With national attention spotlighted on education, and particularly on reading problems, Herald staff writer Marion Bethea presents a three-part comprehensive report on a crucial area involving students with perceptual problems.

These can affect the child's abilities to copy written material, his spelling, mathematical achievement, writing skills and school attitude. All of these can result in an adverse behavorial pattern not of the child's making. As serious as is the problem, Sanford Middle School is the only school in the county with a reading program to assist youngsters in difficulty. Apprised of the problem, the county school office has taken no action. According to Sanford Middle Middle School Principal Dan Pelham, after a child leaves the school, there is no further help available. . .nowhere for the child to turn. In a year when attention is centered on education with upcoming elections, Herald readers will want to apprise themselves of the facts of the situation in the exclusive report beginning Thursday.

Keep Your Eyes On New Young Voters

"Make Way For Youth" is an ancient chant. This year however there is a new tune. This is the strain of the politicos whose wooing of the 18-24 voters has already resulted in a new beat and melody for the old refrain.

Statisticians have been having a ball as the numbers of new voters and those who will cast their first votes in a presidential election is sought.

Political analysts, however, are not so beguiled by the possible 25.7 million young people who will be making history, as by the changing character of the entire group.

They are also intrigued by the haunting fact that these are the ones who have been most critical of "the establishment" but are now-as soon as the primaries which will take place tomorrow - start creation of an "establishment" of their own choosing.

For this is, in essence, what voting is all about. It is the only democratic method by which the p-e-o-p-l-e, if they are willing to assume the responsibilities as well as enjoy the privileges, can create a government which should reflect the wishes of the majority.

Furthermore this is the basic thrust behind the very strong and very necessary insistence on responsiveness and accountability which is one hallmark of this political season.

Youth power has undergone the fires of change, the wide swing from the rebellious and violent actions in the late 60s to what is being seen today is a tempering which can only create a better grade of steel and a finer cutting edge.

The new voters, however, as is coming more evident in other classifications, cannot be considered anything like a "bloc." It does not exist as such. It will not respond as such.

As an instance, it is obvious that when the 18-24 voter is talked about, it is not the unregulated and freely acting young who were seen on the streets of Miami Beach during both conventions.

Nor are they the well trained, organized and rehearsed young boys and girls who were so well-scrubbed and so well-controlled at the Republican convention delighting the eyes and ears of the Nixoncrats.

Happily, there is a very welcome variety in the new voter ranks which has spread far from the campus, into the shops, offices and professional services which make up the lifeblood of every community which is on the way

Seminole county is very much in this class. The traditional party affiliations are changing with the oldsters making new judgments. The influx of new residents from every section of the United States is a leaven which is bound to create a more representative electorate.

One of the aspects of the young vote which is also somewhat surprising is that in their own deliberations, the values of the older standards of both major parties are being seen as solid indeed.

Of the 27.5 million new voters estimated, there is expected to be about a 13 million turnout. These are, to be sure, box-car numbers. But they are more than just statistics.

They describe, as best it can be before the November election, this new political factor whose numerical extent can be easily prophesied, but whose true political impact cannot be known until the final lever is pulled, the final booth closed and the man who will live in the White House from '73 to '77 is determined!

But the symptoms of "middle-age suspicion" are recognizable to most experienced personnel executives, marriage counsellors and others dealing in the problems of mental health. It is a condition insidious in itself that tends to be selfperpetuating and is quite difficult to isolate and combat.

It affects both men and women, although it is perhaps more often noticed in men.

What is "middle-age suspicion" and how can you tell if you have it?

"Middle-age suspicion" is a neurotic feeling of self-doubt and insufficiency shown by people in their middle years who begin to distrust and suspect the motives of others to a degree unjusitified by the facts. You should suspect yourself of being a victim of "middleage suspicion" if many - or most of the following things are true of you:

You are convinced that there is a conspiracy in the office to ease you out of your job or to keep your merit from being fully recognized.

Pupils Can Expect Better Reading

By KENNETH J. RABBEN Copley News Service

The national Right-to-Read Program hopes to begin unique project to retain about 300 elementary instructors in the teaching of reading this January. Teachers in seven or 11 states will be thoroughly schooled in three of five reading methods that seem to work best for most pupils. They will be expected to return to their classrooms better able to help children improve their reading skills and to teach other teachers.

The pilot program, still in the planning stage, will be conducted in cooperation with state departments of education and local school systems. It will cost about $5 million for the four-week training sessions, including hiring other teachers to substitute for those attending the workshops.

If the idea produces results it will be recommended for extensive use throughout the nation. At the same time, the Right-to-Read Program and the National Urban Coalition will spend about $30,000 in one of four cities under consideration to show mothers on welfare how to help their children and themselves become better readers. This program, too, is designed for duplication if it is effective.

Dr. Ruth Love Holloway, Right-to-Read Program

Success is not necessarily in any one reading method, but in knowing which method will work for a particular child." Although reluctant to make a strong, official indorsement of phonics instruction, she said it plays a part in every reading program. "You have to have phonics and motivation, too." Since she accepted the directorship nearly a year ago of the controversial program designed to eliminate functional illiteracy by 1980, Dr. Holloway has validated evidence that there are at least five reading methods that seem to work for most pupils. In the next few months, all states will be invited to compete for Right-to-Read funds. Instead of the states submitting proposals to Washington, the Right-to-Read office will develop projects in cooperation with the states. These projects include strict provisions for accountability.

How One City Cuts Youth Delinquency By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA) Something of a miracle has taken place in the city of Pacifica, Calif., these past two years. Juvenile delinquency dropped 15 per cent in 1970 and 23 per cent more in 1971. At the same time, delinquency was steadily increasing nationwide-in many localities at a rate of 5 to 10 per cent every 12 months, year after year. The outlook was not always bright in Pacifica, population 37,000, located near San Francisco. In 1969, juvenile arrests rose 35 per cent in these statistics compiled by the California Youth Authority. Now it might be argued that the 1970 and 1971 declines were merely a return to normal from the major bulge in 1969, when arrests jumped from 821 to 1,130. But this theory doesn't explain away the 1971 figure, down to 742 arrests, almost 10 per cent below 1968. This miracle apparently came about not through any great new discovery about young people or exotic new techniques. It seemingly resulted from the application of some rather well-known and not overly costly methods. The old practice, apparently followed in many cities, was to warn an arrested youngster and send him home. or forward him to court. Neither alternative produced satisfactory results.

What Pacifica did then was sort out about a fifth to a fourth of these youngsters, when arrested, and transfer them out of the police-court-probation system. Each of these selected youngsters, picked because they showed promise and because their delinquencies were not serious, was then turned over to cooperating groups. Teachers kept a lockout in the schools for youths possibly headed for delinquency. These youngsters were then referred through their parents, not to the police, but to the assisting groups. Aid was confidential and free. The boy or girl and parents, brothers and sisters would then sit down and discuss their problems with an adviser. The boy would be sounded out for his interests, then invited into groups or projects that fit his goals. A tutoring group was set up manned by college youths to help those youngsters having study difficulty.

An attempt was made to get these young people involved in community problems and youth activities. They treated birds after an oil spill. They took part in community fairs, rock concerts, dances and discussions.

Youths called "streetwalkers" were hired to go out on the streets, in parks, shopping centers, the beach and other places where young people gather "to attempt to help angry youth verbalize their feelings and find alternate means of expression . . ." such as the group activities mentioned.

Pacifica isn't the only community using these techniques. Some cities add a health service which may aid in plastic surgery, removal of tattoos, corrective dentistry, or eye examinations, to remove sources of embarrassment or handicaps which may help to drive a young person into delinquency. Drug programs are a part. Some towns have teen prevocational workshops.

One Man's Opinion

The Everglades: 'Alive and Well' By DON OAKLEY

Like the much-publicized "death" of Lake Erie, the alleged demise of America's unique subtropical wilderness, the Everglades, is one of those reports that seems to have been slightly exaggerated. As usual, it's all man's fault. With his canals and waterways, he has cut off life-giving water from the Everplades, with the result that its animal and plant life is dying. Wildfires are finishing the job. The situation is not quite that simple, says J. Walter Dineen, chief of the Environmental Services Division of the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District. Very few individuals have dealt with Everglades ecology for an extended period of time, he points out. Most recent workers have run into the Everglades for a year or so and said, "My gosh, it's not like it's supposed to be!" and then gone off criticizing that "the water is too low" or "the water is too high."

The "true" Everglades, says Dineen, is a vast sawgrass prairie, dotted with green tree islands known as hammocks, and otherwise marked by sloughs and strands of During periods of abundant rainfall, it is a flood plain

When rainfall is deficient, it is often swept by sawgrass fires that may even consume the peat soil that lies above the porous rock cap of the Everglades basin. The most commonly accepted belief is that the Ever glades depends upon an overflow of water from Lake Okeechobee, 100 miles to the north. It is this water which the engineers have been accused of diverting. Recent studies indicate, however, that it is rainfall in and around the area which determines the condition of the Glades at any given time, and rainfall is notoriously fickle.

If some species of plants and animals suffer during a period of drought, other species flourish-until the return of the opposite cycle Stabilization of water levels in the Everglades by removal of the so-called "yo-yo" principle-the fluctuations between drought and flood-would be disastrous to Everglades ecology, Dineen contends. He sums up:

"The Everglades is an extremely tough and dynamic . a wide-open, free-swinging ecosystem that ecosystem . has been subjected to much abuse in recent years. The lades are not dead; they are alive and well in South Florida."

RADLOFF COUNTY COMMISSION

TOM RADLOFF SPEAKS ON VITAL ISSUES

PLANNING & ZONING

We don't need a land developer on the County Commission. My opponent is a land developer! Too often planning and zoning are decided upon without proper consideration to the long-range effect that development will have. I will investigate the county wide land use program and coordinate efforts between City, County and State planning commissions.

COUNTY UNIFICATION

The county and cities must cement their relationship and work towards cooperative goals for the benefit of ALL Seminole County Residents. Long range planning, especially in the area of roads, IS a critical matter. I will work toward a unified long range road plan which involves State, County and City authorities and which gives Seminole County a comprehensive road plan for the future. Road right-of-ways need to be secured in advance of growth!

COUNTY SEWER SYSTEM

Seminole County has, at present, no comprehensive plans to centralize an adequate sewer system. Rather, as developments are built outside city limits, the developers are having to supply their own sewage treatment plants, many of which are inadequate, or the developments are being annexed into cities so that they may tie into existing systems. I would work to develop a plan by which developers, working under requirements established by the county, would supply systems for the development and in turn, deed these systems to the county. Through this action these systems could become substations to a master system which would insure Seminole County adequate and safe sewage disposal for future generations.

INDUSTRIAL GROWTH

I will work for prudent industrial growth within Seminole County to provide jobs for our unemployed. Attraction of clean industry that requires minimum county services and will properly meet our environmental standards would not only be a benefit to our county economically, but would bring additional tax revenue into Seminole to lessen the tax burden on our residents.

As a conscious citizen, I am deeply concerned about the rising drug problem. As your County Commissioner, I will support and assist both local and state law enforcement officials to stamp out this menace to our society!

Southern Golf Prize To Weaver

COLUMBUS, Gal (AP)- Atlantan DeWitt Weaver captured the $100,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament Sunday, edging Chuck Courtney on the first hole of a sudden death playoff.

Courtney charged to within one stroke of Weaver at the 17th green, coming away with a birdie after the leader settled for a bogey.

But while Courtney played i safe thinking he was fighting for second place at the 18th green, Weaver-playing behind him-was experiencing near disaster on the tee of No. 18.

Weaver's final tee shot hooked sharply out of play. Al ready facing one penalty stroke, he teed off again and the drive hooked in the same direction. The shot struck a tree limb, however, and fell into fair

So the Russians tossed the ball in again, this time a lengthof-the-floor pass to Aleksander Belov, who outmuscled two Yanks under the Soviet basket and flipped the ball in at the horn for the deciding points.

"We of the United States," said team manager Herb Mols as the protest was filed, "would like to commend the Russians for their play for 39 minutes and 57 seconds. We have never heard, however, of a game being played for 40 minutes and three seconds."

Joyce, a University of South Carolina senior, provided a glimpse of what was to come. "We voted quickly and unanimously," he said right after the game, "not to take the silver

Attorney quite pleased with the divorce rate

By Abigail Van Buren to 1972 by Chicago Tribens-N. Y. Hows Synd., Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Regarding marriages between Baptists and Catholics: I am a practicing attorney, and I handle many divorce cases.

For the past 10 years I have kept a record of the number of divorces between couples of mixed religions, and my records show that 6 out of 10 marriages between Baptists and Catholics end in divorce. I don't know the reason, but thought you'd be interested in the statistics.

Being a small-town lawyer, I would appreciate your keeping my identity confidential as I would not want to lose all the good divorce trade between Baptists and Catholics. Best wishes from,

A GALVESTON, TEX. ATTORNEY

DEAR ATTORNEY: Altho your mini survey on Baptist-Catholic divorces is hardly representative of the nation, I 4 out of 10 marriages make it in Galveston, you're doing better than the state of California, where I'm told they had more divorces last year than marriages!

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for stating that a return address on a sympathy card was indeed proper. It is also very helpful to the elderly who must acknowledge a stack of condolence messages, which is not an easy task with IOWA GRANNY tear-filled eyes. How well I know.

DEAR ABBY: A female requested opinions from male readers regarding how they feel about women with false teeth. Abby, you gave her the most intelligent advice I ever read: "Keep your mouth shut."

But you failed to explain why. The reason being "Many false words are spoken thru false teeth." Sincerely

POLLY'S POINTERS

Sleeves Are Too Small In Half-size Dresses By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY-My Pet Peeve is with the manufacturers of women's half-size clothes who do not put larger sleeves in their dresses and blouses. The sleeves are often so small that they have to be taken out and pieced. -MRS. T. G. H.

DEAR READERS-This must be a Peeve common to many as we have had quite a few letters with the same complaint.-POLLY

DEAR POLLY-Evelyn wrote about her problem with getting glue to hold her wood chairs together. My husband and I have done a lot of such work and have learned the following: Sand all wood joints to remove dirt, old glue and old finish. Use resin epoxy glue and mix according to directions. After applying glue to both parts of the joint, tie the chair to hold them together firmly and let dry for at least 24 hours. Be sure to assemble chairs properly. Once dried they probably will never come loose again -- MARIE

DEAR POLLY-I sympathize with Evelyn, who has the loose chair joints. Glue penetrates the grain of the wood and, unless the old glue is completely removed down to a clean surface, you know what happens. The dowel must be scraped and sanded and the hole cleaned out with a rotary file or sanding drum. If the hole is too big for the dowel, some shims are called for. Tear narrow strips of muslin 3%-inch wide and twice the length of the dowel plus the dia-meter of the hole. Cross two of these in the center and glue them to the dowel. Add more glue to the outside of the strips and drive into the hole or prepare both ends of the rung and squeeze in with a furniture clamp. If one layer of muslin is not enough use another as the joint must be tight. I use that popular new milky white glue that is for ALL things.-SAM, the old timer

DEAR READERS-Do remember that glue must be applied thinly as thick glue tends to get brittle. If you do not have furniture clamps to hold the mended parts together, a long piece torn from an old sheet (rope might cut into the wood) wrapped round and round and then a strip of wood slipped in to make a tourniquet will hold it tightly. Put stick behind rung while drying .-- POLLY (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Revenue Sharing Before Senators

By JOE HALL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate leaders are pushing for final passage of the $34.8-billion revenue-sharing bill but first must consider a couple dozen that would help finance the program.

The Senate acted on 22 amendments in four days of debate last week but at least as many are pending, including a tax-reform measure and a series to increase Social Security benefits.

The tax amendment, sponsored by Sens. Frank Church, D-Ida., and Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., would raise $3.7 billion in revenue to help offset the morethan-$6-billion annual cost of the revenue-sharing program.

It would raise an estimated $1.9 billion by beefing up the minimum tax plan adopted in the 1969 tax-reform act, to get some payments from wealthy persons who are able to use various preferences to reduce or eliminate their tax liability.

Another $1.8 billion would be obtained by repealing the accelerated depreciation allowances for business firms enacted last year at President Nixon's request.

"It is nothing less than folly, said Church, "to pass this huge revenue-sharing bill without raising a dime to pay for it.

"The federal government has no revenue to share, only mounting debts."

Some other senators remained unconvinced the revenue-sharing bill should be passed at all.

WASHINGTON (AP) - When political campaign organizations are functioning smoothly, they don't show. And Sen. George McGovern's has been showing.

That is why the McGovern headquarters is drawing so much attention, despite the insistence of the Democratic presidential nominee and his lieutenants that matters of staff and organization don't interest the voters.

"DUE PROCESS OBSERVED IN COURT...

Everyone has his day in court. This seems to be the strict rule of Municipal Judge David Strawn when he hears cases in Melbourne Beach. Sitting through a court session there, regardless of how minor the charge may be, reminds me of an efficient and proper higher court trial.

"Too often lower courts appear to show only mild interest in defendants offering untrained or poorly presented defense to minor charges. During Melbourne Beach's last court session, Judge Strawn spent nearly one hour listening to testimony from two youths charged with public drunkenness, and their two witnesses. Rather than waive the rule for witnesses, which again is usually the case, the judge sent the witnesses out of the room in company of a policeman. Even after testimony ended, Judge Strawn chose to withhold judgement for 10 days, giving him an opportunity to consider the testimony.

This was not an isolated case according to policemen who present cases to the judge. 'You better be right, not half right,' when vou take a defendant before Strawn, one policeman offered.

The process is time consuming and even gets to be somewhat tiresome waiting for all the usual excuses to be given, but when a defendant walks out of the courtroom, whether the verdict be guilty or not guilty, he can say he had a fair trial.

WINTER SPRINGS -- "What will happen if the voters decide to keep in the charter a provision for closed executive sessions" queried Councilman Charles Rowell at last night's meeting of City Council. City Attorney Thomas Freeman, possibly disgruntled with continual allusions in the press to the issue, replied, "I think it would be a significant defeat for the Orlando Sentinel and The Sanford Herald." However, he expanded his statement with the comment that the city will continue to function "pursuant to the "sunshine law," and to meet in accordance with provisions left intact in the charter would "be unlawful." Voters, at the polls today, will approve or reject an amendment to the charter which requires that all meetings of City Council be open to the public. The charter provided for closed executive sessions of council, although this section was to have been deleted. City officials admitted the provision pervisor James Boyd predicted inadvertently missed their attention as it did the that 60 per cent of the county's state Legislature and the secretary of state. Turner Loses Bout In Kentucky Court

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A federal judge Monday dismissed a suit that sought to have Kentucky's new consumer-fraud law declared unconstitutional

U. S. District Judge Mac Swinford took the action, he said, because the matter is pending in Fayette Circuit Court.

The suit was filed in federal court last month by Dare To Be Great, Inc., a Florida-based firm that sells motivational courses. The firm was temporarily enjoined Aug. 10 by a Fayette Circuit judge from operating in Kentucky. In Monday's hearing, Swinford said he believed the questions raised in the federal court suit could be handled in the Fayette

Circuit Court. Dare To Be Great asked in the federal suit that a three-judge panel be formed to issue a temporary injunction declaring the consumer law void and prohibiting its enforcement against the firm.

2 Million Ballots Expected Voting Going Smoothly

By JOHN VAN GIESON Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)-Elections officials reported no major problems today as Floridians trooped to the polls for a primary shakedown of an elections system drastically altered by reapportionment, judicial revision and the 18year-old vote.

About 2 million voters were expected to cast their ballots between 7 a.m., Eastern Daylight Time, when polls opened in most of Florida and 7 p.m., Central Daylight Time, when polls close west of the Apalachicola River.

State Elections Supervisor Dot Glisson said the polling was "going pretty good." She said county elections officials kept her busy with minor complaints but there were no reports of serious problems. The early turnout varied in

Worms Still In Water By BILL SCOTT

Sanford City Commission was advised by W. E. Knowles, city manager, at Monday night's meeting that worms discovered in the city water supply going to Pinecrest area residents had been eradicated but this morning Mrs. H. L. Stogner, 103 West 30th Street, advised The Herald there are still worms in the city water.

She said for a while after city utility crews had worked on the pipes she failed to find a single viggler but this morning she ounted five worms coming from the bathroom faucet. Another area resident, Mrs. John E. Dodson, 100 West 36th street, called today by The Herald, said water coming into her house appeared to be clear. "It's even clearer than usual", she added.

Mrs. Dodson reported finding worms in the water a month At Monday night's commission session, the city manager advised the worm problem had been resolved. He explained the infestation was located and water pipes had been washed out and disinfected with chlorine to eradicate the worms, said by some to be the larvae of the blind mosquito.

The City Commission approved a request from Al Davis, county commissioner, to furnish water and sewer connections to the proposed uvenile detention facility to be located south of the city along 17-92, near Five Points; set 1972-73 year tax millage at 8.5 mills, and voted to change meeting times from 8 p.m. to 7 p.m. on second and fourth Monday evenings beginning at next meeting Sept. 25.

Utility Increase Okayed

Sanford water, sewer and refuse customers will find their average monthly bills increased by $2.50 to $3 additional. per month.

This resulted from the passage Monday night by the City Commission on first reading of an ordinance to revise the water, sewer and refuse rates to residential customers only.

Commercial utility customers fees will not be increased.

City manager W. E. Knowles advised today the new rates would boost refuse pickup charges from $2.25 to $3.10 a month. Revised water rates include six cents per 1,000 gallons increase and sewer charges, which are based on water consumption, also will be

Knowles said the new fees would bring the city up to what other towns are charging for utilities.
