NATION IN BRIEF

Home Canning Probed

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal agencies are investigating complaints of faulty home canning equipment, following reports from some areas of the West that the lids don't seal properly, causing food to spoil. An Associated Press survey shows the problems come on top of a nationwide shortage of canning equipment that is frustrating consumers trying to save money by putting up their own fruits and vegetables. Officials of major manufacturers of the canning jars deny the equipment is faulty and claim consumers aren't following directions. Housewives who've been canning for years are skeptical. Jane Wyatt of the Oregon Department of Agriculture said complaints were pouring into her office about lids that fail to seal properly and result in spoiled food. She said the department asked the Kerr Glass Manufacturing Co. of Sand Springs, Okla., to recall its lids, but the company refused.

Energy Cooperation Urged

DETROIT (AP) — The World Energy Conference, which opened with a call from President Ford for global energy cooperation, has ended with plans to pursue his idea for Project Interdependence. The five-day conference ended Friday and about 4,200 delegates from 85 nations headed home with what sponsors said was a better understanding of the world's urgent need for joint action. Wilson Campbell, program committee chairman, said a conservation commission was being set up and would strive to provide the technical and economic basis for meeting the President's challenge. He said a meeting would be held in London before Christmas to formulate a constitution and funding. He said the commission may also draw up a basic reassessment of world energy consumption.

Mortgage Subsidies Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to administration sources, President Ford's economic plan will include a new program of subsidies to reduce the cost of home mortgages. The effect will be to make it possible for people to obtain home mortgages at a lower interest rate than otherwise would have to pay. Housing and Urban Affairs Secretary James T. Lynn said he could support a program of up to $8 billion in mortgage subsidies, with $1 billion to be spent in the first stage.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Portuguese Power Struggle

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — President Antonio de Spínola met in emergency session early today with members of the government while groups of armed leftists blocked highways into the capital and threatened violent confrontation with rightist forces at a rally later in the day. Six tanks took up defensive positions outside the Belem National Palace shortly after 6 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT) as the government appealed to the leftists to call off their blockade. The government announced it would ensure that the pro-Spínola demonstration, denounced in advance by the left as a fascist plot to launch an ultra-right movement, went off as scheduled. Spínola reportedly has been engaged for weeks in a power struggle with Premier Vasco Gonçalves' leftist coalition of Communists, Socialists and centrist Popular Democrats.

U.S. Woman Diplomat Held

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Negotiations continued today for the release of an American woman diplomat and at least seven others being held hostage in the Venezuelan consulate by 23 leftist guerrillas. U.S. Ambassador Robert A. Hurwich met outside the consulate with a priest and a local television commentator, selected by the terrorists to negotiate their demands for $1 million in ransom and the release of 38 comrades in Dominican jails. The terrorists threatened to blow up the consulate if their demands were not met. Neither Hurwich nor the two negotiators would discuss their talks, but diplomatic sources said earlier that Venezuela had agreed to pay the ransom if the Dominican Republic released the prisoners.

Summit Inconclusive, Real Problem Ignored

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's economic summit nears its wrap-up with Ford having heard as much criticism as praise, and more special pleading than disinterested advice. At Friday's opening session, Ford heard blunt advice that he come up with new policies and a fresh economic team. Easing some of the sting of criticism from Democrats, labor, young people, women, the poor, and consumer representatives were occasional expressions of concern that the President had taken the trouble to hold the summit and participate personally. By and large, Ford sat through presentations by representatives of special interest groups who tended to view the nation's grave economic problems in terms of the plight of their own constituencies. Rep. Sam Devine, R-Ohio, observed at one point, "Everyone wants to exercise economy in every program except his own."

UAW Strike Shuts Plants

DETROIT (AP) — Strikes affecting all four major U.S. auto makers are crippling production and prompting layoffs of thousands of workers. General Motors faces a parts shortage stemming from a local contract dispute, and American Motors Corp.'s car production is shutdown by a national strike. Ford has already shut down plants, and Chrysler plants because of a walkout at a key parts supplier. Potentially, the most serious is a strike at a key parts-making complex in Indiana which threatens to cause a shut-down of all GM assembly facilities within a week. The strike, by 14,000 members of United Auto Workers Union Local 662 at GM's 14 Delco-Remy plants in Anderson, Ind., entered its third day today. Union officials reported progress in substantially reducing the number of issues in the local contract dispute. Remaining issues were not revealed. The plant is GM's sole supplier of generators, ignition systems and a variety of switches. Company spokesmen said a lengthy strike could force a gradual closing of GM's 17 plants beginning early next week. The auto maker employs 400,000 hourly workers. Meanwhile, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. said they will have a total of nine plants shut down and nearly 25,000 workers laid off because of a strike at a key parts supplier in Franklin, Ind. The strike by the Carpenters and Joiners Union Local 2993 at Arvin Industries has created a shortage of catalytic converters for pollution control and exhaust systems for Ford and Chrysler. Union officials said a tentative agreement on a new contract was reached and striking workers in Franklin were to vote on the proposals Sunday. Ford said it will lay off 6,350 workers Monday when it shuts its truck plants in Wayne, Mich., and Oakville, Ont., and car plants in Louisville, Ky., and Mahwah, N.J. Ford sent 9,800 workers home Friday after closing plants in Dearborn, Mich., Norfolk, Va., and San Jose, Calif. Chrysler said it would shut its Detroit Lynch Road and Windsor, Ont., plants and lay off 9,300 workers for at least a week starting Monday. The firm said it would be forced to shut another Detroit-area plant and lay off 9,500 workers on Oct. 7 if the Arvin strike continues.

Beautyfication Project City OK's Lakefront

Sanford city commissioners have approved a $4,514 bicentennial beautyfication project along the Lake Monroe seawall.

The year-long project includes installation of walkways, shrubbery and park benches from Melonville Avenue on the east to the city limits on the west on the north side of Seminole Boulevard. Plans call for the shrubbery to be watered by irrigation systems.

The project is an expansion of earlier installation of lakeside park benches in part of the area.

In other actions in a special call meeting Friday commissioners: — Set a public hearing Nov. 25 on a request for annexation of H.L. Hunt properties south of Cornell Road and Silver Lake Drive east of South Sanford Avenue.

— Approved a procedure by which Sanford-Seminole Jaycees will sublease part of their office building in the city park at French Avenue and Third Street to the Seminole County Association for Retarded Children for use in a federally funded program.

— Approved a resolution increasing the proposed drainage bond issue on the Nov. 5 election ballot from $4.5 million to $6.5 million.

— Approved the district school board subleasing city-owned Sanford Memorial Stadium for a baseball school. The stadium is leased to the school board.

Rocky's No Novice In Political Ring

While a great deal of attention has been paid to the personal fortune of former Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller during the hearings on his nomination as Vice President a great many people seem to have forgotten that he is also very effective politician.

You don't get elected governor of New York state for four terms on the basis of wealth alone. It doesn't hurt your chances any, but it isn't the single over-riding factor.

You've got to satisfy or at least make your peace with the most diverse society in the nation. Upstate New York, for instance, has about as much in common with New York City and Long Island as Oviedo has with Miami; they might as well be on two different planets. And Rocky was able to hold these various and sundry groups together in an effective coalition that seemed destined to last forever—in a Democratic state.

This was brought to mind the other day when, listening to segments of the hearings before the Senate Rules Committee, we chanced upon a question by Sen. Robert F. Byrd (D-W. Va.). Byrd, fishing in the murky waters of executive privilege, asked the multimillionaire Rockefeller his feelings on the subject just in case he should ever succeed to the presidency.

Rocky showed the kind of style any politician would admire:

"My total inclination is to say I would not invoke executive privilege. I can think of no cases under which I would, but it would be irresponsible for me to make a flat commitment."

That, my friends, is a politician at work. There's no way anyone at any future date could lose that back at Mr. Rockefeller and ask why his actions are no longer consistent with his testimony, as was the case with President Ford. On the contrary, Mr. Rockefeller could, should the occasion ever arise, quote either the beginning or the end of his answer and effectively silence those who agree with the concept of executive privilege and those who can find no justification for it in either the Constitution or the law.

Rockefeller has always been a bit of a chameleon in politics, able to blend with the political coloration of the moment. His first years as governor of New York were vintage New Deal; his last was a monument to the Barry Goldwater wing of the Republican Party. And now he's allied with President Gerald Ford in an attempt to stake out the middle.

The Bob Byrds of the Senate are out of their league when they decide to go a couple of fast rounds with the "Rock."

Growing Pains

Congress could spoil a good thing if it permits backyard gardeners to deduct part of the cost of their tools from their income tax. Getting more Americans to grow fruits and vegetables is a worthy aim, but this scheme could backfire. It would encourage amateur gardeners to keep their tools in the trunk of their cars. If the weekend farmer starts recording what he spent for tools he will also be inclined to keep track of what he spends for seeds and bulbs, fertilizer, insecticide, and may be a sprinkling system or even a trip to the doctor for a strained back from filling the wheelbarrow too full. He is then apt to discover that his tomatoes are costing him $5 a pound. Next thing you know, he'll be back in the house watching television.

BERRY'S WORLD

But what really gives Bermuda its distinctive flavor (sorry — flavour) is the fact that it is a British Crown Colony — next to Hong Kong perhaps the best known of them all. There is an essentially British calm about this right little, tight little island, where every year the Royal Governor, Sir Edwin Leather, gravely accepts from the Freemason's Lodge of St. George payment of one peppercorn as rental for using the Old State House as its meeting place. It is, in fact, exactly the sort of spot the average Britisher would regard as the perfect resort: warm and sunny (without requiring a pith helmet), relaxed and informal (within sensible limits), devoted to sports (including cricket) and — best of all — not too far away.

THOUGHTS

"Does he thank the servant because he did what was commanded? So you also, when you have done all that is commanded you say, 'We are unworthy servants; we have only done what was our duty.'" — Luke 17:9, 10.

"A good man and a wise man may, at times, be angry with the world, and at times grieved for it; but no man was ever discontented with the world if he did his duty in it." — Robert Southey, English poet.

JACK ANDERSON

Gangland Informers Are Abandoned

WASHINGTON — In a faraway city, a reformed Mafia lieutenant lives in quiet desperation under an assumed identity. He had been a big shot, manicured, soaped and pomaded, with a bankroll to flash, in his Cadillac days. Now the Justice Dept. has thrown him out his place.

He keeps dozed up on tranquilizers. Around every corner, in every shadow, he expects to be confronted by Mafia avengers, who have orders to kill him on sight for his testimony against them. He is afraid even to tell his new wife about his past.

"I hope any man in the Mafia, in his right mind, does not go over to the government," he wrote us bitterly. "I have died a thousand deaths ever since I started (testifying). I have kept my promises. But as I write this, I live in fear with a knot in my stomach."

Is this what happens to witnesses who risk their lives to testify against powerful criminals? The answer, all too often, is yes. After their usefulness is at an end, they are often neglected by the government. Promises made by prosecutors are forgotten by their successors.

The fate of informers has become common knowledge in the underworld. This discourages new defectors from stepping forward and testifying against the crime lords. Thus, the battle against organized crime has been compromised by government indifference.

Mobsters haven't forgotten, for example, what happened to the late Joe Valachi who in 1963 ripped the veil of secrecy from the Mafia. He tried to get a message out of prison that he was ready to talk. Instead, the word got back to his fellow inmates.

Yet prison officials shoved the frightened, panicky Valachi back into his four-man cell. If somebody tries to kill you, they told him, just let us know. "I'll call you when I'm dead," Valachi replied.

Not until he battered an inmate to death with an iron pipe; mistaking him for a Mafia enforcer, was Valachi taken out of the prison and turned over eventually to the FBI. For 15 months, he talked, reluctantly at first, then in a torrent.

He told about the Mafia godfathers — how they lived, how they prospered, how they died, most of them violently. He tried to explain that this criminal conspiracy operated above and beyond the law, too rich, too powerful, too evil to be stopped. "You don't understand," he would say. "It's just like a second government."

After Valachi had been drained of information, he was returned to solitary confinement for the rest of his life. It was too dangerous to let him associate with other prisoners. Sometimes he rapped with the guards. But most of the time, he just brooded. Once he unsuccessfully tried to hang himself. Deserted by family and friends, terribly alone in a Texas prison cell, he died in 1971.

Valachi was followed by other informers. Perhaps the most important was Eugene B. Ayotte, swarthy, handsome, flashy, who was known in the Detroit mob as "Johnny A." He has now been all but abandoned by the prosecutors who persuaded him to take the witness stand against his former associates.

From his hiding place, where he now lives under a false identity, he has told us his story. It is a tale of broken promises, ruined health, destroyed marriages and snarled bureaucratic tape.

He began to think about defecting in 1968 after 20 years in crime. He faced a long prison sentence, and his children had turned against him. He sent word from his jail cell that he wanted to talk to the FBI. A meeting was arranged in a guarded room at Detroit's federal building.

This was followed by at least 30 trips to the federal building. He told the FBI what he knew about the Mafia. He also began to testify before grand juries. Yet despite the secrecy, "word was out in the underworld that I was talking," he said.

He wound up at Terre Haute federal penitentiary where the word was spread that he was an FBI snitch. "The inmates tried to pick a fight with me in the yard. It got so I couldn't get inside. I ate in the dining room by myself. You have no idea of the scared feeling you carry around inside, and the loneliness."

One night, fearful prison officials came to his cell and notified him that a "contract" was out on him — a death order from the Mafia. Marshals hustled him off; he was, they said, "a hot ticket."

He was rushed by police car escort to a county jail where he was dumped, unaccountably, "in a drunk tank where they keep all the 'winos' and skid-row bums." Johnny A., who once had driven a white Cadillac, sported expensive jewelry and squired Detroit's prettiest moll, spent almost seven weeks in the drunk tank, without a bed or sheets. "My nerves were on edge," he said, "from the bums screaming and having the heebie-jeebies."

Still, he continued to cooperate; there was nothing else left for him to do. "Here I was going against the Mafia," he said, referring to the Mafia. "I can't begin to explain the tightness in my stomach."

He spent much of the next two years in motels. Often in the twin bed next to him was an agent. He passed from the custody of one federal agency to another. "I never witnessed so much confusion and jealousy among government agencies," he marveled.

At last, Ayotte was offered a new life wherever he wanted to relocate. In a future column, we will give his amazing account of his life in hiding.

Bermuda's Charm Is All English

HAMILTON, BERMUDA — A great many people who have never been here seem to think Bermuda is just another subtropical resort island, with the advantage of being considerably closer to America's northeastern seaboard than most of the competition. So it may be useful to begin this appreciation on one of earth's more delightful spots by listing briefly what it is not.

In the first place, then, the word "sub-tropical" should be used only sparingly about Bermuda. The climate is indeed a mild one, with 71 degrees the mean average temperature, but the island lies well over 500 miles north of the Tropic of Cancer, or in other words at about the latitude of Savannah, Georgia, and depends on the thermocline effect of the Atlantic to moderate its climate. There are a number of palm trees around here, but they by no means dominate the vegetation, which is varied.

Moreover, the amble isn't terribly tropical either. If there is a steel band or an electric guitar around here, it has eluded me. Grass skirts, and even the sort of loud sports shirts Harry Truman used to favor at Key West, are out. As a matter of fact, in the great luxury hotels you will be asked to wear a jacket and tie to dinner — which strikes me as perfectly okay.

What, then, are the special charms of Bermuda? Stand back, and give me room. In the first place, it is small — by which I don't mean tiny, but somehow appealingly cozy. From Wreck Hill to St. David's Head is only about 16 miles as a crow would fly it (if Bermuda had shaped rather like a fish-hook so you would clock somewhat more than that if you drove from end to end. Across the middle it is nowhere much more than a mile wide, and often far less; so there is literally no place in Bermuda where you are more than half a mile from the sea. On these 20 square miles of remote real estate are scattered one "city" (Hamilton — 1970 pop. 2000), smaller towns (St. George), and several even smaller clusters of houses, all linked by well-paved two-lane roads that wind up, down and around Bermuda's little hills or skirt the ever-present ocean.

But what really gives Bermuda its distinctive flavor (sorry — flavour) is the fact that it is a British Crown Colony — next to Hong Kong perhaps the best known of them all. There is an essentially British calm about this right little, tight little island, where every year the Royal Governor, Sir Edwin Leather, gravely accepts from the Freemason's Lodge of St. George payment of one peppercorn as rental for using the Old State House as its meeting place. It is, in fact, exactly the sort of spot the average Britisher would regard as the perfect resort: warm and sunny (without requiring a pith helmet), relaxed and informal (within sensible limits), devoted to sports (including cricket) and — best of all — not too far away.

Around

This is that time of the year when practically everyone is chiding you to remember to vote — cause it's so important. There have even been those daring enough to suggest that one particular vote made a significant dent into the eventual outcome. However, either for a lack of air time or news space, they don't get around to citing you any examples of where and when that single vote turned out to be the deciding factor.

Thanks to Southern Bell's Tom Hunt he provided me with a historical list which illustrates why it is important to cast your vote — everytime you have the opportunity of doing so.

ONE VOTE — Elected three Presidents of the United States. In his first try for the Presidency, Thomas Jefferson and opponent Aaron Burr each received 73 electoral votes. The election was referred to Congress, where Jefferson was elected by a single vote. Out of four candidates, Andrew Jackson received 99 votes and John Quincy Adams 84. As over to Congress where Adams was elected by a majority of only one vote in a bitterly contested electoral college ballot.

Democratic Party Still Carries Wounds Of 1972

WASHINGTON — The breakdown of the Democrats' charter commission meeting in Kansas City is an ominous signal that the deep party divisions of 1968 and 1972 are not healed.

Once again it was a clash of party regulars with the reformist McGovern wing that set off a walkout of blacks joined later by members of the women's caucus and some liberals.

The result was lack of a quorum on the floor, forcing the mid-August session summoned to complete and adopt a new party constitution, to break up in confusion.

Delegates from the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE) were adamantly against any quotas, implied or otherwise, if for no other reasons than this was the issue that derailed the Democratic National Convention in 1972.

But productivity applies to everything, and in some cases it can mean doing less rather than more — fixing a machine right the first time so that it doesn't have to be fixed again, or not trying an unnecessary letter.

Brought California into the Union. Statehood for five states (California, Texas, Washington, Idaho, and Oregon) was determined by a single vote.

Determined that Elizabeth II would be Queen of England today. The British Parliament was debating more than 250 years ago whether they should turn the throne over to the German House of Hanover. The final tally was 96-96, and George I became King of England, a forerunner of today's Queen Elizabeth II.

Cost King Charles I of England his head. During England's Great Rebellion (1649) Charles' fate was placed in the hands of a 135-judge tribunal. Sixty-seven voted to spare him, but 68 favored his execution. Charles was beheaded because of a one-vote margin.

Here's Plan On Amnesty First Step

Reaction to President Ford's announced intention to devise some kind of conditional amnesty for Vietnam war resisters and deserters promises that no matter what he does, he will displeasure a large part of the public.

Even if a compromise is arrived at somewhere between those who, at the one extreme, are against any amnesty at all and those who, at the other extreme, argue that amnesty should be total and unconditional, the public themselves have made clear that they will reject anything short of the latter.

There may, however, be one step the President could take that would give something to everyone.

Many of the exiles have not only made new lives for themselves but have become citizens of other countries, chiefly Canada, and have stated they have no desire to return to the United States permanently. But one reason they want amnesty is so that they may at last freely visit relatives and friends here.

Would it not be possible to grant amnesty to those exiles who have become foreign citizens, as well as those willing to certify their intention of becoming foreign citizens, to the extent that they may qualify for visitors' permits?

Conditions on this right of visitation could include such prohibitions as not engaging in politics or making public statements denouncing the Vietnam war or engaging in other kinds of activities denied foreign nationals. Otherwise, these amnestied exiles would be accorded the same rights and privileges — and no more — as any other foreign, temporary residents.

Admittedly, this limited form of amnesty might apply to only a small fraction of the expatriates. But it is something that could be done now, and could be made acceptable to the majority of Americans.

When economists talk about "productivity" and the need to increase same to enable the nation to compete with foreign countries, most people picture in their minds an assembly line or factory — workers adjusting so many bolts per hour or machines stamping out so many units of this or that.

But productivity applies to everything, and in some cases it can mean doing less rather than more — fixing a machine right the first time so that it doesn't have to be fixed again, or not trying an unnecessary letter.

The Fruits Of The Legislature Bloom Oct. 1

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Residents of the two fastest growing types of housing in Florida, condominiums and mobile homes, will receive new protection Tuesday.

A far-reaching law also will take effect that day to protect men and women from sexual abuse, and to provide ways of obtaining more convictions for sex crimes.

Persons injured on the job will receive greater benefits, and the privacy of telephone conversations will be greater insured.

The 91 laws passed by the 1974 Legislature will be based on the average wage in the state, and will increase as wages rise.

The immediate effect of paying two-thirds the average wage will be an increase in benefits, from $80 to $98.

The limit on death benefits was doubled to $50,000 and a person who loses an arm, leg, hand or foot will receive 80 per cent of his wages until trained to use an artificial limb.

Two new wiretaps laws will take effect. One requires that wiretapping, except in rare cases when both parties agree, can be used only to obtain evidence of a criminal act. It provides that eavesdropping is excluded at public meetings and speeches from eavesdropping laws, and allows telephone company taps to trace obscene or threatening calls.

Warranties

Two new warranties are required, and copies of the warranties must be submitted with license applications.

The law also provides for on-site inspection of mobile homes by either state or county employees.

The only difference in the law is that one also covers recreational vehicles. Sportsmen amended major provisions in the second bill after it appeared in error — that the first would not apply to mobile homes.

The new sexual battery law covers both rape and sodomy but eliminates use of the terms. In an attempt to gain more convictions by giving judges choices between acquittal and life in prison, the law establishes three degrees of sexual battery, depending on force used. It provides differing penalties — life, 30 years and 15 years in prison.

For the first time, workmen's compensation benefits paid to injured workers will be based on the average wage in the state, and will increase as wages rise.

A requirement that all owners involved in land sales to the state be revealed resulted from a Florida Turnpike extension in Dade County.

A joint House-Senate committee will review all state agency rules to be sure they conform to law because of what Senate President-designate Dempsey Barron, D-Panama City, calls abuse by the "phantom government" of bureaucrats.

A separate law requires hearings before adoption of Pollution Control Department rules. Because of the dispute over a land swap at the Estero Bay aquatics preserve in Southwest Florida, the Cabinet will have to give notice and hold hearings before selling, leasing or trading any state land.

A water war between Pinellas and Hillsborough counties resulted in a new law allowing local governments to set up regional water supply authorities.

Autos

Series of new laws in other areas of concern include:

Autos

Allows auto inspection anytime before the safety sticker expires, not just in the expiration month.

Requires covering of trucks hauling anything that might blow or fall off, such as sand or rocks.

Allows a first-offender convicted of drunken driving to obtain a temporary driving permit to use in commuting or business travel if the judge approves and the driver attends a rehabilitation class.

Increases the penalty for failure to return a rented car, from a year imprisonment to five years.

Forbids an oil company to operate with its own employees more than three per cent of the Florida stations selling its brand of gasoline. Enforcement of this law has been blocked by suits by three oil companies.

Creates a council for the purchase of products and services of the blind or other severely handicapped.

Establishes a state registry of the handicapped and requires physicians and health agencies to report the severely handicapped to the Health and Rehabilitative Services Department.

Prohibits housing or job discrimination against the blind and handicapped, punishable by 60 days in jail or a $500 fine.

Building

publicans have but two congressional races, one state Senate and three state House races on the ballot.

Gunter and Stone may not be as close as Tweedledum and Tweedledee in their Democratic Senate runoff positions, but there is little to fret about on either side.

Each calls for spreading some Florida-style "government in the sunshine" into the dark recesses of the federal apparatus. They have similar positions on inflation, proposing to solve it by cuts in federal spending and lowering oil prices.

Gunter, 40, is a boyish, personable first-term congressman from Orlando. The more introversive of the two, he is conservative, almost staid in his personal manner. Stone, 45, the former secretary of state, is a native Michiganian who built an expensive replica of a plantation manor in Tallahassee. He is the flashier of the two, favoring gimmicks such as removing the doors from his office, and plunging into the murky waters of the Miami River.

Gunter is an insurance man who attended the University of Florida and was a national president of the Future Farmers of America. Stone is a Harvard-educated lawyer who married into a wealthy family. Second by nearly 77,000 votes, in a first primary surprise, Stone has carried the attack to his rival in the runoff.

He charges that Gunter is an "ab-sevente congressman" who votes as often as not against his state's interests.

Dejected in his attempts to project himself as the most serious candidate, Gunter has been forced to defend his record. He has scolded Stone's "sassy, glib answers" to monumental problems.

But it's unlikely that the average voter has detected much more about either candidate than that candidate is willing to show.

Each has poured a small fortune into television advertising, reducing the essence of the runoff campaign to impressions filtered from fleeting video images.

The winner of the Stone-Gunter contest faces Republican Jack Eckerd, millionaire founder of the drug chain that means about 994,000 Floridians, just less than one in seven, will select 36 party candidates and elect 12 judges for neighbors who can't or won't vote.

The contests for party nomination include senator, five congressional districts, secretary of state, comptroller, six state Senate races and 22 state House districts.

Nearly all the runoffs involve Democratic candidates. Retain a temporary driving permit to use in commuting or business travel if the judge approves and the driver attends a rehabilitation class.

'We Want To Keep What We've Got'

EDITOR'S NOTE — Wild ponies and deer, birds and mosquitoes inhabit the heart of Assateague Island, a primitive piece of the East Coast. Some area residents want to make it a federal wilderness, untouched by man. Others worry that might hurt their tourist trade.

By DAVE RILEY

ASSATEAGUE ISLAND, Va.-Md. (AP) — The hand of man

may have laid its last finger on at least part of this island paradise of deserted white beaches and bird-infested marshes. Despite the crowded public parks at each end of the 35-mile-long pencil-shaped island off the Maryland-Virginia coast, the island still is largely uninhabited only by wild deer and ponies, birds and herds of mosquitoes. It remains much as it was when the first explorers lowered their sails in the new world. Since it was first settled in the 1600s, Assateague Island has most of the land still is largely uninhabited only by wild deer and roads are maintained only in the park areas at the north and south ends of the island. The rest of Assateague is under the guard of the federal government and the care of nature, which for centuries has been unhindered in making its alterations to sand dunes, marshes and pitifully temporary man-made structures.

After recognizing Assateague as a national seashore, the federal government is seeking to keep a small part of this island, which officials describe as the last untouched coastline on the United States' Atlantic shore, a monument to what America was.

The Department of the Interior is preparing to recommend to Congress that 12 miles in the center of the island be declared a wilderness area to forever bar man's interference with its unique natural setting. "We're reasonably certain the proposal will be made to Congress this fall," said J.C.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Computer-controlled "people movers," automated baggage handling systems, futuristic air terminals... The latest technology is being used to build new airports and expand old ones across the country. But the traffic jams of people and planes are still a problem and will be for years to come.

By HOWARD BENEDICT Associated Press Writer
Airline passengers can zip from New York to Chicago in two hours and coast to coast in five.

But, as any seasoned traveler knows, getting to and from airports through major airports can be an annoying, choking sensation.

Approach roads are jammed. Taxi rides frequently are long and expensive. Parking lots are full. Ticket lines can be lengthy. Long walks to a departure gate or between terminals are common. It sometimes seems an eternity before baggage arrives.

The swift and reliable jet airliners, especially the wide-bodied jumbo jets, are attracting millions of new passengers each year. That adds to the airport saturation problem many cities are trying to solve with new, modern airports or expanded facilities.

Scheduled U.S. airlines carried 202 million passengers in 1973. The Air Transport Association forecasts more than 300 million passengers in 1980 and more than 700 million by the year 2000.

Automated

Automated "people movers," resembling miniature transit systems, now carry passengers around a few of the new airports, but the people movers haven't always worked properly. In the drive to modernize and expand airport capacity, computers have been installed in some places to handle baggage, but with mixed results.

Five cities — Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Kansas City, Tampa and Washington — have built new, modern airports in recent years, incorporating the latest technology. Other cities have looked at various systems. The costs were horrendous, nothing really worked and nothing impressed us. So we designed the "drive to your gate" concept to avoid such things as people movers.

Tampa's new $100-million international airport employs four computer-driven people-mover shuttles to take passengers from the central terminal to four satellite boarding areas. Maximum walking distance from ground transportation to a boarding gate is 700 feet.

2 injured

Since the airport opened three years ago, the shuttles have ferried 40 million people, with only two persons injured in a freak accident caused by human error.

The modern terminal has six floors. The first level is for baggage, second for ticketing, third for shops, restaurants, hotel and shuttles, and the top three for parking 1,800 cars.

Senility, Memory Therapy Proposed

MIAMI (AP) — Once they were vibrant, contributing members of society, this senility set in.

Although their bodies are still healthy, many elderly persons spend their time staring blankly at the television set, forgetting what they watch almost as soon as it's over.

Doctors at the Miami Heart Institute now think they may be on the track of a possible cure for memory loss and senility.

After three years of research, they report that oxygen is essential at high pressure, especially in conjunction with a particular drug, results in significant, though temporary, improvement in brain function.

"We don't want to take the gun," said Katy Rank, a spokeswoman for the institute. "But so far, the doctors are enthusiastic about the results."

Institute officials, afraid of overwhelming requests for assistance that could result from premature publicity, refuse to discuss the continuing research. But a paper presented by institute researchers at a medical convention last year spoke of "beneficial" effects in the improvement in short term memory of aged, senile subjects.

The process, called hyperbaric oxygenation, was developed in the 1920s as a treatment for victims of burns and gas gangrene. But doctors noted that many patients emerged from the body-length oxygen chamber with clearer minds.

During a 1971 study, institute researchers working with 19 senile patients found that after "10 treatments over a four-week period, the patient showing the greatest improvement had also been on acetazolamide therapy on an unrelated condition," the paper said.

Acetazolamide is a drug generally used to reduce pressure. When four other senile patients were given the drug, "the results were impressive," said the paper presented to the Fifth International Hypertensive Congress in Vancouver, B.C., Canada.

A new study, involving 38 subjects from 65 to 75 years old, was begun. Eighteen of the senile subjects were placed in the chamber for a half-hour each day for 10 days, and were given the drug. The others were organized into various control groups.

Later, the subjects were given a battery of psychological tests. In three major tests, the group receiving both high pressure oxygen and the drug recorded significant gains. Results varied for the other groups, with the group of patients receiving only the high

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Texas League Moving

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas League Friday announced tentative agreements paving the way for the move of league franchises to Jackson, Miss., and Lafayette, La. League president Bobby Bragan said the agreements were reached at a meeting of league officials here Friday evening.

He said officials gave approval for the sale of the Amarillo Giants by Steve Daly to Al Stuckman of Pittsburgh, who wants to move the franchise to Lafayette. Bragan announced also that the league gave permission to Cal Rockefeller, owner of the Victoria Toros, to move the team to Jackson, "provided certain stipulation are met."

The main condition, Bragan said, is the construction of the new Jackson stadium in time for the 1975 season.

Victoria won the Texas League title in its first year in the league. It averaged 850 fans per game.

Gymnasts Compete

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Twotime Olympic competitor Steven Hugg, 21, took opening night lead Friday in the final trial for the Men's U.S. World Gymnastics team at the University of Texas.

Hugg, a Stanford University graduate from Northridge, Calif., finished the compulsory competition with a score of 53.95.

Wayne Young, 22, a senior physical education major from Provo, Utah, took second place with 53.65.

The seven top gymnasts from the invitational meet will represent the United States at the World Games in Varna, Bulgaria, Oct. 19-28.

Expos' Surgery Set

MONTREAL (AP) — Catcher Terry Humphrey and pitcher Ernie McAnally of the Montreal Expos will undergo surgery next week, the National League club announced Friday night.

Humphrey injured the cartilage in his left knee during the season, which he divided with Montreal and the Memphis Blues of the International League, and will be operated on next Thursday.

McAnally, a right-handed pitcher, will undergo surgery to repair cartilage damage in his right knee next Wednesday.

Win Streak On The Line

BALTIMORE (AP) — Unbeaten middleweight Leo Saenz of Baltimore will put his 17-bout victory string on the line next Wednesday against Jose Anglada of New York.

Promoter Eli Hanover said the eight-round bout will be held in Steelworkers Hall.

Saenz, who recently celebrated his 20th birthday, has recorded 12 knockouts since turning pro only 18 months ago. Anglada, a native of the Dominican Republic, has KO'd 10 opponents but has been stopped the same number of times.

Sifford, Barber Share Lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Willie Barber matched Charlie Sifford at 69 to give both golfers a four-stroke lead after three rounds of the $75,000 U.S. National Senior Classic Golf Tournament.

Indians' Aspromonte Fired

CLEVELAND — Ken Aspromonte was fired as manager of the Cleveland Indians, increasing the speculation that Frank Robinson would be chosen to pilot the team next season and become the first black manager in major league baseball.

Casper Feast After Famine

NAPA, Calif. — Veteran Billy Casper, seeking his first victory in more than a year, managed a four-stroke lead and expanded his lead to two strokes after the second round of the $150,000 Kaiser International Open golf tournament.

Patterson's Three TD Runs Beat Raiders; Oviedo 28-12

By LEE GEIGER
Herald Correspondent

OVIEDO — Clennie Patterson's three touchdown runs more than made up for two costly first period mistakes as the Oviedo Lions to a come-from-behind 28-12 win over the Rockledge Raiders here Friday night.

The east coast visitors jumped out on top after just over a minute and a half of elapsed playing time. Running out of a "wish-bone offense" the Raiders used a simple counter play on third and seven during their opening series of downs.

Second man through, Arthur Butts, took the hand-off from quarterback Carmen Perez and scampered 46 yards for the first points Rockledge had rung up this far this season.

The Lions took the ensuing kickoff and marched down field behind the bull-dozing running of Patterson. Five straight times signal caller Lee Ward went to Patterson. Then, with the running game more than established, he took to the air and hit Lou Rajchel twice for first downs.

With the ball resting on the four yard line and 4:52 showing on the clock, Patterson got the call again, but failed to produce at he coughed up the ball allowing Rockledge to recover deep in their own territory.

Rockledge's Jack Smirk was kind enough to return the favor when he fumbled on his own 20 with just over two minutes left in the period.

Patterson carried the ball for four yards but then turned right around and again fumbled away the ball on the next play.

The Raiders continued to play the game of "give-away" when Perez allowed one of his passes to be picked off by Dan Myers at Rockledge's 24 with just 23 seconds left in the poorly played period.

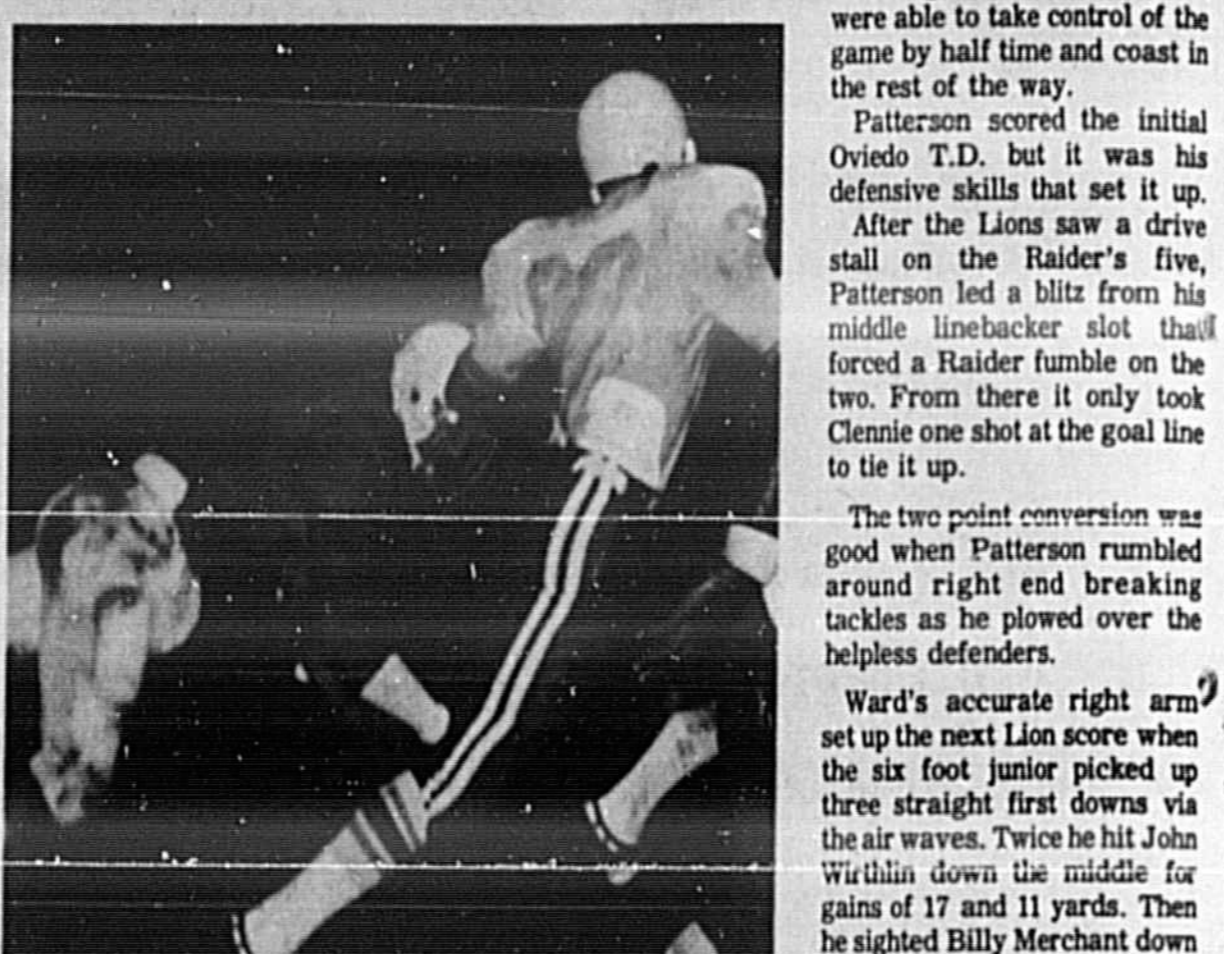

Added by eight more, Rockledge fumbles the Lions were able to take control of the game by half time and coast in the rest of the way.

Patterson scored the initial Oviedo T.D. but it was his defensive skills that set it up.

After the Lions saw a drive stall on the Raiders' five, Patterson led a blitz from his middle linebacker slot that forced a Raider fumble on the two. From there it only took Clennie one shot at the goal line to tie it up.

Oviedo's Billy Merchant, 32, makes his move in the Lions' 28-12 win

Oviedo tackler pursues Rockledge runner

Ward's accurate right arm set up the next Lion score when the six foot junior picked up three straight first downs via the air waves. Twice he hit John Wadlin down the middle for gains of 17 and 11 yards. Then he sighted Billy Merchant down field and completed that pass for 18 more yards.

Patterson then broke through the middle and the Lions were on top 14-6 at half time. The one yard plunge by Patterson came with just 23 seconds left to play before intermission.

It appeared the Lion's had it all sewn up when Allan Watts picked up a fumble and ran 47 yards for a 20-6 lead.

Cards Really 'Hit' With 10-4 Cub Win

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

First, Chicago Cub pitcher Tom Detmore hit Bake McBride with a pitch in the top of the fourth inning.

Then, Bob Gibson of the Cardinals plunked Pete LaCock leading off the Chicago fourth.

shaded San Francisco 4-3 and Montreal blanked Philadelphia 2-0.

The Cardinals, who engaged in a free-for-all with the Cubs last week in St. Louis, won the game but came out of it with five injured players.

Gibson, who drove in four runs on a double and a sacrifice fly, left after six innings with a stiff shoulder. Relievers Rich Folkers, who injured his back, and Mike Garman, who took a line drive off his left shin, also left the game. So did Meride, with an injured right arm after being hit by a pitch, and Reggie Smith, who strained his back.

Pirates 2, Mets 1
Jerry Rouse outbatted Jon Matlack with a seven-inning loss. Both Pirate runs came in the sixth. Rennie Stennett led off with a single and took third on Manny Sanguillen's single.

Stennett scored on Willie Stargell's double and Sanguillen came home on a sacrifice fly by Bob Robertson.

Padres 4, Dodgers 2
Pinch runner John Scott scored the winning run on shortstop Bill Russell's error with two out in the ninth.

Rookie Dan Spillner, 2-11, scattered six hits in going the distance. Dave Winfield homered for San Diego and Bill Buckner hit one for Los Angeles.

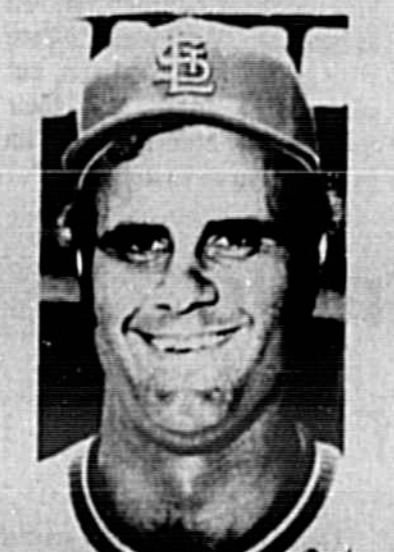

Dave Concepcion scored all the way from first base with the winning run on a throwing error by San Francisco pitcher Gary Lavelle. Concepcion and Tony Perez added home runs for the Reds. Bobby Bonds accounted for all the Giant runs with a homer in the first.

Red 4, Giants 3
The triumph enabled the Cards to keep pace with Pittsburgh, 2-1 winners over the New York Mets, in the National League East race. St. Louis and Pittsburgh remain tied at 84-73 records with five games to play.

Elsewhere, San Diego edged Los Angeles 3-2, Cincinnati

BOB ORRELL Archers Bag Bucks, Wild Hogs; Anglers Find Some Bass, Bream

Columbus Hobbs, hunting on Magnolia Ranch (the Mormon property) with bow and arrow downed a six point buck this week. Another buck was reported taken at Bull Creek in Osceola County and four wild hogs were bagged by archers hunting the same area, according to word received from Jim Blythe at the Plaza Sports Shop.

Archers have not fared too well this year, possibly because high water has made many sports inaccessible where game is usually found.

Fresh water fishing reports have been somewhat on the slack side but some good catches have been made in spite of the uncertain weather.

The fish seem to be there, but not too many people are trying for them.

Archie Smith, Jr. checked in at Seminole Sporting Goods Store with a string of four bass, the largest one tipping the scales at an even nine pounds. Archie used the striped "Bang-O-Lure" plug to land his catch.

Speckled perch continue to show signs of coming to life in Lake Jessup. Lowell Hiley, camp operator, said one party fishing near his camp landed five nice ones and a large channel catfish early this week. Not a big string as local catches go, but according to Hiley, the couple had a very enjoyable time, and after all isn't that what fishing is all about?

Boone Caudell accompanied this writer on a short expedition seeking bass last Saturday. The bass were not very cooperative, only two were landed, so we switched to light spinning gear and "Beate-Spin" lures to try for bream.

Caudell said he had never fished for bream, but after assisting in landing 20 of those big copperheads, he is now a confirmed bream fisherman.

Catfish And Bream Still Available

The Wekiva River is rising again after all the rain this week, but redstart bream and catfish are still available for those who want to go after them. At Camp Seminole, only a few people were out this past weekend, but they caught enough for eating purposes.

Wekiva River Haven Camp had much the same story to report. George Cheney, the manager, told of one angler getting some terrific strikes right in front of the camp while using live shiners for bait.

He was unable to bring one in so the issue is still in doubt as to whether it was a big bass or a garfish hitting his minnows.

Oviedo are still the best bet for those fishing out of Oviedo Bridge Camp and specks are showing up with increasing frequency—bass seem to be in hiding.

The old wooden bridge, long a sore point for people having to use S.R. 415, was open Thursday evening to accommodate a boat too large to pass under. Traffic was backed up for several hundred yards in each direction as the manually operated draw span was opened. How many years have we been promised a new bridge here?

Jimmy Bailey and Jack Jones, Jr. found the right spot Thursday for bass. Between the two, they put 14 nice ones up to four pounds on the stringer.

Bailey said a weighted worm fished on the bottom and a "Spot" plug did the job.

Fred Sweet at the "Fishing Hole" mentioned some fair catches of specks being landed on the East side of Lake Monroe. Bank fishing along the sea wall is producing pretty well on both bream and specks.

Remember the old Jim Pfeffer "Orlando Shiner" plug? It was a standout for catching bass a few years ago—a must in every tackle box. Bass fishermen will be glad to know that it is once again in production in limited quantities. Every lure is handsome so only about 60 per month are available. They are truly a work of art and can be found at the Plaza Sports Shop.

Tarpons, Reds, And Trout On Coast

The Shupe brothers, Jim and Paul, had some good sport in the Cocoa area this week. Using top water "Mirrolure" plugs, they landed channel bass of 10 and 14 pounds, a tarpon, and 20 trout. The largest "red" swallowed Jim's plug so deeply he had to wait until he dressed him to retrieve it.

The Northeast which has been blowing for several days has kept charter boats in port along the East Coast but all things have their good side. The first Northeast of the Fall usually ushers in some of the best fishing of the year. Fingerling mullet come into the surf by the millions and the game fish such as blues and channel bass are right behind them.

The big run of blues hasn't started yet, the water temperature still a little too hot, but watch out when the first cool spell hits! Last Fall, plug casters on the Daytona piers had bluefish stacked up like cord wood.

On the Main Street Ocean Pier this week, channel bass in the two to four pound range were taking live shrimp. Whiting, an occasional Spanish mackerel, pompano and a few blues, were the norm.

Freedom 'Inoperative' With Pros

By IRA BERKOW
The Herald Services

NEW YORK — (NEA) — While on the subject, we may also ask: Is the president of a nation to sell his services to a competitor, the owner maintains a listful of rein.

Manny Fernandez, Miami Dolphin Lineman, was for example carrying about $30,000 a season until a few teammates signed with the rival league. Only then did Fernandez' employer see fit to pay him about half a million dollars for the next five years to keep him in the Miami pit.

Thus one may easily see why the owners and the basketball owners, men who profess that they speak — hand on lapel flag — in the best interests of the free American democratic capitalist system.

To prove their point, they have the Star Spangled Banner played before games, have military recruits sworn in at half-time and, at the height of patriotic extravaganzas, rally the wholesale release of pigeons painted red, white and blue.

How have these owners kept their teams intact, and kept competition of the leagues at a compelling party? Simply at the expense, if you will, of the players particularly and the fans more peripherally.

Now, no one this side of a booby hatch would deny that sports is a business and not a community-spirited diversion. Owners are primarily businessmen, trying like hell to pump as much profit as possible from their investment.

The athlete is "drafted." That is, after college he is given no choice of where he may play. His choice, in fact, is whether to play or skip sports for some other vocation.

Why were drafts instituted? To make the teams more equitable in player personnel. This is undemocratic in that it is a form of cartel. Once drafted, the player cannot shop around.

Once signed, the athlete then becomes indentured under the reserve clause which binds him to his team — unless the team decides to trade him (without his consent) or otherwise dump him.

Another way owners enjoy the best of all possible worlds has been the rules they dream up in pro basketball and football against signing an athlete before his college class graduates. This is egregious and fascist collusion between the colleges and the pros. Why, in America, is a human being prevented the freedom of choice of college or the pros? After age 16, in America, one is no longer forced to attend school — unless he is an aspiring pro football or basketball player.

But the colleges make huge sums at the gate from their football and basketball teams; the pro owners view this benignly since the athlete hones his skills in a virtual minor league, saving the pro owner that expense.

And these patriotic pro owners, or their like-minded predecessors, also kept blacks out of pro sports (including baseball, "the national pastime" as those owners enjoyed having it called). It was felt that the majority of whites would not pay to see blacks on the same field with whites. For similar economic reasons, no black man has been hired as a manager in baseball or head coach in football.

These emperors of brum-mage go so far as to limit free access of information on the airwaves when it threatens their product. They often rule game broadcasts with an iron hand, having the last word on which announcers are hired. (The New York Yankees once fired Red Barber for talking about the sparse crowds in the stadium.)

And note how, with only painfully few exceptions, these whipped shills recently found the word "strike" virtually verboten.

There is nothing sacrosanct about pro sports in America. Rather, there ought not to be anything sacrosanct about them. If they can't live under the democratic system, then they should be dissolved — or traded to Russia for a ballet ensemble.

Pro sports arose here because businessmen (some of whom were also athletes) thought they could turn a neat profit with the idea, an extension of the traditional "town" and "factory" teams that were hotly competitive and exciting entertainment for fans.

Yes, there was a time when professional sports did not exist in America — like around when the Constitution was written.

Miss Clark, presently a junior at Rollins, currently holds the title of Florida State Women's Collegiate Champion. Miss Cindy Patterson, a sophomore, will combine to form the nucleus of the 7-4-7 team.

In addition, Miss Kay Kennedy, a junior from Dayton, Ohio, Miss Nancy Platzer, in her fourth year, hailing from New York City, and sophomores Beth Radford of Louisville, Ky., and Sally Royston of Pittsburgh, Pa., will join forces to add to the winning effort.

Among the top newcomers will be Miss Terrie Thoreson of Snogulmie, Washington, who was on the receiving end of several high school golf awards while also performing for four years on her high school basketball team. "She is a very promising golfer," said Miss Jarrigan, "we will be looking for her to fill the shoes of graduated Pat Williams who was ranked No. 11 last year in the national polls." Miss Chris Deesch and Miss Diana Lucy are also rated among the top freshman prospects.

The women will open their season on October 6 when they travel to Miami to participate in the Falcoette Invitational Tournament which will bring opposition from such strong contenders as Miami, Florida, Florida State, South Florida and Florida International. Miami Dade Community College North and Palm Beach Junior College will also be represented at the tourney. Last year the Rollins coach finished in a first place tie with the women of the University of Miami.

Other tournaments scheduled for the new year include the Florida State Invitational (October 20-22) in Tallahassee, the Lady Gator Tournament (November 17-19) in Gainesville, the University of Miami Invitational (Feb. 23-25) in Miami, the Rollins Invitational (March 17-19), the Florida State Collegiate (April 20-23) in Miami and the University of Georgia Invitational set for Athens, Ga. May 1-3.

Ellison also criticized the FSU Athletic Department for duplicate meal reimbursements on team travel, paying for personal long distance telephone calls and unauthorized insurance premium payments.

FSU President Stanley Marshall said in an audit response that "appropriate measures have been taken to prevent unauthorized payments" by the Athletic Department.

Ellison was harsh in his criticisms of the university's general accounting procedures, saying to "adequacies made it impossible to satisfy myself by appropriate audit tests" on the validity of financial statements.

One Must Be Special To Support Cubbies

By IRA BERKOW
NEW YORK — (NEA) — A breathtakingly humdrum event recalled in 1974. For the 23rd consecutive baseball season, the Chicago Cubs failed to win the pennant. And they have again sunk to the cellar.

They may even be beginning a challenge to the major league record for most consecutive seasons ending in the second division, 20, held by these same unbleached Cubs, from 1947 through 1966.

There seems little question that the Cubs will eventually beat the Phillies' National League mark of most consecutive pennantless seasons, 35, and then burrow ever onward to the major league nadir of 43, held by the entombed St. Louis Browns.

A Cub fan knows nothing is inconceivable, particularly when it comes to his eminently vanquishable Cubbies. Just this season alone, the Cubs discovered ever more creative ways to lose, something they have done (losing, that is, creative or otherwise) nearly 2,500 times since I began following them in 1948 at age 8, from my second-floor flat on the West Side of Chicago.

In one game this season the Dodgers won when their base runner scored from second because the Cub catcher was backing up first and the pitcher forgot to cover home plate.

Another time, the Cubs had a Cardinal runner trapped between third base and home. The catcher chased the runner toward third, then tossed to the third baseman. The catcher's momentum carried him past the runner, unfortunately, and the Cardinal then scored the winning run since home plate had been vacated.

The Cubs' best player, Billy Williams, was put out of action when he specked himself while trying to beat out a grounder. Indignities multiplied. The Cubs have a relief pitcher named Oscar Zamora. Other teams sing a song about him, which goes: "When the pitcher is so fat—that the ball hits the bat—That's Zamora." And Oscar happens to be the Cubs' best relief pitcher.

Added pitcher Lou Brock may be the National League's Most Valuable Player. The Cubs traded him to the Cards in 1974 for pitcher Ernie Briggs, who never recovered from the trade or his sore arm.

Speaking of honors, Ferguson Jenkins may be the Cy Young Award winner. The Cubs peddled him last season to Texas after Jenkins failed for the first time in seven seasons to win 20 games. The two guys he was traded for have both spent most of the season recuperating from torn ligaments.

Possibly the single greatest Cub fan this season was performed by Bill Bonham. He struck out the side in a game. When a Cub pitcher strikes out the side, it's a record. No kidding. The catcher dropped the third strike on the second batter, who reached first safely. So Bonham had to strike out four guys in the inning.

Cub catcher George Mitterwald hit three homers in one game this April, and hit only three homers more by late September. This is symbolic of the Cubs because so often they trade or sell off their best players, then noisively like Evel Knievel's sky-cycle.

It has been an incredible thing to follow the Cubs. Few realize the Cubs once had championship teams. In fact, in 1904 they held the record for having won more pennants than any other team, 16 (counting from 1876, instead of the "modern age" from 1900).

Then the Yankees, who had won 15 A.L. pennants, tied the Cubs in 1949, and went ahead in 1950, and farther ahead in '51, '52, '53, '55, '56, '57, '58, '60, '61, '62, '63, '64. Each succeeding season was a twist of the knife toward the Cub fan's heart.

A Cub fan, plagued by such vicissitudes, is marked for life, understandably. But controversy engulfs the effect. This spring, syndicated political columnist George Will, an Illinoisan and long-time Cub fan, wrote:

"Liberals are temperamentally inclined to see the world as a harmonious carnival of sweetness and light, where good will prevails... Conservatives (and Cub fans) know that the world is a dark and forbidding place where most knowledge is false, most improvements are for the worse... and an unscrupulous Providence consigns innocents to suffering."

Pancho: It's Now Time To Pick On Greybeards

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Most old lions, on a sultry Sunday afternoon, would wish to crawl into tall, cool grass and loll away the rest of the day.

And so it seemed for Pancho Gonzalez, the tawny, ferocious tennis king of years gone by. Fittingly, Gonzalez slumped on two folding chairs in the shade of the Forest Hills grandstand, his tennis socks and belly both slightly droop.

Languidly, he drew back his shoulder-length mane, now streaked with gray, and slowly allowed the contents of a cold can of Pepsi to wet his 45-year-old whiskie.

Soon, however, he would compete in the finals of the Pinch Grand Masters tournament, a new concept designed more for nostalgia than for embattled prestige.

Gonzales has been retired for over a year from the major circuit and, except for playing in six of the 11 "Grand Masters" tournaments (winning three), he has spent relatively little time at tennis games. Instead, he has promoted a clothing line and tennis equipment that both bear his name, given lessons at a Las Vegas hotel where he serves as pro, and, like the celebrated Fraser the Sensuous Lion, has dallied at such activities with his wife that Pancho is happy to a month-old daughter. (He also has had seven other children, and a grandson.)

With the new languorous life Gonzalez now carries on his 6-5 frame 210 pounds, up 25 pounds from the days he lurked so swiftly, powerfully, gracefully and, yes, viciously on the tennis courts of the world.

In fact, these days are not so long gone, incredibly enough, since only a year ago the regal old lion was still chomping up and spitting out some of the game's better young players — a full quarter of a century after he had first won the U.S. Open title at age 20. Then one day he concluded that his bones ached just too much to go on.

A blue-blazed official now appeared before the reclining Gonzalez, and quietly, solicitously began to explain to "Pancho" how Gonzalez would ceremoniously be introduced to the crowd.

Never moving, Gonzalez suddenly broke in. Smiling — one had to take notice of Pancho's yellowing but still sharp teeth — Gonzalez hissed, "The last thing a player wants to do before a match is talk."

From within those aging pouches, Pancho's brown eyes flashed. His jawbone jumped. The scar on his left cheek glinted. The official recoiled, and disappeared in a puff.

"My God," exclaimed a woman in the stands, watching Gonzalez now playing Torben Ulrich, "he is still beautiful." And his passion irrevocable. After hitting his fluid, booming serve Gonzalez still attacks the net, only a little less so. And he can still play coyly, only a little more so.

He chanced now to see in the stands the Rumanian Ilie Nastase, a prize in more ways than one. Nastase, in his late 20s, has hair as long as Gonzalez', but blacker. His temper is as terrible and notorious as Gonzalez'. And Pancho has been his mentor and hero. So Nastase, drawn as in a kind of pilgrimage, stops on his way to a match on a nearby court to briefly view Pancho in action.

It is early in the second of a maximum three sets (it is assumed by directors that the standard five sets is too grueling for "old timers"). And his passion irrevocable. After hitting his fluid, booming serve Gonzalez still attacks the net, only a little less so. And he can still play coyly, only a little more so.

Pancho smiles at Nastase and points with his racket to a spot on the court. Nastase nods back. Ulrich, the bearded, pony-tailed, finely tuned 46-year-old Dane, serves. Gonzalez swats a backhand cross court and out of Ulrich's reach. Nastase laughs and claps and says, "Go father."

Gonzales points again, to a different spot. Ulrich watches Gonzalez with distaste. One is reminded of how Gonzalez, the suave competitor, had always tried to unseat a rival, using everything down to, as now, a form of disdain. Rod Laver once surmised up the feeling of most of the other players toward the man who had won the American League West.

The Rangers were simply the worst team in professional baseball in 1973 — losing more than 100 games with the worst hitting and pitching around. They drew 68,150 diehard fans. After a brief managerial spin at Denver, Martin took Minnesota from seventh place in 1969 to the AL West pennant.

land but they scared the world champion A's and in the process drew over a million fans — some 500,000 more than last season.

How did I know the Rangers would draw a million? Martin asked. "Well, I knew people would respond to winning baseball. Why shouldn't I say that if I thought we could win?"

This year has been a different kind of challenge... a different test for me as a manager," said Martin. "It's the biggest test I've had."

"I don't like to say I'm surprised the way things turned out. You could see in spring training that Lenny Randle, Jim Sundberg, Mike Hargrave, Joe Lovitto, and Toby Harrah could help this club. Now, Cesar Tovar is a guy I really went after."

Tovar was obtained in an off-season trade with Philadelphia and the Rangers acquired 24-game winner Ferguson Jenkins from the Chicago Cubs.

"I found aggressive ballplayers — that's the type of baseball I like to play," Martin said. "We have to find another starter and another left-handed reliever," Martin said. "I think we have enough players if we can do that."

"We have a good chance to draw 1.3 million or 1.4 million next year."

'Billy' Knows Turning Point

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Ask brass Billy Martin the turning point for the once laughing 60-year-old Texan in 1974 and he snaps back: "Spring training."

Martin has made believers out of even the most hardened cynics who giggled when he predicted last winter that Texas would draw over a million fans in 1974 and who Oakland in the American League West.

Fight To Free Freedom's Symbol

Her curiosity about birds in general and admiration for birds of prey in particular was aroused long before Hallie hit the headlines.

Eleven years ago Mrs. Mager took a job running the little store in Audubon House, Maitland. The constant inquiries from members about birds prompted her to buy a bird book and binoculars, attend ornithology classes, and learn about the feathered creatures.

One day a fierce red-tailed hawk was brought in, bedraggled and battered from some accident. "One look at that magnificent bird, and my love affair with birds of prey began," she smiles.

Over the years she has nursed back to health more than 35 birds of prey. In large cages in the woods behind her country home near the Wekiva State Park she is currently tending a barred owl, a great horned owl, another red tailed hawk and a desperately sick osprey.

In addition, her fascination with birds has led her around the world, to Africa, Central and South America, as an Audubon Society tour guide.

Back in January, 1972, newspaper cuttings carrying the story of Mrs. Mager's valiant efforts to save Hallie, a southern bald eagle wounded by a hunter, were mailed to her from as far field as Hawaii and Germany.

Concert Curtain Raisers

The first of three professional shows to be brought to the Sanford Civic Center by the Seminole Mutual Concert Association, Tennessee Williams' Pulitzer Prize winning play, A Streetcar Named Desire, is scheduled for Nov. 1.

The play, highly acclaimed as one of Williams' greatest, depicts the sensual as opposed to the beautiful and cultured life. Performed by Kansas' Contemporary Theatre Company, the part of the tragic Blanche is played by Rebecca Lundahl, and Michael Gorman is the brutal Stanley.

A Streetcar Named Desire first opened in New York with Jessica Tandy as the ill-fated heroine, Blanche DuBois, and Marlon Brando as Stanley. Later made into a motion picture, the drama won almost every Oscar presented.

The story of the bewildered Blanche who comes to her sister's life in New Orleans as a last retreat only to meet with disaster, provides for many audiences an absorbing drama. The tragedy becomes complete in the climax of the play when Blanche is confronted with the animal like lusts of Stanley.

Two other shows have already been looked for the coming concert season. They include The Guy Lombardo Orchestra and Show on Feb. 22.

Divorce: Go Gently On The Kids

By ANTHEA LINACRE
The Herald Services

LOS ANGELES — You're going to get a divorce and this is associated with the news to your children.

However you do it, it will have a great emotional impact on them, says Dr. Rita Rogers, head of child psychiatry at Harbor General Hospital in suburban Torrance.

The impact need not be harmful, but it is all too often. "Unfortunately," what frequently happens is that the parents are feeling so hurt and confused they let their children at the very time when they need special attention," says Dr. Rogers, who is also associated professor of psychiatry at UCLA.

"It is important to tell children as soon as the decision for divorce is final and explain, as honestly as possible, why the essential thing is to reassure them that although you are no longer going to be partners, you will continue to be loving parents."

Dr. Rogers is highly critical of partners who sling mud by putting all the blame on the other.

"This is very detrimental for the child because nothing can alter the fact that the abused person is one of their parents and responsible for part of their makeup."

"Their perception of their father or mother is an important psychological ingredient in the type of men and women they become."

So, when you have spat, what then? "You can try to avoid custody battles which create another trauma for the child," says Dr. Rogers.

"Some parents are so embittered that they will attempt to hurt the children just to hurt the other partner."

"Even worse are those cases where neither partner really wants to keep the child, so both try and palm him off on the other."

Assuming, though, that you do want to keep your children, how do you then shield them from further hurt? "You can stay where you are," says Dr. Rogers. "The same home, school, and friends will help to cushion the blow. To yank children away and take them elsewhere adds terribly to their insecurity."

Governor Asks How Does His Bit To Boost Women's Liberation

The Governor's Commission on the Status of Women, first established in Florida in 1964 by Gov. Farris Bryant, was reactivated earlier this year by Gov. Reubin Askew.

According to Askew: "The human being is our greatest natural resource, but in many instances, those beings who happen to be women have not been afforded the opportunity to receive the intellectual, educational, legal, and economic benefits necessary to fully develop their abilities."

The ultimate objective of the commission, said Askew, "is to create a climate in which each individual can hope to contribute the utmost in achieving a better way of life, regardless of sex."

The commission also serves as an advisory board to the governor on matters affecting or of particular interest to women.

arrived almost two years after Mrs. Mager had, as it were, taken Hallie under her wing. After the bird's recovery, the federal government allowed Mrs. Mager to decide Hallie's future. If she decided to keep the bird, the federal government agreed to issue a special permit — a rare privilege, when the penalty for having just a single bald eagle feather in one's possession without a permit is a $2,000 fine.

Mrs. Mager, agonized at parting with Hallie who had become a privileged guest in her home, decided nevertheless it would be best to donate the eagle to the Patuxent research institute in Laurel, Md.

The heart-breaking letter she received in December, 1973, was from the director of the institute. Hallie was dead. The old wound had become infected and the eagle was dead before they spotted the ailment.

Hallie's death was the tragic end for one bald eagle, but it was the beginning of a whole new life for all others of her kind in the land.

Public interest was aroused, federal regulations and penalties protecting the threatened species were intensified, and researchers across the country redoubled their efforts to learn more about the remaining bald eagle population so they would better know how to protect them from extinction.

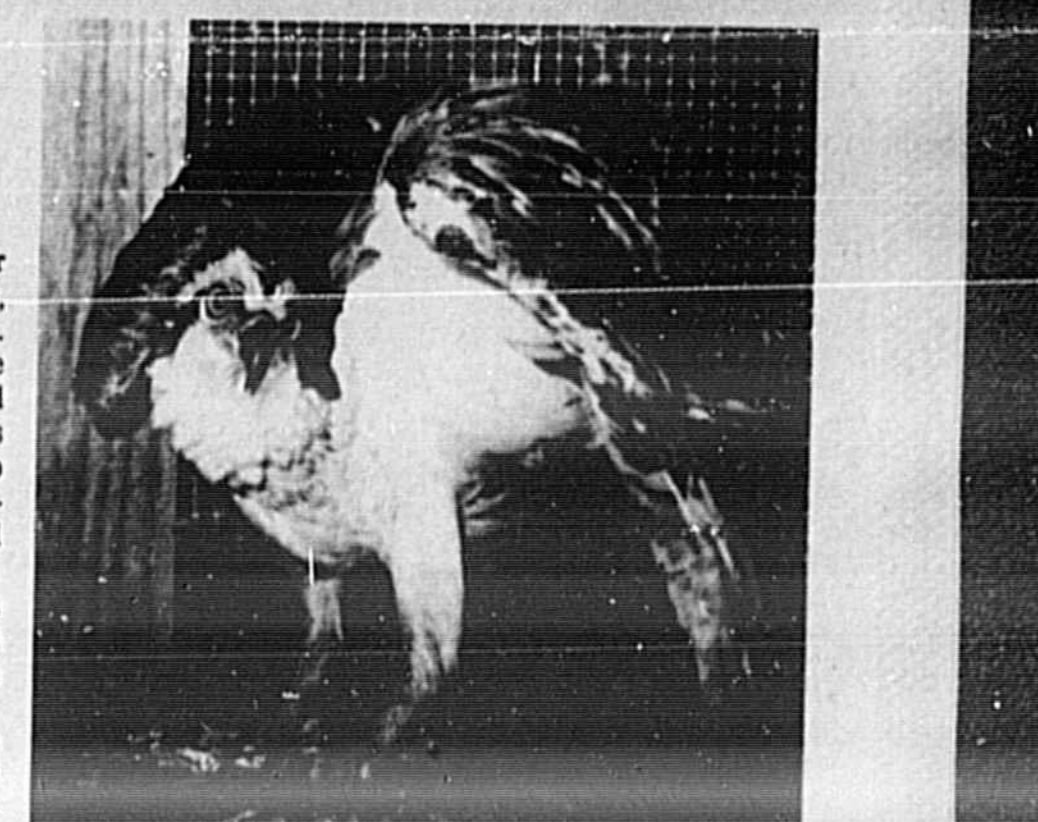

In 1972 Mrs. Mager joined in a cooperative state and federal venture to survey the active bald eagle nests statewide in Florida as part of a nationwide inventory to determine the overall population of birds.

During the Oct. 1972-March 1973 nesting season, in the Southeast, a total of 106 active nests producing 84 young, 96 of these producing 77 young, were spotted in Florida. Thirty-nine active nests from which 45 young were hatched, were found in Central Florida.

Florida's population represented 15 per cent of the nation's total, and Alaska is the only other state with a significant bald eagle population.

Results of the latest Florida survey are significantly higher, but this is attributed to better and more complete coverage of eagle nesting habitat around the state.

The saddest letter of all Mrs. Mager's part in the survey is financed largely by the Audubon Society's commemorative stamp project. Began after Hallie aroused public interest in the bald eagle, the society has been collecting U.S. and foreign commemorative stamps sent in by persons across the nation, and preparing and packaging them for sale to dealers. The stamps bring in almost $2,000 a year, but a lot more stamps are needed if work towards saving the bald eagles is to continue, according to their champion.

DEAR ABBY

Column Prompts

Special Song
By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your recent exchange of letters concerning coeducational views at college prompts me to think you might be amused by this song which I wrote, published and copyrighted a few months ago.

Your constant reader,
RICHARD L. GREEN, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

THE OLD FASHIONED CO-ED

(To the tune of "Don't Send My Boy to Harvard, the Dying Mother Said")
One busy Monday morning in the office of the dean
A pretty girl with downcast eyes appeared upon the scene
The dean was brisk and businesslike; her slacks were neatly pressed;
She asked the girl the reason why she felt herself distressed.

"I'm dropping out," the student said, "although I hoped to stay;
I'm sure that I could never last until Commencement Day;
I'm sure that I could never last until Commencement Day;
I'll try to find some backward school that has a woman's dorm."
Chorus:

I did not come to college to lose my maiden flower;
I came to work and study hard for every credit hour;
For eighteen years I've walked upon the straight and narrow path:
I do not want a football man to share my room and bath.

"I cannot help you," said the dean; "our policy is clear:
In rich, mature relationships we do not interfere;
If normal, heterosexual life is making you so nervous,
I would suggest that you consult our psychiatric service."
"No, thank you," said the girl; "I know that here I don't belong;
I'll try to find some backward place where folks say 'right' and 'wrong'."

The tears were trembling on her lids; she quickly turned away;
And as she closed the office door these sad words she did say:
Chorus:
I did not come to college etc.

DEAR RICHARD: Beautiful! And bless your sweet whiffenpoof for sharing.

DEAR ABBY: If an advertisement on TV or radio is repulsive to me, I refuse to buy the product, even if it's the cheapest of several brands.

For example, the other day there were three different brands of toilet tissue on the shelf in a supermarket. One I had never heard of; another I had seen advertised occasionally, but not often; and a third whose TV commercials were so repulsive to me that I actually have changed the channel so I wouldn't have to look at it. I bought the middle brand.

My wife disagreed. She wanted to buy the brand with the repulsive advertising because she thought it was the best quality. Who is right? Am I to ignore the repulsive advertising because of quality? Letters to the network don't help. I've written and complained, but the TV advertising gets worse.

FRUSTRATED
DEAR FRUSTRATED: You're complaining to the wrong people. Write to the president of the company who makes the repulsive TV advertising and tell him why! If enough complaints cross his desk, he will inform his ad agency that he wants some changes made.

DR. L. E. LAMB

First Child

Cooled' Hubby

DEAR DR. LAMB—I don't have a doctor I can talk to, so I am turning to you for help. My husband and I have been married for a little over three years. At first we made love every night. We wanted a child, so I got pregnant. Then he stopped making love to me altogether.

He began staying up late at night and insisted that I go to bed by 10. It was just awful for me, but I thought after the baby came things would be different.

After I got my checkup and the doctor told me we could resume marital relations, he made love to me once, then he didn't touch me again for two weeks. I was crushed. It's been like this since. We make love on the average of once every six weeks. Once we went for nearly three months.

I'm fairly well-proportioned and am attractive to other men. I know because they flirt with me. Now after over two years I feel something must be done. I have told him I was going to write you and he begged me not to and promised to start being more of a husband. But, I have heard that so many times that I don't care to hear it again.

I have tried every way I can to get him to realize that our marriage lacks affection. I love him very much and he loves me and adores our daughter. He isn't having an affair. He spends too much time at home, even his lunch hour. I almost wish he were, then at least I would know that he is normal.

DEAR READER—Of course you are unhappy, and you have every reason to be. Although he may not show it, your husband is also unhappy. No man who is unhappy can really be happy with himself. He undoubtedly feels a great deal of pressure. For the future happiness of you both, something should indeed be done about it.

In the first place your husband must be normal from a hormonal and physiological point of view. The fact that you had daily marital relations at the beginning of your marriage strongly supports this, and it provides reasonable hope that something can be done to return your marriage to its previous level. In fact, if the two of you overcome your problems, it may end up making the marriage stronger.

Your husband doesn't just have a low sex drive, either. He has as much drive as any one before you got pregnant, so it is more complicated than that. One key to the puzzle is that it has been this way since you got pregnant. Pregnancies sometimes induce great strains in a marriage and cause other problems to surface for the first time.

You can't hope to resolve the basic problem by your trying to resume marital relations, because you are trying to make love to you. That just isn't the basic nature of love, as you know. He has to want to love you for it to mean anything to him. What he needs to do is find out why he no longer wants to have marital relations.

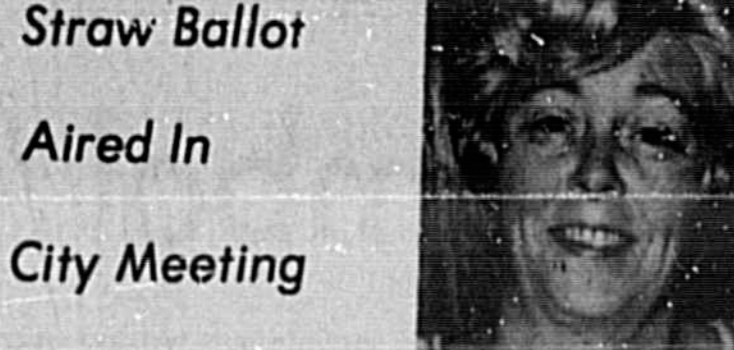

No doubt you do contribute to his reaction as a marriage and his problems or joys is really the outcome of the interaction of the two people, an action and a reaction. You probably are unaware of what your role in this complex situation is.

Unfortunately I can't give you a magic solution. You both will need some professional help. I note that the address on your letter that the type of help you need will likely be available in your own town. However, you can go to your family doctor and ask that he make arrangements for your husband to see a psychiatrist in a nearby large city. Your husband is going to talk at this, but if you both realize that it is for both of you and what it means to your future happiness, perhaps he will do it. You should also agree to see the same or a different psychiatrist. You can't really resolve the basic problem without professional help.

It could be that your husband has reacted in some way to the birth of your child. An understanding of his reaction and why he had it could help him a great deal. He will need to resolve whatever it is before he can be a happy and successful mate with anybody. You in turn may have unknowingly aggravated the problem. You can't do much about that either until you understand it.

NANCY'S NEWSNOTES

Straw Ballot Aired In City Meeting

NANCY BOOTH

I attended a meeting of the Seminole County League of Women Voter's recently.

The main topics of discussion were the three questions that will appear on the Nov. 5 ballot; a referendum concerning employment of a superintendent of schools; and two straw votes relating to non-partisan election of school board members and levy of a 1/2 mill tax for a county-wide public library system.

Shirley Maok, education committee member, gave an informative lecture on the issues and why the League supports them.

Mrs. Maok said points favoring an appointed superintendent were the higher qualifications of an experienced educator; the time and money that would be saved due to the lack of campaigning; and the superintendent could function independent of party politics, would owe no political favors and there would be no "back passing."

An elected superintendent, however, offered the advantages of being a county resident familiar with county problems.

The League supports the straw vote in favor of non-partisan election of school board members on the grounds education is not political; party politics have no place in our schools; and time and money would be saved by dispensing with the need of a primary election, according to Mrs. Maok. She added board membership is a public trust and should not be used as a political stepping stone.

Mickie Adams, League member and member of the Seminole County Library Facilities Advisory Committee spoke on the county-wide library system giving in depth facts and figures to support the tax levy.

The All-Day Bazaar will be held on Oct. 12 at Sunshine Park located at the bottom of North Edgemoor.

There will be a fire demonstration by the Winter Springs Volunteer Fire Department, a Winter Springs police booth to provide general information in the various areas of law enforcement, an arts and crafts sale featuring items made by youths and adults in the community and refreshments will be available for purchase.

A special invitation will be sent to the city officials to participate in this affair offering a chance to meet their constituents.

Several tables will be offering both new and used articles for sale.

The new articles have been donated by Colonial Plaza Merchants and Bill Baer TV. Other merchants will be asked to donate to this most worthy group.

The two special school programs offered by the Seminole County School Department most familiar to parents are speech and vision programs.

Over the past few years, both programs have advanced considerably, according to Ann Stephens, speech and hearing clinician at Red Bug Elementary.

Children are screened for speech and hearing problems in kindergarten and grades one, three, six and 10. The speech programs are mainly articulation, stuttering, language and voice.

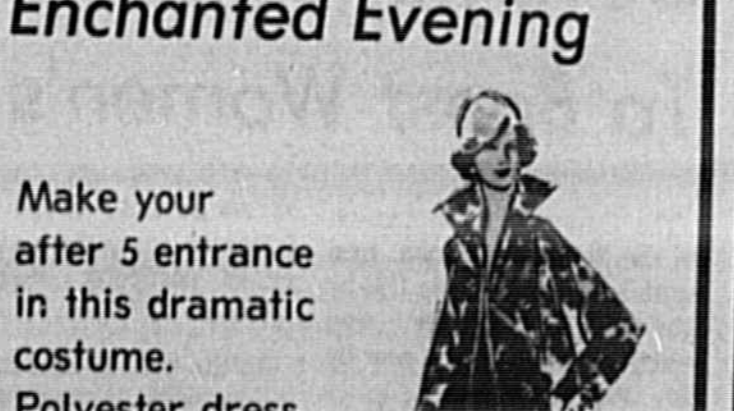

Mrs. Stephens explained a child with any kind of a speech problem can suffer traumatic problems in trying to communicate with his peers. Her program helps such a child overcome his handicap or teaches him how to accept and deal with his problem.

There are 8-10 children enrolled in the vision program in Seminole County, from the elementary level through high school.

Henry Ellis is in charge of the vision program for Seminole County.

Residents Learn City History
A short history of the city of Winter Springs, containing background on the growth of the city information, pertinent ordinances, school programs and needed telephone numbers was carried to almost a thousand homes in the city this week. The history was put out by the Police Department and the United Home-Owners. The Winter Springs Youth Group took care of the distribution. Extra copies are available at the city hall or the police department.

Popular Vote: Play A Hit

The opening night audience of the play "The Night of Jan. 16, pronounced the courtroom drama a hit.

Additional performances are scheduled tonight (Saturday) and Oct. 4 and 5. Tickets are available at the city's civic center, where the auditorium has been transformed into a courtroom for the run of the play.

Sanford attorney Douglas Stenstrom, at the opening night with Mrs. Stenstrom and other invited VIPs, commended Barron for their portrayals of the defense and prosecuting attorneys. Stenstrom said their performances were true to life.

Both men are well known in the Central Florida area for past performances in all phases of the theatre.

Jane Taylor—Central Florida theatre's first woman to receive her recent performance as Mrs. Gibbs in "Our Town"—gave an overpowering portrayal as Karen Andre, the play's leading role.

Others selected for the jury were Miss Florida, Della Burke; Hugh Turley of television Channel 33's Uncle Flibble show; Mrs. Marilyn Floyd, Mel Schwartz, Dick Owens, Mrs. Cal DeVener, John Eaves, Maj. Claude Ort, Dale Reed, Evelyn Du Clof and Pat Gasli, wife of the locally well-known Jai Alai player.

Terry Hill, founder of the little theatre group, lives in Altamonte Springs with her husband and five children. She was active in community theatre in Maryland before settling in Florida.

The play's ending depends on the verdict given by a 12-member jury selected from the audience.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length organza gown trimmed with white tulle and sequins, and matched with a formal length chantilly mantilla extending into a train. She carried a bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses on a white lace covered bible, the gift of her maternal grandmother, which was adorned with a hand crocheted cross.

The bride's sister Mrs. Paula Pearson served as matron of honor in a floor length gown of green dotted swiss of empire design, featuring cape sleeves and trimmed with white eyelid lace. She wore a green net veil and carried a yellow daisy bouquet.

The bridegroom's sister Mrs. Marion Jackson, and Miss Fern Reeves served as bridesmaids in gowns of yellow styled like that of the matron of honor. Flower girl was Christine Wolfe.

Bobby Fleish attended the bridegroom as best man and usher-groomsmen were Duane Edwards, brother of the bride, and Ted Smith, brother of the bridegroom. Frankie Harrington was ring bearer.

Following a reception in the home of the bride's parents, the couple left on a wedding trip to New Smyrna Beach.

Chase-Rumbley Are Wed

Miss Susan Rumbley and Richard Earl Chase were united in marriage Sept. 14 at First United Methodist Church, Sanford, by Rev. Leo King in a candlelight, double ring ceremony.

The couple partook of holy communion as their first act as man and wife. Organist during the ceremony was Roger Harris and soloist was Mrs. Ophelia Boatner.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Rumbley, Sr., Rt. 2, Box 98, Sanford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Chase, 2767 Birchwood Drive, Orange Park, and formerly of Sanford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned of ivory debut crepe with a fitted bodice eased by slight gathers below a rolled queen collar and long fitted sleeves. A self-fabric cummerbund topped a softly gathered skirt with a full flounced hemline. The ensemble was trimmed with white lace appliques and completed with a chapel length veil of imported Italian edged with white lace falling from a crown cap of matching lace. The bride carried a bouquet of yellow roses and wore a gold hairloom cross presented by her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Octavia Rumbley. It has been in the family 150 years.

The bridegroom's father served as best man and usher were Robin Lippincott, the bride's brother, John Thomas Rumbley, Jr., and brothers of the bridegroom Mark and Scott Chase. Gary Allen Barzetti, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Following a reception in the church reception hall, the couple left on a wedding trip to Daytona Beach.

They will make their new home in Auburn, Ala., where the bride, a graduate practical nurse from Seminole Junior College, will find employment as a nurse. The bridegroom is a senior at Auburn University under the Navy ROTC Scholarship program and will be a commissioned officer (ensign) of U.S. Navy upon graduation.

MRS. CHASE—SUSAN RUMBLEY

Fashion Elegance Is Back In Town

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

During the last several years I have not been a slave to fashion, but that's nothing to brag about because neither has anybody else.

I was, instead, a slave to non-fashion. To radical chic. There were those who tried hard to look as if they had "looked" perfectly imperfect, to wear tired clothes and redeem them with status accessories, that was the game.

A worn-out pair of jeans held up by a $50 belt. A look-me-I-don't-give-a-damn bravado and then chickening out with a $45 Gucci scarf tied carelessly around a throat vibrating with such nonsense statements as "Comfort is all," and "Fashion is doing your own thing."

But the jig is up. Real fashion is making a comeback, complete with hats and gloves for ladies. Dresses are in. Veils on hats, behind which a woman can look demure. Soft ruffles and chiffon scarves—the whole female fatale scene.

And I'm glad. Curses, I hate to admit it, but I am. It will be a lot more trouble and I'll have to stop sitting like one of the boys, but there is something that quickens, deep in the heart of me, to beautiful clothes. I think it's the same thing that makes me smile at babies.

First Ladies Speak Up

"We've had criticism before. If you're in politics, you have to learn to live with it. You don't belong in politics if you don't."

Betty Ford, speaking in Chicago about criticism of her husband's decision to pardon former President Nixon.

"Any time and place I meet Americans, I tell them my gratitude and admiration for what their country has done for us."

Vittoria Leone, Italy's First Lady, speaking of surgery performed upon her son years ago in Los Angeles which enabled him to walk, and preparing to visit the United States with her husband, Italian President Giovanni Leone.

"I will do everything I can to help save the Lambs and develop of the new Lambs club, which is a much-needed and exciting concept for the nation's first private club for the fine and all the performing arts."

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, second woman member of the century-old theatrical group, in a statement in New York.

Laws Help Rape Victims

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Jane M. is 22 years old with long, dirty blond hair that she's thinking of cutting "just for a change, you know."

She is attractive without being a knockout, the kind of girl mothers describe as "pleasing, such a nice person."

Jane M. also is a statistic in the New York City police records, one of some 3,000 persons who reported being raped last year.

She does not want her real name used and says she still has not completely recovered from the attack in her apartment hallway last November.

The rapist has not been caught and Jane still feels a lump of fear in her throat when she enters her apartment building on Manhattan's West Side. She would like to move, but can't find a place she can afford on her salary as a clerk in the research division of a large insurance company.

The FBI says there is one forcible rape every 10 minutes in the United States, and the total during the first six months of 1974 increased 10 per cent compared with the same period last year. In the past 13 years rape has increased 119 per cent, according to the FBI. By comparison, murders and nonnegligent manslaughter went up 116 per cent in those 13 years.

The FBI statistics show 51,000 reported rapes in 1973, a total that works out to 47 rapes per 100,000 women. Officials of several of the nation's major cities cite several reasons for the dramatic rise in reported rape cases: a general crime increase, better statistical reporting methods, less reluctance to talk about sexual crimes.

Prodded by feminists, police and public officials in a number of states are beginning to change their attitudes about rape and how to deal with it.

Rollins Music Program

Dr. Ward Woodbury, Professor of Music at Rollins College, announced recently that eight programs are scheduled for the upcoming 1974-75 Rollins Concert Series.

The world famous Julliard String Quartet and Metropolitan Opera singer John Reardon will appear in two performances while additional programs will also feature artist faculty members of the Music Department and the Florida Symphony-Rollins Chamber Orchestra.

The new season is scheduled to open on Nov. 10 with Alphonse and Katherine Carlo performing sonatas for piano and violin. The Julliard Quartet is scheduled for a Dec. 15 performance.

The Florida Symphony-Rollins Chamber Orchestra, under the direction of Ward Woodbury, will perform on Jan. 5 with the Rollins Brass Ensemble, conducted by William Gallo, with Alexander Anderson at the organ, set for Feb. 9 performance.

John Reardon, a 1952 graduate of Rollins, will appear on Mar. 2 with the Florida Symphony-Rollins Chamber Orchestra concluding the regular series on Apr. 13. The final concert will also feature Mr. Thomas Brockman as piano soloist.

On May 14 a special bonus concert will be presented with Messrs. Brockman, Carlo and Anderson as soloists with members of the Florida and Julliard orchestras in a concerto program.

A limited number of season tickets is available. For information contact Rollins College.

21st Century Salaries Soar

CHICAGO (AP) — Salaries up by 17 per cent — sound impossible?

No, not if you look into the crystal ball at the year 2000.

"And that is good news for the family budget custodian," says a recent report. Offering a glimpse of how 21st-century families will be living, the report from the financial services arm of Esmark predicts that income for a husband and wife with two school age children will average $30,941 — compared to today's $18,721.

Homemakers will delight in the fact that food costs will be down.

Approximately 23.6 per cent of gross income will be spent on filling the family larder, as opposed to 23.3 per cent today.

Modern, automated food processing technologies will help bring food prices down.

Sheller will go up slightly compared to 1974. Americans today spend roughly 24.5 per cent of their income for housing — 25 per cent will be spent in 2000.

The forecast is for more of the family dollar going into savings, insurance and investments 25 years hence — 8 per cent. The probability of longer life from the income-American will automatically trigger the need for meaningful retirement programs.

R and R — rest and recreation — will figure prominently in the 21st-century budget.

"With more leisure time and shorter work weeks families will earmark a larger share of the family pocketbook — 5 per cent — to recreational activities."

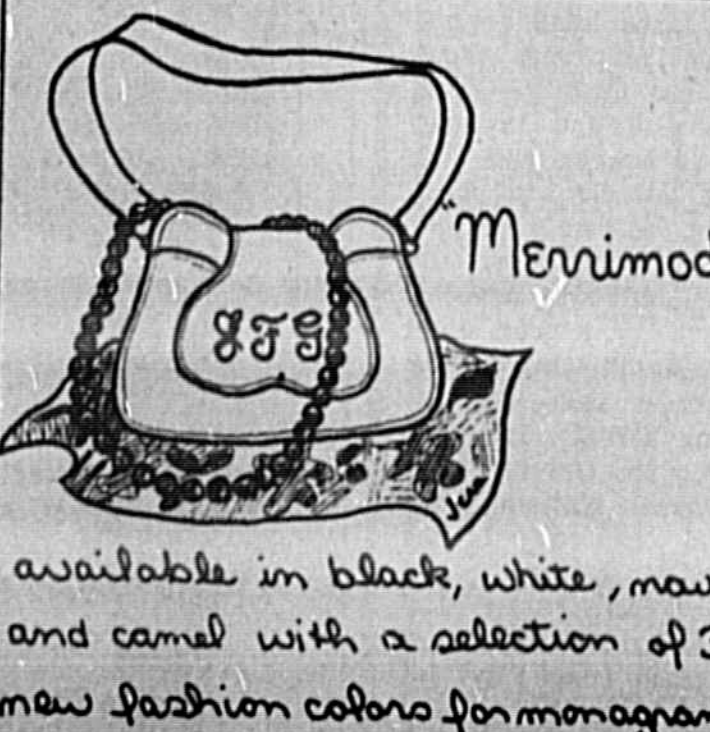

"The family of 2000 will also have very definitive attitudes on where they live," the report emphasizes.

"Planned communities — now in their infancy — will be the futuristic life style. These new towns will feature one-stop living, work and play areas.

Taxes will probably take a bigger bite from the income — simply because of an over-all increase. But, by and large, things look good for the budget of year 2000."

More money, better health, easier life and more recreation will be the 21st-century motto.

"Emphatically yes," the report concludes.

Women Take TV Leads

EDITOR'S NOTE — Are television audiences ready to accept women in strong leading roles? The networks are venturing tentative efforts this season with women police shows. Producers and executives see it as a reflection of woman's changing role in today's society.

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — These are television's images of the American woman:

—A housewife always getting into scraps, who manages to manipulate her husband in such a manner that he thinks he is the boss.

—A single woman, seductive, who cries a lot and wants only to get married.

—A working woman who defers to a male's greater experience, ability and insight. On the rare occasions when she's in a superior position, she is arrogant and neurotic.

For 28 years, television has perpetuated these images. And commercials show women striving for a better cup of coffee, a whiter wash and a drier deodorant.

But there is change.

"I Love You, Goodbye" was a film last season about a woman who walked out on her family to find a new life for herself. "Fell Like I Had Died" was about a woman whose consciousness-raising dismayed her husband.

"The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," an Emmy-winning saga, took a black woman from slavery to sit-ins. Just as the civil rights movements and the New Morality caught up with television, so is a more realistic portrayal of women, at least in movies and specials, if not in the series.

Last May, all the writing Emmys went to women writing largely about women — and to one man, Tracy Korman Wynn, writing about a woman, Jane Pittman.

"There's no question that television hasn't given women an equal share, but they're coming on fast," said Grant Tinker, who heads the company that makes his wife's "Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "Rhoda."

Treva Silverman, an Emmy-winning writer for "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," said she believes it is high time to break stereotypes. The Moore show has done that, with its theme of an over-30 career woman who is not husband-bumping.

Robert Howard, president of NBC, said he believes ad-diences are now ready to accept women in stronger roles.

"I think the key to it is getting more women into writing," he said. "I think that will create the roles."

For the new season, approximately 40 series starring women were considered.

The police shows apparently were considered a "safe" format by the networks. Women would be attracted by the feminine lead and men by the action. Past pilots with women as doctors and lawyers failed.

Angie Dickinson plays "Police Woman" on NBC, a spinoff from "Police Story." Jessica Walter is "Amy Prentiss," a woman chief of detectives, on the "NBC Mystery Movie." Theresa Graves is a black undercover policewoman on ABC's "Get Christie Love!"

Mortgage Rate Help Available

By JULIAN STENSTROM

Dear Julian:

There is a subdivision in the Sanford area consisting of some 40 to 50 homes. Only one or two have been sold. I recently noticed that the entrance has been redone and a large sign indicates that the homes are now available with 7.75 per cent mortgages.

Is this a come-on to get people into the subdivision to look at the homes? Where can anyone find 7.75 per cent mortgages today? Would you look into this and tell us the truth? —PJP

Dear Mr. P.J.P.:

Yours wasn't the only inquiry we've had concerning this subdivision. Consequently we'll answer your letter and the others at the same time. No, sir, there's no hanky panky.

Initially, the subdivision in question was built with the homes inspected and approved by both FHA and VA authorities with the idea that anyone purchasing one of the homes could do so under previous commitments from these governmental agencies.

However, just about the time the subdivision was completed and the houses were ready to market, the interest rate climb began again and it exceeded anyone's wildest imagination. Of course, this increase ran monthly payments sky high when one considered principal, interest, taxes, insurance and—in the event the house was purchased under FHA—a monthly mortgage insurance premium.

Further, the houses were priced, let's say at $29,000. Under the FHA down payment plan in effect at that time—and which had been in effect for quite a number of years, the down payment would amount to $2,750.

The combination of monthly payments running about $260 and a down payment of $2,750 didn't exactly make purchasing one of the homes in this particular subdivision the answer to a new homeowner's dreams.

Therefore, only the one or maybe two houses were sold. The weeds took over front lawns and grew as high as the eaves of the uncoccupied houses. Vandals nearly wrecked some of the houses as they stood idle for months. You may or may not be surprised to know that there are people who will go into subdivisions like this and steal doors, windows, kitchen cabinets, plumbing fixtures—even air conditioning components. You name it and there are people who'll take it without authorization.

The situation looked very bleak. Finally, Congress passed a new housing bill.

A provision in this new bill is commonly known as the "Tandem Plan" which makes it possible for a house—not a buyer, and this is important for you to remember—to qualify for a 7.75 per cent mortgage rate.

"But," you say, "the current FHA and VA interest rates are pegged at 9.50 per cent."

Interest Subsidy

You're absolutely right. Consequently, if you should purchase one of these homes in this particular subdivision the interest rate would be 9.50 per cent but the Federal government will pick up the difference between 7.75 and 9.50 as a subsidy.

Now the question arises as to what qualifies a home for the subsidized mortgage rate and makes it saleable under the "Tandem Plan."

First, the house must be at least one year old and not more than 15 months old to qualify for a Tandem Plan designation. It must never have been sold. The builder must purchase a commitment from FHA or VA for which he pays a price. The commitment is good for a period of one year. If the house is not sold during the one-year period the builder can also purchase a 90-day extension of the commitment.

By the way, before a large number of homeowners who have their homes listed at the present time start calling their real estate brokers or Realtors about selling their homes under the Tandem Plan let us repeat one important fact—the house must never have been "titled" so to speak.

Now, there are maximums. Under the Tandem Plan a purchaser can get up to $33,000 mortgage financing on a three-bedroom home and $38,750 on a four-bedroom home. However, under FHA there is one maximum amount for either a three-bedroom or a four-bedroom home—$33,000.

For those who are interested it is expected that FHA will amend its maximums to correspond with those of the Veterans Administration in the very near future.

Let's also make it clear to everyone that even though it is the house that must qualify for the Tandem Plan the purchaser must also be a qualified buyer. And, as we have pointed out so many times in this column, to be a qualified buyer the purchaser must have sufficient income, job stability, a good credit standing and he must be able to verify his income or incomes from various sources as well as be able to verify his checking and savings account balances and any other assets he may report that he has.

Therefore, Mr. P.J.P., the sign you saw at the entrance to the subdivision is, in fact, advertising 7.75 per cent interest on mortgages, is absolutely correct. There is nothing false about it and cannot be classified in any way as "come on" advertising.

HOME Condominium Trend Sweeps U.S.

By CLYDE SMITH
The Herald Services

Condominium living apparently is here to stay.

The condominium boom has sparked an unparalleled reaction on the part of the home-buying public.

Although some observers say they see signs of disenchantment with this concept—"It's too much like apartment living"—the continuing and expanding trend seems to prove otherwise. It is sweeping the country, spurred by mushrooming sales, plus a burgeoning demand for just about every shape and type of condominium.

Some developers at first saw the condominium as at least a partial answer to holding housing costs in control, thus making it easier for average-income families to afford their own dwellings.

When grouping a series of living units either in clusters or several units in a single building, it is obvious that construction savings can be effected.

But, in recent months, there has been a significant new turn in this line of thinking.

Condominiums are for the affluent as well as for budget-conscious families.

Many owners who can afford almost any type of luxury home they desire are turning to the condominium. Many, too, are moving from large and elaborate single-family houses. They find they enjoy the career opportunities of living which the condominium concept offers.

Carefree

They own the space they occupy, they are responsible for the interior decor and upkeep, and of course, they share a common interest in the building, the land and the yard, but for a few, they leave the mowing, the lower and stub care, the painting, the roof repair.

And when they wish to take a vacation or a weekend trip, they turn the key and go on their way with no worry about who is going to take care of the property.

The luxurious, spacious condominiums are not cheap, not for families with modest incomes. In fact, they are very expensive, often costing $100,000 or more.

But even so, can occupants escape the feeling of apartment living, the crowded togetherness? That is what many people object to—or so they say.

Let's visit a couple newly converted to the condominium way of life. They demonstrate that it is possible to make a condominium more like an individual, personal home than just a rental unit, even though their neighbor is just a wall between.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Muzzy in La Jolla, Calif., is a two-story condominium building with only four dwellings, a project which Muzzy developed.

Their own condominium is on the second level with 2,450 square feet, three bedrooms, one of which Muzzy has converted into a study, two full bathrooms and extensive built-ins.

Other than a design taking full advantage of a spectacular and delightful sunrise view and the spacious convenience of the personal individuality and tastes reflected in the interior decor that make this dwelling "seem more like a home than an apartment."

"At least that has been our experience so far," agreed the Muzzys who formerly were single-family house owners. "This place is much more convenient."

Background for jewel-toned accents are walls, sheer curtains, sofas and heavy pile carpeting in a neutral "vanilla ice cream" color. The combined width of the living room and adjoining dining area is 32 feet.

An unusual feature is the room arrangement on one side of the central living area and the kitchen on the other, both of which can be opened through folding doors to the living room, to take advantage of the view. The doors, of course, may be closed for privacy.

A splash of bold color contrasts is found in the master suite, parrot green and blue combinations. Bright green carpeting carries from the master bedroom through the master bathroom and then extends into Muzzy's study. The compartmented bathroom reflects a garden atmosphere, cool greens with white contrasts and a white painted lattice frames the side walls over the bathtub. Ferns grow on a bathtub ledge.

Mirrored wall sections provide other effective accents.

The Muzzys enjoy a colorful informal kitchen. Sunny yellow is the basic color, including one wall with a covering that stimulates yellow brick. An island cook center is fashioned in maple butcher block and includes white built-in range and double sink, plus a barbecue broiler.

Another interesting item of note is Muzzy's wine cellar, accessible off the kitchen through double glass doors. In the other condominium units at The Cliffs, this area, 6x9 feet, is the kitchen pantry. Aubergine, or an eggplant color, is the primary decorative hue in their wine cellar, walled with a floor-to-ceiling array of wine racks.

The Muzzys also say they are daily users of "The Cliffs" recreation facilities.

They take a hot therapy pool dip each morning and then go for a swim.

Garages are provided in a subterranean level, closed by electric doors to which can be opened only by the owners. An elevator links the garage with the two living levels above.

The condominiums are priced in upper brackets, $175,000 for each unit, and owners also pay a $150 monthly maintenance fee.

Art Can 'Finish' Homes

By ADELE FAULKNER
The Herald Services

Before you re-cover that old sofa or invest in a new set of draperies, why not concentrate on "finishing" your apartment with good accessories and a little artwork for the walls?

Too often, the tendency is to devote all of your attention and budget to carpets, drapes and upholstered furnishings which are functional background pieces, but do not add real beauty to your living environment.

Things that create beauty are the lamps, accessories and little extras. A well-planned room which takes this into consideration has an intangible element of beauty and functional order which sets it apart from the norm.

A planter, interesting piece of sculpture or good lamps can do wonders for what otherwise would have been a plain, common room. Often when people come to me to refinish their apartment, I discover that it never was "finished" in the first place.

Let the old draperies hang another year. Instead, revitalize the apartment with fine artworks—which, incidentally, also can be a sound financial investment. This is particularly true for apartment dwellers who tend to have a more mobile life-style.

Accessories allow you to give vent to your own expression of individuality. In apartments where the landlord redecorates, accessories make all the difference. If you have good art, it doesn't matter if the walls or furnishings are plain. The problem is that most people do not invest in quality items.

Instead, they fall prey to emotional buying, thinking that they can't afford the finer things. In reality, if they added up the money spent on numerous cheaper items, they would realize that for the same amount they could have purchased a good oil or fine sculpture.

However, I must stress the fact that fine art and quality items do not have to be expensive or have to be judged by the price tag. Not too many people can afford an original Picasso, but most can afford an original batik by a local craftsman or a good print well framed. What one should avoid at all cost are gaudy items or cheap reproductions.

The Edward Muzzy family enjoy their LaJolla, Calif., condominium kitchen

Some Tuneups Needless

By FRANK MACOMBER
The Herald Services

That usually means a $40 to $70 bill to replace spark plugs, points and the condenser, and to clean the carburetor.

Matter of fact, Brown claims, an $8-to-$12 diagnosis and a few adjustments solve most engine problems.

He concedes there is a lot of resistance to his arguments from the repair industry, but he and his colleagues are convinced "this is the ethical way to go."

Ever since the gas shortage of last fall, the auto service industry has been selling the idea that a well-tuned car gets more miles per gallon than one that has been neglected.

This is true, Brown concedes. But a tuneup isn't always the answer, he adds.

Most car builders now stipulate in their owners' manuals that their autos should be tuned at intervals ranging from 12,000 to 18,000 miles—not 10,000 recommended by most auto repairmen.

AMC's recommended maintenance suggests a tuneup every 15,000 miles, but that doesn't call for automatic replacement of spark plugs, Brown emphasizes.

Next time you think your car needs an engine tuneup, think about this American fact: Brown is general service manager for American Motors Corp., and probably no great friend of people in the auto repair business, whose biggest revenue likely stems from the average motorist's preoccupation with the tuneup.

Motorists who get tuneups to improve gasoline mileage—whether the engines really need it or not—could be tuning themselves needlessly out of millions of dollars, according to Brown.

He went so far as to voice this warning in an interview with Moneyweek, a national consumer's newsletter.

It was a rather startling statement, coming as it did from within the automobile industry.

"What I'm preaching," Brown explains, "is for people to look at their owners' manuals and not be overzealous on a tuneup as a matter of old-fashioned habit."

The motorist who pulls into a repair shop complaining that his engine is running rough or is burning too much fuel usually is offered only one panacea—the tuneup—Brown points out.

The code word "ARCH" can work for defenders as well as declarer. Analyze lead. Review the bidding. Count your winners and losers. And finally, "How can I beat this contract?"

East analyzes the opening lead as either a singleton or the top of a doubleton. In either event he is glad that he stuck in his miserable heart overcall. His review of the bidding tells him that South has two heart stoppers.

A first count of his winners tells him that he can be sure of just one heart and one club. A further review of the bidding

SUNDAY SEARCH for "Community II"

TV Hypnosis Production
All students 12 to 20 are eligible.

An educational series to be aired over Orange Cabeshire's "Community II," public access channel, is now being produced by MERITVIVOLOGY.

Dr. Parker is a pioneer teacher and researcher in the field of hypnosis with over 30 years of experience in this fascinating field of 14,000 years. He has demonstrated many times that any bright 12 or 14 year old will have the opportunity to learn TV filming and broadcasting techniques, if they wish to do so.

All students who apply for this TV production will be taught every phase of the subject of hypnosis and television. They will be shown how to use this self control mind mastery to raise school grades and make studying a real pleasure.

Students who are interested in this opportunity to learn TV filming and broadcasting techniques, if they wish to do so.

This opportunity is open to all students in Seminole County behavior and 20, those under 18 must have signed approval of their parents to take part in the program.

There is no charge, now or ever. This is a public service project for the good of the community. Just send your name, address, phone number, age and name of school you attend to:

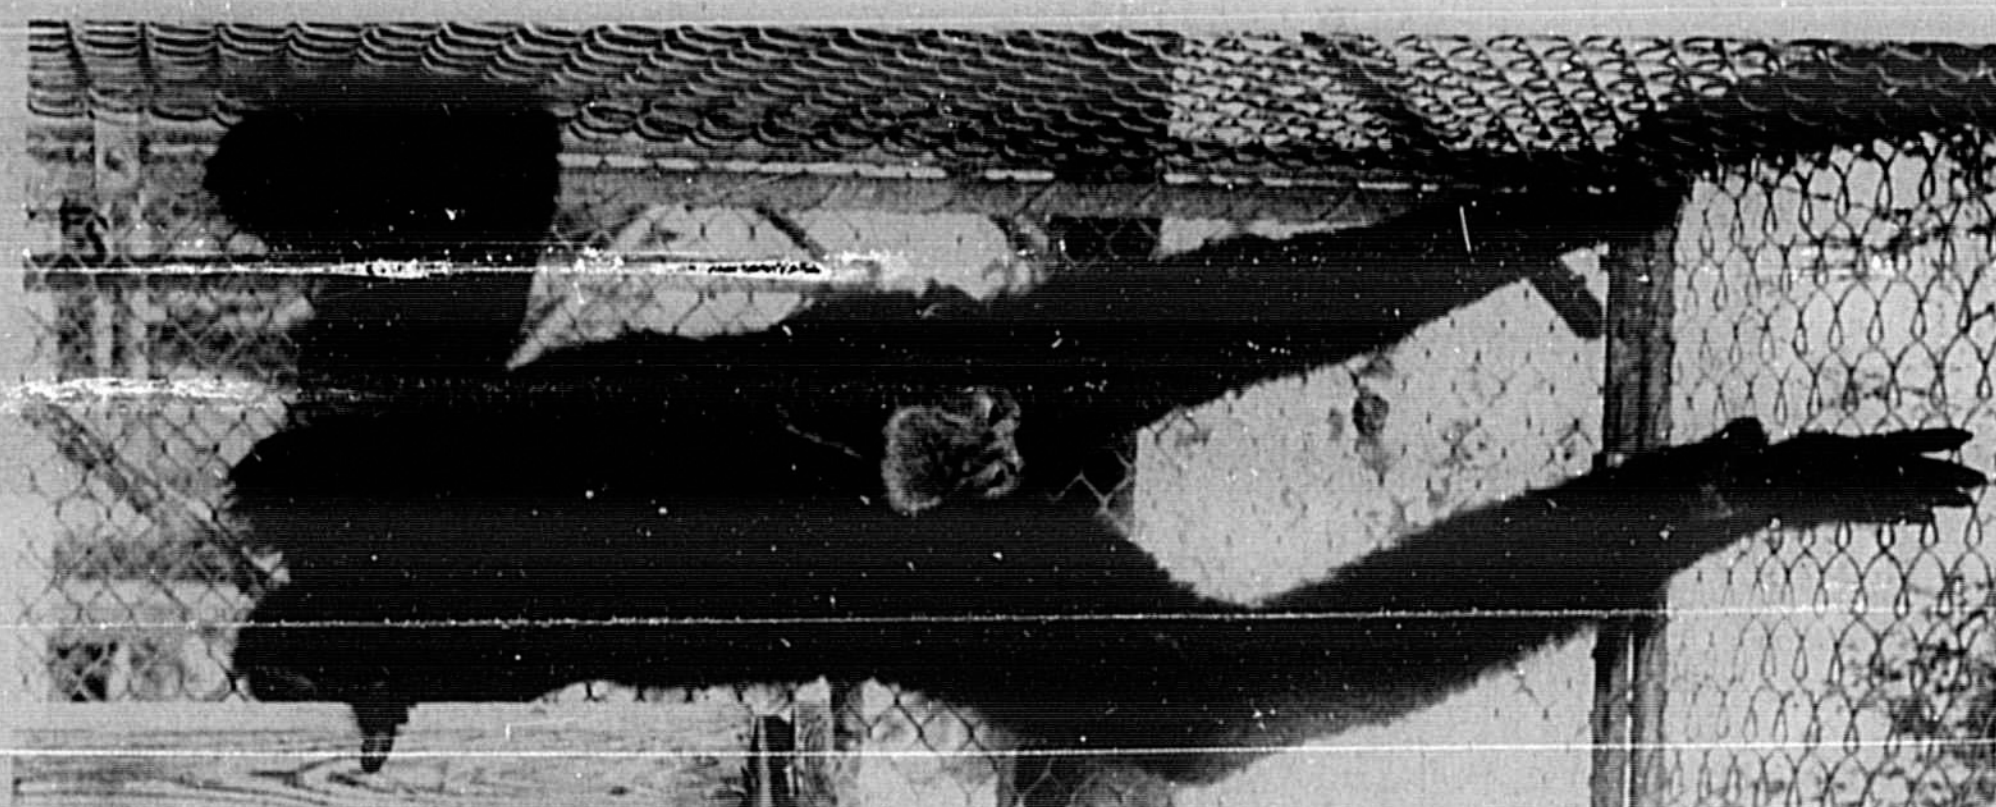

DR. MERLE E. PARKER, TV HYPNOSIS PROJECT
BOX 2031, SANFORD, FLORIDA 32771

Filming of the series will start early in October, 1974.

Bing Enjoys Life, Crosby Style

By DICK KLEINER
The Herald Services

Perhaps as much as any one else in the world, Bing Crosby has enjoyed the life of a Hollywood star. He has been married three times, has four children, and has a reputation for being a playboy. He has been in the movies for over 40 years, and has won several Academy Awards. He has also been a successful businessman and a philanthropist.

Despite his relative show business success, Crosby is a private person. He has never been in the news for anything other than his professional life. He has always been a family man, and he has always been a good friend to his friends.

He has always been a good friend to his friends. He has always been a good friend to his friends. He has always been a good friend to his friends.

Bob Hope, left, joins Crosby, Pearl Bailey and Sandy Duncan on CBS-TV special Oct. 3 at 9 p.m.

Art Triumphs Over Long Hours

PAKISTAN

Until 1972, Pakistan was divided into two states, East and West Pakistan. The states were physically separated by northern India. In 1972, India sided with East Pakistan and defeated West Pakistan in a two-week war. East Pakistan then declared its independence and became Bangladesh. West Pakistan (now Pakistan) borders northwestern India, Iran and Afghanistan. It has some coastline on the Arabian Sea. Pakistan is a little bigger than the state of Texas but has six times the population. The capital of Pakistan is Islamabad but the largest city is Karachi. Most Pakistanis speak the official language of Urdu and they are Moslems.

JULIUS CAESAR

emperor of Rome, Caesar was murdered for only 5 years. On the 15th of March (March 15), he was murdered on the steps of the senate by Brutus and Cassius. Caesar was considered a great orator and writer. As head of the Roman state, he instituted many reforms that benefitted everyone.

Julius Caesar lived from 100 B.C. to 44 B.C. He was a roman general and statesman. He won victories for the roman empire throughout Gaul where he was elected consul. In Rome, the senate voted that Caesar should disband his armies. Instead, he returned with his army, took over the government and became emperor for only 5 years.

VAL WIPES THE SWEAT FROM HIS BROW AND SITS DOWN. HE HAS DISCOVERED TWO WEAKNESSES IN KARAK: HIS ABJECT FEAR OF WATER AND HIS AWFUL RAGE THAT CAN BE CALMED ONLY BY MUSIC.

QUICKLY VAL RESUMES THE SOOTHING NURSERY TUNES AND THE RAGE FADES. VAL GUESSES THAT THE LITTLE CRADLE SONGS BRING BACK MEMORIES OF CHILDHOOD DAYS WHEN KARAK HAD KNOWN LOVE. FINALLY STUFFED WITH FOOD AND MEAD, HE SLEEPS FACE DOWN IN THE REMNANTS OF HIS MEAL.

Our Story: AS LONG AS VAL SINGS NURSERY SONGS KARAK DREAMS QUIETLY, BUT WHEN HE STRIKES A FEW CHORDS OF A WAR CHANT HIS MAD EYES BECOME FULL OF MALICE.

KARAK LUMBERS TO HIS FEET AND TAKES UP THE GREAT SHIELD AND AXE. HE CARRIES AT ALL TIMES. VAL FOLLOWS AT A SAFE DISTANCE AS THEY MAKE THEIR WAY TOWARD THE BRIDGE.

A PANTING WARRIOR STAGGERS INTO THE GREAT HALL SHOUTING: "THE BRIDGE IS DESTROYED, BUT NOT BY MEN. IT IS THE ANGER OF THE GODS!"

SWEPT DOWN BY THE CURRENT, THIS MASS PILES UP AGAINST THE BRIDGE PIERS, FORMING A DAM BEHIND WHICH THE RIVER RISES STEADILY.

KING HALP ATLA IS PUZZLED BY THE BATTLE PLAN VAL HAS SENT HIM BY THE OLD SKALD. NEVERTHELESS HE SENDS HIS FORESTERS TO FILL THE RIVER WITH DRIFTWOOD, LOGS AND BRANCHES.

Fun with Toothpicks

See how easy it is to make pictures with ordinary toothpicks. Start with these simple ones, then make up your own. If you want to save your pictures, glue the toothpicks to cardboard as you arrange them.

As you get better, break the toothpicks to get shorter pieces. Then you can make complete pictures.

ABOUT ANIMALS

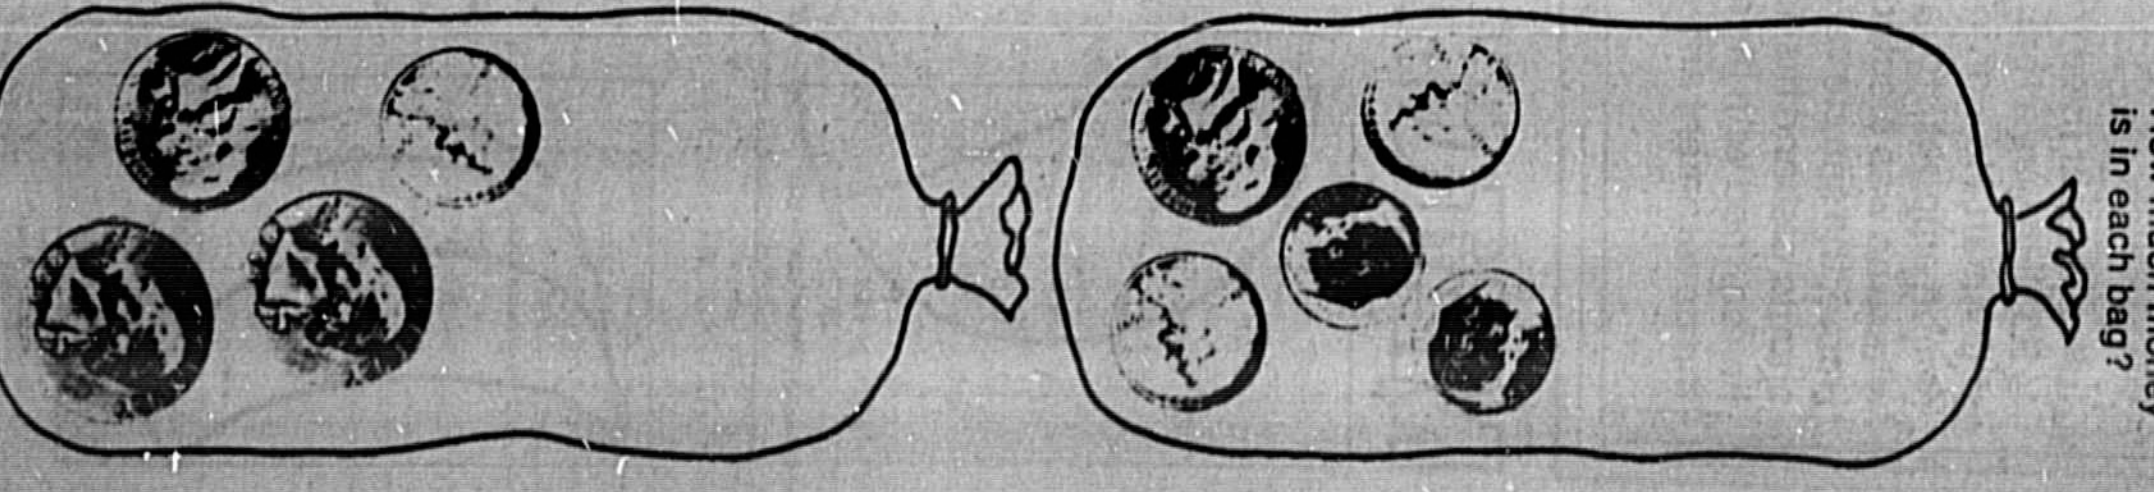

SNOW LEOPARD
Snow Leopards are found in the cold parts of the Himalayan Mountains in Asia. They have long, dense fur to keep them warm. Snow Leopards are good hunters. They usually hunt at night and catch their prey from ambush. Snow Leopards are smaller than African leopards and are almost white to camouflage them in the mountain snow.

THE WEEK OF SEPT. 29-OCT. 5 OPENS WITH PEOPLE IN GENERAL TREATING ONE ANOTHER CONSIDERABLY OPPOSITION AMONG POWERFUL FACTIONS BECOMES MORE VISIBLE TUESDAY ESPECIALLY IN THE POLITICAL ARENA. A BUSY DAY FOR ATTORNEYS. POSSIBILITY OF SOME DOMESTIC VIOLENCE DURING THIS PERIOD. LIBRIANS, CANCERS, ARIENS AND CAPRICORNS WILL HAVE MORE TENDER SPOTS TO PROTECT THAN OTHER SIGNS. TREAD LIGHTLY. BUSINESS CONDITIONS FIRMER BEGINNING THURSDAY. WEEK CLOSURES WITH SOME DISTORTION OF TWO MAJOR NEWS STORIES.

YOUR WEEK AHEAD

- ARIES (March 21-April 19) Early in the week, an alliance of a confidential nature has benefits. Tuesday and Wednesday are critical days. Be careful. Improvement Thursday. Friday. Lazy weekend.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Sunday, there's a reward for being helpful. Lots of responsibilities till Thursday. Common sense pays off Friday. Saturday evening is apt to prove to be expensive.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your popularity is high on Sunday. Tuesday and Wednesday, outside interests bring frustrations. Friends are helpful Thursday and Friday. Saturday is complicated.
- CANCER (June 21-July 21) Sunday is your kind of day. Till after midweek be wise in handling situations reflecting on your honor. Thursday and Friday are pleasant. Select companions carefully Saturday.
- LEO (July 22-Aug 22) Good judgment makes Sunday profitable. Avoid unnecessary travel most of this week. Friday, there's victory after a struggle. Don't borrow from friends on Saturday.
- VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22) Gains come through a close tie as the week opens Tuesday. Wednesday sour for commercial dealings. Conditions perk up at week's end. You make an empty promise Saturday.
- LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 23) The week starts strong. Tuesday and Wednesday, opposition from others slows you down. Thursday and Friday are favorable for work or career. Saturday, plans go awry.
- SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov 22) Sunday is better for romance than Monday. There are plenty of chores to busy you till after midweek. A shaky amicus is strengthened as the week closes.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec 21) Spend Sunday with the family. Be careful friends don't involve you in a risky venture Tuesday and Wednesday. Close of the week is productive. Your judgment's poor on Saturday.
- CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19) Sunday is good for a short trip. Tuesday and Wednesday, do your best to maintain domestic tranquility. Thursday and Friday are active socially. A neglected duty on Saturday.
- AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 19) Financial prospects are good at beginning of the week. Be careful what you sign Tuesday. Wednesday, it's favorable for family interests at week's end. Too much of a good thing on Saturday.
- PISCES (Feb 20-March 20) Sunday and Monday, things are fairly smooth. Strains on the purse are heavy this week, so don't spend needlessly. Good ideas bring desired results as the week closes.

ABSOLUTELY THE DULLEST TALK SHOW I'VE EVER SEEN!

Annexation Law Confusion Mounts

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

The new state annexation law, to become effective Tuesday, will virtually stop Seminole County cities from increasing their territorial boundaries.

The law places to a large extent city growth policies under the domination of the county commission.

Rezoning of annexed lands to provide higher densities (more people) is banned under the law until two years after annexation unless approval is given by the county commission.

Approvals by the county board in Seminole county are expected to be few and far between. County Commissioners have insisted over the years that developers annex their properties to cities to gain higher density zoning than permitted by the county government.

Generally Seminole County land development requirements are more stringent than city regulations. More than half of Seminole's cities -- Sanford, Lake Mary, Altamonte Springs and Longwood -- plan to complete several annexations and rezonings in October under old procedures on the advice of their respective city attorneys.

Sanford City Atty. Vernon Mize said today a substantial reduction in the number of annexation petitions can be expected in Sanford.

He added that most owners petitioning for inclusion within city bounds involve zoning changes to increase density. "I don't think the county will agree to most of these that want to come in," he said.

Preliminary steps have begun on three or four annexations involving rezoning -- rezoning of the city's adopted rezoning ordinance to allow the city to follow the law applicable before Oct. 1 in these cases.

State Rep. Eugene Mooney (R-Casselberry), noting he is not an attorney, disagreed with Mize's and the other city attorneys' interpretation of the new law.

Saying the law provides that all laws, whether special acts or city charters, which conflict with the state law are repealed as far as the conflict is concerned.

He said if annexations and rezonings have not been completed, in his judgment they would fall under the new law.

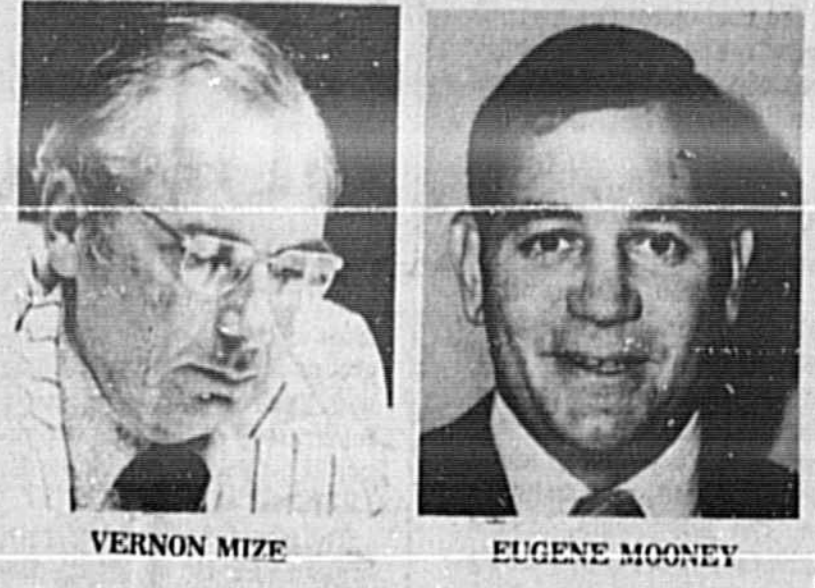

"It may take a court case to determine which is correct," he said.

Mooney said the new law also specifically prohibits a city from running down a road or power easement -- corridor annexation -- to take in property, and requires the cities to have services, equal to those furnished other citizens, immediately available to the newly annexed property owners.

General purpose of the new law is to promote sound, urban development, Mooney said.

He added that the new law specifically defines continuity (that new land touch city property) to make sure the cities will not create pockets of land surrounded by city property.

Proceeding at normal speed the annexations and rezoning usually takes at least 90 days. Although the Mooney bill required public hearings at which adjacent property owners to the annexed areas in both county and city territory could object, city officials very seldom changed their plans to annex and rezoned as a result of the public hearings.

Kenneth McIntosh sees the law as very confusing and conflicting. He said definite conflicts between that which appears in the initial paragraph and the legislature's intent and other procedural conflicts between the Casselberry charter and the old "Mooney" bill exist.

Asked the intent of the legislature, McIntosh said, "I couldn't tell you."

Joe Davis, city attorney for Altamonte Springs, Longwood and Oviedo, was not available for comment. His office, however, has advised both Longwood and Altamonte Springs that they can complete annexations and rezonings already begun.

The special legislative act, authorized by Mooney, now repealed, required cities to notify adjacent property owners and advertise impending annexations and rezoning. Changes in zoning were permitted only after a 90 day waiting period.

Cities, however, began counting the 90 day period when annexation petitions were filed.

Proceeding at normal speed the annexations and rezoning usually takes at least 90 days. Although the Mooney bill required public hearings at which adjacent property owners to the annexed areas in both county and city territory could object, city officials very seldom changed their plans to annex and rezoned as a result of the public hearings.

BEES BURN IN BLAZE

The only victims in this house fire on Country Club Road near Airport Boulevard, Sanford, were swarms of angry hornets and bees. When Altamonte Springs land clearer Dave Gibbs moved in to clear an old 1882 house from land to be used to commercial development, his workers were harassed by the stinging critters, he had to burn the house instead of dismantling it.

Widow Says Reds Seek Ransom For POW Son

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — A widow says two Communist agents have demanded between $25,000 and $500,000 for proof her son is alive and to start negotiations for his release as a prisoner of war in Laos.

Jean Macdonald returned over the weekend from a meeting in Mexico City with two men who showed her a picture of a man she identified as her son. They would not let her keep the photo but told her she would be contacted later, she said.

The Rev. Mr. Lindstrom, a fervent anti-Communist who has been active in work involving men listed as prisoners of war or missing in action.

The Rev. Mr. Lindstrom said in an interview that he arranged the Mexico meeting after two previous meetings with persons whom he believes are "tied to a diplomatic mission in Southeast Asia."

He said he talked to different representatives at each of the three meetings, but wasn't sure whether they are "working for a government or on their own behalf for monetary gains."

The U.S. government has discredited previous reports that prisoners of war are still being held in Southeast Asia.

The minister vowed in 1971 he would form a force of 100 commandos to free Southeast Asian war prisoners, but later abandoned the plan.

He also attempted in 1970 to form a fleet of boats to encourage defections by Soviet seamen. That plan never developed.

However, he accurately revealed in 1972 before it was officially announced that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger made secret visits to the Soviet Union prior to the Nixon summit.

The Rev. Mr. Lindstrom said he and other representatives of the Christian Defense League, an umbrella for POW-MIA groups, have established contacts in Vientiane, Laos, and Thailand.

Mrs. Macdonald said she wants to meet with President Ford and Kissinger.

McNamara Aims Aid Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — World Bank President Robert S. McNamara called on the oil-producing countries and the highly industrialized nations today to provide $36 billion over the next five years to assist people in poorer nations.

Addressing the opening session of the annual meeting of governors of the World Bank, he said the increasingly turbulent world economic scene has created a desperate situation for the poorest of the developing countries whose people have per capita incomes of less than $200 per year.

McNamara said the World Bank must increase its lending.

The program approved by the bank's executive board for the 1975 fiscal year would provide $5.5 billion, up $1 billion from the fiscal year which ended June 30.

McNamara maintained that the world has not suddenly lost its wealth, even though there is severe inflation, unacceptable unemployment and uncertain growth prospects.

He contended the oil-producing countries have gained huge amounts while the traditionally wealthy nations may be less wealthy than they hoped to be at this time.

It is the poorest nations, he said, that are faced with inflation that penalizes the poor more than the rich.

"Almost every element in the current economic situation has worked to their disadvantage, and has been compounded even further for many of them by the natural disasters of flood, drought and crop failures. These countries need $3 billion to $4 billion more per year in the 1970s," he said.

Gertie Stalling In South Atlantic

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Gertrude stalled in the Atlantic today and began to weaken about 200 miles southeast of Barbados, the National Hurricane Center reported.

Gertrude, with early morning winds up to the minimal hurricane status of 75 miles an hour, could be downgraded to a tropical storm later today.

At 9 a.m. EDT, the hurricane was centered near latitude 11.8 north, longitude 56.6 west.

A hurricane watch remained in effect for the Windward Islands from Tobago and Grenada northward to Barbados and Martinique.

"We're running about normal for this time of year," said Clark. "The average number of hurricanes per year is five, and Gertrude is number four."

The season's most destructive hurricane was Fifi, which killed thousands in Honduras less than two weeks ago.

Earlier in the season, Hurricane Becky swirled harmlessly into the open Atlantic and Hurricane Carmen slammed into the Louisiana Gulf Coast before dying over Texas.

Cuba Willing To Talk

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Prime Minister Fidel Castro met with two American senators who said afterward they got the "impression that Cuba is interested in working toward a normalization" of relations with the United States.

"The ice has been broken," Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., told reporters after he and Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., spent three hours with Castro late Sunday night.

The two senators were to end their three-day visit today.

Pell said the meeting with Castro was "frank, warm and friendly," but neither senator would say why he believed an improved climate between the two countries may be in the offing.

Javits said among the issues raised during the meeting were Cuban attempts to export revolution, the status of nine American political prisoners on the island and American property taken over by the Castro government.

Twenty-hours earlier, Castro attacked President Ford in a speech for his defense of CIA operations against the Allende regime in Chile. He also charged that the United States rather than the oil-exporting countries is responsible for the world economic crisis.

Asked how a normalization of relations could be in prospect in view of these statements, Pell replied: "There is a difference between words and actions."

The senators likened Cuba's attitude to that of the Soviet Union and China, both of which have improved relations with the United States while maintaining a tough anti-American posture in official declarations.

County Studies Rail Speed

Seminole County Commissioners today instructed County Atty. Howard Murreto to investigate its authority to regulate train speeds in cooperation with municipal officials.

The board indicated it will call a public hearing on the issue.

The workshop session among county and city officials was called today in the wake of a train-car collision at the Milwaukie School railroad crossing that resulted in the death of a Casselberry man last week.

Altamonte Springs Mayor Norman Floyd indicated his city may not wait for county action. Floyd said he will recommend to his city council Tuesday night to adopt an ordinance regulating train speed within the city to a maximum of 35 miles per hour. He said he will also urge that a resolution be adopted, directed to the county commission and State Department of Transportation requiring regulatory authority be enacted to enforce safe train speeds.

He submitted detailed results of a police survey showing trains have been going through the city at speeds as high as 70 miles an hour.

Longwood Council Chairman Don Schreiner said six or seven serious accidents have occurred within the last year at Longwood railroad intersections.

Sanford City Manager W. E. (Pete) Knowles said his city is not interested in lowering train speed limits. "Our problem is with trains going too slow at crossings, and holding up traffic," he said.
