Going on a bear hunt

Homeowners fight to protect wildlife, way of life

By Shari Brodie
HERALD FEATURE EDITOR

SANFORD - For Faith Jones, it has been five years of happiness on her five acres in Seminole Estates.

She owned the property for 18 years before the home was built. To her, it is a peaceful haven, her nearest neighbor on the next five-acre tract. She knew she shared the land with birds, and snakes, and probably small mammals such as raccoon, opossum and rabbits. What she didn't know about was the bears.

Unfortunately, said Jones, it took the threat of a housing development in her backyard to help her discover the bears.

Jones and a few of her neighbors learned of the planned development on 130 acres known as Astor Farms only a few months ago. Knowing the property was partially located within the Wekiva River Protection Area, they wanted to protect the environment and their way of life, so they enlisted the help of the Sierra Club. On July 19 and again this past Saturday, the club and the concerned homeowners set out to find evidence of wildlife on and around the farmland.

What they found were bear tracks and scat. Jones has also discovered a den on her land.

"They are crossing from the conservation area, across the farm, across my property, across Mallard to Yankee Lake," said Jones.

Steve DeCresie, a local wildlife expert who teaches tracking classes for the Orlando Science Center, joined the group and found signs of the Florida black bear near the property where Dan and Rebecca Pelham want to build 345 homes.

"Bears are comfortable here," said DeCresie. "They've gotten used to the fact that there is food here."

DeCresie is worried about what might happen if homes are allowed to be built at the densities the applicants are requesting. The farm is surrounded by five-acre tracts. If the land use change is approved, and the property is rezoned from agricultural to planned development, almost five homes per acre could be built in the area.

Bears are not going to forget that they once foraged for food

on the farmland, DeCresie said. "You (can) put people (in an area) too tight, too fast; the bears need time to adjust."

Seminole Estates and Astor Farms are located in an area not far from the confluence of the Wekiva and St. Johns rivers. Black bears are known to travel along the rivers, and Astor Farms is well within the range of a female black bear.

DeCresie said a female needs about 11 square miles in which to live and to hunt for food. Mostly herbivores, the bears feed on fruits and berries. DeCresie found muscadine vines near the fields, a favorite food of the bears. "Wild grape is a pretty important food (for the bears)," said DeCresie.

DeCresie said there are less than 1,500 wild bears in the state, fewer than the manatee.

Besides the tracks, DeCresie also found scat (bear feces). DeCresie said the bear's digestive system is not very sophisticated, a lot of what they eat can be found in their droppings. On the July outing, the group found evidence that bears had fed on watermelons that had grown on the farm. Purple scat found in the area means the bears also feed on elder berries.

The Seminole Estates homeowners and members of the Sierra Club plan to present the results of these outings to the Seminole County Board of Commissioners. Please See Bears, Page 5A

Ballot initiative pits park preservationists against Sanford

By Nick Pfeiffner
HERALD STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - Sanford voters will be allowed to decide on whether or not to develop Fort Mellon Park into a hotel and conference center on the Nov. 3 General Election ballot. The exact wording of what they will consider however, is the new point of disagreement.

As opponents to the development attempted to gather a sufficient number of signatures to petition the city to have the decision placed on the ballot, the city commission decided to do so anyway. Developer Joe Pacitti requested it, wishing for assurance that the citizens would be receptive to his plan.

There are restrictions on the number of words which can be placed on a ballot for a referendum however, and the commission instructed the city attorney and his staff to prepare suggested wordings. Last week, the city received five sample wordings, and just prior to Monday afternoon's commission work session, another suggestion was received, which work session discussion indicated was adequate and appropriate.

The wording of the ordinance tentatively added to the city manager's report, to be presented for possible first reading during the regular commission meeting.

Prior to the meeting however, the opponents gathered. Members of the "Society to Preserve Fort Mellon Park" gathered outside the city hall with signs saying, "Save our Park". Several of them picketed around the city hall until the meeting began shortly after 7 p.m., at which time they gathered in the commission chambers.

During public participation, Millard Hunt, a member of the society, stepped forward to read a two-page document prepared by the society's chairman Doug Groseclose, who was not at the meeting, but was said to be en route.

The latter admonished the commission for not consulting the society regarding the wording which would be placed on the ballot. Groseclose had written that he had been promised a copy. Please See Develop, Page 5A

A decent day for county business

SEMINOLE COUNTY

Break time is over for the Seminole County Board of Commissioners which began an all-day slate of business at 9 this morning. The agenda included everything from the YMCA to road humps, to the battle of Battle Ridge to a much debated Public Decency Ordinance.

The board has not met since July 13, and this has caused a stack-up of 77 items on the county manager's report consent agenda alone. These issues included stormwater, road operations, water & sewer, public safety, comprehensive planning and purchasing.

Changing of the guard

HERALD STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - It was a changing of the guard at the conclusion of Monday night's Sanford City Commission meeting. City Manager Bill Simmons officially concluded his 12 years of service in his present post as well as serving for a number of years as city engineer.

This morning, paperwork changes were to be made officially giving Tony Vanderworp authority to sign documents on behalf of the city, as its new city manager. Vanderworp was on hand for all three commission meetings Monday. Joint session with the Sanford Airport Authority, commission work session, and regular meeting).

At the conclusion of the last meeting Monday, Simmons, with his voice fluttering and eyes watering, announced, "Well, this is my last commission meeting. I will say this job has been both challenging and dynamic, but I have no doubt we have made excellent progress in our city."

Simmons paid special tribute to other city officials and members of the staff. They have consistently risen to meet the challenges we have had before us," he said.

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein observed, "I want to say good-bye to a real gentleman. Some day, along with the word 'gentleman' in the dictionary, I wouldn't be surprised to see a photo of Bill Simmons."

After first week at school, they're the big kids now

OVIEDO - Barney is for babies.

And don't ask them about learning how to read. They've been doing that for years.

Homework for the first time? They're looking forward to it.

They are first-graders at Lawton Elementary School in Oviedo and they can't wait to get things moving along.

For a bunch of first-graders now six days into their education, the kids at Lawton sure knew a lot about school and life, and they weren't afraid even one bit.

"I'm happy to finally be having homework," said Opoola Buckola. "I want to take art, paint and learn to color better and I can't wait for my first spelling test."

Tyler Janceck said he already knew how to read.

"I know how to write some words that are pretty hard," he said. "I learned how to do sentences in kindergarten and I can write some big ones already."

Nicole Dowling was looking forward to art class.

"I like all different colors, and I like studying and doing homework, actually, I already know how to read tables of contents."

By the way, how many first-graders use the word "actually" in conversation?

All of the kids said they knew how to read and, even though they are the smallest ones in the school, they laughed and said it was kind of silly to be afraid of something so fun.

"We are learning how to add by counting on our fingers. We're first-graders now," Nicole said to a stranger goofy enough to ask such an absurd question about whether or not math was a scary subject to learn.

"It wasn't hard. I wanted to learn to add," Morgan Gill said.

The kids all said they knew older students at Lawton and Please See School, Page 5A

Morgan Gill, Opoola Buckola, Tyler Janceck, Nicole Dowling and Julie Smith were excited about their first day at a big kids' school. They are new first-graders at Lawton Elementary.

but was not able to obtain it. "I didn't get any calls about this," responded Mayor Larry Dale. "I'm willing to work with you but we didn't get the wording until recently."

"As late as 2 o'clock this afternoon," said City Manager Bill Simmons, "the staff was still working on it."

Commissioner Kerry Lyons asked when the proposed referendum would have to be approved in order for it to appear on the ballot. City Clerk Jan Dougherty responded that it would have to be submitted by no less than 60 days prior to November 3.

Groseclose's wife Debra requested the mayor and at least three others to meet as soon as possible within the time frame to work out the wording. Dale explained it would require a formal advertised meeting, and suggested the Grosecloses or society make individual appointments.

Another spokesman regarding the matter was Henry Sweet who identified himself as the chairman of the society. "I'm committed to get this item on the ballot," he said. "It's the people's land and the people should have the right to determine what happens." He referred to the matter as the "commission giving away the park."

"You should stick to the facts," responded Commissioner Brady Lessard. "We're not giving it away, we are leasing it."

"This isn't a racial issue," Sweet continued. "It's a citizen's issue. I want to know who said that someone was going around telling people that the city wanted to do this to eliminate black people from the park. Who said it. I want to know," he stressed.

"About 35,000 people have the use of the park right now. If it's developed it will only handle a few. And as for this providing jobs, if jobs are the concern, why is the city talking about privatizing the waste disposal operation which would put a number of people out of work. We are not handling jobs we already have," he continued.

"Another spokesman regarding the matter identified himself as Stephen Mars, who referred to Andres Duany, a noted architect who had been contracted to design a future plan for the development of the downtown and historic areas. "As I recall," he said, "Duany stressed that the park was a necessity for the community. He said we can't permit them (developers) to take away this valuable land."

Later in the meeting, during the city manager's report, the only item brought up regarding the development of the park was an ordinance regarding obtaining clear title to the park land. That matter was approved by a unanimous vote.

Following meetings expected to be held between members of the society and city officials regarding changing of the wording suggested by the city attorney, the matter is expected to be brought up for first reading at the next city commission meeting on Aug. 24.

Regarding the most recent wording suggested for the ballot by the attorney, it said:

"Proposed Ordinance of the City of Sanford to Authorize Development of a Hotel/Conference Center and City Park Complex on City Property. To enhance economic development and job opportunities for the City of Sanford residents, the City Commission of the City of Sanford is authorized to lease a portion of the area known as Fort Mellon park, to enter into contracts and to authorize development of the Park for a hotel/conference center and City Park complex."

The society however, is expected to take the opposite approach. In a statement submitted to the city previously, the society gave its suggested wording:

"An ordinance of the City of Sanford, Florida. Said ordinance mandating preservation of Fort Mellon Park, prohibiting the sale or lease of said park; limiting use of said park; requiring public and semi-public land use designation of said park; providing for severability, conflicts and effective date."

Depending on the direction taken in the wording, under the city's present proposal, the majority of voters would be required to answer "yes" to have the development approved. With the wording the society is suggesting, citizens would be required to vote "no" to have the matter approved on the Nov. 3 General Election ballot in the City of Sanford.

County Commissioners tonight.

The county's planning staff has recommended approval of the land use change and rezoning based upon development trends which show a need for more single family homes, because of target industry development along the north Interstate-4 corridor.

Jones and members of the Sierra Club are not entirely opposed to development of the land and feel that a maximum density of one dwelling unit per acre is more appropriate than the five the applicants are requesting.

Jones said the average density for "low density residential," the designation proposed for the development is 2.9 homes per acre. Keith Schue, of the Sierra Club, said Saturday, "How can (the commission) consider something more than the average. It should be less than the average."

In a review of the land use amendment, the Department of Environmental Protection states, "For that portion of the project within the WRPA, the proposed 4.6 to 4.9 units per acre is not 'low density residential in nature,' and therefore inconsistent."

Proponents of the development argue that a well-designed single family home community, with a master stormwater system, sanitary sewer and potable water would have less of an environmental impact than 130 individual wells and 130 individual septic tanks. However, the homeowner's group has received information from an attorney in south Florida who successfully litigated for Martin County (Fla.) the benefits of "properly permitted well and septic over central sewer and sewer with greater density."

The public hearing on the large scale comprehensive plan amendments and associated rezoning will be held Tuesday, at 7 p.m. in the BCC chambers in the county services building. Aerial Photos is one of four developments, more than 300 acres in all, seeking the change.

"It's fun on the bus," Morgan Oll said. "We were never scared."

As for Barney, by the way, he's for babies according to the Lawton first-graders who much prefer the Power Rangers.

Tyler said he wants to start taking his Power Rangers lunch box to school but he is still working on convincing his parents. "Barney's for a bunch of babies," Opola said. "We want to play with Power Rangers."

Last Monday, the Lawton first-graders attached their new school with all the intensity of Power Rangers on a mission. They entered their new classrooms coughed at first, then they felt right at home.

"I was kind of confused at first," Tyler said. "But I just didn't know anybody. Now I know everybody in my class."

So is there anything about a new and bigger school that even scares them just a little.

Nah. "What is there to be afraid of," Opola asked. "We're big kids now. We're in first grade."

Gary Katsner, the Public Decency Ordinance was placed last on the day's agenda. It is to be brought up at the conclusion of the 7 p.m. public hearing at the County Services Building.

The Board will decide whether to adopt the ordinance as proposed by voter petition or send the item to the November 3 ballot. Liberty Counsel attorney Rick Nelson will outline the ordinance at tonight's hearing and a number of citizens are expected to give their input.

"Putting this item off to the end is a disservice to many who want to express their feelings," Commission Grant Maloy said. "It's as if some of those on the board want to limit the number of participants. All this does is help the strip joints."

Commissioner Daryl McLain also was concerned about the placement, but said that several of the other items on the evening agenda would have citizen participation and these people should not be inconvenienced either.

"The most important thing for the board to realize is that the electorate supports this petition," Nelson said. "They have spelled this out loudly."

Commissioner Win Adams doubts, however, that the residents of the county truly understand the wording and the consequences of the ordinance. "This is a St. Johns County Ordinance and there's a big difference in the size of that community and Seminole County," Adams said Monday. "If people want this on the November ballot, that is what should happen," Adams said. "In the meantime, I would like to see everyone to closely study the ordinance and know just what they are voting for. I've said all along that if I had my way we would bomb all these (nude dancing) clubs."

Those who support the ordinance are appalled that Seminole County allows totally nude dancing - and it matters not how well Sheriff Don Eslinger and his deputies regulate the clubs. Since the county put in a tougher adult entertainment ordinance, the sheriff has been able to close down all the illegal massage parlors and make a number of arrests at the nude dancing clubs. One club - House of Babes - shut down.

The residents who signed the petition want dancers covered with at least a French cut bikini. This could cause a series of new bikini clubs to emerge and defeat the purpose of the ordinance. "Those who are quick to criticize don't realize the effect this would have," Adams and others say.

The ordinance would prohibit individuals from intentionally or recklessly appearing nude or causing others to appear to be nude in places in Seminole County which may be expected to be observed by the public.

Proponents of the ordinance argue that there will be a reduction of certain types of criminal activity in the county when the nude dancing clubs are gone, and that property values will increase.

The Board of Commissioners will be sufficiently warmed up for the big issue that would be debated by as late as 10 or 11 tonight depending on how the how items go. Maloy said he would make a plea to move the public decency ordinance up but did not expect it would be done.

Lopez overcomes problems to turn talent into dollars

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - If you had the chance to see Felipe Lopez play baseball at Lake Brantley, you surely haven't forgotten him.

Could Tim Raines (Sr. or Jr.) fly the way Lopez could?

Depends on if you're asking someone in Longwood or Sanford.

Whoever you ask, Lopez was something to watch, especially during his senior year at Lake Brantley when, last spring, his batting practices were watched by scouts who walked away shaking their heads, looking at the next Alex Rodriguez.

Lopez, of course, became the latest Lake Brantley ballplayer, joining the likes of Jason Varitek and Brad Rigby and others in the professional ranks, to earn big bucks when he signed a multi-million dollar contract with the Toronto Blue Jays last week.

It's been a long road for Lopez who has survived family difficulties, a controversy that almost cost the Patriots their 1997 state championship and, well, just a long fight to reach the top.

In Seminole County, we first found out about Lopez in 1997 when he transferred from Apopka under some controversial circumstances involving an imprisoned father and a questionable residence.

The controversy's over; at least an investigation by the Florida High School Athletic Association found no misdeeds.

But the controversy shadowed Lopez as he turned himself into the best shortstop in Florida and, maybe, the entire nation.

Lopez ignored the whole thing and his family stood beside him the entire time, through thick and thin.

Lopez is a quiet, unassuming superstar who doesn't like to talk about his personal problems from a few years ago and credits his family with his success.

There's been a lot of it, but Lopez won't be the first to admit it.

Except for a gaudy gold necklace - at least that's what he had before the signing bonus - Lopez was just another student at Lake Brantley.

Someone who fit in, and enjoyed having a good time with schoolmates, even when trying to be interviewed by a stranger.

He was always one of the first players off the field after a Lake Brantley win or loss, especially when inquiring writers headed to the Patriots' dugout after a win or loss.

Quiet and shy. Unassuming.

But when he took the field, he was the brightest light in the park.

To fully have appreciated Lopez, you had to see him slip a liner into the gap.

No one, okay maybe or maybe not Raines, could get from home to third more quickly.

Stopping at second was never an option for Lopez. The outfielder who picked up the liner after it banged off the fence had better have had a cannon, or Lopez wasn't even sliding.

But it didn't stop there.

You couldn't have gotten the full treatment unless you saw him rob an opponent from his shortstop position of a single through the hole. Going to his left or right, Lopez got to almost everything and the stunning success of the Lake Brantley pitching staff over the past two years have to be at least partially attributed to Lopez' run-saving ability.

But that's still not it.

You had to see the cannon that hung from his right shoulder.

Has anybody in Seminole County ever had a stronger arm at shortstop?

Doubtful.

Now Lopez takes his bat, arm and glove to Toronto where he'll play for one of the most Hispanic-friendly franchises in the game.

Sure, he'll spend a year or two in the high minors honing his skills.

But it's just a matter of time before he's fielding true-hop grounders off the SkyDome turf.

Lopez, however, is in for a surprise if he thinks he'll still have to deal with that single reporter heading for him after a game.

His locker room stall is going to be quite crowded one day.

And he'll have earned every bit of it.

Back-to-back comeback victories earns repeat American Legion State Championship for Sanford Post 53

By Dean Smith
HERALD SPORTS EDITOR

DeLAND - Hollywood could not have written a better script.

For five consecutive games Sanford Post 53 fell behind only to come back to post victories and claim its second straight American Legion State Championship.

But nothing could match the heart-stopping excitement of the final two games at the Sperling Sports Complex in DeLand.

In Saturday's semifinal against host DeLand Post 6, Scott Ferrell (8-2) hurled a five-hitter and Post 53 scored two runs in each of the sixth and eighth inning to erase a 2-1 deficit and advance to the Championship Game with a 5-2 triumph.

Sanford (34-10 and the winners of 20 of its last 21 games) would take on Group B champion Bradenton Post 24, which bested Jacksonville Post 283 (28-7) and Casey Shumaker (the son of former Seminole High School and Seminole Junior College star Karl Shumaker), an upcoming senior at Terry Parker High School who had not lost a game in either high school or American Legion play this year, 7-3.

The teams were given an extra 15 hours to contemplate the final after rains washed out the scheduled Saturday night start and forcing a 10 a.m. Sunday contest.

Post 24 (28-7) jumped on Post 53's Brian Nielsen for three runs in the top of the first inning and, despite several rallies by Sanford, would never trail through eight innings.

ORLANDO - The University of Central Florida football team opened fall camp Monday with its annual timing and testing day, putting 108 players through a series of strength, speed and endurance testing.

Nearly all of the players passed the conditioning test, 16 110-yard runs in the afternoon sun, giving first-year head coach Mike Krzycki an indication of what kind of shape the team is in.

"This is a traditional day for us when we find out about a lot of the younger athletes' agility-wise, strength-wise and speed-wise," Krzycki said. "It gives us an indication that the guys worked hard during the summer-time."

The entire variety was strength-tested, but a select

Proposed federal legislation may mean millions to Florida

SANFORD - Florida stands to gain as much as $15 million to fund state wildlife conservation and related recreation and education efforts, as well as a significant increase in revenues directed toward parks and state land acquisition if new federal legislation is passed.

Unvited by congressional supporters last week, the proposed federal legislation would direct revenue from Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) oil and gas leases into national conservation, wildlife-dependent recreation and education programs.

"This legislation promises to be one of the most significant infusions of money earmarked for wildlife conservation in Florida since the state legislature funded the Nongame Wildlife Program in 1983," said Commissioner Julie Morris with the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (FGFC).

The proposal, titled the Conservation and Reinvestment Act of 1998, was submitted by a bipartisan group of congressmen: Representatives Dan Young (R-Alaska), John Dingell (D-Mich.), W.J. "Billy" Tauzin (R-La.) Richard Baker (R-La.) and Chris John (D-La.) and would provide an estimated $400 million for state-level conservation, wildlife-related recreation and conservation education measures.

Included in the proposal is a no-tax alternative to the "teaming with Wildlife" concept to create a user tax on certain outdoor sporting goods as a means to fund wildlife conservation and education. Three thousand organizations and businesses have backed the national grassroots effort known as "Teaming with Wildlife," including more than 70 based in Florida.

"Should this legislation pass, we will be able to really get a handle on the status and conservation needs of native wildlife species like the soft-shelled

Sanford got a one-out single from Scott Hillinski in the bottom of the eighth inning, but the next two batters popped out to end the inning.

Waters, who gave up 15 hits but made the big pitch when he needed to, worked around an error in the top of the ninth inning to give Post 53 a shot.

Unbeknownst to the Sanford faithful, the Post 53 team knew it was going to win.

"And through our Watchable Wildlife Program, we are pleased to provide and enhance opportunities for residents and tourists alike to enjoy our wildlife heritage should we receive adequate funding."

Senators Frank Murkowski (R-Alaska) and Mary Landrieu (D-La.) plan to introduce a companion bill in the U.S. Senate later this summer.

The proposed legislation also includes funding for the state-side Land and Water Conservation Fund for outdoor recreation and conservation, which has received no funding since 1995. The proposal can be accessed at <http://www.house.gov/resources/eca>.

Can tubal ligation be reversed?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've heard that seven years after a woman has a tubal ligation, her Fallopian tubes can untie and she can become pregnant again. How can this be? I've always thought surgical sterilization is permanent and nearly 100 percent effective, and surgery to restore fertility in surgically sterilized people is seldom successful. Your opinion?

DEAR READER: During a tubal ligation, the Fallopian tubes (through which the eggs pass from the ovaries to the uterus) are cut. Then the free ends are either cauterized or tied with sutures. The purpose of this "double whammy" is to prevent severed Fallopian tubes from somehow remaining open to accept an ovum. Despite these extreme measures, women may very rarely remain fertile after tubal ligation. The reasons for this are not understood.

The tubal cautery/suturing should effectively seal the Fallopian tubes—even after several years. Therefore, the seven-year limit that you mention is simply unsubstantiated rumor. In essence, if a woman has not conceived seven years following a ligation, she is highly unlikely to do so in the future.

As you pointed out, however, both men's vasectomies and women's ligations can be reversed by delicate microsurgery.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My doctor says I have a mild case of carpal tunnel syndrome. How would you treat my condition?

DEAR READER: Carpal tunnel syndrome is caused by entrapment of (pressure on) the nerves to the hand. Symptoms include tingling, numbness and pain in the fingers. The cause is unknown but the condition is often related to unusual pressure on the heel of the hand (from bicycle-riding and so forth) or to repetitive tasks (such as computer keyboard operation).

Mild forms of the syndrome can be ignored—although, for obvious reasons, the person might choose to alter his or her activity. Moderate carpal tunnel syndrome can often be helped by cortisone injections, physical therapy, ultrasound treatment and the use of "cock-up" splints that are worn (especially at night) to relieve pressure on the nerve.

If the syndrome is severe (frequently awakens the patient or results in muscle shriveling and weakness), surgical decompression of the median nerve to the hand is necessary. However, before considering an operation, the patient should be given a nerve conduction study, which will indicate where the nerve is entrapped and to what degree.

Carpal tunnel syndrome is so prevalent that it has become one of the most common afflictions in the workplace. It is not only treatable but curable by modern techniques.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health

Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery."

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is it true that one gets arthritis in the heart or lungs as well as in the joints?

DEAR READER: No. Arthritis, by definition, affects only the joints. However, certain forms of inflammatory arthritis, notably rheumatoid arthritis, are associated with abnormal substances in the bloodstream. Therefore, other organs—as well as joints—can be affected by the disease. For example, rheumatoid lung is a medical condition sometimes seen in arthritis sufferers; lupus can affect the skin and kidneys, in addition to the joints.

WIN AT BRIDGE

The optimist and the pessimist

By Phillip Alder

How does the line go? The optimist proclaims that we live in the best of all possible worlds; the pessimist fears this is true.

At the bridge table you get the optimists—those who assume every suit will break favorably—and the pessimists—those who think nothing will go right. Ideally, one should fall somewhere between these two extremes. When you need to be lucky, assume a propitious distribution; but when you can handle foul splits, play for them.

With that helpful preliminary, how would you declare six spades here? West leads the diamond three. This deal is based on one from the 1941 Bermuda Bowl. In the match between Argentina and North America, the Argentinian West sensibly jumped to four hearts. Nonvulnerable and opposite a passed partner, he felt it was worth the risk to pressure the responder. North, with an unmovable bid, settled for four spades, where matters rested.

When the American West overcalled only three hearts, North could cue-bid four hearts to describe a high-card raise to game in spades. With such great distribution, South found it easy to Blackwood into slam.

After South draws trumps, the problem is to avoid two club losers. The optimist starts with the ace-king, expecting the queen to fall. Here, though, he leaves a poorer—and hopefully wiser—man. The pessimist sees that the contract is ensured by cashing the club ace, then leading a low club to ward dummy's jack. On the third round, he uses the power of dummy's nine and eight to nullify East's 10.

HOROSCOPE

Your Birthday

Wednesday, Aug. 12, 1998

In the year ahead, you'll be capable of achieving substantial recognition in your field. Start setting your sights on areas of greater responsibility.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 23) Make a choice today between dedicating your time to a pleasurable pursuit and taking care of a task that requires attention. You can't do both. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and BASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you may have to contend with changes made by others. Don't make a big deal out of it; everything will turn out okay.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An awkward situation may develop today between a friend and a family member. Be a peacemaker.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) You're remarkably resourceful at figuring out ways to make a lot from a little today. Use your ingenuity to generate personal rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Take advantage of any opportunity you get to go someplace new today. Keep an open mind if your new acquaintances discuss topics you dislike.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Two matters you thought would be irritating to companions will come off relatively smoothly today, provided you don't behave too forcefully.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A friend with your best interests at heart may provide you with beneficial information today. This is for your personal use, and is not to be broadcast to others.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions pertaining to your status and material well-being are tuning in your favor today. Explore every channel that puts something helpful into the pipeline.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The dynamic aspects of your personality will be evident to others today. Your actions may seem normal to you, but to associates they'll be impressive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The early portion of your day may be dedicated to fun activities. Toward evening, however, your irritability level may rise and make you difficult to please.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) How well you'll enjoy your day depends on how wisely you schedule your activities. If you put duty last, it'll make you feel guilty all day long.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You should do well in fun-yet-competitive activities today, provided they're not team sports. You'll perform best as a single player.
