Sanford residents were given a forecast of aerial warfare this morning when groups of fighter planes from nearby naval or army air bases scudded across a cloudless sky to engage in mock dog-fights over this city.

Lessons From The Sky

Witnessing such a sight called to our mind the similarity there must be between an air battle and any one of a number of athletic contests in which so many American youths excel, and we felt a reassurance that if the worst comes, the United States will have no dearth in the best flying talent in the world.

Most every American boy has picked up some "motor" skill at an early age, has learned how to "time" the throw of a baseball in order to get a man out at base, has mastered the art of judging the path of a football, or played some other sport requiring perfect coordination between mind and body.

All in all the exhibition this morning made us feel a sense of security, but we couldn't help but agree with a colored boy standing nearby, who said: "Boss, I sure hope them planes ain't carryin' no bombs what might shake loose."

Now They'll Be Taxed

The $85,000,000 debt-limit bill just signed by President Roosevelt is double-barreled legislation. It is, in the first instance, of course, a debt limit, and the principal significance about that is that there will still be a debt limit. When the former limit had to be raised, Mr. Roosevelt proposed that it simply be done away with. Congress preferred, however, to keep in some form the device which requires two actions instead of one to pass a certain point.

But another aspect of the measure is at least equally important. Under its terms the new securities issued by the United States Treasury are to be fully subject to income taxes. As Secretaries of the Treasury have advocated they should be for twenty years. One maturing operation of $1,222,000,000 is planned for March 15 when two present issues mature, and other maturities will give the Government an opportunity to displace more than $4,000,000,000 worth in all of non-taxable securities. The last tax-exempt Federal securities will be retired in 1960, it is expected.

This is only gradual progress, to be sure. The total of outstanding tax-exempt securities was estimated a short time ago to be $70,000,000,000, of which approximately $10,000,000,000 is in State and municipal bonds. How to bring these under the income tax laws involves several difficult problems, but the efforts to arrange this equitably should be carried forward until these forms of property bear their share of taxation on the same basis as other investments.—Christian Science Monitor.

"TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY" BY RUSSELL KAY

Fourteen years ago President Hamilton Holt of Rollins College presented the first (Antiques) Magazine, and each year since then, during Founder's Week, this unique magazine that comes alive has been featured.

While a modest charge is made for a subscription, the funds that received go for some worthy purpose—and the celebrities' response shows for they proposed all requests for their work without pay. The subscriber must appear in person on the campus at Winter Park to receive each copy of the magazine, and while he cannot read it, he enjoys the greater thrill of hearing it from the lips of those who make it.

This year's magazine was exceptionally fine and it was my opinion that any one of the features presented was worth more than the small subscription price. Following a "Foreword" by "Editor" Hamilton Holt, this living magazine introduced to a crowd of several thousand such interesting and able contributors as Anne O'Hare McCormack, columnist of the New York Times, whose leading editorial "The Springs" was a real masterpiece.

Florida is grateful to the Sanford Holt and Rollins College for making these annual Antiques Magazine available to us.

Styles Of Hats Differ In Various Communities, According To Designer

By AMY PORTER
No politician keeps his finger on the national pulse more tenderly than Helen Liebert, hat designer and manufacturer.
Miss Liebert feels she knows the last decimal point just how the women in each large city feel about hats, and she guides her business accordingly.
Because the women of New Orleans never admit to middle age, she says, they have no use for matronly hats. It's flowery young bonnets for them, always. Around Madi Gras time they are willing to spend about $2 more than usual for a truly flattering hat.
Because the women of Milwaukee have large head sizes and forthright ideas, she concludes, they like big-crowned hats that sit down squarely over their ears. The average Milwaukee head size is from 22 to 24, compared with 21 to 22 1/2 in the rest of the country. Many typical Milwaukee hats are popular in St. Louis, Cincinnati and Minneapolis.
"Because the wives of gentlemen who have retired and moved to California lead dignified, leisurely lives, there's a good sale for what the trade calls the porch-sitter's hat in Los Angeles. This is a hat of fine quality with frankly matronly lines. The same sort of hat sells in the same sort of way in Florida and elsewhere."
The wives of congressmen set the pitch for many hats sold in Washington, D. C. The capital's hats are small, chic, but not too girlish.
In San Francisco, the women wear suits the year around. They like extremely smart little suit hats. Miss Liebert considers San Francisco one of the smartest cities on her list.
"Louisville, she reports, won't spend much money for hats. Its women, even those who wear expensive bonnets when they visit New York, often go bareheaded at home.
"Houston doesn't like tailored suits, nor the hats that go with them. Women there prefer something prettier, more chic.
"Cities boasting a smart night life are good hat customers, because night life begins at 4:00 P. M., the proper time for wearing a flashy cocktail hat. Miss Liebert notes with pleasure that the proprietors of the Pump House in Chicago now require patrons to dress. Dressing is much better for the hat business.
"Many cities spend a lot for hats at special social seasons. The Velled Prophet Bar, accredited by buying in St. Louis, New York in New York anything goes. It's the proving ground for the nation's new hat styles."

CELERY IN THE DIET
Celery is valuable in the diet chiefly as a source of calcium. People who are concerned with food only as a source of gustatory pleasure prize celery for its texture and flavor, especially raw.
Fortunately, it keeps so well that much of it can be eaten raw. But there are always the tops and usually the coarser, older stalks that are better cooked.
With celery as with the other vegetables, it's a good idea to start it cooking in already boiling salted water, and to use only enough water to keep it from drying out. You don't want to throw away the water any vegetable is cooked in, because you lose part of the good flavor as well as various minerals and vitamins. With celery it would be chiefly calcium and some vitamin B that you would lose.
After the celery is tender and before it's cooked to pieces, it may be seasoned with butter or meat drippings, salt and pepper, and served. As you know, it's good, too, in a white sauce.

Spartans Open Baseball Season Against Florida

TAMPA, Feb. 23.—(Special)—The University of Tampa baseball team, champions of last year's state baseball title, will open their season against the University of Florida April 12, at Gainesville.

The Spartans, which numbers more than fifty, has been training at Plant Field, the home of the Cincinnati Reds, under the direction of Head Coach Miller K. Adams.

Adams will present virtually the same line-up against Florida that last year lay claim to the state championship with 3 wins and two losses. Jim Whitney, hard-hitting right fielder, and Jim Simmons and Dave Patton, pitchers, were lost to the Spartans this year through graduation.

Adams has able replacements, however. He is counting heavily upon Doug Forester, a tall rangy freshman pitcher. Forester pulled a "Vanderbilt" in his high school days when he hurled his prep nine, at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, to two consecutive no-hit, no-run game victories.

The Spartans tentative schedule includes games with Florida, Miami, Rollins, Bradley, (Peach, Ill.), Illinois College (Jacksonville, Ill.) and the Penn State Naval Base.

Scott Says On His Visit And Shows It

By CHARLES F. STEWART
Central Press Columnist
RAMON DE VALERA'S recent visit to "prepare for the worst," in connection with war conditions attracted a good bit of attention in Washington as well as in his own country.

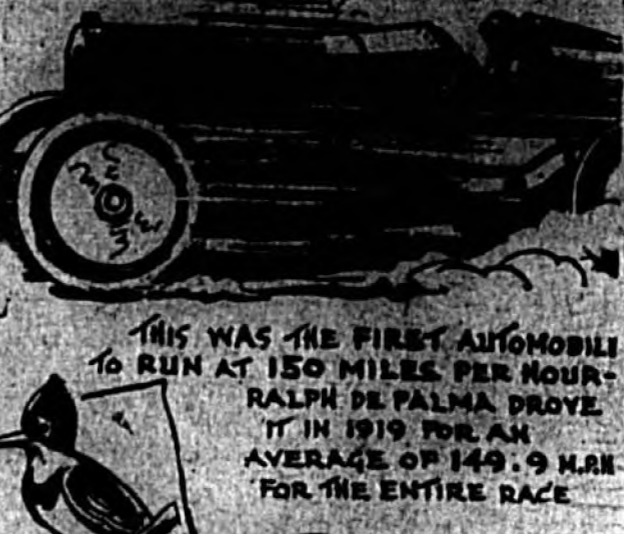

On his own army, navy and aviation strategists, and our own strategists, have been wondering how long the Spanish leader would stay in his neutral position. It is not clear that the British and the Axis powers. From Estim's broadcast they are surmising now that the Dublin government can't stay on the fence very long longer.

Born in Brooklyn of Spanish parents, he isn't even quite clearly here how Estim wrangled himself into the Irish premiership, but he did it somehow, and it's taken for granted that he knows what he's talking about.

On the opposite hand, the English and a number of Irish parts to be seen in London. He is against the Nazis and against the Communists. He is a man of many parts. He is a man of many parts. He is a man of many parts.

Many Celebrities Flock To Sarasota

SARASOTA, Feb. 25.—(Special)—Celebrities and notables by the handful were in Sarasota yesterday, most of them on pleasure bent.

One of them, John L. Lewis, former president of the C. I. O., remained overnight only at the John Ringling Hotel and continued northward by automobile yesterday morning. He has been recovering from an influenza attack

On the East Coast, Lewis made only one public appearance outside the hotel—to go to a barber shop for a haircut.

Meanwhile, Frank Buck and Mrs. Oss Johnson, two big time big game hunters, also were in Sarasota on separate errands. Mrs. Johnson, who recently married Clark H. Getta, her manager, arrived last night on a visit with friends as a part of her Florida honeymoon.

Buck, however, was negotiating with the Ringling circus for the purchase of wild animals. Also vacationing in Sarasota is Peter Arno, famous New York artist and cartoonist, who has been spending several weeks here.

First Job Is To Win War, Roosevelt Says

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—(Special)—President Roosevelt said Tuesday that he knew of no ideas which Ambassador John G. Winant might be taking to London in the kind of peace that might be established after the war ends, adding that he thought the first job was to win the war.

Roosevelt did not elaborate the point, which was raised by press conference questions. Likewise he declined to go into detailed discussion of proposed amendments to the British aid bill, pending in the Senate. He was asked specifically for his opinion on an amendment by Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, which would forbid sending American troops outside the western hemisphere.
