobium orchids and trailing ivy.

Bridesmaids were Jenni and Cindi Meriwether, the bride's sisters; Virginia, Frances and Annette Lommerse, the groom's sisters, and Audra Sanborn, cousin of the bride. Their dresses and flowers were identical to the honor attendant's.

Best man was Jim Okkerse, the groom's cousin. Groomsmen were Randy Weaver and Scott Sanborn, the bride's cousins; also, Greg Grimshaw, Jim Clark, Jim Quinn, and Jon Trout.

How to celebrate ordinary days

Did you know that there are no holidays in August? Most months have something special to celebrate, but August doesn't. What a special month to celebrate an ordinary day and make a special memory.

Special moments don't just happen, they have to be planned on purpose. We are living in a hectic world and oftentimes, as parents trying to do too many things, our pace is frantic. But we must, for our families, make an agreement to take and make time for simple things. We have no guarantees of tomorrows, but we do have this moment.

As parents, the home is the natural place for families to achieve a sense of togetherness. Whether we like it or not, we are molding lives... now. Take time to celebrate the uniqueness of your family. Start some tradition that says to your children "we are special."

Since August is the month of no holidays, make up one. Call it the "month of no holidays." Decorate your home. Get out some or all decorations — Halloween, Thanksgiving, spring, winter, whatever you want — and decorate the home. Perhaps you could plan a special meal that you eat every August, just like the traditional Thanksgiving dinner. It doesn't have to be elaborate. It could be as simple as reversing your meals for the day and having pizza for breakfast and cereal or toast for supper. Gifts could be wrapped up and exchanged. Instead of typical gifts, choose a "gift certificate," a written promise to do something special for that person such as helping with a chore, an hour's worth of playing the other's favorite game, or no complaining about bedtime for one week. Just make sure it is something you can deliver. Make it fun, make it inexpensive, and make it a memory. The happy memories of yesterday were once moments of today.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Making every minute count.

Do you ever feel that there aren't enough hours in the day? This is a common problem for many parents. The demands of balancing work and family make time management very important. Luckily there are some techniques to help parents use their time more effectively.

Our life centers around time. Each of us has the same amount — 24 hours per day — that is 1,440 minutes each day. It is a resource that cannot be saved. We invest it, we waste it, we use it wisely. What is wise time use for you might be waste of time for another person. You determine how effective you will be.

There are many ways to manage time effectively. Each technique is a tool to assist you in controlling time.

A "to do" list in its simplest form is a list of tasks to be done. This list can be prioritized with tasks numbered in accordance to their importance. There are many variations of this "to do" list, but the most important thing is to make one and then cross off tasks as they are finished. What a feeling of accomplishment.

Learning to say "No" is harder than it sounds. The guilt feelings that accompany a "no" are harder to deal with than just saying no. However, ask yourself these questions: "How much time will it take?" "Is it a priority?" "What happens if I say no?" "Who else can do this?" If these questions warrant a "no" answer, don't feel guilty. Using prime time. The time of day when your energy level is highest can help you accomplish more.

Delegating a task to someone else will help you with time management. Even if you take more time to teach someone else to do a task, in the long run, you will save time.

You may want to learn to relax your standards. The world won't end if the house isn't dusted every day or the dishes aren't put away. You may want to analyze your tasks and find a different way of doing things. Arrange work space efficiently and look to see what can be eliminated.

There is no magic formula that will help us with all of our time conflicts. It is important to have balance in our lives. There must be time for work, family and you. With careful planning there will be moments for each. The importance of time management can be summed up in these few words, "Failing to plan is planning to fail." By achieving what you set out to do there is a sense of accomplishment. You also reduce stress by attaining what is important and not wasting time on things that are not.

A ceramic wedding experience

Janet Uriane Lee and Dale Price Austin (center), both of Sanford, were married Aug. 12, 1995, at 2 p.m., at A Ceramic Experience, 2553 Park Drive, Sanford. Notary Karen Hart (left) performed the traditional ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Gertrude Lee of Deltona and the groom is the son of Benny and Louise Austin of Sanford. Laurie Best (right) is the owner of the shop.

Is it OK for men to lounge in underwear?

DEAR ABBY: Why do men think boxer shorts are appropriate attire for lounging? When my husband comes home, he takes his clothes off and hangs them up (after 18 years of marriage, I've trained him to hang them up) — then it's boxer shorts for the rest of the evening. If I'm lucky, he will also wear a T-shirt.

Once, 14 years ago, I mentioned how much this bothered me. He went upstairs to change and came down the stairs wearing only a necktie and a smile. (Nine months later, our third son was born.)

I'm writing now because all three of our sons are imitating their father. My female friends tell me I'm lucky; at least he isn't fat and paunchy. One of their husbands has 44-inch waist and wears bikini underwear!

Abby, if you can tell us why men think it's OK to sit around the house in their underwear, we women will be most grateful.

DEAR CURIOUS: Perhaps most men feel that their homes are their castles, and once they cross the moat and hoist the drawbridge, they have the right to be comfortable. However, "comfortable" is not synonymous with sloppy. Buy him some nice Bermuda shorts.

DEAR ABBY: This past weekend, my husband and I went to a swap meet. Just as I was walking away from a stack of shirts, a lady tapped me on the shoulder and said, "Excuse me. I just want you to know that your purse is open and the man behind you had his hand in it." It had swung my purse behind me so it wouldn't be in the way while I was looking at the shirts.

Apparently, this man had unzipped my purse; fortunately, I had turned away from him in time to avoid losing my wallet, credit cards and cash. Abby, my heart was racing for the next hour.

I will never do that stupid thing again. I just want to say thanks so much to the lady who warned me, Abby, please alert your readers.

RELIEVED IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR RELIEVED: Thanks for the warning. I recently saw a woman walking down Rodeo Drive with her purse strap around her neck and the purse resting on her bosom. I can only assume that she had been the victim of a purse snatcher, and was now carefully protecting her bag.

Dad turns to bottle after Mom's death

DEAR MARY: I'm worried about my dad. He's 72 years old and my mom died last year after a terrible struggle with cancer. When Mom was healthy, they used to play golf a couple times a week, enjoy their country club and have an active social life.

As Mom became less able to do these things, Dad stopped doing them too, of course. He started drinking more, probably from the anxiety of watching my mom go. Now that she's dead, he doesn't seem to want to do anything anymore but sit around the house in his shorts and undershirt, watch TV and drink beer.

I've tried to get him to get back into playing golf again and developing a new social life as a widower, but he won't hear of it. He says he's ready to die and I'm afraid that's exactly what he's going to do if he doesn't snap out of this. I don't know where to turn or how to help him.

WORRIED DAUGHTER

DEAR WORRIED: I'd be worried too. It's good you're looking out for him. Two things may be working together to cause him these problems and both will need to be explored. Many people, old and young, turn to alcohol to deaden the pain of grieving. It's especially painful to watch your spouse die and it's tempting to seek solace in a bottle. Since the aging process causes the liver's detoxification process to slow down, what was once a comfortable level of drinking can become dangerous to an older person. Alcohol can also become not just an anesthetic, but a trusted friend to people who find themselves alone for long, bleak stretches of time.

FAMILY COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

Your dad sounds as though he may be suffering from both depression and alcohol abuse. Both of these problems need medical or other professional attention immediately. I'm sure you will see that he gets the proper treatment so he can begin viewing this time in his life as a new beginning rather than the end.

Christian HELP assists families Labor Day barbeque to feed thousands CASSELBERRY — Governor Lawton Chiles has proclaimed Sept. 3 to 10, 1995 as "Help the Unemployed Week in Central Florida." The purpose of this series of events is to recognize the ongoing problem of unemployment and to help those caught in its web. Some 55,000 people are unemployed and many more underemployed. Many have unmet needs, inadequate food and/or clothing for themselves and their families. Others are close to losing everything and becoming homeless.

WTLN 95.3 FM and Christian HELP (hope, encouragement, love and prayer) invites the public to attend its second annual barbeque for the unemployed Labor Day. The event is free.

From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Barnett Park (next to the Central Florida Fairgrounds on West Colonial) will be alive with music, clowns, games and food.

A recent press release from Christian HELP said, "Less publicized, but much more important is the proclamation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to those who need it so badly. This is the key feature of the kick off barbeque on Labor Day. It is a great time to eat with and share your faith with some of the thousands of unemployed people and their families who will be there. The barbeque will also include Christian music, games and clowns for the kids, and information on many free services available to help the unemployed. It is also a time of witness to Central Florida when the media shows Christians coming out en masse to help the needy. Christmas and Thanksgiving have been taken over by the secular world. Lets convert Labor Day to a Christian holiday."

Dick Wilson founded Christian HELP in March of 1992 when, as he said, "God had called me out of retailing." He sold a successful retailing business in Altamonte. Wilson was then burdened with the needs of the unemployed.

Frank Hutsell, director of public relations for Christian HELP, said, "This is a ministry that focuses on people referred to us. We assist those people that try to help themselves. We work with people as long as they help themselves. We give them job leads, food, clothing and try to negotiate shelter homes when necessary. Our emphasis is helping people that want to help themselves."

Complimentary passes to Disney World will be awarded at the Labor Day barbeque. Special giveaways of an automobile, car repair services and bicycles will also go to deserving families.

In order to qualify for these prizes individuals are asked to write a letter of 50 words or less by Wed., Sept. 1 to Christian HELP, 196 Concord Dr., Casselberry, FL 32707, explaining their need. You must be unemployed to qualify.

The Sanford Police Department and the Seminole County Sheriff's Department donated the bicycles. Autotech International is offering the car repair.

Agencies will be present to assist unemployed individuals with job placement. Other free assistance during the Unemployed Week Event will be job fairs and employment seminars, immunization and health services, legal advice, job classes and more.

"HELP the Unemployed Week" is co-chaired by Thomas Werner, President of Florida Hospital and Dr. Joel Hunter, Senior Pastor at Northland Community Church.

According to the organization, this week is a costly project which needs additional financial support. An unemployed family can be sponsored for $25, an individual for $10 or becoming a Patron Sponsor at the cost of $100. Business sponsorships are also available. Bibles are also needed for new believers.

To provide additional funding for Christian HELP a resale shop has been set up at 350 N. Hwy. 17-92 in the Longwood Plaza.

For more information call about the event call 834-4022. For further details concerning the resale store call 260-8533.

Ask the preacher Bible questions

Question: Does God care about the problems in my life?
Answer: "Yes, he cares. I know he cares," are the words of a famous Christian hymn.

The Bible bears out His loving concern in Hebrews 2:17 to 18. "For this reason he had to be made like his brothers in every way, in order that he might become a merciful and faithful high priest in service to God, and that he might make atonement for the sins of the people. Because he (Christ) suffered when he was tempted, he is able to help those who are being tempted."

When life puts us to the test, Jesus knows and understands. Not only does he care, he is a wonderful counselor. If life is closing in around you, it is imperative that you find someone who has answers.

Isaiah 9:6 tells us that Jesus is the answer. "For to us a child is born, to us a son is given; and the government will be upon his shoulders, and his name will be called, Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

When life is collapsing in on you, turn to Jesus because he cares and he knows the way. James 1:5 states, "If any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask God who gives to all men generously and without reproaching, and it will be given him."

If life is overwhelming, why not look to Jesus. Come to him and let him show his care.

Minister Tony Black

No decision is in fact a decision

By SANDY STANSBURY
Special to the Herald

SANFORD — Many are walking the path that I used to be on. I believed that Jesus Christ was my Savior but was not taking the full responsibility that accompanies that belief. In addition to our Savior, He is our Lord and that means we are His servants.

We accept His grace willingly, almost expectantly, but we often fall short on service. Maybe that is because society has taught us the "Me-First" attitude or it could be that some areas of the Christian life are not considered to be a "service."

But a definition in the Christian life of service is defined by Webster's New World Dictionary "to give obedience and reverent honor to God" which would include being obedient to God's call when He places you in a local church family and would like you to make a commitment to the people of that church by becoming a member.

It could be that you need to come forward and accept Jesus in a confession of faith, in an act of obedience through baptism or a re-dedication of your commitment to the service of our Lord.

Someone once told me that to not make a decision is making a decision and I believe that for every time that I do not make a decision for the Lord along my Christian walk, it displeases God and the effect of that displeasure not only hinders my spiritual walk but it pleases Satan. Please allow the decision to be a personal choice not a result of non-choice.

A few years ago a former preacher I know made the statement, "Under the Old Testament when a person sinned the person broke the law; but under the New Testament when a person sins they break God's heart."

I don't want to break the heart of someone I love. Do you?

Methodists share in work of Grace & Grits

SANFORD — Members of the First United Methodist Church choose August as their month to contribute to the work of Grace & Grits. A free meal is provided every Wednesday at Holy Cross Episcopal Church. Clinton golfs in Wyoming while Mrs. Clinton works on a book

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Wyo. — Under the crags of the Tetons, the first lady worked on writing a book and the president played yet another 18 holes of golf and dipped into a collection of vacation books, ranging from popular novels to the mysteries of the economy.

Bill and Hillary Clinton ended their second day of vacation Thursday at a birthday party for the president, two days early, at the forested property of actor Harrison Ford in Jackson Hole.

But first, they posed for photographers as they strolled a few hundred feet along a wooded path, and the first lady tossed a stone into the twisting

Gros Ventre River.

The couple were expecting the pace of their two-week vacation to pick up today with the arrival of their 15-year-old daughter, Chelsea, who has been traveling in Alaska with family friends.

The possibilities once she arrives include attendance at a rodeo, hiking and tours of Grand Teton and Yellowstone national parks.

Clinton, who played two rounds of golf on Wednesday, told fellow players he was a bit tired and knocked off for the day Thursday after just 18 holes.

Even though he scored an 81, beating Wednesday's 84 and 85, "he didn't seem to think he had done as well as yesterday," said Bill Nichols, a reporter for USA Today who was one of the president's invited golf partners.

"He got into trouble in the long grass," Nichols reported.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Clinton spent the day at the house at the edge of the Jackson Hole Golf and Tennis Club that she and her husband have borrowed from Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

She was said to be spending most of her time working on her weekly newspaper column and on her forthcoming book, tentatively titled, "It Takes a Village and Other Lessons Children Teach Us."

"The president is thoroughly enjoying himself," said Deputy White House Press Secretary Ginny Terzano. "He is trying to indulge as much as possible in golf prior to Chelsea arriving tomorrow. He is working very hard to improve his golf game. He is having a good time out there."

She said the president "commented on how magnificent the view is from not only the residence, but also the golf course, and how fresh the air is. And you can already tell that after being here just 48 hours, he is much more relaxed and rested since leaving Washington."

House

In Sanford, we realized that wouldn't be practical."

"So, finding out it was located within the official historic district, we went to the Historic Preservation Board to find out what we could do with the house," he continued. "They said we could use the land, but we would have to have the house moved to somewhere else within the historic district."

The home was offered for sale for a brief time, but now Zimmer is offering to give it away. "They told me they would give me 90 days to have it moved, and if we couldn't get that accomplished, then we'd have to go back to the board for some other alternative," he said.

Zimmer said the house is approximately 100 years old, but in relatively good condition. It has three bedrooms, one bath, a large living room, and large kitchen. A porch covers the entire front and most of the north side.

Regarding the possibility that a Burger King restaurant may be located at that site, Zimmer commented, "I have heard those rumors myself, but there isn't any plans for that right now. The idea of a Burger King relatively near to the McDonalds in that area is logical, but there hasn't been anything brought up at this point."

He said the sign for the free house has been up for slightly over a week. "We have already had about three offers on it so far," he said, "but nothing has been determined at this time."

Zimmer estimates the cost of moving the house may be from $12,000 to $20,000. A buyer would have to have property within the historic district onto which the house would be placed.

Zimmer can be reached for additional details by phoning 831-181 or 644-6765.
