FAD

Now that Walter Johnson plans an attempt to duplicate George Washington's feat of tossing a silver dollar across the Rappahannock river at Fredericksburg, Va., it has become quite the fad for citizens of the town to try out their throwing prowess. Homestead Amendment Took Property Worth $49,243,212 Off Taxation Rolls

TALLHASSEE, Feb. 21.—(AP)—Reports by county tax assessors to Comptroller Lee showed that the homestead tax exemption amendment took property with assessed valuation of $49,243,212 off the tax rolls of assessment for governmental operating expenses.
This figure, however, was less than half of the $109,021,385, assessed valuation of non-exempt property off the assessment rolls because of delinquent taxes.
With operating taxes not levied on homesteads, two classes, other properties on which taxes were levied showed assessed valuation of $384,059,840, and the Comptroller's office estimated the State tax levy of 5 1/2 mills on this valuation would produce about $1,782,513.
Real estate made up $236,971,887 of the non-exempt property, with personal property and utilities assessed at $45,847,006, and railroad and telegraph properties assessed at $32,339,908.
When taxes become delinquent on property, the tax certificates pass to the state and assessments are not carried over into the next year. When certificates are redeemed, however, the delinquents must be paid as well as taxes that would have been assessed if the property had remained on the tax rolls.
DeKalb county, with $45,458,330 leads the state in the value of non-exempt real estate assessed for taxes, while Hillsborough county, with $12,304,350, leads in the value of property under delinquent tax certificates.

Sanford District Proposes Melton As Legion Leader

Georgia Publisher Is Put In Nomination At Sunday Meeting

Country precincts in Seminole County will have representation in the next State Legislature, by reason of action taken by the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee in specifying groups in which candidates for the House of Representatives shall run. The committee placed Precincts 1 and 3 (Sanford) in one group and all the other precincts in another group, and each candidate must be a resident of the group he proposes to represent.

Heretofore it was possible for both representatives from this county to be residents of Sanford, but under the new rule, only one will be elected from Sanford, and the other will come from outside the county's metropolis.

Two candidates had announced for the Legislature before the committee met, and both are residents of Sanford, classed as Group 1. They are H. J. Lehman, former city commissioner, and E. E. Brady, who served in the Legislature last year.

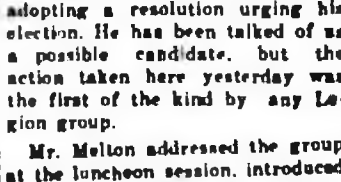

The resolution on the division of the legislative groups was presented by F. K. Anderson, new member of the committee from Altamonte Springs, and was seconded by J. H. Lee of Oviedo. It reads as follows:

He was escorted to the City by a delegation from DeLand, Daytona Beach and other towns, and when he left he drove through streets lined with flags.

In his brief address of welcome, Acting Mayor Shinholser referred to the day being the anniversary of the birth of Washington who tackled a big job and saw it through, "and the heart of every American throbs when a man cuts out a job and says with a smile it is finished." Such a man, he said, is Commander VanZandt, to wish the people of Sanford "with us being friends."

Debunking American Heroes

The New York school board which passed a certain textbook on early American history because it contained the infamous statement concerning the battle of Yorktown that "Corwallis' troops fought bravely," has nothing on the chambers of commerce in Virginia which have just discovered that certain WPA writers, digging up material for the new "Guide Book to America," are "blatantly" such American heroes as Captain John Smith.

The WPA concocted the tawdry story of the romantic love of Pocahontas, the Indian princess, for the English explorer, but, more than that, they accused him of selling a motherly white boy, a ward, into slavery to an Indian chief. It was this accusation, coupled with the more general charge that Captain Smith was a soldier of fortune, that stirred the ire of Virginians.

The slavery incident as related by the WPA writers dates back to 1607. Under the heading "Sold Up the River," these writers told how Captain Smith, proceeding up the James River, came upon a spot that he thought ideal for a settlement. He tried to buy the land from the Indian chieftain of that neighborhood, Taux Powhatan, for the usual consideration of a few colored beads and other trinkets, but the chief scorned them and demanded no less a price than Captain Smith's ward and companion, Henry Spelman, as a personal slave.

The idea of selling into slavery to an uncivilized Indian chief a fellow English citizen, a motherly boy under his care, might have been expected to fill Captain Smith with repugnance, the WPA writers suggested, but "quite the contrary, he accepted the chief's proposition with alacrity and delivered Spelman to his owner. The English patriot may thus be credited with initiating the slave traffic here."

"Although cheer and brave," the WPA writers concluded, "Smith was, after all, a soldier of fortune in a way when military adventures still reigned Europe, sophisticated and ruthless, ready to take orders from the highest bidder. Hence it was not out of character that he should have been the first European to sell a slave on our soil."

Penal Colonies

Special penal colonies on islands and other remote territorial possessions may be the solution of the prison reform problem in this country, according to Sanford Bates, director of the United States Bureau of Prisons, as published in the United States News.

Improvements in prison conditions during recent years have been inadequate, contends Mr. Bates, and "we might be worse than to study the possibilities of establishing island prisons." Modern humane practices have eliminated the cruelities Mr. Bates insists, which have been practiced on the "Devil's Islands" of other nations.

In a visit to Russia last summer he found that the Russians have had success in their attempts to set up prison communities where they attempt "not so much to correct and retrain the individual delinquent as to remove and isolate him under newer and more hopeful environment."

SELECT THE BABY'S first shoe carefully. It should be of soft leather throughout. It must be longer than the foot when the child stands, wide enough to allow for a good spread of the toes, and not tight anywhere, especially over the top of the foot. In order to stay on, these first shoes extend above the ankle and are therefore higher than the shoes the child will wear later. When he is older, choose the sandal, moccasin, or oxford. It is my experience that the low type of shoe makes the ankle stronger by encouraging the use of the muscles, while the high leather shoe is apt to deprive the foot of sufficient exercise. The essentials for a good shoe for a child are that it be shaped like the foot, with a straight inner sole, and that it have a flexible rather than a stiff sole. Try to keep it lightweight.—Dr. Josephine H. Kenyon in Good Housekeeping.

FLORIDA HIGHLIGHTS

While the airplane has been used as a vehicle of transportation for more than a quarter of a century, its adaptation to commerce was first exploited during the winter of 1914. At that time, the Initial Air Transport Line in the United States was established in Florida, operating between Tampa and St. Petersburg for a period of three months each year and carrying both passengers and express.

Since this pioneer commercial air service, the world has witnessed the development of this era. Today, there is a vast network of commercial air lines connecting Florida not only to all parts of this country, but to Cuba, Nassau and South American points.

In various Indian mounds throughout the state, many valuable relics and scientific data have been found that have done much to acquire us with the degree of civilization attained by the ancient Indian tribes of Florida. Several years ago a number of these ancient relics were uncovered on Warden Island near St. Petersburg. Some were found to be masterpieces of aboriginal decorative art. The color range of the pottery itself as found to be as extensive as the hues of the rainbow. So valuable was this collection that the finest specimens were put in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington.

King Edward Shows His Sox To Win Britons To New Modes

LONDON, Feb. 24.—King Edward VIII, following his first public engagement since his accession to the throne, visited the Olympos and White City sections of the British Industries Fair and disclosed that he wears soft-soled, slipper-like shoes, which he wears with socks, like to try on new shoes, is interested in paper collars and shirts and would like to see such feathers return to fashion.

The new monarch wore a bowler hat and dark overcoat and smoked a cigarette while making a two-hour tour of the mercantile exhibits. In his enthusiasm for some of the things he saw the democratic King did not stand on ceremony, and once he bowed a royal leg to illustrate his point.

At White City the King showed great interest in a stand displaying "self-cleaning" socks.

"I have been wearing socks like these for four years," he confided to companions. "They are the most remarkable socks you can get. In fact, I'm wearing a pair now."

Throughout the King drew up his sweater leg and revealed a black sock with a band of elastic around the top, thus eliminating the need for garters.

"These socks are jelly good," he said, smiling broadly. "British buyers should try out more new things. I always do myself."

Gold shoes made from duck cloth also interested the King. He had his eyes turned on a strange, rectangular soft hat worn by London bobbies in the Victoria '80s. He touched the hat against a table and smilingly observed: "This would make a grand baby hat."

As the Irish linen socks the King examined here used for airplane wear, remarking: "I know this is a corker with it. He knew several of them himself."

The leather King proved ready to a display of formal shoes, which he described very briefly.

In Columbia Street, Albany, the King examined a pair of shoes, which he described very briefly.

How's Your Health

DIETARY FUNDAMENTAL. There is a disastrous happy medium between excessive preoccupation with and total indifference to one's diet. In this happy medium certain dietary fundamentals are kept in mind.

One fundamental concerns the caloric intake. Too little and too much caloric intake have each their disadvantages. More public emphasis has been placed on overweight than underweight. Yet underweight associated with undernutrition has a significant drawback in the lack of nutritional reserve against emergencies and in the absence of the protective layers of fat, as essential to good appearance as comfort.

As to caloric intake, an adult male of average living, an ordinary life in a temperate climate and not engaged in manual work, requires 2,500 calories a day. When the individual does unusual work, he should supplement the basic caloric intake in amount, providing an hour of labor, according to whether the work is light, moderate or hard.

At least half or more of the basic diet, should be composed of foods generally designated as "protective." These foods are the foundation of the daily diet in which the rest of the caloric intake may be added according to choice. These dietary fundamentals are:

A pint of milk, 4 1/2 ounces of meat, fish or poultry, one egg, one cup of cheese, 3/4 ounces of fruit and leafy vegetables, 1/2 cup of potato, and an appropriate amount of cod liver oil or other vitamin-D-containing food or substitute.

The basic diet will provide approximately 1,600 calories and correct amount of vitamins, minerals, phosphorus, iron and zinc, and a B, C, D, E, K, and P.

It is important to eat a variety of foods, and to eat them in moderation, and to eat them at regular intervals.

George Of Greece Playboy No More; King Job Is Hard

Recalled Monarch Is Making King Business Serious Work

By ALEXANDER BEDGWICK
 ATHENS, Feb. 17.—(AP)—From a dapper man-about-town in London, during his 12 years' exile, George II, King of the Hellenes, has become a stern-faced, business-like monarch—already showing the grain of sovereignty in this turbulent realm.

"I shall dedicate my capacity for work to the nation," he said when he returned to the throne a little more than two months ago.

At the time few realized the force behind that pledge.

Athens had a picture of him based on reports from abroad—a handsome, stylishly-dressed man of leisure, dining in gay West End cafes in London, playing tennis on the French Riviera.

But the king has kept his word, with a dead seriousness in every gesture—and a will of iron.

The 12-year interlude of ease has ended. He has gone on a strict diet. He drinks with extreme moderation.

He rises at 8 o'clock in the morning, reaches his desk at 9 sharp, and works with dynamic energy often until late at night.

He has not yet appeared on the tennis court, finding time only for brief walks in the palace gardens, and his social life has consisted almost entirely of conversations with ministers and officers of the army, navy and air force.

Those who believed he would become merely a "show-piece" king, under the thumb of the former dictator, General Kondyia, and bedeviled by conflicting party interests, have good reason for amazement.

Countless stories of his technique in "crushing" in subordination are told over the coffee cups in Athens. Perhaps the most noteworthy recounts how a group of disgruntled officers, without asking for-page-leaves, called at the palace in a body.

Ushered into the king's study, they were kept waiting until they began to fume. When the king appeared, at last, he had changed his clothes. He stood before them in the full uniform of commander-in-chief of the Greek army, and stiffly returned their salutes.

He permitted one of them to talk. The spokesman protested vehemently against the granting of grace to military and naval officers involved in the ill-fated Venizelou revolt last March.

King George listened attentively. Then he said:

"During my years of absence in England I learned the value of discipline. I believe it is the wisest policy for officers not to interfere with politics."

He saluted. The interlude was ended.

The officers gaped, gulped—and backed out of the room.

New Lloyd Comedy Is Full Of Mirth

Harold Lloyd's comedy, "The Milky Way," had its local premiere yesterday at the Miami Theater. Laughter strews the path of the spectacular comedian in his timely progress from the unenviable life of a milkman to the pulsing career of a middleweight fight champion.

There is a gorgeously goofy idea in this picture. The hilarity is unabated. Lloyd is cast as a poor sap of a milkman, an obscure fellow scared of his own shadow. He is always slipping out of trouble. Quite a slipper, in fact.

He steps into the limelight by ducking away from a blow aimed at him by a drunken cory of the middleweight champion. The champ gets the sock and goes down for the count. Reporters pounce on the milkman. He brags, and is egged on into declaring that he "knocked out the great undefeated champ." This catapults Lloyd into fame as a contender. A promoter collars him and puts him into training. He is forced to fight the champ. There is going to be a massacre—with the ex-milkman scheduled to be on the receiving end of the punishment.

It would be spoiling the fun to tell you what happens when trembling Lloyd, spectacles and all, is shoved into the ring.

Albert C. Ritchie Died Suddenly In Home Early Today

he said, they were so long the temperance problem by local option by which communities desiring prohibition "actually get it."
"The Volstead Act," he asserted, "changed all this. Our people in the main regard it as an unnecessary and drastic federal infringement of their state and personal right, foreign to the spirit of the federal union and resulting in a sectional tyranny that the people of my state will not brook."

These bold statements nearly broke up the conference. But his views became the platform of other enemies of the Volstead Act, and his prestige increased, slowly at first and then rapidly.
Ten years after the White House conference, he stood on the Democratic convention floor in Chicago and helped put a strong repeal plank in the national platform. He wanted to see the party's five Committee that Group No. 1 of candidates for the House of Representatives in the primary shall consist of candidates residing within precinct numbers 1 and 3 of said Seminole County, and that Group No. 2 shall consist of candidates residing in other precincts of the County.

Committee Divides Seminole County's Legislative Groups

It was ordered that a copy of the resolution be "transferred to the clerk of the Circuit Court for his guidance in accepting fees and preparing the ballot for candidates of the House of Representatives."

Reading of the resolution pledging support to the President brought cheers from committee-men and others present, and it was passed by a chorus of "aye" votes. This resolution, signed by R. J. Holly as chairman and S. M. Lloyd as secretary of the committee, reads as follows:

"Our great leader and humanitarian, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, taking the reins of government at a time of crisis in the affairs of this country when business life was at a low ebb and but little hope of solution of tangled affairs could be offered the suffering people, we take pride in his wonderful achievements during the past three years.

"He will receive criticism for a program of spending when this spending was to save a starving people, to attempt to rehabilitate those who had been without jobs for several years, saving their homes and farms with government loans when all else had failed. And in this particular County of Seminole where farming is the major activity we can look with pride upon the fact that President Roosevelt with his various agencies came to our relief and made it possible to carry on farming operations that would otherwise have ceased entirely as far as the present owners were concerned."

"Few presidents have ever taken office under such trying circumstances and President Roosevelt, having the confidence of the people, went manfully to work to 'pull this country out of the miasma of despair and absolute hopelessness. Not only were the banks and file aided, but the big corporations that were suffering for ready money to make improvements and carry on were also assisted by the use of millions of government money. Banks were placed upon a firmer foundation along with the man about to lose his little home who was assisted by long time loans that he could not obtain elsewhere."

"President Roosevelt has made good and as loyal Democrats in assembly here today we again pledge him our whole-hearted support that he may give this country four years more of honest, fearless and efficient government."

be placed on the government when there is doubt as to whether ill health of a veteran could be traced to his service. Next in importance is child welfare work, and in this endeavor the Legion has aided more than 1,200,000. In this connection he praised the hospital for crippled children that the veterans are maintaining in St. Petersburg.

The third most important plank in the Legion program, in Mr. Melton's opinion, is the obtaining for widows and orphans of men who served in the World War "the same pension as is granted dependents of soldiers in other wars."

While he mentioned three other items first, Mr. Melton stated that he was "stressed" Americanism and to urge a continuance of the fight against communism. "The high schools will graduate a million boys and girls this spring, colleges and universities will graduate other hundreds of the same, but what are these young people to do when they leave school?" he asked.

There are 10 million aliens in the United States who have expressed no desire to become citizens. One-third of them entered this country illegally. About two million are on the relief rolls. Four million are engaged in gainful occupations, in positions that should be filled by Americans. Don't misunderstand me, I am not criticizing the foreigner who becomes a citizen. We welcome such, we are all dependents of immigrants, I had 24 different nationalities in my company. But we do not want the undesirable alien, and we should insist on his being deported."

In closing his short address Mr. Melton urged every Legion post to organize a Sons of the Legion and to "train the next generation to love and reverence and fight for the ideals for which we fought during the war and for which we stand in these days of peace." He said that the "strings" of the "volts of democracy" or which Uncle Sam is now playing are becoming frayed and that when the last veteran is gone, "Uncle Sam will be unable to play the fight kind of a tune unless new strings are put into the violin. 'I hope and pray,' he said, that the 'one that will be played by these clean young lives will be clearer, and sweeter and truer than any we have ever been able to play, for the hope of the future depends on the boys and girls of today."

A committee composed of F. K. Anderson, L. J. Hartley and W. V. Dunn was named to prepare resolutions expressing the regret of the County Committee in the death of J. W. Oster, who represented the Altamonte Springs district on the committee for more than 30 years.

"Much Relieved," Says Lady After Taking CARDUI

Although they may be very active and apparently in good health, many women, at certain times will do well to take Cardui. It may relieve some of the nagging symptoms that are so annoying every month.

Mrs. F. T. Foster, of Greensburg, Ky., writes that she has "derived great benefit" from Cardui. "Before taking Cardui, I was weak and extremely nervous, and suffered from sleeplessness. This made me tired and worn in daytime. My back ached continually. Being an active woman, I did not want to continue in this condition. Having heard a great deal about Cardui, I found, after just a few bottles, I was much relieved. I continued taking Cardui and was so much helped."

Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

A FARMER WRITES AN "AD" ABOUT DOUBLE-MELLOW OLD GOLDS!

Solo, New York
November 16, 1935.

F. Lorillard Company, Inc.,
119 West 40th Street,
New York City, N.Y.

Gentlemen: I am an old man who knows what he likes. A hill farmer is a stubborn cuss, and when he takes to cigarettes when he's well gone by 50 years, he has good reasons for wanting these cigarettes. And for some time now I haven't touched any smoking but OLD GOLDS.

My brother's son got me on cigarettes, but the ones he gave me seemed too quick-burning. One day our general storekeeper showed me one of those Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS, made of prize tobacco. And I had a great cigarette that night. I liked it so much that I bought a pack. I've bought Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS ever since, and every time I buy a pack I buy a Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS. I don't smoke any other cigarettes.

Hagood's Case Threatens To Become Issue

Removal Of General Is Criticized By Congress Leaders In Both Parties

Called Example Of 'Terrorism'

Chief-Of-Staff Ought To Be Impeached, Democrat Declares

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—(AP)—Senator Harrison, Republican, Delaware, today declared that there was no better illustration of terrorism in government than the removal of Major General Johnson Hagood from his command of the Eighth Corps Area for speaking his mind before a House committee. Hagood, in what has already threatened to become a political issue, was ordered home to "wait orders" shortly after telling a House subcommittee that the Works Progress Administration funds were "fatigued money."

"There is an effort on the part of the commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy to see to it that nothing reflects on his administration, not of the Army and Navy but of general affairs of the administration," the senator said.
