Teen Court: Kids decide kids' fate

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Peer pressure is often blamed for teens getting in trouble. Some Seminole County officials are hoping that positive peer pressure will prevent youths who commit minor crimes from continuing down a lawless path in life.

Plans for a teen court which will begin operation Oct. 10 were outlined this morning by PAY program officials, the assistant state attorney in charge of the juvenile division and a spokeswoman for the Greater Orlando Junior League which is helping organize the program.

Pummeling a kid brother or sister who just wrecked your CD collection might be seen as justifiable by many teens and their peers, but that is not the type case to be presented to the new court.

The Teen Court will handle cases of first time offenders charged with minor crimes such as petty thefts, victimless offenses where little or no restitution is involved. The teens will pronounce punishment for the offender.

Teen Court is based upon the philosophy that a youthful law violator does not continue to be an offender when a peer jury decides punishment.

School budget OK'd; year round education blasted by parents

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — They were few, but they were not quiet.

Those who attended Thursday evening's final public hearing on the 1995-96 Seminole County public schools budget had definite opinions.

A Sanford Police officer stood, arms crossed, at the back of the room to ensure order as the nine taxpayers who chose to speak made their way to the podium and as the board members made their responses.

He moved only slightly when one gentleman began to raise his voice out of turn at a point of disagreement. The outburst was otherwise ignored.

While several speakers blasted the board for the $457 million budget, some stood to applaud the board's courage in presenting "what was needed to ensure the quality of education" in the district.

Most, however, took the opportunity to speak against multi-track year round education. Once heralded as a money-saving measure and a boon to educational quality, the modified school calendar has disrupted family life, has cost too much and has not produced the promised educational results, they said.

Dr. David Meador, a Lake Mary city commissioner, addressed the

Agencies must propose budget cuts

TALLAHASSEE — State agencies once again must propose 25 percent budget cuts for next year's spending plan under a fiscal exercise required by the Republican-led Senate.

Agencies went through the same performance earlier this year for the $39 billion state budget that took effect July 1.

The Legislature did not actually cut spending by 25 percent, but the effort led to hundreds of layoffs, longer lines at driver's license offices and reduced security at highway rest stops.

Lawmakers also shifted hundreds of millions of dollars from social services and health care to prisons and education this year.

Senate Ways and Means Chairman Mario Diaz-Balart, R-Miami, told agency heads that lawmakers still needed to eliminate low-priority programs, increase efficiency and reduce the size of government in the 1996-97 budget.

"While each agency's budget may not be reduced by 25 percent, the purpose of this reduction plan is to mandate re-establishment of priorities in a way that reduces cost," he said in a letter Wednesday.

The Miami Republican already ordered agency heads last month to prepare 3 percent reductions in the current budget because of potential tax collection shortfalls and funding cuts proposed by Congress. He told agencies to submit their proposals by Oct. 6.

Supporters fear activist's trial unfair

PENSACOLA — Supporters say they are afraid a right-wing activist and publisher from Pensacola will not get a fair trial in his native Germany where he is accused of inciting racial hatred.

Hans Schmidt, 68, being held in a German prison without bail, was arrested last month in Frankfurt and faces a five-year sentence if convicted.

He allegedly denies the Holocaust took place and refers to Jews as "contamination" in a German-language newsletter he publishes here but distributed in Germany.

"Even his attorney is terrified to talk about the case because it is such a politically sensitive subject," Mark Wolaky, organizer of the Hans Schmidt Defense Committee in Green Brook, N.J., said Wednesday.

The German government will not allow supporters to contact Schmidt in prison.

"He has been treated like a common criminal," said another backer, Robert Countess of Toney, Ala.

Schmidt has gained supporters in a dozen states, partly through the Internet, a network of computer users who share their thoughts and information.

Band director suspended over mirror

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A high school band director is being blamed for not alerting officials about the existence of a two-way mirror in front of which the school's pompon squad changes clothes.

Keith Stark is fighting a 10-day suspension for not sealing the mirror, which sits between the band room and a storage room at Sarasota High School.

Stark's band room has doubled as a dressing room for members of the pompon squad since the early 1980s. School officials say the girls often stand before the two-way mirror to touch up their makeup and fix their hair.

But the mirror was actually a window covered on one side with reflective coating.

The window was sealed a year ago when an angry U.S.A. Theresa Baus, complained to the school district. Her daughter quit the squad when she learned about the mirror.

"I am livid that he left my daughter open to that kind of a situation," said Baus, who testified before a state hearing officer Wednesday. "He had a responsibility to inform students and inform parents, and he chose not to do that."

Stark is not accused of looking through the mirror. But the school board accused him of "poor judgement" for not telling anyone about it.

Bus driver seriously injured

HOLLYWOOD — A Broward County school bus driver was seriously injured after the bus she was driving crashed into a parked car, cut a swath through front yard and slammed into the bedroom of a nearby home.

Mary Giesendanner, 48, and her driver assistant, Donna Williams, 37, were taken Thursday to Hollywood Memorial Hospital where Giesendanner was in serious condition. Williams was not seriously injured and was released.

The bus was carrying a teen and her baby to a teen mothers' program at a nearby high school. Lekeahia Youmans, 17, and her 9-month-old daughter were not hurt.

Frank Johnson said he was watching television in his living room when he heard the loud noise of the bus crashing into the bedroom about 40 feet away.

"I knew it was an accident," he said. "I looked out the window and I saw the big bus right in front."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Welfare reform Graham to push amendments for state $$

By BILL KAGAN
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA — U.S. Sen. Bob Graham says he is hoping to win enough Republican support to change the funding formula of a GOP welfare reform bill that shortchanges fast-growth states like Florida.

The Florida Democrat said Thursday in Washington that he would offer an amendment to the Republican bill next week that would give Florida nearly $300 million more in federal assistance.

"I offered this in the Senate Finance Committee, and it lost on a fairly close vote and it had some Republican support," Graham said in a telephone interview.

Graham, of Miami Lakes, wants to change the formula so states would get money based solely on the number of poor children they have rather than on how much they spent on Aid to Families with Dependent Children last year.

The GOP bill would continue an existing formula of matching state dollars spent at the 1994 level but no longer require states to make such expenditures. It would mean dramatic shortfalls for fast-growth states and those unable or unwilling to spend much on welfare, Graham said.

Florida would get $582 million per year under the GOP plan and at least $673 million under Graham's proposal. Most other Southern states would benefit from Graham's plan but the big losers would be California and some of the northern industrial states.

Graham argued against the Republican bill in floor debate Thursday on a Democratic alternative that was defeated in a nearly party-line vote, citing his experience with Florida's experimental time-limited welfare reform program.

He had spent one of his "work days" in July as a counselor with Escambia County's Family Transition Program in Pensacola.

The pilot project, in operation 18 months, cuts off aid to welfare recipients after two or three years but provides extra benefits, such as day care, transportation and schooling, to help them find and hold jobs.

A similar voluntary program is operating in Alachua County. The Clinton administration Wednesday granted the state waivers to add six more counties where the program would be mandatory as in Escambia.

"One of the lessons from the Pensacola Family Transition Program is that you can move people from welfare to work, that people want to have that chance," Graham said in the interview.

"There also are some realities involved in terms of how many people you can move, how quickly the transition can take place and what are the front-end investments that have to be made," he said.

The Republican legislation would lack sufficient money for such programs, Graham said.

The GOP bill would slash federal welfare spending by an estimated $70 billion over the next seven years compared to a $20 billion reduction under the Democratic version.

Police: Runaway teen kills parents

By Associated Press

LEITCHFIELD, Ky. — The youngster wanted out of 11th grade, wanted away from his parents in the small Kentucky farming town where his family had lived for generations.

So Derek McStoots — who, at 16, was on that thin line between adolescence and adulthood — took his father's pickup and ran away from home. He made it as far as Daytona Beach, Fla., before his parents brought him back.

Hours later, Derek ran away again. This time, though, there was no chance his parents would come after him.

He killed them, police say. Bradford McStoots, 45, was shot once in the head as he slept, then beaten with the boy's hunting rifle. Mary Coleen Kerr McStoots, 44, was awakened by the shot and bludgeoned so severely with the rifle that its wooden stock shattered. Her body was found in the hall.

Derek, a small-framed only child in a family of husky men, was captured Tuesday outside a pawn shop in Sulphur Springs, Texas, about 75 miles from Dallas, while driving his mother's Buick. Authorities believe he was trying to sell some items taken from his home in Leitchfield.

The boy was charged with murder.

The crime startled Derek's hometown of 5,000 people, about 65 miles southwest of Louisville. His parents belonged to long-established families in the area. Police said there never were any reports of abuse at home.

"What would enrage one's mind?" asked Coroner Ronald Hudson, who performed the autopsies and had also sold the McStoots furniture from his store downtown. "How do you beat your mommy and daddy?"

No clear motive has emerged, but there were hints of a sometimes stormy relationship with his parents.

Derek had been smoking marijuana for about a year, the coroner said, and spent 16 days in June in a drug rehab center.

Only last week, Mrs. McStoots caved in to Derek's year of pleas and agreed to let him drop out of Grayson County High. She signed the paperwork Aug. 29, which meant he had to attend for 60 more days, Assistant Principal James Berryman said.

Hudson said he found documents in the home suggesting the parents were prepared to send Derek to a psychiatric hospital after he ran away to Florida last weekend. Police wouldn't comment on that.

Derek was caught in Florida when police stopped him for a broken tail light and ran a check on the truck. They sent him to a runaway shelter, where his parents picked him up.

Prosecutors are trying to have him charged as an adult but won't say whether they will seek the death penalty. All court records remain sealed because of his age.

"He wasn't a saint," Berryman said. "He didn't have pointed ears and little horns, either. He had several friends. He wasn't a basketball player, the most popular kid in school, but that doesn't say he didn't have friends."

High court considers fate of 'Crazy Joe'

Staff and Wire Report

Justices of the state Supreme Court, considering the fate of condemned killer Joseph "Crazy Joe" Spaziano, quizzed lawyers about testimony at a trial held nearly 20 years ago, judicial procedure and the role of the state's high court in reviewing death cases.

"The proceeding before us has taken a rather free form," Justice Harry Lee Anstead told Spaziano attorney Michael Mello during Thursday's oral arguments. "This is the way you have approached this case before the court and it's obviously causing us considerable difficulty."

Florida's high court will make a decision on Spaziano's appeal at its own discretion; Spaziano, 49, is scheduled to be executed Sept. 21 for the murder-mutilation of an Orlando woman whose body was found by Seminole County deputies in an Altamonte Springs dump in August 1973.

An attorney for Spaziano asked the justices for a chance to prove his client is innocent of slaying 19-year-old hospital clerk Laura Lynn Harberta. A lawyer for the state, however, urged the justices not to stay Spaziano's execution on "mere speculation."

Mello, the Vermont law professor representing Spaziano, has filed hundreds of pages of pleadings before Florida's high court but began his presentation by telling justices that all the issues were secondary to the fact that his client is innocent.

"I believe that if I had an opportunity to prove Mr. Spaziano's innocence before a jury, he would be acquitted," Mello said. "All I'm asking for ... is a stay of execution and the provision of resources."

Anthony Dilisio, a key prosecution witness in Spaziano's trial, recanted his testimony earlier this year, prompting Gov. Lawton Chiles to suspend Spaziano's fourth death warrant.

However, after an investigation by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement into the recent comments by Dilisio, Chiles said he had no doubts about the case and signed a fifth death warrant last month.

Mello questioned the reliability of the FDLE investigation, which the governor has refused to release, as "supersecret information that supposedly reliable witnesses supposedly told FDLE that supposedly correctly reported to the governor."

But Anstead questioned the strength of Mello's appeal before Florida's high court.

If Mello had filed the proper motion in trial court, he would have been required to pass two tests: whether the recanted testimony was substantial enough to undercut Spaziano's conviction and whether the issue should have been raised earlier.

Anstead asked Mello if he could have jumped through "those two ordinary hoops."

"I can't imagine new evidence more substantial than a disavowal of the critical testimony by the witness," Mello answered. "Justice Ben Overton then interrupted the attorney, asking why he had not presented an affidavit from Dilisio recanting his testimony."

"You have not filed in this record anything that says 'I swear,' an oath by Dilisio," Overton said.

Justice Gerald Kogan did most of the questioning of Margene Roper, an assistant attorney general who presented the state's case.

Roper began by arguing that Spaziano had exhausted all his legal claims and was turning to Florida's high court with issues that properly belonged either before a trial court or the governor and Cabinet, sitting as the Clemency Board.

Kogan asked how the justices, regardless of the procedural problems, could ignore the issue of Dilisio's recantation.

Rising tide of juvenile crime

The Justice Department study released Thursday reports that kids are more and more likely to be involved in crime, as both perpetrators and victims. The Sanford Herald is looking specifically at juvenile crime in Seminole County. It should prove interesting, but of little surprise.

Juvenile crime is on the increase. Not only in numbers of crimes, but at an ever-lowering age level. Major crimes are being committed by children who haven't yet reached double-digits age.

Thursday, an Associated Press report detailed many statistics. They neglected to suggest any reasons other than to say "too many kids are undersocialized and undersupervised."

What supervision and socialization? Who are we looking at, parents, teachers?

It isn't only the adults in contact with children who serve as examples, it is the outside influences which have a great effect as well, if not more.

We have a tendency to believe, as we suspect many do, that so-called entertainment is giving today's youngsters a bad impression. Basically, we believe television programs and motion pictures are among the worst culprits. Since movies first hit the silver-screen and television first came into our homes, violence has increased. Sure, Charlie Chaplin movies had their share of violence as did Keystone Kops shows. Television westerns had plenty of shoot-em-ups. But most people, even the youngsters, were fully aware that this was fiction, presented for entertainment value.

Look what we have on the small and large screens today. It appears as though success is gauged by the number of shots fired or people killed.

Even some of the programs supposedly aimed at elementary school kids, such as the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers, have schooled children involved in battles against enemies who are aimed at destroying the universe in one way or another.

They kick, they shoot, they stab, they bomb their foes, and what do parents do? They go out and buy dolls for their children to emulate this destruction.

In shows aimed at adults, there are often youngsters involved. Some are active in street gangs, while others play the part of either an associate of the good-guy (or bad-guy). They also become involved in violent activities.

What role models these actors' characters are. Would you want your children to act like those you see on television or in the movies?

Gone are the days of the family-value programs and movies. With the exception of Channel 65's telecasting of "Leave it to Beaver," family values have been removed from the world of entertainment. Apparently producers go along with those who believe morals should be taught only by parents and teachers.

As this series on juvenile crime continues to be made public, we urge that everyone give some time to questioning where today's youngsters are receiving their street values. Parents and teachers teach, but who is attracting the true ear and mind of the youngster?

It is about time people began to do something other than be faced with a continuing increase in juvenile crime.

Moderate conservative bugs liberals

A segment on CNN's "Capitol Gang" dealt with the recent announcement of presidential candidacy by California Gov. Pete Wilson, which was delivered in front of the Statue of Liberty. The video clips showed the candidate criticizing a welfare system that offers extra money to recipients who have additional children while on welfare, decrying the fact that law-abiding Americans fear to go outside because of street crime, deploring an affirmative action process that has evolved into de facto quotas and condemning the porous border control that allows a steady stream of illegal immigrants into America.

The CNN commentators were less than happy with Wilson. To Mark Shields, the Wilson announcement seemed like a "recruitment drive for the Montana Militia." Al Hunt announced that "Pete Wilson declaring his candidacy in front of the Statue of Liberty is like David Duke declaring in front of the Martin Luther King Center." (Isn't it nice to have moderate commentators around to condemn the extremists?) Shields and Hunt are not alone; liberals and conservatives alike have shown a reflexive distaste for Wilson's campaign.

I am not now, nor have I ever been, a member of the Montana Militia. I have found David Duke's policies repugnant. But after reading Wilson's speeches from his cross-country "Liberty Tour," I think his campaign is right on target. He is accentuating the social issues and the values issues. "American optimism is being undermined by the federal government..." he says. "It gives lip service to our values, but doesn't seem to share them, and clearly doesn't fight for them."

Not many Americans would disagree that crime and welfare are two of America's most important problems, and that we ought to be tougher on both. The current level of crime is subverting the essence of civil society. Welfare, arguably, is pushing up illegitimate birth rates to an all-time high. That is a clear recipe for social tragedy and turbulence.

Wilson is also right about affirmative action. It started out as a good idea for "outreach," and then led to goals, timetables, sanctions and compliance - that is, to preference, proportionality and quotas. That corrodes the idea of merit, which is central to American values.

Wilson's stand on immigration is more complex. He endorsed California's Proposition 187, which stipulated that the state would no longer pay most social service expenditures for illegal immigrants. That's not a bad idea in principle, although cutting off public schooling for the children of illegal immigrants is probably counterproductive. Most everyone is against illegal immigration. Wilson, however, is not anti-legal-immigration. Pat Buchanan has endorsed cutting out legal immigration. President Clinton, who appears in California to criticize Wilson on immigration, has already signed on to a proposal to reduce legal immigration. Wilson, the alleged nativist, has come out for no so such thing.

Politics is a pastime that never ceases to amaze. If a candidate sticks by his beliefs he is condemned as a dogmatic, inflexible relic.

Isn't it nice to have moderate commentators around to condemn the extremists?

MORTON KONDRACK

Dole's on track for nomination

In spite of his stumble in Iowa last month, GOP front-runner Bob Dole, Kan., is sticking to his game plan: Stay mostly in Washington for the rest of 1995, get "out of here" early next year, and remain Senate majority leader - until he's elected president.

Dole is convinced that being majority leader is his best possible perch for seeking the presidency and aides say that his surprise tie with rival Sen. Phil Gramm, Texas, in last month's Iowa GOP straw poll hasn't affected his plan to stay close to the Senate floor for the rest of 1995.

Dole will campaign on weekends and make occasional big speeches out of Washington - such as an economic address in Chicago - but aides say that handling major legislation garners Dole more attention than he gets on campaign trips.

"Next year, I'll miss a lot of votes," Dole said in an interview. "In January and February, I'll have to turn things over to (Sens.) Trent Lott, Thad Cochran, Don Nickles and others. For an important vote, I'll show up, and again if I show a hot hand" in Iowa and New Hampshire.

Asked what he would do with his leadership job if he wins the early primaries and seems on his way to the GOP nomination, Dole said: "Keep it. It puts you in position every day to go after Bill Clinton, not as one Republican senator among 54, but as the leader."

He said he also would be in a position to "change, to moderate, to amend" legislation coming out of the House. "It's important for the party. I've had a lot of experience. I can feel when we've gone too far, as we've done in some cases," he said.

A potential candidate to succeed Dole as majority leader, Sen. Mitch McConnell, Ky., said, "I don't think (Dole) will ever give up the title. I think he'll keep it till the day he's inaugurated president."

Meantime, there's a GOP nomination to be won, and despite Gramm's strong showing in Iowa and the damage done to Dole by the subsequent bad press, Dole campaign aides insist that Gramm has been unable to make any long-term headway against their candidate, even among conservatives.

A post-Iowa poll conducted by Dole pollster Bill McInturff reportedly shows Dole ahead of Gramm by 47 percent to 16 percent, with California Gov. Pete Wilson at 8 percent and Pat Buchanan at 5 percent.

A July McInturff poll showed Dole beating Gramm among conservatives by 53 to 16 percent, among "very conservative" Republicans, 48 to 24 percent, and among moderates, 45 to 6 percent.

Gramm's technique for catching Dole has been to portray himself as a true-blue conservative and Dole as a mere dealmaker.

But in the interview, Dole complained that Gramm had gotten "a little personal, frankly" with one fund-raising letter in July in which Gramm accused Dole of doing "nothing - absolutely nothing" to win passage of the House Republican "Contract With America" and especially its tax cut provisions.

"Only one person has the clout to get the contract through the Senate - the majority leader," said the Gramm mailing. "Why hasn't Bob Dole done it?" It also contained a "petition" to Dole imploring that he has so far failed to "lead."

Dole said that Gramm was rebuked for "crossing the line" in a Senate GOP leadership meeting by a colleague who's so far neutral in the presidential race - Sen. Kit Bond, Mo., according to sources.

In any event, say Dole campaign aides, both internal and public polls show Gramm not making any headway against Dole.

A CNN poll Aug. 24, in the immediate aftermath of the Iowa straw poll, showed Dole's support dropping from 42 percent in July to 35 percent, but a USA Today poll recently released showed Dole back up to 45 percent, with Gramm at 11, Wilson at 10 and Buchanan at 7, close to the McInturff results.

Polls aside, aides say that the appointment of a full-time Iowa campaign manager - Darrell Kearney, a close ally of Gov. Terry Branstad - is evidence that the Dole campaign got a "wake-up call" from the straw poll outcome.

Still, the Dole campaign is pretty confident, and it has a right to be. After the straw poll, some pundits declared that Dole's front-runnership is now as hollow as Sen. Ed Muskie's, D-Maine, was in 1976 and former Vice President Walter Mondale's was in 1980.

But such comparisons are very likely wrong. Democrats often topple (or at least test) their front-runners, but Republicans nominate by primogeniture: The next male in line gets tapped. This year, that's Dole.

Dole is convinced that being majority leader is his best possible perch for seeking the presidency.

Critics say the darnedest things

"The conference has its sights set on eradicating not women's health or rights problems, but the very nature of femininity.... (Its) agenda focuses on government-mandated sexual freedom and reproductive rights." - author and talk-show host Armstrong Williams in USA Today, discussing the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women

There they go again, those crazy feminists. Running around, trying to get governments to inflict freedom and rights on their poor unsuspecting citizens. What horrors will they think of next? Government-mandated life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness?

There they go again, those crazy feminists.

But before I go into that, I will address the most reasonable objection to U.S. participation in the conference: the choice of China as the venue. Good people have noted the irony of holding a human rights conference in a country with such egregious human rights violations as forced sterilization and the condoning of female infanticide. Paranoid people have suggested it's a communist plot. Please. Actually, China was never really selected as the site - it won by default. Of the nations that were eligible to host the conference - essentially all the Asian member states, since it is Asia's turn to hold a U.N. conference - only China volunteered, so China got the job.

But China is not the problem most critics have with the conference. Quite simply, they just can't stand the idea of a lot of women getting together to discuss women's rights. But since the conference and its draft Platform for Action has such an eminently reasonable agenda - to help ensure basic human rights to women worldwide - its critics are having a hard time whipping up much furor. But they certainly have tried.

"I think it's a bad idea," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole. "It's a left-wing agenda. I mean, when Bella Abzug is co-chair of the conference it makes you wonder why anyone would want to go.... They're going to talk about five sexes. I only thought there were two."

Either Sen. Dole should stop talking without a script, or he should fire his fact-checkers. Not only is Bella Abzug not the co-chair of the U.N. conference, she has absolutely no official capacity at it. The former New York state congresswoman will be representing the Women's Environment and Development Organization, a nongovernmental organization, at the nearby NGO Forum. As for Dole's discussion of five genders, no such reference exists in the platform.

Misrepresenting the U.N. draft agenda is the tool Anita Blair of the Independent Women's Forum used to promote her assertion that the Beijing conference is "cultural imperialism of a very awful kind."

Blair demonstrated her ignorance of the document on the "MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour" recently when she discussed the problems she wished it had addressed, such as sex slavery and rape as a war crime. When it was pointed out that these issues were, in fact, included in the platform, Blair descended into vagaries, saying the document "consigned men to fall off the earth" and concluding that it was anti-family because it frequently uses "household" instead of "family."

This is another well-used tactic of the conference's opponents. Because there is no specific issue with which they can incite mass hysteria, they have resorted to bean counting, running global searches and telling us it means something when the word "mother" only crops up 13 times. (Some will say it's not there at all, but the actual number is 13.)

way to deal with the financial strains facing the district.

David Medley agreed that year round education was not providing the promised benefits, either educationally or financially. He presented the board with a petition calling for them to abandon the year round calendar signed by 3,000 citizens, and promised that more signatures were coming.

"We were told that year round education was beneficial and to be patient," he told the board. "We were told teachers were for it. They are not. We were told it would be beneficial to the children. It is not. When you took steps to inaugurate this program, it took courage. I ask that you have the same courage and move to step away from it."

To rousing applause, he suggested that year round education was a "drain on education, on relationships and on the economic resources of the district."

Harry Ellis reproached the board for asking for more tax dollars after having spent $7 million constructing a "Taj Mahal" (the district administrative building scheduled to open in November).

"A couple of years ago you tried to pass a bond issue to build your Taj Mahal and the voters rejected it and you went ahead and built it. Now you want more money for renovations at the schools. You should have spent that money on the schools," he said.

Don Koshel stepped to the podium to scold the board members for what he saw as a "scandalous misappropriation of funds." He, too, pointed repeatedly to the new administrative building as evidence of that claim.

"You don't have enough money to pay for more schools," he snarled. "but you have enough to pay for that four story Taj Mahal on Lake Mary Boulevard."

He cited a $185,000 expenditure for renovations and repairs on the parking lot at Winter Springs Elementary School last year.

"That money could have been spent on the kids," he said. "Why do you need to spend that kind of money on a parking lot?" Speaking on behalf of the Brevard County Council of PTAs, Judy Wiant, offered support for the budget, but said there needs to be a move away from multi-track year round education.

"We (the PTA) advocate a return to the single track calendar," she said. "(But) your highest priority must be to build more new elementary schools."

Gaye Parker, president of the teachers' union, also expressed support for the budget and tax increase.

"Any hope of expanding services lies in the decision you make tonight," she noted.

The 2.5 mill increase returns the tax rate to the 1993 level for construction. Board members lowered it last year to offset increases elsewhere in the budget.

The board passed the budget by a four-to-one margin with only Barbara Kuhn objecting.

Kuhn said she did not believe the tax increase goes "far enough" to meet the construction needs of the district. She also said she favored the introduction of a bond issue to allow voters decide on a way in which to raise money.

Teens

explained Nancy DeLong manager of the Prosecution Alternatives for Youth (PAY) program, which will assist in the court operation.

"The teens' peers tend to impose tougher penalties than the court," assistant state attorney Laura Bosco said. Cases involving more serious property crimes or drugs will not come before the court.

Teen Court cases can include misdemeanors such as shoplifting, vandalism, minor battery and disorderly conduct. In the future, minor drug possession and other cases may be referred to Teen Court.

About 90 per cent of the cases are expected to be petit theft, Bosco said. The first reported retail theft at the Seminole Towne Center was reported on the second day of operation with only J.C. Penneys and Burdines open.

"We are going to get a lot more of those cases with that new mall opening up," DeLong added.

Initially cases involving high school age students will be referred to the once a month Teen Court session. It is hoped within the coming year, the number of court sessions will expand to once a week and cases involving middle school students will also be accepted.

Teens from local high schools participating in the court will serve as prosecutors, defense attorneys and jurors in cases presided over by an attorney serving as judge. The number of jurors will vary from between 6 to 12, perhaps 8 member juror panels, Bosco explained.

The jury does not decide innocence or guilt. It only assesses sentences. The juvenile going before the teen jury must plead guilty (with a parent's or guardian's consent) if the offender pleads guilty, accepts the sentence and successfully completes it, then the charges are dismissed or not filed. The jury will decide the sentence within guidelines designed to fit the offense. Some possible sentences might include working hours in community service as a volunteer for a non-profit community organization. In addition, all defendants sentenced in Teen Court will sit on future juries as part of their sentence. Other sanctions assigned can include public apology in court, essays, letters of apology and restitution.

"Usually the judge (who is an attorney) will not alter the sentence meted out by the teen jury," explained DeLong. "However, the judge may alter it if he feels undue degradation or humiliation is involved, or that the sentence is too severe." Attorneys can count service as Teen Court judge for Pro Bono hours.

The court will be conducted on the second Tuesday of each month and the target kickoff for the program is Oct. 10 at the Juvenile Detention Center.

"We hope to handle six or seven cases a night," Bosco explained. After one case is presented to a jury and they begin deliberating, Bosco said, a new panel of student jurors will begin hearing another case and so on. Prosecutors will argue for the maximum sentences while defense attorneys will seek lesser sentences.

The program has received widespread community support. High school students interested in the law are being recruited to participate as jurors, prosecutors and defense attorneys.

Seminole Community College has offered space for training sessions and the Junior League is also supporting the program. The initial court hearings will be conducted at the Juvenile Justice Center courtroom. A request is being made to move the court sessions after Jan. 1 to the courthouse so more courtrooms may be used simultaneously in the program.

on-duty officers and assigned personnel to conduct interviews, investigations and process those individuals who may have been apprehended within the mall area.

The space is to be utilized and staffed by designated police personnel.

If approval is agreed upon by the commission, mall Manager Sarah Goodrich has suggested this agreement be only through the end of this calendar year. She has proposed that additional lease agreements should be made for each calendar year.

Discussion of the proposed lease is scheduled for Monday's work session meeting beginning at 5 p.m., in the city manager's conference room. The matter has been listed for formal consideration on the regular meeting agenda, beginning at 7 p.m., in the commission chambers.

Sanford City Hall is located at 300 N. Park Avenue.

Taxpayers

can afford one more damn penny for their damn fancy building."

Daniels said she thought she might refuse to pay the $18.30 increase.

The budget increases are not to be used to pay for the district administrative building, the $7 million facility that is slated to open in November, district officials said however.

The owner of an average $100,000 home with a $25,000 homestead exemption will have to pay $776.98 in school taxes this coming year. Last year the homeowner paid $756.98 in taxes on that same property.

In 1991-92, the school taxes on that property were $756.98 for that year.

This year's increase marks the largest jump this decade, but officials argue the increases have been made slowly and only as needed.

"Oh bull," said Favia Bano, who watched the proceedings at Thursday's meeting, but made no comment. "They just want more and more of our money to waste."

Board member Jeanne Morris said the increase amounted to about $1.50 per month and that should not be too much for most homeowners to swallow.

"That's less than a trip to McDonald's once a month," she said.

Bano said she's a vegetarian and doesn't go to McDonald's even once a month, but noted that it wasn't so much that the district was asking for more money, but rather that there was little proof they had done appropriate things with the money they had.

"I'll give them another chance," she conceded, "but if they don't show me more responsible spending next year, I'm going to give them a piece of my mind, not a piece of my paycheck."

Shop

complex at the extreme northern end of Palmetto Avenue, has contracted with Andersen to study the potential growth and improvements to the area.

Tuesday morning, Sept. 12, Andersen is to present plans before Sanford's Plans Review Committee. He has already supplied drawings and some specifications to Sanford Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder. The drawings include a number of proposals, although Andersen is scheduled to make additional suggestions.

He is proposing the "Festival Shopping Center" be created on the marina site where Fitzgerald's and the Marina Hotel are presently situated.

The hotel presently has 100 rooms. Andersen is projecting a four story hotel, "L" shaped, with a total of 200 rooms. It would also have areas for a lobby, restaurant, and lounge. A banquet area would have 350 seats.

In the area presently occupied by Fitzgerald's, and again in an "L" shape on the extreme southwestern side of the peninsula, Andersen is projecting a large combination restaurant/retail office and entertainment center. The restaurant, which presently has 210 seats, will have 359 more added, for a total of 569.

Shops and other facilities would also be located in the area, which would be the main focal point of the "Festival Shopping Center."

Andersen says that these plans are only conceptual, and may be deviated from if Sanford officials determine that other facilities are desirable, or in order to meet conditions for approval.

"One caution however," Andersen said. "The entire project is based on keeping the Seminole County Judicial Center in downtown Sanford."

Andersen says the City of Sanford could approve the project as a PD (Planned Development), then place it on hold until a final determination is made regarding the location of the judicial center. The PD would have a life-span of five years from the date of approval by the city commission, which he believes might be adequate in this situation.

Although Sanford has strongly urged retaining the court facilities in the downtown Sanford area, Seminole County commissioners are considering moving it to the Five Points area.

Although Andersen has already supplied preliminary plans which indicate the best choice is to retain the facility downtown, county officials say they want to wait until more information is obtained before making their decision.

The creation of the "Festival Shopping Center" is not the only plan being placed on hold pending a decision. A proposed parking area to the immediate south of the Sanford City Hall parking lot and Sun Bank's expansion are also pending.

Regarding the new center proposal, Andersen says that his master plan indicates a total of 505 parking spaces will be required for the center. The plan proposes 229 on-site spaces, with 276 off-site spaces which would be in the proposed parking garage. "If no shared garage or parking is built off-site then the project would have the option of increasing parking on-site through the use of a multi-level garage."

Andersen's initial plans will be on display, and discussion held during the meeting Tuesday morning, beginning at 9:30 a.m., in the Utility Conference Room in the second floor of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

AROUND THE STATE

Marlins, Braves split

MIAMI — The Atlanta Braves took just 21 minutes to KO the Florida Marlins in the first game of a very strange doubleheader. Florida won the nightcap with its own brand of power.

Pat Rapp of the Marlins and Steve Avery of the Braves, started both games of the time-warped twinbill that started May 4 only to be suspended by rain in the top of the ninth inning.

The 3-3 game was resumed in a drizzle with a Braves runner on third and nobody out.

Luis Polonia, who was playing for the New York Yankees when the game began, singled in the tiebreaking run, and Marquis Grissom added a two-run homer as Atlanta won 6-3.

The Marlins won the nightcap 5-1, getting 6 1-3 innings of no-hit ball from Rapp and long home runs from Gary Sheffield and Jeff Conine.

ELSEWHERE

Indians clinch

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Indians, symbols of baseball futility for four decades, clinched at least a tie for the AL Central title, beating the Seattle Mariners 4-1.

The Indians need one more win, or a Kansas City loss, to guarantee their first postseason appearance since they were swept by the New York Giants in the 1954 World Series.

No sweat for Rams boys in battle of unbeaten

Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Lake Mary defeated University Thursday night 15-4, 15-1 in a battle of previously undefeated teams. Devin Hale scored 14 service points to pace the Rams victory, while Darrell Dilmore won six more.

"Everyone played well," said Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen. "We have a group that can handle the pressure, and they seem to thrive on it a little bit. University has been one of our toughest opponents year in and year out."

The Rams took a 2-0 first game lead behind the serve of Adam Messier and never trailed in the match. Lake Mary extended the lead to 8-2 before Dilmore racked up six straight service points to make the score 12-3. Adam Sewell added two more points at the baseline, Jeremy Dilmore added another as the Rams closed out the game. Will Lipscomb had three service points in the game for Lake Mary, while Ryan Mau added one.

The second game looked effortless for Lake Mary. University took an early 1-0 lead, but Hale won 14 straight service points. University would have one more side our before Mau closed out the game. Hale lead the Rams with six kills, while Erik Larsen had five. Darrell Dilmore had seven blocks.

"We're getting more matches under our belts," Whalen said. "The more they play together, the more confidence they have about what they can do on the court."

The University junior varsity team handed Lake Mary its first loss of the year 15-5, 16-14 to open the action. Nick Nanton had 10 service points in a losing effort for the Rams.

Lake Mary will host Dr. Phillips today. J.V. action begins at 6 p.m. with varsity to follow. Whalen feels that the Panthers are the best team in Orlando.

Courier, Sampras move into U.S. Open semifinals

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — They fought with bludgeons shaped like tennis rackets. Toe to toe. Mano a mano.

And when the men's quarterfinals were finally completed, when Thursday had disappeared just as had so many players in the U.S. Open, two of the biggest sluggers in the game were left standing, ready to rumble for another round.

Pete Sampras and Sanford-born Jim Courier revved up their power games, solved the gusty wind sweeping through Louis Armstrong Stadium and blasted their opponents off the court in straight sets.

It was far from easy. Sampras knocked off unseeded Byron Black of Zimbabwe 7-6 (7-3), 6-4, 6-0. Courier, showing the form that took him to three Grand Slam titles earlier in his career, outfought fifth-seeded Michael Chang 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (7-3), 7-5.

The men's semifinals — Sampras against Courier and No. 1 Andre Agassi against No. 4 Boris Becker — and the women's title match are scheduled Saturday, with the men's championship set for Sunday.

"I think it turned, quite honestly, on a few points here and there," Chang said of his 3-hour, 7-minute match with Courier. For Chang, most of the points went "there."

He served for each of the three sets. Each time, Courier broke Chang's serve, eventually forcing tiebreakers in the first two sets.

"I had set points in the first and second sets," Chang said. "At the U.S. Open, you hope those things just don't happen."

Whenever Courier needed a point, See Tennis, Page 2B

All families need a reserve fund

Many families look at savings as a dream. Who can save when it is difficult to make the money last from one paycheck to the next one? The traditional way of saving (that of putting money aside) is harder, but not impossible.

But most families are saving. Families may be building up financial security in several ways, such as paying into Social Security or some other retirement fund. They may be buying a home and equipment; such as washers, dryers, refrigerators and furniture. They may be buying bonds or other savings by having the cost deducted from their paychecks. These are ways family assets are accumulated and their net worth increased.

If we think of saving as using resources wisely in order to avoid waste, then we find that every family saves to some extent. This year's winter coat is saved to wear again next year. Leftover food is saved for another meal. This type of saving can be accomplished by any family regardless of income.

Reserve or emergency fund. Most, if not all, families need a reserve or emergency fund. Establishing this fund should be one of the first things a family does. The purpose of the reserve or emergency fund can include anything from holiday gifts to illness. The reserve fund will probably be used a great deal and should be in holdings that can be turned into cash quickly and without loss.

CONSUMER FOCUS

The reserve fund should be considered as only one part of a family's protection plan. However, for many families this may be the only form of financial reserve.

A reserve fund can help. A reserve fund can help you in a number of ways. A reserve fund will give you peace of mind. Most families experience a major crisis every few years when they need extra funds to tide them over. It could be reduction in work and/or pay, or perhaps unemployment or crop failure. It could be large dental or medical bills which insurance covers only in part. Someone once observed that when you have a reserve fund, there never seems to be an emergency, but without such a savings account, the financial crises seem to arrive daily.

A reserve fund provides buying power. You can take advantage of some opportunities as they occur. Many people miss opportunities because they lack money. These opportunities may be anything from buying a new suit in January for $80 instead of $150 in the next season, to buying tires for the car or Christmas gifts in July.

A reserve fund provides earning power. Benjamin Franklin said, "Money begets money and its offspring begets more." He meant that money left in a savings account will grow. Franklin proved this. In 1791, he gave $8,000 to the residents of Boston with the provision that the money be allowed to accumulate for 100 years. By that time, the fund had grown to $400,000.

Money invested at 5 percent interest will double itself in just over 14 years. It will double itself in 12 years at 6 percent and in just over 10 years at 7 percent. Dividing the rate of interest into 72 will give you approximately the amount of time it takes money to double.

A reserve fund can be used as security. You can use your reserve fund as security to borrow money at favorable interest rates.

How much is needed? There are no hard and fast rules about how much money you should set aside for your reserve or emergency fund. How much you can and should set aside for your reserve or emergency fund depends on your family size, income, level of living, spending habits, job security and outlook and your particular financial needs.

Most money management authorities agree that an amount equal to three to six months' income is a desirable and realistic goal for most people.

Teen can't control parents' behavior

DEAR MARY: I feel like my world is crashing down on me and I don't know how much longer I can hang on. My mom moved out of the house in June. Actually, I was glad to see her go because she picked on my dad and me all the time. Things got a lot more peaceful around here after she left.

Now she has decided she wants to come back home. My dad has said he doesn't want her back so she's trying to use me to get him to change his mind. Every time I go over to her apartment for a visit we get into a fight and she blames me for them splitting up. I feel torn because I don't want to hurt either one of them but my mom is acting crazy and I know if she does move back in, everything will be in a turmoil around here all the time again.

She says we need her, but I think she's just afraid to be on her own. My school work is suffering because of all this mess and sometimes I just want to run away and forget about everything. How can I get my mom off my back and stop blaming me for her problems?

too high a price to pay. Use school as your "safe haven" if at all possible. It's the one place where you can put your current turmoil behind you.

They don't call a divorce "crazy time" for nothing. It is possible that your mom isn't stable emotionally right now, so if you have to limit the time you spend with her, do so. Let her know you love her but you don't want to fight or listen to false accusations. As you feel more in control of your own life, you will be better able to cope with this difficult time in your life.

Some older widows want more than sex

DEAR ABBY: You were right on target when you advised "Gentleman to tell his women friends that he is impotent."

I am a 68-year-old widow who would dearly love to know such a gentleman. Unfortunately, all the men I've met in the four years I've been a widow seem obsessed with proving they're still as good as they were (or thought they were) at 25.

They fail to realize that many women in our age group don't really care that much about sex. Not that we have anything against it; it's just that many of us have lived without — often for years before the death of our husbands — and have learned, contrary to popular opinion, that it can be done.

I have many widowed friends. Everyone of them has said that sex is the thing she misses least. Having someone to share meals, thoughts, plans, to go places with, to cuddle, talk, laugh and joke with — that is what we really miss.

To be told, "You're a desirable woman," may give us a momentary thrill, but, "I love the way you laugh," "You make the best apple pie in the county," or "Even my dog likes you, and he's never wrong about people," would be more meaningful.

"Gentleman's" lady friends probably would be relieved to now he's not going to be making passes at them, and once they know, they (and he) can relax and just enjoy being together.

Just as men don't want to admit they're impotent, women don't want to admit their own physical problems that detract from their enjoyment of sex. We don't want to be thought of as whiners, or as using the old, "Not tonight, dear, I have a headache" bit.

ADVICE

Abby, there is so much in life that is better shared (other than a bed). How sad that many older people are doomed to live out their lives alone, because they've been led to believe that everyone must have an active sex life. If, for whatever reason, we're unable, or simply don't want to have sex, we are made to feel practically worthless.

There was a time when people had sex because they wanted to, and not because they were expected to. Now, those were the days!

MISSOURI WIDOW
DEAR WIDOW: You would be amazed to know the number of women who have written to me over the years to echo your sentiments. The price that's been paid for the sexual revolution is an unfortunate decline in romance.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 60440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90060. All correspondence is confidential.)

TORNTEEN
DEAR TORN: You can't stop your mom from doing whatever she's choosing to do because you can't control her. You can choose how you deal with her accusations, though. But first let's get one thing straight. You didn't cause your parents to separate and you can't cause them to either get back together or divorce for that same reason — you can't control your parents' behavior!

Running away will only increase your mom's verbal abuse and cause your dad to distrust you; don't do it. Instead, find a safe adult to talk to, either a trusted relative, counselor, teacher or person in your church. Then, get a spiral notebook and start writing down your thoughts and feelings every day, especially when you're feeling really angry, sad or confused. Journal writing is an extremely effective tension-reliever.

Letting your school work suffer because of your family problems will only cause you more grief than you already have. It's

IN BRIEF

Constitution service set

LAKE MARY — First Baptist Church of Lake Mary will hold its Constitution Service on Friday, September 8 at 7 p.m. in the Greenwood Lakes Middle School Auditorium. The speaker will be Dr. Bobby Welch, pastor of First Baptist Church Daytona Beach.

Special music will be provided by the First Baptist Church Daytona Beach Choir, as well as the Lake Mary congregation's own choir.

Representatives of the Orlando Baptist Association and the Florida Southern Baptist Association will be in attendance, along with candidates for charter church membership.

First Baptist Church of Lake Mary began on December 10, 1994, by a group of families and individuals who believed there was a need for such a church in the community. The pastor since that date has been the Rev. Don Hicks, who has served in churches in Tennessee and Kansas City, as well as in Florida. Hicks is a graduate of Liberty University and Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary.

A recent addition to the pastoral staff is Kenny McKay, minister of music and youth. McKay is a graduate of East Texas Baptist University and served in Southern Baptist Churches in Texas before coming to Florida.

The church's assistant youth minister is Sterling Lynn, a Daytona Beach native and recent graduate of Oklahoma Baptist University.

Other activities planned for Constitution Weekend include a free concert by top-20 contemporary artist Dennis Wilson, Saturday, September 9 at 7 p.m. in the Greenwood Lakes Middle School Auditorium.

The theme of the Sunday morning worship service, September 10, will be "Bring a Friend," to be followed by a 5 p.m. church picnic at the adjacent Greenwood Lakes Park.

Sharing the light

SANFORD — Sharing has been such a natural lesson parents teach to children. We encourage our toddlers to share their toys. Many times our adolescents get a gentle nudge to share a smile or a handshake to meet a new friend.

At moments, against our pleas, teenagers exchange clothes, make-up and shoes. Years later they are finally found.

As adults we share our lives with a spouse. We give our time to our children. Numerous hours are spent in our home congregation, not only worshipping, but attending showers, activities and meetings.

How much time do we spend communing with God? As we race from one place to another with agendas and lists does God get lost in the shuffle?

One of the most important tasks that Jesus asks us to share is the "Great Commission." In Mark 16:15 He said, "Go into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

Sharing our material wealth with others, giving of our time and talents all encompass our walk with the Lord. An upward flight to Heaven should be of utmost desire in our lives.

Caring and loving all of fellowman in a spirit of forgiveness and meekness shares the love of the Savior. Share that light with the world.

Methodists assist Grace and Grits

SANFORD — After every good meal there always has to be a clean-up crew. Many people pitched in to make a big job small. Dishes had to be carried into the kitchen to be washed by Monte Blair and A.J. Bass. Others helped in many ways.

Ask the preacher Bible questions

Question: Why do you believe that more and more people are moving away from biblical morality and values?

Answer: The reasons are too numerous and complex to discuss in this short article, but there are a few observations that might be helpful. First, many have deserted a biblical value system because of ignorance. Most people have come to view the moral code of the Bible as a restrictive law that will inhibit happiness, rather than acknowledge the balance that these rules bring to life.

Like children testing the limits of a parent's patience, we try the reigns of divine restrictions until they feel like a rope about our neck. If we accepted the guidance of a loving God, we would find the serenity of knowing our path will be proper and fulfilled. Our willfulness is our undoing.

Second, people are ignorant of the love with which God loves us. They see him as arbitrary and stern. The Bible presents another picture. Paul declared that "while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us..." John 3:16 declares, "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believes in him should have life everlasting."

Does that sound like a stern austere God? Of course not, but this does not mean that human actions are without consequences. If a man is a drunkard, he impoverishes his family as well as himself. If a woman betrays her marriage vows, she adulterates the relationship with her husband and puts her children at risk. God knows the consequences of our foolishness and wants to spare us the shame. Few understand the true depths of God's love for man.

Country music church sets new norm

By AMANDA DAVIS Associated Press Writer

PLATTE WOODS, Mo. — Don't look for a hymnbook, listen for a choir or lower your voice inside the North Heartland Community Church.

Pastor Rick McGinnis would prefer you laugh at the skits, applaud the country-western band and sing along with the lyrics as they pop up on a movie screen.

"This is a church for people who think they don't like church. For people who think church is boring," McGinnis said.

Services at North Heartland are anything but boring. Rousing country and Christian songs are pounded out by a band that would do well in any honky-tonk. Congregation members act out comedy skits with serious messages.

At one service, church member Terry Lamberth spoofed comedian Jeff Foxworthy's well-known bit, "You might be a redneck if..." The day's theme asked why science contradicted the Bible, so Lamberth took a scientific tack.

"You might be a high-tech redneck if you have a remote control to flush your toilet," he said. "You might be a high-tech redneck if your computer cost more than your house." No pews, no ministerial vestments, no organ, no hymns, no Scripture readings and no chance this would be mistaken for a traditional Sunday service.

Start with the location. The New Mark Middle School theater is perfect for the congregation's needs, McGinnis said.

"For some people, an actual church is a barrier. It's like, 'This is where God lives.' But we're not on our own special turf here," he said.

North Heartland is one of maybe a dozen country music churches in the United States. One of the originals, the Main Place Christian Fellowship in Santa Ana, Calif., began more traditionally but drifted toward a country approach about seven years ago. Pastor Rich Mathiarud said.

"It wasn't something we set out to do. It just sort of evolved this way," he said. "Anybody who likes country music. That's the segment of the population that's coming to church here."

Like North Heartland, people are drawn to Mathiarud's church because of the warm feeling.

"We make them feel comfortable. We know their names, they get a real warm welcome and we don't even taken an offering. If they want to give, they can give at the bark of the church," he said. Both pastors agree they try to break down barriers that keep some people away from church.

"When we began, we listed six values on how we would run the show," said McGinnis, 37. "The No. 1 value is erasing artificial barriers. Getting dressed up, singing old hymns — anything that's a barrier, we'll get rid of it."

The approach seems to be working. Membership at North Heartland is at about 80, but 200 or so attend Sunday services, and many of those are considering membership.

"I think a lot of the attraction is that you feel more relaxed," said Pam Seymour, who has been driving from Kansas City, Kan., to attend services at North Heartland for more than a month.

Seymour visited the first time at the urging of friend Judy Henderson of Platte Woods.

"I'd been going to a more traditional church, but my son told me about this," Henderson said. "She hadn't been going to church regularly, and I thought I could get her to go to this one. And I did."

McGinnis delivered a recent Sunday message — a term he prefers over sermon — in blue jeans, a plaid button-down shirt and hiking boots.

McGinnis has a bachelor's degree in math and a master's in computer science, but after working for Bell Labs as a software engineer for five years, he left to enroll in the Midwest Baptist Theological Seminary. He graduated from the seminary in 1990 and served as an associate pastor at Park Hill Baptist Church.

He took an approach "like any entrepreneur going into business" to the new church. He and a few associates defined a market and looked for customers, partly by advertising on country music station KBEQ.

"If we're talking to people who like country music, we play that up. But we're careful how we promote that, because it could turn some people off," McGinnis said.

The church's finances also concern him.

"Right now, we are living above our means," he said. "And we have to consider if the congregation will meet the needs."

Long-term, he wants the church to grow to about 800 members and build a permanent facility.

"We'd like to build a facility. But if we did, it wouldn't look like a church," he said. "It would look more like a college campus."

Phlebitis marked by pain, swelling

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please describe the treatment for phlebitis.

DEAR READER: Phlebitis, which means inflammation of the lining of a vein, is usually seen in conjunction with venous blood clots (thrombophlebitis).

The treatment for this condition varies, depending on which veins are affected. This can be determined by examination and by special tests, such as Doppler ultrasound.

Superficial thrombophlebitis (of the veins just under the skin) can best be treated by rest, elevation, heat, and elastic wraps. The main symptoms are pain and swelling.

Deep thrombophlebitis, a more severe condition involving the veins deep in the body or an extremity, usually requires anticoagulant drugs, such as heparin or Coumadin. This affliction typically causes pain and may lead to blood clots that travel to the lungs, producing painful and difficult breathing, sometimes even death, unless the blood clots can be surgically removed.

Thrombophlebitis can be diagnosed and treated by family physicians, but the complications - such as pulmonary clots or recurring inflammation - may need the services of a specialist (pulmonologist or surgeon).

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been suffering with a nerve-type hearing loss for years and am hoping for a cure some day. I've been told estrogen will be a key link to the cure. Do you see any possibility there?

DEAR READER: I'm afraid not. Nerve deafness is usually due to irreversible injury to the nerves of hearing. This is most often the consequence of noise damage, not a hormone deficiency.

Our society is fraught with loud sounds, including jet aircraft, unmuffled engines, subway trains, and electronically amplified music. If such noise is sufficient to cause ringing in the ears or temporary hearing loss, it is doing damage. With repeated, unprotected exposure, permanent deafness will result. I do not believe that the female hormone estrogen would modify this damage or provide useful therapy for a hearing loss caused by nerve

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
The declarer in today's deal had just gone down in a contract that had looked as sound as Fort Knox - his was the second deal of the rubber.
North's three hearts was a limit raise, showing at least four trumps and about 11 support points for hearts.
Hinking the contract was easy, South won the first trick with the spade ace and cashed the heart ace. His plan to claim was put on indefinite hold when West discarded the diamond two. Suddenly seeing four losers staring him in the face (two spades and two hearts), declarer felt like James Hagerty, President Eisenhower's press secretary, who said, "One day I sat thinking, almost in despair; a hand fell on my shoulder and a voice said reassuringly: Cheer up, things could get worse." So I cheered up and, sure enough, things got worse."

Now South was in an apparently hopeless contract. However, luckily he didn't throw in the towel. South could see a light at the end of the tunnel - or if you prefer, a silver lining to the dark cloud. He spotted one faint possibility to make his contract, he went for it and it worked!
Even though it had only about a one-in-four chance to succeed, at trick three, South led the club jack from his hand, planning to run it if West didn't cover with the queen. However, when West did produce the queen, South won with dummy's king, played a diamond to his ace and followed with a finesse of dummy's club nine. When it held, declarer discarded one of his spade losers on the club ace and conceded three tricks.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Cool
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sept. 8, 1995
Larger than usual personal rewards may come to you in the year ahead through your creative efforts. When a bright idea inspires you, don't waste any time doing something constructive about it.
VERGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You might have difficulty making major decisions today due to an inclination to overemphasize both the pros and the cons. This habit could leave you dead in the water. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1884, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is a chance you might be saddled with more responsibilities than you can manage today if you mingle with dependent persons who can't fend for themselves.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not make financial demands today upon a person who once helped you in a small way. This individual will resent you for using unfair leverage.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today you might operate along the line of least resistance and allow a relative or in-law to pressure you into doing something you'd rather not do.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might be judged more severely than usual for your mistakes today. In order to avoid an embarrassing experience, think your actions through carefully.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It could prove wise to clear up old obligations at this time before assuming any new ones. You may not have enough financial spread to cover both.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid teaming up with a person who always resents and opposes your way of doing things. This person might try to restrain your efforts once again today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to remain realistic today about issues that directly affect your interests. Serious matters will not rectify themselves; you must take action.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could feel severe remorse later if you overindulge a friend today who truly doesn't deserve it. Try to be thoughtful, but not stupid.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In competitive developments today, bank more heavily upon your common sense than on chance. The best that Lady Luck might have to offer is second place.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) A person you are peeved at might have some good ideas today that you'll flatly reject. If you do this it will work against your own best interests.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unless you are extremely prudent and firm in a joint venture today, the larger slice of out-of-pocket expenses might fall on you.
