City Manager Skeptical; Mayor Cautious

SIB Proposes Sanford Contract Services

By Diane Petryk
Herald News Editor

Sanford's Scenic Improvement Board is proposing the city contract out for grounds maintenance services, rather than add staff to do the work.

SIB member Sara Jacobson made the proposal at a city commission work session Monday, but was promptly told by City Commissioner A.A. "Mac" McManahan the idea should have been presented to city staff first.

The SIB's idea is this: The city would save by contracting out for grounds maintenance because there would be no tools or equipment to purchase and maintain, no transportation to provide and no crews to keep busy when the peak growing season is over, possibly six months out of the year.

Jacobson said the SIB sought cost estimates from a number of firms and concluded the cost to the city might be about $1,500 a month for 150 man hours a month.

City Manager Frank Faison was skeptical, and Mayor Bettye Smith urged caution.

"I've lived in the city 30 years now," she said. "And I've hired people to do grounds maintenance. Some have been extremely good and some poor, while charging about the same."

Earlier this month Faison said there are more completed SIB projects than city personnel can properly maintain. SIB Chairman Martha Yancey told the commissioners Aug. 3 there is $76,000 left of money allocated to the SIB and it was agreed the city would hire four temporary workers until the end of October.

But a recent proposal from the grounds maintenance department to add eight more full time staff did not receive SIB support.

"The SIB does not support the request for more manpower," Jacobson said before presenting the contracting proposal.

She said there are city sites requiring skilled labor to maintain and those requiring only unskilled labor. Part of the recommendation is that city grounds maintenance crews be responsible only for those sites requiring skilled labor. The

2 Injured In Crash

By Susan Loden

A car believed to have been passing a string of cars on State Road 46 east of Sanford collided almost head-on with another vehicle this morning, causing apparent serious injuries to the drivers of both vehicles. Both drivers were alone in their vehicles when the crash occurred about 7 a.m. just west of Marina Isle fish camp and immediately east is commonly called "Crow's Camp Bridge."

The driver of the truck, who has not yet been identified, was airlifted Orlando Regional Medical Center via helicopter. The driver of the car, identified as James Bulmer, 40, of Lake Monore, was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford. A rescue worker at the scene said Bulmer possibly sustained a broken leg and possible chest injuries.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies said one of the vehicles appeared to be a small compact car, possibly a Dodge Colt. The other is a four-wheel drive pickup truck, possibly a Ford Ranger. A witness at the nearby fish camp said it looked as though the compact automobile was passing other cars moments before the crash occurred.

Deputies, however, said they did not know which vehicle was reportedly attempting to pass the string of cars on the two lane highway.

appeared to have been nearly torn off in the accident, deputies said. The truck rolled over after impact, landing about 50 feet from the collision site, deputies said.

Traffic in each direction was backed up for at least a mile as rescue personnel worked to free the victims trapped in their automobiles. Each extrication took more than an hour.

The eastbound traffic was more easily re-routed than the westbound, deputies said.

Many drivers heading west to Sanford turned back and drove through Oviedo to take another route into Sanford.

Panel Member: Charter Committee Playing Politics

By Ted Carter
Herald Staff Writer

Orange Countyman Bob Webster, himself the subject of complaints that his non-residency makes him ineligible to serve on Seminole County's citizens charter advisory committee, complained this week the county staff and charter committee chairman are playing politics with the committee's meeting schedule.

He said he is disturbed that the charter advisory committee's meeting originally set for tonight was "illegally" changed to Aug. 26. He charged the reason for the change was to provide committee Chairman Marilyn Crotty with support from County Administrator Ken Hooper and County Attorney Nikki Clayton in pushing pro-charter positions. "At this point, it's more beneficial to her to have Nikki there to back her up," said Webster.

Clayton and Crotty said Monday there was no choice but to reschedule the committee meeting because the county commission is conducting a public hearing on the updated version of the county's comprehensive land-use plan tonight and Wednesday night. Commission Chairman Fred Streetman is among the elected officials slated to address the panel at the Aug. 26 meeting and could not have been present if the meeting were held tonight.

Webster claimed state laws require a majority vote of the committee to change a meeting date previously established by a majority vote of the committee, saying the committee members could be guilty of violating the state's open meetings law by attending the Aug. 26 meeting.

Clayton disagreed. "The chairman is empowered to change meeting dates as she sees fit," said Clayton, noting the change is legal as long as sufficient notice is given to the panel members and the public.

Crotty said "it never occurred to me we were doing anything wrong." She said it was stressed during the July vote on the meeting schedule that the meeting dates would have to be tentative. "It was said aloud that this was to be tentative."

Webster has been a vocal critic of Clayton and Crotty's handling of the committee's business the past couple months, saying they are intent on making sure the panel recommends charter government for the county. He charged that Clayton's failure to find a speaker to address negative aspects of charter government was a blatant attempt at manipulating the committee's thinking, noting three charter government proponents were found to address the committee.

The committee has since agreed to look further for a

Land-Use Plan Public Hearing

What do you envision for Seminole County's future? Tonight and Wednesday night is your opportunity to tell county commissioners your views.

A half year of meetings and studies examining land-use patterns and growth trends in Seminole County have led to a proposed interim update of the county's comprehensive land-use plan. The proposed plan earlier this month was the subject of a lengthy public hearing before the county's planning and zoning board.

Starting at 7 tonight and Wednesday night county commissioners will conduct public hearings on the plan designed to guide the county's growth the next several years. The hearings both nights are in the commission chambers at the San Carlos Avenue entrance to the county services building in Sanford.

The plan is broken into study areas based on geography. Tonight's session will focus on the north central, northwest and southwest

Longwood Adopts Peace Treaty

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

In the interest of peace and harmony, Longwood city commissioners voted unanimously to accept a resolution "for the good of Longwood" proposed by City Administrator Ron Waller at the commission meeting Monday night.

In the spirit of the resolution, the 1½-hour meeting was the most peaceful this year, proceeding without the usual charges and protests from the audience or controversy among the commissioners.

In an Aug. 13 memo to the commissioners, Waller appealed to them to "stop airing our linen" at public meetings and work together with he and the city employees as a total team.

In the resolution, the commissioners pledged to "support and protect all the citizens of Longwood by promoting the public health, public welfare and public safety of the city."

It further stated, "We pledge to support and endorse the policies and ordinances of the city in a direct and straightforward manner. We pledge to use our office of city commissioners only for the benefit of the city. We pledge to work in harmony because we believe that public office is a public trust."

City Commissioner June Lormann said, "I think it is a very good resolution he has put together. It will help all of us to put our troubles behind us."

But it may not be that easy now that Waller is considering a slander suit against Commissioner Lynette Dennis, who tried unsuccessfully to get him removed from his job; a request by the Florida

Department of Law Enforcement investigate allegations against Police Chief Greg Manning and a request from Mayor Ed Myers that the Governor's Office investigate charges of malfeasance and misfeasance against commissioners Dennis and Dave Gunter made by Skylark resident Carolyn Emmling, who has asked that they be removed from office.

Following Monday night's meeting, Gunter said he and Dennis had been deprived of due process because the mayor had

Petsos Testifies In Trial

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

Suspended Lake Mary City Commissioner Arthur "Buzz" Petsos took the witness stand in his own defense today as the state pursued burglary and petty theft convictions against him for entering a delicatessen he once owned.

Petsos was the first of four expected defense witnesses before the four-woman, two-man jury in Sanford. He has pleaded not guilty in the March 16 incident.

Petsos, 35, elected without opposition to his first term in 1985, and was suspended from office April 3 by Gov. Bob Martinez pending the outcome of this week's trial. Despite the charges against him, Petsos is running for re-election and has three opponents in the Sept. 1 election.

Petsos testified today that he had a "security agreement" that allowed him to enter the business. He said the agreement said the equipment and materials in the business were his so as to protect his investment if the business didn't succeed.

"I went into the deli to check on the equipment that was in there and to see whether the equipment was in there and whether the statements Mr. (Leo) Cloos made about the amount of money he was taking in were correct," testified Petsos today.

Cloos is from Casselberry. Petsos testified that although Cloos has assumed the business from another party Petsos sold the business to, the original security agreement was in effect and that he, Petsos, had a right to be in the deli, a business he "started from the blank walls."

He testified that the Cloos' monthly payments of $250 were becoming later each month, that the insurance on the business was not paid, that it was behind in turning in tax revenues to the state and that the last monthly payment check Petsos received bounced.

Petsos testified that he was in the store to take selected equipment that is needed to run a deli. He said he was going to take the equipment in hopes it would "enlighten" Cloos to get insurance on the business. Petsos also testified that he paid for insurance for the business out of his own pocket so if there was a fire he wouldn't be left with nothing.

"The equipment (an electronic scale and a meat slicer) I was going to keep at my travel agency, my parents' travel agency ... The rest off the stuff I would have taken home."

Petsos, who had a key to the business, testified that he walked out the back after seeing the owner because he did not want a confrontation.

"I have been in the deli and seen how he treated his waitresses. I didn't want to get

POLICE

IN BRIEF

Prisoner Escapes At Hospital, Recaptured At Apartments

A 31-year-old Sanford man arrested on a violation of probation DUI charge by Sanford police at about 6:35 a.m. Saturday escaped from police who had taken him to the Sanford hospital for treatment after his arrest. He escaped at about 8 a.m. and was recaptured by 8:04 a.m. at a nearby apartment complex.

Police charged Dallas Dale Dean, of 805 W. Second St., with escape and resisting arrest without violence. He was being held without bond.

Dean was first arrested at 2541 B. Myrtle Avenue. He was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital for unspecified treatment before being booked into jail.

Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett said he does not know why Dean was taken to the hospital. The arrest report listed his health as "fair."

At the hospital Dean was wearing one bracelet of a handcuff on his right hand and managed to free himself "by unknown means" and escape through a back emergency room door, police said. He was pursued to Sanford Landings Apartments, which are nextdoor to the hospital, where he was recaptured.

Charged With Fondling Child

A 10-year-old girl's allegations have brought charges of commission of a lewd and lascivious act on a child against a 23-year-old Sanford man.

The girl said the man pinned her against a wall outside his apartment at about 9 p.m. Saturday. She said she was fondled and the man refused to release her. He allegedly held her against the wall by her shoulders, a Sanford police report said.

Hershel Estil Smith, of 500 W. Airport Blvd. #1312, was arrested at his home at 11:43 p.m. Saturday. He was being held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

Exposed, Makes Lewd Threats

A 47-year-old Casselberry motel resident who was refused admittance to the ABC Lounge, U.S. Highway 17-92, Casselberry, at about 9 p.m. Sunday, because of his "shabby" dress went next door to the package store, from which he was also ordered to leave, a Casselberry police report said.

The man allegedly exposed his sexual organs and made lewd threats to the male manager of the package store. Casselberry police, already on the scene made the arrest on a charge of exposure of sexual organs.

Emilio Xiques Jr., of the Concord Motel #7, has been charged in the case and was being held in lieu of $500 bond.

Woman Accosts Elderly Victim

A 23-year-old woman who allegedly approached an elderly woman outside a convenience store at 301 E. 25th St., Sanford, and tried to sell her a camera, which the victim refused to buy, allegedly then demanded money from the elderly woman, a Sanford police report said.

The suspect allegedly told the victim "I'll blow you away," but she fled when another woman approached and said, "Oh, no you don't." Police were called and converged on the area. The suspect was reportedly found behind the store and was reportedly identified by the victim and a witness.

Marcia Ann Brown, of 1215 Lincoln Court, Sanford, was arrested at 10:45 a.m. Saturday. She was charged with robbery, assault and a forcible felony. She was being held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

Woman Cut, Hair Pulled

Sanford police report Mary Jean Pew was cut on the thumb with a kitchen knife and had some of her hair pulled out and was kicked during an argument with a 31-year-old Sanford man at about 7 p.m. Sunday. Pew was trying to leave the scene in a vehicle when she was assaulted, a Sanford police report said.

Leroy Lee, 31, of 5 William Clark Court, Sanford, was arrested at his home at 7:14 p.m. on a charge of aggravated battery. He was being held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Driving Under Influence Arrests

The following persons have been arrested in Seminole County on a charge of driving under the influence:

- Lynn A. Szecek, 44, of 2400 N. Lake Brantley Road, Longwood, was arrested Monday on that road. A Florida Highway patrol trooper did not report the reason for the arrest.
- Dale Eugene Hull, 65, of 1040 Lake Pleasant Road, Apopka, at 1:07 a.m. Sunday after his car was in an accident on State Road 436, Altamonte Springs.
- Don Leo Shrader, 30, of Orlando, at 2:05 a.m. Saturday after he was seen driving erratically and with his car's headlights out. The arrest was made on State Road 434.
- William Edward Irwin, 28, of Fourth Street, Lake Mary, was arrested at 9 p.m. Friday on Crystal Lake Avenue, Lake Mary, after he was seen driving with his car's headlight turned off.
- James Morris Burns, 46, of Maitland, at 2 a.m. Saturday after his car was in an accident on U.S. Highway 17-92.

Immunization Records Required For Schools

Parents planning to have their children attend Seminole County schools this year are being reminded by the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services that all students in the state must have up-to-date immunization records.

Henry Janowski, director of the HRS immunization program, said Florida students must be immunized against polio, measles, mumps, rubella, diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis. Janowski said some of these diseases are actually on the rise, although it seems no one has them any more.

Janowski explained there have been several cases of measles reported in the state over the past year. He said measles can be very harmful and at times fatal. "It can cause hearing loss, pneumonia and in some cases mental retardation."

Parents may arrange for their children to be immunized by a private physician or local county public health units. Janowski said parents should schedule appointments for immunization as soon as possible because of the crowds expected at health units and doctor's offices as the school year grows closer.

Students with permanent medical or religious exemptions from immunization are required to show proof of exemption at the time they enter a Florida school.

Bernice Duncan, section head of the community health department in Seminole County, said school-age students could be immunized for free by her department.

"We would love it if parents would bring a record of their child's prior immunizations with them when they bring their children in for their shots," Duncan said.

Parents may take their children to one of the following locations to receive free immunizations for their children by the county health department.

The Sanford Clinic at 240 W. Airport Blvd. gives immunizations Tuesday and Friday mornings from 8 to 11 a.m.

The county's Longwood clinic is open for students to receive shots on Mondays from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and on Thursdays from 1 to 3:30 p.m. The clinic is located at the corner of Wilma and Church streets.

The health department also provides immunizations from their Lake Monroe Clinic at the Rose Hill Baptist Church every Wednesday from 2 to 4 p.m.; the Oviedo Police Department, 42 S. Central Ave., on Tuesdays from 8:45 to 10:45 a.m.; and the Community Center on First Street in Geneva on Fridays from 8:45 to 10:45 a.m.

Duncan said it would be much easier on both parents and the health department if children were taken to the clinic closest to their homes.

For more information on free immunizations for Seminole County students call the Seminole County Health Department at 322-2724.

Fairy Lake Reopened

By Jess Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Fairy Lake in Longwood has been reopened for recreational use after tests showed that nausea and vomiting experienced by eight Longwood residents had no connection with the quality of lake water or the death of several ducks living around the lake.

Tests on eight Longwood residents, who became ill after eating fried turtle from Fairy Lake, revealed the bacteria shigella. Russell Miller, director of the state's environmental health agency in Seminole County.

Miller said, "The tests run gave us enough information to suspect improper food preparation." Miller said, "In preparing turtle or poultry the cutting board becomes contaminated with bacteria from the raw meat and often the cooked food is contaminated if laid back on the same board."

"It points out the importance of cooking well and washing the cutting surface between preparation and final cooking," Miller said.

The victims became ill two weeks ago after eating the turtle. Some of them had also consumed a pie made from duck eggs. Stool samples were sent to the state lab for testing.

Four of the dead ducks from Fairy Lake found about the same time were sent to the Department of Agriculture lab in Kilmomney in an effort to learn the cause of death. The lab confirmed Miller's suspicion that the ducks died from botulism. Miller said it is not unusual for ducks to die this time of the year when it is hot and rainy. The ducks forage on the bottom of the lake where there is a lot of silt and algae creating anaerobic conditions.

Electrical Short Ignites House Fire

Fire broke out in a bedroom of a mobile home in Rock Cove Court Sunday afternoon while its occupant was away, and damaged the bedroom and an adjacent bathroom and caused smoke damage throughout the home.

Sanford firefighters were called to the home, at lot 36, at 1:38 p.m. and found thick smoke pouring out of it. John Holton, who owns the home, was not there and firemen forced their way in through a side door and a window.

Firemen said the fire apparently was started by a short in an electrical panel in the bedroom.

Record Heat Broils Area

Staff and Wire Reports

The high Monday at Orlando International Airport reached 96 degrees, according to the National Weather Service.

The Orlando temperature tied a 1980 record, marking the sixth time this month a temperature record has been broken. Also, nine other Florida cities tied or broke heat records Monday.

A string of violent thunderstorms that spun at least two tornadoes threatened to pummel the Plains today, as damage estimates for flooding in the Chicago area climbed towards the tens of millions of dollars.

A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect until early today for parts of Kansas, where thunderstorms produced golf ball-size hail at Marysville, and 77-mph winds at Russell. Concordia received a half inch of rain in 15 minutes Monday coupled with wind gusts of 51 mph.

Thunderstorms also menaced parts of Nebraska, where hail the size of baseballs was reported near Phillips, and a tornado late Monday touched down at Grand Island, damaging at least six houses, tearing up roofs and splintering tree limbs. No injuries were reported.

"We're always happy people heed the warning and do what they're supposed to — take shelter. That was obvious tonight. We didn't have any reports of any injury," said Hall County Civil Defense Director Howard Maxon.

Later Monday, the storm blew by just north of Fairbury in Jefferson County, Neb., pounding the area with baseball-size hail and winds of up to 110 mph.

Showers and thunderstorms were expected today throughout Iowa, the Dakotas, parts of Wisconsin, Illinois and the Tennessee Valley. A tornado touched down at West Fargo, N.D. Monday. No property damage or injuries were reported.

Showers and thunderstorms were also scattered today across parts of Mississippi and Tennessee, as well as from New York State to West Virginia and southwest Florida.

A rapidly moving weather system was expected to bring up to a half inch of rain to northern Illinois today, an area where rainfall for August already has surpassed all previous monthly records.

However, the latest front should not worsen the problems of some 1,000 residents forced from their homes in recent days by flooding, said Jim Purpura, a National Weather Service forecaster in Chicago.

"This system does not have anywhere near the moisture that the other system had," Purpura said.

Last Friday, torrential downpours dumped 9.2 inches of rain on the Chicago metropolitan area in less than 24 hours, triggering flash floods that swamped suburbs and made an island out of O'Hare International Airport.

Officials were to begin surveying the flooded areas today, the first step in applying for federal disaster aid.

The total dollar estimate of damage to homes and businesses from the weekend floods is likely to be in the tens of millions of dollars. Chuck Jones of the Emergency Services Disaster Agency, said Monday.

Nearly 2,000 homes were still without electrical power in the Chicago area Monday night, and about 18,500 still lacked telephone service, spokesmen for the utilities said.

Local Report

The high temperature Tuesday in Sanford was 95 degrees and the overnight low was 74 degrees as reported by the University of Florida Agricultural Research and Education Center, Celery Avenue. There was no rainfall recorded. Mostly sunny today with expected high in the low to middle 90s and a 30 percent chance of afternoon showers.

Area Forecast

Tonight...partly cloudy. Low in the low to mid 70s. Light south wind.

Wednesday...mostly sunny but with a chance of afternoon thunderstorms. High in the mid 90s. Rain chance 30 percent.

CIA Officials Deny Iran, Contra Arms Shipment Knowledge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four senior CIA officials, in still-secret testimony to the Iran-Contra committees, deny they knew of possibly illegal U.S. involvement in arms shipments to Iran and the Nicaraguan rebels in 1985 and 1986, congressional sources say.

Alan Fiers, the CIA's Central America task force chief, contradicted testimony from fired White House aide Oliver North, telling congressional committees investigating the scandal he was unaware in 1986 that an agency operative was assisting in arming the Contra rebels, the sources said.

Another CIA witness, Duane "Dewey" Clarridge, the agency's counterterrorism chief, disputed the testimony of subordinates who said he knew a November 1985 shipment to Iran contained missiles, the sources said.

CIA participation in the secret shipment lacked written authority from President Reagan as required by law.

Swaggart: Jail For Someone

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — A federal grand jury was seated under tight security to begin what is expected to be a yearlong probe of fund raising and spending at the PTL ministry under its fallen founders, Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker.

It has been widely reported that the 23-member panel, which convened and met briefly Monday, was set up to investigate the television ministry. Authorities would not confirm the grand jury's purpose.

But Clerk of Court Thomas J. McGraw said, "Whether or not it's true, this has been labeled the PTL investigation."

The panel members, warned by Chief Judge Robert Potter not to talk about their work, are expected to focus on possible mail or wire fraud — charges that the ministry raised millions of dollars for one cause but spent it for another.

The PTL filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law two months ago.

Louisiana TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, believed to have leaked the word of Bakker's fling with a church secretary that forced him to resign last March, predicted the probe will put some PTL officials behind bars.

4-Year-Old Girl Survives; Death Toll 154

Investigators In Quandary Over Crash

ROMULUS, Mich. (UPI) — Investigators said it could be months before they know for sure what caused the crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 235, as attention focused on a 4-year-old girl who was critically injured in the tragedy.

Officials with the National Transportation Safety Board said Monday they were looking at a wide range of factors in the crash — including how much was loaded on the plane, which carried 144 passengers and eight Northwest employees, and whether there were any wind shears at Detroit Metropolitan Airport when the plane went down at 8:47 p.m. Sunday.

However, a National Weather Service expert said winds at the time of the crash were 13.8 mph, not enough to cause dangerous wind shear for a plane the size of the Northwest MD-80 that crashed. Visibility was 6 miles.

"It's going to take nine to 12 months before we have a probable cause," said NTSB spokesman Alan Pollock. He said the first report on the crash should be available in 60 days.

An NTSB spokeswoman said two black boxes from the plane were flown to Washington Monday for analysis at the board's laboratory. Late Monday, official said the devices apparently were intact.

The NTSB said all 152 people on the plane and two on the ground were killed, but a relative identified a 4-year-old girl hospitalized in critical condition as a passenger.

Anthony Cichan of Willow Grove, Pa., late Monday identified the girl being treated for burns and fractures at the University Medical Center in Ann Arbor as his granddaughter Cecilia Cichan, a passenger on the flight.

He was assisted by two of the girl's uncles, although the identification was not considered official by the hospital until dental records are checked.

The Arizona Republic reported family members made the positive identification based on a chipped tooth and the color of Cecilia's fingernail polish.

Cecilia and her family were returning to their home in Tempe, Ariz., when the crash occurred. Presumed killed in the crash were her father, Michael, 32, her mother, Paula, 33, and her brother, David, 8.

The girl was unconscious and in critical condition early today after undergoing surgery. She suffered third-degree burns over 30 percent of her body, a fractured leg and collarbone and various lacerations.

A hospital spokesman said she was "pretty much in gauze from head to toe." The girl was rescued from wreckage and garbled that medics could not determine whether she had been in the plane or a vehicle on the ground, but a doctor on the scene said he unstrapped her from what appeared to be an airplane seat.

In addition to the 144 passengers, the NTSB said there were two non-working airline employees on the flight and six working crew members — one less airline worker than earlier reported. A Northwest spokesman said the confusion may have arisen because one non-working employee took a regular seat.

The death toll of 154 equals that of the second-worst air accident in U.S. history.

SCC Courses Going Fast, Classes Start Next Week

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

Officials at Seminole Community College say the selection of credit courses available to students this fall is going down as the school enters its last week of regular registration before the first day of classes Monday.

Dr. J. A. Sawyer, vice president of student and information services, said many of the basic classes students look to take to complete requirements for graduation are already closed, with the rest going quickly. These classes include subjects such as math, English, science and the humanities.

With the college expecting a five percent increase in enrollment this year, Sawyer said administrators are doing everything possible to create more classes before the semester starts. "We're making every effort to accommodate these students that will register between now and Monday," Sawyer said.

Joe Roof, dean of admissions and records for SCC, said he expects about 5,500 full-time students to be enrolled in the college by end of the upcoming fall semester. Roof based this figure on the full-time enrollment of about 5,400 students at the end of last year's classes at the college. These enrollment figures are based on classes taken for college credit only, said Roof, and do not include vocational and recreational classes.

With the combination of the three areas of classes, Roof thinks the school will maintain its overall enrollment figure of 21,000 students it ended the 1986-1987 school year with. That number also includes students enrolled in the adult high school program at SCC.

According to Roof, even with the college trying to establish new classes for those students that have not yet registered, it will be very difficult for students to get the classes desired.

"If people are thinking about going to college this fall, now is the time to take action," Roof said.

Sawyer said the college is also running out of room and facilities to handle the over 1,000 different courses it now offers. "We're really running out of space to put everybody," Sawyer said.

One of the steps the college took to upgrade its facilities was to add 300 new parking spaces on its campus, Sawyer said. He said the parking places should be ready for use by the start of classes next Monday.

"Adding more parking may seem like a mundane issue," Sawyer said, "but it's very important."

"You ask any college student what their biggest complaint about their school is, and usually the number one thing they say is parking," Roof said.

Sawyer said SCC also recently opened a new seven classroom

Hostage Journalist Escapes From Kidnappers In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — American journalist Charles Glass escaped from his kidnappers in Beirut after 62 days in captivity and turned himself over to Syrian troops who took him to Damascus, witnesses and security sources said today.

ABC in Damascus confirmed Glass had arrived in the Syrian capital and said he was taken to the foreign ministry.

Security sources said the veteran ABC correspondent escaped from his kidnappers by locking them inside his makeshift prison in a building in Beirut's southern suburbs.

The sources said while his guards slept, Glass crept out of the living room on the seventh floor of a building in the Bir al Abed district and onto a balcony that led to the kitchen.

Last Of Nazi Leaders Dies

WEST BERLIN (UPI) — The body of Nazi leader Rudolf Hess will be handed over to relatives, allaying fears among his family that the remains would be secretly disposed of by authorities to prevent his grave from being turned into a shrine for neo-Nazis.

Hess, Adolf Hitler's former deputy, died Monday at the age of 93 in four-power Spandau War Crimes Prison after serving 46 years of a life term.

Hess, who publicly maintained his loyalty to Hitler throughout his imprisonment, was the last of seven top Nazi leaders sent to the Spandau prison in the British sector of Berlin, which is run jointly by Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union.

A Western Allied spokesman who announced the death on behalf of the United States, Britain and France said Hess's remains would be released to his family as soon as possible.

Good Riddance Of Bad Rule

The Federal Communications Commission was correct the other day to scrap the fairness doctrine, which has required the nation's radio and television broadcasters since 1949 to air conflicting views on important public issues. Now the electronic media can enjoy the same First-Amendment freedoms accorded the press.

Although the fairness doctrine was supposed to promote a freewheeling exchange of ideas, it frequently had just the opposite effect. Numerous television and radio broadcasting executives shied away from any controversial topics, fearing the legal wrath of various fringe groups demanding equal air time. Thus, the American public is regularly exposed to bland electronic editorials on such burning issues as bicycle safety and county fairs.

Clearly, the doctrine that evolved through commission-policy statements and court rulings has outlived its usefulness.

The original justification for the fairness doctrine was that there were a limited number of broadcast outlets that controlled the airwaves compared to an abundance of newspapers and magazines. When the FCC policy was formalized during the Truman administration, the nation had 95 television stations and about 2,000 radio stations. Today, there are 1,300 television stations and slightly more than 10,000 radio stations in the United States. This explosion of broadcast outlets mocks the argument that the public does not have access to widely differing points of view.

Still, the FCC ruling has produced howls of protest from senators and congressmen and, of course, Ralph Nader. They contend it will prompt narrow-minded broadcasters to ride roughshod over the public's right to be exposed to controversial ideas. Nonsense. The intense competition between radio and television stations argues against such censorship. Indeed, stations might even be emboldened to deal more forthrightly with sensitive public issues now that the government isn't peering over their shoulders.

This is not to suggest that the electronic media is on the threshold of a revolution in quality programming. But easing federal controls certainly gives broadcasters the opportunity to improve their product. And that bodes well for the public interest.

It also should be noted that the FCC decision does not relieve radio and television stations of their legal responsibility to present programs that meet local needs. Nor does it affect the equal-airtime rule concerning competing candidates for federal office. On the other hand, stations will have greater latitude to concentrate their coverage on major candidates in state and local races without fear of being hauled into court by the Flat Earth Society candidate who believes he has been slighted.

Former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart was on target several years ago when he said: "If we must choose whether editorial decisions are to be made in the free judgment of individual broadcasters or imposed by bureaucratic fiat, the choice must be for freedom." The FCC's decision to repeal the fairness doctrine reflects that wisdom.

Safety On Freeway: Tailgate Patrolman

LOS ANGELES — A Canadian tourist walked up to the airport car rental desk, carrying a sign that he planned to install in the back of his rented car:

"I'm from out of town. Please don't shoot."
The car rental clerk chuckled. "He wasn't kidding. He was dead serious."
But the long lines at all the airport car rental counters belied such apprehension, while reaffirming an immutable reality governing all Californian drivers — permanent or temporary (such as myself).

There is absolutely no alternative.
I drove my rented car very carefully along the San Diego Freeway to my Sunset Boulevard hotel. At one point, I happily crawled alongside a California Highway Patrol car at only 35 miles an hour, knowing I was "safe and secure from all alarms."

Amid the macabre humor and late-night-TV-host jokes, we may have forgotten four facts of life:

1. Cyclical eruptions of violence are an American tradition.

Between 1979 and 1981, there were 28 murders of black children in Atlanta. In the '60s, race riots scarred major cities.
2. Freeway shootings will run their course as inexorably as Ollieman. Sociological spasms are doomed to short life spans.

While I was in LA last week, newspapers had already begun relegating the latest freeway shooting to the inside pages. By de-emphasizing the newsworthiness of this frightening trend, the papers were also devaluing the self-esteem of the nuts who resort to vehicular violence. "They're copycats," a West Hollywood black policeman, Charles Ingram, disgustingly told me.

But the freeway shootings are also a neurotic response to the smoldering frustration of endless traffic jams and system breakdowns that other big-city drivers serenely accept as normal. LA drivers angrily reject immobilization.

3. There is absolutely no alternative to the freeway system.

Los Angeles is a mobile residential culture joined by ribbons of interlocking freeways that fan out from sprawling business clusters to downtown LA, West Hollywood, Beverly Hills, Century City (a favorite of President Reagan's) and Johnny Carson's "beautiful downtown bank."

There is no 'there' there," as Gertrude Stein said of another California city.

4. The LA freeway system is permanently doomed to vehicular viscosity.
"In the Los Angeles area, we cannot, in our wildest dreams, solve the traffic problem," Dale Ratzliff, a senior transportation official for the state, told Philadelphia Inquirer reporter Murray Dubin last year.

During rush hours, the current average freeway speed decreases, on average, from 37 miles per hour to 17 miles an hour.

A new planned freeway "will be jammed the second it opens," warned a federal transportation official.

But in a true display of the unquenchable American frontier spirit, people continue to migrate to Los Angeles.

I don't blame them. This sun-bathed oasis is still a comfortable and exciting place to live.

JEFFREY HART

Why Not Salvage Titanic?

Something is going on which your cheerful columnist simply does not understand. By a bi-partisan voice vote the Senate has approved legislation, introduced by Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, banning the sale or profit-making display of items recovered from the wreck of the Titanic.

What is going on here? Am I just tone-deaf to music other people hear? Maybe so. A French expedition has been recovering items from the debris. I myself do not see the merit of the argument that champagne bottles, teacups, ashtrays and so forth ought to rest forever two miles deep in the mud of the ocean bottom. What good are they doing down there? Why should not interested, living human beings be able to take a look at them? Just who are Senator Weicker and his colleagues representing? Deep-water ocean worms?

Yet the American scientist Robert Ballard feels the same way Weicker apparently does. Ballard led the Woods Hole expedition that first found the Titanic wreck, and he apparently has mystical feelings about it. He has explored the site himself, and he finds it "eerie." He has repeatedly said that nothing should be disturbed there. He even obfuscated the precise location of the wreck, in the hope that no one else could go there. Yeah. It probably took the French expedition about 15 minutes to pinpoint the wreck.

Eva Hart, 82, an Englishwoman, and so far as I know not related to me, feels the same way as Ballard and Weicker. On that fateful night 75 years ago Eva Hart was 7 years old. Her father put her into one of the Titanic's lifeboats, and that was the last she ever saw of him. He was one of the 1,512 who went down with the ship.

"To bring up those things from a mass sea grave just to make a few thousand pounds," says Eva Hart today. In her home near London, "shows a dreadful insensitivity and greed. They're simply going to do it as fortune hunters, vultures, pirates."

Perhaps if I had been there, that night, I would more easily comprehend Eva Hart's feelings. But the site of the wreck is certainly not a "grave." There are no bodies present. Some of those who died are buried in Newfoundland. Others froze in the icy waters. Those who went down with the ship have long since been consumed by ocean creatures, who have eaten the wood of the ship's deck. There is no one down there at all. No one.

A Career Diplomat Gets Third Degree

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is widely suspected by State Department professionals of trying to impose his conservative views on the Foreign Service by blocking the ambassadorial nominations of career diplomats whom he suspects of liberalism.

His latest targets have been Richard Viets, named as ambassador to Portugal, Nicholas Platt (Philippines) and Melissa Wells (Mozambique). The senator's attempt to block their approval by the Foreign Relations Committee moved George Vest, director general of the Foreign Service, to an unusual expression of displeasure toward a powerful senator.

All three career diplomats have "top-notch" credentials. Vest told our reporter Daniel Kaufman. He said he cannot understand why Helms has withheld from them the routine approval that traditionally has been given to career officers nominated as ambassadors.

WILLIAM RUSHER

Crime Of Heart

Now that the Iran/contra hearings are over, various Democrats are busy trying to put as much hay as possible in the barn. On television recently I heard Bob Beckel, the manager of Walter Mondale's 1984 campaign, declare happily that "A year ago Ronald Reagan was a candidate for Mount Rushmore. Now he'll be lucky to get back to the Hollywood Hills."

Well, things may not be quite that bad. Poor Beckel is obviously still smarting from his tiger's one-state sweep, and may be forgiven for exaggerating a bit.

But presumably President Reagan cannot escape all criticism in connection with the Iran/contra affair, so the question arises: What, precisely, was his worst offense?

Since any reply I might offer would be suspect, let me call on New York Times columnist Anthony Lewis, a liberal whose sins assuredly don't include excessive solicitude for Ronald Reagan. Quoth Mr. Lewis:

"The most shocking aspect of the whole story remains the decision to sell arms to Iran in the hope of getting American hostages out of Lebanon. President Reagan had called on the world not to arm terrorist nations, in particular Iran, and not to make deals for hostages. His warmest supporters condemn the arms sale."

Actually, the president's warmest supporters (if I may speak for them) think that a lot of the criticism of the arms sales is a spectacular example of being wise after the event. Moreover, we think that the secret negotiations with potential friends in Iran and the ensuing arms sales began as a perfectly sound diplomatic initiative in that vital part of the world, and only gradually took on the aspect of a "trade" of arms for hostages. It seems likely that, to the bitter end, President Reagan believed that, far from dealing with the kidnapers, he was bringing heavy pressures to bear on them.

It was clearly a crime of the heart. The president's mind was too much on the hostages, knowing (as you and I did not) that one of them, our Beirut CIA chief Bill Buckley, had been tortured and then killed. He shared, too, the anguish of their families. He saw, as the rest of us did, their pitiful pleas on national television, reproaching him for not doing more.

No doubt he ought to have been made of sterner stuff. But there is simply no denying that President Reagan is extremely sensitive to the human aspects of these grim events.

I have heard reliably that, on the night the U.S.S. Stark was attacked by an Iraqi jet in the Persian Gulf with a loss of many lives, the president was briefed in the White House Situation Room. The briefing officer was discussing certain technical aspects of the attack when the president interrupted.

"How many of our men were killed?" he wanted to know.

"About 38, sir," the briefing officer replied — and then resumed his technical account. The president was silent a while. Then:

"Where were they?"
"In the forward sleeping quarters, sir," was the response — followed by more technical gobbledegook. Another period of silence from the president. Then:

"Did they die quickly?"

The briefing officer affirmed that fortunately they had, and got back to his discussion of radar systems, etc.

Too much stress on the human element — that must count as a weakness in any president. But if Ronald Reagan has to have a weakness, I'm kind of glad it's that one.

SCIENCE WORLD

Peculiar Catfish Eat Wood

By Cella Hooper
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A scientist has discovered what appear to be the world's first known wood-eating fish, but owners of wooden boats do not need to lose sleep about it.

Don Stewart, a fish expert at the Center for Limnology at the University of Wisconsin, announced at recent professional meetings that South American fish in the armored catfish family appear to be able to digest wood.

Michael Martin, a University of Michigan biochemist who specializes in wood-eating insects, said he had never before heard of a fish or reptile that eats wood, which is notoriously difficult for animals to digest.

Stewart said in a telephone interview that he found the wood-eating fish in three large South American river systems: the Amazon, Orinoco and Magdalena. He believes there are just 10 species of fish in the group, and only six of the species have been described so far.

The different species of fish in the wood-eating group range in size from 2 inches to 20 inches in length, Stewart said, and have specialized, spoon-shaped teeth that he surmised are used to grind the wood.

Stewart and his colleagues used several pieces of evidence to deduce the fish, in the Panaque genus, get their energy from wood. They found partially digested wood in the guts of fish collected in the wild, found wood-digesting enzymes in the fish and observed that wood placed in tanks with live fish disappeared.

Stewart said he has not observed the fish eating wood in the muddy rivers that are their natural habitat, but said in aquaria the fish attach to twigs "with their big sucker-mouths. You can't see what they're doing with their teeth, but after some months the wood starts to disappear," Stewart said.

Currently wrapping up details for a scientific paper on the discovery, Stewart said he is working with two bacteriologists at the University of Wisconsin to discover whether the fish themselves produce digestive enzymes that break down the wood, or whether special microbes that live in the fish's guts do so. He is also checking how much energy the fish actually derive from wood.

Given the slow pace of wood-eating and the rareness of the fish, Stewart said people "probably don't need to worry about their boats."

Martin said wood contains several compounds that are difficult for animals to digest: cellulose, hemicellulose, pectin and lignin.

Viets's sworn testimony on the financial questions. Here are some of the main points in the memo:

— "Overt terrorist threats" and "substantially modified" regulations exempted Viets from having to reimburse the department for his family's use of government vehicles in Amman, the former ambassador contended. Helms said the regulations require Viets to repay the government at the rate of 20.5 cents a mile.

— Viets explained a substantial "loan" from an embassy employee by saying he merely "kept it for her" as a longtime friend so it would earn interest in his bank account. Helms pointed out that the ambassador's 1984 financial disclosure did not show a sum that large in any of his bank accounts.

"Extraordinarily high liquor consumption claims" — in Helms's phrase — were explained by Viets as gifts for Jordanian guests, their security guards and drivers. But Helms complained that Viets offered no evidence to justify his claim for reimbursement on the liquor bills.

Helms also questioned both when and why Viets changed his legal residence from Vermont to Florida. Viets said it was done in 1980 or 1981; Helms thinks it was done in 1984. Viets denied that he did it to avoid Vermont's income tax.

When the Foreign Relations Committee approved Viets's nomination, 12 to 5, liberal Democrats Alan Cranston, Calif., and Christopher Dodd, Conn., joined Helms and two other Republicans in voting against approval. Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., acknowledged that "a number of irregularities were raised" about Viets, but said the nominee had not shown "intentional disregard of either law or regulation," and added: "The committee does not believe that one adverse audit report in an otherwise long and distinguished career should be the basis for the rejection of this nomination."

Viets said he would not comment until the full Senate votes on his nomination.

Oklahoma Repeats As UPI's Preseason Pick

NEW YORK (UPI) — The dominant Big Eight teams of the last decade have emerged as the country's Big Two.

Oklahoma and Nebraska, who between them have finished 1-2 in the Big Eight seven of the last nine years, Monday headed the United Press International Board of Coaches' preseason voting.

Oklahoma claimed the No. 1 ranking for the third straight year by securing 743 of a possible 750 points and 44 of 50 first-place votes. Nebraska, which finished second with 556 points, was the only other school mentioned on all 50 ballots.

"This is the third year in a row we've seen a consensus No. 1 choice," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said. "It speaks volumes for the tradition here at Oklahoma. I don't mind being picked high. It creates a challenge for our players.

"Nebraska is the team to beat each year (in the Big Eight). I'd like to be 10-0 going into Lincoln (Nebr., for a regular-season ending game Nov. 21 vs. the Cornhuskers). I'll take my chances there."

Either Oklahoma or Nebraska has won or shared the Big Eight title every year since 1961. Nebraska has ended the year in the Top 10 every season since 1970, except 1973 when it was No. 11. In the final rankings, the Sooners have been among the top six in 12 of the last 16 seasons.

Coaches predict the strongest competition to the Big Eight elite will come from Big Ten power Ohio State, which ranked third.

UCLA was No. 4 followed by No. 5 Auburn, No. 6 Michigan, No. 7 Penn State, No. 8 Arizona State, No. 9 Miami, and Texas A&M and Louisiana State tied at No. 10.

Arkansas was at No. 12, with Clemson at No. 13, Florida State at No. 14, Washington at No. 15 and Notre Dame at No. 16.

No. 17 Tennessee and No. 18 Iowa will open the season Aug. 30 in the Kickoff Classic. No. 19 Alabama and No. 20 Florida close out the ratings.

Penn State, the defending national champions, received three first-place votes. Ohio State, which must operate without recently suspended All-American receiver Cria Carter, gained two top votes, and Florida State garnered one No. 1 selection.

The Sooners, whose only losses the last two seasons have been to Vinny Testaverde-led Miami teams, completed the 1985 season as national champs and were No. 3 last year. Oklahoma lost four games in each of the three seasons from 1981-83, jeopardizing Switzer's job and the school's status at the top of college football.

A return to the wishbone offense triggered the resurrection of the Sooners, who have since won the last three Orange Bowls.

First 3 Days Have Preps On The Run

By Scott Sander
Herald Sports Writer

The first three days of high school football practice are days that the Seminole County grid-ers won't soon forget. The Florida High School Athletic Association requires that the first three days be spent in shorts, and that can mean only one thing for players — running and lots of it.

Coaches like to use the first few practices for conditioning. It gives them a chance to see what kind of shape their team is in, and it gives the players a chance to perspire heavily in the hot August sunshine.

All of the SAC teams will be strapping on their pads and starting full-contact practices on Wednesday.

● At Sanford, Seminole coach Roger Beathard is currently whipping his team into shape. "We have to be in good shape if we expect to compete with these other schools," Beathard, who is in his first season as the Seminole head coach, said. "We have gotten a lot accomplished in the first few practices, and the kids are really looking forward to hitting."

Beathard said that he was pleased with the overall condition of the team. "I'm pretty happy with the shape these kids are in," Beathard said. "We had a few kids get sick the first day, but nobody got sick today (Monday). We will be a team that is in excellent condition. I'll guarantee you."

Beathard said that his chief concern right now lies in the offensive and defensive lines. "We have a few openings in both lines," Beathard said.

Football

Beathard said that 42 players came out for the varsity. "I'm pleased with our turnout," Beathard said. "We had 42 kids in the spring, too."

Beathard went on to say that quarterback Jeff Blake has looked sharp so far. "Jeff is throwing the ball well," Beathard said. "He has a long way to go, though. He missed a year of experience, and it is going to take him some time to get the feel of things."

● At Lake Mary, coach Harry Nelson said that it is still too early to know what type of team he will have. "We'll get an idea on Wednesday," Nelson said. "You can't really do all that much in the first three practices."

Nelson did say that he is expecting a lot from tailback John Curry this season. Last year, Curry was second in rushing in the SAC as he scampered for 929 yards and nine touchdowns. "John had a good year last season," Nelson said. "I want him to have a great season this year."

Nelson went on to say that quarterback Carlos Hartsfield has looked decent.

● At Oviedo, coach Blanton has not been happy with his team. "We are in awful shape," Blanton said. "This is the first time since I have been in Oviedo that we have had to go with two-a-days. They will be in good shape, though."

The Lions are in search of a running back, according to Blanton. "Nobody has stepped forward at that position yet," Blanton said. "I hope that somebody will soon."

Blanton said that he has seven stations set up with players working at each one for a few minutes. "We have got several different exercises at the stations," Blanton said. "It should get them into shape."

● At Casselberry Lake Howell, coach Mike Bisceglia said that his team in fine shape. "All of the kids are looking pretty good," Bisceglia said. "We are anxious to start hitting."

One thing that Bisceglia is not happy with is the number of players that came out. "We only have 47 guys out here," Bisceglia said. "That is the smallest turnout that I've had since I've been here. I can't understand it."

Several of the coaches are going with two-a-day workouts, but Bisceglia is not one of them. The Silver Hawks are going with one long practice, from 2:30 to 6:30 with a 50-minute break. "When you practice twice, kids tend to start feeling sorry for themselves," Bisceglia said. "And sometimes, they don't come back for the second practice."

● At Altamonte Springs Lake Brantley, coach Fred Almon has been impressed with his team's effort so far. "It's been a good two days," Almon said. "We had a super turnout (56 kids) and we are ready to hit."

Almon said that the heat has been tough to put up with. "It has been hotter than blue blazes," Almon said. "But it is going to get the kids in shape in

Games Tosses Green

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — After nine days of beating up on the opposition and stirring national pride, the United States was humbled Monday at the Pan American Games.

U.S. embarrassment occurred off the field where hammer thrower Bill Green of Torrance, Calif., was accused of failing a drug test and in the boxing ring where three U.S. fighters were defeated by Cubans.

In fact, the only medal of the day went to Cuba's men's fencing team, which finished ahead of the United States.

Green was named as one of six athletes who failed drug tests. The 27-year-old insurance agent from Torrance, Calif., must forfeit the medal he earned for finishing second to compatriot Jud Logan last week.

He tested positive for testosterone, a hormone found in anabolic steroids. Green, informed of the test result after returning home, indicated he has hired a lawyer to challenge the drug test.

Green and the other five athletes are subject to further punishment by international sports federations. The usual penalty has been an 18-month suspension from international events.

Officials of the U.S. Olympic Committee expressed surprise at the positive test for Green, saying he passed an identical test two months ago at the Pan Am Trials in San Jose, Calif.

Mario Vazquez-Rana, president of the Pan American Sports Organization, identified the other five athletes as weightlifters Orlando Vasquez of Nicaragua, Javier Jimenez of Colombia and Pedro Torres of Venezuela, basketball player Elnes Bollings of the U.S. Virgin Islands and shooter Bernardo Ocampo of Venezuela.

At the 1983 Games in Caracas, Venezuela, 15 athletes tested positive, most for anabolic steroids. Two were from the United States and 11 teammates left the Games in protest.

In the boxing ring, Cuba's Angel Espinosa scored a one-punch knockout of amateur middleweight champion Darin Allen. Cuba defeated the United States in all three matchups.

Cubans Adalberto Regalado and Julio Gonzales also defeated Americans. Regalado outpointed flyweight Arthur Johnson of Minneapolis in a close bout and Gonzales easily outpointed lightweight Patrick Byrd, 17, of Flint, Mich., the youngest U.S. boxer.

The only American to survive was world amateur welterweight champ Kenneth Gould, 20, of Rockford, Ill. Gould won a unanimous quarterfinal decision over Panama's Osvaldo Checa.

"I'm not a happy man," U.S. Coach Roosevelt Sanders said. "We didn't do as well as I'd hoped."

The biggest disappointment was Allen's loss. Espinosa, a light middleweight amateur world champion who moved up 10 pounds in weight class to fight Allen, stopped the American with a right to the head at 1:35 of the first round.

"You saw it," Sanders said. "he just caught a good punch."

The Cubans are 12-1 in the boxing competition and the United States 9-3.

Starting the second week of competition, the United States has 151 gold medals, 14 more than the 37 other countries combined, and an aggregate of 327 medals.

McDowell: Pressure Off, Slack To Have Great '87

By Scott Sander
Herald Sports Writer

ORLANDO — It is tough when a team is torn by a quarterback controversy.

Last season, the University of Central Florida football team had a pair of quarterbacks over which fans, media, players, and coaches seemed to split their loyalties.

As Darin Slack and Tony Lanham went head-to-head on the field, the second-guessers went head-to-head off the field. Slack, a 1983 Lake Howell graduate, got most of the playing time. Lanham, who started the year before, didn't like the role of a backup and quit at the end of the season.

Now that Lanham is gone, UCF coach Gene McDowell feels that a lot of pressure has been taken off the shoulders of Slack. "Darin is our No. 1 quarterback, and I think that him knowing that is going to help him," McDowell said. "He threw the ball every day over the summer, and I'm sure that he is going to have a tremendous year."

UCF opened up its practice on Thursday. The Knights, who went 6-5 last season, will begin three-a-day workouts on Monday. The three-a-days will be held for one week. UCF will then prepare for its opening game, the Central Florida Classic, which will be played Saturday, Sept. 5 at Orlando Stadium against arch-rival Bethune-Cookman. UCF will hold its annual Black-Gold Intrasquad game on Aug. 29 at Orlando Stadium.

McDowell said that is enthused about this year's team. "I think that we are going to be a very good football team," McDowell said. "In the first few weeks, we (the coaches) will be doing a lot of teaching. I think that we have the nucleus for a solid team."

Last year, the Knights had a very potent offense as they averaged 28 points a game. But with several key players graduated, McDowell said there are many voids that need to be filled offensively. "We lost some excellent football players," McDowell said. "Right now, my chief concerns offensively lie in the offensive line and the fullback slot. Some young men are going to have to emerge and earn those spots."

McDowell will look to halfback Robert Ector to take up the slack for departed Elgin Davis, the Knights' all-time leading rusher. McDowell said that the defense, which will be returning all 11 starters, will be the strength of the team.

One Seminole County product that will be a key to the offense will be Lake Mary's Donald Grayson. Grayson, who saw considerable action as a freshman last season, will be the starting tight end.

"Donald is one heck of a football player," McDowell said. "He'll be the starting tight end for as long as he's here. I'll be very disappointed if he doesn't have a very good season for us."

Sanford's Steve Spears, who was one of the pillars in the defense line last season, will be counted on once again offensively. "Steve did a good job last season, and I'm hoping that he will do the same this year," McDowell said of Spears, who had 55 tackles last year.

Lyman's Pat Perkins, a 1986 graduate who was redshirted last year, has a solid chance to fill one of the positions on the offensive line, according to McDowell. "Pat will definitely be competing for one of those jobs," McDowell said. "He will see a lot of playing time before he leaves here."

McDowell usually redshirts freshmen, and he said that will probably be the case with Seminole walk-on Sonny Osborn and Oviedo's Gordon King. "They are both very good," McDowell said. "We generally make it a practice to redshirt freshmen, though."

McDowell said Lake Brantley's Jeff Petersen, 1986 grad who was redshirted last year, may not play this fall because of academic difficulties.

Bucs' Cuts: Torretta, Charles, Curry, Walls

TAMPA — Geoff Torretta will have to admire Vinny Testaverde from afar.

Torretta backed up Testaverde at quarterback for two seasons at the University of Miami and joined the Tampa Bay Buccaneers this spring as a free agent back Reggie Taylor. Second-year defensive back Kevin Walker, first-year linebackers Fred McCallister and Cam Jacobs and rookie defensive back Tony Mayes.

DOLPHINS NEED QB HELP MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins began looking for quarterback help Monday after losing Dan Marino for up to four weeks in the exhibition opener, and coach Don Shula said the team could trade for a signal caller or perhaps sign a free agent, such as Ron Jaworski.

Shula also is looking for linebackers after losing Pro Bowl starter John Offerdahl for 10-12 weeks with a torn bicep muscle. Offerdahl, a second-year pro from Western Michigan, was scheduled to undergo surgery.

With Marino, who dislocated his right ring finger on a snap from center, and rookie Jim Karsatos (sprained knee) out, the Dolphins need to bring in a quarterback that can do more than throw in practice, Shula said. Veteran Don Strock, who reported to camp last Thursday, will start Monday night's game at Denver, with utility man Jim Jensen backing him up.

The obvious problem is that if something happens to Strock, we're down to two right now," Shula said.

Also waived were defensive back Craig Curry and defensive end Mike Charles. Curry is a fourth-year pro who started 10 games at free safety last year, with 57 tackles and two interceptions. Craig Swoope, who started 11 games at strong safety as a rookie last season, is expected to switch to free safety this year. Charles, a second-round choice of Miami in 1983, was obtained earlier this month after being released by the Dolphins.

Also waived by the Buccaneers were free agent rookie guard

Molitor Hits 32 With Bunt Single

United Press International

Paul Molitor would rather help the Milwaukee Brewers catch the first-place Toronto Blue Jays than jolt Joe DiMaggio's record 56-game hitting streak.

"Hitting in 32 straight games is something I have to keep in perspective," Molitor said Monday night after bunting for a single in Milwaukee's 5-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians. "I realize I'm fortunate, and that's why I feel comfortable."

Molitor finished the game 1 for 3, with a bunt single in the third inning. The bunt was the first in his streak, the longest in the major leagues since Pete Rose's 44-game effort in 1978, and the longest in the American League since Dom DiMaggio's 34-game skid in 1949.

"But all this would have a dull taste if we were 20 games out of first place," said Molitor, noting the Brewers are eight games behind Toronto. "I think this is good because it has helped the team win."

No player in major-league history has had a hitting streak end at 32 games.

Molitor is batting .409 (54-for-132) with 35 runs scored, six homers, 20 walks and 26 RBI during the streak, all as a designated hitter.

Stocks Open Active, Lower

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower Tuesday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues as a weaker dollar and slipping bond prices pressured prices one day after the Dow Jones Industrial average scored its first close above 2700.

The Dow, which closed at 2700.57 Monday, was down 6.21 to 2694.36 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 437-194 among the 917 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 6,170,900 shares.

Traders said a weaker dollar and lower bond prices were hurting a market some say is vulnerable to a decline, though not a severe one.

"This is the pause that refreshes," said Peter Furniss, manager of equity trading at Smith Barney Harris Upham & Co. "You wouldn't expect the Dow to go through 2700 without some consolidation."

The Dow scored its first close above 2700 Monday — exactly a week after it shattered the 2600 obstacle — as stock prices closed narrowly mixed. The Dow, which rose 83.43 last week, climbed 15.14 Monday, surpassing the previous high of 2691.49, set Thursday. The Dow first closed above 2500 on July 17, and it passed 2600 on Aug. 10.

Dollar Down In Light Trading Strikes Push Gold, Silver Up

The dollar opened lower in light trading on major world money markets Tuesday. Gold edged higher.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar fell to its lowest level against the Japanese yen in 40 days in active trading, closing at 148.55 yen, down 1.65 from Monday's close of 150.20 yen.

In European trading, in Frankfurt, the dollar began the day at 1.8645 German marks, down from Monday's close of 1.8768.

In Zurich, the dollar opened at 1.5455 Swiss francs, down from 1.5575, in Paris at 6.2345 French francs, down from 6.2695, and in Milan at 1,349.50 lire, down from 1,359.

The dollar also opened lower in Amsterdam at 2.095 Dutch guilders, down from a previous close of 2.1150.

In Brussels, the dollar began the day at 38.865 Belgian francs, down from Friday's close of 39.1875. The markets in Belgium were closed Monday for a holiday.

In London, the British pound sterling opened higher at $1.5985, up from Monday's close of $1.5915.

In early New York trading, the dollar was lower against key foreign currencies in thin trading.

Traders in New York noted the currency market continued in its summer doldrums.

News of continuing talks between South African labor union leaders and gold mine owners had a slight impact on the bullion, pushing prices higher.

Japanese Discuss BankAmerica Aid

TOKYO (UPI) — Representatives of nine leading Japanese commercial banks have met to discuss BankAmerica Corp.'s latest proposal to enlist their support in recovering from heavy losses, banking officials said Tuesday.

The officials said the Japanese banks have already agreed in principle to support the San Francisco-based institution, the second largest American bank, and Monday's meeting focused on reviewing the latest proposal from BankAmerica.

They declined to disclose details.

Local news reports said BankAmerica offered to raise interest on its debt to 1.25 percent over the prevalent rate on loans between commercial banks in London from the original 1.00 percent.

BankAmerica vice chairman Frank Newman asked 23 Japanese banks to purchase securities worth a total of $350 million when he visited Japan in June. The sum will be part of a $1 billion capital increment planned by the U.S. bank.

The nine banks, which include Mizuho, Industrial Bank and Sanwa, serve as coordinator for the deal.

The banking officials said Japanese commercial banks would purchase $250 million worth of subordinate capital notes while insurance and securities firms would accept the remaining $100 million in preferred stock.

"No timeline has been set and it would take some more time for us to reach a final decision," said one official, who declined to be named.

He said the deal will be dealt with from the standpoint of U.S.-Japanese relations instead of a mere bank-to-bank transaction.

...Plan

study areas. Wednesday's will address the south central and east study areas.

Citizens will first hear reports from county planning staff members on recommended changes to the plan.

A final public hearing will be held in December, after the proposed update is reviewed by the state Department of Community Affairs and returned to the commission with comments from the state planning agency.

The master land-use plan is an update of the planning document the county adopted in 1977, as part of the Florida local government planning act. The interim updated plan will serve as the basis for updating the plan again in 1990 to bring it in line with the state's growth management act of 1985.

An important difference between the 1977 plan and the proposed updated version is the capital improvements element, which sets a level of service standards and identifies the cost of achieving the standards. The capital improvements element essentially makes the county accountable for accomplishing the long-range capital improvements addressed in the plan, according to Tony Van Derworp, county planning director.

The plan notes that Seminole is Florida's seventh fastest growing county, having grown in population from 56,752 in 1960 to 184,771 in 1980 and to 234,878 in 1985. The 1990 population is projected to be 283,870.

Residents age 45 to 69 represent Seminole's fastest growing age group. People 24 and under make up the slowest growing age group. With the population growing older, according to the plan, job opportunities must be created for the 45-to-69 age group and a large supply of multi-family housing made available. Thus the master plan calls for designating larger amounts of land for medium and high-density residential developments.

The trend to multi-family development has been under way for a while, according to the plan, which notes that from 1980-85, 33 percent of all residential units built were multi-family dwellings. By the year 2005, the plan projects, 27 percent of the total housing stock will be multi-family.

Planned unit developments (PUDs) are one way in which the demand for multi-family housing is being met. The plan concludes that the trend toward PUDs is "a largely positive" one because development and services required for PUDs are more specific, resulting in more effective land-use transitions and buffering, more green space and better roadway and site design.

Another trend noted in the plan is Seminole's transformation from a suburban bedroom area of Orange County to an urban area with regionally significant job centers. To maintain the trend, and to keep its rising commercial tax base, the county must ensure the availability of land and urban services, the plan suggests.

However, the commercial growth must not become urban sprawl but instead should be confined to compact areas near urban centers and within major highway corridors, according to the plan. This was part of the approach of the 1977 plan which called for compacting commercial development and high intensity growth in the south core of the county.

The plan further notes that Seminole County is no longer an agriculture hub, having dropped 22 percent in terms of constant agriculture dollars between 1972-82. The agricultural expansion that has occurred has come through nurseries and greenhouse production, which grew in value by 25 percent from 1974 to 1985.

- Land-use goals proposed in the plan include:
 - Ensuring land-use designations are sufficient in amount to accommodate growth of various segments of the population and economy.
 - Evaluating future use of general-rural land designations. This would be to identify the rural areas where urban development may be appropriate and determining whether urban services can be extended to them.
 - Maintaining general-rural designations where urban services are not planned as a way to prevent urban sprawl.
 - Designating appropriate land uses to address non-conforming zoning.
 - Developing special area plans for planned unit developments.
 - Mapping conservation areas that support "non-structural" approaches to water management. The non-structural approaches involve reliance on preservation of flood plains and wetlands to hold and filter stormwater runoff. This saves money that would otherwise have to be spent building, operating and maintaining water-management structures.
 - Developing buffer standards and guidelines to promote tree protection and compatibility with surrounding land uses.
 - Developing standards for maintaining heavily wooded areas along major highways and adjacent to conservation areas.
 - Evaluating the feasibility of clustering homesites in low density residential areas as a means of encouraging the retention of open space while maintaining overall allowable densities.

rest, would be maintained by qualified outside landscaping companies she said.

The sites the SIB feels require unskilled labor to maintain are: The Heart Park stations in Ft. Mellon Park, the utility building at 14th Street and Elm Avenue, the public works complex on Fulton Avenue, the maintenance building at 910 W. 6th St., the medians on U.S. Highway 17-92, Academy Park in the Academy Manor subdivision, marina Isle beach, Palmetto Avenue at Lake Monroe, the sea wall along Seminole Boulevard, Jaycee Park between Fourth and Fifth streets and French Avenue, Orange Avenue Park between 7th and 9th Streets and Orange and Locust avenues.

Jacobson pointed out that the grounds maintenance contracts could be short-term, allowing the city to see if the maintenance contractors were doing a good job.

SIB member Kit Carson put in: "You can have them (contracts) on a temporary basis. It's hell to get rid of 10 men."

Although McClanahan thought the proposal should have been presented to city staff first, Commissioner Whitey Eckstein said the SIB wanted to present an alternative to hiring extra grounds maintenance staff "before Frank (Falcon) goes through with it."

And Commissioner John Mercer said the proposal "shows the kind of work the SIB will do for us."

Yancey had earlier asked for clarification of the SIB's duties. In the wake of criticism that the advisory board had interfered with staff and overstepped its bounds, Commissioners agreed they had no problem with the wording of the city ordinance that set up the SIB. Yancey quoted from the document: the SIB "will advise, counsel and consult with the city commission and city manager on the entire field of beautification."

No conclusion was reached, but the group agreed the problem might be with the word "entire."

Falcon said if he is forced to bring every single item of beautification to the SIB's attention first that would "slow it down."

Mercer defended the SIB's right to see a project first. "If it's anything having to do with beautification they should see it ahead of time," he said. "How would that slow it down, to let the SIB see it first?"

Jacobson said the SIB has been accused of interfering with staff. Falcon said that has not been a problem.

Responded McClanahan: "Then the newspapers have written a lot of bum dope and oughta be sued."

Yancey ended the discussion by pleading: "As long as I'm chairman of the SIB there will be no interfering with grounds maintenance crews."

made the request of the governor without giving them a public hearing and a chance to defend themselves against the charges. Gunter said he had voted along with the rest of the commission to ask for an impartial investigation with the understanding that the charges would be signed, which they weren't, and he and Dennis would be given due process.

Gunter said he thought Myers had violated section 3.07 of the city charter by not doing so.

Dennis, who has been verbally attacked during public participation periods of commission meetings of late, excused herself during Monday night's public participation in anticipation of a possible repeat of the attacks, but they did not materialize.

Dennis said she feels the public participation period is being misused as a political platform. "I would not leave every time," she said, "but surely now I know the faces of those using it for a political platform. They can't believe Mr. (Larry) Goldberg and Mr. (Perry) Faulkner lost the election. They speak for only a few people."

As for the investigation, she said the commission was pushed into action by a hostile audience and doesn't think the vote should have been taken. Dennis said she voted for the motion because if she had voted "no" she would have been "crucified" by members of the audience who would have wanted to know what she "had to hide." The commissioner insisted a hostile audience pushed her into voting for the probe.

As for the resolution, she said she doesn't know if it will bring about peace and harmony, but she said she hopes it will help. "It's gotten to the point where everyone is asking themselves, 'What can I do to help?' This is Mr. Waller's way of trying to help matters."

speaker to talk about the drawbacks of charter government. But the panel has stipulated the speaker must be "completely opposed to all home rule charters," said Webster, who added he doubts such a speaker can be found. "That's a very negative posture. I don't like to require a speaker to be totally negative to anything."

He also claimed earlier this month that it was his views against charter government that led to a move to oust him from the committee because his legal residence is in Apopka, not Seminole County. County commissioners voted to keep him on the panel, though Chairman Streetman noted it would be "a mistake we'll have to live with."

Iran Warns Gulf States

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — Iran has warned Persian Gulf states against providing military facilities to the United States as Sea Stallion mine-sweeping helicopters from the USS Guadalcanal prepared to guide a convoy of re-flagged Kuwait tankers through the perilous waterway.

The second U.S.-escorted tanker convoy was waiting off Kuwait ready to begin the 550-mile journey south to the Strait of Hormuz.

There was no indication when the four tankers — the Bridgeton, Sea Isle City, Ocean City and Gas King — would start the voyage, but sources in Washington said the ships could depart as early as today.

Also in Washington, sources said Monday Iraq agreed two weeks ago to a request to limit its air attacks against Iran.

DEAR ABBY: Last week my closest friend and I decided to take a day off just to have fun. We are both married women in our 30s and hold responsible jobs. We are not crazy, and we're not on drugs or alcohol — we just love to laugh.

We drove to Solvang, a small Danish community, for a day of sightseeing and relaxation. While browsing through one of the many shops, we came upon a lamp. I can't describe it, but it was the ugliest thing either of us had ever seen. We started to giggle, then laugh, then roar at the thought of anyone spending $850 for that monstrosity! We hastily left the shop lest we offend the owner, and collapsed on a bench outside. We were both in one of those moods when everything was hilarious, and we spent the entire day in stitches.

Passers-by made comments, indicating they thought we were either drunk or high on drugs. A waitress in one restaurant said she couldn't serve us "anything more" to drink! Of course, this made us laugh all the harder.

Abby, when did it become a crime to laugh heartily? We were not obnoxious — just a little noisy perhaps. We left every store when we felt the urge to break up, and by the time we got outside tears were running down our faces. But, so what? Laughter is good for the soul.

This is probably too long for your column, but it's important to remind people that it's OK to laugh. So if you see someone laughing loudly (even hysterically), don't condemn her — join her.

Somehow I think you will understand, Abby. And yes, you may use my name.

CATHLEEN KALBREIER, WESTMINSTER, CALIF.

DEAR CATHLEEN: You bet I understand. A friend with whom you can enjoy a hearty laugh in a treasure. Cherish that person and unleash your laughter to the max. And if others misread your natural exhilaration, it's their problem.

DEAR ABBY: I see by your column that bowed legs can be corrected by surgery. They've certainly come a long way in modern medicine, haven't they?

I also heard that it's possible for very tall people to reduce their height by having four inches of bone surgically removed from their legs. But then their arms would hang down to their knees. Wouldn't that look worse than being four inches too tall?

G.D. IN L.A.

DEAR G.B.: No ethical orthopedic surgeon would undertake to surgically remove bone from the leg for cosmetic reasons only. Somebody must have been pulling yours.

DEAR ABBY: I liked your answer to "Hurting in Brooklyn," who had given her mother a jewelry box and was angry with her for giving it to one of her grandchildren. You said, "Once a gift is given, it is the property of the recipient to do with as he/she pleases." I agree with you 100 percent.

I would like to add that once a gift is given it should never be mentioned by the giver again, as in, "How come I never see you wearing the sweater I gave you? Was it the wrong size?"

The answer may be, "No, I just didn't like it, so I sold it at the flea market."

MICHAEL TYLER SARLOW, FORT WORTH, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: For your survey: My husband and I have been married for 57 years and neither one of us has ever been unfaithful. No credit to us — we just haven't.

Your story in the Los Angeles Times about the man who put an ear of corn in the trunk of his car every time he was unfaithful reminded me of the story about the middle-age couple who were reminiscing about their married life and the husband said he wished they had enough money for a down payment on a house instead of paying rent. The wife asked how much it would take, and the husband told her about $8,000. She then left the room, and returned with a shoe box in which she had a pile of bills amounting to a little more than $8,000.

He looked at her, astounded, and asked where she got it. She told him that when they got married, she started putting $5 in the box every time they had marital relations.

He was furious and yelled, "Why didn't you tell me? I would have given you all my business!"

John Vallee, owner of Vallee Business Products, was top salesman for Ricoh copiers for three years.

Vallee Business Products: Quality Copiers At Competitive Prices

For quality facsimile machines and personal service come to Vallee Business Products at Lake Kathryn Plaza, U.S. 17-92 (one-half mile south of State Road 434). At Vallee's you get the product you need at a good competitive price and you won't get cheated.

John Vallee, owner of Vallee Business Products, has been selling products in the graphics office field for 15 years and in the past six years has been in the communications market selling facsimile machines for the leader in the industry, Ricoh Corporation.

Vallee sells six of the major brand facsimile machines at the best competitive prices in the Central Florida area. He also carries three models of Ricoh personal copiers — Ricoh Jr., Ricoh 2010 and Ricoh 2070, which don't have a preventative maintenance cycle, which means owners don't have to worry about an annual maintenance contract or frequent service calls.

He opened the retail store in the Lake Kathryn Plaza three months ago and his business policy is: personal service, quality products and competitive prices to ALL customers. Some companies, Vallee explained, only give competitive prices to customers that have shopped around and are aware of what they should be paying. I offer competitive prices to all my customers because I want to retain them for years to come and give refer others to me.

Vallee Business Products has a 10-day trial offer. If at the end of 10 days customers are not satisfied for any reason they can return the product (as long it is still in the same condition) and get back 100 percent of your money back including supplies consumed with no questions asked.

For 11 years Vallee has been selling in the New York City marketplace and for the past two years has been planning to come back home to Florida where he grew up and went to college.

"Everything came together this past spring," Vallee said, "and I chose South Seminole County area because of the growth experienced in the past several years and growth potential in the next decade."

Vallee said over the six years when he was in charge of a four-county area in Long Island, he increased sales for Ricoh over 800 percent by not overselling the customer, but selling them a unit to meet their application needs for today and three years down the road.

Vallee said some customers come in thinking they need more than they actually do and sometimes he may sell them a lower priced unit that fits their application and needs better.

Vallee also offers to the business community document laminating, photo identification cards, facsimile mail service and consulting on their business needs on any of those items.

Vallee Business Products is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday for sales and service.

Giants Eye Small Potato Chipsters

By G.L. MARSHALL
 BRISTOL, Va. (UPI) — A bit of Americana — the 500 or so local potato chip makers catering to local markets — is in danger of being crunched as giant corporate snack makers take aim at the little chippers.

Moore's Snack Foods, Virginia's largest chipper, is just the kind of company in which the big boys — Frito-Lay Inc. and Borden Inc. — are interested. Fragile chips are hard to ship, and national companies need a network of regional plants to produce and distribute their wares.

The big companies have a number of advantages, including multimillion-dollar advertising budgets, the efficiencies of large-scale production and clout when it comes to getting supplies cheaper.

The giants also have seeds of money — enough to take on small companies in price wars and promotional campaigns that steadily erode profits.

The brothers who run Moore's, Joe and Jack Arnold, are familiar with the stiff competition and the buyout offers.

Jack Arnold said his company has been approached frequently but has always said no.

"The company is in its 63rd year," he said. "We don't want to work for someone else. There's a certain amount of pride in what's been accomplished by two generations before us. It's very difficult to give up that sort of independence."

"We're optimistic sorts, but at the same time we're very realistic," he added. "I don't want anything written here that would lead anybody to believe that we're going to fold our tent and sell it off."

They are not alone in their concerns, said John Cady of the Potato Chip-Snack Food Association in Alexandria.

"It's a very competitive industry and its getting more so," Cady said.

But Cady noted that while mergers, buyouts and closings have caused a slight drop in the association's membership, more little kettle companies are starting up every day — including many catering to upscale or gourmet consumers.

"It comes down to niche marketing," Cady said. "Mergers have had adverse effects on some companies, but those that can compete are. The heart of the industry is still the small-to-medium companies."

The niche Moore's aims to fill is the same as always — quality, freshness and service. During this spring's potato shortage — "the worst I've seen in my 31 years here," Jack Arnold said — complaint letters were answered with free chips and personal notes on why one cannot make big chips out of spuds the size of marbles.

The chip conglomerates had it easier during the shortage, and the Arnolds concede they heard rumors the giants "were trying to corner the market."

Steve Finch, an independent trucker from Laurel, Del., who serves only small chip companies, put it more bluntly. The big companies "would run everybody out of business if they could," Finch said, adding they want to control the industry so they can dictate everything: retail prices, freight rates and potato prices.

Finch rattled off a list of closed chip companies while his truck was unloaded at the Bristol plant and added, "I'm doing everything I can to stop it. I don't think it's right. The day I have to haul for Frito-Lay is the day I get out of it."

While little chippers look with dismay at Frito-Lay's pricing practices, Borden has led in takeovers.

The New York-based conglomerate began by buying Wise Chips in 1964, and followed with Buckeye and Guy's brands in 1979. In 1980, Borden acquired Morton's, Dickey and Dentler's brands and replaced them with Wise chips.

Commercial Chemical Products For Chemicals And Pool Care

Chuck Baragona, owner of Commercial Chemical Products, Inc., 1107-B Airport Blvd., Sanford, and his staff have over 100 years combined experience in the swimming pool and chemical business.

This business is nine years old and has been at this location for seven years. It is locally owned and operated. Commercial Chemical Products, Inc., employs 14 persons in its two divisions. The company is also a manufacturer and supplier of acid, alkalies, solvents and specialty chemicals. Commercial Chemical Products is also a major supplier of chemicals and equipment to the commercial pool market, including hotels, motels, campgrounds and apartment complexes.

Their service department can handle the repair and renovation of all pools, filters, pumps, motors, tile work and resurfacing.

Chuck says he welcomes all owners of home pools to please call for free estimates on repair and renovations.

Hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Drought-Stricken Farmers Get Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department will issue $161.9 million in commodity certificates this week to farmers who lost crops due to drought and floods last year, officials announced Monday.

In most cases, the certificates are the second — and final — payment under a program ordered by Congress. The department pro-rated about $400 million in certificates last year, with farmers getting about 76 percent of the payment for which they were eligible.

The aid is going to drought-stricken farmers in the Southeast, Midwesterners who lost crops in fall flooding, and farmers who produce a handful of other crops.

More than $137 million in certificates will go to producers who received partial payments last February, said Milton Hertz, executive vice president of the department's Commodity Credit Corp.

A department spokesman said the certificates would be issued this week.

In addition, $25 million in other disaster payments will be issued, the department said. Cotton growers will get the largest share, $14.8 million, for losses in quality. Apple growers will get $7 million. The remainder will compensate farmers for losses in hay and straw, peanuts, soybeans, sugarcane and sugar beets and on crops in Maine.

Payments for losses in Maine will total $340,000.

In late July, Michigan Sens. Donald Riegle and Carl Levin, both Democrats, urged speedy distribution of the disaster relief certificates, saying there were rumors the certificates would not be ready until the end of this month.

GM Plans Scrapped For Plastic Models

NEW YORK (UPI) — General Motors Corp. has scrapped plans to substitute plastic for metal in the shells of its J-cars and N-cars, a trade magazine said Monday.

Metalworking Week magazine reported that GM formally canceled the so-called GM98 project and will instead keep the J-cars and N-cars in circulation as steel-body automobiles for an indefinite time.

The magazine cited cost factors as the primary reason for GM's decision.

A GM spokesman in Detroit declined to comment on the report.

"We have never acknowledged the existence of such a project," said GM spokesman Mark Cocroft.

GM has the capacity to make about one million J-car and N-car bodies annually, the magazine said.

Determine Sensitivity To Hair Dyes, Tints

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — Several questions in your column have concerned problems with hair dyes. I am a cosmetology student, and one of the first things we are taught is to be alert for signs of aniline-derivative tint sensitivity in our customers. Symptoms can include swelling, itchy red spots, tiny blisters, headaches and vomiting. Changing brands can sometimes help the problem, but receiving a patch test before the administration of hair dye is the best way to determine sensitivity.

operation that is standard for most orthopedic surgeons. In the second condition, a painless tightening of tissues surrounding the tendons in the palm causes progressive bending of the fingers — usually the fourth and fifth fingers. This does not ordinarily require treatment until the flexed fingers interfere with normal functioning. Then the contractures can be surgically released, again by a qualified surgeon.

DEAR READER — I am grateful for your comments. I'm glad that aniline sensitivity has received the attention it deserves in cosmetology schools. Thank you for writing.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What causes freckles? DEAR READER — Freckles are genetically determined, hereditary collections of spotty skin pigmentation. They are harmless and do not need treatment. Nonetheless, people who freckle are often sensitive to sunlight; ultraviolet radiation usually makes freckles more prominent by stimulating the further production of skin pigment. Some patients with freckles have a tendency to develop skin cancers, so these people should check with a doctor if freckles enlarge, darken or bleed.

DEAR DR. GOTT — The muscles on my wrist are forming scar tissue. It seems as if, eventually, my fingers will pull towards the palm. Is there any treatment for this problem?

DEAR READER — I cannot tell from your question which of two common conditions you have: carpal tunnel syndrome or Dupuytren's contractures. In the first instance, fibrous bands grow across the wrist in a bracelet distribution. This causes pressure on the nerves and produces pain, weakness and muscle wasting. The bands can be released during an

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
You don't have to be around the game of bridge long to know that you can't guard against everything. It is worthwhile to try to do the best you can, and that involves making those plays that give you a slightly better chance than just pushing cards around without very much forethought. First, see what happened to Mr. Willy Nilly, today's declarer.
After the jack of hearts lead, Willy won the queen in his hand and led out the king of clubs. His thinking was that the defender taking the club ace would know he had A-Q of hearts to start with and might switch to a spade, thus giving Willy a chance to lead up to the diamond king for a possible overtrick. East was not that imaginative. He led back a heart and was happy to see the ace and king fall together. When clubs failed to split 3-2, the defenders had a field day. West got in with his long club, cashed the remaining hearts and then played the queen of diamonds to set Willy Nilly three tricks.

My friend Careful Charlie would have done better. Although he couldn't protect against most 4-1 club divisions, he would handle the current deal with ease. He would win the first trick with dummy's king and lead a low club. When East played the ace, Charlie would not need to waste an honor, and all the clubs would be good. That would be nine tricks, bid and made. Charlie would have lost nothing by leading up to the K-Q-J of clubs and would have gained everything on the actual layout.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY AUGUST 19, 1987
 Important changes that you have been unable to make in the past can be accomplished in the year ahead. They will provide benefits for you and your loved ones.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be intimidated by an unusual turn of events today. The situation will be challenging, but you have the skills to dispatch it effectively. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Thinking that wishes will make it so is an escapist's attitude. You're a realist who knows if you want something to happen, you have to make it happen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you let self-doubts take root today, you will severely limit your possibilities. Don't be afraid to make a few mistakes.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A relationship you have with another that has been a trifle touchy lately can be rectified today. Each must be frank about what's disturbing him or her.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be a comparison shopper today if there is a need for you to buy a big-ticket item. A bargain can be found, but you will have to root it out.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In a critical matter where teamwork is required today, don't leave everything up to your counterpart. It will require an equal effort from both.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Important strides can be made today where your career is concerned, provided your objectives are well defined. Don't waste time on fuzzy targets.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You're much more efficient at doing things today than you are apt to acknowledge. Don't be afraid to tackle an assignment about which you've been dubious.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Arrangements today with people with whom you have strong emotional ties should work out well, but be careful in your dealings with strangers.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Keep an open mind today regarding suggestions offered to you by your mate. He or she will be able to spot errors that aren't obvious to you.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't get mixed up in anything of a financial nature about which you have doubts today. There could be solid justification for your uncertainties.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today, you may be drawn into a situation that requires your personal touch in a managerial capacity. Be decisive regarding your moves and intentions.
