Alleged Student Victims Have Not Come Forward

Probe Of Teacher Cocaine Sales, Illicit Sex Not Over

By Susan Loden
And Paul Schaefer

"It's not over. Believe me it's not over," Seminole County sheriff's Capt. Roy Hughey said today of the department's 3½-year investigation into allegations some Seminole County teachers have provided marijuana and cocaine to students. There have also been allegations of male teachers having sex with female students.

The state Department of Education has picked up the investigation and Hughey said sheriff's investigators and state investigators are exchanging information on the allegations. Sheriff's investigators have in their years of investigation heard allegations from parents and from school chums of students reputed to be victims, but so far no students claiming to have been victimized have come forward to produce any evidence against any teacher, Hughey said.

Boy, 6 Arrested In Gum Theft

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A 6-year-old's interest in gum and a store manager's willingness to prosecute prompted the arrest of the boy on a charge of shoplifting in Winter Springs a few days ago.

The charge, however, will probably be dropped, authorities said today.

After the arrest Tuesday, the child was transported by an officer to the police station where he was later turned over to his parents. Since the store manager wanted to prosecute, the officer filled out the necessary forms and sent them off to the state Division of Health and Rehabilitative Services, the court and the State Attorney's office, according to Winter Springs Police Chief John Goporuhk.

"If you're old enough to steal, you're old enough to face the consequences," said 7-Eleven store manager Duane Reichert. He said he did not like the idea of having the boy arrested but he "had to draw the line someplace."

He said his store loses about $1,000 a month to shoplifters and had about 20 trespass warnings issued last month to trouble-making kids.

If the charges are not dropped, the boy, his parents and a store representative will probably meet with an arbitrator from HRS who will determine what happened, if the boy or the family has a problem, and what punishment or action should be taken, Goporuhk said.

The State Attorney's office, juvenile division, has not received the case's paper work, a spokesman said. If the office gets the case, it will probably be sent to HRS.

According to police records and Reichert, around 6 p.m. Tuesday the boy entered the store at Winter Springs Boulevard and Northern Way. He hovered near the candy shelf

Longwood Sued Over Sign Policy

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Longwood Mayor Larry Goldberg and Code Enforcement Officer Ed Rossi have been issued summons in a suit brought against the city by a local businessman in connection with the city's policy regarding temporary signs.

Clarence A. Fisher, who owns Red's TV on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Longwood, who was forced by the city to remove a temporary sign advertising his business, has charged the city, in its enforcement of the sign ordinance, has "insidiously negated the first, fourth, fifth and 14th amendments to the Constitution."

The two officials have been ordered to appear in court at a hearing on May 5.

Goldberg said he has turned over the papers to City Attorney Gerald Korman to attend to and didn't want to comment until he had a chance to sit down with him and discuss the case.

"I think it is something we can all sit down together and work out," Goldberg added.

Sign companies and businesses are expected to be represented at the Monday night meeting in city hall at 7:30 p.m. when the sign regulations are discussed. Sign companies have been contacting local businesses to organize protest against ordinance. Korman has been researching the constitutionality of Longwood's sign ordinance and is due to report.

Lecanne M. Stephens, president of Arrow Rent-a-Sign, wrote the city attorney last month protesting the revised city policy on temporary signs. She stated that the strict interpretation of the sign ordinance has already been struck down by a federal court ruling in a 1983 case against the city of Orlando.

Korman told the commission at the March 17 meeting he did not want to make a finding at that point, but "on the surface, it appears that the revised policy is a violation" and he would investigate. Korman said the courts have held that you can't treat temporary signs any differently than permanent signs.

The ordinance was formerly interpreted to mean temporary signs could be up for 90 days and had to be removed for 90 days before they could be used again by the same business. Which meant businesses in centers could take turns using the signs. Under the stricter enforcement, the regulation is being applied to the entire shopping center, which businessmen say is working a hardship on them.

Arab Woman Identified As Plane Bomber

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Airline and security officials today traced the Mediterranean trail of an Arab woman suspected of slipping a bomb aboard the Trans World Airlines jetliner that exploded over Greece, killing four Americans, and then vanishing in Lebanon.

Authorities in Italy, Greece, Egypt and Lebanon identified the mysterious terrorist suspected in the bombing of the TWA jetliner Wednesday as May Elias Mansour, a Palestinian born in the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli.

A pro-Libyan Palestinian terrorist group called the Arab Revolutionary Cells claimed responsibility for the bombing. Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy denied involvement but U.S. officials consider him a suspect.

Authorities in Athens, Rome and Cairo said Mansour boarded the TWA jet in Cairo for a flight to Athens and Rome earlier Wednesday. Before leaving the jet, Mansour planted the bomb, hidden in carry-on luggage, under a seat in Row 10, in-

Waste Treatment Offer Seen Uninviting

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford is moving toward ruling out Seminole County's offer to treat city wastewater at Yankee Lake.

At Monday's work session, city commissioners offered no objections when staff recommended the city award more than $2 million in contracts for rehabilitation of Sanford's Poplar Avenue sewage plant. If the contract awards are granted formal approval at the commission's April 14 meeting, the move would rule out the city's seeking treatment of its wastewater at the county's proposed Yankee Lake facility, according to City Planning and Engineering Director Bill Simmons.

The bid awards have no bearing on determinations regarding Sanford's possibly seeking wastewater disposal capacity at the Yankee Lake site, Simmons said.

He added, however, Sanford prefers securing a more "economically viable" disposal site than Yankee Lake, a sentiment city commissioners are expressing as well.

Until the city locates such a site, the state Department of Environmental Regulation will keep certain wastewater project grants from Sanford, according to DER Wastewater Management and Grants Chief Dick Smith.

This is being demonstrated in regard to the plant rehabilitation bids discussed by commissioners at Monday's work session. The bids total $2,186,176, with $820,922 eligible for refunding to the city through DER grants, Simmons said.

However, "until the site acquisition issue is resolved," the DER will only give Sanford $17,686 in grant awards, Smith said. The DER is also the agency which mandated the city to rehabilitate its sewage program and cease disposing wastewater in Lake Monroe through the implementation of a land disposal system.

City commissioners began turning away from Yankee Lake as the site to comply with the land edict last week, following the dismissal of Sanford's condemnation attempt to acquire the land from the county, as well as the county's discussion of projected costs for the city to dispose effluent at the property.

The DER has offered to assist the city in locating a Yankee Lake alternative to meet the disposal requirement, which would, in turn, free the rest of the grant monies, Smith said.

Efforts to achieve this will be undertaken this month, when city and DER representatives survey prospective disposal sites, Simmons said.

The plant construction undertaken through the bid awards, although certainly pointing the city away from utilizing the county's proposed Yankee Lake sewage treatment facility, would not prevent Sanford, if it desired, from turning to Yankee Lake to dispose its effluent, according to Simmons. He said the city plant construction could be expanded upon to bring it up to advance waste treatment capabilities, which produce the only type of effluent the county has said it will dispose at Yankee Lake.

Modifications to the Poplar Avenue sewage plant "would be required under any condition, other than if the city were to decide to utilize the full treatment services" of the county's Yankee Lake wastewater project.

Khadafy: Just A 'Lonely Poet'

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, in an interview published in a West German magazine, says he has a passion for writing poetry and likes to listen to classical music, particularly Beethoven. Khadafy also described himself as a lonely poet who cries from time to time in private.

Birgit Wolf, a reporter for the magazine Bunte, said Khadafy appeared introverted and inhibited during the interview, in sharp contrast to his public outspoken appearance.

Khadafy discussed his views on marriage and his private life in a chat in his Bedouin tent outside Benghazi, Libya. Khadafy said he enjoys classical music, especially Beethoven, and his favorite book is Harriet Beecher Stowe's anti-slavery novel "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

When asked if he ever cries, Wolf said, Khadafy seemed embarrassed.

"It happens from time to time," he said, "but only when I am alone."

Khadafy listed his passions as horseback riding, hunting and writing poetry.

Although a Muslim, Khadafy believes a man should have only one wife and not four as in many Muslim countries.

"One can only be happy and have a real relationship with one woman," he said.

Asked the question a man with should have, he said, "The man should have one wife. The most sex he should be allowed by Allah, the should be a woman, but not female's man's equal."

Lake Mary Projects Get Boost

Two construction projects in Lake Mary were boosted as the result of action taken by Lake Mary's city commission at Thursday night's regular commission meeting.

Holy Cross Lutheran Church's request for final site plan review with temporary waivers to the city's Land Development Code for construction of their new church was approved after more than a year of preliminary work, while progress was reportedly possible in developer Larry Dale's effort to pave Evansdale Road, leading to his planned Cardinal Oaks Cove 108 home subdivision on the south side of Big Lake Mary.

Engineers for the city and Rev. Paul Hoyer's new church building at the intersection of Sun Drive and Lake Mary Boulevard resolved stormwater drainage problems, and provisions were made for fire protection of the building until a city water line services the area have been resolved, according to city official Stanley Welling. The church will be protected by a sprinkler system, fed by a water well and pump until city water is available.

Rev. Hoyer has been frustrated in his efforts to begin construction of the new church. Most recently, he attempted to work with other developers in the area on a water line project, including Sun

Bank, and Barnett Bank, which plan nearby offices. "The banks didn't consider the church a developer," Hoyer had earlier said.

Hoyer recently conducted groundbreaking ceremonies at the site, even though the city had not yet approved the project.

But after 16 months, the church has met all the city requirements, and the commission granted approval for the project Thursday night.

Hoyer has been a regular fixture at commission meetings during the past year as he worked to get the project off the ground. Following approval of

Shopping Center Plans Move Ahead

Plans for a shopping center at State Road 46 and Orange Boulevard in north west Seminole County, moved ahead Wednesday when the Seminole County Planning and Zoning Commission recommended approval of the necessary rezoning for the property.

The P&Z unanimously okayed the request by E. Parler Harrison to rezone 2.9 acres, located at the southwest corner of S.R. 46 and Orange Boulevard, west of Interstate-4, from agriculture to retail commercial.

Other rezoning requests approved Wednesday include:

• Joe Baker, 24.2 acres on the west side of C-427, west of Sanford Avenue, from agriculture to planned unit development for industrial and commercial use.

• Mike Hattaway, 23.8 acres east of Sanford Avenue, south of Cardinal Industries, from agriculture to one and two family dwelling district for duplexes.

• Vernon Tice, 1.73 acres on the west side of C-437, at the intersection of Dog Track Road, from agriculture to general commercial and wholesale district.

With only four of its seven members present, the P&Z reached a tie vote on the following requests:

• Charles Gramlin, two lots at the southeast corner of Midway and Granby from single family dwelling district to one and two family dwelling district for a duplex.

• Hagen Homes Inc., 10.2 acres on the north side of C-437, one-half mile west of U.S. 17-92, from agriculture to single family dwelling district for single family homes.

• Booth Malloy, 24 lots at the southwest corner of Carlton

Too Simple For Them?

The U.S. Department of Education is not what one would call a quick study. Since it was established six years ago, this burgeoning federal bureaucracy has poured millions of dollars into educational programs designed to improve student learning. Trouble is, most of these initiatives were crackpot schemes that caused even more confusion in the nation's classrooms.

But the Education Department has finally made the grade with the publication of a 66-page booklet: "What Works: Research About Teaching and Learning." This compilation of 41 truisms is newsworthy only because it took the bureaucrats so long to perceive what most responsible parents and excellent teachers have known all along.

Among the report's common-sense findings: Parents have a profound effect upon their children's education; phonics is the most effective method of teaching reading; students who are good readers do a lot of reading both in and out of school; children who are encouraged to write tend to write well; and superior schools emphasize a core curriculum that includes a steady regimen of homework and memorization.

Not all of the educationists are pleased with this report. It's simply too sensible. The chairman of the department of education administration at the Teachers College of Columbia University, for instance, disagreed with its "specific behavioral view" of teaching. The dean of the Graduate School of Education at Harvard warned that the report does not reflect the needs of disadvantaged children. And several other scholarly detractors have denounced the findings as "simplistic."

These and other academicians have cause to be alarmed. Heretofore, they have had a virtual monopoly on what passed for progressive education in this country. Comes now a report that effectively contradicts many of their muddled theories.

If "What Works" repairs some of the damage done by misguided educators to American public schools during the last two decades, the $120,000 cost for its preparation and distribution will have been well spent.

See-Through Money

The last time the Treasury Department made a major change in the design of U.S. paper currency, it tried shrinking the size of the bills to save on printing costs. That was in 1929, and everyone knows what happened then: the Great Depression. It was just coincidence, of course, but the juxtaposition of events may explain why currency changes since then have been rare and — as in the case of the failed Susan B. Anthony dollar — not particularly popular with the American public.

Now comes the planned introduction next year of "see-through" money — bills with a plastic "security thread" running through them. This time the purpose of the change is to foil would-be amateur counterfeiters tempted to use advanced office copying machines to print up some authentic-looking lunch money during a coffee break.

To prevent such scattered free-lancing, the security thread will appear when real bills are held up to a light. It cannot be copied on duplicating machines. There will also be some tiny, uncopyable lettering on the thread and around the portrait in the center of the bill.

As currency changes go, these will be pretty minimal — just enough to fake out the fakers and hardly enough to bother anyone else. That's probably as it should be. With the world changing at an unsettling clip, Americans deserve the small sense of stability offered by the familiar dollar bill.

Still, we're kind of sorry the folks at Treasury passed up another suggested possibility: to emulate the makers of credit cards and the publishers of the National Geographic by decorating U.S. bills with holograms. What, after all, could create greater confidence in the U.S. dollar than George Washington in 3-D?

BERRY'S WORLD

GEORGE McGOVERN

The U. S.'s Provocative Foreign Policy

John Jay, writing in The Federalist No. 4, observed 200 years ago:

"But the safety of the people of America against dangers from foreign force depends not only on their forbearing to give just causes of war to other nations, but also on their placing and continuing themselves in such a situation as not to invite hostility or insult; for it need not be observed that there are pretended as well as just causes of war."

As one watches the Reagan administration turning up the heat against two little impoverished states, Nicaragua and Libya, it would appear that the cautionary advice of our first chief justice, John Jay, is being ignored.

Libya is headed by Col. Muammar Khadafy, a man once described by the late President Anwar Sadat of Egypt as "a certified lunatic." Khadafy works hard at trying to convince the world that he is a powerful and dangerous man — the world's leading terrorist. Just how powerful he is and how much terror he unleashes beyond his boastful and heated rhetoric is debatable. He especially enjoys baiting the United States — the world's strongest and richest nation. He considers himself an ally of the Soviet Union, but there are times when the Soviets seem uncomfortable with their North African ally.

Given Khadafy's apparent need for international attention, it would seem that the recent fleet exercises ordered by President Reagan in the Gulf of Sidra off Libya's coast played into the Libyan leader's hands. It is not clear just why Reagan ordered three American aircraft carriers into the disputed gulf. One explanation is that the administration was trying to underscore America's commitment to freedom of the seas by defying Khadafy's claim to the Gulf of Sidra.

If that was the reason for the fleet maneuvers, one wonders why it was necessary to dispatch three gigantic carriers to make the point. Also, since the ships have now been withdrawn and Khadafy still insists that the Gulf of Sidra is his, how much has really been accomplished?

It is true that the U.S. naval and air units demonstrated their capacity to sink a couple of small Libyan boats and to hit a missile site. But did anyone ever doubt the superiority of the Sixth Fleet over Libya's meager naval units?

Does it really enhance the prestige and security of the United States to risk lives — to say nothing of enormously expensive naval units — in a provocative exchange with an unstable Third World leader?

While all of this was taking place, the administration charged Nicaraguan forces with invading Honduras and promptly rushed $20 million in military aid to the Honduran government, while airlifting Honduran troops to the Nicaraguan border. It took a day and a half after Washington reported the Nicaraguan invasion before the government of Honduras finally agreed that their territory had been violated. The Honduran president demonstrated the level of his concern by going away on a brief vacation.

It would seem that this is not really a conflict between Nicaragua and Honduras, but another altercation between the contra forces recruited by the CIA to sabotage Managua and the Nicaraguan government.

Mr. Reagan blamed the Nicaraguan attack on the vote of the House of Representatives against further aid to the contra forces. But congressional leaders of both parties have said that they were told just the opposite by administration briefing officials.

WASHINGTON WORLD

Reagan Switches Thinking

By Ira R. Allen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House knows how to get popular support for an issue that baffles most people.

When the president decided to back legislation to cut down the amount that juries can award in liability cases, a senior administration official said what the issue really meant was that the Coney Island roller coaster did not open on Easter Sunday. It couldn't get insurance.

What he called "explosive growth in damage awards" finally got presidential attention in Reagan's acceptance of a Domestic Policy Council report recommending basic changes in federal law.

Perhaps what triggered the White House interest was a news report that a woman had received a nearly $1 million jury award after claiming that a brain scan caused her to lose her psychic powers.

The result of outrageous liability awards has made the court system a lottery for plaintiffs, some of whom get far less than they deserve and many who get far more. The secondary, and even more dangerous, result is that insurance companies are not making policies available to doctors, day care operators, roller coaster owners or city governments.

Although the White House did not specify exactly how the law would be changed, Reagan's acceptance of a federal role in insurance represents a major change in his philosophy.

For decades, congressional liberals have tried and failed to have Congress assert some control over what is an essential monopoly — price-fixing of insurance premiums under the aegis of 50 state regulatory agencies.

Not only is the insurance lobby one of the power houses on Capitol Hill, it had for years found it was just as easy to lobby 50 state legislatures against regulations that might fall under the rubric of "consumer protection."

For decades, Reagan has successfully argued that state governments, not Washington, should regulate business practices.

It is also a fount of his conservative philosophy that businesses should be allowed to prosper or fail based on the free enterprise system.

What the administration is now proposing sounds very much like a bailout of an industry that has fallen on hard times, even though legalized rate-fixing guarantees it a profit.

U.S. Policy On Contras Confusing

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — The United States is clearly not suited to the role of an imperial power along the lines of the Soviet Union or the old British Empire. When Moscow lays down the official line, there are no deviations from the satellites; U.S. client states exercise their right to dissent as vociferously as if they were at a Democratic National Convention.

Last week's dust-up over the reported Nicaraguan invasion of Honduras was an embarrassing case in point. The initial reaction of Honduran leaders was that the invasion was mostly Reagan administration propaganda to win congressional support for the contras.

Only after President Reagan announced emergency aid to Hon-

JULIAN BOND

Contras Contradictions

President Reagan did not take his initial contra aid defeat lying down, although he reportedly prefers the serenity of that posture.

For reasons that seem to elude the average American, Mr. Reagan has asked us to accept on faith that civilization is at the crossroads in Nicaragua.

How can any rational person who has not undergone an ideological lobotomy believe that a U.S.-Soviet Armageddon will be fought on a beachhead the size of New York state?

Maybe an argument can be made for sending $100 million in aid to a seedy little group of 2,500 questionably capable rebels fighting a questionable military campaign. But Ronald Reagan and his fastest court jester in the west, Patrick Buchanan, haven't made it yet.

Instead, the president and Buchanan, whose squeaky voice sounds like it has acne, have been impugning the patriotism of their opponents and rediscovering the indictment, "Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive."

Presidential deceptions are not intentional. Like Topsy, they "jes' grow'd." In his Sunday evening televised jeremiad, Mr. Reagan somberly intoned: "The capital's only synagogue was desecrated and fire-bombed — the entire Jewish community forced to flee Nicaragua."

Not really, contradicted Rabbi Balfour Brickner of New York City's Stephen Wise Free Synagogue. "The synagogue in Managua was abandoned during the fighting in 1978.... The Sandinistas told me they would be happy to give it back, but there is no one to give it to.

There is not a Jewish community in Managua to support a synagogue."

Misstatements (a lovely euphemism for lies) are not the shining exception with Reagan, but the blemished rule. Former President Carter has accused President Reagan of — more than once — misrepresenting the Carter record. Despite a Reagan promise, according to Carter, not to do it again, Reagan persists.

In politics, passion reigns on both sides and the contra aid debate has turned into a strictly partisan issue.

After nine Republican congressmen visited Nicaragua for 20 hours, they returned with their support solidified for the rebels. In a recent column, conservative guru James Kilpatrick hailed Reagan's "convincing case in support of aid" to the contras. However, both perceptions are contradicted by an authoritative report by a former Marine captain and CIA analyst that concluded that the contras are already defeated.

Clearly a majority of the American people reject continued aid to the contras. The rejection is even more emphatic in the black and Hispanic communities with the black and Hispanic members of Congress voting unanimously against aid to the contras. (Minorities always feel more passionate about non-interference in the internal affairs of other nations because they came out of a legacy of so much interference in their lives.)

At first blush, Americans might not get excited about this outlay of $100 million if they weren't being asked to surrender so many other federal programs.

Surgery From The Front

By United Press International

People undergoing back surgery for splintered spines may find themselves on their backs, rather than their stomachs, during the operation, according to a surgeon at Vanderbilt University Medical Center.

Dr. Dan M. Spengler, an orthopedic surgeon at the Nashville hospital, said the frontal approach to back surgery has become more and more common in the last five years because many bone splinters, caused by head-on accidents, are on the front side of the victim.

During the surgery, broken vertebrae fragments that are putting pressure on the spinal cord are removed, said Spengler. The surgery will not help those with severed spinal cords, but can unblock cords that are still functioning, he said.

Spengler said approaching these fragments from the back is difficult without jostling the injured spine. By approaching from the front, being careful not to cut through any body organs, surgeons are able to retrieve the splinters in the lower spine without further damaging it.

Secret elephant talk
In addition to the familiar trumpeting sounds, researchers say elephants apparently can communicate by low rumbling sounds that people cannot hear.

The rumblings may explain how elephants separated by several miles can suddenly mobilize in times of danger without any apparent signal, said biologist Katharine B. Payne of Cornell University.

Payne and other Cornell biologists suspected an inaudible call in the wild because they could feel rumbling sensations in the presence of elephants and had noticed a fluttering movement across the animals' foreheads.

The team recorded Asian elephants in two American zoos and African elephants in Kenya. Both types of pachyderms were found to produce the rumblings when the tapes were analyzed.

The researchers believe the sound may originate in the elephant's vocal cords and resonate from their foreheads. Payne said the rumblings may be part of a "secret channel" elephants use much like a modern day walkie talkie.

And that's why they have floppy ears.

Another sex difference
Men and women differ in their susceptibility to toxic substances, with neither being more resistant overall than the other, according to a researcher at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

"The ideal thing would be to seek the exit of these people from our country," said a Honduran foreign ministry official. "They are hurting us, and that damage is not being compensated by what they are accomplishing. I don't think it's money the (Honduran) government wants. But it would like to be allowed to take more of an initiative. The initiative, for example, to say whether it wants the contras or not."

A Honduran political analyst said: "It's a bad situation for us. We know the Reagan administration isn't going to abandon the contras, but at the same time there is no possibility of the contras throwing out the Sandinistas. For us, it's like being in the middle of a crossfire. We are happy that the contras go and fight the Sandinistas — but inside Nicaragua."

Scholarly Jones To Set 50-Foot Target Tonight

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Alvin Jones established himself as one of the premier triple jumpers in the country last year by winning the 4A state championship and then adding the National Junior Olympics title with a leap of 49-11¾.

Jones had visions of soaring over the 50-foot mark by this time in the 1986 season, but hamstring pulls in both legs have kept the Seminole High senior out of action for a month. Jones, however, is back on the runway now and has reassured his quest for a second state triple jump title.

Although Jones has soared to prominence as a track athlete, it is in the classroom where he does his most impressive work. When talking about Jones the student-athlete, the student comes first and foremost.

Academic honors come as quickly as athletic honors for Jones. His ticket for the future is in academics and it is his intellect more than his athletic ability that can get him into any college in the country.

"Right now, I'm leaning very heavily towards Princeton University," Jones said. "They can't offer athletic scholarships, but I will participate on the track team. If not Princeton, my second choice is Auburn University."

Jones says he plans to major in mechanical engineering in college. Jones comes from a strong academic background as his father, Rev. Amos Jones has a degree in Divinity from Yale University. His mother, Queen E., is a teacher in Seminole County and older sister GERALYN recently got her degree in electrical engineering from the University of Central Florida.

"Alvin's intelligence along with his athletic ability make him very easy to coach," Seminole coach Ken Brauman said. "With his academics and the way he has performed, any college in the nation would love to have him."

While Jones is currently the dominant triple jumper in the state (4A), the injuries hurt him more in the long jump and he will be long jumping for the first time since early in the season tonight at the first Seminole High Invitational, sponsored by the Optimist Club of Sanford. Field events tonight begin at 4, followed by running prelims at 5 and running finals at 7.

"The injuries affect me more in the long jump because it's just one big explosion and puts more strain on the hamstring," Jones said. "I'm still good at it, but not as good as I wanted to be."

Jones is currently tied for the Seminole County lead in the long jump with teammate Joe Holden at 22-4½. But Jones has not long jumped since the early part of the season.

In the triple jump, he has come back strong but has not yet peaked.

"By this time in the season, I wanted to be over 50 feet," Jones said. "Ideally, I'd like to jump a 51-0 as soon as possible. But, because of the hamstring injuries, I can't really sprint down the runway."

With the injuries healed, Jones' speed on the runway won't be what holds him back. What Jones really needs is some competition in the triple jump.

"What has probably held me back from getting it (50-0) is the competition," Jones said. "The more competition I get the better I jump. I only know of one or two more meets this season that I may get to see some good competition and that's state and the Golden South Classic."

Competition was not a problem for Jones a year ago since teammate Leo Peterson was one of the top triple jumpers in the state as well. Brauman said Jones has been at his best when the competition has been good.

"His best jump (49-4½) came at Bob Hayes (in Jacksonville) into a head wind after a kid from Palatka jumped 48-2 to take his lead away from him.

Alvin Jones sets sail on another record-breaking jump.

He's been able to rise to the occasion when he's had to.

"I think by state meet time the competition will have gotten a lot better," Brauman added. "Most of the kids will be peaking. You'll run into some 47, 48 footers with the potential to pop a big one at any time."

Although the hamstring injuries kept him out of competition for a while, Jones said it didn't hurt him as far as practicing goes.

"Ironically, I don't practice the triple jump," Jones said. "I don't practice jumping, period. In the triple jump, once you have the technique, there's not much more you can practice on."

Jones feels he will be at his best when the competition is at its best. And there aren't any formulas or configurations involved when he prepares to hit the runway.

"I just psyche myself up and picture a big jump," he said. "And then I go for it."

LAKE MARY — Mike Schmit, whose is very familiar with the meal ticket role on championship baseball teams, faces his biggest tab during the next few weeks if the Lake Mary Rams hope to satisfy their Seminole Athletic Conference title aspirations.

Coach Allen Tuttle's pitching staff, perhaps at one time the deepest in the state, has been ravaged by injury and ineligibility. Two big names who helped the Rams hold the state's No. 1 ranking for six weeks are gone.

Anthony Laszala, who posted a 5-0 record with a 1.96 earned run average, was seriously injured in an automobile accident March 14 and is lost for the season.

Sean "Flake" Flaherty, who posted a 2-0 record with a 2.10 earned run average, failed two classes and was ruled ineligible Monday. He is also finished for the year.

Which leaves Lake Mary with Schmit, Neal Harris and junior reliever Steve Shakar. Schmit is 7-0. Harris, a tournament-tested veteran at many levels, is 3-1 with a 2.43 ERA but hasn't pitched since he lost to Lake Howell (March 21). Shakar is 1-1 with four saves and a 4.29 ERA.

"I've pitched a lot of innings in previous years," Schmit said. "Sometimes it has bothered me and sometimes it hasn't. Even on two days' rest, I think I can have enough to beat some teams."

Tonight at 8, Schmit gets his first test against a hard-hitting Lake Brantley club. Schmit hurled three innings in a win over Oviedo Wednesday before Tuttle removed him in favor of Shakar.

"The Rams' first priority is the Seminole Athletic Conference. They have a 3-1 record while Lake Howell (4-2) and Oviedo (3-2) are nipping at their heels. "I think you can still lose three games and get a share of the title," Tuttle said. "If we only lose one more, we should win it."

After tonight's clash, Lake Mary has a nonconference game with Mainland at home Saturday. The following week, however, will be Tuttle's toughest juggling act. Lake Mary plays five SAC games in 11 days.

The Rams host Seminole Tuesday, go to Lyman Friday, play a makeup game with Seminole Saturday, battle Lake Howell the following Tuesday and close out the conference race at Oviedo Friday.

"Mentally, it's not tough," Schmit said. "It's just if I can get enough rest and my arm responds. Hopefully, we'll be able to get some big leads like Tuesday (8-0 in the third) and I'll be able to come out."

Pernfors Wins Again, Makes Quarterfinals

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mikael Pernfors, suffering from a cold and an aching body, overcame his ailments Thursday to advance to the quarterfinals at the $279,000 WCT-Atlanta Championships.

Pernfors, who upset his top-seeded Swedish countryman Stefan Edberg in the first round, disposed of Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union in a tightly contested baseline battle. He meets Brian Teacher today in the quarterfinals.

Pernfors, a four-time NCAA champion while playing for the University of Georgia and Seminole Community College, beat Chesnokov 7-5, 7-6 (7-4), in 1 hour and 38 minutes. The 23-year-old Swede said he was pleased with his play despite his attitude toward the match.

"I was in a bad mood coming on the court because I've got a cold and I'm sore," he said. "I had a couple of lapses where I lost my concentration, but I got it back. I made some loose errors, but I didn't do too badly."

Pernfors won the match on his third match point when Chesnokov volleyed his down-the-line passing shot into the net. The 20-year-old Russian had saved two match points with an overhead smash and when the umpire overruled a linesman and called a Pernfors' forehand long.

"I got tired at the end, and he didn't look tired," said Pernfors. "I kind of felt like I would be in trouble if it went to a third set."

Trailing 3-5 in the opening set, Pernfors rallied to win four straight games and the set. He jumped to a 4-2 lead in the second set before Chesnokov won 13 consecutive points to take a 5-4 lead. Both players then held serve in the next three games to send the set into the tie-breaker.

Also advancing to the quarterfinals Thursday were Teacher, Tim Wilkison, David Pate and fourth-seeded Kevin Curren.

Wilkison routed Glenn Michibata of Canada, 6-1, 6-2.

The victory came a day after Wilkison defeated Becker 6-2, 2-6, 6-1, and the Asheville, N.C. native, was pleased to avoid a letdown.

LLOYD TOPS RINALDI

MARCO ISLAND (UPI) — Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd defeated Kathy Rinaldi, 6-1, 6-3. Thursday in the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Tournament of Champions.

The No. 2 seed, West Germany's Claudia Kohde-Kilsch, also advanced, quickly disposing of Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, 6-3, 6-2.

Evert Lloyd entertained the audience with extended rallies. After exchanging a number of ground strokes, Evert Lloyd seemed to use a pattern of a drop shot at the net followed by a lob, concluding with a passing shot that had Rinaldi running all over her side of the court.

"I tried to move her around more and more," said Evert Lloyd.

In Friday's quarterfinals, unseeded Janine Thompson, Australia, plays unseeded Patricia Medrado, Brazil, and fourth seed Bonnie Gadusek faces seventh seed Andrea Temesvari, Hungary.

Many of the players in the tournament are scheduled to begin doubles play Friday in the $250,000 Women's Team Championship, a separate tourney.

Peterson Hears Alarm, Bats Tribe Past Lyman

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Seminole High's Lady Seminoles are making it a habit of leaving a wake up call for the fifth inning. Again Thursday, when the alarm sounded for the fifth, the Lady Seminoles came out swinging.

Sheri Peterson's three-run homer highlighted a five-run fifth inning that lifted the Lady 'Noles to a 7-6 victory over the hard-luck team of the year, Lyman's Lady Greyhounds, in Seminole Athletic Conference action at Fort Mellon Field.

"If we could play the whole game like we do the last few innings, we could beat the (New York) Mets," Seminole coach Lance Abney said. "We can't continue to wait until the late innings to come alive."

The late rally improved Seminole to 6-9 overall and 3-3 in the SAC. The Lady 'Noles have a nonconference game today at Spruce Creek.

Meanwhile, Lyman fell to 4-12 overall and 0-7 in the conference with its 11th consecutive loss. The Lady Greyhounds have lost five conference games by only one run. Lyman returns to action Tuesday at Lake Mary.

The way Lyman started offensively, and Seminole defenensively, it looked like the Lady Greyhounds' losing streak was about to come to a halt. Lyman scored five times in the top of the first and took a 6-1 lead into the bottom of the fifth.

Although they were down, the Lady Seminoles didn't do a nosedive into Lake Monroe. Seminole exploded for five runs on five hits in the bottom of the fifth to tie the score at 6-6, then broke the tie in the bottom of the sixth and held on for the victory.

In the fifth, Bert Detreville and Jackie Suggs hit consecutive singles to start the rally and Peterson then drilled a line drive over the right fielder's head and circled the bases for a three-run homer that brought the Lady Tribe within 6-4. Second baseman Bobbie Osborne followed with a single to center and, with one out, outfielder Buffy Osborne singled and Jackie Farr drew a walk to load the bases.

With two outs, Vikki Oliver bounced a single up the middle to drive in Bobbie Osborne and Buffy Osborne scored the tying run when Showanda Walker reached on an error. It was only the first error of the game for Lyman which had been struggling defensively lately.

After Lyman went down in order in the top of the sixth, Seminole loaded the bases with no outs in the bottom half on singles by Suggs and Peterson and a walk to Bobbie Osborne.

The Lady Greyhounds got two quick outs, but Farr then drew a walk to force in Peterson to give Seminole a 7-6 lead. Dawn Boyesen prevented Seminole from adding to the lead when she made a nice running catch in left center to end the inning.

Seminole turned from the aluminum to leather for the top of the seventh. A excellent dig by first baseman Peterson of a low throw by third baseman Walker got leadoff hitter Gwen LaDuke. Debbie Skirvin then drew a walk but she was forced at second on Jodie Vega's grounder. Kristie Kaiser then drilled a line drive right into the

Commissioner Trims Andujar Suspension Down To 5 Games

Baseball

OAKLAND (UPI) — Fiery righthander Joaquin Andujar will join the Oakland A's five games into the season after baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth cut his 10-game suspension in half.

Andujar, obtained in a trade with the St. Louis Cardinals in the off season, was given the suspension after his tirade against home plate umpire Don Denkinger in the seventh game of last year's World Series.

Andujar had appealed on grounds that the suspension was excessive. Ueberroth, after reviewing the facts, determined Thursday that a five-day suspension was appropriate.

Niekro Joins Indian Wigwam

CHANDLER, Ariz. (UPI) — Cleveland general manager Joe Klein scrambled down the steep steps of Compadre Stadium and shouted at Indians manager Pat Corrales.

The two men laughed and shook hands, and Corrales turned and relayed the message to the players. Cleveland centerfielder Brett Butler whooped, scrambled to his feet and pumped the air with his fist.

The news was out that Phil Niekro had just joined the sore-armed Cleveland Indians pitching staff. "I don't care if he's 47-years-old," said Corrales. "The man can pitch and that's the bottom line. We have a knuckleballer in Tom Candiotti, but now we got the guy who knows everything about it."

Niekro, the oldest player in the major leagues, agreed Thursday to a one-year contract with the Indians. The pact is worth $250,000, but incentives for victories and innings pitched could boost the value to $400,000.

Lake Brantley Uses 14 Walks To Assume First Place In SAC

By Chris Fiater
Herald Sports Writer

Thursday afternoon, Beth Watkins' worst nightmare became a reality. The senior pitcher, a four-year starter on the mound for Lake Mary's Lady Rams, walked 14 batters to enable Lake Brantley's Lady Patriots to claim a 7-1 victory in Seminole Athletic Conference play at Lake Brantley High.

It is accuracy and confidence that has made Watkins one of the top pitchers in the county the past three years, but she just couldn't find the plate no matter how hard she tried Thursday.

"I feel bad for Watkins," Lake Brantley assistant Debbie Frank said. "The wind wasn't bad because Kim (Robinson) only walked one. The problem with her (Watkins) now is all in her head. She just psyched herself out."

The win lifted the Lady Patriots to 21-4 overall and they took over the top spot in the SAC with a 5-1 mark. Lake Howell is second and one-half game back at 4-1. The Lady Rams now stand at 7-10 overall and two games back in the conference at 3-3.

Lake Brantley had just three hits in the game but all three came in a five-run second inning. Laura Davis singled to lead it off and Dawn Gebhart and Mandy Matthesen followed with walks. Sherry Asplen then drew a walk to force in Davis and Gebhart scored when Kim Waln was issued a free pass. With two outs, Tracy Brandenburg laced a single to right to drive in both Asplen and Waln and Deana Jeffers scored the fifth run when Kim Robinson singled.

Lake Mary scored its lone run in the top of the third when Val Smith walked. Reedy Metz scored, both advanced on an error, and Smith scored on another error.

Brantley scored two more runs in the fourth to make it 7-1. The first three hitters all walked and, after a force out at the plate, an error in the outfield enabled both runs to score.

While Brantley managed only three hits in the game, Lake Mary was held to five. Brooke Taylor was 2 for 3.

DELAND TOPS WEAK-HITTING HOWELL

DeLand's Lady Bulldogs scored four runs in the top of the fourth and it turned out to be all they needed as they downed Lake Howell's Lady Silver Hawks, 4-2, in a nonconference game at Lake Howell High.

Three of DeLand's four runs in the fourth inning were unearned and the Lady Bulldogs managed just five hits in the game. Lake Howell had eight hits but could score only single runs in the fourth and seventh frames.

In the fourth, Christy Tibbitts tripled and scored on Ava Gardner's singled and, in the seventh, Julie Barton ripped her eighth triple of the season and scored when Alicia Dinkelacker hit into a double play.

"Barton scored on that play but it really killed any chance for a rally," Lake Howell coach Jo Luciano said.

The Lady Hawks, 12-8 overall, return to Seminole Athletic Conference play today at 3:30 against Oviedo at Red Bug Park. Lake Howell is 4-1 in the SAC.

glove of Walker for the final out. And that was a big out since Denise Stevens, one of the most dangerous and powerful hitters in the county, was waiting on deck.

"Sheri (Peterson) was the player of the game for us today," Abney said. "Her home run got us started in the fifth and she played excellent defense."

Lyman had the momentum for the first five innings with a two-out, five-run rally in the first leading the way. Kaiser got it started with a single to center and Stevens followed with a triple to left center for score Kaiser.

Sabrina Jarrett and Jill Clay followed with walks to load the bases and Lori Helms then looped a single to left to drive in Stevens and Jarrett also scored when the ball was bobbled in the outfield. Two more runs scored when Jennifer Drakes reached on an error to give Lyman a 5-0

Hill Bails Out Hersey, Raiders Nip St. Johns

By Mark Blythe
Special to the Herald

Seminole Community College's Raiders rallied for five runs in the seventh and eighth frames Thursday and received an excellent ninth-inning relief performance from Kevin Hill en route to a 7-6 victory over St. John's River in Mid-Florida Conference play at SCC.

The Raiders, 19-13 overall, improved to 7-3 in the conference and return to action today at Lake City. The Raiders have a big conference matchup Saturday at 2 when they host Florida Junior College.

Behind a solid pitching effort from Sanford's James Hersey, SCC took a 2-1 lead into the top of the seventh. But Hersey began to tire in the latter innings, giving up two-run homers in both the eighth and ninth frames.

Ralph Imbriani's two-run shot off Hersey with one out in the ninth pulled St. John's within 7-6. Hill, a Lake Mary High graduate, then came on in relief and closed the door on St. John's for the save.

"Hill has been a godsend for us the last few weeks," SCC coach Jack Pantelias said. "He has two saves and two wins in his last four games."

Baseball
SCC broke a 2-2 tie with three runs in the bottom of the seventh. Mike Songini dropped a bunt single to lead it off and Jeff Morgan reached on an infield hit. Oviedo's Jeff Greene then lined a triple to left center to chase home both runs and Greene scored when Hill hit into a double play for a 5-2 SCC lead.

Knowing How And When To Water A Lawn Makes A Big Difference

April is generally a dry month in our area, and if you want your lawn to respond to the recent fertilizer application, you'll need to do a little supplemental watering. Even when the heavy rains do come, such precipitation alone won't satisfy turf needs. As your lawn's growth increases, so does its need for moisture.

Unfortunately, our soil, in most instances, doesn't hold moisture very well — this is compounded by rapid evaporation during warm weather. Regular irrigation is essential to maintenance of an attractive lawn — especially during spring and summer. Three things — watering frequency, amount applied and time of application — must be carefully watched if it is going to be effective.

There are several clues to a lawn's need for water. If bluish-gray spots appear in the lawn, and it begins to turn brown, water is needed. If footprints remain in the grass for a long time after you walk on it, water is needed. And if a soil sample taken from the root zone of the grass feels dry and crumbly, water is needed.

The time between waterings will depend to some extent on changes in the environment, such as high temperatures and strong winds, which add to plant water loss to the surrounding air through evaporation.

You'll have to adjust watering frequency to

Alfred Bossen
Urban Horticulturist

Ext. 181

your soil's specific capacity to hold moisture. This will change, depending on the season of the year. In summer, grass may need watering as often as every three or four days, while in winter, it may need water only every two weeks. Too much water can be as bad as too little. Don't water until the signs of need appear. Then, water immediately. Any delay could cause permanent damage.

Watering times and the amount to apply are definitely related. You want to wet the entire root zone without saturating the soil. Light, frequent waterings are inefficient, and too much water is harmful and wasteful. Constant saturation retards root growth. If more water is applied than the soil can absorb, the extra is lost as runoff.

As a rule, apply about one-half to one-inch of water each time. This is roughly 300 to 600 gallons of water for each 1,000 square feet of lawn area. Remember, though, the best amount depends on your specific soil type.

Now that you've got that all figured, you must decide when to water. True, watering during the heat of the day will cool the grass, but this practice wastes water, which is rapidly lost through evaporation. To conserve both water and money, apply water early in the morning, when it is more likely to soak into the soil rather than raise the humidity in the air.

Use common sense. You don't want your grass to die of thirst — yet you don't want to drown it. At each application, supply only enough to wet the root zone without runoff. And don't water again until your lawn shows the need.

Now that you know watering is essential for a nice lawn, next comes the mowing. Mowing is fairly uncomplicated. However, some folks can ruin a lawn in a hurry.

No matter what kind of grass you have, mowing can make or break a lawn. For best appearance, regular mowing is needed. But mowing too low severely weakens the grass plants, and the sod thins out. When you mow too low, too many leaves are lost and the grass is unable to produce enough food to maintain itself. The grass literally starves. When this happens, next come the weeds, insects and other pest problems.

Most of our lawns are Bahia or St. Augustine grass. Close-cutting these will practically destroy them. Generally, these grasses should be cut with a rotary mower with the blade set at three inches high the year around. Keep your blade sharp. Dull blades do a tremendous amount of damage. Avoid mowing the grass when it's wet. Dry grass is easier to cut, and won't clog the mower. And it's wise to use a bag to catch the clippings. If clippings are allowed to build up, they tend to smother the grass, promote thatch problems, and invite insects and diseases to dinner.

Actually, when to mow should be decided based on the amount of growth since the last cutting. Generally, once a week will do it. You should mow often so that not more than one-fourth to one-third of the total leaf surface is removed at each cutting. In other words, leave more than twice as much leaf surface as you cut off. Excessive one-time mowing will shock grass severely, so it's a good practice to mow regularly during the growing season. During the winter, lawn growth is much slower and will need fewer cuttings.

Remember, use common sense. Overwatering is perhaps the greatest problem in maintaining a good lawn. You will leach out all the nutrients, too. Thus, you will need to fertilize more often to compensate for the loss. Let your lawn tell you when to water!

Happy gardening!

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — My 21-month-old son has received cefaclor, erythromycin and amoxicillin for the treatment of otitis media on three separate occasions. He developed an allergic reaction to all three, including a high fever and skin rash with the amoxicillin. Are there any ways of treating bacterial infection in a child who is so allergic? Can drug allergies be outgrown?

DEAR READER — Cefaclor and amoxicillin are related to penicillin; therefore, your son may be cross-reacting to them because of a penicillin allergy. Erythromycin, however, is not related to the penicillins and is considered to be a good substitute drug for penicillin-sensitive individuals. I'm concerned that he appears to be allergic to that, too.

Sulfa can be substituted for the three antibiotics you mention; it may not be as effective, though. Because your son may need antibiotics in the future, I suggest that you ask your pediatrician to refer your son to an allergist who, by special testing, can determine exactly what the child is allergic to. That would be important information to have.

Children often develop rashes during the course of an illness and the rash can confuse doctors and parents into thinking that a drug allergy is the cause. Although children can outgrow allergies, I would not feel comfortable administering an antibiotic to a child whose allergic status is unclear.

DEAR DR. GOTT — A relative has been told by her doctor that she has an embolism in her stomach. He said when it bursts it will kill her. What can I expect when this happens? Will there be time to get to the hospital? Will there be pain?

DEAR READER — I suspect that you misunderstood the doctor. Your relative probably has an aneurysm near the stomach.

The aorta is the major artery supplying blood to the body. It loops up from the heart into the chest and then passes through the diaphragm muscles, past the stomach and into the abdomen. As people age, portions of the

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Since the North-South range for opening one no-trump was 15-17 high-card points, North might have raised to only two no-trump. But he liked his five-card suit and the two 10-spots, so he bid three. South would have accepted a game invitation anyway.

See anything unusual about the play? If declarer plays in a normal way, he will be set. Let him win East's queen of clubs and play a diamond. East will take the king and continue clubs. West will win the next diamond and force out declarer's last club stopper. Finally, when West gets in with the last diamond, he will take two club tricks to set the contract.

What is there to do? Well, all of us have seen play problems where it was right to duck if you held the ace, or held both the ace and the king, or held the K-Q and a small card. Here the right play is to duck with three winners, allowing East to win the club queen. East will continue clubs but will be unable to play another club when he wins the diamond king. That will give declarer time to set up diamonds before West's club suit is established.

These deals are not commonplace. The last time I saw something like this was in my college days, some 35 years ago. If that is the frequency of such deals, I certainly hope I am still here to see another.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY APRIL 5, 1986

In the year ahead, you will be materially lucky in ways that will appear mysterious to others. But what will transpire will actually be rather routine.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you reveal the source of something given to you today, it could anger the donor and cause him or her to regret the generosity. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could get involved in some type of game-playing today with a close friend. Both of you may try to out-manuever the other for personal advantages.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your worthy efforts will be noticed by others today, so it won't be necessary to toot your own horn. Showboating will cost you points.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't let the negative thinking of others awaken self-doubts in you today. Insulate yourself with positive thoughts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A delicate financial matter can be altered to your advantage today, but it will require both wisdom and shrewdness on your behalf.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not rush into judgment today. If you do make a decision you feel uncomfortable about, re-examine the issues and make alterations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If there are any rewards derived today from something you do with another, share the returns equally. A thank you won't suffice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today, you may knowingly spend more than you should, hoping you'll have ways to cover yourself later. Don't bank on pie in the sky.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) When dealing with family today, don't step out of character and become a taker instead of a giver.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This will be a rather pleasant day for you socially. But the time you allot for enjoyment may be snatched from time needed for work that should be done.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's best today to keep personal financial information to yourself. Don't bare your soul to a talkative pal.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Because of your weak presentation to others, your bright idea might not gain the support it deserves today.

FAU Receives Grant To Train Central American Journalists

MIAMI (UPI) — Florida International University has received federal grant of up to $10 million — potentially the largest in its history — to study and strengthen journalism training in Central America and Panama.

It'll be about a million dollars a year for about 10 years, but whether it will be $8 million or $12 million, we don't know right now. The grant would be the largest ever in the University's history.

The U.S. Agency for International Development will give FIU $427,755 during the program's first year, which will be spent studying journalism training in Panama, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala, said FIU President Gregory B. Wolf.

In subsequent years, the grant provides up to $1 million a year for 10 years to carry out training and research programs. Although funding in subsequent years is contingent on the first-year results, the school is confident the money will be there, said J. Arthur Heise, chairman of FIU's communication department.

Nothing of substance will be done in a year. They would not have approved this grant without the idea that it will be a multi-year project, Heise said. "Realistically, it's a risk we'll have to take. This is a subject that's been ignored for too long.

At the end of the 10 years, hopefully we will have worked ourselves out of a job. We hope to train them well enough to take over the training themselves."

Chiles Cites Clean-Up

MIAMI (UPI) — Sen. Lawton Chiles says a cleanup campaign has been successful so far in ridding the Miami River of rusting derelict boats, most of them then confiscated in drug busts.

return in six months to see if the problem had been solved.

"I'm very pleased with what I've seen so far," Chiles said. "The river looks good. Now we have to be concerned about keeping it looking this way."

Edward Kwaa, regional commissioner for U.S. Customs, told Chiles that only 19 boats will be left after an auction is held April 23, and they are tied up in court proceedings.

IN BRIEF

Pilots May Boycott Airports As Tourists Shun Mideast

LONDON (UPI) — An international airline pilots group, angered by the bombing of a TWA jetliner, will spend much of its annual meeting next week discussing possible airport boycotts and other strategies to promote more security, a spokesman says. "We can cease flying to some countries as a last resort only. But we prefer to, and we can, put diplomatic pressure on states and airlines in certain areas and in international forums," said Terry Middleton, of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Associations.

U.S. officials opened an investigation Thursday into the explosion that killed four Americans on a TWA jet enroute from Rome to Athens Wednesday.

A pro-Libya Palestinian group has claimed responsibility for Wednesday's bombing.

Meanwhile, American tourists, fearing terrorist attacks, are beginning to shun overseas travel in general and the Middle East in particular. Some are choosing trips to communist countries that are seldom targets of such attacks.

"I wouldn't go overseas — even if I could afford it," Neville Johnson of New York City said.

Nevertheless, the surge in terrorism has not persuaded American tourists they should stay at home. Some merely abandoned plans to visit the Middle East and Western Europe and headed instead to destinations they thought were safer — like the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

Soviets Want Nuclear Test Treaty

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda appealed today for President Reagan to reconsider his refusal to meet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Europe to discuss a nuclear test ban treaty.

The main editorial in the key party organ said Washington's reaction so far to Soviet arms proposals raised doubts about the sincerity of President Reagan's promises at the Geneva Summit last year.

"How should one view the statements that were made by the head of the U.S. administration at the Geneva summit?" Pravda asked, accusing Washington of ignoring Soviet offers.

Pravda said the White House must prove by actions that Reagan meant their joint pledge in Geneva to work toward the elimination of nuclear weapons.

Snipers Fire on Belfast Police

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Snipers in a Protestant neighborhood fired on a police patrol early today and mobs attacked the homes of a dozen policemen in a new onslaught triggered by Protestant fury over the agreement giving Ireland influence in Northern Ireland's affairs.

Mobs hurled stones and bottles at the homes of 12 police officers in the towns of Belfast, Portadown and Ballymena in the fifth night of violence by Protestants.

A police spokesman said snipers in a Protestant stronghold off the Shankhill Road in Belfast fired about 10 gunshots at an armored police vehicle.

Police said there were no injuries in the attacks.

Gun That Killed Aquino?

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A major in the national police force says he owned the gun the military said was used to kill popular opposition leader Benigno Aquino and two eyewitnesses to the assassination say they will testify Aquino was shot by a soldier, a lawyer said today.

Francisco Villa, a lawyer for the commission that investigated the murder, said in a telephone interview the major had requested his identity be withheld but he was willing to testify should the assassination case be reopened.

"Definitely, the case has to be reopened," Villa said.

Villa also disclosed that two eyewitnesses to the murder had come forward to corroborate testimony from Rebecca Quilano that a soldier shot Aquino on Aug. 21, 1983, moments after the opposition leader stepped off a plane on his return from three years of self-exile in the United States.

investigators say.

Airport officials in Cairo said Mansour arrived late for her flight and was driven to the plane by a TWA official as it sat on the tarmac. Egyptian authorities said her luggage was thoroughly searched.

The bomb exploded 15,000 feet above Greece as the jet was bound from Rome to Athens and Cairo later Wednesday. The blast ripped a hole in the plane's right side, hurtling four Americans to their deaths and injuring nine people.

The damaged airliner made an emergency landing at Athen's Hellinikon International Airport moments later. Most of the 110 passengers who survived the explosion left Greece early Thursday.

Federal Aviation Administration and FBI officials continued their inspection of the damaged airliner today. Airline officials said the plane would probably be released next week.

The dead Americans were identified as Alberto Ospina, 37, of Stratford, Conn.; Dimitra Stylian, 52, Annapolis, Md.; her daughter, Maria Stylian Klug, 24, of Annapolis, and Klug's 9-month-old daughter, Dimitra. Their badly burned and mangled bodies rained to earth outside near the tiny village of Statheika, about 65 miles southwest of Athens, and were found by a shepherd.

At least nine passengers, including three Americans, were injured in the bombing. Four of the passengers, two of them Americans, remained hospitalized today, but none was reported in critical condition.

U.S. officials say Mansour, who Italian authorities described as a terrorist explosives expert, was a member of the shadowy Palestinian group May 15, CBS News said today.

The terrorist group has developed a suitcase bomb virtually impossible to detect with airport electronic equipment and is believed responsible for the bombing of a Pan Am jetliner in 1982 that killed one man, CBS said.

Undersecretary of State Michael Armacost said U.S. officials have no firm evidence linking Libya to the bombing but have not ruled Khadafy out as a "suspect."

Mansour left the plane at the Greek capital before it flew on to Rome and spent the morning in a transit lounge, where she was probably sitting when the plane's pilot, Capt. Richard Petersen landed the crippled jet, police said.

Mansour left for Beirut, Lebanon, on Middle East Airline Flight 254 at 3:30 p.m., about an hour after the bomb went off, airline officials said. Airport sources Mansour left the plane in Beirut, where her trail ends.

Hope For Human Brain Tissue Transplants

NEW YORK (UPI) — Successful brain tissue transplants in animals have fueled hopes that the procedure may one day be used to help humans who suffer from degenerative diseases such as Parkinson's and Alzheimer's.

Researchers said at a news conference Thursday sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences, that experimental human brain tissue transplants in Sweden have been performed with only mixed results.

But the scientists from research centers around the world said the results on both humans and laboratory animals have been promising.

In the animal experiments, tiny sections of brain tissue cut from an embryo are injected into an animal's brain through a needle or placed in crevices on the brain's surface, the scientists said.

The embryo cells assume the functions they would in a normal brain — transmitting electrical messages and releasing hormones on cue, the doctors said. They added the brain acts as a "perfect host" and rarely rejects the transplanted tissue, a problem with many organ transplants.

Dr. William Freed of the National Institute of Mental Health near Washington, D.C., said transplants have improved the survival rates and motor functions of animals in his laboratory that suffered from Parkinson's disease.

Other scientists said they have used transplants to improve brain functions of animals with Alzheimer's disease and brain degeneration caused by aging.

"It is possible to reanimate certain aspects of cognitive functions in aged brains (of laboratory rats)," said Dr. Anders Bjorklund of the University of Lund in Sweden.

Bjorklund and his colleagues also conducted several brain tissue transplants on humans suffering from Parkinson's disease, using tissue from each patient's adrenal glands rather than an embryo donor.

Motor functions that had been devastated by Parkinson's improved in the two human patients, but only for six months, the doctors said, possibly because not enough new tissue was used in the transplants.

Bjorklund called the results promising, although "it is hard to go from rat scale to human scale."

Degenerative brain disease is especially difficult to treat because the brain does not create new cells to replace cells that have died, the doctors said. They said the only way to replace the dead cells is with transplanted cells.

The brain is slow to reject foreign tissue, the doctors said, and when injured releases a rush of chemicals to help damaged cells establish new electrical connections. The connections are the paths on which hormones and messages pass.

In fact, the doctors said they sometimes get better transplant results by purposely injuring the brain so these chemicals will start flowing.

"The brain tries to heal itself," Freed said.

"It's a perfect host for a transplant."

Freed added that most types of brain cells can be transplanted successfully.

Scientists have been performing the brain tissue transplants in animals since 1979. The humans were operated on in 1984.

Probe

Without victim-provided evidence of these reputed "one-on-one" type crimes, deputies have been unable to make a criminal case, Hughey said.

The state investigators, Hughey said, are looking at the allegations from the perspective of an employer. The Department of Education, as in any type of investigation into alleged teacher-wrong doing, might, Hughey said, call for the suspension or dismissal of a teacher, who might or might not ever have criminal charges filed against him or her.

The sheriff's investigation, Hughey said, did not start as a witch hunt for teachers. The names of persons who happen to be teachers came up in drug investigations outside of the school system. That, he said, prompted a probe into the activities of some suspect teachers.

At least one teacher has been accused and, Hughey said, the allegations are divided about 50-50, between drug and sex related offenses.

Hughey said he hopes now that the news of this on-going probe has broken persons who may have been victimized will come forward with information that might lead to evidence to support the claims of persons not directly involved in the reputed criminal acts.

At this point, Hughey's investigation is at a standstill. But the Department of Education doesn't need the same evidence of crime to call for punitive action against a teacher, he said.

Seminole County Superintendent of Schools Robert Hughes said in a prepared statement this morning, "The allegations... describe activities which are illegal, unacceptable, and intolerable... Any educator guilty of such actions has, in addition to bringing harm to students and breaking the law, brought embarrassment to our school system. Our students, parents, educators, school board and other interested citizens deserve better."

"We are dedicated to continue in the future as we have in the past to fully cooperate with appropriate agencies dealing with the enforcement of the provisions of law and the rules of the State Board of Education."

Marlene Greenfield of the Professional Practices Services in Tallahassee, which is the investigative arm of the Educational Practices Commission, said this morning that four cases of misconduct are presently under investigation in Seminole County. She also said that during the past five years, 22 cases have been sent to her office for investigation by Seminole County, which have been completed. She said one additional investigation has been completed, and a decision by the Commissioner of Education Ralph Turlington is pending.

Karen Coleman, county school spokesman said a Professional Practices Investigator, David Worrell, was still in Seminole County today, where he has been most of the week.

Wolf said while Khadafy lives in a tent wherever he is, his wife Safwa and seven children live in a single-family house in Tripoli with air conditioning and television. He said his youngsters have modern electric toys.

Khadafy, who said he does not fear death because "death lies in the hands of Allah," admitted he had a fear of nuclear weapons.

Khadafy also denied being vain and said he dislikes to have his picture taken.

"It irritates me to be photographed. I seldom look in the mirror."

But he ended the interview by climbing onto his Arabian horse and suggesting he be photographed on it, Wolf reported.

The P&Z continued its public hearing until June 6 on the rezoning request by Hagen Homes Inc. for 20 acres on Bonale Drive from agriculture to one and two family dwelling district for duplexes.

The eight requests are in conjunction with proposed comprehensive land use amendments which have gone before the state for review. Under the new state growth management bill, the amendments will come back before the county commission for public hearings.

The rezonings are contingent upon the appropriate land use changes being approved.

Previously, it was thought the road was privately owned by residents living in the Evansdale subdivision, so the city could not

Simmons also said the city's acceptance of the bids to modify its own plant is "a more economical alternative" to Yankee Lake treatment.

Sanford's seeking treatment at Yankee Lake "would require a capitol cost of over $38 million, not counting a raw sewage pump station (in Sanford), a pipe to Yankee Lake and any cost for a separate pipe to take back the effluent," according to Simmons.

If commissioners approve the bid awards, the Poplar Avenue plant construction will be funded with a portion of the $8 million credit the city secured this winter, City Manager Frank Faison said. Sanford sought the and then put some gum in his pocket and left the store, whereupon Reichert told him to stop, he said. When the police got there the boy reportedly said he had been caught shoplifting before and nothing could be done to him because of his age.

Reichert said his company's policy is to prosecute shoplifters so the boy was taken into custody and transported to the police department.

Reichert said the company will probably not press the charge, though no action in that direction as of today had been taken.

An area television station quoted a state's attorney spokesman as saying police should not have taken the boy to the police station because of his age and the possible trauma involved, and should have, instead, contacted the boy's parents to pick him up at the store, pursuing the matter from that point.

DINOSAURS

...Until Now

Story And Pictures By Susan Loden
Herald Feature Writer

They advance toward the room and walk in to see a gray hallway and a staircase. An innocuous setting but for the beastly roars and shrieks, which don't halt the mission.

Little eyes get big; they grasp the red metal railing to make the two-level trek with each step. The gripping hands become redder and redder until, at the top of the steps, knuckles have turned white.

They're at the peak. They want to go on, but they're not real sure. Finally they just make it and it just blossoms: The look.

It's the look of awe when they come face-to-face with the dinosaurs.

Some shrink back, but the others press on and look down on the hulking, moving beasts that have reportedly been extinct for 65 million years but which 'live' again at the Orlando Science Center.

OSC Education Coordinator Juanita Black said that's been the typical reaction of youngsters, including Seminole County school children, who have trekked to the center since March 10 for a glimpse at a prehistoric past that lives on in the fantasies of adults as well as children.

The youngsters who hold back, despite an advanced briefing of what to expect, can usually, with a bit of reassurance, be encouraged to go on, to move down the other side of the stairs to face the creatures, which then sway above them - some baring teeth as they growl.

"To their minds," Mrs. Black said, "that's real. That's moving and that's making noise, and a few will only stay up at the top rail. That's fine, because you get a good shot at the dinosaurs from there."

...Dinosaurs

"The bigger children are happy, they just want to kind of stand there — I'm caveman," I'm cavewoman' kind of feeling. It's prehistoric times there: The scenery and the whole room, since it's so dark. And at that particular moment, while they're in there, there's nothing else in their minds. They're in prehistoric times. It's everybody's dream."

It's a dream that can be fulfilled at the OSC through June 1, when these half-life-size, soft-textured dinosaurs and a two-thirds scale flightless bird, with realistic silicon skins and computer controlled, pneumatic air system actuated movements, are center stage.

Although more than 26,000 school children are expected to take this walk into the past, OSC director Mark Sinclair said adults too are drawn to these creations of Dinamation International Corp., a California company which is sending an army of these animated beasts into museums across the country.

The roster of beasts includes recreated specimens of: Tyrannosaurs, a meat eating giant that even at halfsize is 10-feet tall and 15-feet long; Triceratops, the largest of the great armored lizards, which is 6-feet tall and 15-feet long; Stegosaurus, the "roof lizard," which is armored with huge plates and had, in real life, a pea-sized brain. The replica is 12-feet long and 6-feet tall; Apatosaurus, a brotosaurus-like, plant eater, which is 32-feet long and 7-feet tall; and Diatryma, the "terror" bird, which couldn't fly and existed after the dinosaur era.

about 50 million years ago.

To ease youngsters into the exhibit, the Diatryma's resemblance to "Big Bird" is noted, along with the apparent lack of brainpower in the Stegosaurus and the Apatosaurus' nickname, "Patty," denoting that she's a girl, Mrs. Black said.

The dinosaur exhibit, sponsored by Winter Park's Philip Crosby Associates, Inc., with a $10,000 donation and a $24,000 personal contribution from Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Crosby, Sr., founders of that firm, has generated more excitement than any other at the OSC, Sinclair said.

Admission to OSC, which is located in Loch Haven Park and open seven days a week, is $4 for adults and $3 for children, seniors and active military personnel, with a maximum charge of $10 per family.

"I think the dinosaurs are everybody's fantasy — these hulking, huge things that walked the earth. There's just something magical about them," Sinclair said in explaining that the lure of the dinosaurs brought $30,000 in admission earnings to the science center in March.

And once inside the center, Sinclair said, a lot of people have learned that the year-round exhibits with which visitors can have hands-on of the workings of the human eye, a voice transmission system and many other exercises, which in some cases look more like they belong in a video arcade than a science center.

"The basic message is that people like to learn" he said. "They like to learn while they're having a good time. We're competing here for the leisure dollar. We're not competing for the education dollar. People don't come here so much to learn. They do learn, but they come to have fun. We're talking about a family's quality time together and you've got to entertain them."

And for those who want to learn more about dinosaurs, while being entertained, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich has, Sinclair said, put up $10,000 to sponsor an OSC lecture series.

Two internationally-known dinosaur experts are scheduled to speak at the center in April: Dr. Richard Mull from the University of California is set to present evidence on April 12 to support the theory that the dinosaurs were killed by a catastrophic event, possibly the fallout from a cloud caused by an earth-comet collision.

On April 19 Dr. Bruce MacFadden of the Florida State Museum in Gainesville will present a prehistoric 'tour' of Florida. On April 26, Dr. Robert Bakker of the University of Colorado will examine recent fossil evidence that is changing the perception of dinosaurs. Some of that evidence suggests that the beasts were warm blooded.

And finally, with the receding of Halley's Comet from view, the John Young Planetarium at the OSC will shift emphasis from the heavens to Earth with a presentation of "Death of The Dinosaurs," a review of current theories of dinosaur extinction, beginning April 28.

It's a prehistoric spring at the Orlando Science Center and for more information on delving into this lost portion of the past call OSC at 896-7151.

Marlo Thomas Boosts Film

By Andrew J. Edelstein
Leading the week: Marlo Thomas gives a bravura performance in "Nobody's Child," a CBS movie airing Sunday, April 6.

Miss Thomas portrays Marie Balter, a Massachusetts woman who spent 20 years in a mental institution and was considered by many physicians to be incapable of ever leading a normal life. Through her own courage and determination, plus proper therapy and treatment, she was able to rehabilitate herself. She went on to attend college and eventually earn a master's degree from Harvard.

Miss Thomas's inspired acting raises "Nobody's Child" several notches above the typical "disease of the week" TV movie.

Remember Mark Lindsay? Not the lead singer of Paul Revere and the Raiders, but the hapless British actor who was slated to star in the TV movie about John Lennon and Yoko Ono — until it was discovered that his given name was Mark Chapman — a name he shares with the man who killed Lennon in 1980. Lindsay/Chapman was bounced from the TV movie in favor of Mark McGann.

This week the actor resurfaces in an NBC movie that reeks of creeping Schwarzeneggerism: "The Annihilator," airing Sunday, April 6. He plays a newspaper editor who is forced to commit murder and run for his life when he realizes that a group of deadly humanoid aliens are transforming everyday humans into ruthless killing machines.

Lindsay Wagner will be appearing in the episode of "Kate & Allie" airing Monday, April 7 that may be spun off into a series. In the episode, titled "The Late Bloomer," Miss Wagner plays Julia, a woman in her late 30s whom Kate (Susan Saint James) meets in a cooking class. Julia is a former actress who has given up her career and has gone back to college — at the same school Allie (Jane Curtin) attended.

Pay-cable's Showtime, which has been extremely successful with its "Lost Honeymooners" episodes, continues mining the Golden Age of TV and coming up with nuggets. On Monday, April 7, it will air "TV: The Way It Was," an entire evening of vintage video, as part of its monthlong salute to American comedy.

The evening includes an episode of "The Jackie Gleason Show" featuring a "Honeymooners" segment; an episode of "The Colgate Comedy Hour" from 1951 featuring Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis; "The Friars Roast Ed Sullivan," a 1958 broadcast that marked the first time this show-biz tradition was aired; "Ten from Your Show of Shows," an anthology of great moments from the classic '50s variety show starring Carl Reiner, Imogene Coca, Howard Morris and the immortal Sid Caesar; and "Steve Allen's Prickly Heat Telethon" — a spoof of TV telethons that originally aired in 1967 on CBS as part of "The Steve Allen Comedy Hour."

All You Want To Know About Linda Evans

Dear Debra — Could you please tell me about actress Linda Evans? What screen and TV work has she done? Thanks a lot. — M.D., Lewiston, N.Y.

Linda Evans was probably the major factor in the change in attitude of the Hollywood community toward actresses over the age of 40. Because of her popularity and the glamorous role she plays as Krystle Carrington on TV's "Dynasty," more leading lady roles have been taken away from the starlets and given back to seasoned actresses. Evans, who was born in Hartford, Conn., 42 years ago, started doing commercials when she was a high school student in Los Angeles, where she had moved with her parents. Her television series debut was as Audra Barkley in "The Big Valley" in 1965. Other TV credits include "The Hunter," "The Love Boat" and the miniseries "Bare Essence." Her TV movies include "Nowhere to Run," "Standing Tall" and "Gambler II." There were feature films, too: "The Klansman," "Avalanche Express" and "Tom Horn." Ever a favorite with the fans, Miss Evans has won several People's Choice awards and a Golden Globe. She's written a book, too: "Linda Evans' Beauty and Exercise Book."

Dear Debra — Did Erin Gray, who plays the part of Kate on "Silver Spoons," ever play Kitten on "Father Knows Best"? — B.T., Snow Hill, N.C.

Ask Dick is no more. Kleiner's retired after 39 years with NEA. Now it's Ask Debra. Debra Katz will do the weekly question and answer column so long popular in the Evening Herald's Leisure magazine.

Ask Debra Katz

Not even for a day. "Kitten," alias Kathy Anderson, youngest child of Jim and Margaret (played by Robert Young and Jane Wyatt) was played only by Lauren Chapin throughout the show's nine-year run.

Dear Debra — Please tell me what TV show Jim Davis played in years ago? My daughter and I watched it. I watch him on reruns of "Dallas." How did he die and when? — Mrs. C.B., Sacramento, Calif.

Jim Davis, who played patriarch Jock Ewing on "Dallas" from 1978 to 1981 when he died of a heart attack, was in two previous TV series. One was "The Cowboys," which aired in 1974. He played U.S. marshal Bill Winter for a brief time the series lasted. His other role was in a syndicated program called "Rescue 8," which aired from 1958 to 1959. In it, Davis starred as Wes Cameron, the head of a two-man rescue squad from the fire department.

Dear Debra — I would appreciate any information you could give me concerning The Three Stooges, including how many there really were, what their names were and if they are still alive. — T.D.S., Atlantis, N.J.

The Three Stooges were actually played by six actors over the years with Moe Howard and Larry Fine remaining constant through other cast changes. There were also Joe Besser, Joe DeRita (known as Curly Joe) and Shemp Howard who, with Curly Howard were real-life brothers to Moe. Horowitz was their given name, with Moe born as Moses and Curly as Jerry. None of the men are alive today.

Dear Debra — Could you please tell me what happened to Buffy and Jody from the old series "Family Affair"? I heard the little girl died of an overdose. — T.D., Freedom, Pa.

In 1976, 18-year-old Anissa Jones, who played Buffy in the late 1960s, did die of a drug overdose. As for Johnny Whitaker, who played Jody, one source says he left acting to teach languages to Mormon Church missionaries.

Detroit's Comeback In Gas-Mileage

Most Fuel-Efficient Cars In The United States

By Richard Harris

Japanese automakers seized a major part of the U.S. car market in the 1970s for one simple reason: fuel economy. Today, however, Detroit has made a comeback in the gas-mileage competition.

Of the most fuel-efficient cars sold in the United States, according to the 1985 Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) ratings, 47 percent were American-made (compared to 33 percent Japanese and 20 percent German). The top-rated cars (Honda's Civic Coupe HF and Chevrolet's Sprint) tested at over 45 miles per gallon — fuel efficiency unheard of 10 years ago.

EPA mileage ratings are based on laboratory tests, not on-the-road tests, and in past years they've been notoriously inaccurate, if not downright misleading. In 1985, however, the EPA started making its test figures more realistic by reducing them 10 percent (city) and 22 percent (highway). The ratings are a handy way of comparing new cars. But they won't tell you how much gas your own car will actually use.

The federal government may need laboratory tests to rate a car's gas mileage, but you don't. All you need is a full tank of gas.

If your car's speedometer has a "trip meter," you can reset it to zero when you fill your tank. Otherwise, write down the mileage shown on your odometer.

Then, next time you fill your tank, write down how many gallons you put in. That (by strange coincidence) is how much gasoline you've used since the last time.

Now, read the mileage shown on your trip meter, or write down your odometer reading and subtract the mileage you wrote down last time. That will tell you how many miles you've traveled since the last fill-up.

Then divide the miles you've driven by the gallons you've used to find out your car's average gas mileage (miles per gallon, or "mpg").

Why bother doing all this arithmetic? There are two good reasons:

First, knowing your car's mpg helps you plan cross-country trips. (Should you buy expensive "last chance before the desert" gas? Or are you sure you can make it to Phoenix on the gas in your tank?)

Second, calculating your mileage every time you buy gas will give you a barometer of your car's mechanical condition and your driving skill. If your car's engine is in perfect tune, if its tires are inflated to the right pressure and if its carburetor is adjusted properly for the altitude and weather conditions, the car will get its best possible gas mileage. When you see the gas mileage going down, you know it's time for a tuneup.

But the biggest factor in fuel economy is the driver. Quick starts and stops, high or erratic speeds or "lugging" or "over-revving" the engine by driving in the wrong gear will cut gas mileage. These kinds of driving habits also result in excess wear and tear on your car's engine, so it's fair to say that better drivers get better gas mileage.

And technology is coming to the aid of those people who are confounded when they try to figure out their own mpg. Digital-readout mileage monitors first appeared on Cadillac dashboards in 1980, and they're now becoming common on upscale compacts. These devices will tell you at a glance (or the push of a button) the exact mileage your car is getting at the moment, its average mpg for the trip, how many gallons are left in the gas tank, and how far you can go before you run out.

But many of the cars with digital readouts are also among the cars with the worst gas mileage. Cadillac, which pioneered the devices, has raised its recent EPA mileage ratings to a still-unimpressive 16-19 mpg. If you keep track of your mpg whenever you buy gas and have a nimble mathematical mind (or a programmable pocket calculator), you can quickly figure most of the information the digital readouts tell you — even if you don't own a Cadillac.

But don't get me wrong. Cadillacs are not the thirstiest gas guzzlers on U.S. highways today. That honor goes to the Rolls-Royce Camargue and a niche/Continental, both with overall EPA mileage ratings of 8 mpg. And remember that the government figures are always optimistic.

So, if you're ever asked the trivia question, "How many miles per gallon can you get in a Rolls-Royce?" you'll know the correct answer: "If you have to ask, you can't afford one."

How To Make Your Car Gleam

By Richard Harris

Does your car's finish make it look old beyond its years? Does its faded, lackluster appearance somehow make it seem mechanically unsound? Has it crossed your mind that maybe your car needs a new paint job?

You could go for the kind of "custom" paint job offered at specialty customizing shops and favored by show-car hobbyists, low-riders and street-rodders: bright candy-color paint under 20 or so coats of transparent acrylic, often embedded with metallic glitter.

It's guaranteed to make people notice you as you drive down the street, but you'll pay dearly for the attention. A high-quality custom paint job costs around $2,000. And let's face it — a paint job that looks "hot" on a Firebird or a Camaro Z28 may look a bit silly on an aging Japanese econo-box.

At the other extreme, you could paint your car yourself for under $50. Just buy half a dozen cans each of gray primer paint and rustproof enamel. Cover everything on the car that you don't want painted (chrome, windows, etc.) with masking tape, rough up the old paint with an electric sander, and start spraying. Before you do, though, I must warn you that a homemade paint job will never look "like new" — not even while the paint's still wet.

If you're not a do-it-yourselfer, there are shops specializing in quick-and-cheap (under $100) paint jobs that don't look "like new" either. But cheap paint jobs diminish a car's resale value instead of increasing it, because when a car is obviously repainted many people will assume that it's been in a wreck.

Paint-and-body shops will repaint your car the same way it was painted at the factory, with baked-on enamel matching the color of the original factory paint. It costs more to change your car's color than to repaint it in the original color, because the shop must give more attention to hiding every bit of the original color — in the engine compartment, on the underside of the trunk, around the door edges, and in little nooks and crannies — when painting the car a different color.

But is it worth the cost to have your car repainted the same color it already is?

The answer is yes only if the car has had a crumpled fender or a bashed-in door that has been replaced by a different-colored one from the salvage yard.

Even then, as the man at the paint-and-body shop will point out, it's much cheaper just to repaint the wrong-color part to match the original factory paint job. When that's done, however, you'll see that your car's original paint no longer matches the factory color. And you'll encounter the same problem if you touch up chips, cracks or rust spots with the factory-match retouching paint available at dealerships and many auto-parts stores. The paint matches the color your car once was, not the color it is now.

Fortunately, there is a way to restore the original color and lustre. Chances are that your faded car doesn't need a new paint job at all. The original paint will last the life of the car with proper care.

Your car's paint fades because of "oxidation," a chemical change caused by sunlight. Oxidation happens faster on a dark-colored car, especially one that's often parked outdoors during the day. The cure is to use a rubbing compound that restores oil to the paint. It takes several hours and a lot of "elbow grease," but you'll be amazed at how new your car looks afterward.

And what about car wax? I asked my neighbor Jerry, who spends every Saturday afternoon polishing his restored 1949 Hudson with carnuba wax. "Wax by itself won't make a dull paint job shiny," he says. "I use it to protect the rubbed-out, shiny paint and prevent oxidation."

When restoring his Hudson, Jerry spent over a week rubbing out the paint. "It was sort of greenish-mud colored when I bought it. Imagine my surprise when I started rubbing and discovered that it was originally sky blue. "Too smile," I wanted a yellow bad," he muses with sly one."

WATER BEADING TEST: A water beading test is the best way to tell whether it's time to wax your car. During a rainfall, look at the water on the hood of the car. If the water sheets or runs off the surface, as in top photo, it means the wax has worn off. If small, round, distinct beads stand up on the finish (bottom photo), a good layer of wax is still left.

How To Tell Car Needs Paint

With more and more motorists restoring and refurbishing their present vehicles, it's become important for consumers to have an understanding of basic automotive paint and collision repair services.

Here is a brief outline of common paint and cosmetic repair procedures which will eventually be needed by most motorists to maintain the appearance and safety of their vehicles.

Q. How can you tell if your car needs painting or cosmetic repair work?

A. The most common types of paint breakdown appear as cracking, paint flaking, paint peeling and surface rust. A vehicle may also require painting due to a loss of paint gloss and luster caused by sun, acid rain, chemicals, pollution and other elements.

The Mysterious Business of Shopping For Parts

By Richard Harris

"Looks like you need a new radiator hose," I said.

"I figured as much," my neighbor Ed said, nodding wisely through the steam geyser spewing from a deteriorated hose that somehow looked older than the car.

"No problem," I said. "Borrow your wife's car and go buy a new hose, and by the time you get back the engine will be cooled down. Then we'll just drain some coolant, loosen the clamps where the hose attaches to the radiator and engine block, replace the old one with the new one, refill the radiator, and your car will be back in business."

Ed returned several hours later shaking his head. "You won't believe this," he said. "I went to the drug store, the supermarket and five discount department stores, but none of them had a radiator hose!"

Like Ed, many people decide whether to work on their cars at home or take them to mechanics based on parts availability. If they can find the parts they need in a store where they shop regularly, it's a do-it-yourself job. Otherwise, it isn't.

They'll do their own oil and filter changes and replace spark plugs, batteries or fan belts. But install a carburetor? Or brake shoes? Or a distributor? Or a hose? Forget it! All these jobs are fairly simple, but each calls for a trip to the auto-parts store, so such matters are best left to professionals.

What about the mysterious business of shopping for parts?

The first question is whether to buy a new part or a used one. Always buy new parts to replace "wear parts" (those that need periodic replacement because they wear out from friction), to replace electrical and electronic parts, and to replace parts essential to safety (such as brake system components, shock absorbers or fuel lines). And if a part is inexpensive, it's easier to buy a new one than to search for a used one.

What kinds of parts might you buy used? When it comes to water pumps, starter motors, alternators, carburetors, even engines — recycling can save you a lot of money.

Aftermarket parts usually cost 10 percent to 50 percent less than factory parts bought from a dealership service center and may be of equally good quality. But "mass market" parts (you can recognize them by their expensive packaging) sold by some auto-parts chain stores tend to surprise you by falling to pieces at inconvenient times. Your best bet is to buy from a reputable independent auto-parts store. Ask your mechanic to recommend one.

As for used parts, beware the difference between "rebuilt" and "reconditioned." When a carburetor (or any other part made up of smaller components) is reconditioned, the piece that's already gone bad is replaced, but the rest may be about to crumble. Rebuilders, on the other hand, will inspect each piece of the carburetor, replace anything worn or corroded and, if necessary, remachine to specifications. Rebuilt parts are often a good value, especially for older cars. You can buy them through an independent auto-parts store or from an automotive recycling center.

To get the right part, check a repair manual to make sure you know exactly what it's called.

You should know not only the make, model and year of your car, but also the Vehicle Identification Number (VIN), which can be found on your car title.

Neglected Tires Reflect On You

There is an old adage in business which claims, "You can tell a lot about a man by looking at his shoes."

This same statement can also be applied to an automobile: "You can tell a lot about how well a car is maintained by looking at its wheels."

Many car owners don't seem to give the same care to their auto's wheels as they do the rest of the car's exterior appearance. They spend hours washing and waxing to achieve a showroom-like look, but may leave the dirt, road stains and disc brake dust which accumulates in the wheel area. This not only detracts from the car's overall look, but also gives the impression of a job left half done.

Cleaning both the wheel parts and the tire areas can be a relatively simple task, even though the conventional products used for washing and waxing are not well suited for these areas.

Special products have been formulated to clean dirt and stains off wheel parts including wire, painted steel, aluminum, chrome, mag, spokes and hub caps, as well as the tires. Several of these products, however, contain strong hydrofluoric chemicals which can be irritating to the skin or harmful to clothing.

Some of these wheel cleaners have also required the purchase of a second product that is used as a "neutralizer." The car owner mixes this product, usually an alkaline base of some sort, with the wheel cleaner in order to neutralize its high acid content. This two-step process is not only time-consuming and expensive but also calls upon the user to act as a sort of amateur chemist.

These wheel cleaning annoyances can be avoided by using one of the one-step cleaners that have been developed as safe and effective alternatives. Their use can make the cleaning of the wheel area a simple process which takes just a few minutes.

Adding the wheel areas to our regular exterior maintenance schedule of cleaning and polishing will give your car the complete look that otherwise would be missing.

How To Prevent Breakdowns Before They Happen

By Richard Harris

My friend Big John didn't want me to tell you what I'm about to tell you.

Usually, I go along with almost anything Big John wants. The world is full of big guys — pro football linemen, heavyweight boxers and the like — but John is really big! I once saw him single-handedly lift up a Volkswagen Rabbit and pull it out of a snowbank. No, he's not the kind of person you'd want to mess with.

He didn't want me to tell you this because if everybody did what I'm about to suggest, he'd be out of business. But what the heck — I'll tell you anyway.

You see, Big John is an emergency tow-truck driver. He makes his living helping people whose cars are broken down by the roadside.

According to Big John, three problems account for 80 percent of all roadside breakdowns (not counting flat tires). That means you can avoid four out of five breakdowns by checking the three following things before you drive more than 20 miles from home:

(1.) Vital fluids. Your car depends on gasoline, engine oil, coolant, transmission fluid, brake fluid and power-steering fluid. You'd never start on a long trip without a full tank of gas, would you? Yet, a lot of people don't even think about the other vital fluids until a red dashboard light warns them that the engine is about to self-destruct.

Make it a habit to watch for damp or oily spots on your driveway, which tell you whether your car is dripping fluid. If you find one, smell it. Try to determine whether it's oil, gas, coolant or some other fluid, and check all fluid levels immediately. Your car can also lose fluid through burning or internal leaks, so check their levels visually. Check the coolant level in the radiator before you start the engine, and the others — engine oil, transmission, brakes and steering — after the car has been driven a few miles. The best time to check them is when you fill your gas tank, and the service station attendants can help you find any dipsticks or reservoirs the car engineers have hidden in strange locations.

(2.) Drive belts. A drive belt is a black rubber piece that looks like licorice wrapped around pulleys in front of the engine. A belt drives the radiator fan and the alternator or generator that keeps your car's battery charged. Many cars have other belts to drive air-conditioning or other accessories.

Put your fingers on each drive belt halfway between the pulleys and push on it. If it will move more than half an inch, it needs to be tightened (usually by loosening, moving and retightening the moveable alternator mounting). If the belt is frayed along the edges, is cracked or has a slick worn spot, replace it. Belts are most likely to break on long trips at highway speeds — and usually in the most inconvenient places.

(3.) Cooling hoses. Most modern cars have a confusing tangle of hoses under the hood. Some, like smog-control and air-conditioner hoses, are best left alone unless problems develop and you know what you're doing. Cooling system hoses, though, are easy to replace when the engine is cool. The problem is that it's best to check them while the engine is hot. This means that if you find that a hose needs replacing, you'll have to wait a bit.

Look for any hint of water or steam escaping from either hose that connects to the radiator, the water pump or the heater (ask the service-station attendant if you can't recognize them). Leaks tend to start as tiny pinholes, but they grow larger fast under pressure. Like drive belts, cooling hoses most often burst when the engine has run continuously for hours — like in the middle of the desert 50 miles from the nearest gas station. So if a hose looks old, cracked or generally cruddy, don't take chances. Replace it.

Four out of five cars that break down by the roadside would already be where they were going if their owners had taken five minutes to do these simple checks. Go for it! (But don't tell Big John it was my suggestion.)

Repairing Your Car's Upholstery

By Richard Harris

They don't teach anyone how to use a sewing machine in auto-shop class.

In fact, interior upholstery is the last thing most owners would think of fixing before they sell their used cars. A little body work and a new paint job? Sure. Rebuild the engine? Maybe. But upholstery? Forget it!

Still, upholstery can make a major difference in a car's value. When you're driving a car, or riding in one, you only see the interior. The paint job may be a bit dull, the engine may be a little weak, the gears may clatter a bit. Yet if the seats, the floorboard carpet, the door and roof linings and the dashboard look good as new (or, better yet, feel a bit elegant), you'll enjoy driving more, and your passengers will comment, "Hey — nice car!"

And when the time comes to sell it, potential buyers will think so too.

Two hundred dollars worth of attention to interior details will boost the value of your car more than it would be boosted by $1,000 worth of mechanical work.

Until about 30 years ago, the quality of automobiles could be judged by their seats.

Repairing Your Own Car Made Easy

By Richard Harris

Can you repair your own car?

If your response is something like, "I can check the radiator, add oil and change a flat tire, but I don't know how to do anything complicated like replace a water pump," this story is for you.

It's told by Larry Owens, author of "How to Keep Your Subaru Alive" (coming in May from John Muir Publications):

"In the '60s and early '70s, Wilbur Kleenex, Billy J. Trucker and I owned and operated an independent Volkswagen garage in Santa Fe, N.M., called The Grease Pit.

"In 1969, John Muir started hanging around the garage and said he was writing a VW repair manual for people with no mechanical experience ("How to Keep Your Volkswagen Alive"). We wondered how anyone could work on their own car without having first read all the hot-rod and custom-car books of the '50s!

"Anyway .... We soon had a steady stream of transient flower children (and a few lawyers, housewives, musicians, outlaws, etc.) wanting to do their own VW repair work in the Grease Pit parking lot. At first, we were quite skeptical. But in the spirit of those times, we wanted to help our fellow man, so we gave them a spot in the lot and let 'em go for it.

"It didn't take long to convince us that ... any man, woman or adolescent who could read could rebuild an engine, could do a brake job, and could do almost everything necessary to keep their cars in safe, dependable working order.

"Some of the parking-lot people enjoyed working on their cars so much that they ended up working with us at The Grease Pit. We made a lot of good friends, had a lot of fun, and were usually rewarded with a couple of dollars for the use of the parking lot and an occasional tool. In all that time, we were never ripped off!

"The times they have changed, but people haven't. There are still friendly people in garages who will help if you get stuck with a broken bolt or crossed wire. In fact, most mechanics and automotive machinists are impressed by mechanically inexperienced people who have the ambition and guts to work on their own cars."

Saving money is one reason to do it yourself. When you work on your car, you learn firsthand what's going on under the hood. That knowledge can be worth a lot the next time you have mechanical problems far from home.

Since John Muir's parking-lot days, "simple" car-repair manuals have proliferated. Some of them are worth their weight in gold. Others are useless (or worse). General books covering all cars won't tell you what you need to know to work on your car. Mass-market, photo-illustrated repair manuals, written for experienced mechanics, don't give you the basic information and safety precautions non-mechanics should know before they start.

Ask whether a simplified repair manual on your car is available at your library or bookstore. Then, before buying one, call your mechanic and ask whether he would recommend the book for do-it-yourselfers. Do it yourself? Sure! But don't forget — a friendly, helpful mechanic is your best source of help and advice.

The Story Of A Neglected Car

"It all started when my owner began neglecting me, Doctor. My hoses were rotting, my air filter was filthy, and it had been over two years since he'd bought me a new set of spark plugs. Then came that terrible night. We were driving through the rain. I began coughing and sputtering and finally could carry on no further. I broke down right there.

"My owner didn't know what to do; there was no one in sight. Finally, he abandoned me to go for help.

"He wasn't gone long before two men, who seemed to come out of nowhere, made their assault upon me. They knocked in my windows, stripped me of my wheels and tires, my stereo, and robbed me of my owner's valuables. By the time my owner returned I was but a fragment of my former self. He was shocked at what he saw.

"In spite of all my problems, though, I'm going to try to look on the bright side. He's sorry now and wants me back in good working condition. It's really going to be expensive to repair the damage that's already been done. I only hope that he's learned his lesson and will be more aware of my needs in the future. A little preventive maintenance is all I ask for."

How do you know when your car needs attention? You don't have to be a mechanic to know when it's time to see a mechanic.

Be aware of the following:

- Engine: Hard to start, uses gas excessively, sluggish, smokes or noisy?

- Transmission: Slips on shifting, noisy, shifts erratically?

- Battery: Won't hold a charge?

- Exhaust: Hisses, rumbles, roars?

- Steering and suspension: Wanders, pulls, shimmies, shakes or bounces?

- Lights: Out of focus, burned out, turn signals inoperative?

- Windshield wipers: Smear, streak, chatter?

- Body: Rusted, paint deteriorated?

You can help prevent future car trouble with regular checkups and maintenance.

Recycling Auto Parts Becomes Big Business

By Richard Harris

We were standing by the side of a New Jersey highway. (Our old van had broken down, but that's another story.) To a westerner like me, the landscape was every bit as awesome as Pikes Peak or the Grand Canyon. Wrecked cars, acres and acres of wrecked cars. Whole ranches of wrecked cars.

We were in the midst of automotive recycling yards on a grand scale — beyond my wildest imagination!

When I was a boy, I used to play in Mr. Jenkins' junkyard, which was out behind his barn. He had seven pickup trucks, three tractors, three totaled sedans and a wood-sided station wagon, and we children couldn't resist pretending to drive them, although none of the cars had wheels (or much else). Mr. Jenkins was the man to see in our town if you needed truck or tractor parts in a hurry. He was a recycler, though in those days it was called "junk dealing."

Later, as a college student, I dabbled in recycling myself. I spent more than the original purchase price of my decrepit college-student sports car buying repair parts for it each time I spotted a classified ad for a "parts car" — not in running condition, but cheap. Mine wasn't the only old MG on campus, and by the end of my junior year, I'd collected six dead cars and sold the best parts for a tidy profit — almost as much as those cars later cost me when the school ordered them towed from the dormitory parking lot.

But it wasn't until that New Jersey breakdown that I realized how far automotive recycling has come in the United States. Auto recycling yards are the largest source of rebuildable auto parts — like carburetors, fuel and water pumps, starter motors, alternators and generators. Often, the recyclers also do the rebuilding, or they sell the parts that have been rebuilt. (Careful: many yards also sell "reconditioned" parts, on which the bare minimum has been done to make them functional.

Never buy reconditioned parts unless you're prepared to rebuild them yourself.)

Getting parts from a good recycling yard is no longer a matter of scrambling among twisted wreckage in search of a particular make of car that still has, let's say, a useable gas cap, all the while dodging the savage junkyard dog. Today, the yards keep most parts in a storeroom and can consult their inventory computers to see if they have what you need in stock. Prices are less than you'd pay for a comparable rebuilt part from an auto-parts store, and a small fraction of the cost of a new part. And recycling yards are the only commercial source for used auto body parts.

The main drawback of shopping for recycled yard parts is that the yards are usually on the outskirts of town. Getting there can be a problem if you need a part because your car is in pieces in your garage. But it's not much more of a problem than getting to an auto-parts store.

But suppose they don't have the part you need? Suppose nobody in the community has ever wrecked a car exactly like yours? Well, modern salvage yards have recycling networks. They are computerized in some parts of the country and are run by telephone through clearinghouses elsewhere. Recycling yards can locate the part you need statewide and often, for more exotic cars, nationwide.

To test this, I stopped in at one of those junkyards — you know, the ones people always complain are so unsightly — out near my town's airport and asked if they had a grille for a '59 Edsel. After a phone call, it was on its way by truck from another city 75 miles away. By late afternoon the same day, the answer was yes. They just happened to have one. At that point, I couldn't admit that I'd only asked out of idle curiosity.

Symptoms Of Wearing Brakes

A big factor in summer travel plans is the family car, which can make or break your trip. It deserves attention before taking off loaded with passengers and luggage.

Be aware of signs of trouble in the braking system, warns the Car Care Council. Strange noises from the wheels and unnerving sensations in the brake pedal often are early warning signals.

Most noises are the result of wear. If brakes squeal when bringing the car to a halt, it could be due to glazing of the lining on brake pads or shoes. Excessive heat from friction can cause lining surfaces to fuse to a hard sheen or glaze. Glazed linings don't grab effectively, and drums or discs can become damaged and scored.

A metallic grinding sound means that brake linings are worn down to the metal backing, and the pressure of metal against metal is all that's stopping the car. This can damage drums or discs beyond repair.

Linings on many late-model cars have built-in "wear sensors," a big patch of metal on each pad that chirps or squeaks when linings wear to a certain point.

If the pedal must be pumped before the brakes take hold or if the pedal sinks to the floor under steady pressure, there probably is air in the system. Even a pinhole-size leak can allow air into the brake fluid lines, causing inconsistent, or nonexistent, braking pressure. The same symptoms can occur when the brake fluid level is low, as a result of normal lining wear or a leak in the system.

Brakes that pull to one side are another hazard. Worn linings, clogged or pinched brake fluid lines or a damaged caliper or cylinder, all can cause ineffective braking on one side, which leads to uneven stopping action.

A thorough brake inspection can stop problems before they occur, says Car Care Council, which emphasizes that quality brake work is the car owner's best investment in safety.

...Upholstery

A car's front-seat upholstery wears out fastest, and it is the most difficult to replace "like-new." Naugahyde seats usually give out first at the seams, where you can sew them up with nylon or waxed thread and a large needle. (Thread and needle can be purchased at a leathercrafts store.) Other tears in the seats can be sewn too, but these repairs will be visible. A less unsightly method is to patch them using a vinyl repair kit. If the seats are in really poor shape, one alternative to serious upholstery work is to buy seat covers. Sheepskin covers for bucket seats are popular and cost around $40 each for synthetics or $80 each for the genuine item imported from Mexico.

To replace seat, roof and side-panel upholstery, first carefully "strip" the old fabric piece by piece, by slicing the thread holding the seams together with a razor or utility knife. You may also have to unscrew or unclip the car's door panels, remove trim pieces around the doors, ceiling and windshield, and detach the metal bows that hold the roof liner tight. It takes about four hours to strip a car's upholstery completely.

Lay each intact piece across the re-upholstering material and use it as a pattern to cut out the new pieces. Sew the new pieces together the same way the old pieces came apart (sew them inside out so the seams won't show).

To re-carpet the floorboards, pull out the old carpet or rubber floor mat and use it as a pattern to cut new carpet. It only takes a few yards of carpet, so the best source is remnants, which are available cheap at any carpet store. For $15 to $20, you should be able to do the job nicely, and you'll have a wide variety of colors and styles from which to choose.

Finally, the dashboard. If it's made of plastic-coated foam and, like most, is split or warped from the sun's heat, the simple solution is to glue a new layer over the original.
