BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

To Lead, there are my God; I will exult that, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things; thy compassions are as far as heaven and truthfulness as a shield.

NO HARVEST RIPENING

From The Saturday Review of Literature:
Come quickly, winter, for the heart beats to the warm days, these August skies are all too late to suit the time.

Oh bring the frost that strikes the daisies down

Oh bring the frost that strikes the daisies down, in one cruel night, the blackened buds, the brown and withered heads, the crippled stems, we crave.

One good way to end the war

One good way to end the war would be for the German general staff to give Hitler back his old job as corporal.

A Fort Lauderdale hotel manager on a fishing trip off the Florida coast

A Fort Lauderdale hotel manager on a fishing trip off the Florida coast is quoted in the Miami Daily News as encountering a German submarine and being hailed by its commanding officer. The hotel manager didn't want to investigate, he said, but promptly left for home.

We still are fascinated by that proposal of a white back to have John L. Lewis go west

We still are fascinated by that proposal of a white back to have John L. Lewis go west and organize the German army. And all the war is a side-show, they are both armies pulling that back-Draft banner. We can't imagine any better way to whip the Germans than to export them over there.

Homicide Rates

With the stage now set in Europe for perhaps the greatest holocaust in history, statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company have announced that in the United States murders and homicides are now definitely on the wane, and have declined since 1921 in a greater degree than in any other country except Finland.

The homicide death rate among the company's industrial policyholders in 1938, a bulge in the company's statistics, was the lowest ever recorded for them, and dropped to 4.4 per 100,000. This figure was 27 percent below the rate for 1931, which was the last of many years in which the mortality rate had remained practically constant.

Changing its trend after 1931, the homicide rate for the general population, as well as for the insured wage-earners, is said to have kept pace each year since then with the downward course of the general death rate. This rather puzzling change for the better has led the statisticians to ask if "we are at last learning, in some small measure, to control the propensity of men to kill one another?"

The unexpected improvements in the general death rate and in the death rates for many individual diseases during the past seven years of economic disturbance have been attributed to the belief that "the organization of excellent relief work has at least retarded the effects of unemployment and lower living standards upon the health of the people. This very explanation may apply to the recent reduction in crimes of violence."

While the American homicide rate has been dropping consistently, it still has the unpleasant distinction of ranking with Finland's as higher than that of any country, according to the Metropolitan. The lowest figures are for England and Wales, Scotland, Denmark, and the Netherlands.

The Steel Industry Improves

In a recent issue of Forbes magazine is an interesting explanation of why the steel industry is booming. Steel, which has long been in the doldrums, and was one of the first in the country to feel the devastating effects of the depression, has always been regarded as a barometer of economic conditions. Now steel is booming, and here is the reason why:

- 1. Moderate orders came from European countries preparing for war, before hostilities were unleashed.
2. Foreign markets formerly supplied by Britain, Germany, Belgium, etc., have turned to this country.
3. The U. S. national defense program has called and is calling for substantial amounts of steel and is providing considerable employment for the fashioning of various kinds of armaments.
4. Our Maritime Commission has been following a vigorous building policy, consuming sizable steel tonnages.
5. The outbreak of war came at a time when, events revealed, steel inventories in every important field here were incredibly depleted.
6. Something of a stampede occurred among consumers. The automotive industry, which had been holding back, suddenly became impressed by the fact that it must have steel to produce its 1940 models; so, leading manufacturers rushed in extensive orders, confident that the prices then prevailing would be marked up rather than down under the impetus of war. Railroads had for years skimped; they immediately placed contracts which amounted to quite a big total. Steel shippers, who had been coasting along with extremely scanty orders, desired themselves.

Altogether it looks as if steel were in for a long period of prosperity, and the same elements which are helping steel are also reacting for the benefit of other industries.

Mines Exact Heavy Toll Of Shipping During Week-end

The three additional ships sunk by German mines were listed by the Admiralty as:
The 5,857-ton Italian merchant ship Gratia, out of Genoa.
The 1,596-ton Swedish vessel Roberjesson, and
The British merchant ship Blackhill, 2,622 tons, out of Newcastle.
In addition, a 1,530-ton Lithuanian freighter, the Tamas, en route to England without cargo, went down Saturday in the English channel after striking a mine. One of its crew of 17 was lost and the others were landed at Zeebrugge, Belgium.
Five persons were killed in the explosion which sank the Italian freighter Gratia early Sunday, about five miles off the British east coast. Two vessels rescued about 29 survivors.
A huge pillar of smoke immediately following the explosion was seen clearly from the shore and police immediately cleared the jetty while ambulances, nurses and doctors rushed up.
Seven members of the 20-man crew of the Swedish ship Roberjesson were missing and perhaps lost. The survivors were rescued from a raft by two trawlers and taken to an English port. Twenty-two men were rescued from the sinking Blackhill, which went down Saturday. The survivors, including the captain, were landed today.

A gale along the Belgian coast ripped many mines from their moorings and topped them up on the seacoast.
One of these escaped mines exploded against the break-water at Bredene, Belgium, Saturday, breaking the windows of a military hospital in Ostend, three miles away. Another exploded on the beach at Duynce, causing damage.
Many floating German mines, cut from their moorings by the gale, also were reported to have been washed up on the British coast.

Britain Will Retaliate For Ship Sinkings

English To Seize Exports Of Germans On High Seas For Illegal Mine Use

Two More Vessels Sunk Off England

Freighters Attacked By Nazi Warships Near Spanish Coast

Britain today decided to seize exports of German ownership or origin on the high seas in retaliation for what Chamberlain called German "ruthless brutality" in laying mines which accounted for two more ship sinkings near England.

As he made the announcement in Commons, the 11,350-ton Japanese liner Tokumaru Maru was downed off the English east coast after striking a mine. She carried a crew of 180 and 26 passengers. A life boat went to the rescue.

Earlier it was reported the 329-ton trawler Sea Sweeper was sunk by a submarine off Ireland and the crew of 12 saved.

A Lisbon dispatch reported two British freighters were attacked yesterday by German warships off the Spanish west coast. British minesweeping trawlers fighting the suddenly increased mine menace off England were sunk by a mine.

The Admiralty announced the sinking of the British naval vessel since the war started. Germany, invading southeastern England by air the second time in two days, lost a special plane that down by British fighters.

One of the lost naval trawlers, sunk yesterday, was the 400-ton Maullif, one of the newest light naval trawlers. British disclosures her Baltic fleet was holding large-scale maneuvers from the new Baltic bases.

A German news agency said 127 vessels had been forced to enter German harbors for search since the war started. Both Germany and France said land warfare is at a minimum.

FDR Said To Be Planning Cut In National Deficit

Move To Be Made By Cut In General Expenditures, Relief

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP)—The 1940 budget designed to cut the federal deficit for the year to around $2,500,000,000 by offsetting higher defense costs with lower relief and other expenditures and increased tax revenues, was reported today to be under Whitehouse consideration.

Although official figures were not obtained, Stephen Early, White House secretary, said the surpluses sharply reduced this deficit pretty close.

Getting the deficit to two billion was said to be the desire of some administration circles, but the figure was said reliably to be too optimistic.

The amount of next year's revenue constitutes perhaps the biggest question mark in the President's budget making.

Officials say that since business is better, tax revenues should be higher. Some experts have been extremely conservative in guessing over the amount of gain, however. Current guesses are that this year's deficit will range from three to four billions.

PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, business conditions in Sanford during the past few years have failed to improve at a rate commensurate with that found in other Florida cities;

WHEREAS, Sanford is so situated as to enjoy the most prosperous conditions of any Central Florida city if the opportunities which are open to it were properly utilized;

WHEREAS, the unfavorable business conditions here are generally known to be due in large measure to the inclination of our citizens to trade out of town;

WHEREAS, I consider it my duty as Mayor to assemble all possible facts showing the disadvantages to our city of trading out of town and to use every means in my power to convince the people of Sanford that this practice will eventually undermine the foundation of all business life in this city thus affecting every citizen adversely;

WHEREAS, I, Edward Higgins, as Mayor of Sanford, do hereby proclaim a period of four months beginning Nov. 21, a "trade at home campaign," and call upon every citizen to buy the supplies for his home or business from Sanford merchants to the end that this city may enjoy the prosperity which rightly belongs to it.

4 Months' Campaign To Improve Local Business Gets Under Way Today

$500,000 A Year Is Spent Outside

Merchants Asked To Stock Goods And Meet Competition

A proclamation providing for a "Trade At Home Campaign" beginning Nov. 21 and extending over a four month period was issued today by Mayor Edward Higgins who said that the outstanding cause for Sanford's failure to progress at a rate comparable with other cities in Central Florida has been the tendency of local people to buy out of town.

Following a number of conferences with local bank officials and other business men, the Mayor estimated that more than $500,000 is spent every year in other cities. Sanford residents buy from other cities, he estimated, about $1,000,000.

It would be difficult to estimate the amount of goods as they are used to supply the demand for such goods in other cities, but the Mayor estimates that Sanford merchants supply and sell to his own city about $1,000,000.

Merchants are asked to stock goods and meet competition. The Mayor said that the following items are being submitted to the merchants:
