MAITLAND — What do you get when 494 Republicans and 45 Democrats get together at a Chamber of Commerce straw vote Hob Nob in August a year before the Year 2000 election? That depends on whom you ask.

Congressman Bill McCollum seemed pleased.

McCollum thought the Hob

even more fun, 71 percent of the Hob Nob society said it was not appropriate for Hillary Clinton to be running for a Senate seat in New York. Some said it was a goofy question - of no consequence.

Sanford Mayor Larry Dale told the chamber people that he wasn't fond of the ballot inquiry about which location voters preferred for a conference center. "It's not a question," Dale said. "There's only one genuine proposal --- Lake Monroe/Sanford."

Dale wasn't impressed that 265 voted for Lake Mary, 149 for Sanford and 97 for Winter Springs. Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce president Diane Parker consoled Dale. It was only make believe - a straw poll in August - loosen up, your honor.

Are commissioners city employees?

That's the question Longwood commissioners face after

Miles raises insurance issues By Joe DeSantis

Staff Writer

LONGWOOD - A question that emerged from this week's Longwood city commission meeting has sent city staff scrambling back to documentation from 1990.

Their information quest deals with the matter of whether or not Longwood commissioners are considered part -time employees of the city, and if so, whether they are entitled to participate in the municipality's group health care coverage with Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Florida.

It's the second time the issue has been brought up in the past month and it appears that research will provide the only clear answer. The issue has been a particular thorn in commissioner Rusty Miles' side, and mayor Paul Lovestrand says he is being unfairly singled out.

Currently, Lovestrand is the only board member taking part in the group policy. He pays 100 percent of his monthly premium. Miles contends there is confusion about the city's personnel policy and it could place Longwood in an awkward position. City administrator John Drago said Tuesday, that staff are going back through records and min-

SANFORD - Seminole County students scored above state and national averages on standardized college admission test scores released on Tuesday. The composite score for Seminole County's graduating seniors taking the ACT exam for entrance into college was 21.9, well above the state's average of 20.6 and the national average of 21.0.

Students submit results of either the ACT or the Scholastic Assessment Test for admission to state universities in Florida. Approximately 36 percent of seniors nationwide took the ACT.

Florida's composite score dropped slightly to 20.6 in 1999, down from 20.8 in 1998. Nationally, the composite score was 21.0, the same as in 1998.

The ACT score range is 1 to 36, with 36 being the highest score.

Seminole County's 1999 composite score of 21.9 is the same as in 1998, and up from 21.6 in 1997.

"Seminole County Public Schools' composite scores held steady in a year when scores statewide decreased," said David Winger, director of testing for the Seminole County school district.

The Seminole County school district's scores in English, math, and science reasoning have consistently improved over the last three years.

In English, Seminole County students scored 21, up from 20.7 in 1998 and 20.3 in 1997. County students scored 22.4 in math, compared to 22.3 in 1998 and 22.0 in 1997.

District scores for science reasoning are 21.6 in 1999, up from See Scores, Page 2A 21.5 in 1998 as well as 1997. However, the district's average score of 22 in reading is a decline from 22.3 in 1998. District students scored 21.9 in reading in 1997.

"Over the last three years the gap between performance by typical Seminole County public school students is steadily widening," Winger said.

Lake Mary High School had the highest composite score in the district, while Oviedo High School's scores improved by the greatest number of points.

Lake Mary High School's composite score declined slightly, from 23.1 in 1998 to 23.0 in 1999. Lake Mary's composite score was 23.0 in 1997.

1997. Lyman High School's composite score declined from 22.0 in 1998 to 20.9 in 1999. Lyman's composite score was 21.5 in 1997.

A record number of Florida's 1999 high school graduates, 42 percent, took the ACT compared to 30 percent ten years ago.

Florida continues to have a more diverse group of students taking the test than nationwide. Minority students comprise nearly 40 percent of Florida's test takers, as 12-point increase over ten years ago.

Nationwide, minority students represent 24 percent of the test takers.

"Florida's ACT test results are exceptional when you take into consideration the challenges faced by our diverse student population," said Tom Gallagher, Florida's education commissioner. "Additionally, these results support our increased emphasis on high student achievement." Florida has significantly larger percentages of African-American and Hispanic students taking the exam. In 1999 African-Americans represented 18 percent of the Florida test takers, compared to 11 percent for the nation. Hispanics made up 14 percent of Florida test takers, compared to six percent for the nation.

Additionally, Florida test takers have a lower average family income compared to test takers nationwide.

The ACT results show that the average score for Florida students completing a college preparatory curriculum was 21.5, compared to 18.3 for those who did not.

Florida scores in English remained the same as last year, while science reasoning, math, and reading scores decreased.

"There's seems to be some question as to when and how commission members became involved with enrolling in the city's health care plan," said Drago.

"Technically, city commissioners are not considered employees of the city. They are not considered part-time employees although they draw a salary."

Drago further explained the situation gets a little muddler because for insurance purposes, the city includes the five commission seats on its list of employees to secure lower rates and premiums.

Drago said city staff will review board minutes and other documentation in an effort to clear up the insurance availability questions and hopefully provide some insight into the situation at the next regular commission meeting on September 7.

Hob-nobbing buzz over Dudley Bates

On the fringe of the 21st Century, Altamonte Springs is a vibrant city - well planned, well managed and well ahead of its neighbors.. A TV station soon will have a 23-story headquarters near Crane's Roost. City Manager Phil Penland said he expects a number of high rise apartment buildings will be next.

High rises are the city's future, Penland said. "We have room to expand but only by going up. I don't envision more sprawling one- or two-story structures. By 2020, Altamonte's skyline will be much like Orlando's."

Once known as Snowville, Altamonte Springs became one of the fastest growing cities in America in the 1970s - a spurt attributable to the discerning and unrelenting leadership of Mayor W. Lawrence Swofford.

Swofford was part country boy, part visionary. He always wore a hat and stuffed note pages in it. He called the hat his secretary. He kept Altamonte Springs a step ahead of its neighbors. He made things happen - like the creation of the mall. He made history." Carlton Henley, the County Commission Chairman, recently said that Altamonte Springs serves as a model for Seminole County. "The way it has dealt  with growth is remarkable," Henley said. "A real good job. No doubt about it."

Things are about to change in Altamonte Springs. J. Dudley Bates, a popular fourterm mayor, is moving into county politics. He's running against two-term incumbent Dick Van Der Weide for the District 3 Commissioner's seat.

This is a good one, everyone. A Republican Party main attraction. Bates was the buzz word at Tuesday night's Seminole Hob Nob in Maitland.

Bates made his announcement on Friday, too late for the straw vote ballots for the Hob Nob. Fact is, Bates hasn't filed his campaign treasury application with the Supervisor of Elections. He attended the Hob Nob, Van Der Weide didn't."It's good for Van Der Weide there wasn't a vote," one insider said. "I think I would have won," Bates said.

The Hob Nob, sponsored by the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, annually attracts the area's top business and civic leaders. The straw vote is a reliable method to gauge of the direction of the Seminole County's Republican Party. Hob Nob attendees cast ballots and influence politics in the county. The Hob Nob is the county's equivalent to the Iowa straw poll.

The latest Hob Nob had a lot to do with Altamonte Springs about the mayor running for the county commission and what happens to the city itself. Too bad the Hob Nob was held in Maitland/Orlando rather than in Seminole County. That subject, by the way, was a Hob Nob ballot query asking the best location for a conference center: a. Lake Mary.

b. Lake Monroe/Sanford. c. Winter Springs.

The winner was: Lake Mary with 265 votes Sanford had 149, Winter Springs 97.

Sanford Mayor Larry Dale's reaction: "Bah Humbug."

Russ White's column appears Tuesday through Saturday in the Seminole Herald.

Editorial & Opinion

Our View Why can't some men just say no?

A 14-year-old girl says that she left her parents' home in the wee hours of the morning Sunday, Aug. 15, and went to the residence of a 28-year-old man who lives across the street. She says after she talked with the man on his back porch, the two went to his bedroom.

She says he removed his clothing and assisted her in removing her shorts and bra but left her shirt on. She says they had intercourse.

At 8:06 a.m., the man was taken by Seminole County Sheriff's deputies to John E. Polk Correction Facility and booked. The arrest was for a lewd and lascivious act upon a child under 16.

The stepfather of the victim said the man admitted the girl had been at his residence. Kahlil Abraham Gliksman of Altamonte Springs denied this to investigators. He also denied having intercourse with the 14-year-old.

The girl, however, told investigators they did have sex. Furthermore, she claims she instigated it.

The case — though not unheard of — is unusual according to the Sheriff's Office. Regardless of who instigated what, Gliksman is faced with a second-degree felony. He could and should if he's found guilty - do 15 years jail time and pay a $10,000 fine. A year in jail for each birthday, plus one to grow on, that's what 28-year-olds should expect when they engage in sexual activity with people half their age.

Here's the dilemma, though: America's jails are too crowded to house all the lawbreakers. We've seen ample evidence of that right here in Seminole County. In recent weeks, violent crimes have been committed by former prisoners who were released because the state had no more room for new inmates. So how's a court going to put away a guy away for 15 years because he didn't have the smarts to tell the neighborhood Lolita to get herself home? A simple, Goodnight. Good-bye. Get lost.

What's disturbing is this is yet another case of a man's weakness when it comes to controlling his urge for sex. Some guys force themselves on women. Others lack the discipline to just say no. But we've come to expect that in a country where the commander-in-chief can commit adultery and fail to suffer the consequences. Wasn't it just a few months ago that more than 60 percent of the American public argued there was no need to punish consensual, private sex, as long as it didn't disrupt job performance?

Carpenter urges support for Census 2000

To the editor:

The U.S. Congress debating funding for the 2000 Census. This is a particularly important issue for our local communities. The 1990 Census was the first to be less accurate than the one before!

Over 8 million people were missed, mostly children and minorities. The Census provides data to divide up federal funds for local crime fighting, education, community development, education and transportation. Census data also determines the allocation of funding for Head Start, the Safe and Drug Free and local governament leaders count and don't get the funds placed in our area, local city and country leaders will begin to

Lessard claims White's column is off the mark

To the editor:

I was deeply saddened after reading Russ White's column on Wednesday, Aug. 11. I've known and respected Mr. White for nearly two years, but my confidence in his objectivity was greatly shaken.

In the column, Mr. White accused the Mayor and I of, "all but prohibiting acts of kindness and compassion." This ridiculous statement was supported by neither fact nor logic and led me to question whether Mr. White had even bothered to read the proposed ordinance (No. 3052). If he had, Mr. White legislation was nothing more than an attempt to establish sound planning and zoning here in Sanford.

One would think that to accuse two people of a total lack of compassion for their fellow man would require at least some factual basis. Mr. White does not subscribe to this belief, and it's a shame. Contrary to his expressions, the Mayor and I do have feelings, and yes, compassion.

Sanford is a wonderfully unique town, and it is the City Commission's duty to make difficult decisions regarding a number of issues including, but not limited to, zoning regulations. Have you ever wondered how auto body shops ended up in quiet neighborhoods here in Sanford? Why large and deteriorating apartment houses were allowed in single-family neighborhoods? The answer to both, and a number of others, is poor planning in the past.

As a veteran of family reunions, I can tell you they are often fractious affairs. Folks get their feelings hurt.

"Uncle Junebug hasn't spoken to Uncle Pink in 32 years, and he isn't about to talk to the stubborn old fool now. So who sat the two together at the banquet table? Aunt Lillie Bell never did care for Aunt Coot's sweet potato pie, and she never tires of telling her so. So how did the two of them end up in the kitchen together? The descendants of old Jim Tucker have felt slighted for decades by the descendants of old Jack Tucker - a bossy, elitist crowd. So who allowed Jack's clan to substitute a museum trip for the traditional fish fry and casino night?"

Given my experience with these affairs, I've got a little advice for the members of the Monticello Association: If the first gathering of the black and white descendants of Thomas Jefferson doesn't go all that smoothly, don't give up on it. You're just acting like family.

After DNA tests supported centuries-old claims that Jefferson had fathered at least

Tucker

Jefferson descendants are squabbling over whether the black kin will have full membership in the Monticello Association and the privilege of burial in the family graveyard at Monticello, where Jefferson is buried. "We need to start the process of determining if they are descendants. There is some indication that they are, but we need to get more evidence," said Gillespie.

I have news for Gillespie and the other white Jeffersons: The evidence is in. DNA cannot be denied. While Jefferson defenders try to hide behind the always-present caveats of science (the DNA report stated definitively only that a Jefferson male was father to Hemings' youngest child), prominent white historians have already given up trying to protect Jefferson's legacy from his long-running sexual liaison with a slave.

So Gillespie needs to adjust to a bit of reality I have learned to live with: You can't choose your relatives. Every family reunion I attend subjects me to at least a couple of kinsmen I'd rather not be associated with, but the genes have already been cast. Thosefolks — arrogant jerks or drunks, officious busybodies or scam artists - cannot be excluded.

Indeed, the Monticello Association has led me to think of extending my family's reunions to include my white relatives. Like many African-Americans, I've got white kin. See Tucker, Page 5A

Practicing powerless politics

The common theme heard in remarks by the Republican presidential candidates in Iowa last Saturday was how broken America has become. Not broken in the theological sense that can lead to confession and repentance, but, depending on the candidate, a brokenness reflected in school shootings, or abortion, or incivility, or even bad TV and movies.

What none of the candidates acknowledged was that government, even if it might be headed by one of them, mostly lacks the power to substantially right those wrongs. For conservatives to suggest it does aligns them with the misplaced faith of liberals.

The powerlessness of politics to reach into the heart was trumpeted by news that former House Speaker Newt Gingrich is divorcing his second wife. Reports say he has been having an affair with a congressional aide young enough to be his daughter. Gingrich and several other members of Congress won a Republican majority in 1994 by touting "family values." How can people who want credit for honoring the Contract With America be taken seriously when they violate a contract with their wives? If they won't impose "family values" on themselves, why should the rest of the nation accept them trickling down from Washington?

Conservatives, especially those whose views are shaped in part or in whole by religious notions, are placing too much faith in the state for deliverance. Politicians are happy to have their votes and will make religious-sounding grants in attempts to win them. This is why it should give pause when

Gov. George W. Bush tells a journalist he has "accepted Jesus" and then uses language normally associated with the unredeemed.

Yes, a president has power to influence the tax rate and the makeup of the Supreme Court, which are important matters. But no president has the power to shape souls. As Jeremy Rabkin writes in the current Policy Review: "Expecting popular culture to do the work of churches or Bible studies is on par with expecting to find spiritual inspiration from the Gallup poll.

Popular culture may be more debased than it used to be, but it was always beneath the standards pious people set for it."

Religious conservatives will again find their pockets picked if they put too much faith in politics to heal the nation. According to a recent survey published in the Los Angeles Times, many of them lack some important basics, even while they lament the absence of such things in the politicians who have failed to meet their expectations. While more than 90 percent of households keep at least three copies of the Bible, which even politicians are now quoting (and often misquoting), two-thirds of them do not regularly read it. More than half cannot even name five of the Ten Commandments or know the names of the four Gospels, yet most of them want the Commandments hanging on public school walls. Perhaps they should first hang them at home. How can a sick and biblically illiterate society be healed if those who profess to have the answer similarly suffer from illiteracy? My preacher last Sunday said the most powerful example to a world that has rejected virtue is for people who claim to know the truth to "love one another." Are religious rightists mostly known for loving each other, or are they mainly associated with what and whom they don't like? Real power is tossed aside, or paid lip service, in favor of political power, which is not power but illusion. Like illicit sex, faith in politics can only make one feel good for the moment.

True power remains with individuals. Ultimately we have the power to shape and even change lives. It is unleashed when families with young children control access to or eliminate television in their homes; when those children are educated at home or in private schools where their family's beliefs are upheld, not in state schools where the values of the state are taught; when people stay married in good times and in bad; when quality time with children is quantity time; when people are valued more than things; and when parents, not highest quality of life for all residents while being vigilant in the protection of our tax base. Even Huey P. Long agreed that his "Share the Wealth" plan would never work in the absence of wealth to share.

This power, properly and lovingly applied, is more effective than politics. But politicians don't win by telling voters that such power can't be found in Washington.

Rest assured Mr. White, I'm full of compassion for every citizen in Sanford. However, compassion is an endeavor of the heart, planning and zoning should be one of the mind.

Boy Scouts have a right to choose their leaders

To the editor:

I have been reading some scary stuff about a radical group aimed at young people. They wear uniforms, camp in the woods and march in formation. Some even learn survival train-

Who am I referring to? A right wing militis? A group aimed at training the next generation of Neo-Nazis? Not even close. It's the boy scouts.

From what homosexual activists are saying, you would think the Boy Scouts are a threat to America by leading our youth to bigotry. That's ridiculous.

Earlier this year the California Supreme Court unanimously ruled that the Boy Scouts cannot be forced to admit either homosexuality or atheists. "The Boy Scouts is an expressive social organization whose primary function is the inculication of values in its youth members," wrote Cheif Justice Ronald George. The court correctly asserted that the Scouts had a right to freedom of speech and freedom of association, and could determine their own criteria for leadership and membership.

However, in an example of judicial activism, New Jeresy's Supreme Court recently ruled 7-0 that the Scout's decision to expel homosexual Boy Scout leader, James Dale, was illegal. Cheif Justice Deborah Poritz wrote, "At a most fundamental level, adherence to the principle of equality demands that our legal system protect the victim of individious discrimination." Following the ruling, lawyer Beatrice Dohrn said, "It's a great day for our client, but also for both lesbian and gay people who just want to join the Boy Scouts."

It may be a great day for them, but what about the rest of us? The issue is not whether homosexuals can be effective leaders or not, but rather should the Scouts be forced to accomodate a lifestyle that is contrary to their beliefs. According to Scout Law, "A Scout is reverant toward God. He is faithful in his religous duties." The Boy Scouts of America (BSA) endeavors to develop American citizens who "have personal values based on religous concepts and have knowledge about and take pride in their American heritage." Without question, forcing a group to accomodate homosexuality flies in the face of the BSA's mission and promotes neither tolerance nor diversity.

The court said that the Boy Scouts are a public institution because they invite broad participation and benefit from public facilites such as schools and parks. Who doesn't? All Americans, and even tourisits, enjoy government facilites of one kind or another.

Of course, the ruling must still go before the U.S. Supreme Court. On a positive note, legal analysts such as Jay Sekulow from the American Center for Law and Justice and Jordan Lorence of the Alliance Defense Fund predict a ruling in favor of the Boy Scouts.

Nevertheless, it's a shame that the BSA has to spend so much time and energy defending itself against political maneuvering. As one who rasied his hand and took the Boy Scout oath, I know that today more than ever our youth desperately need help building character and integrity. Organizations like these

Keep older relatives in touch

By Peter H. Gott, M.D. by Jimmy Johnson

> DEAR DR. GOTT: My 83-year-old grandmother has begun to display signs of senility. I have encouraged family members to keep her in touch with reality. Are we helping or hurting her?

DEAR READER: Helping her. As mental changes that are caused by progressive loss of circulation to the higher brain centers. Such centers memory, judgment, emotional stability and cognitive reasoning. by Jim Davis

Loss of memory can be a particularly disturbing symptom because it occurs relatively early and the patient may not be aware of the deficiency. Thus, the elderly may be grateful when younger associates and family mem-bers gently "refresh" their memories.

Senility, however, is a more advanced form of higher center malfunction. The resulting confusion is often terrifying. For example, imagine yourself being unable to place familiar faces, recollect where you were going 10156. Be sure to mention the title, or how to get there, or remember the day of the week. And consider: the situation isn't going to get better tomorrow as your hangover improves.

Healthy, mentally competent people sometimes have great difficulty understanding (and accepting) the isolation and loneliness that the aged experience every day of their lives.

It must be a great gift, given with the elderly age, they often exhibit love, when family members keep an 80-year-old woman in touch with reality. I commend you. Too many families today are content to put Granny in a control many functions, including nursing home; their only contact with her may be a sentimental greeting card at Christmas, the sender of which she may not remember anyway. I hope that someday you and your family will be fortunate enough to receive the same loving care and attention that you give so freely now.

DEAR READER: I cannot tell from your question whether your difficulty is due to your knee joints or to weak thigh muscles. Therefore, I suggest that you see an orthopedic specialist If, for example, you have arthritis, medicine may help you. On the other hand, muscle weakness is far more ominous and could represent either an early nerve disorder or a primary muscle disease. In this instance, the orthopedist would call on a neurologist for assistance.

All AIDS victims do not benefit from new drug therapies

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the discussion in your column about taking pictures at funerals: In 1986, my partner died of complications from AIDS. We were lucky that he was able to remain at home in comfortable surroundings. I am a floral designer and he loved my work, so I worked all day at my former place of employment to do his flowers.

Many friends sent sympathy tributes and wondered if I would photograph the flowers for them. I agreed. When I was alone in the funeral parlor, I took photographs of the flowers and of him lying in the casket. And yes, he did look better that day in the casket than while he was dying. AIDS is a horrible way to go, so don't condemn anyone for saying that the deceased looked better on the day of the funeral. In some cases it's true.

Abby, please remind people that the AIDS virus is still out of control. The drugs are not effective for everyone. This epidemic is still far from over.

MIKE FROM ST. PETE

DEAR MIKE: You are ab-solutely right that the AIDS epi-demic is still a threat here and around the world. However, a growing complacency is causing many people to let down their guard.

According to Dr. Mervyn Silverman, board member and former president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research (amFAR), new treatment combinations are helping many who have been infected. However, a growing number of people, sadly, do not benefit from the new drug therapies.

In addition, there are 40,000 new HIV infections in the United States alone each year. The infection rate is rising among our youth, women, and especially people of color. And AIDS is increasing among our senior citizens, who represent 10 percent of all cases nationwide! Unfortunately, many of those over the age of 50 don't think they are at risk for AIDS - nor do their physicians - which results in delayed treatment.

Young people, gay and straight, believe nothing bad can happen to them. This is especially dangerous for gay youth, who have a significantly increased chance of being exposed to HIV through unprotected sez.

In short, people who have lulled themselves into believing this epidemic is over could be dead wrong.

DEAR ABBY: I just finished listening to a waitress on a local radio talk show. The topic was the rudeness of some guests, and how some "cheapskates" leave horrible tips. Well, Miss Abby, I am a chef in one of the top restaurants in Los Angeles I have to deal with servers coming into my kitchen and at times berating my staff: "Can't you even cook a steak right?" "Can't you read?" etc. The difference here is that my staff do not receive tips. They earn from $7 to $10 an hour. On a long night, they'll be on their feet nine to 10 hours. They do not receive overtime.

So, to restaurant guests: The next time you receive terrible service in a restaurant and the food is good, call the manager over and tell the person that the food was great - and give him a tip for the kitchen. Even a couple of dollars would mean all the world to us. HEAD CHEF IN LA.

DEAR HEAD CHEF: After your staff works all night in a hot kitchen, I suspect some cold cash would be refreshing. I'm sure many readers have offered their compliments to the chef and crew - but far fewer have shown their appreciation with a tip. Thank you for mentioning

Over 500 attendees comprised of youth soccer officials. region presidents, coaches, and enthusiasts were present at the awards banquet which topped off a day of soccer clinics, seminars and demonstrations.

Sells sat in amazement as his name was called as the recipient of the prestigious Reebok

He was even more surprised as his entire team, the Under-13 Seminole Sparks Girls Premier Travel Team, their parents, and some of his former players who are now in college and onto the awards stage to applaud and congratulate their Sells had led his team through an outstanding 1998-99 season climaxing with the President's Cup State Championship in Panama City this past Many of Sells' players submitted letters explaining why they felt their coach deserved to be named the Reebok Coach of the Year. Their lettern were very touching and illustrated what a youth player feels is important The common thread through the players' letters were Sella' ability to develop players, teach good sportsmanship, motivate, and exercise positive rein-"He always works hard at making us feel like we are the next Mia Hamm rather than someone who doesn't know wrote Seminole Sparks mid-fielder Ludwig's legs were shaking on the mat, yet he stood up as IKF referee Dan Stell started the count.

However, once up, he fell back into the ropes again and it was obvious he was not able to continue and Stell stopped the bout at 51-seconds into the second round.

Haddock was mobbed in the ring by fans and training partners and when the ring had cleared, he was awarded the IKF United States International Rules Light Middleweight belt by fellow Orlando Kickboxing Center fighters and IKF U.S. Women's Champion, Marisol Esquilin.
