City helps in fireworks event

SANFORD — Money collected for the planned July 2 fireworks display in Sanford come from businesses, organizations and private individuals. None was actually donated by the city government.

Yet, Sanford is participating financially. City Manager Bill Simmons expects the city will spend approximately $3,000 to provide support for the event.

His request for the expenditure was approved with a consensus vote by the city commission Monday. Also, Monday, the commission formally approved a request to close a portion of Seminole Boulevard along the waterfront, north of Fort Mellon Park, prior to and during the actual fireworks display.

The money to be spent by the city in connection with the fireworks would be used to pay for additional law enforcement officers to help in traffic and other needs, as well as public works personnel and others who would be required to be on hand for such an event.

Special meeting called

LONGWOOD — The Longwood City Commission has called a special meeting today beginning at 6 p.m. Longwood Fire Chief Charles Chapman will ask the commission to provide additional funds with which to continue a massive renovation project to Fire Station 15, at 301 W. Warren.

"We have completely gutted the building and are doing extensive rebuilding inside," Chapman said. "But we have met our limit on money approved by the commission for Phase I, and to avoid having to stop construction now, I'm asking to have some of the money which would have been allocated for Phases II and III in the future to be used now."

In addition to the refurbishing, Chapman said additional storage and work rooms are also being added in one of the present bay areas of the station.

The meeting will be held in the commission chambers at Longwood City Hall, 175 W. Warren.

City names Posey to post

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission has selected Ed Posey, director of the Central Florida Zoological Park, to replace Andrea Farmer, the zoo's Marketing and Public Relations manager, as a member of the Waterfront Master Plan Steering Committee.

Farmer has accepted employment with the Orlando Chamber of Commerce, and will be leaving the zoo following the opening of the new cheetah exhibit this Thursday.

Board OKs plan to bus mostly blacks; parents irked

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

SANFORD — Despite protests from African-American parents and civic leaders, the Seminole County School Board Tuesday night adopted high school attendance zones which take effect in the 1997-98 school year.

The plan OK'd by the board will shift black students who would have attended Seminole High School to the new Winter Springs High School. While the plan was being discussed occasionally the words "racist" or "racism" were loudly spoken from members of the standing room only crowd which packed the board meeting room.

The adopted plan reduces the black student population at Seminole High School from its 1997-98 level. See Zones, Page 5A

Realtors take a look at Sanford

SANFORD — After several days of extensive rainfall, the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce enjoyed sunlight Tuesday morning, as over two dozen area realtors and agents were taken on a tour of Sanford.

Many of the realtors were familiar with the area, while others from Maitland and cities in southern Seminole County had not seen the city put its best foot forward.

The tour, by bus, began at Seminole High School where visitors toured the school as well as the Health Academy. They then visited Goldshore Elementary and Sanford Middle School.

Before lunch, the bus drove through the historic area, downtown Sanford, the lakefront area, and past the construction site of the Seminole Towne Center Mall.

During lunch at the sumptuous Lake Forest center, Sanford City Planner Jay Marder made a presentation of proposed lakefront developments and displayed artists' conceptions of what the lakefront could be in the future. The visuals had been prepared by the University of Florida Study

Trust fund after tragedy

A trust fund for Victoria Alford's daughters, Marisa, Lindsey and Lacey, has been set up at the First Union National Bank in Sanford. Albertsons in Lake Mary reportedly raised $821.10 with which the fund was opened. Alford died as the result of a motorcycle accident on June 15. Her husband, Steve, known to many for his work in previous "People's Fireworks" fund-raising, was injured in the accident. Donations to the special fund for the three girls may be addressed at the bank to "Victoria Alford Trust Fund."

City chips in for courthouse study

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The city of Sanford has agreed to pay approximately $2,000 as part of a survey conducted by Seminole County to determine if the courthouse should be moved to Five Points.

The overall study, to be conducted by Andersen & Associates, is estimated at $4,000 with the county to pay half of the expense.

Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons suggested the city approve paying no more than $2,500. The request received a consensus of the commission during Monday afternoon's work session.

In its request for financial support, Seminole County said the study area would include downtown Sanford from Lake Monroe to Third Street, and Fort Mellon Park west to French Avenue. Also included would be the Five Points area, including the U.S. Highway 17-92 corridor, approximately 1/2 miles south and north of Five Points.

The Andersen study said the proposed work program to develop a master plan to meet existing and future space needs would include the following:

- A new judicial complex
- Relocation of the county's Public Works operation
- Reuse of the existing courthouse for administrative space needs
- Reuse of the existing county services building for other county functions
- Potential adaptive reuse of the existing county building located adjacent to the Sanford City Hall.

Although the proposed move has been strictly an effort by the Seminole County Commission, the city agreed to help finance it. "This would be our best chance to watch every step of the way in this study," Simmons commented.

SANFORD — Last Wednesday, Betty Hickson, wife of Sanford Fire Chief Tom Hickson, was seriously injured in a two-car collision at the entrance to the Wal-Mart Plaza on S. Orlando Drive in Sanford.

Mrs. Hickson was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford where she was treated and released. Shortly thereafter however, her injuries proved to be more severe and she was taken to Orlando Regional Medical Center. She was only able to return home Tuesday morning.

Chief Hickson said his wife has suffered from what he called "blunt abdominal trauma." He said she still faces a serious recovery spell. "She's only about 52 percent well at the present time," he added.

At the time of the accident, Chief Hickson said two women, driving in the opposite lane of U.S. Highway 17-92, stopped their vehicle, and came to the aid of his wife, attempting to do whatever they could until emergency personnel arrived.

"I know one of the women is named Amy," he said, "but I didn't get her last name or the name of the other woman. They both did so much to help that I would like them to get in contact with me so I could extend my personal thanks."

Hickson said the women might also help as witnesses to the incident.

"I hope these ladies would call me at home. See Accident, Page 5A

Former sheriff pleads guilty

JACKSONVILLE — Former Baker County Sheriff Joe Newmans admitted he protected and assisted marijuana growers and distributors while he was sheriff and entered a guilty plea to obstructing a federal probe.

Under the plea agreement, Newmans pleaded guilty Tuesday to one count of obstructing justice by interfering with a federal grand jury investigation into drug activity in North Florida's Baker County.

Newmans, 63, faces up to five years in prison, a $250,000 fine and three years probation when he is sentenced Sept. 28 by U.S. District Judge Harvey E. Schlesinger. Newmans will remain jailed pending his sentencing.

He was the last of 50 people to plead guilty or be convicted in connection with the drug probe. Sheriff from 1973 to 1982, he was defeated in a re-election bid after federal prosecutors named him in court as a possible conspirator.

Newmans was indicted Feb. 1 on three counts of growing marijuana, one count of conspiracy to distribute marijuana and one count of obstructing justice. If convicted on all the counts, Newmans had faced up to life in prison and a $6.8 million fine.

He admitted he and other drug traffickers attempted to obstruct a 1992 grand jury probe by funneling money for attorney's fees to Willie Ray Harrell, a Baker County resident arrested on federal drug charges, to prevent Harrell from providing information about Newmans' involvement.

Feds target top crack dealers

MIAMI — Federal authorities want to attack every link in the cocaine supply chain, from reputed Colombian cartel leaders to managers and distributors in this country to the cartel's lawyers.

On Tuesday, they took their battle to Dade County's streets. They arrested some of the toughest street crack dealers in the Miami area three weeks after a sweeping indictment against Cali cartel members and lawyers.

"The war against the leaders of the Cali cartel is also about battles that have to be fought in our hometown," U.S. Attorney Kendall Coffey said. "These are the middlemen operating in the open air throughout Dade County."

An indictment unsealed Tuesday charged 50 people with conspiracy, possession and sale of crack cocaine. Three weeks earlier, a federal indictment named purported cocaine wholesalers and lawyers allegedly working for the cartel.

The alleged mid-level distributors named in Tuesday's indictment, many of them repeat offenders in Dade County's overtaxed court system, will now face the stricter penalties of federal justice.

Alleged strangler nice guy by day

MIAMI — Monster by night, nice guy by day. That's the contrast that emerges from a description of Rory Conde by police who say he killed six prostitutes and by children who say he was kind to kids and elderly people.

"He would always say 'hi' to us kids. He'd grin and say 'hey, gimme five,'" 13-year-old Marcus Garcia said Tuesday, holding out the palm of his hand as if he were going to receive the slap-of-the-hand greeting.

When Conde wasn't using his hands to greet the neighborhood children, he was using them to wrap around the necks of prostitutes right there in his apartment and choke the life out of them, police said.

Conde, charged with six counts of first-degree murder, was denied bond at a hearing Tuesday.

The children at the Trust Temple Community Center couldn't understand how it could be Conde who did it. "They said he was friendly, always greeted them and was always offering to help people in the neighborhood."

Deltona man shared home with hundreds of pet rats

By Associated Press

DELTONA — A lonely elderly man apparently kept hundreds of rats as house pets.

Last week, a meter reader saw rats scurrying around a shed. Today, health officials were evaluating the man, identified by the Daytona Beach News-Journal as Angelo Russo, 76, for mental problems on Tuesday.

Halifax Medical Center in Daytona Beach refused to release any information on him this morning.

"Apparently he considered the rats to be his friends," Health and Rehabilitative Services spokesman Rodney Irvin told The Orlando Sentinel. "I guess he'd bonded with them."

Pest control workers who fed the rats deadly bait in the past week said they so far have counted 250 dead ones inside the home. But they added Tuesday there could be many more live or dead ones inside the walls, attic and in the yard and trees outside.

HRS officials estimate the number of pet rats could reach 600.

"I don't know what he had been feeding them, but these were nice, big rats, fat and fluffy. They had very thick fur," said Paul Minshew, assistant director of Volusia County's environmental health department.

"They were definitely well fed."

The rodents were so domesticated they didn't mind a visit from health and law enforcement officials.

"Rats were walking all over, in the yard. They were sitting on the window sills watching us; sitting on the shelves. They were tame rats," Minshew said.

He said there were open cans of beans on the floor; Volusia deputies said it appeared the rats also ate dog food.

A dog lived in the house too, but didn't suffer ill effects from the rats. They were too fat and happy to bother the canine, officials said.

Earl Netherton, a neighbor for three years who mowed Russo's grass, said the man seemed lonely and would "talk your head off" after the mowing was done. Netherton said he often was paid with beer.

The neighbor said he always attributed the house's foul smell to the dog and poor housekeeping.

"We didn't know what it was until they (the rats) started going in and out of the windows," Netherton said.

Phil Smith, general manager of Aaron Pest Control Inc., the company that exterminated the rats, said generations of the germ-carrying rodents lived in the house.

Net ban fate pending

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The fate of a legal effort to stop enforcement of the net ban, scheduled to start Saturday, remains pending before a state judge but the governor and Cabinet took action on a net-measurement rule.

The ban outlawed nets that catch fish in their mesh from all Florida waters, which stretch nine miles off the Gulf coast and three off the Atlantic coast.

Voters overwhelmingly approved the net ban last November. Supporters, including conservation groups and sports anglers, argued it was needed to protect Florida's fish species from depletion.

The net ban also prohibits the use of any kind of net bigger than 500 square feet in inshore and nearshore waters. That second provision affects shrimpers who work within three miles of the Gulf coast and one mile of the east coast.

Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet voted Tuesday to approve an emergency rule opposed by shrimp netters but Chiles said he wouldn't let the Florida Marine Patrol consider length, something the netters had feared.

The rule, recommended by the Marine Fisheries Commission, says shrimp nets can have openings 60 feet in circumference. The regulation is intended to carry out the ruling of a state judge in Apalachicola, which the state is appealing.

Some 50 shrimpers rallied — and one was cited for blocking a Cabinet room door — in opposition to the proposed rule, saying it was not specific enough.

A few hours later Tuesday, net ban opponents asked a Tallahassee judge to issue a temporary injunction stopping enforcement of the ban.

Chief Circuit Judge Philip Padovano listened to 90 minutes of arguments and said he would rule on the request for a temporary injunction Thursday.

Last week, five people who make their living in the commercial fishing industry filed a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the ban.

Chiles, Cabinet approve tougher tests for students, schools

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Students and schools should brace themselves for tougher tests and greater scrutiny from the state under the next phase of a 1991 reform intended to increase local control.

Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet have unanimously approved an assessment plan as part of the long-term implementation of Blueprint 2000, a law passed four years ago in an effort to give parents, teachers and employers more say over the schools in their communities.

The assessment package also includes sanctions that schools with a lot of academic problems could face if they don't improve within three years.

One sanction could be to allow parents to transfer their children to other public schools. Another would be for the school board to replace the principal and faculty.

Education Commissioner Frank Brogan called the assessment plan "a historic step in Florida education history in terms of the accountability that I believe — and others — is long overdue."

The curriculum framework for every course in every grade will be changed over the next year to describe specifically — for the first time — what students should be able to do after the course, according to Michael Blance, head of the citizens' panel that recommended the assessment package.

The new statewide tests, to be given once in elementary, middle and high school, will be based on the new curriculum guidelines and will have a strong emphasis on reading, writing and arithmetic.

"The beauty of the tests is that it will actually spring directly from those curriculum frameworks," Brogan said Tuesday.

The new tests will be criterion-based, meaning the results will reflect actual performance. Florida's 67 school districts now use a variety of "norm-referenced" assessment tests, which means results are based on performance as compared to a control group.

"It looks like what you're going to do now is going to have a lot more bite to it," Chiles said. Brogan said he didn't want to emphasize the sanctions because he didn't want to sound draconian. But, he said, there had to be a bottom line.

Four years ago, the Legislature passed a reform designed to increase local control of schools by lifting dozens of laws dictating classroom operation. In exchange, the schools would be held accountable to the state and public for what they accomplished — or didn't accomplish.

For the last couple of years, the Florida Commission on Education Reform and Accountability, charged with overseeing how the 1991 reform is carried out, has researched various ways of testing students and holding schools accountable for how well they teach their students.

Implanting animal organs into people?

By LARRY HARRIS
Associated Press Writer

BETHESDA, Md. — Bioethicist Renee Fox painted a grim picture of doctors one day saving Americans' lives with organs transplanted from animals — only to discover they had introduced animal diseases into people.

After listening to Fox on Tuesday, furious patients accused her of trying to slow research into these transplants while they were dying because the nation simply doesn't have enough human organs to go around.

"Xenotransplantation (cross-species transplantation), despite the hurdles... does offer us an opportunity to move ahead," New York diabetic Len Koch, who has waited two years for a kidney transplant, said scientists assembled Tuesday to advise whether the government should begin regulating the procedure.

Until now, permission for these experiments has come from local hospital boards with little, if any, expertise. Although theoretically promising, the research so far has been done in just a handful of patients and all of them died.

Concerns over the possibility that these experiments could spread viruses or even spark new epidemics prompted the Food and Drug Administration to consider regulating them.

After all, new flu strains come from pigs and some experts believe AIDS jumped from monkey to man.

The debate came to a head this spring when the FDA stopped doctors from injecting San Francisco AIDS patients with baboon bone marrow in an attempt to boost their immune systems. Baboon marrow resists AIDS infection. The FDA wants to determine if the experiment is safe — and if the baboon marrow is infectious — a decision an agency panel will make next month.

Meanwhile, the FDA sought advice from the Institute of Medicine, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences. After three days of debate, scientists reached no consensus, but some called for a national panel to control xenotransplants.

"Extraordinary research raises extraordinary ethical issues," said Dr. Robert Arnold of the University of Pittsburgh, who pushed the proposal. "That's not a reason to stop research, but to be cautious."

Other scientists argued that federal regulation could kill an emerging field.

"Potentially millions of patients might benefit from this, but if we don't try we'll never know," said Dr. Suzanne Isted, chief researcher on the AIDS-baboon trial. "You have to decide whether we could be cutting edge by regulating things that don't exist yet."

Patients agreed.

"You want to slow down a field of research that hasn't even begun," charged AIDS activist Brenda Loin.

The FDA insists it wouldn't regulate xenotransplants as rigidly as it does new drugs used by millions of people.

"We're going to have to really craft something very novel," said FDA biologicals chief Dr. Philip Noguchi, who suggested a federal panel to simply offer hospitals the expertise to oversee such unusual surgeries.

The FDA won't decide until it hears from patients, he said. "They deserve a little control over their destiny."

Xenotransplant pioneer Dr. Thomas Starzl argued that scientists are doing a good job of regulating themselves. His team at Pittsburgh thought they had a solution for the main problem with xenotransplants — organ rejection — last year, but two baboon-liver recipients died. Consequently, he announced at the meeting that he won't do more transplants until he improves the chances of success.

"We need a signal from the public at large about desiring in these efforts or proceeding," Starzl said.

Arrested for punch

Damon Marcus Williams, 19, 3500 Washington Street was arrested Monday night by Sanford police for battery on a law enforcement officer, and resisting with and without violence after an incident in the 600 block of Pennsylvania Avenue. While checking on a closed warehouse which has been repeatedly vandalized, a patrolman noticed a car controlled by a male and female at the rear of the building. While talking to Williams, the officer requested he sit in the back of the patrol car seeing he was not under arrest. According to the report, Williams backed into the patrolman, the officer grabbed his head and he was punched in the face by Williams' right hand.

Williams fled into a wooded area near the auto train and was flushed out by a K-9 unit. Williams was treated for a laceration on the thigh by paramedics and taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital.

DUI arrest

Richard Lee Schoonover, 43, 504 North Lake Village, Sanford was arrested about 11 p.m. Monday at 5700 W. 20th Street for driving under the influence. Later, he was also arrested for refusal to take a breath test to determine his blood alcohol level. A Sanford policeman made a traffic stop after observing Schoonover's car crossing the center line several times. After detecting the odor of alcohol and conducting a field sobriety test, the defendant was arrested. He refused the breath test twice, according to his arrest report.

Domestic violence arrest

Ronald D. Giets, 26, 3600 Central Drive, Sanford was arrested by city police Monday night for domestic violence battery, after getting into a physical fight with his ex-girlfriend as she was moving out of the residence they had shared for 14 months.

Ad leads to arrest

Charlamayne Ann Peel, 20, 108 Shannon Drive, was arrested for assignment to commit prostitution by a Special Investigations Unit agent of the Sanford police. An agent contacted Peel through a phone number in a published, personal ad. Peel was arrested about 9 p.m. Monday night after allegedly offering to perform a topless massage for $50 and other sex acts for additional money. A female friend of Peel's, who also went to the undercover agent's hotel room, said she would perform a massage but did not engage in sex acts. Adding she was going to watch but as Peel's "protector."

Arrested for loud music

Mary Evelyn Heishman, 41, 2919 Elm St., Sanford was arrested early Monday for disorderly conduct by Sanford police for turning up loud music after being told to turn it down. A patrolman had not even returned to his car after issuing a warning about the loud music until the volume was turned up again, according to the arrest report.

One charge prompts another

John Wilfred Kelsey, 31, 2893 S. Sanford Avenue was arrested by sheriff's deputies for battery, domestic violence after allegedly threatening his wife for filing an earlier injunction for protection order. The woman claimed Kelsey had been drinking and was upset over a domestic court scheduled for Tuesday when he threatened her and tore two phones from the wall when she attempted to contact police Monday night.

Domestic and warrants

Paul Willie Cucher, 24, 116 Shannon Drive, was located by Sanford police in the 3400 block of Chase Avenue Friday. Officers said he attempted to pull a woman friend out of a car and had struck her several times. He was charged with battery, domestic violence. He was also reportedly wanted on a warrant for criminal mischief/battery.

Thomas William Cier, 36, 312 Fourth Street, Sanford, was stopped by deputies on County Home Road Saturday. He was found to be wanted on a warrant for disorderly conduct.

Warrants

Midwest leads in affordable housing

By JOHN S. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The most affordable housing was found primarily in the Midwest last winter, while the least affordable was concentrated in the West, much of it in California, a trade group says.

The National Association of Home Builders said Tuesday that Midwestern cities filled 13 of the 25 slots at the top of its Housing Opportunity Index from January through March. They included Elkhart, Ind., the most affordable of all.

Conditions in the Midwest, including plentiful land and incomes that are not much lower than those in the Northeast, make many cities there very affordable in comparison to other parts of the country, said Home Builders President Jim Irvine.

Seven Southern and five Northeastern cities also made the Top 25. The Northeastern cities all were in New York state — Elmira, Binghamton, Utica, Syracuse and Jamestown. Minneapolis and Kansas City, Mo., were the only cities with more than 1 million residents to rank among the 25 most affordable markets.

The West had 18 of the 25 least affordable markets. Thirteen of them were in California, including San Francisco, the least affordable city. Three more were in the Northeast and four were in the South.

The Home Builders survey of 455,000 sales of new and existing homes in 179 markets found its affordability rating nationally declined in the first quarter to 81.3 from 82.3 in the final three months of 1994, because of high interest rates.

That meant a family earning the national median income of $40,200 could afford to buy 81.3 percent of the homes offered for sale in the first quarter. The median is the midpoint, meaning half of the families earned more and half earned less.

"The year started off with mortgage rates above 9 percent," said association president Irvine, a Portland, Ore., builder. "Rates did not drop below 8.5 percent until the end of March."

The interest rate used to calculate the index is a national, weighted average of adjustable rate and fixed-rate loans.

The index measures the proportion of homes sold in a specific market that a family earning the median income in that market could afford to buy. It also takes into consideration differences in property tax rates and property insurance rates in each community.

Elkhart, a northern Indiana city of 41,000, scored an 86 on the index, meaning a family there earning the median income of $41,600 could have purchased 86 percent of the homes sold during the period.

But San Francisco had a 21 and remained at the bottom of the list, a ranking it has held since the Home Builders began the quarterly surveys in early 1991. San Francisco also had the highest median home price, $273,000.

Regionally, in addition to Elkhart in the Midwest, the most affordable markets were Elmira in the Northeast, Pensacola, Fla., in the South and Bakersfield, Calif., in the West.

No place to park

It was 10:45 Tuesday morning June 27 in Sanford. Courts were in session at the Seminole County courthouse, a planning meeting was underway at the Sanford City Hall, and people were going about their business as usual.

The unfortunate situation however, is that there was practically no place to park.

The City Hall parking lot was full including areas where parking is limited to 15 minutes. Many people going to court or serving on juries use that area for parking and are willing to take their chances in the short-term parking spaces.

The lot at the southeast corner of Oak and Fulton was full. The county parking lot east of the courthouse was full. All of the surrounding streets had cars in every space. There was no room.

There is no question that a move of the county courthouse facilities to the Five Points area, as being studied by the county, would greatly reduce this flood of vehi

Depending on what ultimately replaces it, the move could also take a great deal of money from downtown area merchants as well. Many of these people who have parked their cars will be taking lunch breaks in the downtown area. Eliminating the crowd will certainly produce a huge economic loss to the city's business sector. That would certainly affect all Sanford citizens. Of course, it remains to be seen if the courthouse facilities are moved, and what business entity replaces it, if any.

SunBank in downtown Sanford had proposed a solution. They projected building a large multi-level parking lot along Fulton Street to help alleviate this overcrowding. The city had approved the concept, but it has subsequently been placed on hold pending a decision on the courthouse move.

The Waterfront Master Plan Committee has projected the possibility of creating additional parking in the area, but that is a future projection, and does not immediately serve motorists in June or July of 1988.

There is no question, the government facility area in downtown Sanford and near the lakefront has a serious parking problem.

Certainly, it doesn't happen every day. The lots have adequate parking when courts are in recess. Yet overcrowding is occurring more and more with the passage of each weekday.

With all of the downtown efforts to keep the courthouse where it is, we believe a solution to parking would be one of the most important issues. Without a doubt, there is an overcrowding problem. Solving this may be one of the best ways we could have to retain the facility, or make it enticing to another should the courthouse be moved, thus continuing the economic survival of downtown Sanford.

If Batman were real

With all of the hype and advertising by the entertainment industry for their new Batman film, what do you suppose would happen if somebody actually dressed like that and went out fighting crime? A better question of course, would be, how long before the news media demonized the person in the suit. The answer? Not very long! We would soon see headlines blaring "Caped and hooded right wing separatist supremacist anti government white male takes criminals rights away." Soon after that Bill Clinton would make a speech denouncing all cape wearing, hooded, right wing reactionary separatist supremacist anti-government white men. Janet Reno would take it from there, congressional hearings and all. Laws to protect our criminals from these low down, right wing, leotard wearing, so called crime fighters' would be passed, and Batman would wind up behind bars for 20 years.

Talk-show host Gibbons talks back

I got a letter from Lesa Gibbons not too long ago. She felt that my ungenerous critique of TV talk shows — in a column precipitated by "The Jenny Jones Show" murder — unfairly maligned her and other conscientious hosts. "I agree with your opinion," wrote Gibbons, "that trashy topics, ambush tactics, and exploitation pander to the audience's basest instincts."

"But," she added, "it is certainly not true, as you wrote in your article, that ALL the talk shows trot out 'the mentally unstable, the sexually deviant, the intellectually impaired, and the socially unredeeming.'"

Gibbons was particularly aggrieved that I included her (along with Ricki Lake, Maury Povich, Sally Jessy Raphael and Montel Williams) among the ranks of "amoral hosts who have sold their souls to that demon god Nielsen."

"I do not know Ricki," she wrote, "but I do know Maury, Sally and Montel, and they are not amoral people nor am I."

I do not wish to quarrel with Gibbons, who actually is one of the least offensive TV talk-show hosts. But I maintain that all the shows, including Lesa's from time to time, feature unavowed guests and deal with low-brow subject matter.

I can understand that Gibbons does not view herself, or her friends Maury, Sally and Montel, as "amoral."

But if a talk-show host sees nothing wrong with spending an hour on the public airwaves talking about "sex secrets and successful relationships" (Lesla) or "naked making money" (Sally) or "cross dressers who find success" (Maury) or "affairs with baby sitters" (Montel), what are they if not amoral?

What the folks in talk television are unwilling to accept, much like their counterparts in the motion-picture industry, in the music business and in tabloid television, is that they bear a measure of responsibility for transforming America into a cultural wasteland.

The popular culture is one of the most powerful influences in the day to day lives of most Americans — rivaling schools, churches and work. Yet, while teachers and clergy and employers are expected to be socially and morally responsible, the standard bearers of our pop culture shirk from such accountability.

Indeed, if tabloid TV producers, for instance, had any shred of social responsibility, they would be making household names of such figures as Joseph Taylor and Russell Hulse, Robert Fagel and Douglas North, and Phillip Sharp. As it is, most Americans have no idea that they are our country's recent Nobel laureates for physics, for economics and for medicine.

But they do know, from watching "A Current Affair" or "Hard Copy" or "Inside Edition" that Joey Buttafuoco was arrested recently for soliciting an undercover cop in Los Angeles, that John Bobbitt is now a pornographic film star, and that Kate Keelin is now crashing at Charlie Sheen's pad.

I take Lesa Gibbons for her word when she writes that, like many Americans, she is "often offended" by the unredeeming fare that her colleagues in television serve up day by day.

But talk, as they say, is cheap. I would be more impressed if Gibbons joined together with fellow hosts to clean up talk television.

U.N. paper trail is endless

UNITED NATIONS — A job making the rounds here is that given all of the money the United Nations wastes churning out mounds of pointless paperwork, no other organization in the world can make the following boast: printed in six languages and read in none.

But the joke is on U.S. taxpayers. One-quarter of the United Nations' multibillion-dollar budget is paid for by Americans, which is why Congress has targeted the United Nations for drastic cutbacks.

Just counting parliamentary documents produced for meetings in New York and Geneva, the U.N. spent $200 million on 2.13 billion printed pages in the last two years. One-quarter of that — more than $73 million — was paid for by the American taxpayer.

So when the largest gathering of heads of state ever meet for the United Nations' 50th anniversary general assembly session this October, the hoopla will be more subdued for Americans who realize they're paying an enormous sum to translate and publish the often interminable speeches in the United Nations' six different official languages.

Currently, 188 nations belong to the United Nations and all their leaders want to talk at this fall's historic occasion. They will take 20 minutes, when five would do. It's a place where small countries can pontificate along with the big boys, so the Mouse Does Roar with a vengeance — and a price.

A U.S. ambassador complained to us that the United Nations has an expensive "obsession with ritual — endless, flowery language. Somebody will say, 'Congratulations to this person.' Fifteen delegations will say the same thing. 'We wish to report our congratulations.' It's all BS and everybody knows it. But it goes on."

For a regular general assembly session, more than 200 interpreters are employed. A standard three-hour U.N. meeting costs $8,000 just for the interpreters. Since the United Nations has about 12,000 such meetings a year, the tab for simultaneous oral translation is $60 million.

The United Nations also produces thousands of technical documents that gather dust on shelves around the world. There are over 2,000 copies of a 24-page glossy brochure, "Standards for Eggs-in-Shell," complete with color photographs of every egg imaginable. Sequels include standards for chilled eggs and preserved eggs.

The whole thing is nuts, you say? Well, nuts are addressed in a 150-page booklet, "Standards for Dry and Dried Fruit."

One of the chief causes for the unpopularity of U.N. publications is their lack of timeliness. U.N. newsletters are sometimes published so many months late that upcoming events touted in them have already passed. An audit of the U.N. Environment Program turned up study after study that was up to nine years late.

A 1984 internal audit found the United Nations guilty of "considerable overproduction of publications." And a check of 68 titles in 1986 revealed that "large quantities" were thrown away.

In one visible protest, U.S. delegate Michael Michaeli stormed into a May 1981 closed budget committee with three cartons that were overflowing with just-received documents. He formally returned them to the United Nations, which seemed to be "quite comfortable churning out hundreds and hundreds of copies of documents" that it didn't need and therefore sent to the U.S. mission and probably other delegations.

MORTON KONDRACKE

Sides in PBS fight must call truce

After six months of vituperation between Republicans in Congress and friends of public broadcasting, both sides remain miles apart, and the existence of a national treasure remains in jeopardy.

How far apart they are was illustrated recently at the annual summer planning meeting of public TV stations' general managers, where a session was started off with a clip from the NBC show "Masters" lampooning House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., as "Newt Ganger." The Jack Kevorkian of public broadcasting.

Gingrich spokesman Tony Blankley was not amused. "When Genghis Khan invaded a territory," Blankley observed, "he handled villages in two ways. Those which yielded were spared. Those which resisted were wiped out. You'd think public broadcasting would want to be one of the survivors."

Gingrich and other Republicans, such as Reps. Jack Fields (Texas) and Scott Klug (Wis.), say that they actually want to preserve public broadcasting by privatizing it, while defenders of the system say that GOP proposals will lead to a collapse of the system and a "fire sale" of stations all around the country.

Fields, chairman of the commerce telecommunications subcommittee, says that he and Klug are about two weeks away from offering a bill embodying their ideas. Also in July, a House appropriations subcommittee headed by Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., is scheduled to mark up public broadcasting's fiscal 1988 funding bill. Presumably, it will show a cut from the $360 million Congress approved for 1987 and the $266 million for this year.

If the GOP and executives of PBS and its funding agency, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, are serious about saving the system, perhaps hearings ought to be launched with TV clips contrasting PBS shows with competing commercial programs.

Take a recent schedule, for instance. While PBS was playing "Kisanga" and "Barney" in the morning, on network TV "Jerry Springer" was exploring "cheating lovers," and "Days of Our Lives" was dramatizing them. CNN, of course, featured O.J.

The prime-time PBS offering, the opera "El Gato Montez," competed with "Hot Summer Songs" on ABC and the sex-and-anger series "Party of Five" on Fox.

When that part of the hearing is over, the committee should review and contrast the offerings of National Public Radio — the nation's only dependable electronic connection to world events and culture — with commercial radio.

The purpose of these exercises, of course, would be to expose parties on both sides to the potential future without public broadcasting: a total wasteland of raunch, triviality and stupefaction. Gingrich, dedicated as he is to renewing American civilization, couldn't contemplate such a future comfortably.

If they are terrified enough of the prospects, perhaps the two sides can call a truce and rationally consider the options. If they do, the most logical outcome would seem to be a five- to 10-year "slide path" for public broadcast ing's appropriation from its current level while privatization options are explored. A Lehman Brothers study done for CPB does not support assertions by Klug and Fields that public broadcasting can become self-financing by selling advertising, consolidating stations, and using advanced digital technology to "split" PBS stations' share of the electromagnetic spectrum for sale or lease, at least not anytime soon.

The study indicated that such devices might raise at most $175 million by 2000, and possibly only $100 million. Almost certainly, Fields and Klug will insist that no more than one PBS station serve a given media market — San Francisco now has 11 stations, Washington, three — but it's not clear how that will raise money for the network, since stations are owned by local authorities, often universities.

Other money-making options also are complicated, such as station "swaps" (for a price) of choice VHF dial positions for higher-numbered UHF ones and purchases by commercial stations of relief from statutory requirements to carry children's and public interest programming.

In answer to Fields and Klug's request for options, PBS and NPR came up with proposals to create a federal "trust fund" of several billion dollars whose interest would make up the system's annual appropriation. However, Fields and Klug just wrote a letter saying that any taxpayer-financed fund was "impossible."

Executives at PBS fear that the GOP actually has in mind allowing a purchase (and cheap) of the whole network by a private media company — Disney, in the best of worlds. Time-Warner or Murdoch in a nightmare — whomever, presumably, Pacific Domingo would be replaced by gangsta rappers.

Both sides remain miles apart, and the existence of a national treasure remains in jeopardy.

Seminole County is under a federal court desegregation order which mandates the black student enrollment at Seminole should not be significantly greater than 35 percent. The plan adopted by the board must be reviewed and approved by the U.S. Justice Department and a federal judge.

Parents expressed concern their children would be bused 10-14 miles away and some would be unable to pick them up in case of illness or injury. Board members' assurances that stu-

Missing the bus probably would mean missing the whole day of school because alternative transportation is not available, others contended.

Henry Sweet, president of the Westside Community Association, said, "We are absolutely opposed to the current high school redistricting proposed in plan G. The African-American community is angry and distressed by the plan proposed in G and we urge you to adopt plan F."

Group contracted for by the Waterfront Steering Committee to design plans for the future of the city and its waterfront.

Host of the tour was Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. In addition to the realtors, a number of county school officials and other dignitaries traveled on the tour.

"This is the first time I have ever toured the historic district of Sanford," said Beverly G. Luchenbach, Broker/Owner of RE/MAX in Maitland. She said she now had a much better view of the city, and was quite impressed.

Roger Quick, realtor with Daniel & Wohlwender Realty, Inc. of Lake Mary, said he was familiar with Sanford, but had never toured the schools. He and many others pointed out how impressed they were of the school tours, especially at Seminole High School and Sanford Middle School.

Luchenbach agreed, "I was impressed by the number of computers at the schools, and with the medical programs offered at Seminole High," she commented.

For Ron Jernigan, the tour did not present much new. Jernigan is with Stratford Properties, Inc. in Sanford. "I am very familiar with the area," he said, "because I live and work here, but I was extremely pleased to learn more about our schools, especially Seminole High School. It's an outstanding school and I'm glad I got to tour through it."

Farr said the tour of the historic area included Magnolia, Palmetto, Oak and Park avenues. "People got to see some of the restored homes, those under construction, and those which still need someone to restore them," Farr said.

"From comments I heard from our visitors on the bus, they were very impressed with the historic area, especially since it is relatively in a general area rather than spread out in individual areas."

Following lunch at Lake Forest, the group toured a Lake Forest model home, then boarded the bus for the return trip to their starting place at Seminole High School.

"I am very pleased with these tours, and hope there will be more of them in the future," Farr said. Farr had organized a tour earlier in the spring, but confusion over the internet information caused that one to be cancelled. The tours are planned to dispel a negative image Sanford had gained over the years.

Although sponsored by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, the tour was arranged by the chamber's Education Committee.

DIED: JUNE 28, 1994

June brings sad memories of a loved one gone to rest. He will always be remembered by those who love him best. Softly the stars are gleaming where sleep without dreaming. One we loved but could not save. But what it meant to lose him, no one will ever know. A light from his household is gone, a voice we loved is still. A place is vacant in his home which never can be filled. Gone, dear brother, gone forever how I miss your smiling face. But you left me to remember none on earth can take your place. How sweet the memory is still, but death has left a loneliness that the world can never fill. My heart still aches with sadness and I've shed many tears. God only knows how I miss you after this long dreadful year. It broke my heart to lose you but you did not go alone. For part of me went with you the day God called you home.

the black students out of their community while not a single white student is bused in.

The school board has proposed providing a late afternoon bus which would allow students to participate in sports, band and other after school activities. The cost of busing students from Sanford to Winter Springs is estimated at $90,000 with an additional $36,000 for the afternoon activity bus.

Representatives of Tuscoville and City of Winter Springs also voiced opposition to the plan which the board adopted because the large community would be split, with about one-half the students attending the new high school and the other half assigned to Oviedo High School.

Board attorney Ned Julian said a consultant has been contacted to evaluate whether the county has met all the court requirements in the desegregation order to have unitary status.

Superintendent Paul Hagerty explained the unitary designation means the schools have eliminated all vestiges of segregation, that there is desegregation and equity and fairness for all.

Board members said the plan they adopted reflects the ethnic diversity of the community and vision of the future.

From opposing fighter planes to Atlantis Ex-enemies united in space

By MARINA BROWN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — The commander of the shuttle Atlantis, Robert "Hoot" Gibson, was a Navy fighter pilot trained to combat the Soviet Menace when Americans and Russians first shook hands in space 20 summers ago.

His Russian counterpart, Anatoly Solovyev, was flying MiG-31s and training to shoot down Western foes — like Gibson.

A few weeks shy of the 20th anniversary of the first U.S.-Russian space docking, these two former enemies are now on their own historic journey, this one to the Russian space station Mir.

Atlantis blasted off Tuesday with Gibson, Solovyev and five other astronauts and cosmonauts on the first U.S.-Russian docking mission since Apollo and Soyuz capsules linked high above Earth in July 1975. The shuttle should reach Mir on Thursday, where NASA astronaut Norman Thagard and two cosmonauts are waiting to be picked up and returned home.

Everyone agrees this orbital rendezvous should be different.

"We may have been shaking their hands" during the Apollo-Soyuz mission, Gibson said earlier this month. "But we were holding our gun behind our back just in case."

Solovyev said that after two cold decades, "we have learned to look at the Earth" as it's seen from space — without borders.

Unlike Apollo-Soyuz, which was a one-shot deal, NASA and the Russian Space Agency have a lot riding on this mission. It is the first of seven Atlantis-Mir dockings planned over the next two years, after which the two countries will start launching components of an international space station.

"If you look at this program, I think it's one of the shining lights in the very difficult relationship between the United States and Russia," NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin said Tuesday before heading to Moscow with Vice President Al Gore for talks with Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin.

"It's not done yet," Goldin added. "We've got a long way to go. The launch is the first step."

Goldin considers the docking the most challenging task in space since landing men on the moon. Once it's accomplished, the two hatches will open and Gibson will shake hands with Mir commander Vladimir Dzshurov — who was 13 when the Apollo and Soyuz capsules docked.

It's sure to be quite a celebration. Thagard, Dzshurov and Gennady Strekalov have been cooped up inside Mir since March 18. Solovyev will replace Dzshurov as commander on Mir; also staying behind will be Atlantis cosmonaut Nikolai Budarin.

NASA's public affairs machine has spent months preparing for this photo op. Make no mistake — considerable thought has gone into camera angles and lighting.

"What's the point of shaking hands if you can't see it?" a NASA public affairs representative grumbled this spring.

Like the Apollo-Soyuz crews, the 10 astronauts and cosmonauts will exchange gifts in a live televised ceremony.

Presents include a pewter medallion, cut in half and bearing a relief image of a docked shuttle and the Mir station. The two halves will be joined in orbit, as will a one-300th scale model of Atlantis and Mir.

This is a technical rendition of the Space Shuttle Atlantis docked to the Kristall module of the Russian Mir Space Station. The Shuttle-Mir combination is shown flying over Florida's Gulf coast.

As a favor to Apollo-Soyuz commander Alexei Leonov, Solovyev is taking up an autographed photo of the two cosmonauts and three astronauts on that first docking mission. "We'll give this picture as a gift to whom I'm not telling you," Solovyev said. "This is a secret."

Gibson also is keeping mum about what he will say when the hatches open. "I'm sure I'll say something like, 'Well, if it isn't Normie.'"

Young Americans see looming rift over Social Security

By JAMES P. O'CONNOR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Bitter resentment between the generations is in store if Congress allows Social Security to run out of money as baby boomers age and put unprecedented strain on the national retirement system, say younger Americans.

Social Security's six trustees, who oversee the system, warned in April that Social Security would begin paying out more in benefits than it collects in payroll taxes by 2013, and that it would go broke by 2050 unless one of Social Security's two public trustees at the time of the report, David M. Walker, told a Senate panel Tuesday that the country "faces a looming retirement and inter-generational crisis" and said Congress must begin to address the issue.

But most lawmakers aren't rushing to write a prescription for higher taxes, smaller benefits or an increase in the retirement age to rescue Social Security.

Only one member of the Senate Finance subcommittee on Social Security, Republican Alan Simpson of Wyoming, attended Tuesday's hearing. And he agreed with warnings from his witnesses that unless politically difficult changes are made, young people will pay with higher taxes and dramatically reduced benefits.

"It's going belly up and we ought to move soon, and if we don't the older people that complain and howl about this issue won't be touched a bit," Simpson predicted. "And the people who will get struck senseless in the process will be people who are young."

Advocates for Americans in their 20s and 30s, who follow the baby boom generation, pressed Simpson to cut benefits to the wealthy and to allow young adults to invest their Social Security payments in private accounts, measures opposed by some seniors groups.

Heather Lamm, a member of the board of directors of Third Way, a Washington, D.C., group representing people born after 1960, said her generation could no longer sit idly by while it faces a crumbling national retirement system and an increasing number of retirees who expect generous support.

"It makes no sense that we vilify teen-age mothers for barely subsisting on AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) while at the same time we bestow billions on wealthy retirees who have received back two, three or four times what they paid into Social Security, including interest," said Lamm.

Lamm said generational tensions could take two forms: a peaceful "let's act now" attitude or a "much angrier approach," with the anger of her generation directed at senior citizens.

The nation's largest seniors group, the American Association of Retired Persons, argued against means-testing Social Security benefits, like welfare programs, and said that paring cost-of-living increases could push many retirees into poverty.

Study

Various commissioners agreed that by becoming involved, it would assure that the economic impacts such a move would have on downtown Sanford would be addressed.

Later, at the regular commission meeting, a vote to participate in the three party agreement between the city, county, and Andersen and Associates received unanimous approval.

Andersen indicated the scope of the study would include the economic impact on downtown Sanford if the existing courthouse remains and is expanded; the impact if the courthouse is moved; the economic impact on Five Points if the new courthouse is created; and the economic impact on Five Points and the 17-92 corridor if the courthouse is not built at that location.

According to information supplied to the city commission, Andersen and Associates plans to compile an extensive report outlining all aspects of the move or retention of the facilities, including cost estimates for new facilities or expanded present facilities.

It is also to address parking, pedestrian access, existing and adjacent land use, stormwater retention, and possible future needs required through growth.

There was no immediate indication of how long it may take for the survey to be completed and forwarded to the County Commission.

IN BRIEF

Little Majors start tonight

HOLLY HILL — The Sanford All-Stars will begin play in the Florida Little Major League District IV Tournament in Holly Hill tonight. Sanford will play the winner of Tuesday's game between New Smyrna Beach and the Ormond Beach-Americans at 7:30 p.m., following the 6 p.m. game between the Fort Orange Americans and the Ormond Beach Nationals.

Altamonte Minor's win titles

OVIDO — The two Minor All-Star teams (10-and-Under) representing Altamonte Springs came away with championships in the Babe Ruth Minors District Tournament at Oviedo. Monday night, the Greg Carra managed Altamonte club won the Commissioner's event with a 13-2, four-inning victory over Longwood. The Commissioner's team joins the Altamonte Springs squad that had already won the A District Tournament earlier in the weekend.

Mets blank Marlins

MIAMI — Bill Pulsipher earned his first major league win, striking out nine in 7 1-3 innings as the New York Mets beat the Florida Marlins 5-0. John Franco got the final five outs, including a double play in the eighth, for his seventh save. Bobby Witt pitched seven shutout innings for the Marlins, and recently acquired Rob Murphy (0-2) relieved to start the eighth. Pulsipher drew a leadoff walk and Brett Butler followed with a bunt single. Joe Orsulak sacrificed, Rico Brogna struck out and Bobby Bonilla was intentionally walked. Randy Velazquez and Todd Hundley hit a hard ground ball to first base. The ball deflected off second baseman Gervase Vera, who threw the ball away, enabling both runners to score. The play was ruled as an infield hit, plus a throwing error.

Camacho prevails

Roosters whip Suns

JACKSONVILLE — James Bonnici hit a solo home run to help Port City to a 6-2 victory over Jacksonville on Tuesday night. Port City (5-3) had nine hits in the game, including Bonnici's home run in the fifth. Desi Relaford, Eddy Diaz and Manny Cora each contributed two singles and one RBI. Ivan Cruz had two hits, including an RBI double, for Jacksonville (5-3). Tim Leiper added a solo home run in the sixth.

ELSEWHERE

Cubs edge Lookouts

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Ken Coleman had one RBI and scored the winning run as the Orlando Cubs defeated the Chattanooga Lookouts 3-2 Tuesday in Southern League play. Chattanooga took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on solo homers by Ruben Santana, his eighth of the year, and Dan Rohrmeier, his seventh. Orlando tied the score in the fourth on RBI doubles from Brant Brown and Coleman. Coleman scored the final run in the sixth inning on Chris Petersen's sacrifice fly.

Gill back with Hornets

FORT MILL, S.C. — The Charlotte Hornets, seeking to add scoring to their erratic backcourt, reacquired Kendall Gill on Tuesday night in a trade with the Seattle SuperSonics. The Hornets sent shooting guard Hersey Hawkins and swingman David Wingate to the Sonics for Gill, 27, whom Charlotte selected No. 5 overall in the 1990 draft. Gill played three seasons with the Hornets, averaging 20.5 points in 1991-92, before expressing dissatisfaction with Charlotte and asking for a chance to play elsewhere.

Altamonte rebounds for Babe Ruth title

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Sanford All-Stars put up an excellent fight, but in the end Altamonte Springs proved to be too strong as it claimed the championship of the Babe Ruth Baseball (14-18 year olds) District Tournament at Sanford Memorial Stadium Tuesday evening. Sanford had beaten Altamonte 6-3 in the opening game of the tournament on Friday, but Altamonte came back to win four straight games to earn the right to advance to the Area Tournament at Longwood's Candyland Park the weekend of July 7-10.

Altamonte had gotten to the championship game by beating Greater Seminole of Oviedo on Saturday and Tavares 11-4 and Sanford 5-4 on Sunday. In Sunday's game, Sanford scored four times in the second inning to lead 4-0, and was still up 4-2 starting the bottom of the seventh inning. But Altamonte rallied as Adam Klingler was hit by a pitch and Sean Roach and Jason Petrescu both walked to load the bases. Joey Hicks hit a grounder that scored Klingler and was safe when the first baseman missed the bag. Justin Harris then grounded a single to right to plate the tying and winning runs. The championship game was set for Monday, but a late afternoon rain forced the game to Tuesday.

Altamonte wasted no time in taking control of the title game, scoring five runs in the top of the first inning on three walks, three singles and a double. The big blows were a two-run double by Harris and an RBI single by Tormos. Altamonte padded its lead with a run in the second inning and three runs in the fifth to lead 9-0, but Sanford's offense came alive in the fifth, breaking the dry spell with two runs. Altamonte came back with a run in the top of the sixth inning, but Sanford had gained some momentum, scoring three runs in the sixth inning and a final run in the seventh inning to fall just short. Leading Altamonte in the finals were Harris (double, two singles, two runs, four RBI), Roach (three

Shingles require aggressive therapy

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you have information on shingles?
DEAR READER: Shingles (herpes zoster) is a virus infection of the nerves in the skin, usually involving one or the other side of the body in a band or swath.

The herpes infection begins as painful blisters that eventually coalesce, break and crust over, often causing a large area of raw, denuded skin that heals slowly.

All cases of shingles are uncomfortable and unsightly during the acute phase. However, most eventually heal without causing serious health problems. Nonetheless, in about 10 percent of patients, an unpredictable and dreaded complication develops: post-herpetic neuralgia. Marked by a virtually permanent form of chronic pain that is often severe, this neuralgia is exceedingly difficult to treat.

This is the reason that most physicians aggressively treat shingles with anti-virus drugs (Zovirax or Famvir) or prednisone. The earlier in the disease the treatment is administered, the less likely for neuralgia to develop.

Herpes zoster is related to the chicken pox virus; all adults with shingles have had the childhood disease, which apparently becomes re-activated due to reasons that are poorly understood. However, immune malfunction clearly plays a role.

For example, shingles may be the earliest manifestation of a hidden malignancy. In some patients, testing is appropriate to investigate the possibility of an unsuspected cancer. What tests to get and how far to go depend on the patient's age and general health, as well as the physician's preferences.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please discuss thumb and finger tremors. Are they the beginning of Parkinson's disease?

DEAR READER: Tremors (rhythmic shaking or twitching) are, in general, classified as voluntary (intentional) or involuntary (resting).

Voluntary tremors are most noticeable during the performance of motor acts, such as eating or writing. They may be caused by a variety of neurological disorders, such as multiple sclerosis, or they may simply be inherited as "benign essential tremor."

In contrast, involuntary tremors appear at rest only; they disappear on movement. Parkinson's disease is the most common cause of such tremors.

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

Therefore, before answering your question, I'd have to know the circumstances associated with your tremors.

You should see a neurologist for diagnosis. Ask your family physician to refer you.

WHAT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Robert Browning was an observant soul. This was his commentary on the "wise through":

He sings each song twice over, Lest you should think he never could recapture

The first fine careless rapture! How often have you wished you could play a contract twice? Certainly Rita Chokal from India wanted to go back on this deal from the final of the Women's Teams at the Bridge Federation of Africa, Asia and Middle East Championships, held in Amman, Jordan, last spring.

Both North-South pairs bid aggressively to six spades. It looks as though it comes down to a guess for the heart queen. At the other table, the South African declarer, Ruth Kaplan applies her own hypothesis: Lead from shortage to length. So, after drawing trumps, she cached the heart king and played a heart to dummy's jack, making the slam.

Chokal, who played extremely well in the rest of the match, won the first trick and cashed one top trump before continuing with the ace and another club.

West, Merle Modlin, went up with the club king, swallowing her partner's queen in a classic Crocodile Coup. Then she continued with the club jack (when a low club would have been less revealing). However, Chokal fell from grace, ruffing with dummy's spade eight. East, Petra Mansell, happily overruffed with the nine to defeat the slam.

That gave South Africa 17 international matchpoints and they won the match by only 10.

By Bernice Bode Cool YOUR BIRTHDAY June 29, 1995

Enterprises or ventures having artistic or glamorous elements could prove productive, profitable endeavors for you in the year ahead. However, don't put making money first.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take an active role today in matters that directly affect your self-interests. If others make the decisions for you, they might be more to their advantage than to yours. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) While trying to placate a friend today, you might get more deeply entangled in his/her affairs than you should. Be careful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not neglect old friends today in order to cater to new acquaintances. You may need to make a choice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your probabilities for success are very good today, provided you're properly motivated. Pay heed only to your urges that push you in a positive direction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Instead of experimenting with untested methods or procedures today, stick to routines that you know from personal experience produce desirable results.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A matter of significance over which you feel you have little control should work out well today if you don't rock the boat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will have a special knack today for bringing people together in arrangements that benefit everyone involved, including yourself. Use it constructively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Greater gains can come at this time from something you already have up and running than from experimenting with something new and untested.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Seek stimulating companions today who enjoy the same social and sports activities you do. You need to be active, but it must be with persons you truly enjoy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Act upon any ideas you conceive today regarding ways to beautify your home. Work in a methodical manner for maximum effectiveness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone with whom you'll be associating today is anxious to know where he/she stands with you. Stop playing games and express your position.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Gains are likely to come from traditional sources today. If handled properly, they could be much larger than usual.
