Cramped Police Quarters May Get Addition

The Lake Mary police department may soon get some relief from their cramped headquarters. The city commission is looking into purchasing a used manufactured building the size of a double wide trailer.

Mayor Dick Fess said the building used to be a temporary bank branch and it could be adapted for police use. The Lake Mary police station is old, crowded and in desperate need of replacing, he said.

Fess said that the building "could be picked up cheaply." Commissioners could not agree where to put it, however. Commissioner Colin Keogh pointed out that it would not fit on the police department's property without cutting down some trees. "We don't cut down trees in Lake Mary," Keogh said.

The commission voted 5-0 to grant a request by Police Chief Harry Benson to purchase $963.02 worth of photography equipment. Benson told the commission Lake Mary police would be able save much of the evidence that is lost by not taking pictures. He said footprints, tire marks and fingerprints could be photographed. Benson also pointed out the court cases are usually decided by who has the best evidence.

Benson told commissioners it would not cost the city anything because the department could sell photos to insurance companies and attorneys. The chief said he has trained his officers to use the darkroom the department already has.

The city commission voted 5-0 to set the fines at $15 for illegal parking, stopping or leaving a motor vehicle unattended in a right of way. Benson recommended the $15 should be equal for all three violations because it would cut down on paperwork for the city. —Richard Truett

No Re-Run For Keogh

Lake Mary Commissioner Colin Keogh announced early today he will not seek another term on the commission because he wants more time to spend with his family.

Keogh said he will finish his term which expires in September.

'Annual War'

Police Warn Of Group's Fundraising In Sanford

Sanford acting Police Chief Steve Harriett said a group calling itself the Orange County Police Benevolent Association has been soliciting donations from Sanford residents, falsely telling them the money would benefit the Sanford Police Department.

"We're not related to them in any way," Harriett said. "They do not benefit or represent the Sanford Police Department."

Harriett said several residents have called the police station complaining about the solicitations.

Joe Patterson, president of the Orange County Police Benevolent Association in Orlando, said no calls have been made to Sanford since Monday. He said the group, a labor union, does not represent Sanford officers, although a few of them are members of it.

He said the organization calls Sanford residents during its yearly booster club fundraising drive but will stop this year because of complaints, including repeated complaints from Seminole County Sheriff John Polk.

"It's almost an annual war" every year with Sanford residents, Patterson said.

The group will soon change its name, Patterson said, to avoid the appearance of misrepresentation. The new name will be the Central Florida Police Benevolent Association and will better reflect the group's 4-county membership. Officers from Orange, Seminole, Osceola and Lake counties belong to the organization, Patterson said.

Turf Surfers

It's hard to "hang ten" on surf at New Smyrna Beach when your ferry's been "deep-sixed" by a fire near Sanford as Dennis D'Amours with surf board and Bill McGinley, both of Winter Park, learned Thursday. McGinley said he has just gassed up his Volkswagen and was cruising along thinking of fun in the sun when an explosion and fire in the engine room beached his bus east of Sanford on state Road 46. According to fire investigators, gas streamed from the fuel line onto the hot motor causing the fire. No damage estimate was available. And do two crafty wave riders get to the shore when their plans have been torpedoed? Why, fall back and... punt of course.

Driver Says Bad Road Caused Damage

City Billed For Car Repairs

The Lake Mary City Commission received a bill Thursday night for $214 worth of auto repairs from Alan J. Wichman, of 277 Evansdale Road. Wichman charged that the road was in such bad shape that the carburetor and alternator vibrated off his car.

"We have been fooling with this for five years," Wichman said. "With the tax base we have here, there is no excuse for roads in this condition." Wichman described the condition of Evansdale

Road as "rough 18th century."

Mayor Dick Fess said a survey has been started for Evansdale Road and that the city is working on the problem. City Attorney Robert Petree said it would be hard for Wichman to force the city to pay up.

Housing Plan Gets P&Z OK

By Rick Brunson
Herald Staff Writer

A $61 million, 93-acre housing and office complex to be built at Airport Boulevard and Old Lake Mary Road has been approved in concept by the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission.

The P&Z board's recommendation will go to the city commission, which will decide if the project may go forward.

Called "Placid Lake," the development is planned to have 906 units — a mixture of apartments, homes and offices, according to John Moseler, who represented developer Joost Zyderveld, president of the Zom Co. in Winter Park, at the P&Z Meeting Thursday night.

The proposed development would surround Lake Reservoir, near the Sanford cemetery, Seminole High and Lakeview Middle schools.

Phillip Hollis, project engineer, said it would have two sewage pump stations. He also said Zyderveld donated 80 feet of right-of-way along Airport Boulevard and agreed to put in turn lanes and traffic signals on the road. Hollis and Moseler said they would consider putting in street lights along their section of the boulevard.

Zyderveld said today Zom would "predevelop" the land and then sell some of the parcels to other developers. Zom would develop about 27 acres of the commercial section.

The units would house an average of 2.5 people, which would mean about 2,265 people would live or work at the development.

Commissioner Brent Carli said he doesn't like the idea of that many people on 93 acres. But Hollis said number of units had already been reduced and Commission Chairman John Morris said the number complied with the zoning regulations for the property. The property is zoned multi-family residential and general commercial.

After Commissioner J.G. "Slim" Galloway told his colleagues, "I don't see a thing in the world wrong with the concept," they voted unanimously to approve the initial plans for the project.

Hollis and Moseler will have to present the city commission a more detailed site plan before they give the project final approval. Zyderveld said construction would begin as soon as the final plan was approved. But he added it would be about four years before the property was totally developed.

In other action the P&Z:

• Gave final approval to the Babcock Co. for the second of its third phases of the "Mayfair Meadows" development at Paola Road and East Oregon Avenue.

Babcock plans to build 80 townhouses on the property, which is zoned multi-family residential. The complex will include a swimming pool, according to Lloyd Arp, vice president of Babcock.

The commission congratulated him for a "good-looking" plan and thanked him for honoring all his commitments to the city since the 3-phase plan was first approved two years ago.

• Recommended that the city's regulations concerning buffer zones between commercial and residential districts be upgraded. Carli suggested that the regulations, which now require only a fence between such districts, be changed so that developers will also have to landscape between the areas. Such changes could beautify the city, Carli said.

"We can be called the 'promised land' for the northern side of Seminole County," he said.

But Galloway said the commission should be more flexible and require landscaping on a

Upset Over Lower Pay, Pilots Picket 'The Unfriendly Skies'

BOSTON (UPI) — About 5,200 pilots of United Airlines, the nation's largest air carrier, went on strike today in a dispute over proposed lower pay rates for their newly hired colleagues.

Negotiators failed to reach an agreement before a midnight strike deadline, and contract talks broke off around 3 a.m. Talks were expected to resume later today.

Helen Witt, chairwoman of the National Mediation Board that is conducting the negotiations, said some progress was made but did not indicate how long it might take to reach an accord.

At Los Angeles International Airport, where only seven of 77 scheduled flights will leave the ground today, hundreds of travelers milled around the terminal wondering how they would get to their destinations.

Airline spokesman Chuck Novak said that beginning today the airline will be serving 50 airports. "The airline will temporarily discontinue service to 89 of its airports," Novak said.

The airline will place its "major emphasis" on flights connecting through Chicago and Denver.

The airline said it planned to use management and newly trained pilots to maintain some of United's 1,550 daily scheduled flights, which normally carry an average of 120,000 passengers to all 50 states.

The airline said it would take four days before 500 replacement pilots, who are trained but not yet hired, are ready to begin flying. In the meantime, about 240 supervisors will fill in.

The main stumbling block between pilots and the airline is a "two-tiered" pay scale proposed by United that would pay new pilots at a lower rate than current pilots.

U.S. 'Doing Everything' To Free Hostages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite terrorists' ominous threats, the administration says it is doing everything possible — save paying "blackmail" to the captors — to win the freedom of four Americans held hostage in war-ravaged Lebanon.

Vice President George Bush and spokesmen at the White House and State Department insisted Thursday the United States will not compromise its policies or principles to get the kidnapped Americans released.

In an interview with wire service reporters, Bush would not say what steps to free the Americans were under consideration but, "We're doing about everything we can be doing. We certainly care about the agony and concern" of the hostages' families.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We are presently following the best course to achieve results in a quiet manner. We are determined to obtain the release of the Americans. This is our highest priority."

State Department spokesman Edward Djerejian rejected complaints by family members that the administration is not doing enough, noting department officials have met "at the very highest levels" with them.

Pictures of six hostages — four Americans and two French diplomats — were sent to Western news organizations and a Beirut newspaper Wednesday with a note from a group calling itself the Islamic Jihad, which is Arabic for Holy War.

The note, addressed to the American people, the relatives of the kidnapped men and civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, said a "horrible disaster" will befall the hostages if Kuwait does not release members of the Moslem group held in prison there for a terrorist attack.

"America and its agents understand only the language of force and we have given her many chances before using force against her," the ultimatum said.

Bush ruled out paying any ransom. "You don't pay blackmail to terrorists," he said. "That would set an unconscionable policy for the rest of the world and throw American citizens into jeopardy every day of their lives overseas."

Jackson, who won the release of Navy Lt. Robert Goodman from Syria and scores of Americans and Cubans from Fidel Castro's jails during his 1984 Democratic presidential campaign, met with members of the hostages' families in Washington

Less Vodka, More Sports

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has urged the Soviet people to join in the "struggle with drunkenness."

The Soviet government will do its part by producing less liquor, raising the drinking age and imposing stiff fines on drunks.

The measures are an attempt to get to the heart of the problem — widely believed to be boredom and lack of incentive — by calling for improved sports, cultural and recreational facilities in the country where an estimated 20 million people have alcohol problems.

NATION IN BRIEF

U.S. Businessman Indicted For Exporting Nuclear Devices

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A businessman indicted for illegally exporting 800 tiny devices to Israel that can be used to control the timing of nuclear explosions did not know the equipment could be used for that purpose, his attorney says.

Richard Smyth, 55, was indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury, which alleged 15 violations of the Arms Export Control Act for exporting the switches — called krytrons — and 15 counts of making false statements to government officials.

If convicted of all charges, he faces up to $1.65 million in fines and 105 years in prison.

U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner said Smyth, who owns a small firm in suburban Huntington Beach, began exporting the devices — which sell for about $75 and can be used in nuclear weapons, missiles and laser technology — to Israel in January 1980 and shipped 800 of them in 15 separate shipments during the next two years.

An Israeli spokesman in Washington acknowledged his country has received the devices, but denied any wrongdoing.

Doctors Indicted As Drug Dealers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Seven doctors are among 17 people indicted by a federal grand jury for illegally prescribing up to $35 million worth of drugs a year, including one physician who may have written 4,000 illegal prescriptions.

The investigation, dubbed "Operation Rx," will probably result in more indictments, U.S. Attorney Robert Bonner said Thursday.

Eleven of the suspects also were among 31 people named in civil complaints filed by the state, which charge various violations of laws governing prescription drugs, said state Attorney General John Van de Kamp.

The indictments and complaints were the result of a two-year investigation. Van de Kamp said, adding that the physicians were "drug dealers in the worst sense of the word."

The indictments claim the doctors operated out of up to 50 clinics in the Los Angeles area and wrote prescriptions for large quantities of controlled substances including Preludin, Quaalude, Dilaudid, Ritalin and Talwin.

Doctors convicted of federal charges of illegally dispensing controlled substances face 3 to 15 years imprisonment and fines of $10,000 to $125,000 for each violation, Bonner said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.N. Official Freed Unharmed, But No One Knows Who Or Why

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A senior U.N. official was freed unharmed 36 hours after he was kidnapped by gunmen, and mortar shells from rival militia battles slammed into residential areas of Beirut for the 19th straight day.

Aidan Walsh, 48, deputy director of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian refugees, was kidnapped by eight gunmen Wednesday morning as he was being driven to work in mostly Moslem west Beirut but was released Thursday.

"I have spoken to him, he sounded shaky but he is fine," said Robert Gallagher, director of the agency in Lebanon. He said he did not know who had taken Walsh, what the motive was or why the Irishman was freed.

His release in a west Beirut suburb came one day after the militant Islamic Jihad movement circulated photographs of four kidnapped Americans and two Frenchmen, warning of "a horrible disaster" unless Kuwait freed 17 jailed Moslem extremists.

But there were no reliable claims of responsibility for Walsh's abduction and police sources said it apparently was not related to the ultimatum issued Wednesday in the name of Islamic Jihad.

Missing Plane Probably Aeroflot

TOKYO (UPI) — Japanese authorities believe a Soviet aircraft that disappeared in a militarily sensitive region near Sakhalin Island was a civilian plane belonging to the Soviet airline.

"According to our unconfirmed reports it appears to be an Aeroflot plane," Yoshio Hatano, the chief foreign ministry spokesman said today.

"It is most unlikely that it is a regular civilian passenger plane," he said, indicating the plane must have been either a cargo aircraft or operating a special charter flight.

Hatano said no search and rescue operations or further investigations were planned in the area near where a South Korean airliner was shot down by a Soviet fighter Sept. 1, 1983.

Japanese Defense Agency sources told the Kyodo News Service there was no unusual Soviet military activity in the area where the plane disappeared Thursday. They said the aircraft was not flying a course normally used for military traffic.

Mayor: MOVE Fire Victims To Be Home By Christmas

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mayor Wilson Goode promised new housing by Christmas to the 250 people whose homes were gutted in a fiery police assault on the radical cult MOVE, and authorities kept a close watch on two more MOVE strongholds for signs of threatening activity.

City officials hope a tour of the devastation today by Housing and Urban Development Secretary William Pierce will trigger federal urban aid for rebuilding the neighborhood leveled by fire Monday night when police tried to evict MOVE members from their fortified inner-city row house.

At least 11 people in the house, including four children, were killed in the siege. The fortress erupted into flames shortly after a police helicopter dropped a bomb on the building Monday. The fire spread to surrounding homes, destroying 53 houses and severely damaging eight more in the neighborhood, which police had evacuated amid fears of violence.

Neighbors had complained that the MOVE house was a filthy haven for rats and stray pets, and noise from the dwelling was disrupting the once-quiet neighborhood. Police clashed with MOVE seven years ago, and a policeman was killed in the confrontation.

Goode said rebuilding the homes will cost about $4.6 million. Replacing belongings destroyed will cost another $2 million, he estimated.

The mayor said the Christmas target date for new homes depends on many legal questions, including the city obtaining title to the ground, the position of renters, insurance claims and two lawsuits filed against the city. One suit seeks $10 million in punitive damages and the other blames the city for the fire.

Goode, in an interview with The New York Times, said the city is not yet free of MOVE, and could face attempts at revenge.

"There are sympathizers around," he told the newspaper. "As long as the people in those houses are not engaging in any kind of violation of the criminal code, they will be left alone. If they start to interfere with their neighbors and start to violate the law, then we will have to take necessary steps against those people as well."

City Health Commissioner Stuart Shapiro said examinations of the 11 corpses recovered Tuesday and Wednesday found no evidence of bullet fragments, but he said the bullets could have passed through their bodies.

Thursday's search of the ruins of the MOVE house revealed a network of inner bunkers in the basement fortified with railroad ties, tree trunks and heavy steel plating and equipped with gun portals.

Officials said they also found "flammable material to make bombs" along with at least five guns, what appeared to be unexploded bombs and bullets.

Fight Over Girl At School Lands Man In Jail

A 20-year-old man allegedly trespassing at Lake Mary High School reportedly got into a fight with a student and chased witnesses with a machete. He was later captured.

Students told Seminole County sheriff's deputies the man and student, Angelo Anthony DeJesus, 19, of Altamonte Springs, got into a fight over a girl at about 4 p.m. Thursday. When witnesses broke up the fight the suspect reportedly took a foot-long machete from his vehicle and chased two witnesses with the weapon. He reportedly damaged a vehicle with the machete, but no one was injured, a sheriff's report said.

The suspect fled the scene along with two boys. While deputies were taking information from witnesses at the school the suspect drove by and deputies gave chase. They lost sight of his vehicle, but tracked him down at the Shop & Go, on Country Club Road at Wilber Street, Lake Mary, the report said.

The suspect said the trouble began when DeJesus poked him in the chest with his finger. Deputies didn't find the machete when they searched the suspect's vehicle, but one of the two youths who rode from the school with him told lawmen the suspect had thrown the weapon into the woods behind Country Club Heights. Lake Mary police reported finding a machete there, the report said.

Neal Wellon, of 139 Bethune Circle, has been charged with aggravated assault and trespassing on school property. He has been released on $5,000 bond and is scheduled to appear in court June 3.

An 18-year-old gas station employee has been charged with forgery and petty theft in connection with the alleged fraudulent use of the credit card slips of three customers.

Man Faces 5 Years For Assault On Cop

A Sanford man was being held without bond pending his sentencing for battery on a law enforcement officer.

Robert Lloyd Washburn, 33, of 117 French Ave., was found guilty Wednesday of battering Sanford officer Robert C. Bartholow on Dec. 19. Washburn could be sentenced to up to 5 years in prison. Sentencing is set for May 24 before Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. Washburn also faces a possible 18-year sentence for violation of probation.

In 1978 Washburn was sentenced to 20 years for breaking and entering with intent to commit grand and petty larceny. After two years in prison, Washburn was to serve 18 years probation. One condition of probation was not to drink alcoholic beverages.

The Winter Park man, while on duty at the Phillips 88 station, state Road 436 at Oxford Road, Fern Park, allegedly made duplicate receipts for transactions by at least three credit card customers, according to a Seminole County sheriff's report. After the customer signed the original receipt the man allegedly forged their signature on the second and pocketed cash from the station equal to the transaction, the report said.

The three customers confirmed the allegations, the report said, and the fraud netted less than $100 that deputies are aware of.

Mark Malone Pafford, of 1006 Leeds St., has been released from jail without posting bond. He is scheduled to appear in court June 3.

NOTOW, PLEASE

An Altamonte Springs man who tried to drive away and then ran on foot from a Seminole County sheriff's deputy who reportedly saw what he believed might have been contraband thrown from his car was nabbed when he walked back to his abandoned car.

The deputy reported approaching the man's car while it was parked in an alley behind North and Williams streets in Altamonte Springs, at about 7:30 p.m. The suspect and a male juvenile were in the car and the deputy saw them throw something from the vehicle as he approached. When the deputy got out of his car the suspect started driving away.

The officer who made the Dec. 19 arrest reported Washburn had been drinking.

According to court records, the officer was investigating an incident of criminal mischief — in which Washburn was a suspect — when he was confronted by Washburn. The officer reported that Washburn was not cooperative and subsequently shoved him which led to a fight.

The officer reported that physical force was needed to handcuff Washburn. He was then taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital emergency room where he refused treatment.

Washburn also faces a separate charge of battery stemming from an April 13 incident in which he was arrested for spouse abuse.

The deputy yelled to the man that his car would be towed and within minutes he walked back to the scene and was arrested, the report said.

Some marijuana was found on the front seat of the suspect's car, but the item thrown out when the deputy approached wasn't recovered, the report said.

Michael Anthony Allen, 25, of 323 DePugh St., has been charged with possession of marijuana and resisting arrest without violence. He has been released on $500 bond and is scheduled to appear in court May 29.

Bush Gives 'The Signal'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President George H. W. Bush set up a political fund-raising committee last week with little fanfare and he concedes it is "a kind of a signal" about his 1988 intentions.

In an interview with wire service reporters Thursday, Bush called his "Fund for America's Future" a "vehicle to be a little more political — a little more political touch" — to a vice presidency laboring in the shadow of President Reagan.

The committee is patterned after political action committees set up by other GOP candidates — Reagan, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, former Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York — to collect and spend money on behalf of Republican senatorial and congressional candidates.

Such "multicandidate committees" usually are converted into political action committees on behalf of the candidate once he announces.

Nation's First Clergy Malpractice Suit Dismissed

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI) — The nation's first clergy malpractice suit has been dismissed by a judge who says the courts do not have the right to interfere in religious counseling.

The suit was filed against four pastors at Grace Community Church by the parents of a young man who killed himself despite counseling by the clergymen.

The trial was in its fourth week when Superior Court Judge Joseph Kalin granted a motion Thursday by church attorneys that the case be thrown out because there was insufficient evidence and because the church's religious beliefs should not be put on trial.

Walter and Maria Nally of Burbank brought the suit against the Sun Valley church in 1980, the year after their 24-year-old son, Kenneth, shot himself.

The couple claimed the Rev. John MacArthur and pastors Duane Rea, Lynn Cory and Richard Thomson aggravated Nally's depression by counseling him that his problems were a result of sin that must be repented.

Kalin said a ruling in favor of the Nallys would violate the constitutionally guaranteed separation of church and state.

pastoral counseling. That would be interfering between the church and the state.

"If we did that, if we set up those standards, we'd get into thousands of questions regulating religious conduct — such as what is a proper religious belief? We just can't do that."

Church attorneys had asked Kalin to dismiss the case because, "the very concept of clergy malpractice is the kind of burden on religion that the First Amendment prohibits."

An attorney for the Nallys, who said they may appeal the decision, argued that the case did not step past the boundaries of religious freedom, but was an issue of accountability on the part of the pastors who "held out to the world that they could treat severe emotional problems through spiritual counseling."

The malpractice and negligence suit charged the pastors with outrageous conduct for discouraging Nally from seeking professional help because of their bias against secular counseling.

The Nallys had claimed the pastors had a duty to refer the young man to professional counseling.

Several jurors said had they received the case they probably would have voted in favor of the Nallys.

County Blocks Sanford's Sewage Grants

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County is blocking two federal-state grants for expanding and updating Sanford's sewer system. But City Manager Frank Faison said the city has gotten around both blocks.

County Administrator Ken Hooper told county commissioners earlier this week the city's applications for the state-federal money includes a provision that sludge from the expanded sewer plant would be dumped at the county's Osceola landfill near Geneva. He said he has notified the city that since the landfill does not have a state permit, the sludge cannot be dumped there.

However, he said, if the city agrees to grant the county 1.2 million gallons of daily capacity in an expanded Sanford sewer plant the sludge would be allowed to be dumped at Osceola when the county does receive its permit.

The state Department of Environmental Regulation is withholding a permit for the landfill until the county agrees to encapsulate refuse buried there to stop the leaking of ground water into the refuse and the leaking of moisture out of the refuse. DER says water from the refuse is polluting ground water.

The county estimates the cost of encapsulating the refuse at $500,000 per year. In addition the state is demanding that garbage buried there for more than 10 years also be encapsulated at an estimated cost of $5 million.

While the county and the state are negotiating these matters the county is operating the landfill without a permit.

Hooper said it is not unusual for sludge to be dumped at the landfill. The county dumps sludge from its sewer plants there and allows Sanlando Utilities and other sewer utilities to use the site for dumping.

Hooper said if the unincorporated area receives the 1.2 million gallons of capacity from Sanford's proposed expansion to 7.3 million gallons, the county would "pay our fair share of local costs." At various times city officials have estimated current capacity at the Poplar Avenue plant at 4.5 million to 6 million gallons daily. If the city has to give the county 1.2 million gallons of a 7.3 million gallon plant, there would be little if any additional capacity available to accommodate Sanford growth.

An angry Faison said Tuesday that the county used as "an excuse" the fact that its landfill is not now permitted and called the decision "discrimination. We would not need to dump any sludge now," Faison said. "We would have the need at a future time."

He said the city has found another possible solution to its sludge dumping problem and no longer needs county cooperation. He won't say what that solution is, but said it will take approval by state and federal agencies. At a work session Monday the city will discuss whether it will continue with the grant application that includes a requirement of dumping at Osceola or try some other measure.

Faison added that it appears the county had no reservation about trying to stop a grant that would have saved Sanford taxpayers money.

"Sanford taxpayers are county taxpayers, too," he said.

The second grant is for $10 million to change the city's method of effluent disposal to the more sophisticated landspreading technique. This would require the city to acquire some 2,700 acres three to four miles west of Interstate 4 and to pipe effluent from the Poplar Avenue sewer plant there. Engineers have estimated the cost of the more sophisticated method at $38 million. The grant money would be used to defray that cost.

Faison said the city has pulled back its boundary lines of the area it would serve under the more sophisticated method to the city limits, and thus it includes no county territory.

Faison also emphasized that the city's main thrust at this point is trying to get approval from the state Department of Environmental Regulation to continue dumping effluent into Lake Monroe so that the more sophisticated method does not have to be used. If the state approves, the city plans to update and expand its sewer plant without going to landspreading, at a cost of about $28 million.

Herbalife Founder Defends Diet Product

Congressman: I've Heard Better Explanations From Snake Oil Salesmen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although he was accused of making less sense than a snake oil salesman, the founder of Herbalife told Congress his weight loss and health products company sells only "good, sound, basic nutrition."

In a sometimes stormy hearing Wednesday of the Senate's permanent subcommittee on investigations, Mark Hughes, 28, Herbalife's founder and president, defended his controversial company against charges made by a panel of nutrition experts that his products are useless, possibly dangerous and falsely advertised.

"If they're so expert in weight loss, why did they look so fat?" Hughes asked the subcommittee.

Hughes said that despite his ninth grade education and lack of formal nutrition training, "I think I am an authority" on losing weight.

Making his first appearance before a congressional committee, Hughes repeatedly assured senators his company's products are "good, sound basic nutrition" and are "not hurting people."

Hughes acknowledged that up to 40 percent of Herbalife's customers suffer (temporary side effects such as constipation, diarrhea and headaches but disputed reports that one or more deaths had been linked to use of company products.

Hughes came under the sharpest attack from Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., who asked if Hughes personally believes the quotes he uses in the Herbalife Career Book from people who have claimed that certain herbs used in company products help cure cancer, diabetes and other diseases.

"I don't know whether it (the product) does that or not," Hughes replied.

"But because some quack some place said that a particular herb might cure cancer — you thought it was all right as a responsible businessman (to print it)?" Rudman asked.

The senator scolded Hughes for giving "one of the most incredible explanations I have ever heard from anybody trying to sell even snake oil."

Report: Some People Carry AIDS For Years Without Knowing It

BOSTON (UPI) — Some people unknowingly carry the deadly AIDS virus more than five years, spreading it to others, government scientists reported Thursday.

The Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control, which studies infectious disease, tested 25 people who spread acquired immune deficiency syndrome to others through donated blood. It found some of them harbored the virus for as long as five years without knowing they were infected.

Because AIDS has only been recognized for about five years, there is no way to know how long it can live in the human body. Some viruses, such as herpes, live in a person for a lifetime.

The test was reported Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The findings indicate a person exposed to the virus who does not show symptoms of the disease for years still could infect someone else.

It also underscores the importance of blood donor screening tests now being implemented for AIDS, the often-fatal condition that cripples the body's defenses against disease.

"The important thing is the fact that the virus can be found in individuals over a long period of time without apparent symptoms," said Paul M. Feorino, chief of the CDC's virology section in the AIDS branch. "This is perfectly consistent with other viral infections," said Feorino, the report's primary author. "Some viruses, such as herpes, remain in a person's body for as long as they live."

"We conclude that infection with (the AIDS virus) may be persistent and asymptomatic for years," the report said.

Feorino said the report is not meant to scare people about the possibility of getting AIDS from blood transfusions. He said of the 3 million people who receive transfusions each year, fewer than 100 get AIDS.

"The point is not the problem with transfusions, but the fact that these individuals carried the virus for this length of time," he said in a telephone interview.

As of April 29, the CDC recorded 9,953 cases of AIDS in the United States, with the incidence of the disease increasing in all high-risk groups, such as homosexuals, intravenous drug abusers and hemophiliacs.

A total of 143 cases of AIDS has been reported in people with no risk factors who received blood transfusions. Another 71 people are believed to have contracted AIDS from a clotting factor required to treat their hemophilia.

Hemophiliacs are at high risk of the infection because the clotting factor they require is pooled from thousands of blood transfusions.

Developer Offers County Deal On Drainage Pond

A Sanford land developer, Bob McKee, has offered to help the county solve a drainage problem in the Airport Boulevard area near state Road 46 and to save the county more than $50,000 in the process.

McKee, building a warehouse park on land adjacent to the Academy Manor subdivision, has offered to build a retention pond on his property sufficient in size for not only drainage water from his development but also water from much of the nearby property in county territory, according to Paul Magnant, the county's drainage engineer.

Magnant said in exchange, McKee is asking the county to build turning lanes into his property on Airport Boulevard. Magnant estimated the cost to the county for building the turning lanes at $13,000 while the cost to the county of purchasing land and building its own retention is estimated at $65,000, giving the county more than $50,000 in savings.

McKee has also offered to provide additional right of way next to his property on Airport Boulevard for future widening of the highway.

Maintenance of the pond is to be a joint developer-county responsibility.

Magnant said construction on the road is slated to begin in early June. —Donna Estes

WE'LL PAY UP TO $150 FOR HOMES FEELING THE HEAT.

H.E.L.P. YOUR HOME. WITH HOME ENERGY LOSS PREVENTION.
Everyone loves the sun, except when it adds up to more cooling costs.

So FPL will pay you up to $150 to take the heat off your windows and glass doors with solar film, solar screens and certain awnings and shutters to protect your home from the sun.

We'll send an FPL energy specialist to your home, free of charge, to see how much H.E.L.P. your home needs.

You won't have to lift a finger, except to make a phone call or two.

Medical History On A Card

Soon people with Blue Cross and Blue Shield health insurance in Maryland will carry plastic cards with a life-saving memory.

The "Life Card" is the size and shape of a credit card. But instead of raised letters, giving name and identification number, it has a programmable area using laser technology similar to that used for video discs and compact audio discs.

The card can be encoded with up to 800 pages of information. The patient's medical record — doctors, treatments, hospitalizations, drugs — can be decoded by a computer, making the patient's entire case history available.

The card costs less than $2 to produce. The decoding equipment costs less than $1,000.

This card will revolutionize medical record-keeping. It will allow patients to carry their own medical histories in their wallets. The patient will give authorization to have his records read, preserving privacy. Currently, patients have no physical control over who reads their medical records kept in office files. The advantage for medical treatment is obvious: Physicians will have access to their patient's entire medical history.

The advantage to the insurer is also clear: Detailed hospitalization records and other billing records will be available at each office or hospital visit.

The potential for adapting record cards is great: Military dog tags, welfare records, criminal dossiers, employee records, education transcript could all be similarly encoded and carried by individuals.

The potential for abuse is also grave: Record cards could be used to violate the right of privacy, guaranteed by the Constitution. They could be used for blackmail. They could be used to create a police state.

Technology is the vector that best defines the progress of civilization. It cannot be halted. But its use must be guided and controlled by law. Personal records must be kept private, no matter whether they are printed on paper or inscribed by laser on plastic.

Aiding Racism

Racism has always been a way for demagogues to raise money in this country. White supremacists ask people who hate blacks to dig deep in their pockets for a donation to Ku Klux Klan. It's a big business, selling hatred.

Now Louis Farrakhan, leader of a splinter group of Black Muslims in Chicago, has found a new angle for raising money-foreign aid. He has gotten a $5 million loan from Libyan dictator Muammar Khadafy to bankroll a corporation called People Organized and Working for Economic Rebirth-POWER. The aim of POWER is to create a separate economic system for blacks. The loan is interest-free. There's no date to pay it back.

What a boon for Farrakhan, who hasn't gotten much publicity since the racist and anti-Semitic diatribes he made during Jesse Jackson's campaign last year. What a plus for Khadafy, an avowed enemy of the United States, who has been looking for a new sympathizer to help out ever since he gave money to Billy Carter.

There's nothing illegal about the loan, apparently. Just a helping hand from the America-hater in Libya to the black separatists in America. One product POWER will produce is certainly clean-soap.

Farrakhan should use it to wash out his mouth. And he might send Khadafy a batch of POWER cleanser to scrub terrorist victims' blood from his hands.

East Berlin: Testimony To Economic Failure

BERLIN — It would be difficult to conceive of a more striking demonstration of the bankruptcy of a system than the eastern part of the divided city.

It hits you almost immediately upon passing the Checkpoint Charley. It is not so much the physical desolation that prevails in the immediate neighborhood of the Wall. The cityscape of bricked-up, bombed-out shells of buildings is pretty much duplicated on the western side.

It is the sudden stillness of the East after the vibrancy of West Berlin.

In the post-victory divvying up of the defeated Reich's capital, the Soviets—and subsequently their East German proteges—drew the heart of old Berlin. It barely beats now.

There are trees again along Unter den Linden. But the onetime showplace boulevard is lined with nondescript structures that elsewhere might house plumbing supply firms and the like. Many are in fact the embassies of fraternal socialist countries. Traffic here is sparse to nil. You can stand in the middle of the road and take a photo—with plenty of time to focus and check the light reading—the length of the Blvd. Try that on the Champs Elysees or Fifth Ave.

A television transmission tower, with the obligatory elevated restaurant, now dominates the vast expanse that was old Berlin's Times Square and much more. The fountains and cafes draw people, but not crowds.

Visiting East Berlin is easy enough. It requires only a passport and the exchange, at the East German side of Charley, of 25 West German marks (about $81) for the same amount in East German currency.

The one-for-one exchange is a rip-off, with the going rate on the free currency market in West Berlin at one West for five East marks. But you nevertheless may have difficulty getting rid of your 25 East marks. Prices are very low, even at the one-for-one rate, there isn't much to buy and not much enthusiasm for selling.

At a sparsely populated cafe on the Unter den Linden, it was necessary to ask a waitress for service. That couldn't happen on the other side of the Wall. A slogan in the window proclaimed German-Soviet friendship to be a "matter of the heart" (Herzsache).

There's more to be bought in the "internaional shops"—but only for "valuta," hard currency from the West. It is the system found throughout the East Bloc and in Soviet dependencies elsewhere, a testimonial to economic failure.

Still, conditions are said to be improving in East Berlin. And East Berlin is said to be better off than the rest of East Germany, which is better off than the rest of the Soviet empire with the possible exception of Hungary.

I am told that by Berliners—West Berliners. But if this is the best, the rest must be bad indeed.

And if East Berliners have a sense of relative well-being, they keep it well hidden.

According to a version of a well-known joke supposedly current in East Berlin (it was told to me by a West Berliner), East German boss Erich Honecker returned from an official visit to Moscow to find the city empty.

Searching the silent streets, he could find no one. Finally, reaching the Wall, he found a note. You're probably ahead of me on this one, but I'll finish it anyway.

Erich: You are the last. Turn out the light when you leave."

Giving Up Industrial Power

Has the United States a future as a manufacturing nation?

Many businessmen may be surprised at that question. They undoubtedly would be more surprised to realize that there are people who would answer the question in the negative. It is something to think about in a very serious way.

INC Magazine featured an interview with David L. Birch, a researcher at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Mr. Birch believes that the United States is going out of the manufacturing business.

"What seems to be happening," he says, "is that world-wide we are working ourselves out of the manufacturing business and into the thinking business, out of hardware into the software...For roughly 150 years we have been a nation of makers of things. But that, too, seems to have run its course. As a nation we no longer make the goods we consume...Most of what we consume is made by somebody else. I don't say that somebody doesn't have to make things. They do. But it doesn't necessarily have to be Americans to do them."

I don't know of any statement, or series of statements, that ought to concern American businessmen more.

Mr. Birch and numerous other social thinkers find nothing disturbing in the prospect of America giving up the ghost as an industrial power.

To be sure, America has important services to sell—computer software, medical and technical services, insurance, etc. But the United States can't live by high tech or services alone. The people currently employed in textile plants, for instance, can't make a mass move to IBM or Xerox. We already have considerable unemployment in this country among people with a low level of skills.

It's imperative that our economic and social thinkers understand that we need a mix of business and industry.

It is naive to think that the world will let the United States possess all the "thinking business," to use Mr. Birch's term, while they grind out steel, wool products, and so forth. The Japanese and Europeans also intend to be in the "thinking business," and we better make sure that we have our share of manufacturing.

Mr. Birch holds that our skill at making things "seems somewhat limited." That isn't true. The entire world wants to fly in our jetliners. The world is also full of admiration for our space vehicles. We must be as skilled in making and selling hardware as we are in designing and marketing software. We need a new national awareness of the importance of making real products. That's where a prosperous future lies for our country.

Discotheque Disconcerting For Commissar

WASHINGTON — What's a poor commissar to do? In a complaint that could have been voiced by the parents of an American teenager or the mayor of River City, Iowa, the official Soviet army publication offers this hair-raising glimpse of decadence:

But in a garrison officers' club... you were hit in the face by the slovenly apparel — washed-out jeans held up by braces displayed over shirts; jumpers and sweaters tied around the hips. JEFFREY HART

Lincolnian Reagan

Someone has to call it, and though I am reluctant to do so, I will. Minority group spokesmen presume on their supposed victim status and presumed suffering to make statements that, if I made by anyone else, would be widely excoriated. In case of President Reagan's visit to the Bitburg military cemetery, this practice went far beyond the boundaries of minimal acceptability.

Mr. Reagan's own words, amidst the rhetorical storm were restrained and eloquent. "The final word has been spoken," he told a group of foreign journalists. "I think it is morally right to do what I am doing, and I am not going to change my mind about that."

The president has spoken solemnly of "the great reconciliation that has taken place" between the United States and West Germany, perhaps our staunchest NATO ally. He added: "All of those in that cemetery have long since met the supreme judge of right and wrong, and whatever punishment was needed has been rendered by one who is above us all."

Forty years after the defeat of Germany, I must say that I find those words Lincolnian, right up there with the "With malice toward none, with charity toward all" speech Lincoln addressed to the defeated South, which, after all, had run the concentration camps at Andersonville and elsewhere.

But what does Mr. Reagan get? He gets from Harold Washington, the black mayor of Chicago, this: "Mr. Reagan's insensitivity carries within it the seed of a new Holocaust."

That is an astonishing formulation, which would be ridiculed from coast to coast if Mr. Washington were not black. But since he is, he feels free to resort to rhetorical terrorism. What new Holocaust? There are plenty of them going on at the moment. In Afghanistan notably, and Mr. Reagan's "insensitivity" has nothing to do with them. Does Mayor Washington really think that the president's insensitivity, so called, has anything to do with the prospect of a new Jewish Holocaust? Of course not. He is merely a rhetorical desperado, excused because he is black.

One of my favorite pieces of minority group spokesman-terrorist comes from one Menachem Rosenhaft, founder of the International Network of Children of Jewish Holocaust Survivors. Mr. Rosenhaft called the Reagan visit to Bitburg a "calculated insult."

A "calculated" insult. One might imagine the scene. The president and his advisors and his PR people sit around a big table in the White House. The subject of the discussion is how they can "calculate" and insult to Mr. Rosenhaft's constituency. Several "calculated" insults are considered. The president rejects them as not insulting enough. Then someone says "Bitburg," Reagan says, "Let's run that up the flagpole and see how it plays." Mr. Rosenhaft, of the "calculated" insult phrase, may even believe something like that took place, but, if he does, he is, of course, nuts. Or, else, he is behaving as a privileged minority group rhetorical terrorist.

Another example. My friend and journalistic colleague Joseph Sobran has written several columns, gentle and sensitive, in support of the Reagan visit to Bitburg. Mr. Sobran is anything but an anti-Semite or Nazi, and, in fact, believes in severely restricted governmental powers.

And yet, more rhetorical terrorism, this time from a cartoonist published in the Albany Times Union. Mr. Hy Rosen chose to depict Mr. Sobran, whose column runs in that paper, in the uniform of an S.S. trooper.

The only thing to say to Messrs. Washington, Rosenhaft and Rosen, to cite only three examples, is "cut it out." Or, one might repeat the words of Joseph Welch at the Army McCarthy hearings: "if a you no decency?"

I suppose the answer is no. They have been so accustomed to rhetorical privilege that they can pass all civilized bounds. But the game is really up, and the shrieking privileges of such spokesmen really must come under critical condemnation.

Quick Test For V.D.

By Lidia Wasowicz
UPI Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Scientists have developed a half-hour test for detecting a sexually transmitted disease that strikes up to 10 million Americans each year and is a leading cause of infertility in women.

Because it is difficult to diagnose and in many cases causes no symptoms, the infection called Chlamydia trachomatis has been spreading more rapidly than gonorrhea and herpes — despite the fact it can easily be treated with antibiotics, doctors said.

Some 4.5 million to 10 million cases of chlamydial infections are reported each year in the United States, compared to 2 million to 3 million of gonorrhea and 200,000 to 500,000 of genital herpes.

Although it strikes members of both sexes, the disease seems particularly prevalent among sexually active teenage girls and pregnant women, said Dr. Julius Schachter, a researcher at the University of California, San Francisco.

Officials at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta said as many as 50,000 American women a year may be rendered infertile by the microorganism that infects and, if unchecked, scars mucous membranes.

"The infections can scar the fallopian tubes, leading to infertility and ectopic (outside the womb) pregnancies," said Dr. Donald Avoy, general manager of the Infectious Disease Diagnostic Division of Syva Co. of Palo Alto, developer of the new diagnostic test.

Half the babies born to infected mothers — or some 50,000 each year — suffer eye, ear and throat infections. Those who go untreated are at high risk for pneumonia.

If unchecked, chlamydia also can cause pelvic inflammatory disease, sterility and an eye infection called trachoma that has blinded 20 million people worldwide.

"Until now, the only method available to diagnose chlamydia utilized culture techniques, a time consuming and technically demanding procedure that requires at least 48-72 hours to complete," said Avoy, who is also director of medical affairs at Syva.

"The new technology now enables laboratories to determine whether patients have chlamydia within just 30 minutes upon receipt of the sample. Doctors have answers quicker, patients receive appropriate treatment earlier, preventing further spread."

The disease can easily be treated with tetracycline, he said.

The problem has been with detection since there are usually no symptoms and screening costs are high — $35 to $50, compared to $1 or $2 for a gonorrhea test. The new test cuts the cost in half.

California Attorney General (now governor) George Deukmejian had to issue a public statement that the league was not a terrorist organization as stated in a report he had issued.

THE PRICE IS RIGHT: Customs agents in southern Florida have been so busy seizing planes, boats and cars from drug smugglers that they haven't had time to sort out the booty. Let alone estimate what it's worth so they can sell it.

Newspapers Fighting Libel Charges With Countersuits

By Pam Ramsey
United Press International

In the face of spiraling court costs and multimillion-dollar jury awards, newspapers are using a new but potentially powerful weapon — the countersuit — against libel suits they consider frivolous.

The burden of the countersuit attack is falling mainly on the larger newspapers, which can better afford the costs of a court fight, and observers see the increased libel action as a continuing threat to small papers.

Lawyers who specialize in defending against libel charges believe most of them are without merit. These "nuisance suits" can drag on for years and cost the defendant hundreds of thousands of dollars in court costs alone.

"Seventy-five to 80 percent of all libel suits fall strictly into the category of nuisance suits," said Larry Worrell, president and general counsel for Media Professional Insurance in Kansas City, Mo., one of only four companies in the nation that provide libel insurance.

"There clearly is no basis for them," Worrell said. "Either the story is based on very accurate public records or it is non-defamatory."

Editors have always wanted to fight back, but their lawyers cautioned against fighting an uphill battle. They preferred, until lately, to concentrate on winning the suit first and recovering court costs later.

"It has always been difficult under American law to sue for malicious prosecution or abuse of process," said Bruce Sanford, a libel attorney with the firm of Baker & Hostetler in Washington, D.C.

"The difference now is that increasingly the news media is looking to open up different fronts in the war while the libel action is in process."

Practitioners are keeping a close watch on a precedent-setting case involving the Cincinnati

Post, which Sanford represents. The Post successfully filed a libel countersuit in California while the original suit was still in process in Ohio.

The Post's countersuit was filed in California because the plaintiff, Victor Nintio, currently lives there.

Nintio sued the Post in 1980, charging that the newspaper's stories about his ambulance company's performance during a Dec. 3, 1979 Cincinnati concert by the rock group the WHO were false and defamatory. Eleven people died during a stampede that occurred while concertgoers were rushing to get inside.

Judge Charles Jones of Los Angeles Superior Court ruled last December that the Post did not have to wait until it won its libel case before it filed the countersuit.

"Prior to the Cincinnati case, I know of no other case where the countersuit was permitted while the original libel action was in process," Sanford said.

Another pioneer in the use of countersuits has been The Charleston, W.Va., Gazette. Editor Don Marsh said his paper's aggressive reporting and strong editorial stands have made it a favorite target for libel suits.

Marsh said the Gazette has 15 libel suits currently pending against it. He is quick to note the newspaper has lost only one, and that was 35 years ago.

"The Gazette's policy is to countersue in cases that we consider picaresque," Marsh said.

Countersuits are looking more and more attractive because of the cost of litigating a libel suit, Sanford said.

"Libel costs are astronomical for two reasons," he said. "First, the scope of litigation is increasing due to the increasing vigor and sophistication of the plaintiffs and their lawyers. Also, judges are not dismissing as many prior to trial, so the cost is growing exponentially."

Ariel Sharon ... former Israeli defense minister lost his multi-million dollar suit against Time

Worrell agreed. "As a result," he said, "it will become the rule rather than the exception that the media will start to fight back."

The number of libel suits filed each year across the nation is difficult to determine.

"There are hundreds or thousands of cases. We have open files on several hundred cases — over the last several years, but I'm sure it's just the tip of the iceberg," said Henry Kaufman, general counsel of the Libel Defense Resource Center in New York City. The non-profit center serves as a media clearing house and research organization.

"I'm sure there are countersuits being brought all over the country. It's something people are trying to pursue with a little more vigor," Kaufman said.

The proliferation of libel suits has hit hardest at small-town newspapers, which depend on local advertising dollars to keep their operations going.

"Newspapers in small towns are very establishment-oriented and dependent on a lot of people because of advertising," Worrell said. "They do little investigative reporting any more because it's expensive and dangerous."

Sanford said the threat may also make reporters use a softer angle.

"If they want to do a story that has the potential for libel, that won't get them very far in the company," Sanford said. "So they opt for another kind of story that's softer."

"They tell you that Ryan O'Neal and Farrah Fawcett are getting married. Who cares about that? I don't care. They avoid the story on whether the police chief in their community is doing a good job, something that I and many other people care a great deal about."

Worrell said the result is that responsibility for investigative reporting is falling more and more on the larger newspapers and media conglomerates, which can better afford to risk a lawsuit.

"That's unfortunate, because oftentimes the potential subjects for investigative reporting don't involve things of national magnitude, so they simply aren't covered," Worrell said.

Prisons For Profit

Jails Are America's Newest Growth Industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Private firms building and operating prisons for profit constitute one of the nation's newest growth industries.

Proponents of "privatization" of prisons insist entrepreneurs do the job better than governments, but critics say profits have no place in the American system of justice.

Spurred by their success in operating prisons under government contracts, entrepreneurs are supplanting civil servants elsewhere in the criminal justice system.

Already involved in policing, private firms now want to take over the work of public defenders' and probation officers.

Politicians and bureaucrats, troubled by escalating costs of providing such services, are increasingly supportive of efforts by the private sector to take on tasks historically performed by governments.

The privatization of prisons is illustrative of the growing trend.

Citing serious problems in the nation's overcrowded prisons, entrepreneurs argue they can run them more efficiently than public agencies, and at less cost to taxpayers.

Jurisdictions where voters are reluctant to finance replacement of archaic prisons are prime targets of the corporate jailers.

The federal government already has turned to private firms to operate some detention centers in the Southwest for illegal aliens awaiting hearings or deportation.

Public-employee unions, as well as some prison officials, contend that it is improper for entrepreneurs to operate prisons, arguing that only government should be permitted to limit people's freedom.

Despite such opposition, proponents of prisons for profit hope to cash in on a nationwide boom similar to the one in hospital management in the 1970s.

For now, the big money is in the construction of prisons rather than the management of them.

America's prisons bulge with 440,000 inmates, more than 10 percent over capacity. Nearly 40 states and 155 counties are operating jails under the scrutiny of federal courts because of overcrowding. More than $5 billion dollars' worth of new prison construction is on drawing boards.

Jail marketers now offer lease-purchase schemes that permit government officials to sidestep voter approval and debt ceilings. Private entities finance, design and build prisons and then lease them back to government, which can then turn the key to open a new facility.

Perhaps the most controversial question involved in the privatization of prisons is whether anyone other than the state has the right to keep people behind bars.

The nation's first jail built, financed and operated by a private firm — Corrections Corporation of America — has been open for a year in Houston.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service considers it a bargain to pay the corporation $25.74 per inmate daily to detain illegal aliens awaiting deportation hearings.

Such success stories have prompted at least half the states to consider proposals from private firms to build and operate full-scale jails and prisons.

Perhaps the most formidable critic of prisons for profit is the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, about 50,000 of whose 1.1 million members are correctional employees.

"American business, with all the help the White House can give it, has invaded the corrections field," said Gerald W. McEntee, president of the union, which has headquarters in Washington.

"We're not talking Mickey Mouse outfits, either," McEntee said. "RCA is there, Control Data Corporation, Wackenhut. Wackenhut alone grossed $260 million on corrections last year."

McEntee said, "There's only one thing behind corporate America's sudden interest in prisons. Money. Profits. Suddenly corrections is not just part of the criminal justice system. It's a growth industry, a new profit center."

Private businesses, he said, "want to make money on the crimes of others."

Financial Disclosures Offer Rare Look Into Justices' Lives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Annual financial disclosure forms released by the Supreme Court offer a rare look into the personal lives of the members of the most secretive branch of government.

The personal wealth of the nine Supreme Court justices — three of whom could be millionaires — can be found in such diverse companies as Mary Kay Cosmetics, a cattle ranch and a modest savings and loan.

The justices rarely grant interviews, generally keeping their personal lives out of the news. But their fortunes are made public yearly when they release their financial disclosure forms.

Federal financial disclosure law requires that income and assets be listed only within a range of possible value. The annual statements, required by the Ethics in Government Act, also cover spouses and dependent children.

The justices' forms, released Wednesday, showed Lewis Powell was the richest court member, with assets between $2.6 million to $5.6 million for 1984. Thurgood Marshall was the poorest, with assets between just $5,000 to $15,000.

Two other justices have fortunes in the millions of dollars or close to it.

Sandra Day O'Connor reported assets between $976,000 to $2.2 million and Chief Justice Warren Burger reported assets between $665,000 to $1.27 million.

An associate justice was paid $100,600 in 1984. As chief justice, Burger made $104,700.

The forms offer a rare peek into the justices' private lives.

For example, Burger sold a plot of land on which he made between $15,000 to $50,000. He also received $5,000 for a speaking engagement and said he donated it to tax-exempt institutions.

However, the chief justice also received a $10,000 award from the Devitt Distinguished Service to Justice Award, which he does not list as having been passed along. Justice Byron White noted he was a member of the Devitt Distinguished Service to the Judiciary Award Committee.

The justices' 1985 disclosure forms, listing 1984 assets, show:

- Powell, 77, had total assets between $2.6 million and $5.6 million.
- O'Connor, 55, $976,000 to $2,200,000.
- Burger, 77, $665,000 to $1,270,000.
- Harry Blackmun, 76, $216,000 to $630,000.
- Rehnquist, 60, $169,000 to $470,000.
- White, 67, $60,000 to $200,000.
- William Brennan, 79, $56,000 to $180,000.
- John Paul Stevens, 65, $35,000 to $115,000.
- Marshall, 76, $5,000 to $15,000.

Official: U.S. Ready To Strike Terrorists First

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States is ready to make pre-emptive strikes against terrorists even if such attacks cause the loss of innocent lives, key Pentagon and State Department officials say.

Defense Undersecretary Fred Ikle, testifying Wednesday on the third day of hearings on terrorism, expressed the U.S. willingness to accept such losses because U.S. personnel overseas must be protected.

The Senate Foreign Relations and Judiciary committees conducted the hearings, and in earlier sessions heard testimony that drug traffickers are increasingly joining terrorists.

Robert Oakley, director of the State Department's Office of Counterterrorism and Emergency Planning, said

Wednesday he agreed fully with Ikle's views.

"There are going to be occasions when innocent lives are going to be taken," Oakley said.

Ikle told the senators the United States will resort to "anti-terrorism" and "counterterrorism" when necessary.

The first, he said, involves protecting U.S. overseas personnel and facilities against terrorist attack and the second calls for "offensive measures" by a military task force under a single command.

While the responsibility for dealing with terrorists rests on host governments, he said, the United States will act alone if necessary.

Ikle expressed the willingness to accept the death of innocent civilians in anti-terrorist operations under pressure from Sen.

Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., who said President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and other officials had conflicting views on the issue.

Citing Secretary of State George Shultz's statement last year that the anti-terrorist response "should go beyond passive defense to consider means of active prevention, preemption and retaliation," Eagleton asked whether official policy includes "endangering the lives of innocent people."

"There is a risk in every police action that innocent lives may be lost," Ikle replied, citing the bombing Monday by Philadelphia police of a radical black group's headquarters. A subsequent fire spread to about 60 homes.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., a retired Navy admiral who was shot down over Vietnam and held prisoner in North Vietnam for more than 7 years, defended the administration position by citing the nuclear bombing of Japan and the saturation bombing of German cities during World War II.

"We knew we were going to take terrible loss of life on our consciences," he said.

Panel: Military Should Take Larger Role In Drug Fight?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of a key House drug panel says there is "no question" the military role in drug enforcement needs to be expanded but stressed that role cannot include arrests, searches or seizures.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., made the comments after a two-hour, closed meeting Wednesday with members of his Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control and Defense Department representatives — including Lt. Gen. R. Dean Tice, director of the Pentagon's drug enforcement task force.

"There's no question in my mind (that an expanded military role is needed). Certainly, the Navy agrees with me," said Rangel, who requested the briefing in an April 16 letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Currently, the military has limited authority to cooperate with civilian drug enforcement agencies as long as its readiness is not compromised and the civilian agencies reimburse the government.

Several groups have called for a stepped-up military role in drug interdiction.

Opponents of such an increase, however, fear it could negatively affect military readiness and could be a threat to civil liberties.

Rangel stressed after Wednesday's meeting that whatever the military's expanded role, it would not include arrests, searches and seizures.

Alcohol May Help Reduce Heart Attacks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Moderate alcohol intake increases protein components in the blood thought important in reducing heart disease risk, but researchers say that's no reason to start drinking.

The Stanford University study of 24 non-smoking men supports previous research indicating that two drinks a day lessens the risk of atherosclerosis, the artery hardening disease that sets the stage for heart attack and stroke.

The blood components are called apolipoproteins A-I and A-II and recent research indicates high levels of them reduce the buildup of fatty materials on the inside walls of coronary arteries. The results of the Stanford study were reported in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

For six weeks, half the men in the Stanford study stopped their usual consumption of two or three drinks a day. Blood levels of these protein components were measured before the study started, after six weeks, and again five weeks after the men resumed their drinking habits. The rest of the men followed the same regimen, but in reverse.

After six weeks of abstinence from drinking, amounts of the protective proteins in the blood had decreased about 10 percent.

Sun Bank Holds Off Atlantic

By Chris Flater
Herald Sports Writer

Timely hitting and clutch pitching have enabled Sun Bank to hold on to first place since day one in the Sanford Little American League. Sun Bank got just enough of both Thursday afternoon as it rapped out 15 hits and survived a late comeback by Atlantic Bank for a 12-11 victory at Fort Mellon Park.

Sun Bank ran its unbeaten string to 12 straight for the season and remained well ahead of the rest of the pack in the Little American League.

Sun Bank jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the first when James Jackson led off with a triple and scored on Tony Duncan's single. Keith Armondi and Jeff Ingram both drew walks and Armondi scored on Derrick Taylor's single. Ingram scored the third run on a passed ball.

Atlantic Bank scored twice in the bottom of the inning off starter Al Perkins. The first three hitters drew walks and Anthony Duval drove two home with a single.

Sun Bank went on to build a 8-2 lead going into the bottom of the fourth. In the second, Duncan smacked an RBI double. Taylor singled and went around to score on a passed ball in the third while Ingram's two-run homer paved the way for a three-run fourth.

Duval slugged a solo homer in the bottom of the fourth to make it 8-3 but Sun Bank got two more in the fifth on Jackson's two-run blast for a 10-3 lead.

Atlantic Bank then made its move as it rallied for four runs in the bottom of the fifth to pull within 10-7. Two runs scored via an error while another scored on Keith Meyers' single.

Sun Bank came back with two runs in the top of the sixth for a 12-7 lead. Ingram reached on a fielder's choice and scored on Taylor's double and Taylor scored on a double off the bat of Lorenzo Polk.

Atlantic Bank didn't give in though as it scored four times in the bottom of the sixth. With one run across and two men on, Meyers unloaded a three-run homer that brought Atlantic back within a run, 12-11.

With one out, Steve Lowery drew a walk and Duval reached on a fielder's choice. A passed ball moved the runners to second and third still with just one out.

Jackson, the third pitcher of the game for Sun Bank, then reached back and struck out Johnell Brewington for the second out and got the next hitter to pop out to short for the final out, preserving Sun Bank's unbeaten record.

Taylor, who pitched a no-hitter for Sun Bank on Tuesday, was the hitting leader Thursday with a 4 for 4 performance that included two doubles. Jackson contributed a double, triple and homer while Duncan and Perkins added two hits each.

Meyers and Duval had two hits apiece for Atlantic Bank which had six hits in the game.

MEDCO DOWNS CHEVRON

In Little American League action at Bay Avenue Field, Medco Pharmacy shook off an early 3-0 deficit and rolled to a 17-7 rout of Dutch's Chevron.

Butch's took a 3-0 lead in the top of the first on a pair of bases-loaded walks and an error. After going scoreless in the first, Medco opened fire in the second and rallied for five runs. Adaryl Jones' RBI double and Floyd Henderson's run-scoring single led the way.

Medco added four more runs in the third with Andre Stokes' RBI single the big hit. But Butch's Chevron made it close in the top of the fifth when Jerry Tanner cracked a two-run homer to bring Butch's within 9-7.

Medco Pharmacy sewed up the win with eight runs in the bottom of the fifth. Stokes added another RBI single in the frame and Leroy Kitt slammed a run-scoring triple.

Floyd Henderson went the distance on the mound for Medco, scattering five hits and striking out eight. Henderson and Stokes had two hits each to lead the eight-hit Medco attack. Lakasota Kennon walked four times and scored four runs.

JEFF BLAKE sets up. The freshman QB's progress will determine how much Seminole throws the ball.

Will Seminole QBs Put It Up?

Will the dodo bird ever fly again? Not much chance, it's been extinct since the 17th century. Will Seminole High School quarterbacks put the football in a foreign area — up where the dodo birds used to fly?

Well, Seminole football fans have a much better chance of watching a passing team than the dodo bird does flying. But as most coaches theorize, throwing the ball on the high school level is not how you keep a head job.

As glamorous as the passing game is, Woody Hayes probably said the smartest thing in his career when he muttered, "Three things can happen when you pass and two of them are bad."

Still, it's fun to speculate. Heck, we aren't coaching. No one's going to fire us over a couple of interceptions. But wide receivers, who pretty much have taken the plight of the dodo birds during the past 10 years at Seminole High School, may come out of hibernation this fall under new head coach Dave Mosure.

Maybe, Mosure said he sees the talent in Jeff Blake, son of former Seminole assistant football coach Emory Blake and a freshman quarterback who seems to possess all the qualities to one day be a good one. But, realistically, Mosure also sees a young man jumping from freshman football to varsity football.

Blake, who is battling junior Darryl Taylor for the No. 1 job, should be a good quarterback some day and Mosure hopes that day will be this fall. He said Thursday, however, that Seminole will throw the ball. He also said that throwing the ball is not how a coach wins in high school football.

And that's the bottom line because Mosure wants to win. He also has the statistics to back up his theory and some statistics to gauge the progress of this year's throwers — Blake and Taylor.

"I'm wide open to whatever we develop," said Mosure about his offensive scheme. "I'm not opposed to throwing the ball. But anybody can say they're going to throw it. If you look at the final four football teams in the state the last 10 years, none of them was a throwing team."

"They all had bread-and-butter ground games. Every time you throw the ball and it's incomplete, you stop the clock. That gives the other team more time. We don't have any 9.5 speedsters to get behind the defense.

Sam Cook

HERALD
SPORTS EDITOR

"Everybody plays zone defenses now and they need just adequate speed. We don't have big linemen to protect the quarterback. If you throw the ball all the time, teams just sit back and eventually pick it off."

Mosure said in the last intrasquad scrimmage, Seminole ran 80 plays. It threw the ball 29 times. Six were off the quick series. Thirteen were rollouts and 10 were dropbacks. Of those 29 passes by Blake and Taylor, only six were completed.

"But a lot were dropped, too," pointed out Mosure. "None of our quarterbacks has the strength to come out and start winging the ball. Not many high school quarterbacks do."

"And, our receivers' routes aren't precise enough and their hands aren't sure enough yet."

Mosure said a summer of work could make a lot of difference, though. And, junior David Rape, sophomore Rod Alexander and sophomore Herbert Hillery could be the best group of receivers the school has had in 10 years.

Here's a look at the trio:

●Rape has good hands and moves. He displayed them on the junior varsity level. I remember one game his sophomore year when he undressed a Lake Brantley player with a nice zig zag which went for a big gainer. Rape, who will be a senior this fall, didn't play football last year which was a mistake. Some kind of conflict with spring baseball or something like that. Whatever, he's back, which is good for the Tribe.

●Henderson is one of the top sophomore basketball talents in Central Florida but he hasn't played much football. As he has proved many times on the hardwood, the 6-3 center has excellent hands. If the basketball is near him, he gets it. No doubt the same will be true of the football. Henderson could also benefit from the constant banging of football since he needs to be more aggressive on the hardwood.

●Hillery is the brother of SHS basketball great Deldre, who is now at Stetson. Herbert is a sophomore with 5-10 and 160-pound size. He had a good junior varsity season last year and he caught a 50-yard TD bomb from Blake in the last scrimmage the Tribe had.

Although all three are talented, Mosure said none is a disciplined receiver yet when it comes to running routes. In other words, they freelance too much. Running a correct route is probably one of the toughest things a receiver has to master. It's so tempting to just go to the open area. But as any good, disciplined quarterback will tell you — that isn't where the ball is going to be. It's going to be at the end of the route.

"All three have been inconsistent so far," said Mosure. "One day they look great and the next day not so great."

Tuesday's effort had Mosure bubbling. Wednesday's effort had him mumbling. "On Tuesday, Rape and Hillery threw some of the best downfield blocks I've seen since I've been here," said Mosure. "Wednesday, there were a lot of dropped passes."

Mosure doesn't quite know what to think about Henderson. He said he knows people think the sharp-shooting sophomore's future is in basketball but he is really encouraged about him as a football prospect. "That kid has a lot of talent," said Mosure. "We'll see how he progresses."

TEPEE TALK — The Seminoles lost a ton of running backs but Mosure said he is impressed with the work done by Willie Evans, Louis Brown, Eddie Banks, Dwayne Willis, Curtis Rudolph and Mike Levant.

Mosure was especially encouraged by Brown's desire. "Louis is a super athlete and good leader," he said. "Brown came out the first day after the track championship. If he had come up to me asked for time off, I'd understand."

"But he wanted to come in and learn what he had missed. That typifies their attitude."

'Gades Take Aim At Falling Stars

ORLANDO (UPI) — Some- where between Philadelphia and Baltimore, the Stars have lost their offensive lustre.

The USFL's defending champions enter Friday's 8 p.m. EDT game against Orlando occupying 10th place in the Eastern Conference with a 5-6-1 mark. Coach Jim Mora doesn't need a compass to determine which direction Baltimore's problems have been coming from.

By far our biggest drawback has been our inability to score touchdowns," said Mora, whose club moved from Philadelphia to Baltimore after that championship season. "We have just 22 TDs all year and that's far below our stats from a year ago. Offensively, we've done a decent job. We just can't score."

Considering the Stars are averaging a mere 17 points per game, their defense has played with distinction all season. That doesn't figure to be tested by the Renegades' 3-9, the only Eastern team with less firepower from Baltimore.

Lee Corso's been doing a very good job with Orlando," Mora said. "Reggie Collier has done an excellent job of getting rid of the ball without a sack and he's an excellent runner so you can't just pin your ears back and rush him."

The Stars, who have won just one game in their conference all year (a home triumph over New Jersey), dropped a typical 10-3 decision to the Generals last week. The Renegades come off a 21-20 triumph over San Antonio Monday night, giving them just two full days to prepare.

"We will be ready to play and I think our players will do better with the short work week rather than a long layoff, especially after a win," Corso said. "The Stars play sound basic defense without a lot of tricks and blitzes."

Prince Primed For Preakness

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Trainer John Lenzini, considering the draw that put Eternal Prince in the fourth post position for Saturday's Preakness, is worried about an unwanted repeat of his colt's disastrous start in the Kentucky Derby.

Perhaps the best pure speed horse in the 11-colt field, Lenzini said Eternal Prince must leave the gate strongly if he is to be a threat in the second jewel of the Triple Crown.

"I can't look for his breaking badly," the trainer said. "If he doesn't break well, he could find himself boxed in."

"If we can dictate the pace, we can make the race," he added.

Chief's Crown, a steady pace horse considered the class of the field, was installed as an 8-5 favorite and will break from post position three, side-by-side with Eternal Prince, the top contender with 5-2 odds.

The adjacent post positions magnify what is shaping up to be a duel between the two horses.

If any disadvantage can be found in the side-by-side draw for the favorites, it goes to the Florida-bred Eternal Prince, a colt that is known to be fidgety in the gate. Lenzini said he was hoping for an outside position so the colt would not have to wait long in the gate and get bottled up in the inside in the event of a poor start.

Eternal Prince, the winner of the Wood Memorial and Gotham Stakes, broke from the gate poorly in the Kentucky Derby and never came close to the wire-to-wire winner, Spend A Buck.

Spend A Buck's owner decided to pass up the Preakness in favor of running for a possible $2.6 million purse in the May 27 Jersey Derby.

Kentucky-bred Chief's Crown, a versatile colt with the capability to run either a speed or a pace race, should be comfortable from the third position in the $545,700 race.

The coveted first position went to 30-1 longshot Southern Sultan, a maiden.

The 11th position went to 15-1 Haff's Treasure, the winner of the California Derby. Owner Stan Hodge, minimizing the importance of the draw, said, "I don't particularly prefer it — I was hoping for a position between five and nine — but the colt can run from anywhere."

The field, jockeys and morning line from the rail out are: Southern Sultan, James Terry, 30-1; Tajawa, P.J. Cooksey, 20-1; Chief's Crown, Donald MacBeth, 8-5; Eternal Prince, Chris McCarron, 5-2; 1 Am The Gate, Donald Miller, 20-1; Tank's Prospect, Pat Day, 6-1; Sport Jet, Ron Allen, 20-1; Cutlass Reality, Vincent Bracciale, 20-1; Sparrowson, Wayne Barnett, 15-1; Skip Trial, Christopher Antley, 10-1; and Haff's Treasure, Joe Justice, 15-1.

Meanwhile, Eternal Prince blazed through three furlongs Thursday morning in fractions of 12.22-35, and 33-45, gearing up for Saturday's 1.3-16 mile race.

The colt showed no ill effects from an infection under the shoe on the left front foot that was treated Tuesday.

Renegade lineman Kevin Kellin puts the heat on Memphis' Walter Lewis.

Murray, Weather Help O's

CHICAGO (UPI) — The weatherman, usually a factor early in the baseball season, keeps getting knocked out of the box in 1985.

After six weeks the weatherman has yet to produce a rainout in the big leagues, though Thursday night he came close. Eddie Murray's RBI double snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning and Mike Boddicker hurled a four-hitter to give the Baltimore Orioles a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox in a game shortened to six innings by rain.

"I think the conditions, considering it rained during the game, were just too bad to play," said Baltimore manager Joe Altobelli. "They gave it a shot."

Sox manager Tony LaRussa also had no quarrel with the decision by umpire Larry Barnett to call the game.

"I was going to give him a pat on the back (for trying)," LaRussa said. "He waited an hour and a half. He only had to wait an hour."

Fred Lynn added a RBI single in the sixth off Floyd Bannister, 2-4, to snap the Sox' five game-winning streak and end a Baltimore four-game losing streak.

Boddicker, 6-1, struck out one and walked none as he improved his career record to 5-0 against Chicago. The only run he permitted was a leadoff homer by Oscar Gamble that tied the game at 1-1 in the fifth.

"We'll take it," Boddicker said. "I know I was out of the game if they started again. It would have been up to Sammy Stewart."

The Orioles came back in the sixth when Cal Ripken led off with a double and scored on Murray's double. Both hits went down the leftfield line.

After Gary Roenicke became Bannister's 10th strikeout victim, Lynn followed with a single to right, scoring Murray.

The Orioles had grabbed a 1-0 lead in the third on catcher Carlton Fisk's throwing error on a third strike. With two out, Lee Lacy walked and went to second on Dan Ford's single. Ripken struck out but Fisk, who could not hold on to the pitch in the dirt, threw wildly to first allowing Lacy to score from second.

Yankees 6, Rangers 5

At New York, Dave Winfield's bases-loaded grounder scored pinch-runner Rickey Henderson with two out in the ninth inning, lifting the Yankees in Doug Rader's final game as Texas manager. Rader was fired and replaced by New York Mets third base coach Bobby Valentine.

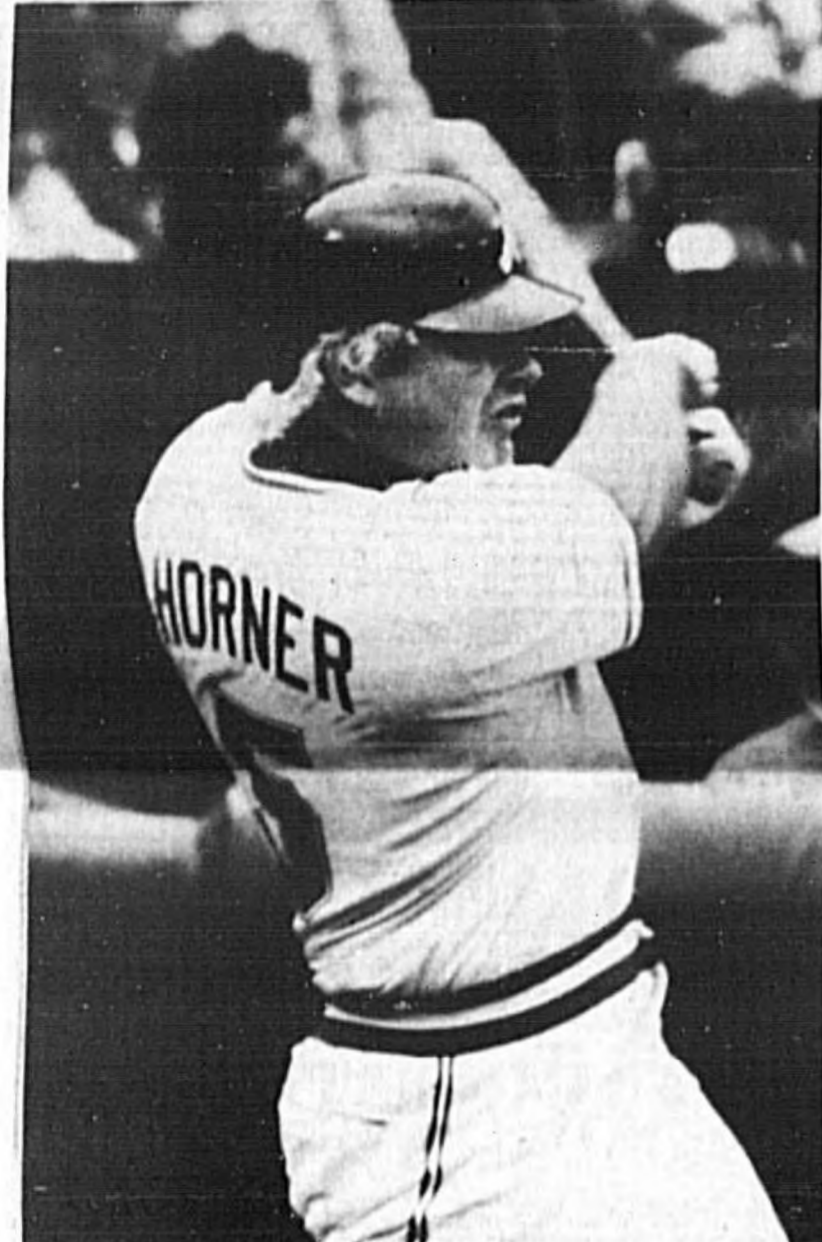

Royals 7, Indians 1

In Cleveland, Willie Wilson led off the game with a home run and George Brett added another homer in the first inning to power the Royals. Bud Black, 3-3, pitched a six-hitter to give the Royals their fifth straight victory. Cleveland lost its third consecutive game.

Twins 7, Tigers 5

At Minneapolis, Tom Brunansky belted a two-run homer and Kirby Puckett drove in three runs to lift the Twins. Ken Schrom, 3-2, gave up eight hits, walked one and struck out three in eight-plus innings. Ron Davis got the last three outs for his fifth save.

Braves Beat Up On Sore-Armed Phils

After a 400-foot out, Atlanta's Bob Horner lashed an RBI single in the Braves' victory over Philadelphia Thursday. Atlanta swept the Phillies in their two-game set.

Astros Down Mets, 1-0, On Just Two Hits

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Atlanta Braves only regret at the moment is that the injury-riddled Philadelphia pitching staff was only in town for two nights.

After being held to only two runs in 6 1/2 innings by the New York Mets and Montreal Expos, the Braves have scored nine runs in their last 10 innings and team captain Bob Horner is convinced that scoring slump is over.

"Now balls that were being caught are getting through for base hits," said Horner after the Braves pounded out 11 hits Thursday night in their 6-3 win over the Phillies. "We had been hitting the ball hard, even when we weren't scoring. We figured things would start going our way. Different people are starting to help out."

Horner, batting only .218 at gametime, hit a 400-foot out to centerfield his first time up Thursday night, then had an RBI single and a vicious run-scoring drive through shotstop that was called an error his last two times up.

"I feel like I've hit the ball well for three or four weeks, but for some reason not getting hits," said Horner. "But what we need are runs, so if I can drive them in, I don't care what they call it."

Outfielder Terry Harper, who went 3-for-4 Thursday night, said the Braves are starting to believe again because they finally began to relax.

"When we were having so much trouble scoring (they tied a major league record last Sunday when they were shut out for the fourth game in a row), everybody was pressing," said Harper. "Everybody was trying to do too much. We were looking for something bad to happen."

"It feels to get back on the win track," said Harper, after the Braves won for the third time in their last four games. "When you are going good and something bad happens, it doesn't affect you as much as when you are struggling."

The Braves' 11 hits were their most in any game in May and after they broke a 3-3 tie with three runs in the seventh inning. Bruce Sutter came on to pitch two hitless innings and earn his sixth save.

"Relief pitching is a situation where you are always pitching too much or not enough," said Sutter, who got the win Wednesday night when the Braves tied the score with a two-run ninth and then beat the Phillies 3-2 in 10 innings. "But I've pitched as much as eight games in a row, so I'm ready whenever they need me."

N.L. Baseball

"He actually pulled it on the second pitch to Kominick," said Phillies manager John Felske. "He should have told me then. This was an injury we really couldn't afford. We already had too many pitchers out. We can't go with a four-man rotation. We'll have to call up somebody to help us."

Philadelphia used four relief pitchers, but the only one who didn't give up a run was Kent Tekulve who held the Braves to one hit over the last 1 2/3 innings. The Braves got their three runs in the seventh inning off Larry Andersen, who took over in the bottom of the sixth after the Phillies scored twice in the top of that inning to tie the score.

"Our bullpen has been struggling because all the injuries have forced us to call on it too much," said Felske. Tekulve can go for two innings, but more than that has a tendency to bother him."

The Braves gave rookie lefthander Zane Smith his first start Thursday night, after 13 relief appearances. Smith struck out the last three batters he faced in the top of the fourth, but was lifted for a pinch batter in the bottom of the fourth when the Braves had the bases loaded with only one out and the score tied 1-1.

Astros 1, Mets 0

At Houston, Mike Scott, 2-1, scattered five hits and struck out five over 8 2/3 innings and Jose Cruz doubled in a run to lead Houston. Dave Smith notched his first save. New York's Sid Fernandez, 1-1, worked seven innings, yielding two hits, striking out six and walking two. Since being called up from the minors, Fernandez has given up only three hits in two games.

Reds 4, Expos 2

At Montreal, Tom Foley tripled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and Dave Parker hit a two-run homer to power Cincinnati. Jay Tibbs worked 6 2/3 innings while yielding six hits and six walks to raise his record to 3-5. Tom Hume earned his first save. Bill Gullickson, 4-4, took the loss, Montreal's fourth straight.

Sanford's Tim Raines was 1 for 2 with his fifth triple of the season. The Montreal left fielder now leads the National League in triples and raised his batting average to .255.

Indy 500 Fans Won't Let Cogan Forget '82 Disaster

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Some malcontent fans just won't let Kevin Cogan forget the disastrous 1982 Indianapolis 500 start in which he put the cars of race favorite Mario Andretti and three others out of commission.

The official report is that as the field

Auto Racing

neared the starting line, Cogan veered into A.J. Foyt from the middle of the front row, bounced to the left, was hit by Andretti and caromed into the outside wall.

As a direct result of the front-line smashups, two cars in the last third of the 33-car field driven by Dale Whittington and Roger Mears, swerved to avoid the confused congestion and tangled. Those two, plus Andretti and Cogan were forced out of the race by extensive damage to their cars.

Foyt's car was repaired in the pits and he managed to finish 19th after a third-place start. He blamed Cogan's inexperience as a front-liner for the accidents.

Underdog Denver Keeps Fighting

United Press International

The battle between Danny Schayes of Denver and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles is a smaller version of the one between the Nuggets and the Lakers for the Western Conference title.

Schayes, a third-string center, and the Nuggets are both out-matched but neither is backing down.

Abdul-Jabbar awaited word from the league Thursday on whether he would be punished further for grabbing Schayes in a headlock and wrestling him to the floor in Game 2 Tuesday night.

The altercation was Abdul-Jabbar's second technical foul and resulted in his ejection and an automatic $250 fine. The Nuggets went on to win 136-114 and even the best-of-seven series 1-1. Game 3 is Friday night in Denver.

"I didn't even expect to go in and then out of nowhere it gets to be a big deal," Schayes said. "I don't even know if I'll get in Friday, but I'll try to be physical and it's up to him (Abdul-Jabbar) to decide how he wants to handle it."

Basketball

"I won't give my side of it beyond saying it was a rather stupid incident," Abdul-Jabbar said. "My side of it's never been listened to and it won't be listened to now because I won't give it."

CELTICS GO FOR 3RD

In the Eastern Conference final, the Boston Celtics lead the 76ers 2-0 with Games 3 and 4 at Philadelphia Saturday and Sunday.

Moses Malone, the 76er center, has just 5 offensive rebounds in the series. Whenever the ball swings to Malone in the low post, Boston center Robert Parish is behind him with Danny Ainge double-teaming.

"Moses, for the most part, has been surrounded," Parish said. "Without all the help, I'd have to front him. In single coverage, you have to try to deny him the ball because if Moses gets the ball in the lane, he'll just hulk his way towards the basket and either end up drawing a foul or putting in a layup."

Rader Out, Valentine In

By MILTON RICHMAN
 UPI Senior Editor-Sports

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bobby Valentine knows it's going to be all uphill, and he's ready.

Valentine is the new manager of the last-place Texas Rangers, replacing Doug Rader, who was fired Thursday.

"Managing a major league club is something I've always wanted to do, and I think I'm prepared to do it," said Valentine, who until Thursday was the New York Mets' third base coach.

Valentine, who has not managed in the majors or minors, agreed to a three-year contract following a meeting in Houston with Rangers Board Chairman Eddie Giles, President Mike Stone and General Manager Tom Grieve.

At 35, Valentine becomes the youngest manager in the big leagues. He will take over the Rangers tonight in Chicago for the start of a three-game series with the White Sox.

"The move was made at this time in an attempt to improve the performance of the ballclub, which we believe to be much better than its current record," said Stone.

Gardening

Winter Or Summer, Crape Myrtles Add Charm To Landscape

Crape myrtles are one of the most beautiful small trees or large shrubs you can plant in your landscape. Its ease of propagation, long blooming period and ability to grow under nearly every soil condition make it a widely used and greatly admired ornamental.

The flowering season for crape myrtle usually begins in June or July, and continues until autumn. Each long cluster of flowers is composed of hundreds of one- to two-inch, red, pink, white, lavender, or purple flowers. The leaves are often reddish tinged in the spring, glossy dark green in the summer, and dull to intense yellow, orange or red in the autumn.

When the leaves fall in the winter, the crape myrtle becomes a living sculpture. The trunk and branches have an attractively gnarled, twisted character with smooth bark varying in color from light straw to rich deep brown. Patches of bark flake off in early summer to reveal new bark ranging in color from light pink to pale green.

Crape myrtles are very versatile in the landscape. Single-trunked or multi-trunked specimens make ideal small shade trees for a sunny deck, terrace, or entrance walkway. Multi-trunked plants can be used as a visual barrier, a specimen in the garden, or a dominant landscape feature when planted singly or in groups. Semi-dwarf and dwarf types are suitable for foundation plantings, used in containers, or even as larger ground covers. Avoid planting crape myrtles near swimming pools as the spent flowers do fall!

Occasional pruning may be required to maintain desired size and form. Suckers appearing from the base of single-trunked specimens should be removed, too. Background planting of evergreen shrubs or trees may be used to further emphasize the floral spectacle of the crape myrtles.

Crape myrtles are available in many flower colors and plant heights. Plant height is categorized as dwarf (less than 3 feet), semi-dwarf (3-6 feet), medium (6-12 feet), and tall (greater than 12 feet). There is a patented, miniature weeping form that is great for use as bonsai or in hanging baskets.

Crape myrtles should be planted in an area that receives full sun most of the day. Otherwise, a weak spindly plant with few flowers can be expected. Plants growing in shady areas will be plagued by plant diseases, such as powdery mildew, also.

Crape myrtles tolerate a wide range of soil types, but grow best in a heavy loam that is slightly acidic with a pH of 5.0 to 6.5. Nutrient requirements are minimal. High fertility levels produce excessive vegetative growth and fewer clusters. Applications of 6-6-6 or 8-8-8 fertilizer in early spring at the rate of 1 to 2 pounds per 100 square feet of planting bed may be good for established plants, especially those growing on poor soils. Mulches of pine bark or hardwood chips will help retain moisture and keep the soil temperature steady during the summer.

Heavy pruning must be done each winter, if large specimen-type blooms are desired. However, one of the most fascinating aspects of the crape myrtle is its unusual plant form. When you destroy this form by severe pruning, then the blooms will be all that remains for you to enjoy. By a selective method of pruning, the unusual, sculptured form, flowers, and colorful foliage will make it a plant with year-round charm. Frequently, crape myrtles are attacked by aphids and whiteflies. Aphids are small, green-colored lice-like insects that suck the sap and cause small, malformed leaves. Both the aphids and the whiteflies excrete a honeydew material on which a black, sooty mold fungus lives. Both aphids and whiteflies can be controlled by spraying with an appropriate insecticide.

Powdery mildew is a common disease of crape myrtles, especially when it is grown in a damp, shaded area. This fungus disease causes the plants to be unsightly, but can cause some foliage drop and actual death of severely infested stems. You can control it by spraying with appropriate fungicide, or planting resistant varieties. Both fungicides and insecticides are available at your favorite garden supply shop.

What beautiful landscapes we would enjoy if we all would plant at least one crape myrtle. Container-grown specimens can be planted anytime. Ask about them at your favorite nursery or garden supply center.

Happy Gardening!

'Classmates Only' Reunion Disturbing Homefront Unity

DEAR ABBY: This has become a hot issue in our home. What do you think of a "classmates only" party for a 20-year high-school reunion?

I am on the planning committee that decided the first night should be for classmates only, and the second night a lovely dinner dance with spouses. All 18 members of the committee voted in favor of the idea.

Abby, we figured that the first night we would all be so excited to see each other after 20 years, our spouses would be too bored (or jealous) to enjoy themselves anyway.

We are not just-hungry — we are friend-hungry — and after 20 years, don't you think we classmates deserve one evening together without our spouses? My husband is furious.

GRANT HIGH GRAD.

Dear Abby

PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR GRANT HIGH GRAD: I can understand your husband's resentment, but since the planning committee voted unanimously for a "classmates only" party, the excluded spouses can unite for a "get even" party and have even a better time than the Grant grads. Take nothing for granted.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is marrying a girl whose parents are putting on the wedding. The bride's mother told me that we could invite 100 people to the wedding, so I made up a list and sent it to her. (We live in the same town.) She sent the list back with some of the names crossed off! She crossed off my daughter and her husband because she didn't like them. Abby, my daughter is just as dear to me as my son who is being married.

When I was told that we could invite 100 guests, I didn't think they had to be approved by the bride's mother.

Please tell me how to handle this. I don't want to make a fuss, but I can't allow our daughter and son-in-law to be snubbed this way.

HEARTBROKEN PARENTS

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: If you haven't spoken to your son and his fiancée about this, do so. The bride's mother has no right to cross anyone off your list. If your son and his fiancée can't persuade this unreasonable woman to include your daughter and son-in-law, it's up to you and your husband to insist upon it. Please be gentle with her. She sounds disturbed.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to the 99-pound woman who wanted to be a blood donor, all blood-collecting organizations have agreed on basic health requirements for blood donors, and one of these is that a donor must weigh 110 or more to donate a pint of blood.

The amount of blood a person has in his body is directly proportional to his size, and one pint of blood represents over 13 percent of the total blood volume in a person weighing less than 110 pounds. Removing this much blood in a very short time (5-10 minutes) may well cause the donor to have a serious reaction. It is for the protection of the donor that this rule was established.

As you pointed out, it is not possible to "build up a blood bank" for one's family. Red blood cells last only 35 days; platelets, which are necessary for blood clotting, last only seven days; and plasma, when frozen, is usable for only one year.

People who are concerned about their family's future needs should help the American Red Cross by donating blood and, in addition, by recruiting family members, friends and fellow workers to become regular blood donors to ensure that there is always a safe and adequate blood supply available for all patients who need it.

Colitis A Tricky Disease; Spastic Colons A Bother

DEAR DR. GOTT — What's the difference between colitis and a spastic colon? How are they treated?

DEAR READER — Colitis means inflammation of the colon, the large intestine. It is a tricky disease and is often difficult to treat. There are myriad causes, some of which are quite serious. Colitis requires meticulous diagnosis and careful medical supervision.

Spastic colon, on the other hand, is more of a nuisance than a disease. It is caused by unexplained contractions — spasms — of the intestine's muscular walls. The spasms may result from excessive nervous stimulation arising in the brain. For example, some people develop diarrhea when under stress. For certain individuals, this seems to be an unpleasant but eventually predictable reaction. Anti-spasmodics, psychological counseling, biofeedback and meditation are methods by which spastic colon can be treated, and sometimes cured.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it true that lactase deficiency is actually normal — that humans aren't meant to eat dairy products after they've been weaned?

DEAR READER — I don't know whether humans "aren't meant" by nature to eat dairy products. Maybe we're not meant to eat oysters, snails or chocolate pudding, either. But we do.

Actually, we seem to have a reliable ability to digest almost anything, iron and calcium included. Part of this ability is due to a remarkable process called "enzyme induction."

In order to digest lactose — the sugar in milk — we need a chemical called lactase. Babies don't have it. They are really only equipped to digest mother's milk, not cow's milk.

However, when infants are fed cows' milk, their intestines get the message after a while and begin producing the appropriate enzyme. In general, as long as humans continue to consume cow's milk, they continue to produce lactase for digestion.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
What does it mean when you suddenly jump-raise your partner's suit after you have bid two suits of your own?
Certainly you have a good hand. Although you should be short in the unbid suit, your bid might be interpreted as asking for a control in that unbid suit for partner to bid six. Or it could be asking if partner had good cards in his suit, enough strength so that the opponents would not be likely to take two tricks in the agreed-upon suit.
In today's hand, whatever North intended by jumping to five spades, South had the answer. He had the heart ace, and his six spades to the A-Q constituted a good strong trump holding. So he bid the small slam. The right play to make the slam required that declarer restrain his avariciousness.

Certainly seven might be made if the spade king were onside with the suit splitting. But seven is not the contract. Here it is right for declarer to first play the ace of spades. He cannot afford to have West win the spade queen with the singleton king, since East will then make a further trump trick.
Although in the current deal, North-South have nine trumps between them, it is frequently right to lay down the ace first, even when there are only eight trumps in the combined hands.
Needless to say, after laying down the ace, if the king does not appear, declarer will go to dummy to lead up to the spade queen.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...
YOUR BIRTHDAY MAY 16, 1985
In the year ahead you will have your fair share of opportunities. However, you may treat some of your promising situations more casually than you should.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is one of those days where people who promise a lot are apt to deliver little. It will be the quiet guy with the low profile upon whom you can rely. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you feel you are being taken advantage of today, the blame could be partially yours. Don't put yourself in a position where others can use you.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Assume personal control of important affairs today instead of merely hoping everything will take care of itself. This way you won't end up on the rocks.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Words without actions will count for nothing today. Rather than boasting about your intentions, step out and do them.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep pace with your duties and responsibilities today because if you fall behind now, you'll have a difficult time catching up. Do the nastiest chores first.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your self-discipline could be a trifle lax today and your resolutions and good intentions could go by the boards. Don't be self-indulgent.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The least you can do is listen politely to those who are interested in your welfare when they offer you advice and suggestions today. Much of what they say could be helpful.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you are apt to be far better at issuing orders than complying with them. Set a good example if you expect others to do what you demand.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You don't have to spend a lot of money to have a good time today. But you might kid yourself into thinking this is true, much to the dismay of your wallet.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your opinions may be far more important to you today than they will be to listeners. Try not to be overawed by the sound of your own voice.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Many times your hunches are remarkably on target, but this might not be the case today. Let your logic take precedence over your intuition.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's good to be optimistic but keep your expectations within reasonable bounds. Don't expect grandiose returns in situations where chance is the primary ingredient.

Budget Shifts To Taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The ink on the House Budget Committee's plan to cut the deficit by about $56 billion is barely dry and the battle already is forming over whether new corporate taxes should be added.

On an almost strictly party line vote of 21-12, the Democrat-controlled committee Thursday approved the spending plan, which sponsors said would cut $56.2 billion from the more than $200 billion deficit without raising taxes.

Unlike the recently passed Senate budget, it would not freeze Social Security cost-of-living adjustments but would freeze defense spending. The Senate plan would give the Pentagon an inflation adjustment and also would end 13 federal programs — nearly all of which would continue in the House budget.

FLORIDA

IN BRIEF

Final House Vote Today On Raising Drinking Age

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — A final vote is expected today in the House on a bill that would raise the legal drinking age in Florida from 19 to 21.

In action Thursday, the House watered down an amendment to the drinking age bill that would have prohibited discrimination based on race, sex or creed by private clubs.

Rep. Fran Carlton, D-Orlando, sponsor of the drinking age bill, succeeded in striking a committee amendment that would have delayed implementation of the higher age until after Oct. 1, 1986 — the date Congress will begin denying federal highway money to states that sanction drinking by persons younger than age 21.

It was that threat — which Carlton said would mean a loss to the state of $81 million over two years — that brought Carlton's bill (CS-HB 54) to the House floor for the first time since she introduced the measure in 1977.

Committee members defeated an effort to delay implementation of the higher drinking age to allow the courts to decide the legality of the federal threat. Instead, they voted 62-51 to accept a Carlton substitute amendment that would raise the age in two installments — to age 20 on Sept. 30, 1985 and to 21 on Sept. 30, 1986.

Florida Is Slowly Dissolving

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — The state of Florida is bobbing like a cork in water, researchers say, because part of it is dissolving, causing the rest of the state to rise as the weight of the state lessens.

"The state has risen 164 feet in the last one and one-half million years, a phenomenally short period in geologic time," Neil D. Opdyke, chairman of geology at the University of Florida, said Thursday.

"The basic principle behind the rising of Florida is that the crust of the earth is floating on a partially molten mantle. If you unload some of the weight of that crust, it is going to spring upward because it is lighter," said R.C. Lindquist, assistant professor of geology.

As the limestone beneath most of Florida slowly dissolves, Lindquist explained, the whole land mass becomes lighter. The remaining crust of the earth bobs upward, floating on the partially liquid mantle like a ship.

Malpractice Award Quashed

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The Florida Supreme Court has quashed the biggest medical malpractice judgment in state history.

A 27-year-old woman who suffered brain damage, lost vision in one eye and had her broken leg refractured while recovering from a 1980 automobile accident at the Florida Medical Center in Broward County had won the $12.47 million judgment.

The state Patient's Compensation Fund, which used to underwrite hospitals for malpractice damages in excess of their insurance, had appealed the verdict on grounds that a magazine article designed to stir sympathy in nurses had been improperly submitted to a jury.

The justices ordered a new trial in the case of Susan Ann Von Stelina, who the court said will require lifetime nursing care because of injuries she suffered at the Broward County hospital.

"The jury system should not function on emotion, but on logic," said the unsigned opinion. "The introduction of this highly emotional, irrelevant document must have colored the jury's approach to the evidence."

Return To Sender

Florida Banishes One Offender, Gets Another

MIAMI (UPI) — A judge ordered a sex offender shipped to Miami by a California police chief "returned to sender," but not before Florida got a convicted thief from Kentucky in another case of criminal dumping.

Weston J. Hill, a diagnosed schizophrenic and habitual sex offender, was ordered sent back to California by Circuit Judge Calvin Mapp because "that's where he belongs."

"We're sending him back whether he's competent or not," Mapp said Thursday, adding Hill would be given a one-way plane ticket to Santa Monica within 10 days.

"That's the best news I've had all day," said Mayor Maurice Ferre, who recently urged the City Commission to sue Santa Monica for "dumping" Hill on Miami.

Santa Monica Police Chief James Keane, saying "we owed Florida one," admitted sending Hill to Miami on March 19 in retaliation for a judge in Fort Lauderdale banishing a prostitute to Los Angeles in 1982.

Both Mapp and Keane insisted Hill was making the transcontinental trips "voluntarily."

Hill got in trouble soon after landing in Miami. First he was arrested for dropping his fishnet undershorts in public. Several weeks later, Miami Beach police arrested Hill for throwing rocks through a church window and sent him to a mental hospital.

Keane said he was retaliating because a Florida judge in 1982 gave Melanie King, who had been arrested 47 times for prostitution, a choice between prison or a one-way ticket to Los Angeles.

King went to California and wound up in a Santa Monica courtroom on charges of prostitution and lewd conduct. She was released Thursday after serving 90 days in jail.

Miami Beach police accused Kentucky officials of "dumping" suspected car thief Juan Duran on them after he served a few months of a one-year sentence for receiving stolen property, theft by deception, and having a stolen auto tag.

Duran, 27, was wanted by Osceola, Fla., police on auto theft charges when he was arrested in Louisville, Ky. last Nov. 2, but Florida officials said they would wait until he finished his Kentucky jail sentence before seeking extradition.

In April, however, Louisville detectives were informed that corrections officials had sent Duran to Miami after serving less than half his sentence.

Kentucky corrections officials could not be reached for comment, but Louisville Police Lt. Steven Thompson said his department had no part in sending Duran to Florida.

Duran was arrested Wednesday in Miami Beach on the Osceola County auto theft charge.

"What they've done is gone around the system," Zeifman said. "They're unloading their problems on other jurisdictions."

case by case basis. Chairman Morris agreed the commission need not be rigid when it came to the rule but added the regulation did need to be specific. The rest of the commissioners agreed and asked building department director Bette Sonnenberg to draw up such an ordinance for the board's approval at its next meeting. The ordinance will then be sent to the city commission for final action.

Discussed reducing the square-footage requirement for efficiency apartments. The city, under the Southern Building Code, requires single occupancy efficiencies to be at least 150 square feet and double occupancy at least 250 square feet.

Carl said the city shouldn't reduce any standards right now, but Galloway disagreed, saying the commission should allow for developers' tastes. He also said more people are wanting to live in smaller efficiencies.

Morris said the city shouldn't allow developers to build "slums" but he said the regulation should be changed to accommodate people who don't need that much space. He and Ms. Sonnenberg are expected to bring a proposal back for discussion at the commission's next meeting.

Praised Galloway for his 10 years of service on the PAZ board, five of which he served as chairman.

Galloway, who has two more meetings before his term expires, said he enjoyed his tenure on the board and hopes to serve again on another city committee.

Morris praised Galloway's contribution to the board saying, "You can't be replaced."

a scheduled presentation on the Head Start Program. The program allows poor preschool children to learn before they start school.

Assistant Fire Chief Larry Dale asked for an ordinance that would require propane tanks on the sides of house to carry identification from the company that services them.

Dale told the commission that during a recent fire at 117 N. Fourth Street, the department had trouble getting a company to come out and remove the propane from a tank in danger of exploding.

The fire department cordoned off a large area of Lake Mary Boulevard because of the danger from the tank. The fire department kept the tank cool by spraying water on it and put out the fire in the house nine minutes.

Thursday. He said he has been asked by the families to intervene.

He criticized U.S. efforts to win the hostages' release and issued an "appeal of mercy" to the White House to press harder for their freedom.

Later, Jackson met with Robert Oakley, director of the State Department's office of counterterrorism, who said he went over with Jackson "in a little bit more detail what we mean when we say publicly we're doing everything we can."

John Weir, son of hostage Benjamin Weir, met Jackson and said he was encouraged by the ultimatum — despite its threatening tone — because "it's a sign ... they're willing to communicate ... As long as there's communication, there's hope."

Factory Usage Down .5 Percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American industry used 80.6 percent of its capacity in April, the lowest in more than a year — and a full half point less than in March, the Federal Reserve said Thursday.

The figure was the latest to confirm the deepening slump in manufacturing being blamed on successful import competition and a weakening of demand. When capacity utilization declines there is even less pressure to raise prices but factory employment suffers.

Industry was using 82.7 percent of its capacity in July.

Margaret Hamilton, Wicked Witch Of The West, Dies

SALISBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Margaret Hamilton, whose classic portrayal of the green-skinned Wicked Witch of the West in the "Wizard of Oz" has been terrifying millions of children for more than four decades, is dead at the age of 82.

Hamilton, who wanted to be a school-teacher before she turned to acting, died Thursday of an apparent heart attack in a nursing home.

She said the sinister role in which she warned Dorothy, "I'll get you, my pretty, and your little dog too" was not one of her favorites.

Actor Ray Bolger, the last surviving star of the film who played the Scarecrow, said Hamilton's role as the witch never lost its appeal to people of all ages.

"Margaret had become a great cult figure in recent years and that was the nicest thing that could have happened to her," Bolger said. "She leaves the world with many people who love her."

Hamilton moved from her apartment in New York City six months ago and died in her private room, said JoAnn Luning, nursing supervisor at the Noble Horizons Retirement Complex. The cause of death apparently was a heart attack, she said.

Hamilton appeared in more than 75 films, numerous stage shows, starred in television and made TV commercials, but no role proved as memorable as the one she created on film in 1939, pursuing Dorothy, portrayed by a young Judy Garland, her dog, Toto, and friends along the yellow-brick road to Oz.

Hamilton earned $18,000 for four months work on the film and was out for six weeks when her hands and face were burned during a scene in which she was to disappear in a puff of smoke early in the film.

"If I were to pick a role so far as acting is concerned, it is not the greatest thing I ever did," she once said. "I don't look on it as any great shakes of acting."

Hamilton, who once operated a nursery, made her Broadway debut in the 1932 play "Another Language," with Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery. She was brought to Hollywood by MGM to make her debut in the film version of the play the next year.

In 1939, the year "The Wizard of Oz" was released, she also appeared in a low-budget picture, "Angels Wash Their Faces," that starred the Dead End Kids and Ronald Reagan.

There will be no funeral, honoring Hamilton's request that she be cremated.

The actress is survived by her son, Hamilton Meserve, head of Fawcett Newspapers in New Milford, N.Y. A memorial service will be held at a later date.

Thomas said the family requested that in lieu of flowers, contributions be sent to the Cleveland Playhouse, where she began her acting career.

The Clatter Of The Rails Can Now Be Heard In The Ringing Of Cash Registers

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

As the rhythm of the rails died away during the declining decades of the Iron Horse the romantic interest associated with the trains that played a vital role in the shaping of this nation has increased at a pace that would surely outstrip that of even the speediest locomotive.

Bob DeBree, with his nostalgic railroad lanterns on display in Winter Park, said some collectors are looking for bits and pieces of railroad memorabilia that represent a line they or a friend worked or traveled on. Others are looking for mementos of the locomotives that rumbled through their hometown.

But the bulk of collectors, DeBree said, are just sentimental about America's childhood and the mode of transportation that opened the West and helped transform our country into an industrial giant. Still others are shrewd investors who also happen to be history buffs.

DeBree's specialty — kerosene lanterns, with their red, yellow or clear globes — are marked on their metal frames with the logo of the line that used them to give track-side signals to trainmen, warning them to brake or switch tracks. They are perhaps the most popular and plentiful fragments of railroad history that can still be found, DeBree said.

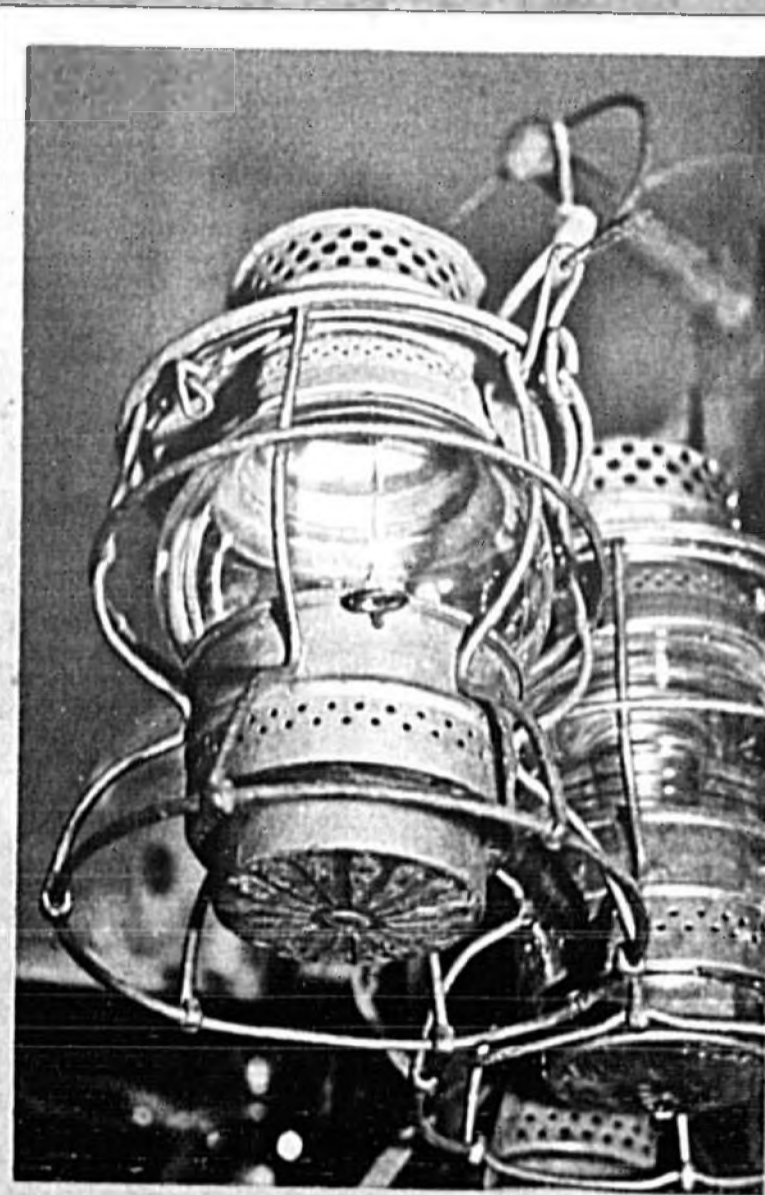

But he said even lanterns are scarce for shortline railroads, making them much more valuable than the 570 examples that represented major railroads like the New York Central. Depending on rarity and condition, a railroad lantern can wear a price tag of several hundred dollars, DeBree said.

He cautions the novice collector, who may want a

'Intentions' Offers Intense Suspense

By Joan Hanauer
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Watching evil emerge from beneath a benign mask has the fascination of a venomous snake swaying before it strikes — and that's what makes ABC's "Deadly Intentions" such an effective thriller.

The fact that the dramatization is based on a real case of a husband terrorizing and planning to murder his wife makes it even scarier.

"Deadly Intentions," to air Sunday and Monday 9-11 p.m., is based on the book of the same name by prosecutor William Randolph Stevens, based on court records, interviews and investigative reports. ABC says names and locales have been changed and some composite characters have been included.

The story starts with an innocent collegiate romance — Michael Biehn as the medical student with the boyish manner and "aw, shucks" smile, and Madolyn Smith as the girl from a strict ethnic Greek-American family.

The boy's clean-cut, beguiling facade hides a compulsive personality, which bodes ill for the future as clearly as his everyday schedule is written in minute detail on a blackboard chart in his room.

Then there's his mother — played by Cloris Leachman with her hair piled high on her head and looking as formidable as Judith Anderson. She's a mother only a psychopath could love — their relationship is cloyingly close yet without communication. He tries to keep her away from others, she wants to dance with him — close. This theme is not explicitly developed, but the thread of their unhealthy dependence runs throughout.

The young couple marry and move from Albuquerque, N.M., to Pensacola, Fla., where he

Say It Isn't So! Marie Osmond Files For Divorce

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Entertainer Marie Osmond, a devout Mormon who married a Brigham Young basketball star almost three years ago, confirmed that she has filed for divorce.

Osmond, 25, and Steve Craig, 28, have one child, Stephen James, 2. Osmond family spokesman Ron Clark said the youngster is living with his mother in Los Angeles.

He said Osmond filed the divorce papers in 4th District Court in Provo. Craig has been working in the business operations of the Osmond Studios.

Clark said Osmond would not disclose the problems that led to her separation from her husband and her decision to end the marriage.

"Osmond and her husband have been in a reconciliation period for the past six months," Clark said. "It's actually been at least their second reconciliation."

Clark said Osmond would continue with her singing career.

The couple was married in the church's Salt Lake City Temple in June, 1982 in a ceremony that attracted reporters and photographers from around the world. The church believes a ceremony in the temple is intended to bond a couple in marriage for eternity.

But Don LeFevre, a spokesman for the Mormon Church, added that while the church discourages divorce, it realizes the relationships do not always work out. He said the church also believes "the temple marriage and promise of an eternal marriage is totally dependent on the individuals."

Clark said he believed Craig was living in Ogden, 65 miles north of Provo.

Osmond is the only sister of six Osmond brothers also in show business and two other brothers who are not. The family became popular as a singing group after television appearances on "The Andy Williams Show."

Even Big-Time Stars Need Acting Lessons, p.2

'Anyone Can Call Himself A Coach'

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Even big movie-TV stars attend acting classes between assignments to sharpen and improve their gifts.

The late Lee Strasberg often had more stars sitting side by side in his Actors Studio than were under contract to studios. The Strasberg Institutes in Hollywood and New York remain among the most prestigious and busiest.

There are hundreds of acting teachers and coaches charging handsome fees for classes, individual instruction, workshops and little theaters in Hollywood.

Some are rip-off artists whose ads all but promise glibly would-be performers parts in TV and feature films. Others exploit stage mothers bent on pushing future Shirley Temples into show biz.

There are, however, many legitimate coaches who school novices and old pros alike, among them Milton Katselas, Nina Foch, Harry Mastrogiorgio, John Daly and Susan Anspach.

Sal Dano is a respected member of this tribe who prime actors and actresses for stage, screen and tube. Dano is effusive, gruff, demanding and built along the lines of Arnold Schwarzenegger. Like many another drama coach, he is a former actor.

His clients include Tom Selleck, Robert Hays, Heather Locklear, Catherine Bach, Priscilla Barnes and Doug McKeon.

Of his highly competitive business Dano says, "Anyone can call himself a coach. There are some with only one client and others probably with thousands. I don't understand what they're doing."

"I hear horror stories about hounding clients into religious sects and teaching young performers to 'free themselves' by working nude on stage during classes. A lot of performers come to me from outfits like that."

"I don't teach kids because nobody can, they only ape, they can't think abstractly. My minimum age is 17 for women and 21 for men."

Dano works with 20 to 30 performers at a time at classes four times a week, 6 p.m. to midnight at his West Los Angeles headquarters. The hours accommodate clients who work during the day. He says he operates a professional workshop, not a school for beginners.

My clients work scenes from top playwrights — Tennessee Williams, Inge, Odets, Strinberg and Chekov. If they can handle 'Cat On A Hot Tin Roof' they can certainly deal with a role in 'Dallas.'

Dano says he teaches four fundamentals, vocal, intellectual, physical and emotional presence. Some of his clients are skilled in two or three of the disciplines, only a handful in four.

"My big problem with actors is their lack of education, even college graduates. I spend time filling in the gaps with history, literature and other subjects useful to them as performers."

"I ask them to read biographies on people similar to the characters they are going to play."

"I don't subscribe to total freedom for actors, and that includes nudity on stage and camera. I still like those performers who have not lost their ability to blush."

'Columbus' Cast

Gabriel Byrne, center, stars as Columbus, and Nicol Williamson and Faye Dunaway star as King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella in "Christopher Columbus," an epic six-hour miniseries to be broadcast in two parts, Sunday and Monday 8-11 p.m. each night on CBS, channel 6.

Jeremy Brett: He's Powers' Biggest Booster

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jeremy Brett calls his latest television venture a showcase for Stefanie Powers — and he is delighted with the situation.

Brett stars with Powers and Barry Bostwick in the NBC miniseries "Deceptions," to air May 26 and 27, 9-11 p.m.

The English actor can afford to be generous — he was an immense success in Britain and in the United States as the star of "Sherlock Holmes," seen here on the PBS "Mystery" series, and he currently is on Broadway playing Rex Harrison's son to rave reviews in "Aren't We All?" which also stars Claudette Colbert and Lynn Redgrave.

Brett and Powers are old friends.

"We did 'Hart to Hart' together and never lost each other. R.J. (Robert Wagner) is a good friend, too."

He speaks of Powers with affection and admiration. In "Deceptions," he said, she must play what adds up to four parts. Powers plays twins — that's two roles. The twins exchange lives and pretend to be each other — that's two more roles, according to Brett's arithmetic.

"It's always difficult in this business after an immense success such as 'Hart to Hart,'" he said.

"What was so wonderful about 'Hart to Hart' was that they made theirs such a stylish marriage."

"I thought what they did in 'Hart to Hart' that was so wonderful was that, without being cutesy, they were able to show two people who were happily married. Amazing."

"When they had to finish the series and go their separate ways then if you loved them — and I think most people in the profession do love them for

Dance A Break With Indonesian Tradition

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Authorities have decided to hold national and regional break-dancing championships after a dance expert determined the American-inspired fad was similar to traditional Indonesian dance forms.

Police had used tear gas to break up an impromptu break-dance festival in Jakarta last December, following complaints by parents and school administrators that the popular dance form was a dangerous type of cultural pollution in this predominantly Moslem country.

But last week the craze started up again when Sardono W. Kusumo, head of the dance academy of the Jakarta Art Institute, told the Indonesian Parliament break dancing is similar to traditional dances of the Irian Jayan, Nias and Dayak minorities and should not be discouraged.

Billy Dee Williams, left, stars as wealthy San Francisco sophisticate Billy Diamond, who works as a secret member of the city's police force, and Ken Wahl portrays his partner, Sisko, in the CBS action series "Double Dare."

'Dare' Is A Dud

By David Handler
 Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

"Double Dare" stars a very tired-looking Billy Dee Williams and a very unkempt-looking Ken Wahl as professional criminals who are helping out the law.

This CBS detective outing is no worse than 10 others just like it that we've seen in recent months, but certainly no better either.

Billy Diamond (Williams) is a high-class San Francisco cat burglar. He wears fine clothes, eats gourmet cuisine, drives a Rolls-Royce and lives in a ritzy townhouse complete with elevator and stuffy butler.

It may all come tumbling down though. As our pilot episode opens, Billy is nabbed by the police with his hand in somebody else's wall safe. "I've never been so embarrassed in all my life," he admits.

Billy has a choice — go to work undercover for the police and keep his fine lifestyle or do hard time. "Call it early plea bargaining," says Lt. Sam Warner (Jennifer Warren in the pilot, Janet Carroll in later episodes).

He accepts the deal — provided they spring a former partner of his, Sisko (Wahl), who is presently in jail and who owes Billy $5,000.

Sisko is Billy's opposite — uncouth, boorish, sloppy and juvenile. If he spots an attractive woman he quips, "Hey, I wouldn't mind sellin' her a little tutti-frutti, huh?"

Sisko is good with cars and electronics. "I can hot wire a skateboard," he boasts.

Billy and Sisko have nothing

'How many more times can we be expected to watch chase scenes through the streets of San Francisco?'

In common, no reason to like each other and no reason to want to work together. If you watch a lot of Odd Couple detective shows, you know this signals a TV partnership.

What they're attempting here is the sort of relationship that Nick Nolte and Eddie Murphy had in "48 Hrs." But Williams seems weary and bored. Wahl's talent is not apparent. The rapport never happens.

"Ever tell ya how much I hate heights?" says Sisko as they prepare to rapel their way to a hotel room window from the roof next door. "So don't look down," P.O.s back Billy.

The plots aren't much. One week, numerous known thugs start arriving in town. Fearing a major heist, Lt. Warner asks Billy and Sisko to help. They infiltrate the gang.

Another week, they are brought in to find out why a Hong Kong crime czar has relocated in San Francisco. This time Billy and Sisko masquerade as limp-wristed interior designers so they can hang around his house and get the goods. It didn't play any ceter than it sounds.

Without a good rapport between the stars, these soft detective shows make for meager entertainment. There isn't much tension or jeopardy. I don't know how many more times we can be expected to watch chase scenes through the streets of San Francisco.

free when her doctor-husband gives her medication for their baby that could have killed the child.

Without giving away details of the plot, part two of the miniseries ends with the husband's trial after his behavior has become increasingly bizarre and he has tried to act out his sadistic fantasies — and perhaps already has done so.

"Deadly Intentions" aims at keeping its audience in suspense and succeeds handsomely. While there is little overt sex or violence, both are strongly suggested and the squeamish should be warned that a pall of depravity cloaks the show.

"Saturday Night Live" lives! But whether Billy Crystal and Martin Short will be on hand next fall remains in doubt.

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, told the NBC affiliates meeting in Los Angeles Tuesday that the late night show would be back for its 11th season.

He said nothing about the return of Crystal and Short — only that the show would have "some familiar faces and some fresh, new ones."

will intern at a local hospital.

Troubles begin to build. He won't let his wife work — her job is to take care of him. He is aloof to her friends. She is not to spend more than $10 without his permission. His temper is unpredictable. He hurls her cot against the bedroom wall in rage.

His wife, still hopeful that their marriage will steady down, is frightened by a huge spider. She screams; he grabs his camera and with sick glee takes pictures of her terror. Later, on a camping trip, she swims while he sits on the shore and watches an alligator slither into the water and swim toward her. When it comes close he yells a warning — and takes more pictures.

When she becomes pregnant, he responds with fright, petulance — and a driving need for his mother, who refuses contact with him. He blames his wife for having a baby before, as he put it, she has learned to take care of her husband.

The wife, torn by the conflict between her fear of her husband and her belief that marriage is forever, is forced to

Irate TV Viewers Make Pleas For Silence

DEAR DICK — Who do I write to to request that they totally eliminate laugh tracks? Often you can't hear the dialogue because of the laughter. You get a roar of laughter at the most peculiar moments. Also, all that unnecessary hooting, shouting, clapping and whistling that accompany game shows — it's so unbearable that my blood pressure skyrockets after all that noise. — Mrs. V.A., Mayville, Mich.

DEAR DICK — Please tell me why we must have this extremely loud background music. My husband and I watched the movie, "Two Fathers' Justice" and "The A-Team" this week. We had to turn the volume up so we could hear the dialogue. Are we still watching silent movies that we must have this annoying music to let us know what acting is taking place? — Mrs. P.A.B., Shillington, Pa.

Calm yourself, ladies. Most TV producers follow tradition, and tradition demands music behind dramatic shows (the weaker the show, the louder the music, on the theory that maybe loud music will drown out deficiencies in the script) and laugh tracks behind comedies (the worse the comedy, the louder the laugh track, on the same theory). It is annoying, but I'm afraid it is something we will have to live with. On the game shows, they have live audiences and they try to whip them into a frenzy of hooting, shouting, clapping and whistling. The theory here is that all that noise makes the home audience think the show is wildly exciting.

DEAR DICK — Recently, Nicholas Colasanto, the coach on "Cheers," passed away. I would like to know if "Cheers" will replace him, or show reruns? If they do replace him, who will they replace him with? Do you know? — J.M., Stuart, Fla.

No, the character of the coach will die with Colasanto. They may eventually bring in some other character or characters to join the cast, but there will never again be that particular character of the coach.

DEAR DICK — I recently saw the movie, "The Corsican Brothers," and I just loved Trevor Eve. Could you please tell me a little bit about him, and what other TV shows or movies he's been in? — R.R.S., Amarillo, Texas.

Eve is an English actor who has been mostly involved in English stage and TV production, and a few films. You may have seen him in "Dracula" starring Frank Langella and the miniseries, "Lace."

DEAR DICK — HELP! About 30 people are going crazy trying to remember the name of the character actor who has appeared in numerous TV shows and movies. He was on the Jan. 23, 1985 episode of "The Fall Guy," playing a character named L.V. The face is so familiar but we can't put a name to it. — Unsigned, Cypress, Texas.

Here's a name for all you 30 people to remember Morgan Woodward.

DEAR DICK — I heard that while filming a show of "Airwolf," a helicopter crashed. Two men were in it. One man got out but the other man didn't get out alive. Please tell me, were either of the two men Jan-Michael Vincent or Ernest Borgnine? — B.L.G., Walhonding, Ohio.

No, neither Vincent nor Borgnine was in the helicopter that crashed. A stuntman was killed, and the pilot was injured.

DEAR DICK — Could you please find the name of the author of the book that the movie, "The Quiet Man," starring John Wayne, was made from? I would also like to know the title of the book, if possible. I inquired at our public library and was told the only thing she could find out was the director's name. I would like to read the book, if there is one. — J.M., Tamaqua, Pa.

No book, "The Quiet Man" came from an original story, by Maurice Walsh, and that was turned into a screenplay by Frank Nugent.

lantern just to add a decorative accent to his home, that some railroads still use the kerosene lanterns. Therefore you have to be careful not to plunk down big bucks for a contemporary lantern instead of a truly historical piece. Most rail lines, he adds, have abandoned the lanterns for electronic signals.

However, DeBree said, even today's railroad items should be looked at with an eye to their potential desirability in the future. As the industry continues to fade, today's railroad tickets, brochures and other bits of paraphernalia oft taken for granted may one day bring in big money.

Maybe even bigger than the kinds of purchases modern collectors make.

Sanford antiques dealer Marie Richter said she can't get her hands on enough railroad items to satisfy her customers, many of whom have worked on a railroad. That may be accountable, in part, to the fact that at least one rail line — the federally subsidized Amtrak — still plays a role in Sanford's economy.

"The East coast lines are very popular here," Mrs. Richter said. And one of the more popular items is the heavy china, marked with the logo of the line, which was used in those old dining cars.

She said it's almost impossible to part former railroad workers from their personal souvenirs of their trade.

Another Sanford dealer, Scott Bridges, said he doesn't even bother searching for old railroad items because they're too expensive and difficult to find.

"There's some serious money in railroad stuff," he said, with brass bells selling for around $1,000, signs going for about $50 and a wooden ticket holder priced at $70.

Bridges said he seldom runs across any railroad antiques other than lanterns and an occasional sign.

Railroad buff Robert Shelley, 64, of Oviedo, said he got into the game too late and has been priced out of the market as far as collecting goes.

He has, he said, been able to pick up a few items, but they are hard to find. And once found can put a major dent in the wallet.

Because there were so many railroad-related items produced, most collectors prefer to specialize, DeBree said. They may focus just on lanterns, locks, or perhaps on posters that can add color to a collector's den wall.

The items that came from the trains themselves are prized most highly by collectors and, as a result, command the highest prices, he said. Next in demand is memorabilia from stations, such as time tables and brochures.

And then in a category all their own are models and toy trains, DeBree said.

The models are the form of training Shelley has been able to latch on to, his romance with the old trains born after years of working as an airplane mechanic.

Shelley, along with Ken Murdock of Orlando, belongs to the Central Florida chapter of the National Railway Historical Society, which maintains a railroad museum in the depot at 101 Boyd St. in Winter Garden.

The museum houses a more extensive collection of railroad items than Murdock's own, which like Shelley's is limited because of cost and availability.

Murdock, 44, who said he thinks he was born with a love of railroads, has a few lanterns and locks. But, he said, the museum, which is open on Sundays, features those items along with telephones, telegraphs, uniforms, a caboose stove, a depot stove, photos and other mementos.

So if you can't afford to own, you can at least see some of the things that helped keep trains rolling along.

No matter what items a railroad buff fancies and can afford to invest in he's probably on the right track, DeBree said, because railroads had a firm grip on the hearts of romantics almost from the time the first spike was driven.

their contributions — you had to be concerned for them, the nice people, what I call the gentle force. I gather R.J.'s series has been picked up (Wagner stars in the new ABC series 'J.G. Culver,' to start next fall).

"Stefanie is off on her own. I mean, this is her big moment on earth. So I was very concerned for her.

"The show is glitzy, it's glamorous, it's beautifully shot, it's deceptive. Amazing sort of things happen. Barry Bostwick — I'm a big fan of his ever since I saw him in 'The Pirates of Penzance' in Los Angeles — is marvelous."

"Deceptions" was a difficult production which struggled through a series of directors.

"I think in the small time that I was there, which was only four weeks out of 10 weeks of shooting, I had three — maybe three and a half — directors," Brett said. "Always in these cases, the actors come together and do what they can do. If it works, nothing matters. It only matters if it fails.
