THE WORLD TODAY

By HOWITT MacKENZIE AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

One of the gravest hazards American faces right now is the danger of an effort by Moscow to maneuver her into war with Communist China.

Development of China-American trouble would fit perfectly Russia's strategy of weakening the U. S. A. and her Allies by keeping them involved in scattered military operations...

There are the reiterated charges that American war planes are bombing Chinese territory north of Korea; that there is U. S. aggression in Formosa, and that we are preparing to make war on Red China.

There is one highly interesting "if" in such speculation, and that concerns just how much control Moscow can exercise over the Chinese Communist government.

There are the reiterated charges that American war planes are bombing Chinese territory north of Korea; that there is U. S. aggression in Formosa, and that we are preparing to make war on Red China.

There would appear to be no reason why the American defense should rest on its ears. The Chinese Communists have no navy, and the United States has a large Air Force with which to counter-attack.

Tom Taggart Jr., Found Dead In

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 5.—(AP)—Tom Taggart Jr., former mayor of Atlantic City and one of the most colorful figures in the city's political history, was found dead in his room today.

A member of the family, the 47-year-old Taggart appeared to be a victim of a heart attack, which he had suffered in the past.

He rose to political prominence in 1934 when he was elected to the state assembly at the age of 31. The young attorney was elected state house member in 1936, and served two terms.

He was elected to the state Senate in 1937, and controlled the Senate for two years. He was elected mayor of Atlantic City in 1940, and served two terms.

He returned to private practice in 1944. He regained statewide prominence in 1948 when he represented 34 taxpayers in a famous case before the state supreme court.

State supreme court justice denied the investigation. FOREST FIRES SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—One hundred forest fires, covering 190,000 acres in north California, touched two towns today.

Forest officials called the fires a World War which flames are battling roaring flames in dry temperatures and fanned strong winds. An Oregon county arrested 14 tonight.

NEGROES ADMITTED CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va., Sept. 5.—(AP)—A three-judge federal court today directed the state of Virginia to admit Negro students to its state school of law.

The injunction, granted in proceedings that required only minutes, covered not only the school but also the state's efforts to counter-attack.

Therefore I think we must conclude that a defense of Formosa could be made without resorting to producing a global conflict.

That depends, of course, on whether General Mao would allow himself to be pushed into a war with Moscow.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—When Lois Schenk came to New York four years ago from Narberth, Pa., her credentials were exactly the same as those of five hundred other girls. She was young and pretty and blond. She had $10 in her pocket, she had amateur and semi-pro theatrical experience and with her parents' approval and help, she was, in her words, going to take the city by storm. The situation is old and familiar.

Where the other five hundred might have lasted a couple of years at most and then gone back to the home town to marry the butcher's son, Lois today is a success. She is not yet a success as an actress, it is true, although she is climbing closer and closer by slow degrees—but she is successful as president of Shoshine Girls, Inc.

There are 25 Shoshine Girls in New York right now. They are just what the name sounds like—shoeshine girls. But theirs is an esoteric working world. They turn up at convents, service-club luncheons, restaurants and hotels, each carrying her shine kit and wearing her special costume of black and red checked shorts and sleeveless white Peter Pan blouse trimmed with the black and red check.

They work under different salary arrangements wherever they go, but when they handle big luncheon clubs like the Circus Saints and Sinners, their tips run from $1 to $10 a man. In the words of Lois Schenk: it's wonderful.

"When I came to New York, it was five months before I got my first job, a bit in Bert Lahr's Burlesque," Lois told me today. "I worked as an usher at the Art theater down in the Village, and then I used to fill in as cashier, secretary and clean-up woman."

"I remember that several times I was down on my knees, scrubbing, when people like Ingrid Bergman and Dana Andrews came by. And me a potential actress! I almost died."

APPARENTLY LOIS ALWAYS THOUGHT that pretty girls could make something out of the shoeshine business. After months of receiving "that little thing in the mail"—that would be unemployment insurance—she turned up one day in Times Square with a shoeshine kit.

"It was 12 noon," she said. "I was shaking like a leaf. At first nobody took me seriously. They thought it was an election bet or a sorority initiation."

"Then my dentist, Dr. Irwin Abel, happened along, and asked me what I was doing. I told him and he just patted me on the head and said 'Good luck.' After that, passersby knew I was authentic—and business began."

She made $11 that first day. Then she went at it every day for three months, except Sundays. She was living with a couple of other young business girls and they used to tuck her into bed at night, she was so tired.

"But I loved it," she said, "and I still do. You get to meet so many people and talk about so many things. I don't shine shoes in the street any more, but I still go out with the girls and I shine pretty nearly everywhere else. And I'm a good shoeshiner."

Finally she got six other girls together and formed what she called the Gingham Girls Shoeshine Group, and then the rise went on rapidly. At present they have an office and Miss Schenk is eating so high on the hog these evenings that last month alone she gained eight pounds. It is carefully and evenly distributed.

THE TWO DOZEN GIRLS WHO WORK FOR LOIS all are in show business or the modeling racket, and they do their shoeshining between jobs. They can clear $30 or $40 a week, and they like it much better than clerking in stores or waiting on tables, because, (1) it's different, and (2) they get a lot of publicity.

Just last month Lois was appearing in a bit part in The Madonnas of Chailot touring company, playing what they call the subway circuit in Brooklyn, and shining shoes by day.

Her girls have included Peggy Nelson, who took over Joan Loring's role in Come Back, Little Sheba just before it closed, and Serena Bando, who starred in a Florida-made movie that has yet to be released.

Lois now lives alone near the American Museum of Art and she observes all the rules that her girls do on the job. They sign contracts not to smoke, drink or date while working.

The big money, Lois feels, may lie in getting hooked up with a shoe company or a polish-manufacturing firm. Meanwhile, she grins as she remembers what Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman once told her when she was shining Kaufman's shoes on Broadway, a couple of years ago. "You should make something out of this," they said to her, enthusiastically.

"I was way ahead of them," she says.

4 PASTORS IN 106 YEARS

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—Green Street Baptist Church and its Negro congregation is 106 years old. And it has had only four pastors in that time.

Founded in 1844 by a group of 29 slaves, the church has an active membership of 600. In contrast to its stately pillared temple of today, Green Street Church had its humble beginning in a livery stable which the members by the work of their own hands converted into a suitable house of worship. The founders could neither read nor write, so an interested white friend served as secretary. The records in his clear script are still legible.

First of the church's four pastors was the Rev. George Wells, who served through six of the congregation's formative years, dying in 1850. The second minister, the Rev. Richard Swallen, served 20 years, seeing his people emerge from slavery. The Rev. Daniel Abraham Gaskie guided the flock for 39 years, by the work of their own hands. And a similar period was spanned by the service of the Rev. Henry Wise Jones, who has just re-

Kaiser Planned To Crush Adventists, Says Missionary

"The late Kaiser Wilhelm once said that when World War I was over, he would make an end of the Seventh Day Adventist movement in Germany," L. A. Hansen, pioneer of the denomination and now retired and living in Orlando, told members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church here Saturday.

Later, when the Kaiser was chopping wood in Holland, more than 5,000 of the denomination held a big rally in Berlin, he stated, and told of attending meetings of the church at Munich at the time. Today there are 437 congregations of Adventist in Germany with a total membership of 45,370 he stated and during the past four years, 18,000 have been added, he said.

He told also of missionary journeys nearly 50 years ago into Africa, China, India and South America. Adventists number 716,000, and the movement is spreading rapidly throughout the world, he said. Mr. Hansen told also of attending the Adventist World Conference in July in San Francisco where 21,000 attended one meeting in the huge municipal auditorium and 228 countries were represented. He showed San Francisco newspapers which devoted whole pictorial sections to the conference.

An Adventist for 64 years and in missionary work 59 years, Mr. Hansen at 59 still has the appearance of a much younger man. He was the founder of the Southern Publishing House in Tennessee,

France Rebuilding Famous Pre-War Coast Resort

By CARL HARTMAN
AP Newsfeatures
LE TOUQUET, France—France is busy rebuilding, not only its bombed-out homes and factories, but the tennis courts and gambling casino of this channel coast resort where some of Europe's wealthiest playboys cavorted before World War II. Some Frenchmen don't care for spending $1,400,000 of tax money to lift the face of a casino. But from the government's point of view it's a good investment—the tax collector gets 60 per cent of the take.

Besides, like all property-owners in France, the hotel and club proprietors have a legal claim on the state for damages caused by the war. In Le Touquet they put the sum at about $20,000,000 and pointed out that rival Deauville was hardly touched.

Famed as Paris Beach
Le Touquet began life humbly as Paris-Plage—Paris Beach—probably because it is one of the closest seaside resorts to the capital. The 128 miles are an easy three hours by car, and only a little more by train.

Shortly after the turn of the 20th century, some wealthy British investors came in and the tenor-sounding name of a nearby cape was added. Now the official books call it Le Touquet-Paris-Plage. High up on the French coast between Boulogne and Dieppe, the beach somehow particularly appealed to the British.

"It's the oldest spot in France," one Parisian explained sourly. "The British love it because it reminds them of home."

Well-heeled Britons came in droves—including the royal family. Local inhabitants will show you a little white villa with green shutters where the Duke of Windsor first met Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson. The fact that the duke maintains they met at a hunting party in Leicestershire, England, does not shake the faith of Le

Touquet. Its Famous Hotels
The oddly-named Hermitage Hotel, according to local legend, was the only one in the world which could and did house four kings and their suites at the same time.

Another hotel specialized in baths. It had not one but two baths for every double room, plus half a dozen suites with private swimming pools for wealthy Hindus prevented by their faith from bathing in public.

The big hotels are open for business, and hoping that the old pre-war crowd won't all go to Deauville. There is still plenty to remind the visitor of war—twisted girders, blind windows, and peeling wallpaper in rooms open to the sky. But Europeans have learned to overlook such things.
