Christmas in full swing Saturday

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — If the good Lord's willing and the creek don't rise, the Christmas season will get underway officially in Sanford on Seminole Boulevard on Saturday afternoon.

If the creek (Lake Monroe, in this case) does rise over the seawall by Friday afternoon, the annual Christmas parade will be moved to First Street and the historic downtown business district.

"We'll go out there on Friday afternoon and take a look at the situation," said Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. "I don't think we'll have to move, but we'll take a look on the day before."

The colorful Christmas parade is just the first of a host of activities in the downtown district designed to bring this tropical town down into the crisp, holiday spirit.

With sleigh bells jingling and horns blowing, the parade will kick off at 3 p.m. with floats, marching bands and performing groups.

It is expected that Santa himself will take time out of his busy schedule to ride on one of the parade's many floats.

"The parade is just the beginning," said Farr. "There are several other things going on in downtown as well."

The area around the old Ritz Theatre at Magnolia and Second Street will be transformed into a magical, music playland for the "Ritz Ritz," sponsored by the Ritz Restoration Committee.

There will be continuous entertainment scheduled beginning at 4:30 p.m. around the theater.

For the young and the young at heart, there will be a snow playground with cool Florida snow, courtesy of Ice Enterprises on 13th Street.

Farr has promised that there will be enough snow to keep it playable for quite a while in the

Residents meet government to discuss flooding

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — When the Florida skies open up with torrential rain, flood-weary residents of Wildmere Manor subdivision brace themselves as their streets turn into rapidly flowing rivers and water inches toward their homes.

The problem has gone on for years with concerned citizens seeking relief bouncing back and forth between city and county officials like a shuttlecock in a badminton game. Correspondence between the governmental units on the subject could fill a large notebook.

Flooding occurs when heavy rain causes a retention pond and county ditch known as Fairy Lake Canal to overflow. Water from County Road 427 as well as State Road 434 drains into the retention area.

In the deluge spawned by Tropical Storm Gordon, city crews and

'What you don't know about trains can kill you'

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Trains can kill you if you get in front of them.

That's the main message of "SafeGate," a railroad crossing safety awareness program Wednesday. Officers with local law enforcement agencies and the Florida Department of Transportation Motor Carrier Compliance Office staked out local crossings to assure motorists are wary of the 6,000-ton behemoths when passing over tracks.

Apparently fewer motorists are heeding trains. According to Basil McKnight, FDOT safety liaison, six people were killed in crossing accidents with trains last year, three times the number killed in 1992. Typically, 60 percent of motorists killed in car-train accidents ignore gates and go around them.

McKnight said there are about 50 crossings in Seminole County.

"SafeGate" is a joint program of the American Automobile Association's Florida Operation Life-saver program, CSX Transportation, FDOT and local law enforcement agencies. "What you don't know about trains can kill you," is the motto of the effort.

A few track facts:

- A light passenger car, traveling at 55 mph requires 200 feet to stop and a tractor-trailer needs 300 feet. A 100-car train traveling at 55 mph needs a mile or more to stop.
- Because of their size, trains appear to be moving slower than cars.
- Trains tend to appear farther away than they really are because of their size.
- The rules to living at a railroad crossing are

Hill sent immediately to death row isolation

By BILL KACZOR Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA — Authorities have wasted no time getting anti-abortion killer Paul Hill to Florida's death row.

A van with its motor running was waiting for him outside the courthouse after he received two death sentences Tuesday for the July 29 shotgun killings of Dr. John Bayard Britton and escort James Barrett outside a Pensacola abortion clinic.

The van — escorted by two Florida Highway Patrol cruisers, a Florida Department of Law Enforcement car and a jail car — took Hill to the state Department of Corrections Reception Center at Lake Butler, about 300 miles east of here.

After a few hours of processing, Hill was transported to nearby Florida State Prison at Starke.

FDLE Special Agent Larry Smith said authorities decided on the quick transfer without first returning the former minister to the Escambia County Jail for security reasons.

Hill, 40, is a former minister in the Presbyterian Church in America and Orthodox Presbyterian Church.

The DOC's public information office had received several interview requests, but Hill probably will not be allowed to speak to reporters this week, said spokeswoman Laura Levings in Tallahassee.

"We anticipate him accepting almost every request," Levings said.

Hill has an individual cell at the prison, she said. Only about 30 of nearly 300 death row inmates are housed at the prison, home of Florida's electric chair. The others are held at nearby Union Correctional Institution in Raiford.

It usually takes several years before executions are carried out. After Circuit Judge Frank Bell sentenced Hill, he appointed the public defenders' office to represent him during an automatic appeal to the Florida Supreme Court.

Hill had represented himself in state court and in a related federal trial. A legal adviser appointed in the Hill trial said Hill told him he did not want to pursue appeals in either case.

Hill also received two life sentences last week in U.S. District Court for violating a new federal law protecting abortion clinics. He was the first person convicted under the statute.

State audit finds safety inspections lacking

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is failing to conduct enough roadside safety inspections and ensure safety violations are corrected on registered commercial trucks and buses, a state audit has found.

The audit released Wednesday also said the state isn't making enough visits to truck and bus terminals to review paperwork on repairs and driver hours, drug tests and physicals.

The state's goal was 867 terminal inspections in 1993, only 45 have been done. "This is an area we haven't looked at all," said Rep. Les Miller, D-Tampa, who heads the Florida House's new transportation oversight committee.

The report estimates some 53,000 registered heavy commercial trucks and buses cruise Florida's roads.

The state needs better trained officers and equipment to track down the violators, the audit says.

The Legislature's Office of Program Policy Analysis and Government Accountability conducted the audit during the first half of this year based on last year's records, interviews with agency officials and their counterparts in other states.

About 140 DOT troopers made 53,000 roadside safety inspections last year, figures show.

Auditors found that 428 of a sampled 497 roadside inspections turned up violations.

According to the State Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles, there were 4,248 serious accidents involving tractor-trailers and buses in 1992, up about 162 from the year before.

Frank Carlile, DOT assistant secretary, said Wednesday the failure to do the terminal inspections — none were done in Miami, Ocala, Pensacola or Tallahassee — was because troopers feel they should be out on the road conducting inspections.

The audit report agreed, but also said that the agency took three years to write rules for the terminal inspections after they were created by the legislature in 1989.

Schools: Mixed results in new report

By ADAM YEMANE
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A new report about Florida's public schools shows the state's push to improve education has produced mixed results.

In public high schools, the percentage of students passing tougher math and science courses increased last year. At the same time, the dropout rate increased, and the graduation rate declined.

In high schools and middle schools, the percentage of in-school suspensions increased sharply last year. The average class size in elementary schools declined slightly.

This type of information is featured in the report each of the state's 2,000 public schools will distribute to parents by early 1995. The report allows each school to compare a wide range of statistics with their school district and the state as a whole.

Parents, educators, and community and business leaders need information that will enable them to make the decisions necessary for meaningful school improvement," according to the 1993-94 "Core" School Report released this month by the state Department of Education. The state report does not include individual district or school figures.

The report is required as part of the education reforms passed by the Legislature in 1991 to give teachers, parents and local communities more say in local schools. This is the first year each school is responsible for producing its own report.

More than 2 million students are enrolled in public schools. In 1993-94, the average amount of money spent on each student increased slightly from 1992-93, the report shows. The state spent $4,039 on a high school student, $3,468 on a middle school student and $3,692 on an elementary school student.

When parents get their school's report, it is supposed to include how much money their child's school received from the Florida Lottery and how the money was spent. The state does not have the lottery figures for individual schools.

The lottery, which started in 1988, was supposed to provide money to enhance public schools. But lawmakers have been criticized for using the funds to replace money that was cut from general tax revenue.

State figures show a total of 273,723 incidents of crime and violence in school. But the figure is difficult to put in context because there is no prior figures to compare.

Of that total, more than half were for disorderly conduct or fighting. There were more than 32,000 incidents of assaults or battery, 542 instances of firearm possession and four homicides, the state report said.

Compared with the 180-day school year and the number of schools, the number of incidents of crimes and violence comes to less than one each day, said Lavan Dukes, director of educational information for the education department.

"Is it a lot? I don't know. We don't have enough history in this area," Dukes said.

Each school's report also is supposed to include a "climate" survey to give a sense of how parents, teachers and students feel about their school, he said.

In-house suspensions are rising, apparently as schools try to crack down on unruly students.

In middle schools, the percentage of in-house suspensions increased from 16.1 percent in 1992-93 to 18.1 percent last year. In high schools, the number rose from 14.7 percent to 16.2 percent.

The number of students completing the most intensive math and science high school classes increased over the past two years.

The higher rates applied to all racial and ethnic groups. Asian students were the largest group taking the tougher courses followed by whites, Indians, Hispanics and blacks. Girls completed the classes more often than boys.

The number of high school students whose grades were good enough to qualify for financial help for college increased.

But the graduation rate slipped from 78.7 percent in 1992-93 to 75.8 percent in 1993-94. The dropout rate climbed from 4.1 percent in 1992-93 to 4.8 percent this year. The largest increase in dropouts was among Hispanic students.

Government by the people

Let's face the facts. Not everyone likes every news story on TV or in the newspapers. Some people refuse to read about bad things going on, while there are certain subjects in which others have no interest.

On a regular basis however, the Sanford Herald publishes preview stories which should be given serious consideration by most people. Generally on the day prior to city commission meetings, the Herald gives an overview of all items which are listed on the agenda for those meetings.

As some items are entered onto the agenda at the last minute, it is impossible to give a complete overview but most often commissions and boards stick to what has been scheduled.

The cities include Sanford, Lake Mary and Longwood. Recently, the Herald added the agenda for the regular Oviedo City Council meetings. Whenever the occasion warrants, advance agendas are also given for such organizations as the Airport Authority, County Council of Governments (CALNO), Downtown Waterfront Master Plan Committee, and Planning and Zoning meetings.

Things to watch for first of all, are those which may have a direct bearing on a reader's residence, neighborhood, street or business. Secondly, watch for items pertaining to such matters as taxation, government spending, annexation, rezoning requests and department plans.

Something may not initially appear to be of concern, but should be noted. As a hypothetical example, let's say consideration is to be given to rezone a certain parcel of property to allow for development of something which may give out odors or noise. It may not be immediately adjacent to your property, but you may be affected.

When a developer wanted to turn the land across from Sanford Middle School into a strip mall, people turned out at the Sanford City Commission meeting, and as a result, prevented what they considered to be a poor choice for the use of that particular land.

The first step is to take heed to what will be discussed. The second step is to inform others who may be affected, then turn out at the commission or P&Z meeting and voice objections.

At times, there may be proposals to be considered which would be advantageous to individuals. Commissions and boards need not to hear both pros and cons to every item brought up for consideration.

Cities enact measures with ordinances. They are required to have two readings and a public hearing. This is the opportunity for the public to add its input.

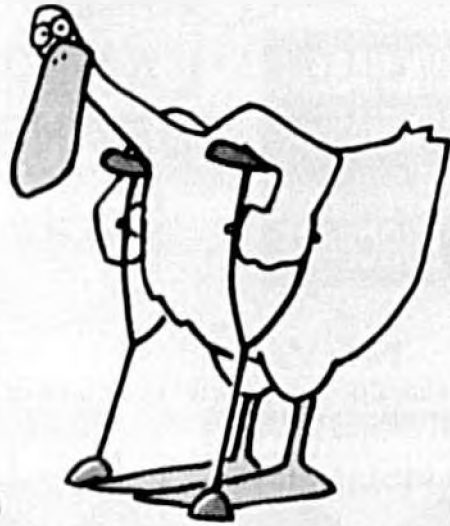

Not paying attention to what may be coming up today, could lead to problems tomorrow.

Read the agendas which affect you. Study them and consider how they may or may not affect you.

Then attend the meetings and become part of the government process. It's the only way government by the people can work.

Liberals missing point of GATT

One of the basic differences between liberals and conservatives concerns the origin and distribution of wealth. To liberals, life is a zero-sum game in which the gross national product is divided up among us. Some get more of it, others get less, and those who get more are necessarily depriving the rest of their fair share. This excites the liberals' compassion, and they spend their time trying to redistribute the wealth more equally.

Conservatives, analyzing the generation of wealth, have concluded that in a free society it is the product of the efforts of individuals, working alone or together. These efforts (called "jobs") are financed by people who already have money, and the latter do this either directly (as in the case of entrepreneurs) or indirectly, through bank deposits, stock purchases and the like. There is almost no way in which accumulated private money can avoid being used constructively.

The investors naturally hope for a profit on their investment. If they succeed, the profit is plowed back into a new round of wealth generation, with all its attendant benefits in the form of more jobs, etc. This is true even if it is spent on yachts, as the ultraliberal Sen. Mitchell of Maine discovered accidentally when he imposed a heavy luxury tax on yachts and inadvertently wiped out the Maine yacht building industry. In other words, before there can be employees, there must first be employers. This seems obvious enough, yet liberals scoff at it as "the trickle-down theory," and somehow manage to love employees dearly while despising and doing their best to hamper employers.

I have seldom seen this intellectual inconsistency displayed more vividly than in a recent column by one Bob Herbert. Herbert is one of two new columnists recently added to the regular stable on The New York Times op-ed page to tilt it still further to the left. Recently it occurred to him to compare the businessmen who triumphed in the

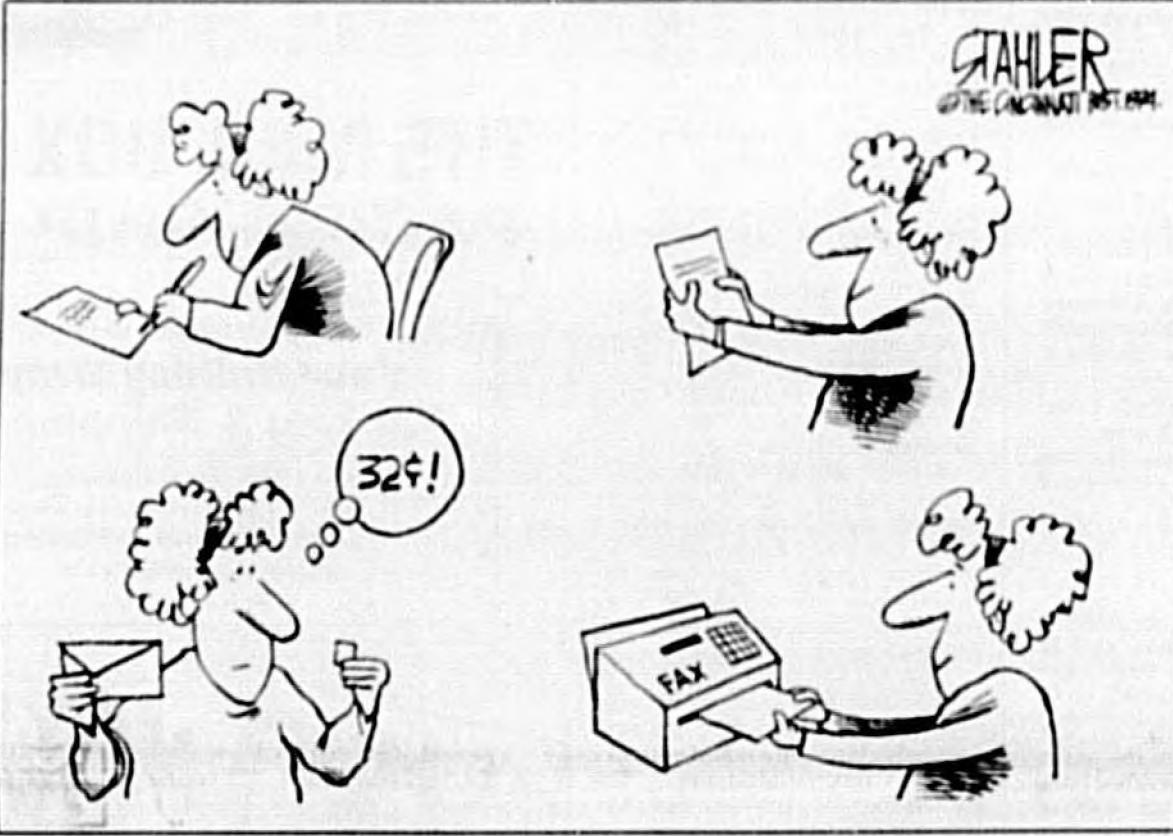

"We are being invited to join Herbert in his hatred of these businessmen, and of the politicians who passed GATT at their behest."

GATT battle in Congress with the economically deprived denizens of the Brownsville section of Brooklyn.

Brownsville's residents, Herbert snarled, "will never be mistaken for the champagne-drinking, limousine-riding lobbyists who are swarming all over Capitol Hill in a gaudy display of corporate muscle on behalf of GATT." What these soup kitchen clients have in common is an economic predicament so dire they cannot be sure from one day to the next that they will eat. This is not easily understood by congressmen, senators and presidents who have trouble buttoning their jackets over their ample mid-sections. Hunger is alien to them.

We are being invited to join Herbert in his hatred of these businessmen, and of the politicians who passed GATT at their behest. It simply never crosses his little liberal mind that the whole point of GATT is to expand economic activity, which will inevitably result in the creation of new jobs for many of those who need them, and more tax revenues that can be used to help the rest.

Such subtleties are lost on Herbert. He can see only an outrageous maldistribution of wealth, and his remedy for it is straightforward: tax these plutocrats until their pips squeak, and turn the money over to the needy of Brownsville.

Helms' new course in foreign aid

WASHINGTON — The new Republican leaders on Capitol Hill promise to change the way business is done in Washington. They also may redefine the financial relationship between the United States government and governments in the Middle East.

While domestic reforms will be at the top of the Republican agenda, GOP leaders are also likely to shine a spotlight on a question that hasn't been asked much in recent years: Can America afford peace in the Middle East?

One of the prime targets for GOP budget cutters this January will be the $12.3 billion foreign aid budget, a perennial target since it lacks any clear political constituency. The lone exception to this rule — Israel — may also feel the pinch, as its supporters have given disproportionately to Democrats over the years.

Supporters of foreign assistance — which makes up less than one-half of 1 percent of the federal budget — are about to confront their worst nightmare in the personage of Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), the new chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He has promised a thorough review, along with probable cuts, of foreign aid as part of next year's budget. Israel, and other friendly countries in the Middle East, can hardly expect to be exempt from this review.

All told, America's support of peace in the Middle East (counting Iraq) is in excess of $10 billion per year. That includes direct aid, loans and foreign military sales credits along with other not-so-obvious means of support — such as the charitable tax deductions allowed for billions of dollars given by Americans each year to Israel.

Our congressional sources predict that Helms' first target will be Israel's partners in peace — not Israel itself. Since President Jimmy Carter signed the Camp David peace accords, it's become accepted wisdom among Middle East leaders that making peace with Israel means an influx of American dollars.

The first beneficiary was Egypt. Several years after Egypt kicked the Soviets out, it was perhaps natural that Anwar Sadat would agree to Carter's peace initiative. By risking the economic wrath of its Arab neighbors, Egypt has been rewarded with roughly $2 billion in annual aid from the United States, while Israel receives about $3 billion per year. Together, these two countries reap about 40 percent of the entire foreign aid budget.

Some critics view this as bribing people to do what is in their interest in the first place — make peace. Yet recent advances in the Middle East peace process suggest that the administration is intent on broadening its dollars-for-peace initiatives beyond Egypt.

The deal that the Clinton administration helped strike between Jordan and Israel the week before the November elections cost American taxpayers about $1 billion. As incentive for Jordan to sign the accords, the United States agreed to forgive $900 million in Jordanian debt. Another $375 million was put together in a fund to support foreign investment in Jordan.

The newly created Palestinian territory in Gaza and Jericho will also be looking to the United States with outstretched hands. So far, America has pledged only $500 million over five years to help them rebuild their war-torn, poverty-stricken land. The money is far from adequate, Palestinians believe. By any reckoning, it will take far more than has already been made available to create a Palestinian economy that can stand on its own.

"Can America afford peace in the Middle East?"

MORTON KONDRACK

Clinton should push job training

Conventional wisdom now has it that instead of pushing health care reform as the top priority in his first two years in office, President Clinton should have pushed welfare reform. Wrong. He should have pushed crime and job training. Next year, he should push job training.

Why? Because as Labor Secretary Robert Reich and others have pointed out, feelings of economic insecurity among the middle 60 percent of American families are fueling a corrosive cynicism about American politics.

On a bipartisan basis, American elites have moved the country decisively — and correctly — into full participation in a highly technological global economy. Recent GATT ratification was an important step in that direction.

However, while educated elites prosper in the new world economy, semitrained ordinary workers suffer from competition with lower-wage workers abroad. Having passed GATT, it's time for the administration and Congress to equip workers to fight back.

On Nov. 22, in a speech to the Democratic Leadership Council, Reich proposed a dramatic new departure in job training, dismantling existing government programs and instead equipping individual workers to purchase their own training. Reich proposed paying for the program by eliminating "corporate welfare" in the form of direct subsidies and tax breaks to business.

The flap over "corporate welfare" got a flurry of press attention, but Reich's training proposal was practically ignored. It took a huge step in the direction of Republican-style "empowerment" programs of the type often advocated by progressive conservatives such as former HUD Secretary Jack Kemp.

The DLC itself is unveiling a "GI Bill for Workers" to furnish them with vouchers to buy training. In an interview, Reich said his department is still studying whether to recommend vouchers, loans, or lifetime "training accounts" that workers could draw on like bank accounts.

Reich wouldn't say how much his proposal will cost, but it's clear it would be more than the $13 billion over five years called for in the administration's proposed Re-Employment Act of 1994, which involved consolidation and reform of existing training programs.

Any proposal that Reich makes to the White House will have to pass through a tight budget and priority review. Last year, job training lost out to both health care and welfare reform. Next year, it should be put at the head of the line.

A dramatic Reich or DLC-style training initiative could enable Clinton to steal a political march on Republicans, but would also supply a basis for bipartisan cooperation.

Republicans right now are divided on job training. Incoming House Majority Leader Dick Arney (Texas) said in an interview that the government should do essentially nothing in the area except cut taxes so that business and industry can create jobs.

"Training will take care of itself," he insisted.

Among other Republicans, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum (Kan.), incoming chair of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, is talking about forming a national commission to study the efficacy of all job training programs.

Rep. Bill Goodling (Pa.), slated to chair the Economic Opportunity Committee, wants to conduct a faster study and then move on to vouchers and/or consolidation of the myriad federal training programs into block grants to state and local governments. Goodling also favors incentives to business to provide training for workers.

Whichever party figures out the best plan for constant upgrading of worker skills has a chance to dominate American politics because Reich is undoubtedly right in saying that for average families, "downward mobility" is eroding the American dream.

Since 1979, men who lack a college degree have suffered a 12 percent average decline in income. Among men and women who have lost jobs since 1991, 20 percent haven't found new ones and 47 percent of those who have are making less than they did before.

Reich said he thinks this was the key to the rage that fueled the 1994 elections, but he thinks that neither party will profit from it for long.

"Once unbottled," he said, "mass resentment can poison the moral integrity of the nation, replacing ambition with envy, intolerance and hate. Today, the targets are immigrants, welfare mothers, government officials, gays and an ill-defined 'counterculture.' As the middle class continues to erode, who will be the targets tomorrow?"

He thinks they could be corporations.

Instead of demagoguing to divert the anger of the middle class, the parties would be well-advised to cooperate in rebuilding the middle class. And they should start in Congress' second 100 days.

"He should have pushed crime and job training. Next year, he should push job training."

Flooding

Residents used sand bags and pumps to protect property. Home video of the subdivision flooding dating back to 1991 was shown Wednesday at a meeting between city commissioners and county commissioner Randy Morris.

Rather than rehabilitating past problems on the project, Morris, whose district includes the area, met with city officials to discuss the status of the project and try to determine how to solve the problems. Morris emphasized he was not speaking for the other county commissioners nor as board chairman during the meeting.

A survey of 30 subdivision residents outlined some of the problems with flooding including property damage, depreciating property values and being unable to use their bathrooms from five to 72 hours.

In the project which is to be done in phases, the city agreed to pay for materials with the county providing the labor. The city budgeted $40,000 for the first phase and the county has $200,000 allocated for the work. However, the county engineers disagreed with some of the design features from the city's engineering firm, even noting some crucial design information was omitted from the plans.

Further, Longwood officials indicated the city would not maintain the ditch or be liable for any problems arising from the design. The county did not want to proceed with a design which didn't pass muster. Morris said an agreement was needed because he was sure the county would not build a project from a design county engineers did not approve then accept responsibility for potential liability.

Two of the sticking points over the design involve whether the ditch at a 90 degree turn should be open or underground pipes and whether the proposed series of pipes can handle the water volume.

After the design problems are resolved, the plan must be approved for permits by the St. Johns River Water Management District. A revised plan for construction on the ditch is pending. The permitting process can take between 2-3 months. Another month for obtaining materials and three months construction time would put the project into July in a best case scenario, the officials estimated. Longwood engineer Fernand Tibbler suggested the permitting process go forward with modifications as built submitted on the plans rather than starting the process over.

Morris suggested the city take over maintenance of the ditch after construction is completed.

Benson countered the city does assist residents in flood emergency situations but the every day routine maintenance on the county property should be done by the county.

The group agreed the key to proceeding with the construction is full and open communications between officials and staff.

warm afternoon sun. "What better time to have snow to play in than on a hot sunny afternoon," he said.

The children will also have the opportunity to decorate a tree from Santa's Tree Farm with citrus, popcorn, peanut butter cones and other natural snacks for the birds who will visit Sanford from up north this winter.

The Ritz Rascals Pageant will begin at 4:30 p.m. on the Second Street stage.

Following the pageant, there will be a performance of contemporary Christmas tunes by the Gough Folk Singers from 5 to 5:30 p.m. The Impact Productions Acting Troupe will perform at 5:30 p.m.

Light Up Sanford, the annual tree lighting ceremony will burst into full brightness at 6 p.m. followed by performances by the Seminole High School acting and jazz troupes.

Finally, as the blanket of darkness envelops the city, the Sixth Annual Christmas Boat Parade will take place on the waters of Lake Monroe. Shimmering through the waters from the St. John's River into the Sanford waterfront area, the boats will bring the day of activities to a close as the people of Sanford count down the final days until Christmas.

Crossing

- Be aware of black and yellow warning signs and pavement markings alerting you to an upcoming railroad crossing.
- Watch for flashing red lights, signals and gates warning of an oncoming train.
- Never try to beat the train to a crossing.

• Turn down your radio when approaching a crossing and listen for trains or signals.

• Never stop or park on railroad tracks under any circumstances, even if you don't see or hear the warning signals or train.

At least six people ignored those common-sense rules last year.

commission meeting, videotaping the proceedings. Several members of the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) which endorsed his campaign, were with him.

Lyons held up his hand and requested authority to address the matter, but was refused. "This is not a public hearing," responded Mayor Bettye Smith, "and you are not allowed to speak. This is strictly a commission matter."

Lyons won the election for city commissioner District 3 by a margin of only seven votes out of the 460 ballots which were cast. The district has 3,058 eligible voters.

In his letter filed just prior to the meeting, McClanahan wrote: "As provided in Section 102.166 (1), Florida Statutes, I, A.A. McClanahan of Seminole County, Florida, believe the election returns from all precincts in the Dec. 6, 1994 election are erroneous.

Thereby protest the canvass of such returns by the Sanford Canvassing Board, and request that said returns be investigated, examined, checked, and corrected by said Canvassing Board."

Mayor Bettye Smith and Commissioner Lon Howell represented the commission as the official canvassing board.

McClanahan's letter gave three reasons:

1. Persons were allowed to go in and out of the polling area, standing at the entrance and conversing with the police officer on duty and/or other persons.

2. I have had several voters complain that the machine they used was difficult to line up with the candidate's name.

3. I request a manual recount of the ballots and an inspection of all voting machines used in the election.

Before the commission began discussions, City Attorney Bill Colbert gave his opinions on the matter. He said that according to Florida Statutes, a vote would automatically be recounted if the difference were one-half of one percent or less. "But according to my calculations," he said, "this doesn't fit the case in this election."

Colbert said in his service as city attorney to various municipalities, he has seen similar close races in both Oviedo and Casselberry recently where the differences were 10 votes or less.

Colbert explained that the complainant, McClanahan, has the right, within 10 days, to file an official protest petition with the circuit judge, who would then make determinations in the matter.

He added that complaints 1 and 2 presented by McClanahan, did not address any matters with which the city could vote to deny the return tabulation. "The request for the manual recount does address it however," he added.

When Mayor Smith called for a motion on the matter, there was silence.

"Is it appropriate for us to ask questions of Mr. McClanahan?" asked Commissioner Lon Howell. "Not at this time," responded Colbert. "It would, in effect, be the taking of testimony, and that is not the purpose of this particular meeting."

Mayor Smith commented that as a member of the canvassing board, she felt the ballots were counted correctly. "But regarding complaint number one," she said, "I would be very concerned if this happened."

Howell agreed that the count was accurate, but also expressed concern over the matter of supporters going into the polls, which was called complaint number one.

After another long pause, Commissioner Whitey Eckstein moved to certify that the tabulation of votes was correct. Howell seconded the motion.

McClanahan did not vote on the matter, but asked the city to request that the voting machines be isolated, as are the ballots, for a period of at least 10 days.

Colbert concluded, "Of course, as city attorney, we will be prepared to speak on behalf of the city should this go to court."

McClanahan responded, "I have three attorneys in my family, and we'll handle our own matters."

The only other item on the agenda for yesterday's non-called commission meeting was approval of payments to deputies and clerks who participated in the election process. That matter was approved unanimously.

Summit of Americas: Enough squabbles for all

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — This week's Summit of the Americas is on course to map out a hemispheric free trade zone, Clinton administration officials say, but it's been a bumpy road to Miami.

With 33 heads of state expected to join President Clinton on Friday for the first such gathering in nearly three decades, competing interests were inevitable. And this conference is no exception.

On the eve of Clinton's arrival in Miami, his aides painted a rosy summit preview Wednesday.

"When we look back perhaps several years from now on this summit, it will be seen as a milestone in the hemisphere — a marker by which progress over a sweeping period of time will be measured," deputy national security adviser Samuel Berger told reporters at the White House.

And in Miami, White House counselor Mack McLarty said, "We are very near a consensus of the full agenda and that is highly unusual going into an international meeting."

"The summit is truly poised for success," he declared.

But it hasn't all been harmonious.

Brazil, for example, was miffed that the summit wasn't scheduled for a date after inauguration of its new president next month. Caribbean island nations were up in arms over banana sales, and at least one considered boycotting the summit.

And then there was Cuba, the odd man out in Miami.

Argentina wanted the Cuban problem on the agenda. And some countries thought Clinton should have asked Cuban leader Fidel Castro to attend.

Most all the participating countries initially complained that the U.S. summit agenda did not focus enough on trade — although those concerns were calmed by pre-summit talks that produced a draft agreement endorsing an Americas Free Trade Agreement by 2005.

That would be far sooner than the 2020 goal recently adopted by Asian and Pacific nations at a similar summit last month in Indonesia.

The Miami summit marks the beginning of the administration's third major market-opening offensive, following hard-fought victories on the North American Free Trade Agreement last year and this month's approval of a new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Clinton was also expected to announce at the three-day session — which he convened — the start of negotiations to make Chile the first South American nation drawn into the free-trade zone that now covers Canada and Mexico.

And a loud protest arose from several summit nations when Clinton proposed to exclude staff advisers from his group meetings with fellow heads of state.

Several South American countries complained that the presidents, especially those fairly new to office, couldn't be expected to discuss the intricacies of trade and technology.

The administration gave in on that point, despite Clinton's preference for what he considers the more free-wheeling discussion of leaders alone, according to diplomatic sources.

The presidents each will be allowed to bring a top-level minister to the discussions Saturday, with the exception of a working lunch when only the presidents will attend with their interpreters.

Brazil had a problem from the beginning with the summit date, coming at a time when its outgoing government has lame-duck status and the new team won't be installed until January. The timing also was less than optimal for Mexico, which inaugurated a new president, Ernesto Zedillo, just days before the summit.

Ultimately, McLarty flew to Brazil to smooth ruffled feathers. The Brazilians told him they would send both their outgoing President Itamar Franco and the President-elect Fernando Henrique Cardoso.

"All the misunderstandings have been overcome," said Brazil's Ambassador Paulo

Tarso Flecha de Lima.

Despite or perhaps because of the troubled planning, Latin nations have "such little expectations, there is no fear that this will be a failure," said Diego Arra, former Venezuelan representative at the United Nations and a Latin American specialist with the Council on Foreign Relations.

Even so, success in Miami won't guarantee an easy political road for Clinton in Washington.

House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri — an opponent of the Mexico-Canada agreement — cautioned Clinton on Wednesday against entering "into agreements with countries aren't prepared to live up to their promises to their own people, or to ours."

Gephardt is seeking strong guarantees linking freer trade with labor and environmental issues, a very touchy subject with Latin America.

Assisted suicide law blocked

By BRAD CAIN
Associated Press Writer

SALEM, Ore. — A federal judge has derailed Oregon's bid to become the first place in the nation to sanction doctor-assisted suicide for the terminally ill.

U.S. District Judge Michael Hogan issued a temporary restraining order Wednesday blocking the law, which was supposed to take effect today. Hogan plans to hear arguments Dec. 19 on whether the law is constitutional.

"There are terminally ill people who had their hopes raised, who believed that they had won the right to a gentle and peaceful death," said Barbara Coombs Lee, the chief sponsor of Measure 16. "This is an unwarranted government intrusion into personal, private choices of dying individuals."

Oregon voters narrowly approved the assisted suicide measure on Nov. 8.

The law would allow patients to request life-ending medication if a doctor determines that they have less than six months to live. The patient must ask for the drugs three times — including once in writing — get a second doctor's opinion and wait 15 days.

The law is the first of its kind in the world. Doctor-assisted suicide is technically illegal in the Netherlands, but doctors are guaranteed immunity if they follow strict guidelines.

National Right to Life and other opponents began legal assaults against Measure 16 as soon as it passed.

"We're doing this so that people will not kill themselves," said James Bopp, a Terre Haute, Ind., lawyer and opponent of assisted suicide who requested the restraining order.

The Oregon attorney general's office said the law is constitutional, and backers were confident the measure would survive court tests.

Meanwhile, the Michigan state Senate passed a bill Wednesday to permanently make assisted suicide a felony. Those convicted of violating the ban could serve up to four years in prison and pay a $2,000 fine. Michigan's temporary ban on assisted suicide expired last month.

The measure is another attempt to stop Dr. Jack Kevorkian, who has been present at 23 deaths, the most recent on Nov. 26.

NOTICE OF CHANGE OF LAND USE AMENDMENTS TO THE SEMINOLE COUNTY COMPREHENSIVE PLAN PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HELD DECEMBER 13, 1994

ON DECEMBER 13, 1994, THE SEMINOLE COUNTY BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS (BCC) WILL CONDUCT A PUBLIC HEARING (ADOPTION HEARING) TO CONSIDER REQUESTED LARGE SCALE AMENDMENTS TO THE SEMINOLE COUNTY COMPREHENSIVE PLAN. Lobby reform up for revision

WASHINGTON — After filibustering a Democratic lobby reform bill to death before the midterm elections, Senate Republicans intend to revise the measure and push for passage early in 1995.

GOP officials say their plan is likely to include a virtual ban on gifts for lawmakers.

Democratic officials said Wednesday that Senate GOP leader Bob Dole had mentioned the bill recently as one that could be agreed on early in the session. And Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said his staff has been drafting a revised bill, working with the American Civil Liberties Union to change some provisions that prompted objections earlier this year.

McConnell said he plans a "new lobby bill which hopefully will not interfere with a citizen's right to petition Congress. At the very least we don't want to have a chilling effect on the rights of people."

It's Christmas in Washington

WASHINGTON — Santa Claus settled his fleece-trimmed red cap on the head of a homeless boy as President Clinton sang carols with soul singer Aretha Franklin to salute the 71st annual lighting of the National Christmas Tree.

But the president delegated the throwing of the switch Wednesday night to his 14-year-old daughter, Chelsea.

Her effort successfully lit 10,000 bulbs on the live, 40-foot tall Colorado spruce as the audience and her parents applauded.

Clinton told the crowd and a television audience that the tree "is a symbol of the enduring values of our lives."

"As we light it, let it re-ignite in our hearts faith and hope and love for one another," he said, standing on a stage on the grassy Ellipse south of the floodlit White House.

FAA explains planes' de-icing

WASHINGTON — If the sight of airport workers spraying chemicals on your plane caught your eye, welcome to de-icing season.

It's the time of year when airport crews wage war with ice — and when icing is a constant concern for airlines and passengers alike — the season of cold snaps, freezing rain and blowing snow.

But the Federal Aviation Administration, the agency charged with keeping the skies safe for aircraft, is coming forth with words of reassurance. Travelers going through America's cold weather airports will likely see pilots and ground crew checking closely for ice at this time of year, it says.

Crews will make liberal use of de-icing fluids, the FAA's Lt. Nebbett said Wednesday.

Will most backaches go away?

WASHINGTON — Most people stricken by sudden, painful episodes of low back pain don't need surgery or even expensive diagnostic tests, a government-backed panel of experts said today.

The problem will go away spontaneously for 90 percent of sufferers within four weeks, the experts said.

In the meantime, the best advice is to spend no more than two or three days in bed, take over-the-counter painkillers and start moderate exercise as soon as possible, the new guidelines from the U.S. Agency for Health Care Policy and Research recommend.

The guidelines do not address chronic back problems, defined as lasting longer than three months.

improvements. As a result, monthly federal disbursements to some 600 eligible children in Seminole and Orange Counties were increased by $100,000 beyond department goals. David A. Trusby, counselor, and William J. Ratay, supervisor, both of the Children and Families Program, were honored in a ceremony in Lake Buena Vista this morning. Also honored with a $600 gift and certificate were the six-person court administration staff of the 18th Judicial Circuit in Melbourne, Fla. The judicial circuit includes Seminole and Brevard County. The six-person team saved more than $140,000 by reducing expenses and reducing staff by two people. Courthouse halls decked SANFORD — A virtual forest has sprouted from ceilings all over the fourth floor offices and hallways of the Seminole County Courthouse. Employees have been hard at work in their off duty hours, making and hanging the paper pine trees decorated in a rainbow of glitter.

The workers have decked the halls with the art work to brighten the offices during the Christmas season. The clerks are having an open house late this afternoon for courthouse workers.

Holiday tree lighting

LONGWOOD — The holiday spirit will fill the air Dec. 10 as Santa Claus arrives with candy for the children at the second annual Longwood Festival Holiday Tree Lighting.

The event at the corner of Warren and Wilma Streets begins at 4 p.m. and culminates with the tree lighting at 6 p.m. Visitors will then have the opportunity to walk around and shop in the historic district.

Parks and Recreation Director Sandy Lomax noted all donations from the event will go to needy Longwood children.

Kicking off the activities, children can decorate cookies and make a holiday ornament. Entertainment will be provided by the Lyman High School Choir, Showtime Dance Studio, Girl Scouts singing Christmas carols, and the Christ Episcopal Church Choir. Santa is scheduled to arrive at 5:15 p.m.

There will be a thrift shop featuring "Santa's Grab Bag Shop" to help stretch the holiday budget, a bake sale and cake walk going on during the late afternoon. Information about donations for the thrift shop, which will operate Dec. 10 and 11, can be obtained from Pat Smith 831-6175. For more information about the tree lighting call 260-3447.

Correction

The report on the Sanford city elections Wednesday, Dec. 7, erroneously stated that City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan said he identified Ricky Shafer as having gone into the polling place during Tuesday's election. This was incorrect. McClanahan said he saw Steve Yancey entering the polling place during the voting process. The Herald apologizes for this error.

Correction

In a recent story about the revival of the Miss Sanford pageant, there was some erroneous information.

The Dec. 20 SHDWA function at which Miss Florida Megan Welch will appear, will take place at 5:30 p.m. in the Colonial Room Restaurant on First Street. The Jan. 6 orientation program will take place at the Studio on First Street in Sanford.

We regret any inconvenience this error may have caused.

Nation's first gun court smoking

By TIM WHITMIRE
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The nation's first Gun Court is smoking.

Run by a judge whose nickname is "Maximum John" and supported even by the National Rifle Association, the four-month-old court has sent half of the offenders that have come before it to jail.

Mayor Vincent Cianci sees that as a marked improvement. He first pushed for the court after learning of a study that said less than 25 percent of people charged with gun-related crimes in Providence last year went to jail.

"The same people who committed crimes with guns were still on the streets," Cianci said. "We decided we would speed and tighten up the process."

Other states are closely watching the two-year experiment.

"If Providence pulls this off others will look at it," said Sgt. Robert O'Toole, a Boston police spokesman. "We don't mind plagiarizing in this business."

Established by the state legislature at Cianci's urging, Gun Court hears cases from the two Rhode Island counties with the most gun-related crime, Providence and Bristol. The court is required by law to hear cases within 4½ months; it can take years for cases to be heard in regular state courts.

The city of Providence pays the $300,000 a year it takes to run the court. The NRA contributed another $10,000 for publicity, including a billboard on the edge of town. Cianci hopes the legislature will establish a statewide version of the court — and pay for it.

State Attorney General Jeffrey Pine says the court gets violent criminals off the street quicker. NRA board member Donn DiBiasi, a Providence gun store owner who also heads the Rhode Island State Rifle and Revolver Association, says it's "an innovative concept."

"It's not the firearm itself that's the problem, it's the misuse of the firearm," DiBiasi said.

But some defense attorneys claim gun suspects are being unfairly singled out.

"I think the only thing to say about it is it's a knee-jerk reaction to some of the things that are happening on the street," said Richard Casparian, the state's chief public defender. "Sexual assault, domestic assault, child molestation and other violent crimes aren't given that kind of a priority."

Presiding over Gun Court is Superior Court Judge "Maximum John" Bourcier, a Providence native who got his nickname from lawyers during more than 20 years on the bench. He's assisted by another judge, Joseph Rodgers.

Wary of Bourcier's reputation, many defendants plead no contest rather than risk a trial. The judge then hits them with one of the state's mandatory sentences: three to 10 years for carrying a weapon while committing a violent crime; two to 10 years for violent criminals who carry a firearm; one to five years for stealing a gun; one to 10 years for carrying a gun without a license.

Since the court opened in September, Bourcier has settled 24 of 88 pending cases. Thirteen defendants were sentenced to jail; another six received suspended sentences or probation.

"I'm a marshmallow, to tell you the truth, but I give some heavy sentences," Bourcier said.

He dismisses criticism of his court as coming only from criminals. "That's the surest sign of success," he said.

Providence, population 160,000, is no hotbed of crime. Police say that since 1990, overall crime is down 18 percent and gun-related crime has decreased 35 percent.

Cianci predicted Gun Court will decrease those figures even more.

"You're going to see a marked decline in gun crimes in Providence," the mayor said Wednesday. "The word is out: If you use a gun — in my city, you're going to go to jail fast."

Clinton signs GATT legislation

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton signed legislation today that authorizes the United States to join with 123 other nations in the most sweeping trade agreement in history, declaring that "American can lead in the 21st century."

Clinton said that the 22,000-page agreement that cuts global tariffs by 38 percent and knocks down other barriers to trade was a victory for American workers because it would expand markets for U.S. products and services.

The president signed the implementing legislation in the ornate hall of the Organization of American States. Clinton was flanked by members of his administration and outgoing House Speaker Tom Foley and Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, whose support was crucial in the final days in winning congressional passage.

Clinton's signature means that almost 40 countries have now approved the agreement and another 40 are expected to do so before the end of this year. The GATT accord, which sets up a new, more powerful World Trade Organization to police trade disputes, is scheduled to go into effect on Jan. 1.

The House and Senate passed the legislation by lopsided margins in a rare lame-duck session of Congress that had been forced on the administration by opponents who fought up to the end against the pact, warning that the WTO represented an unprecedented infringement on American sovereignty.

Opponents also charged that the GATT, by lowering U.S. barriers to trade, would make American workers more vulnerable to low-wage workers in other countries.

In his remarks, Clinton sought to address these middle-class anxieties, which polls showed played a major role in the huge losses Democrats suffered in the November elections.

"It is true that one of the reasons for stagnant wages is intense competition in our markets and other markets by people who work for wages our people can't live on," Clinton said.

But he said this competition is occurring anyway and America must seek to expand its own markets through agreements such as GATT and the North American Free Trade Agreement and an accord he is set to strike this weekend with 33 other leaders of this hemisphere to expand NAFTA.

"We will never restore stability to the workers of our country until we have more folks buying what we sell," Clinton said.

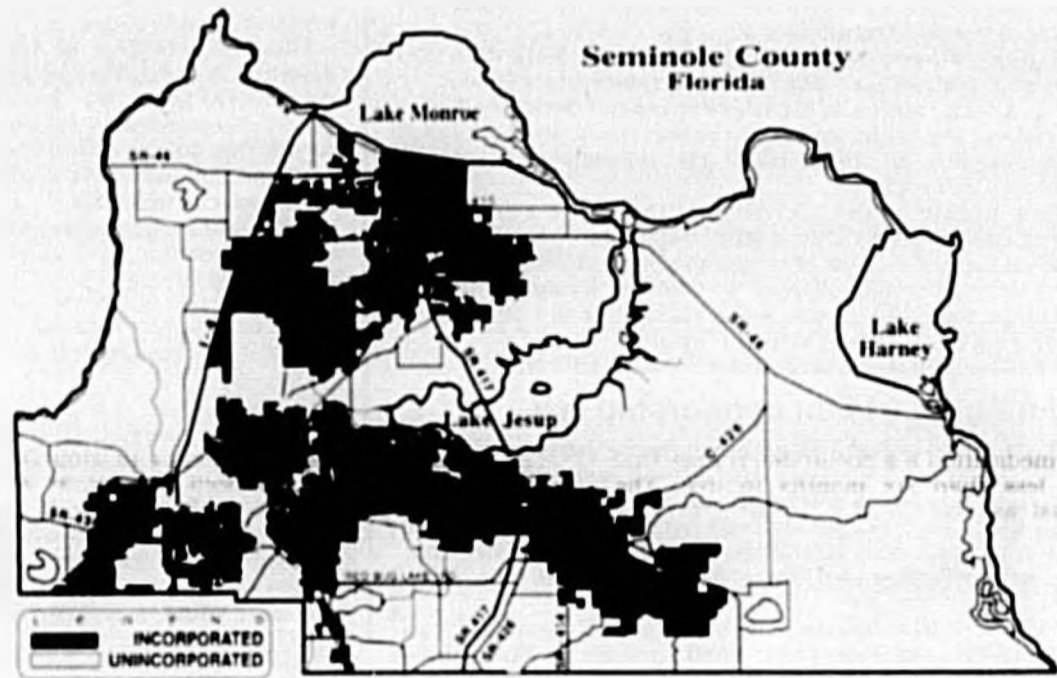

He said GATT was a "victory for the idea that America can lead in the 21st century. That we need not fear competition."

Opponents charged that the new powerful WTO represented an unprecedented infringement on U.S. sovereignty and have vowed to press forward with their efforts to get the United States to withdraw from the organization as soon as possible.

Consumer activist Ralph Nader sent Clinton a letter Wednesday making a last-minute "moral appeal" to the president not to sign the implementing legislation.

NATO speeds plans

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — With 356 peacekeepers still held hostage by Serbs and U.N. operations at a standstill, NATO has speeded up plans to get all U.N. peacekeepers out of Bosnia.

Ambassadors from the 16 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations discussed a preliminary report Wednesday and ordered their military experts to come up with detailed plans by Friday for an eventual withdrawal of the 24,000 peacekeepers in Bosnia.

That operation, which has been studied for months, is looking more and more like a rescue mission. NATO diplomats acknowledged Wednesday it was becoming more likely any U.N. retreat would take place in a hostile environment.

The first to go, according to U.N. plans, would be about 400 of the 1,200 Bangladeshi peacekeepers in the Bihać region — the northwestern pocket where some of the most severe fighting is raging.

Arafat's wife says she's pregnant

GAZA CITY, Gaza — On the eve of his departure for Norway to receive the Nobel Peace Prize, Yasser Arafat learned he'd be getting another prize next year: a new baby.

"The timing is good. It will be the child of peace," his wife, Suha, said today. "I can say it is a double blessing for Abu Ammar, the Nobel Prize and the baby," referring to her husband by his nom de guerre.

Mrs. Arafat, 31, made the revelation in an interview with Israel Radio's Arabic Service. Yula Hadadin, her spokeswoman, said Mrs. Arafat was nine months pregnant.

Dr. Ahmed Taha, an adviser to Arafat as well as his wife's doctor, informed the PLO chief of the news during a meeting Wednesday night.

It will be the first biological child for the 65-year-old Arafat and his wife. They also care for 38 war orphans Arafat brought out of Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon in the 1980s. At least five have been formally adopted by Arafat.

Mrs. Arafat, born to a Westernized Christian family in the West Bank town of Ramallah, was Arafat's secretary before they married in November 1991. The marriage was kept secret for 15 months.

Rescue workers search for bodies

SEOUL, South Korea — Searchers today looked for more victims in the charred debris of a massive fire set off by a natural gas explosion. At least five people were killed and nearly 50 injured in the inferno.

Eleven people were still missing, police said. More than 500 people left homeless spent the night in an elementary school.

The gas tank, buried in a park near central Seoul, exploded Wednesday after inspectors on a routine check for leaks failed to fully secure a valve, state gas officials said after a preliminary investigation.

Flames quickly spread over an area the size of a city block, engulfing 90 homes and several office buildings.

The blast was the latest of recent disasters in South Korea. A major bridge in Seoul collapsed in October, killing 32 people. Three days later, 30 people were killed in a fire that swept through a sightseeing boat south of Seoul.

The tank occupied natural gas to some 830,000 homes.

Legislators cut film censorship law

HONG KONG — Hong Kong is scrapping parts of a movie censorship law that legislators feared could be used by China to restrict freedom after it recovers the British colony in 1997.

Legislators voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to repeal the provision that allowed authorities to cut or ban movies that could "seriously damage" Hong Kong's relations with other countries.

The 1988 law was only used once — to cut 16 minutes from a Taiwanese film portraying the 1989 protests at Tiananmen Square in Beijing, said government spokesman Christopher Yip.

Yip said the government would repeal the provision within a few days.

Legislators, journalists and human rights activists are lobbying the government to revise or repeal a range of rarely used laws they fear could be dusted off and used to restrict freedom after the Chinese takeover in 1997.

Project to 'Help Give Christmas'

By NICK PPRIPAUP
Herald Staff Writer

A project entitled "HELP Give Christmas" is underway in Central Florida. A number of diverse groups are working to help relieve what they see as some of the despair and bleakness of the season for unemployed citizens and their families.

According to Dick Wilson, president of Christian HELP, one government agency, several schools, corporations, professional offices and a teen group are already committed to help support the project.

Two law firms, several churches and individuals, as well as the YMCA Indian Princess Program and employees of the AMSC Company in Altamonte Springs have thus far agreed to adopt families for Christmas.

Adopting a family involves such actions as providing toys for the children, personal items for adults and food for the family's Christmas meal.

Students from the Masters Academy in Longwood, teens from Young Life of Seminole County and employees of the Target Store in Casselberry and Crum & Forster in Maitland are conducting food and toy collection drives for unemployed families which are not adopted.

In addition, the Oviedo Fire Department is providing bicycles, a local toy manufacturer has provided dozens of stuffed toy animals, the New Covenant Assembly Church in Seminole County will be providing Dove Tree gifts for children, and the YMCA group will be making ornaments for Christmas trees.

Twenty unemployed single mothers who are part of "Project Independence," an IRS program at Valencia Community College will be among the many recipients of this program.

"The list is lengthy," said Wilson. "The needs are great." With some 65,000 unemployed in Central Florida, the combined efforts of businesses, churches and individuals will be needed to meet those needs.

For information about "Help Give Christmas," phone the Christian HELP office at 823-4022.

Psychiatrists issue guidelines to fight manic-depression

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Susan Dime-Meenan became so frenzied that her weight dropped to 68 pounds, she spent $27,000 in a week on clothing and she flew from Chicago to Los Angeles 33 times just for lunch.

She's the first to admit that's not rational behavior. It's a disease. And now the American Psychiatric Association is giving doctors their first solid advice on how to help such patients regain control of their lives.

"If these guidelines are not followed as a minimum by your doctor... then it's time to change doctors," said Dime-Meenan, executive director of the National Depressive and Manic Depressive Association.

Manic depression, or bipolar disorder, is a debilitating illness characterized by bizarre "manic" episodes in which patients become euphoric and perform frenzied, often irrational activities with little sleep.

Such episodes can last weeks or even months, and then are followed by severe depression. In fact, one of five manic-depressive patients commits suicide, said Dr. Robert Hirschfeld of the University of Texas.

Some patients cycle rapidly between the two extremes while others go years between episodes. Bipolar disorder generally strikes before age 35, with the first symptoms usually appearing in adolescence, when they're often mistaken for drug use or general teenage "wildness," Hirschfeld said.

There are treatments, but many patients are either undiagnosed or undertreated, Dime-Meenan said. "We all feel hopeless and helpless."

So the psychiatric association spent two years developing the first medical guidelines to reduce the frequency, severity and psychosocial consequences of episodes.

"Although there is no cure for bipolar disorder, up to 80 percent of patients with this illness will improve significantly with appropriate treatment," said Hirschfeld, who co-wrote the guidelines.

Among the recommendations: — Long-term psychiatric care is a must, allowing doctors to spot mental changes that require treatment alteration and allowing the patient to recognize when a spell is imminent. Dime-Meenan, for example, has auditory hallucinations and difficulty sleeping for three days before a manic episode, allowing her to call her doctor for drugs to minimize the coming spell.

—Psychiatric care should be structured to help patients cope with the strain manic depression wreaks on marriages and jobs, and it could teach patients to restrain embarrassing behavior during episodes.

—Patients may benefit from regular daily patterns, particularly sleeping.

—Lithium helps four out of five patients by preventing manic-depressive episodes and calming the mood instability many patients suffer even between episodes.

—Two under-used mood stabilizers, valproate and carbamazepine, appear as effective as lithium in most cases and should be considered as first-line treatment over lithium for certain patients.

Jobless claims up

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR.
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON — The number of first-time claims for state unemployment benefits was up 6,000 last week as the hiring indicator continued its weekly roller coaster ride.

The Labor Department reported today that initial jobless claims totaled a seasonally adjusted $22,000 in the week ended Dec. 3, up from a revised 216,000 the previous week. The figure for the week ended Nov. 26 was initially placed at 317,000.

Most economists expected an increase because the previous week included the Thanksgiving holiday and there were fewer days to file.

Initial claims have been up and down over the last six weeks and, indeed, for most of the year, with the longest streak of declines this year coming during the four weekly reporting periods in September.

The Labor Department reported that its four-week moving average of initial claims was down 2,750, a substantial change in an indicator that tends to show more modest movement. The average dropped to 323,000 from 325,750, the biggest decline since Oct. 1.

Because it smooths out the weekly bumps and dips, analysts consider the four-week moving average a better indicator of hiring trends than the initial claims figure. The monthly employment report is the most watched hiring indicator.

Twelve states and territories reported increases in the number of initial claims for the week ended Nov. 20, while 41 states reported decreases.

Unbeaten Lyman posts eighth shutout victory

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Scoring two goals in the first couple of minutes of the second half, the undefeated Lyman Greyhound boys' soccer team cruised to its 10th win of the season Wednesday night, beating the Oviedo Lions 3-0 at the Carlton Henley Athletic Complex.

Next up for Lyman (1-0 in the Seminole Athletic Conference) is a second showdown with Lake Mary Friday night.

"It's a big game Friday night," said Lyman coach Ray Sandridge. "It's always a big game when we play Lake Mary. Over the last seven to 10 years, both programs have been very successful. It's a great high school soccer rivalry."

Two weeks ago, the teams met in the finals of the Rotary Cup, Lyman beating Lake Mary 1-0.

Lyman got goals from three different players Wednesday. David Kinsley scored first at 17:10 of the first half, heading home a corner kick from Brian Diebler that Cameron Kirkconnell directed toward the back post with his head.

Diebler made it 2-0 when he took a cross from Toby Morris and scored 15 seconds into the second half. Less than two minutes later, Charles Whitmore scored on an assist from Mark Lewis.

That was more than enough offense for freshman goalie Shane LaPlaca, who made five saves to record his 7½ shutout of the season.

Lyman also won Wednesday's junior varsity game, 1-0.

Lake Howell (2-4 overall, 1-2 SAC) hosts Lake Brantley Friday night.

RAMS KNOCK OFF LIONS

LAKE MARY — Sophomore Dustin Garber's goal seven minutes into the second half broke a 1-1 tie Wednesday night, sending the Lake Mary Rams on to a 3-1 win over the Oviedo Lions in Seminole Athletic Conference boys' soccer action.

Lake Mary also won the junior varsity game, 3-1.

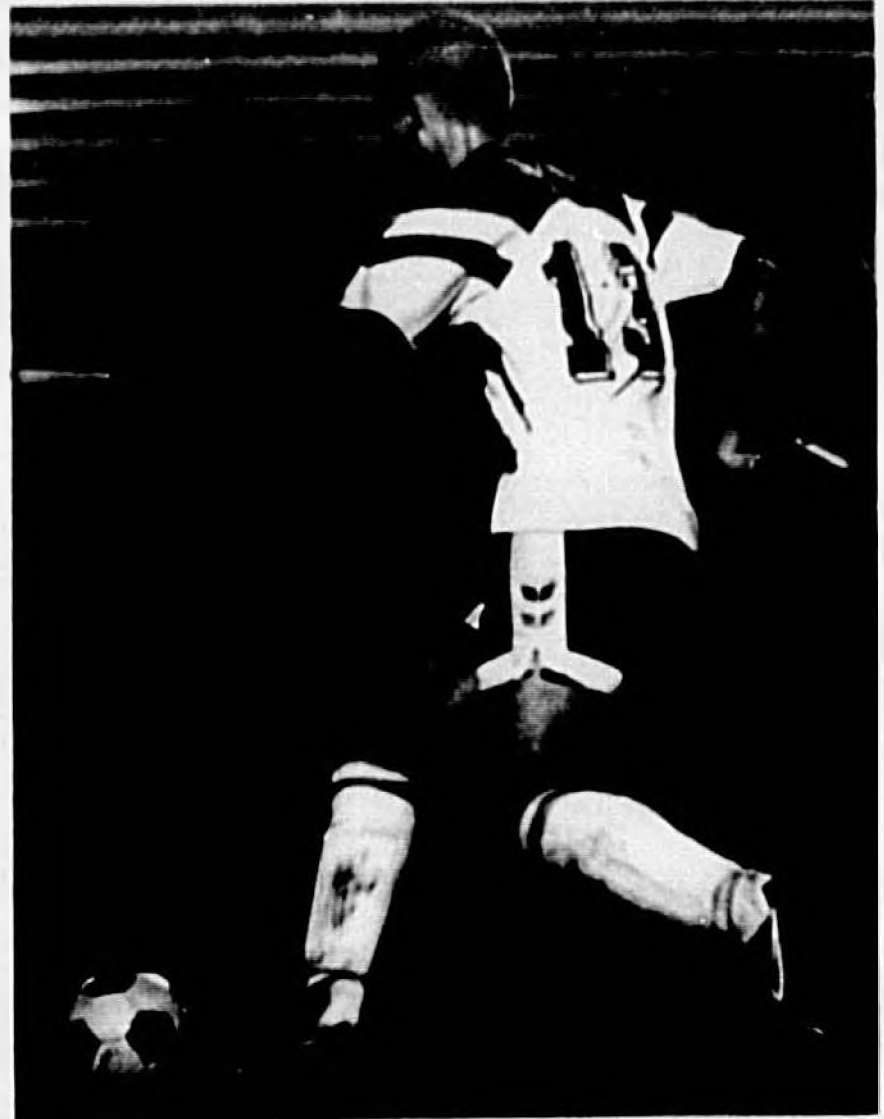

Aren Cook gave the Rams a 1-0 lead with an unassisted goal 13 minutes into the game. Cameron Zarbough equalized for Oviedo in the 43rd minute of the second half. Garber netted the eventual game-winner, on an assist from Ace Delaney, four minutes later.

Jason Pirkey took a pass from Alon Seitan and added an insurance goal in the 52nd minute.

"We were a team with a different attitude," said Lake Mary coach Larry McCorkle. "It woke us up, looking at playing Oviedo and Lyman in the same week."

Oviedo's Scott Thelen was hit with a pair of yellow cards, the second coming in a tussle with Lake Mary goalkeeper Greg Velho that resulted in Velho having to leave the field for a play as the Lions took (and missed) a free kick from the top of the penalty area.

Lake Mary (7-1, 4-0 SAC) hosts Lyman Friday while Oviedo visits Seminole.

Charles Whitmore netted an insurance goal for the undefeated Lyman Greyhounds in their 3-0 win over the Lake Howell Silver Hawks Wednesday when he converted on a pass from Mark Lewis early in the second half.

SANFORD SOFTBALL CHAMPIONS

Collecting the hardware

Ken Rummel Chevrolet's David Goldstick (Thursday Pinehurst League); Randy Rawlings and son Tyler from A.D. Rosier-Florida Sportwear (Thursday Chase); Whelchal and Howard's Vivian Howard (Wednesday); and Jeri O'Brien from Sunniland (Women's).

Young Guns streak to volleyball title

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — That should just about do it.

With one week left in the season, the Young Guns wrapped up the Sanford Recreation Co-ed Power Volleyball League championship with a pair of wins Wednesday night at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium.

The Young Guns won both their matches Wednesday, sweeping Kelly's Team 15-1, 15-9 and coming back from a first-game loss to knock off Bob Jones in a marathon, 12-15, 15-13, 16-14.

Wednesday night's victories extends the Young Guns' winning streak to 18 matches, their one and only loss occurring on Oct. 5, the second night of the season.

Second-place Tim's Team won both of its matches as well Wednesday night, beating Team Beach Scene in straight games, 15-9, 15-11, and outlasting Kelly's Team 13-15, 15-1, 15-4.

Bob Jones won the other two matches of the evening, sweeping past both Kelly's Team, 15-3, 15-8, and Team Beach Scene, 16-14, 15-8, before falling to the Young Guns in the final round of matches.

The Young Guns improve to 21-1 and still have a 4½-game advantage over Tim's Team (16-5). Assuming that the league is playing a 24-game season (giving each team six matches against the other four teams in the circuit), the Young Guns have just two matches remaining and could finish no worse than 21-3 while the best Tim's Team could hope for is 19-5.

Rounding out the standings are Bob Jones (10-12), Team Beach Scene (5-16), and Kelly's Team (2-20).

Rams begin quest with thrashing of DeLand

From Staff Reports

DELAND — It was like watching a pattern of dominos — once one fell, they all started to fall.

Collecting eight pins, three technical falls, and a forfeit in 14 weight classes, the Lake Mary Rams tipped the host DeLand Bulldogs 72-3 in a Class 6A varsity wrestling match Wednesday night.

DeLand was penalized a team point late in the match for unsportsmanlike conduct.

According to Coach Doug Peters, the one-sided affair provided a very important starting point for several of the Rams' newest members.

"This was a good tuneup," said Peters. "It's been 13½ weeks since the last time we wrestled."

"It was good to see some of the new kids, like Jamall Lilly at 171 pounds, Jeff Norton (189), Danny Johnson (heavyweight), and Robbie Drake (103), come out and wrestle well. For some of them, it was their first win. And if we're going to be a great team, we're going to need those kids to come through for us."

That's what Peters is shooting for, the 1994-95 Rams being a great team. And the only available measuring stick is how competitive you are on the state level.

"We've talked about that," confirmed Peters. "We want to be competitive with the best teams in the state. That's what we're after."

At one point Wednesday night, the Rams ripped off five consecutive pins, starting with Brian Yang at 119 pounds and capped by Joe Collins sticking his opponent in 18 seconds at 140 pounds.

Ben Crawford (130), Nate Mitchell (135), and Johnson also notched first period pins while Drake and Greg Clayton (125) nailed their opponents in the second period. Lilly recorded a pin with three seconds left in the third period.

Rich Bradley (112), Brad Harris (145), and Travis Crawford (152) each scored a technical fall.

Lake Mary (2-0) wrestles at New Smyrna Beach Friday night.

Donations needed for holiday wish list

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Seminole Ornament Society, a group of local business and community members who provide gifts for the needy during the holidays has been inundated with gift requests from needy organizations this holiday season. Currently, they have more than 1,000 needy children, handicapped people, and elderly shut-ins on their list and only 500 people volunteering to purchase gifts.

A Wish List Hot Line has been set up to take gift or monetary donations from any member of the community who would like to make the holidays brighter for the many disadvantaged people to the community, who would otherwise receive nothing for Christmas. All gifts are limited to $15. Interested participants should call SOS Wish List Hot Line at (407)882-7858 to select a "wished for" gift from their wish list.

The Leo Zeolas celebrate golden anniversary

By MARY ROWELL
Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY — Dec. 16, 1944. Americans were facing their fourth Christmas with war coloring their lives. The Germans broke through Allied defenses at the Battle of the Bulge. Big Band music was on the radio. And in Los Angeles, Calif., Leo Zeola and Marjorie Elizabeth Newman of Sanford were married.

Leo, a Navy ensign who had just received his naval aviator wings a few months before, first dated Marjorie at a Valentine's Day Dance at the Naval Air Station in Sanford. Leo was supposed to be playing with the band that night, but he told the boys he was taking a date instead. After Leo completed his operational training in Sanford, he was assigned as a fighter pilot to the Pacific-based escort aircraft carrier USS Gambier Bay. Leo and Marjorie kept in touch with letters. Leo even proposed by mail. The two decided to get married as soon as Leo was back in the states.

Oct. 23, 1944, the Battle of Leyte Gulf began. It was the largest naval battle in the history of warfare. On Oct. 25, the USS Gambier Bay, Leo's ship, was sunk. Marjorie heard about the battle; she even knew Leo's ship had gone down. But since Leo was a pilot, she thought he was safe, in his plane. The USS Gambier Bay had three more pilots than she had planes. Leo was one of the pilots left on the ship.

Leo and the other survivors spent 48 hours in the water. After rescue, they were taken to New Guinea and on Dec. 4, Leo arrived in San Francisco.

As soon as Marjorie heard Leo was on U.S. soil, she and her mother boarded the train in Sanford and headed for Los Angeles. It was a five-day train trip.

After being processed, Leo left San Francisco for Los Angeles with 30 days survivor leave. He and Marjorie were married Saturday, Dec. 16, and honeymooned in Hollywood. After 32 1/2 years in the Navy, Leo retired as a captain. He and Marjorie decided to return to Seminole County, Marjorie's birthplace.

On Friday, Dec. 2, Leo and Marjorie Zeola celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at Timacuan Country Club in Lake Mary. They were joined at the golden anniversary celebration by their son John and his wife Gayle, and John's sons Eric and Michael and Gayle's son, Robbie; daughter

Leo and Marjorie Zeola

Karen McBea and her son Thomas; Leo's mother Lenore Corsaro; and Marjorie's brother, Allen, and his wife, Katherine. Other family members were in attendance as well as many close friends.

Among the military guests were several with whom Leo served while in the Navy. Doug Deane of Tucson, Ariz.; Charles Westbrook of Menlo Park, Calif.; Jack Turner of Denver, Colo.; Grover Andrews of Palm City, Fla.; and one of Leo's former commanding officers, John Coonan of Jacksonville Beach.

After a delightful dinner, the happy couple and their guests danced to the big band music of the 1940s by Don Ferron and the Deltonans. Leo even sat in with the band for a few tunes.

Poem helps woman feel whole

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing one of your columns that helped me enormously in 1986. It might help other women if you rerun it. I enjoy your column.

Gloria L. Jamesburg, N.J.

DEAR GLORIA: At the risk of ranking those who dislike reruns, here it is.

DEAR ABBY: In recent years, we hear of more and more women who, through cancer surgery, have lost one or both breasts.

Some women are devastated. Some married women fear that their husbands will think they are ugly — and may leave them. Some unmarried women fear that no man will want to marry them.

I'd like to share something my mom received from my dad after she had a mastectomy. Maybe some husband can use it to reassure his wife, or some wife will realize that real love is not diminished with the loss of a body part.

KAY HUNT

WOULD YOU LOVE ME LESS?

If I lost a toe, would you love me less?

If I lost a foot, would you love me less?

If I lost a leg, would you love me less?

If I lost a finger, would you love me less?

If I lost an arm, would you love me less?

If I lost an ear, an eye, an appendix, a gall bladder, my hair, etc.

To you, would I still be me?

Of course! And you are still you to me.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

And how I thank God for just you!

Pieces and parts
Might have to depart
But you and me,
Will always be.

DEAR ABBY: I am a

34-year-old married man who would never dream of cheating on my wife, however, lately I have become hooked on computer "chat lines" where one can communicate with people from all over the country.

I have been in contact with a young woman in Miami (computer only — no telephone, no mail). In recent weeks, our conversations have become very sexually explicit. (This is known as "computer sex.")

Abby, in your opinion, am I being unfaithful to my wife — or just indulging in some harmless fun? Please bear in mind that there is no way to verify that the person you are chatting with on one of these lines is who she says she is (name, age, gender, etc.) You may be chatting with a 95-year-old grandfather.

CURIOS IN SEATTLE

DEAR CURIOUS: "Computer sex," as you describe it, is not harmless — particularly if your curiosity causes you to decide to meet your computer sex partner. Then it could become hazardous to your health, your marriage — and possibly to your computer if your wife catches you!

WORTH REMEMBERING: "A good conversationalist is not one who remembers what was said, but says what someone wants to remember."

Number of elderly poor declines slightly

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The ranks of the nation's elderly poor, after growing for three years, appear to have shrunk slightly last year while the overall poverty rate held steady at a 10-year high.

The Census Bureau reports that while the national rate remained statistically unchanged at 15.1 percent, the number of poor persons 65 years and older dipped to 12.2 percent in 1993 from 12.9 percent a year earlier.

If so, that would mean 3.8 million of the 30.8 million older Americans lived in poverty last year, down from 3.9 million in 1992.

But, cautioned Kathleen Short, chief of the bureau's Poverty and Wealth Statistics Branch, part of the decline is "a statistical anomaly" due to a change in collecting information such as Social Security income.

"The data shows a decline, but we have to attribute at least some of that decline to the way we obtained the information," Ms. Short explained in an interview.

"There's no way to say whether it went up or down," she added. "Comparing this year's data with last year's data has to be done with great care because of the change in the collection process."

The government defines elderly poverty as an income of $6,930 or less for a single person, or $8,740 for a couple.

The poverty rate for older people, after dropping through the 1980s to 11.4 percent in 1989, had risen to 12.2 percent in 1990 and to 12.4 percent in 1991.

The figures will be included in a report, "Income, Poverty and Valuation of Noncash Benefits, 1993," scheduled for publication late this year. Excerpts were released recently.

Overall, the number of Americans living in poverty totaled 39.3 million of the U.S. population of 259.2 million in 1993, 1.3 million more than in 1992. It was the most since 39.6 million

["The data shows a decline, but we have to attribute at least some of that decline to the way we obtained the information."]

- Kathleen Short

in 1992, when the rate was 21.9 percent of the U.S. population of 181.3 million.

The national poverty level dropped after the 1981-82 recession until reaching 11.5 million in 1989. But it began to rise in 1989 as the 1990-91 recession approached and has been rising since then.

In fact, the number of poor has increased by 6.9 million since 1989 and the poverty rate has risen from 13.1 percent that year to 15.1 percent in 1993, highest since 15.2 percent in 1983.

Poverty for the general population is defined as an income of $14,763 or less for a family of four.

Half of the nation's poor in 1993 were either children under 18 years or the elderly. They accounted for 19.5 million of the 39.3 million poverty population.

But the 12.2 percent poverty rate among the elderly was little more than half the 22.7 percent rate for poor children, who numbered 15.7 million in 1993. It was slightly less than the 12.4 percent rate for poor Americans age 18 to 64, who numbered 19.8 million.

Until 1974, the poverty rate among older Americans typically was higher than that for children. Then, the elderly rate dipped to 14.6 percent while the rate of those under 18 rose to 15.4 percent — and has remained below since then.

While the elderly are underrepresented in the poverty population, children under 18 are vastly overrepresented.

Children represent 40 percent of the poor, but only 27 percent of the total population. The elderly, on the other hand, comprise 9.6 percent of America's poor, and 11.9 percent of the population.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide refreshments. Do not make every person eat. "How much is this?" Probe make for quick, effective sales or a good peace for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $3". Attention to the youngsters, too. Encourage the sale of small, low priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.
11. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, mark them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!

Is affair due to male menopause?

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please comment on male menopause. My otherwise sane, stable, honest, loving husband of many years began an affair at 61. When he ended it, the woman became so enraged that she telephoned and told me everything. She sounded so coarse and vulgar that I couldn't believe he would have anything to do with a woman like that. However, when confronted, he confessed. We got counseling, were tested for AIDS, and went on with our lives. I have since talked to other women whose husbands did the same, or refused to bathe, or eat the food they prepared, became hypochondriacs, bought a sports car, or stood on the street ogling the women, or pawing them at parties. Apparently a man in his 60s can be a very dangerous creature! It's been several years now, but sometimes I look across the dinner table at my husband and wonder who he is, really!

DEAR READER: I appreciate how you feel. You think you know someone and then, after several years, when you're hit with an unpleasant surprise. It seems to me that your husband exhibited behavior that is more commonly associated with "mid-life crisis" than with male menopause. (Anyway, several authorities question the entire concept of male menopause, which is supposed to cause moodiness, hot flashes and lack of sexual interest in men over 60.)

In contrast, mid-life crisis often causes men to get "itchy" after many years of marriage and fidelity. They long to "break out" and recapture some of the passion of their youth. Also, as much as it distresses me to say so, men may become bored with their spouses. Irresponsible, somewhat childish behavior may result.

You are to be congratulated on handling the situation in a rational, mature manner. Many women, given the same judgmental, open communication. You may want to enlist the help of your counselor from time to time to get over rough spots or head off trouble before it starts.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Defending against four spades, Yvette led the heart king. Jack, playing at the top of his game, overtook with the heart ace, cashed the heart queen and continued with the heart six. The declarer, who had thoughtlessly failed to unblock, covered with the seven. Yvette did not hesitate to ruff with her only trump. Declarer overruffed the five with dummy's queen, but now he had to lose a trump trick to Jack's jack. Along with the unavoidable club loser, that resulted in one down.

Jack was delighted. Yvette must be impressed. But just in case she thought leading a losing heart was mundane, he pointed out that the declarer could have made the contract. Instead of overruffing, South should have discarded a low club from the dummy. Then, after drawing trumps, declarer could safely ruff his club loser in the dummy.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 9, 1994

A significant personal goal can be achieved in the year ahead if you are persistent. Do not change your direction just as your goal is within sight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will work better on your own than with others today. Assert your independence and run your own show. Astro-Graph year-ahead predictions make wonderful Christmas stocking stuffers for all signs of the zodiac. Mail $1.25 for each to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state the zodiac sign(s) of your choice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Arrange social activities early in the day because if you wait too long, everyone may have already made other plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A friend might ask something unreasonable of you today. If it goes against your better judgment, don't feel obligated to agree to it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your ego may be very vulnerable today. Try not to take yourself or what anyone says too seriously.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are feeling frustrated today, it may be because you are acting in a negative or rash manner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) When talking with friends today, try not to burden them with your problems. They have troubles of their own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In partnership arrangements today, stick to collective plans. Making changes or revisions on your own could jeopardize success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Teamwork is vital today. Cooperate with others and don't attempt something alone that calls for another pair of hands.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You will do well today as long as things go according to your plan. If you encounter opposition, however, it might overwhelm you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your interests and your mate's might be diametrically opposed today. If this occurs, it will be up to you to find some sort of compromise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Coming on too strong and being too bossy could stir up a small rebellion today. Exercise the tact and diplomacy for which you're famous.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You will enjoy spending time with friends today unless they propose doing something you can't afford. Instead of pretending you can come up with the money, politely decline to participate.
