Churchwell's are advertising a three day special sale on tissue ginghams for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week. See the very cheap prices quoted in this issue.

Bob Lloyd of Orlando was in the city today on business. He is in the mortgage loan and investment business and expects to have plenty of business in Sanford along this line.

Did you ever see Robert Grear make a monkey of himself? Well, see him again in "Cy Slocum's Country Store," June 8th at the High School. At the same hour Byron Stevens will tell you what to do with an automobile.

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Vincent of Wabasso were in the city last night and part of today the guests of Mrs. R. J. Holly. Mrs. Vincent is a sister of Mrs. Holly and they were on their way to points in the northern part of the state to spend some time. Mr. Vincent is a grower of citrus fruits and vegetables at Wabasso.

James Ingraham of St. Augustine was in the city today the guest of his uncle Frank P. Forster, and his many friends here were glad to see him. He is an old Sanford boy who is now engaged in the real estate business in St. Augustine handling the business of the Florida East Coast Railway Land Department.

Lochner, of Clermont, who will also attend the meeting of the National Editorial Association in New York, and make the return trip to Sanford by steamer. Mrs. Jernigan will be absent for about three weeks.

HERBERT LOVEJOY DEAD.

Herbert Lovejoy died last night at the Fernald-Laughton Hospital after being ill for the past eight months. He was injured in an airplane accident near Miami almost a year ago and was brought here to be with his brother, Gus Lovejoy and his folks who live near Sorrento. The remains will be taken to Sorrento for interment.

WILLIAM MCKENZIE DIED.

William McKenzie died at the Fernald-Laughton Hospital Saturday night of blood poisoning after an illness of several days. Mr. McKenzie was a pharmacist at Hunt's Pharmacy and some time ago had a sore on his face picking an ingrown hair out of his face and the place becoming infected started blood poisoning which resulted in his death after everything possible had been done for him by the physicians. The young man had recently graduated at the head of his class in pharmacy and was just entering his career when death came before he even reached young manhood's estate. He was a resident of Bunell where the remains were taken for interment. His

EUSTIS IS READY FOR PHARMACISTS BIG CONVENTION

EUSTIS, June 4.—Everything will be in readiness for the entertainment of the annual convention of the Florida State Pharmaceutical Association which is to be held in Eustis Wednesday and Thursday, June 6 and 7, and in this connection, J. J. Grieg of Ocala, president of the association, has addressed a letter to members which contains some timely information as to accommodations, etc.

After calling attention to the fact that an elaborate program has been prepared for the entertainment of those attending the convention, President Grieg says:

"Just a word to contradict an erroneous report as to the matter of hotel accommodations at Eustis. The Fountain Inn has been completed as to the dining room and kitchen and lobby, and every sleeping room is ready for occupancy right now, as all of the beds are in place and made. The Grand View is already available, besides a number of rooms in private homes.

The outstanding feature of the convention this year will be the report of the committee for the establishment of the school of pharmacy at the University of Florida.

"When you hear what effect this will have on the reciprocity of a licensee in pharmacy, you will fully realize what a success has been scored.

"To the members of the Association, I will only say, come, and to the druggists who are not members I beg of you to arrange to go to Eustis and put your shoulder to the wheel with us, as it is absolutely necessary that we have the concerted action of all to make the school of pharmacy at the University of Florida such a success, that in a very short period we can hold our convention at Gainesville and take charge

Imitate Mother Hen in Care For Chicks

Support Natural Efforts of Mother to Obtain Strongest Chicks

By SETH W. SHOEMAKER, Director, the School of Agriculture, International Correspondence Schools, Scranton, Pa.
The poultryman who succeeds in raising strong chicks is the one who imitates the care and solicitude of the motherly hen for her brood. The hen constantly tries to provide only the best for her chick and, if intelligently assisted, will usually do a good job. By providing warmth, dryness and cleanliness the poultryman can best assist the patient hen. Chicks should be carefully sheltered from the weather until they are at least two or three weeks old. When the chicks are about two days old they should be moved with the hen to a brood coop. Until they reach this age they should remain in the nest with the hen. While in the nest the chicks require no food, but the mother should be given plenty of wholesome food daily.

Delectable feed Dish

The floor of the brood coop in which the chicks are to be placed should be covered with dry earth and sand, and with a little chaff on top of it. Chilling the chicks when removing them should be carefully guarded against. The head and throat of each chick should be carefully examined for any lice that may be hidden in the down. If any are present, sweet oil or lard should be rubbed into the down on the top of the chick's head or under its beak and throat. This rubbing is done with the finger and only a small quantity of oil or lard should be used. The grease will spread over the skin and destroy the vermin. Ainsed powder dusted into the feathers of the hen and the down of the chicks also will destroy parasites of all kinds without injury to the chicks. This powder must be as fine as possible and very dry. Insect powders that irritate may prevent the chicks from eating; hence, only very mild powders should be used. If the weather is cool the chicks will probably do better if confined to the coop with the hen for a day or two. If the weather is warm the chicks may be permitted to run out into the sunshine. Experienced poultrymen refrain as far as possible from disturbing the hen and the chicks, for if they are frequently disturbed the hen is liable to become irritable and somewhat nervous and to step on the little ones. Unnecessary attention is sometimes as bad as not enough. Feeding should be regular and the water supply must never be allowed to run out. If this is the case, the chicks will become very dry and are liable to gorge themselves with a large supply. This usually results in sickness. The strain on the hen caused by sitting and hatching the eggs is considerable and tends to reduce her vitality. She must, therefore, be well fed and cared for. A conscientious hen will often deny herself in an earnest effort to induce the chicks to eat. If this happens, she should be fed special food that is too coarse for the chicks to eat. She should also be frequently dusted with antiseptic powder. As soon as the chicks are large enough she should be permitted to go to the dust bath, which can be provided by digging in the ground close to the coop. Neither the hen nor the chicks should be fed from the floor of the coop or from the ground. Small feed boards with a flange around the edge may be provided. Feed dishes made of iron with wire tops to prevent the chicks from walking in the feed may also be used.

KIDNEY TROUBLE BECOMES SERIOUS
"Suffered with severe headache, backache and pains in my legs and under my shoulder blade. My kidneys and bladder were in bad condition. I was weak and nervous and felt tired and worn out. Walking made me short of breath. Every morning my face and hands were bloated. Medicine failed to help my condition and doctors advised an operation." writes Maggie Nelson, Mossdale, Fla. "Fortunately I read about Foley Kidney Pills, tried them and got relief." Sold everywhere.—Adv.

The Modern Genie

—WHO EXCHANGES THINGS WE DON'T WANT FOR THE THINGS WE NEED

The real Aladdin of today is the classified advertising section of the Daily Herald. It is remarkable how Classified ads help folks to live better, to spend less, to put more in the bank!
As an instance: one man swapped some odd pieces of furniture that did not match his set for a fine Victrola that he needed; a sewing machine that was no longer used was sold, and the money invested in a much-desired typewriter; a piano that had stood silent for years was exchanged.
But why go on with the huge list? If you would see how simply and effectively the Modern Genie produces results, turn to the
