Dukakis smearer pleads guilty

BOSTON — A former state prosecutor charged with intentionally trying to smear the presidential campaign of Gov. Michael Dukakis will plead guilty Monday. The Boston Globe reported Saturday.

Kevin Ross, 33, a former Suffolk County prosecutor, is charged with secretly writing the names of key members of Dukakis's presidential campaign inside an address book belonging to an alleged cocaine dealer.

Ross is expected to plead guilty to two charges, creating false documents and making false statements, federal prosecutor Kevin Sharkey told the Globe. He faces a maximum of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine on each count.

Ross is a registered Republican, although authorities said there was no evidence he was part of a politically motivated conspiracy. Ross instead has told investigators he wrote the names inside the address book in order to either discredit or focus police attention on people he disliked or believed to be criminals.

Kabul bereft of Soviet soldiers

KABUL, Afghanistan — A large convoy carrying the bulk of Kabul's Soviet garrison rumbled out of the Afghan capital Saturday, leaving only a token force in the city Moscow invaded more than nine years ago to support a friendly regime, Soviet sources said.

Two Soviet soldiers were seen buying vodka in the inner city, but an extensive tour of the capital and its defensive positions usually manned by Moscow's forces failed to find other members of the Soviet contingent.

Afghan soldiers were seen driving around in armored personnel carriers with Soviet markings, indicating the Kremlin has left some armor behind.

Rollins wallops UCF Knights

ORLANDO — Long before Rollins College registered a resounding 88-73 victory over Central Florida Saturday in the basketball christening of Orlando Arena, the Lars laid the foundation for a third consecutive win over their cross-town rivals.

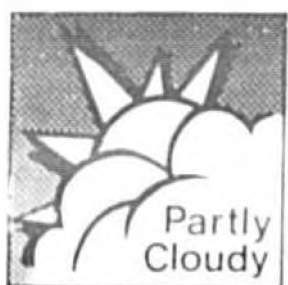

It came far away from the glitter and glamor of one of basketball's most celebrated facilities, far from the hot bright lights and the eye of television.

Only a few of the 6,801 who watched Saturday's shellacking were on hand Thursday morning when Coach Tom Klusman put his men's team through a practice that was unlike anything the Lars had experienced this season. Two hours and bucketfuls of sweat later, he had driven his point home.

Sanford cops sweep drug dealers off the street

A masked policeman grounds Gilbert Mobley, while Sanford police officer Jacob Cohen handcuffs Dwayne Willis, both marked for arrest as suspected crack cocaine dealers.

SANFORD — Police swooped down on a notorious section of the city's east side Friday, arresting 13 suspected cocaine dealers, buyers and others.

One undercover officer was slightly injured during the crackdown when he was struck by a suspect fleeing in a car.

Among those arrested was a 15-year-old Sanford girl, who police said claimed she was buying crack cocaine for her uncle when she made a buy from an undercover agent.

"Hopefully this will take the dealers off the street for the few days it takes them to find replacements," said Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett.

"We've done this same type of operation in the past. But the same dealers keep coming back. These people aren't new to the system. That's the frustrating part. The bonds are so low, they're back on the street in no time," he said.

In the sweep that began at about 11 a.m. Friday, police moved in on East Seventh Street and within four minutes captured four suspected crack cocaine dealers. They were on a list of nine targeted for arrest that day. Three others on the dealers' list had been arrested earlier in the morning.

Such a lovely winter

Florida is enjoying more than its share of delicious weather

By CAROL J. RUMSEY
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — While much of the country is covered with snow, Sanford-area residents are having trouble distinguishing February from May.

An occasional breeze causes a palm frond to sway but it hardly can be called gusty and seagulls dropped the white stuff on automobile windshields, not Old Man Winter.

It has caused many to adopt an "if this is winter who needs summer" attitude.

Saturday's temperature hit 83 degrees and the sun is expected for today. Forecasters say a ridge of high pressure over the Southeast is causing the island-like temperatures.

"Nobody can believe how wonderful the weather is," Margaret Smith, reservationist for the Rivership Romance, said Saturday. "I can't even believe it." Smith has lived in Florida only two years, but likes what she sees.

Few were found Saturday who didn't feel the same. City residents took to the outdoors via boats, bicycles, backyard barbecuing and some serious dockside sitting at Lake Monroe. It is nothing new, it's how they've spent the entire winter thus far, and it seems some cold weather visitors have joined them, making area business people happy.

It's going to be a wonderful year, Jell Blackstone, general manager of Sanford's Holiday Inn, said. "1989 is going to be our year. We're renovating and we're telling everyone that we're 20 years new."

Normally the hotel's peak season hits in mid-February and runs through April, but this year's warm temperatures have given tourists a head start on vacation planning.

Elsewhere, frigid conditions are resulting in school closings and even weather-related

Proposed state gas tax 'almost a dead issue'

United Press International

LALLAHANSSEE — The price of gasoline is unlikely to be driven up this year by Florida legislators who seem unwilling to raise fuel taxes at a time when the governor opposes any increase.

Lack of a state budget, a 10-cent per-gallon tax on gasoline prompted by road cuts by a cash-poor state highway department is waning as Gov. Bill Martinez's main firm in his second campaign increase.

Lobbying efforts are going on where, said House budget chairwoman F.K. Wetherell, an influential Democratic from Orange Beach. If the governor is unwilling to get out and support it, it's almost a dead issue.

Two Martinez aides who met at the end of last week said Martinez likely a tax increase makes sense, his desk.

The governor has assured everyone that a gasoline tax increase is not needed, said Brian Deardorff, Martinez's operations director.

Martinez, a Republican, is expected to present his budget to the Legislature sometime next week. Following stinging criticism about the repealed tax on services that he supported in 1987, Martinez said he will stick by his pledge that

Front tags for cars may be on tap

United Press International

LALLAHANSSEE — A Department of Transportation spokesman says the state could raise up to $740 million in revenue by switching to front license tags for cars, but the idea is still in the air.

John J. Silvers, of North Miami, chairman of the House criminal justice committee, says his idea would allow help law officers and witnesses identify vehicles involved in crimes. He is getting support from law enforcement officials across Florida.

Silvers discussed his proposal with the Florida Times Union in Jacksonville on Friday, as prison officials announced another 107 inmates will be paroled Monday to make room for newcomers in the chronically overcrowded correction system.

Before the increase was announced, the prisons held 35,412 inmates.

"I think it's going to be very possible," Silvers said of his proposal.

five-year road plan, Wetherell said. It's going to take all three branches of government moving ahead on this for it to happen.

House Speaker Tom Gustafson said he would support an increased gasoline tax, but so far has been unwilling to lead such a drive. Gustafson said he wants roads to meet the standards necessary to implement the growth management act, but doesn't know how much that will cost.

The act limits development where roads cannot accommodate increased traffic.

We'll need to come up with that amount of money to allow implementation of the growth management act," Gustafson said.

The Legislature convenes April 4 and estimates show comparatively little new income for the next budget year.

State Sen. Mary Grizzle, R-Bellair Shore, who chairs a joint committee on growth management and is vice chairman of the Senate budget committee, doesn't see support for a

Judge orders Christie to pay $1 million

MIAMI — A federal judge ordered the Christie Institute to pay $1 million in costs to 14 defendants in connection with a lawsuit brought against several Iran-Contra figures, the non-profit legal services group says.

Daniel St. Jean, a lawyer for the Christie Institute in Washington, called the order a "legal disgrace" and said the order provides further evidence of U.S. District Judge James Lawrence King's bias in the case.

"Obviously, we are going to appeal this. It is consistent with Judge King's other conduct in this case," he said.

King dismissed the Christie Institute's $23.8 million lawsuit on June 23, four days before the trial was scheduled to begin. The judge's most recent order provides restitution for the defendants' court costs and legal fees.

The suit was filed on behalf of Martha Honey and Tony Avirgan, a husband-wife team of journalists injured in a 1984 bombing in Nicaragua targeting renegade Contra leader Eden Pastora. Pastora escaped injury but three journalists and five Contra soldiers were killed and Avirgan was among 25 people who were injured.

Defendants in the suit alleged a broad, 30-year conspiracy.

Simultaneous heart transplants finished

TAMPA — Surgeons performed two heart transplants almost simultaneously at Tampa General Hospital on Friday — the 49th and 50th such operations since it began its heart-transplant program in June 1985.

Surgery began at 8:30 p.m. Thursday on David Schiller, 47, of Coral Springs, and ended at 4 a.m. Friday, while surgery began at 10:30 p.m. Thursday on Leroy Boyd, 43, of Tampa, and ended at 5:30 a.m.

Both men were reported in critical, but stable, condition in the cardiac surgical unit at the hospital's Regional Cardiovascular Center late Friday.

There was no information on the identity of the organ donors.

"We have had 12 to 14 (potential) recipients on computer and have had a decrease in donor organ availability," said Tampa General president Newell E. France. "So we're very grateful that two on our waiting list were able to have transplants."

France said Tampa General's heart transplant program is the only one in Florida to receive the certification of Medicare and O'CHAMPUS, a federal program covering retired military personnel living in Florida.

Scoutmaster jailed on sex charges

PENSACOLA — A former scoutmaster remained in jail with bond set at $50,000 after being charged with three counts of sexual misconduct in alleged incidents involving several Boy Scouts, according to authorities.

David Charles Litter, 34, of Pensacola, was charged with one count each of sexual battery, lewd and lascivious assault on a child and sexual activity with a child by a person in a custodial authority.

Litter, arrested last week, was booked in the Escambia County Jail.

Cpl. Larry Lattimer of the Escambia County Sheriff's Department said Litter is accused of sexual misconduct with two scouts in his troop. He allegedly assaulted three others, all now adults, before he became scoutmaster last year.

"The first incident that I'm aware of occurred in 1977," Lattimer said. "So this has been going on for about 11 years."

Anonymous phone calls two weeks ago led to the investigation. Deputies talked to the 61 scouts in Litter's troop and found two alleged victims. Scout members are between 11 and 18 years of age.

Committee supports canker program

LAKE ALFRED — An advisory committee says despite claims by scientists that a disease attacking citrus is not canker and not known to be harmful, Florida should continue its citrus canker eradication program.

State Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner has asked the Joint State-Federal Citrus Canker Technical Advisory Committee to resolve uncertainties over the program under which millions of trees have been destroyed generating dozens of lawsuits that could cost the state $250 million.

"If it is indeed harmless, I want the program dismantled," Conner told the committee members. "If it's harmful to the citrus industry, after four years of working with it, we certainly should know. Somebody give me an intelligent answer."

But committee members said there is a lack of scientific evidence to justify elimination of the program and said the state's citrus industry could be hurt economically by quarantines imposed by other states if Florida stops fighting the disease known as the nursery strain of citrus canker.

The disease first was discovered in an Avon Park nursery in 1984 and was identified as citrus canker.

Suspected killer may stay free

United Press International

TITUSVILLE — Law officers in Brevard County, where a man suspected in an upstate New York killing jumped bail, likely won't make a special effort to find him because no one has charged him in the death, a spokeswoman says.

Curtis Evans, 44, identified by Albany, N.Y. police detectives as a prime suspect in the death of a former Florida judge's daughter, failed to appear last week before a Brevard County Circuit Court judge after his release on $1,000 bond, said Joan Heller, a spokeswoman for the county Sheriff's Office in Titusville.

A bench warrant has been issued for Evans' arrest.

New York detectives have said that Evans, a native of the Albany suburb of Bethlehem, is their only suspect in the July 1982 strangling and beating death of Paula Durden, 21. She was killed in an Albany motel room.

Evans, whose last known home was in Merrit Island, was arrested in Florida Dec. 16 by Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents accompanied by Albany police detectives.

But while he faces unrelated motor vehicle and grand theft charges in Florida, Evans has not been charged in Durden's death.

That means Florida authorities have no legal basis to pursue him as a suspected killer, Heller said.

And since the Brevard County Sheriff's Office has a crush of arrest warrants outstanding — many just on minor traffic charges — and few officers to deal with them, it's not likely to make a special effort to recapture Evans, she said.

In fact, she said, the bail bondsman who put up Evans' bond would be more likely to pursue the fugitive.

"He's got a failure to appear on a traffic (charge). There's thousands of people that fit that description," Heller said. "We have to treat him as a traffic violator."

Moreover, she said, the sheriff's office has not officially received the court's bench warrant.

"We have no (murder) charges from New York, we have no warrant for this man. He has to be treated like everybody else," she said.

Asked if any other law enforcement agency in Florida likely would make a major effort to find Evans, Heller said that for the same reasons, "I can't imagine why they would."

Durden was the daughter of retired Florida Circuit Court Judge J. Robert Durden.

Prison addicts try ear acupuncture

United Press International

MIAMI — Cocaine-addicted prisoners at the Dade County Stockade are allowing doctors to stick needles in their ears in an experiment to see if acupuncture can help them overcome their drug habits.

Twenty inmates volunteered for an acupuncture session Friday as part of a pilot program at the jail.

Dade County Circuit Judge Herbert Klein, the county's drug czar, invited New York acupuncture expert Dr. Michael Smith to demonstrate the ancient Chinese art in a stockade trailer.

The inmates folded their arms and meditated 40 minutes with their eyes half closed and four needles stuck in each ear. The idea, the doctor said, is to relax the patients so they are more receptive to counseling and more likely to kick their addictions.

"It's beautiful, man," said Leman Tyrone Howard, a prisoner who said he had been "into cocaine since 1980."

"It dates back 3,000 years, so it's time-tested," Howard added.

Anthony Alexis, 19, said he didn't care much for needles or pain, but opted to try the treatment anyway.

"My mother got me into this program. I'm planning on doing something with my life," Alexis said.

Floyd Small, serving time for grand theft, was more skeptical as he watched some friends during a test-run.

"I noticed a change when you were in the trailer," he told them. "But once we were back in the yard, hey, that acupuncture treatment deteriorated quite fast."

Far Easterners accepted acupuncture centuries ago as a treatment for creaky joints, digestive problems and other maladies. Some Western scientists are embracing it today as a way to reduce cravings and curb alcohol and drug addictions.

"It's not a magic bullet," Klein said. "It's got to be part of a regular drug program with counseling and other forms of treatment."

Details of the pilot program still must be worked out.

Historic Key West lighthouse shines again

United Press International

KEY WEST — The historic Key West lighthouse, a 30-foot brick tower that shines a beacon 15 miles out to sea, was reopened Saturday following a $250,000 facelift.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony marked the beginning of the 1989 Bicentennial Celebration of the American Lighthouse, sponsored by the U.S. Lighthouse Society. The Key West tower is the first of 75 lighthouses nationwide getting a facelift this year.

The Key West Lighthouse attracts more notice than most because it sits in the middle of the city. Built in 1848, it is actually the city's second lighthouse.

"The first lighthouse was at the edge of the island. It was destroyed by a hurricane. When they built the new one they moved it to the inner city where it's better protected from storms," said Susan Olsen, director of the Key West Art and Historical Society, which conducts tours of the tower.

"With an island as small as Key West, it's still only a mile from shore," she said.

Owned by Monroe County, the light has not been classified as a working lighthouse by the Coast Guard since 1969.

"It technically is not an aid to navigation any more. The city lights are so bright that the lighthouse isn't essential any more," Olsen said.

The historical society took advantage of restoration grants available for the Bicentennial and closed the building for repairs four months ago.

Workmen stripped the lighthouse's interior and exterior paint, repaired cracks in the masonry, refinished the metal grillwork on the top and rebuilt the 94-step interior stairway.

Previously, visitors were barred from climbing all the way to the top because of concern that the fragile lens could be broken. The lens is now enclosed in glass and the entire tower is open to the public.

The 15,000-candlepower lightbulb makes the beacon visible for 15 miles, Olsen said. It was to be relighted in a ceremony shortly after sunset Saturday.

deaths. Near blizzard conditions in the Sierra Nevada mountains of California lead the highway patrol there to caution motorists to stay home this weekend — no skiing, no traveling, no anything.

Fortunately, weather in Seminole County behaved differently and a riverboat wedding, with 100 guests in attendance, went off yesterday as planned.

Weddings were a success, but work productivity is questionable. Most who have to work do so begrudgingly, not wanting to interrupt daydreams or give up their lawn chairs.

"I have spring fever so bad, I go out and sit on the bank," Blackstone said. "I move my office wherever the view is."

Special Visa 'affinity cards' help Catholic schools

United Press International

TAMPA — Special VISA cards issued to Roman Catholics in the Tampa Bay area could help raise up to $300,000 a year for church schools in the five-county diocese.

When they use the distinctive cards with a chalkboard and cross in the corner, they will be donating a part of the carrying costs to the Roman Catholic Diocese of St. Petersburg's Catholic Education Foundation Inc.

The foundation plans to use the money for scholarships and to raise teacher salaries in three high schools and 28 elementary schools in the five-county diocese.

Proceeds will also be used to build new schools and renovate old ones in Hillsborough, Pinellas, Pasco, Hernando and Citrus counties.

The cards are expected to be available by the end of the month.

The so-called affinity cards are popular elsewhere in the county and in Florida already are used by supporters of Florida State University, the University of Florida, the University of South Florida and groups such as the National Rifle Association. Public school systems in Alachua, Marion and Volusia counties also have the affinity cards.

But diocese officials said they know of only one other religious group using them, the Archdiocese of Miami.

"The banks see it as a marketing tool for them," said Joseph Mannion, director of the foundation.

"For the diocese, it's win-win situation because the parishioners are benefiting their schools," said Mark Gruetzmacher, senior vice president of First Florida Bank Inc., which will issue the cards.

First Florida predicts the foundation could earn $38,000 a year if 2,000 cards are given out.

"If we get to 15,000 accounts, which we could because we are a growing diocese, we could expect $300,000 a year, year in and year out. That would be the equivalent of a $3 million endowment," Mannion said.

He expects the project to succeed because some 300,000 Roman Catholics live in the diocese. Parishes and the diocese headquarters will hand out applications, Gruetzmacher said.

"You don't have to be Catholic to apply for the cards," Mannion said, adding that many students in the 31 affected schools are not Roman Catholic.

Sanford police report the attack and the arrest of Janice Lavada Moore, 20, of 1410 W. 12th St., Sanford, occurred at the house of the suspect. Bond is $1,000. Stitches were needed for Strickland's wound, police said.

Man charged with battering roommate

LONGWOOD — Beatrice Roberts of 2230 Church St., rural Longwood, reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies that her roommate hit her in the face several times with his fists Saturday.

That brought a charge of battery against Theodis Williams, 48, of the same address. He was arrested at home at 2:18 p.m. Saturday. Bond is $500.

Suspected copper thief caught

SANFORD — Witnesses tipped Sanford police to a burglary at a maintenance building of the Seminole County School District, 410 W. Fourth St., at about 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Police spotted Michael Gilchrist, 34, of 37 Lake Monroe Terrace, Sanford, near the scene. He was carrying a roll of copper tubing that police said was stolen from the maintenance building. The witness reportedly identified Gilchrist as a suspect in the case and he is charged with burglary and theft. Bond is $5,000.

Man bashed in face with bottle

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Seminole County sheriff's deputies report charging Christine Baker Hunter, 48, of 317 Hayman Ave., Altamonte Springs, with aggravated battery, after she allegedly hit James F. Ulmer in the face with a bottle during a fight outside their house Friday.

Ulmer's face and head were cut. Bond is $2,000.

Patrol car pelted with pebbles

SANFORD — A man who allegedly threw a handful of stones at a Seminole County sheriff's patrol car parked outside the Deluxe Bar, Southwest Road, rural Sanford, and then stood in the road cursing and challenging the deputy driving the car, has been arrested.

New Lake Jesup watch-dog born

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A central Florida botanist recommended on Saturday that the muck, not the water, be pumped out of Lake Jesup to improve water quality and fishing.

"Remove the muck, not the water," said Jose E. Godts, a Valencia Community College botany professor and assistant professor at University of Central Florida. "Otherwise," he said, "you'll have to do it again and again."

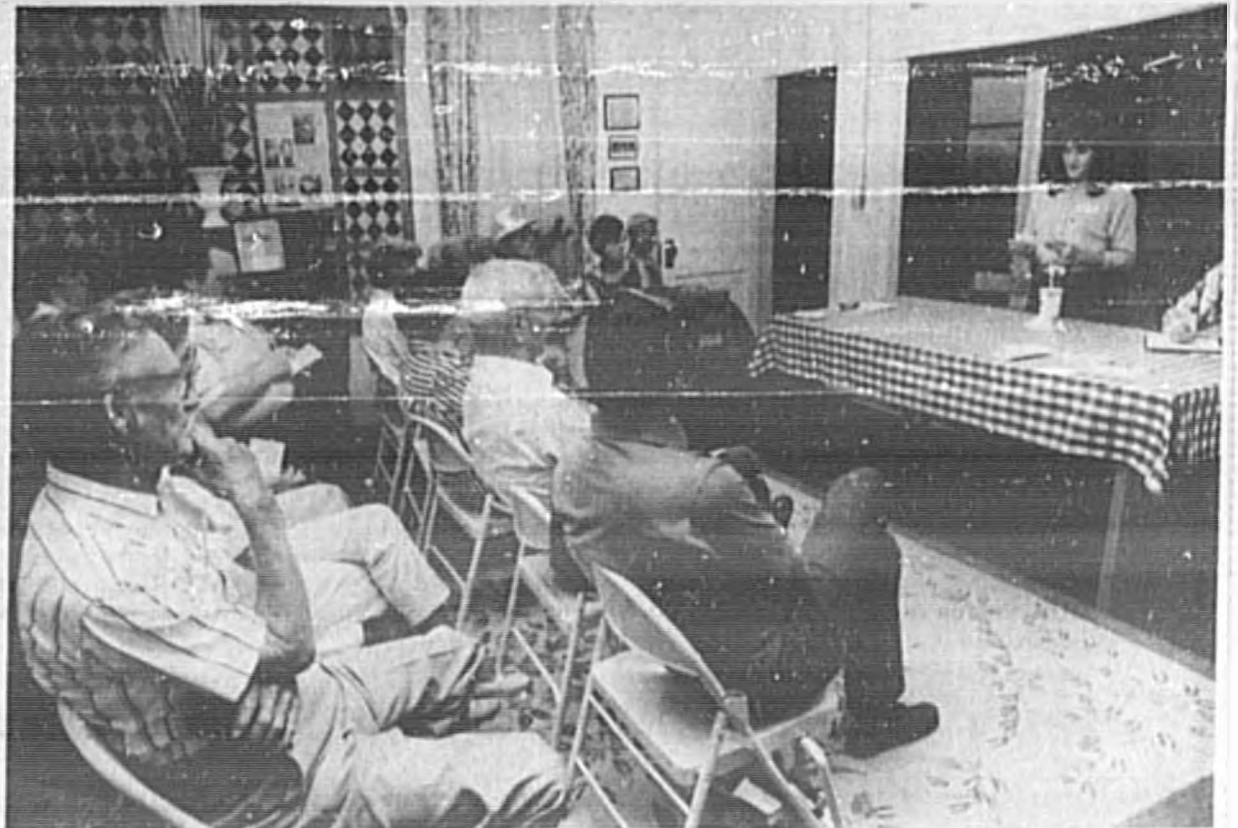

The purpose of draining the lake is to clean the bottom in order to promote increased spawning of fish such as bass.

Godts made his suggestion during an organizational meeting of a group of homeowners, naturalists, historians and archeologists who plan to study Lake Jesup and the surrounding marshland. Godts also is a member of the Florida Native Plant Society, which will join in the study.

Organizer Melanie Gilmartin, a 16-year resident of the north side of the lake, said the group will become a committee of the Friends of the St. Johns, a chartered state corporation formed 15 years ago to protect the St. Johns River. She said the information collected by the group will aid state and local officials in making development decisions about the lake area.

Godts cited Lake Kishopekaliga, south of Kissimmee, as an example of why his suggestion should be followed. That lake, he said, had to be drained three times during the 1970s and 1980s.

When the lake bottom is exposed, weeds such as dog fennel grow in the drying muck; when the lake is reflooded, the weeds die and create a new layer of nutrient-rich, silty sediment on the lake bed. The silt eventually builds up into the deep layers of muck like what is found on the bottom of Lake Jesup. The muck inhibits fish breeding.

Godts said a result of draining the lake is that the algae-sustaining nutrients become embedded in the muck when it dries to a brick-like hardness.

Godts recommends floating barges over the lake and using the same large pumps, normally used to draw the lake down, to suck the muck out of the lake.

The muck could be given free to farmers to improve their soil to save expensive hauling costs, he said.

The lake also is the proposed site of a nearly two-mile-long expressway bridge to be built by the Seminole County Expressway Authority. The groups fear the bridge will result in the destruction of many of the resources in and around the lake.

The lake area is rich with rare ferns, prehistoric bones, Indian mounds and possibly two old Spanish or English fort sites, although little documented information is available on the lake.

State officials have endorsed a $3.5 million to $6 million plan to draw up to 80 percent of the water out of the 10,000-acre Lake Jesup and scrape much of the four to 18 feet of muck out to allow game fish to spawn there again. The draining is not expected to be begun for at least three years and take about nine months to complete.

State officials have said additional drawdowns might also be needed on Lake Jesup unless state drainage requirements are strengthened to reduce pollution of the creeks leading into Lake Jesup.

Surplus property to be sold

By BANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Acting City Manager Charles Lauderdale has announced a public sale for the disposal of surplus city property.

Lauderdale said the sale, to take place on March 4 or March 11, in case of inclement weather, will be conducted in bid fashion.

Approximately one week before the sale, the merchandise will be on display at the public works department. The surplus property includes such things as two copiers, one which originally cost $5,895 but is presently valued at $50. Both of the copiers are in poor condition, according to Lauderdale. Also, two cars which are considered in poor condition will also be up for sale. One is a 1979 Ford LTD, the other is a 1982 Ford LTD. Lauderdale said a jeep was originally also part of the surplus "junk", but it has since been restored and put back into service.

Other items include file cabinets, IBM typewriters, desks, chairs, telephone dialers, calculators, a Coke machine, a lightbar and alarm speaker, a boat which had been confiscated (scrap condition), a tractor and a front-end loader.

Many of the items had originally been donated to the city.

Dead is Herbert Wade Yeatman, of 41 E. Second St., Chuluota.

A Florida Highway Patrol spokesman said the accident was reported at about 5:50 a.m. Saturday. There were no witnesses. Yeatman was traveling east. He was alone.

The FHP reported his 1979 Chevrolet pickup truck crossed into the westbound lane. The truck hit a steel guardrail and sailed into the river. Yeatman was not wearing a seatbelt.

The FHP said there is no indication that alcohol was a factor in the accident, which is under investigation.

Two face forgery charges after arrests this week

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A Sanford man and a Casselberry woman face forgery charges as a result of their arrests last week in separate incidents.

The man who tried to cash a forged check for $299 in Sanford was arrested after a cashier checked with a Sanford bank and learned the account the check was drawn on was closed in 1987, police said.

Thomas Edward Roberson, 20, of 417 1/2 W. 11th St., Sanford, was charged with uttering a forgery. The arrest was made at 9:40 a.m. Wednesday, after he walked away from the Winn-Dixie on U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford, to be arrested by Sanford police outside the nearby State Farmers Market.

Police said the check was drawn on an account of Star Line Enterprises and made out to Roberson. When he allegedly presented it at the Winn-Dixie the cashier checked with First Union Bank and learned the account it was drawn on was closed. Police were called and Roberson left the store and was captured. Bond is $1,000.

The woman, Calestina Saunders Cuddy, 40, of 119 Lurie Motel, Casselberry, claimed after she was arrested that she had cashed $10,000 to $15,000 worth of stolen checks which she bought, forged and cashed in Seminole and Orange counties, according to police.

Cuddy was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies at the Sanford police station at 11:30 a.m. Thursday.

She is charged with forgery, uttering a forgery, grand theft and dealing in stolen property. Deputies report she was linked to the cashing of a $325 check at Publix in Seminole Centre on Dec. 21. The check had been stolen from Central Florida Recovery Bureau, and Cuddy reportedly told deputies she had bought and cashed 100 such checks.

Housing Authority to apply for more vouchers

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Sanford Housing Authority has decided to seek further assistance to place low-income tenants in private sector housing.

The board voted unanimously at its meeting last week to apply for 25 additional vouchers for private sector housing through Section Eight of U.S. Housing and Urban Development.

The vouchers are administered through the housing authority to subsidize rent of low-income individuals who live in privately-owned units.

Linda Williams, acting executive director of the authority, told board members that a housing crisis in Sanford would worsen if the city did not pursue assistance through the Section Eight program. While other cities are seeking and receiving Section Eight assistance, she said, "our needs should continue to go over to 19th Street to the (Rescue Outreach Mission) shelter" if the board does not take steps to assist families in need of affordable housing.

The 25 vouchers would be in addition to eight Section Eight vouchers currently administered by the authority.

The authority met Thursday to discuss turning the director position over to a professional management firm.

A representative who would not identify the local firm she represents outlined advantages of private management of the authority.

Elderly needing health care may double by 2020

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The number of elderly needing long-term health care will more than double by 2020 to about 14.3 million, according to a congressional report requested by Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Florida, who at 88 is the oldest member of Congress.

The report, released at the end of last week, predicted that millions will go without health care unless costs are reduced. It will be presented to a new commission studying the need for long-term care.

Pepper also has introduced legislation expanding Medicare to cover home health care and nursing home care.

"The question of how to finance and how to administer a program of long-term care for all Americans and how to finance and how to administer a program of comprehensive health care for all uninsured Americans is the most troublesome aspect of our health care system today," Pepper said in a statement.

The catastrophic-illness insurance law, passed in the last Congress, expands Medicare to cover hospital stays of longer than 60 days.

But Kathy Gardner, staff director for the House Aging Committee, said only 20 percent of the elderly stay in hospitals more than 60 days, and only 2 percent of the elderly can either find or afford private insurance that covers long-term or nursing care.

The report, done by the General Accounting Office, said an estimated 6.2 million elderly were dependent on others for daily care, and about one-fifth lived in nursing homes. By 2020, as the "baby-boomers" age, 14.3 million elderly will be dependent.

The report noted the number of elderly able to have informal, or family, care will decrease, partly because of the increase in working women, and the number of elderly able to afford formal care will decrease as well.

"Unless Congress acts, millions of elderly will go without needed health care in years to come," Pepper said.

The report said getting formal care is a problem for some elderly because nursing homes have long waiting lists, and those most likely to wait are those that need mental health care or are waiting for Medicaid — government insurance for the poor — to pay the homes.

The report also noted that out-of-pocket payments for nursing homes and other long-term care can run a "devastating" $25,000 a year, forcing them eventually to lose their life's savings and have Medicaid take over.

Man sues county for false arrest

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — An Altamonte Springs man has filed suit against the Altamonte Springs Police Department charging he was falsely arrested last month.

Charles E. Brewer stated he is project manager of a public storage facility at 1080 E. Altamonte Drive and was arrested there on Jan. 21 on charges of obstructing and resisting arrest without violence. He says he was booked and held in jail until he posted bond.

On Feb. 2 the state attorney's office filed a "no information" stating it would not file charges.

Brewer says he was arrested without probable cause in violation of his rights under the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, and in violation of his rights protecting him against unreasonable arrest under the 14th Amendment.

He is asking for damages in excess of $50,000, claiming he suffered injuries in the arrest requiring hospitalization, medical and nursing care, and resulted in loss of earnings and aggravation of a previous medical condition.

His wife, Dorothy, has asked for additional damages in excess of $5,000 for loss of support, companionship and consortium of her husband as a result of the arrest.

Nearly three million tourists visited Florida in November

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — An estimated 3 million tourists visited Florida in November 1988, an increase of 16 percent over the same month in 1987, according to figures released by the state Department of Commerce.

The year-to-date figure through November was 33.9 million visitors, an increase of 9.3 percent over the same period in 1987, officials said following release of the report late last week.

About half arrived by car and about half by plane, helping hotel-motel occupancy rates and increasing tourism-related sales tax collections.

The report says tourism-related tax collections for the first 11 months of 1988 amounted to $1.3 billion, more than those collected during all of 1987, but they include the 1-cent increase in the state sales tax that went into effect last February.

Some 1.8 million international travelers poured into Florida, encouraged by a weaker U.S. dollar and what has been a warmer-than-usual winter in many areas.

There has also been an increase in the number of people stopping at the Florida Welcome Centers along roadways entering the state.

MacNamara named secretary of business regulation department

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Stephen R. MacNamara a politically connected Tallahassee lawyer, has been named by Gov. Bob Martinez as the new secretary of the state Department of Business Regulation.

MacNamara, 35, managing partner in the Tallahassee office of Tampa's Fowler White Gillen Boggs Villareal & Banker law firm, will replace Van Poole as DBR chief March 15. Martinez announced late last week.

Poole is resigning to become chairman of the Florida Republican Party.

MacNamara is a former associate dean of the Florida State University College of Law. He holds a journalism degree from the University of Florida and earned his law degree at FSU.

The Fowler White firm has close ties to the Republican administration. Martinez' political adviser, J.M. "Mac" Stipanovich, also works for the firm's Tallahassee office.

DBR oversees state regulation of hotels and restaurants, condominiums, alcoholic beverages and tobacco, boxing and paramutual wagering.

MacNamara joined Fowler White in 1987, after his three-year stint at the law school. While at FSU, he directed a $7.5 million fund-raising drive to improve facilities and instruction and provide scholarships.

He served as general manager of Group W Cable in Tallahassee and served four years as host and producer of "First Amendment," a public affairs program for WECA-TV in Tallahassee.

Stoecker, others resign from Grabill after bankruptcy hearing

United Press International

CHICAGO — William Stoecker resigned Friday as chairman of Grabill Corp., just hours after a federal bankruptcy judge put the company under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

"I felt my resignation would be better for the company and give it a fresh start," said Stoecker, whose bank lenders have accused him of forgery and diverting about $100 million of corporation real estate and cash.

"If part of the problem was me, and you eliminate me, it solves part of the problem... Maybe this will help stop the madness, so that people can begin focusing on the company again," Stoecker said.

Published reports say three other top officers of the Oak Forest firm soon will resign. They are Philip Ignarsky, vice chairman, Richard Bock, chief financial officer, and Lawrence Pluhar, vice president for planning.

Grabill was sued earlier this week for $148 million by a nine-bank consortium led by New England Corp. The group asked the bankruptcy court to throw Grabill into involuntary bankruptcy under Chapter 7.

The banks charged in their suit that since late September $100 million in assets have disappeared from the company's balance sheet.

But U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge John H. Squires approved Grabill's motion to convert the bankruptcy into a Chapter 11 petition. Squires' action will allow Grabill to continue operating under court protection and keep its creditors from trying to liquidate it.

Stoecker, 31, remains the sole shareholder of Grabill, a conglomerate

Barbara Bush won't take credit

United Press International

WASHINGTON — First lady Barbara Bush denied reports that she had urged her husband to tone down his negative presidential campaign, saying "I got credit for a lot of good things that I didn't do."

Bush also expressed surprise that her predecessor, Nancy Reagan, once owned a "tiny little gun" that she kept in her bedstand drawer before she moved into the White House.

"No, I never owned a gun," Bush said. "I'm one who does not like guns very much. But I'm not — you know, I really don't talk about issues very much. I'm afraid of guns. I'm just afraid I'd shoot the wrong person."

Bush said she was aware of the high crime rate and shootings in Washington, adding "George feels, for instance (in columnist) Carl Rowan's case, he's perfectly legitimate in defending his ... having had a license."

Rowan was tried after he fired a gun at a young man who intruded in his backyard with others and jumped into the swimming pool. The trial resulted in a hung jury and he was not retried.

Anna Perez, the first lady's press secretary, confirmed that Bush is in favor of outlawing guns such as the AK-military assault machine gun, used in the Stockton, Calif., massacre in which five children were killed.

When asked if she thought her husband was too harsh in his stump campaign rhetoric against Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, Bush replied: "No, not at all." It had been widely reported that Bush counseled against the attack plan used last year by her husband.

"I don't like negative campaigns," Bush said. "I don't like negative ads. But, I mean, I haven't liked negative ads since Harriett said the targeted area, especially outside the Talk of The Town Bar, was the hottest spot for crack cocaine sales on the east side of Sanford. On the west side, the 13th Street and Southwest Road areas are sites of numerous cocaine sales and related arrests.

Harriett said for safety's sake, the operation was planned for daylight hours, when cocaine dealers operate openly.

During the four arrests just before noon on Seventh Street at Pine Avenue, one suspect, Alex W. McGriff, 21, of 2211 Hawkins Ave., Sanford, ran and was bitten by the police K-9 dog "Patrol." Police said they confiscated $1,000 worth of cocaine from McGriff. He is charged with possession of crack cocaine with intent to distribute and resisting arrest without violence.

Another man arrested at that time, Charles Edwards, appeared following the arrests of two others. He stood in the street beside Officer First Class Ray Bronson, who turned and recognized him as a suspect on the target list. Bronson knocked Edwards to the ground and arrested him.

During the crackdown, while arresting John Delmedico, 28, of 240 Cypress Way Casselberry, police report he tried to flee and drove into an undercover officer, slightly injuring the officer.

He was captured within minutes at about 6 p.m. on Second Street, and charges of leaving the scene of an accident, aggravated battery with a motor vehicle and driving under the influence were added.

Those arrested were:

- Calvin A. Copeland, 34, 2315 Summerlin Ave., Sanford: possession and purchase of cocaine.
- Henry Mitchell Jr., 36, 121 Hughes St., Sanford: possession and purchase of cocaine.
- Fredrick James Clarke, 38, 2902 Chantilly Ave., Winter Park: possession and purchase of cocaine.
- Dwayne Willis, 20, 1403 S. Locust St., Sanford: possession with intent to distribute cocaine.

- Charles Edwards, 21, 605 Willow Ave., Sanford: sale and delivery and possession of cocaine.
- Alex W. McGriff, 21, of 2211 Hawkins Ave., Sanford: possession with intent to distribute cocaine.
- James Little Jr., 28, 1819 Summerlin Ave., Sanford: sale, delivery and possession of cocaine.
- Gilbert F. Mobley, 19, no address, possession less than 20 grams of marijuana.

- Henry Lee Dye, 25, 1413 W. Seventh St., Sanford: possession of cocaine and marijuana.

Bond ranges from $500 to $2,000 each for the suspects.

posal's chances for passage. "We're tying it to an issue everyone agrees with — and that's putting criminals away longer. In order to do that, you have to pay for it."

Silver said the front-end tags would cost $10 or $15 more than motorists currently pay. The higher figure would raise $179 million per year. There would be about $140 million left for the prisons after the costs of the license tag program are paid.

Gov. Bob Martinez' recommended budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, due Feb. 18, is expected to contain a request for 9,000 additional prison beds. The annual cost for locking up those extra inmates would be about $120 million.

"As far as law enforcement is concerned, one of their most valuable tools is to be able to spot a vehicle for wanted people," said Charlie Salerno of the state Fraternal Order of Police.

"The way our system is now, there's only one situation in which an officer can identify a car from its license plate, and that's when he's directly behind him. With a front plate you can see the numbers from angles and from behind. It would increase the probability of the officer locating wanted vehicles and wanted suspects from the license plates," Salerno said.

"We meet a lot more cars than we follow. We certainly like the idea," said Fred Dickinson, lobbyist for the state Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles, which contains the Florida Highway Patrol.

Brian Ballard, a top aide to Martinez, said the governor would be "very responsive to the idea if it had a legitimate use for law enforcement," but might object to dedicating the proceeds to the prisons.

Florida is one of 13 states that require license tags only for the rear of a vehicle.

gasoline tax increase. The pressures of growth management may force local governments to use more taxing power for road building, she said.

But Rep. Anne Mackenzie, who chairs the House tax committee, said she thinks the public wants a tax increase on gasoline.

"Anybody who drives on our roads and is stuck in traffic supports it," Mackenzie said.

In the U.S. Congress, a bill is pending to raise the federal tax on gasoline as a way of raising revenue to reduce the federal deficit. However, it is expected that the bill is unlikely to pass.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Thornburgh calls for tough drug attitude

DENVER — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, noting that 60 percent of the murders in the nation's capital last year were linked to drugs, said Saturday that to achieve a "kinder, gentler America" will require a rougher, tougher attitude toward violent drug traffickers.

In remarks prepared for delivery to a luncheon of the American Judicature Society and the National Conference of Bar Presidents, Thornburgh said it will be necessary to apply the newly enacted Federal Death Penalty "to end the free-fire zones" in the nation's cities.

The law provides for capital punishment when drug traffickers kill law enforcement officers or when members of a narcotics-dealing enterprise murder citizens.

Thornburgh also called for more cooperation among law enforcement agencies at every level — local, state, federal and international.

Thornburgh noted that in Washington last year, 60 percent of the 369 murders were believed to be drug related and "the first month of this year saw 49 people killed, all as a result of drugs."

Chicago exchange fires two traders

CHICAGO — The Chicago Mercantile Exchange has fined two more of its members for making prearranged trades, bringing to three the number suspended since the federal government launched an investigation of such activity at the Merc and the Chicago Board of Trade.

Timothy S. Fox was fined $50,000 and had his membership suspended for six months, the Merc announced Friday. Mark B. Hara was fined $3,000.

Both men were accused of prearranging trades in the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index futures pit, the Merc said.

All trades at the futures exchanges are supposed to be made in public auction on the trading floor. Prearranged trading involves a buyer and seller agreeing privately to a deal at a given price without getting competitive bids or offers. Such action is considered a major violation of exchange rules.

Last week, the Merc fined another member, Albert Furman, $150,000, and suspended him for two months for making prearranged trades. As with Friday's cases, Furman agreed to the settlement without admitting or denying guilt.

Boeing ordered to pay $1.5 million

SEATTLE — A jury has awarded $1.5 million to an Italian woman who lost her husband and son 3 1/2 years ago when a Boeing 747 slammed into a mountain in Japan, killing 520 people in the world's worst single-plane aviation accident.

The civil lawsuit against The Boeing Co., brought by Heidi Moroni and her 18-year-old son, was the first case involving the crash of the Japan Air Lines jet to go to trial anywhere in the world.

Moroni, whose hometown was not known, had sought $6.5 million and was not satisfied with the King County Superior Court jury's award Friday.

She said the jury worked hard to understand the complex case, but said Boeing eventually used its resources to confuse and "create difficulties" for the jurors.

Boeing attorney Tom McLaughlin said the company was content with the results.

Three other cases are pending in King County Superior Court, while 80 cases have been moved to Japan and nearly 400 have been settled out of court.

Elephant lunges at two rookie keepers

ESCONDIDO, Calif. — For the second time in a year, an incident between an elephant and her keepers has prompted a federal investigation of elephant care at the San Diego Wild Animal Park.

Officials at the popular tourist attraction, operated by the San Diego Zoological Society, are being questioned by a U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarian about the handling of Cindy, a 28-year-old Asian cow elephant.

Cindy, described by a former trainer as "possibly the most dangerous (elephant) in the country," lunged at two rookie keepers on two successive days.

On Jan. 31, Cindy lunged at David SaoMarcos before horrified visitors in the park's elephant show area, rolling him over into a moat and breaking his collarbone.

The next day, she tried to attack Bob Potvin, trampling his wheelbarrow as he escaped unharmed. Physical discipline was not administered to Cindy but she was placed in isolation to prevent further incidents.

On Friday, USDA officials in Sacramento dispatched a veterinarian to the park to look into the two incidents.

Visitors who witnessed the first incident have said the keeper was striking the elephant on the back of her legs with a hook when she turned on him.

Police 'gang sweep' nets 120 arrests

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — A police task force swept through south Los Angeles and rounded up nearly 120 people in the first drop of the anti-gang "hammer" this year, authorities said Saturday.

The crackdown followed the arrest of a gang member wanted for a drive-by shooting last month that left a toddler and a neighbor dead.

Police spokeswoman Tert Dixon said 242 officers were deployed in the 14-hour sweep ending at 3 a.m. Saturday, arresting 118 people, at least 71 of them known gang members.

The suspects were booked on a variety of felony or misdemeanor charges, including traffic violations.

Many more arrests might have been made had the weather not dissolved to rain, Dixon said.

"A lot of people stay home (because of bad weather)," she said.

Compton police said they arrested an 18-year-old suspect in the fatal Jan. 28 shooting of 2-year-old Phillip Fisher and a neighbor, Deandre Richard, 19, by a gunman with a semiautomatic assault rifle.

Police said at least 20 rounds were fired at a group of people outside a Compton home. Three people were wounded.

The identity of the suspect, arrested Friday, was withheld by police, who said they did not want to tip off two other suspects still at large.

The periodic sweeps in the city's gang strongholds, dubbed "The Hammer" by Police Chief Daryl Gates, are intended to "suppress violent gang activity in South Central Los Angeles," Dixon said.

Up to 1,000 officers at a time have participated in the weekend sweeps, which began last February and resulted in 24,094 arrests — including 13,548 gang members — through last November.

In the latest crackdown, police also seized six guns and 411.5 grams of cocaine, Dixon said.

Deaver drops appeal to end 'agony and doubt'

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Saying he wanted to end the "agony and doubt" in his life, Michael Deaver on Friday dropped his appeal of a 1987 conviction for lying to a federal grand jury about his post-White House lobbying activities.

Deaver, who now must serve a sentence of 1,500 hours of community service, said he no longer could afford to finance a further legal fight.

"My belief in my innocence has not changed from the day the long and arduous proceedings against me began three years ago," the former deputy White House chief of staff said in a prepared statement.

Deaver filed a notice of appeal last October with the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and he said he withdrew it for several reasons, primarily his "desire to put this period of my life behind me and get on with whatever lies ahead."

"To proceed with the appeal means to continue to live in doubt, to continue to wait for a decision, and if my appeal is successful to face another trial, a process which could mean another two years of agony and doubt."

"Pursuing the appeal also means continuing a financial burden that my family and I simply cannot bear. ... News media reports to the contrary, I am not, nor have I ever been wealthy, nor can I continue to ask my attorneys to represent me without any prospect of being paid."

After losing a protracted legal fight in which he challenged the right of an independent prosecutor to seek his indictment, Deaver was convicted in Deember 1987 of two counts of making false statements to a grand jury and one count of perjury. He had contended that his lack of memory during his testimony about his lucrative lobbying activities stemmed from bouts of alcoholism.

Since his case came to the forefront, Deaver has been active in Alcoholics Anonymous.

Without mentioning the organization, Deaver said, "My experience during this ordeal has taught me what is really of value in this world."

WORLD BRIEFS

Anti-apartheid whites form party

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Three white anti-apartheid groups agreed Saturday to form a new party, offering a "new political home" and a unified voice for opponents of white-minority rule.

A panel of political analysts that assisted in the formation of the new Democratic Party included the brother of National Education Minister Frederik de Klerk, who was announced this week as the likely successor to ailing President Pieter W. Botha.

Ruling National Party lawmakers elected De Klerk as party leader following Botha's unexpected resignation from that post. Botha is recovering from a mild stroke suffered two weeks ago.

Current leaders of the Progressive Federal Party, the Independent Party and the National Democratic Movement will head the new Democratic Party, an interim steering committee said in a statement Saturday.

The three groups will officially merge at a convention in Johannesburg on April 8, the statement said.

Soviets, Chinese disagree over date

BEIJING — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze ended an historic visit to China Saturday with an agreement on the first Sino-Soviet summit in 30 years, but a top Chinese official contradicted him by saying its timing remains in dispute.

Shevardnadze told a news conference the summit between Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would be in mid-May and would represent the "complete normalization of relations between the Soviet Union and China."

Ties between the two communist giants collapsed in the 1960s, but both have been working toward a thaw since 1982. Shevardnadze's four-day visit, including a Saturday morning meeting with Deng, was to set the stage for the summit, the final step toward normalizing relations.

The two nations agreed to the summit Friday, and Shevardnadze announced an agreement on the timing for the summit Saturday.

But minutes after Shevardnadze's plane took off for Pakistan, Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Tian Zengpei contradicted him and told reporters further negotiations were needed to set a date.

Sri Lanka celebrates independence

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — President Ranasinghe Premadasa vowed Saturday to "uphold law and order, and preserve discipline," in a ceremony marking the 41st anniversary of Sri Lanka's independence from Britain.

At the same time, unabated political violence claimed more lives in the island country.

Premadasa, who was elected president last December, ordered this year's Independence celebrations be on an austere scale, with only religious ceremonies allowed.

In the only official ceremony at Colombo's Independence Square — scene of the first Freedom Day 41 years ago — Premadasa received a 21-gun salute and hoisted the national flag to the beat of drums.

Despite the Independence Day commemoration, Sinhala rebels of the Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (People's Liberation Front) continued to trigger violent incidents.

Since nominations were called on January 6 for the general elections, scheduled for Feb. 15, police say the JVP rebels have killed 11 candidates and wounded two. Out of the 11 candidates shot to death, authorities said seven were of the Freedom Party.

Police said from Jan. 1 to Feb. 4, 798 people have been killed in violence relating to Sinhala rebels.

Fourteen people, including a candidate for this month's general election, were killed and two police vehicles were attacked in a string of incidents over the past 24 hours, a senior police official said Saturday.

Chinese prepare for Year of the Snake

BEIJING — Chinese Saturday slaughtered pigs, welcomed relatives and readied arsenals of fireworks to usher in the Year of the Snake, hoping for its promise of stability and progress as they ring out the tumultuous dragon.

According to China's 5,000-year old lunar calendar, the snake year begins Monday on the biggest annual festival for Chinese worldwide and heralds 12 months of steadiness and wisdom despite a turbulent undercurrent known as the "little dragon" on the Chinese zodiac.

Revelers bidding farewell to the dragon, the most favorable of the 12 ancient animal years, will put aside concerns about the nation's bouts with record inflation, rampant corruption and widening gaps in living standards. All return after the holiday.

At midnight Sunday, the lunar New Year's Eve, Chinese communities from Sydney to New York will hail the snake with barrages of fireworks to scare off any lingering ghosts that might cast an evil eye over the propitious moment.

Although fireworks have been banned in many areas and sales have experienced a 30 percent dip in China, revelers will explode millions of firecrackers despite the hundreds of deaths and injuries caused each year.

Soviets leave token force in Afghanistan

United Press International

KABUL, Afghanistan — A large convoy carrying the bulk of Kabul's Soviet garrison hurried out of the Afghan capital Saturday, leaving only a token force in the city Moscow invaded more than nine years ago to support a friendly regime. Soviet sources said.

Two Soviet soldiers were seen buying vodka in the inner city, but an extensive tour of the capital and its defensive positions usually manned by Moscow's forces failed to find other members of the Soviet contingent.

Afghan soldiers were seen driving around in armored personnel carriers with Soviet markings, indicating the Kremlin has left some armor behind.

"Today was the last day," a Soviet source said. "All the troops have gone with the exception of the soldiers guarding the airport."

Earlier the source reported that three columns of Soviet troops would leave during the next three days to meet the Feb. 15 deadline for the complete Soviet withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan. The Soviet Union invaded the country in December 1979.

"Probably it was a trick," he said. "We were told they would leave Kabul around the 7th, but they probably decided to go earlier because of the weather."

Soviet Embassy officials have refused to disclose departure details, presumably concerned about alerting U.S.-backed rebels deployed along the Salang road to the Soviet border. A Soviet and Afghan military operation last week reportedly failed in its goal to halt rebel attacks along the main highway to Kabul.

The last Soviet column rolled out along the Salang road at dawn, with hundreds of waving Soviet soldiers huddled on top of mud-splattered armored personnel carriers and tanks and inside trucks for a three-day journey to Soviet territory.

Air traffic also resumed after Friday's heavy snow, and airport officials said an Ariana airline plane departed from Kabul, bearing British and French embassy personnel and Red Cross staff. The officials were evacuated because of concerns for their safety following the departure of Soviet troops. The British mission formally closed Saturday and the last French diplomats were to abandon their embassy Monday, leaving the Turkish Embassy as the only Western mission remaining open in the Afghan capital.

Israelis kill two, wound 20 in refugee camp

United Press International

JERUSALEM — Israeli soldiers killed two Palestinian youths and wounded at least 20 other people, including a Red Cross official, during violent clashes Saturday at a refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip, Palestinian sources said.

The clashes erupted Saturday morning when stone-throwing youths confronted soldiers near the Hatem Attal School in the U.N.-run Khan Younis refugee camp, Palestinian sources said. Soldiers killed one youth and wounded seven others in the initial incident, the sources said.

The killing of Ala' Arandes, 15, touched off a series of violent confrontations between youths and soldiers at the refugee camp and in nearby Khan Younis city, located in the southern section of the 28-mile-long Gaza Strip.

Majed Jad Al Haq, 17, was wounded in the kidney during the clashes in Khan Younis city and died while undergoing surgery at Nasser Hospital, located along a street that divides the refugee camp from the city, Palestinian sources said.

Sullivan takes leave of absence

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush's choice for health secretary, Dr. Louis Sullivan, announced Saturday he will take an unpaid leave of absence from the Morehouse School of Medicine to silence any questions of conflict of interest.

In a statement released through the White House, the secretary-designate of Health and Human Services said he was taking the action to stay in accordance with Bush's demand for the highest ethical standards from members of his administration.

"President Bush has called on all of those in his Cabinet, and indeed throughout the federal government, to set the very highest standards, and to avoid even the appearance of potential conflicts of interest," Sullivan said.

"I agree emphatically with the president that it is crucial to establish the highest ethical tone, and it will be my intention to uphold those same high principles as secretary," he said.

Sullivan, a professor of medicine at Morehouse whose nomination has been rocked by controversy over his conflicting statements on abortion, said he had requested the executive committee of the school board to grant him an unpaid leave of absence during the time he would serve in the administration.

"In this way, I intend to preclude even the remotest possibility of any appearance that my actions as secretary might be influenced due to any outside income," the nominee said.

Hearings on Sullivan's nomination have been held up pending completion of a FBI background check.

A White House official said Morehouse, like other academic institutions, allows faculty to take paid leaves of absence based upon years of service. After 13 years of uninterrupted service, Sullivan, who if confirmed would be Bush's only black Cabinet member, had earned and was granted a paid sabbatical leave of absence.

The move puts to rest a question that surfaced several weeks ago when Sullivan asked the White House if he could take the salary from the school while serving in the administration.

Rebel Carmelites mark four-month anniversary

United Press International

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, N.J. — Four months ago this weekend, a group of Discaled Carmelite nuns fled their monastery rooms and barricaded themselves in a wing of their northern New Jersey convent.

The nuns said they believed a church official was coming to evict them from their beloved Monastery of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel because of their conflicts with a new prioress over changes in their traditional cloistered lifestyle.

The long-simmering dispute in the Morris Township convent continued to boil over in the weeks following the dissidents' Oct. 4 decision to seek refuge in the infirmary.

Church officials fired scathing criticisms at the rebel nuns, calling them "disobedient" and labeling their actions "a scandal."

The dissidents fought back by appealing their case to the church hierarchy in Rome and describing their battles with the prioress, Mother Teresa Hewitt, to the media.

After several weeks, however, the convent settled into a calm, if somewhat uneasy, standoff.

A Vatican emissary came and went, twice. The rebels took their telephone off the hook, blocking calls from reporters. Television crews stopped holding daily vigils outside the monastery.

Life of the convent returned almost to its contemplative norm.

Almost.

Mother Hewitt and her supporters carry out their day-to-day activities on their side of the convent.

And the five rebels, from behind their grilled door on the second floor, have observed Christmas mass and other community activities.

They are, for now, at least, free to avoid the modern amenities introduced by Mother Hewitt, which have included small amounts of sweets, brighter lighting, music and limited television.

Such changes, the rebel nuns have said, distract the Carmelite community from its life of contemplation and quiet prayer.

So convent life goes on.

Paraguayans cautiously await new government

United Press International

ASUNCION, Paraguay — Paraguayans cautiously awaited Saturday the first steps of a new government, headed by Gen. Andres Rodriguez, who took power in a bloody coup that ended the 34-year regime of dictator Gen. Alfredo Stroessner.

Overthrown less than a year after winning his eighth election, Stroessner submitted his resignation as Paraguay's president and commander of the Armed Forces, according to a brief statement released to the media Friday.

Radio Caritas, a station linked to the Catholic Church, estimated between 200 and 300 people died during the military revolt that put an end to Stroessner's rule.

Sabino Montanaro, Interior Minister under Stroessner, requested asylum in the South African embassy, according to Radio Caritas.

Calm settled over the Paraguayan capital Friday as troops withdrew from most parts of Asuncion after a night of shooting that left at least 100 dead.

"Now at least we can speak without fear," a caller to an Asuncion radio station said after Gen. Rodriguez was sworn in as new president.

Most tanks and soldiers returned to their bases, and the army urged civilians to look out for unexploded artillery shells. No curfew was imposed.

Some signs of normalcy were evident. Small groups of people gathered in a balmy summer evening at sidewalk cafes.

Cold doesn't deter Mardi Gras revelry

United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — Despite temperatures that hovered in the low 40s Saturday, hundreds of thousands of revelers jammed into the Big Easy to party on the climactic weekend leading up to Mardi Gras.

An Arctic cold front roared into Louisiana Friday, dropping temperatures in New Orleans by 40 degrees in a matter of several hours. But the frigid conditions did not stop parades from rolling through the streets of the city, or the booze-soaked party that lasted all night in the French Quarter.

Thousands of college students trudged through the streets in shorts and T-shirts, swilling beer and screaming "Let's party!" or "Throw me something, mister!"

"I hear it's warmer in Vermont than it is here," said a student who refused to give his name. As he spoke, his friends guzzled beer and Hurricanes — a potent fruit punch and liquor drink famous in the French Quarter.

Other students ignored the booze and went for "laughing gas," sold in small containers for $2 by several merchants and packing a punch similar to nitrous oxide.

The last weekend of Carnival is the biggest of the three-week season, with parades rolling through New Orleans and the surrounding suburbs on an almost-constant basis. Nine parades — or "krewes" as they are known in the Crescent City — were scheduled to roll through the streets on Saturday, another 11 on Sunday.

Tourism officials said the spring break feeling of Carnival will give way over the weekend to an older, more sedate crowd that will jam the downtown area with an estimated 1 million people by Mardi Gras.

"This is a good year for hotels," said Mary Bishop, spokeswoman for the Royal Sonesta Hotel on Bourbon St. Tourism officials said the city's hotels were 95 percent full, pumping much-needed money into the city's near-dry coffers.

As Bishop spoke, workmen outside the hotel greased the poles that support the second-floor balconies so drunken revelers do not scale them. As the party builds in the French Quarter, people jam the balconies to throw beads and other trinkets to the masses below.

IN BRIEF

HOCKEY

Nordiques end slide at home

QUEBEC — Four unanswered second-period goals and a dose of psychology by Coach Jean Perron helped the Quebec Nordiques end their recent ineffective play at home.

Rookie Joe Sakic and defenseman Jeff Brown each collected a goal and an assist Saturday as the Nordiques, which had been outscored 11-1 in losing their last two home games, gained a 6-3 decision over the North Stars.

Perron started Mario Gosselin in goal for the first time since he allowed five goals in losing at Minnesota Jan. 26.

"When we lost in Minnesota, I blamed Mario Gosselin for not performing like a goaltender in the NHL should, but today the difference in the game was Gosselin," said Perron. "I've known Gosselin since my days with the Montreal Canadiens and I know that it takes a challenge for him to perform well."

TENNIS

Martina in finals of Pan Pacific

TOKYO — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova breezed through the semifinal and seventh-seeded Lori McNeil rebounded from a first-set loss Saturday to join her in the finals of the $300,000 Pan Pacific Open.

Navratilova, of Fort Worth, Texas, ousted eighth-seeded Mary Joe Fernandez of Miami, 6-2, 6-2. McNeil won a battle of Houstonians with a 5-7, 6-4, 6-4 victory over fifth-seeded Zina Garrison.

"I had a big advantage when I was at the net," Navratilova said. "On this court it's really hard to hit passing shots. I knew that I had an advantage because of the surface."

McNeil, who had the same coach as Garrison from 1975 until last year, said each player knew what to expect from the other.

"It's very seldom that you know your opponent well," McNeil said. "I thought that we both feel we know each other. I think that's why you see us play so tentatively sometimes."

BOWLING

Pederson captures Bud Classic

MIAMI — Randy Pedersen of Santa Maria, Calif., defeated Dave Ferraro of Kingston, N.Y., 225-209 in the title match of the Professional Bowlers Association $160,000 Budweiser Classic.

Pedersen, who won his fifth career PBA title three weeks ago in Torrance, Calif., earned $30,000 for the victory.

Pedersen, the No. 1 seed, led by 8 pins after 3 frames until Ferraro left a 4-6-7 split in the fourth frame and failed to spare. Ferraro, a four-time PBA winner, could not recover from the open frame.

"The good Lord's looking down on me," Pedersen said. "I don't know what I did to deserve this."

Pedersen's earnings gave him a total of $62,840 and moved him past Del Ballard Jr. into first place on the PBA earnings list. Ballard has won $62,515.

SKIING

Storm snows in men's downhill

VAIL, Colo. — The premier event of the 1989 World Alpine Ski Championships, the men's downhill, was postponed two days Saturday by a major snowstorm that capped a week of misfortune for organizers.

Race officials rescheduled the downhill for Monday, when the women's slalom originally was set. The women's slalom was moved to Tuesday and the men's super giant slalom moved from Tuesday to Wednesday.

Despite the setback, organizing committee President Bob Knous tried to be optimistic.

"It's interesting to note that none of the downhills in the world championships have gone off on schedule since 1970," Knous said.

The good news is that there is plenty of snow in Vail.

Rollins beats the tar out of UCF Knights

Todd Murphy (No. 50) and his Rollins teammates made their first game in the Orlando Arena a memorable one, beating crosstown rival Pat Crocklin (No. 20) and the University of Central Florida Knights.

ORLANDO — Long before Rollins College registered a resounding 88-73 victory over Central Florida Saturday in the basketball christening of Orlando Arena, the Tars laid the foundation for a third consecutive win over their cross-town rivals.

It came far away from the glitter and glamor of one of basketball's most-celebrated facilities, far from the hot bright lights and the eye of television.

Only a few of the 6,801 who watched Saturday's shellacking were on hand Thursday morning when Coach Tom Klusman put his men's team through a practice that was unlike anything the Tars had experienced this season. Two hours and bucketfuls of sweat later, he had driven his point home.

If Rollins is to be successful for the remainder of the 1988-89 campaign, the Tars must play hard. Not for 30 minutes. Not for 35 minutes. Not for all 40 minutes.

Which is precisely what the Tars (10-10) did against the Knights (5-14), who had won four of five games entering Saturday's showdown.

"I told the kids before the game to take it to them," said Klusman, whose team outrebounded the taller Knights, 34-30. "I told them that if (Stanford's All-American candidate Todd) Licht could take it to (Dwayne) Schintzius like he did with Schintzius being one of the best big men in the country, then we could take it to UCF."

"Thursday, I tried to get their attention. I wanted them to understand what I want out of them. Still the mark of a good basketball team is to do what we did tonight consistently."

What pleased Klusman the most was not only the one-two inside punch of Sam Arterburn (28 points) and Cameron Forbes (18) but the way Rollins battled on the boards. Even if the Tars' rebounding margin was only four, Rollins always seemed to get a body on any Knight that ventured inside. And the Tars preserved the victory down the stretch with one of their best defensive efforts to date.

"I hope we don't have to have a flame put under us for us to play up to our potential," said Forbes, alluding to Thursday's backbreaking practice. "But we brought that practice on ourselves."

"I got a letter from my high school coach Friday reiterating the same thing coach (Klusman) told us Thursday. It's necessary for us to play hard. We may not have as much talent as everybody we play, but we do have the heart to play all out all game."

Forbes and Arterburn teamed together to transform a 15-8 deficit into a 47-41 halftime lead. Arterburn, 10-of-15 from the floor for the game, hit 6-of-7 in the first 20 minutes. Forbes, 5-of-5 for the game, hit his first three shots from the floor.

It was Forbes' free throw late in the first half that overtook the Knights.

Trailing 38-33 with 4:23 left in the half, Rollins got 5-of-6 free throws from Forbes in the next two minutes to leave the score tied, 38-38. Forbes' ensuing jumper from short range gave the Tars their first lead since Dan Wolf (17 points) hit a three-pointer to put Rollins ahead, 22-21.

Rohr hands Rams a win

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

LAKE MARY — With all her offensive accolades, the one-play Donna Rohr will be most remembered for was her defensive play with 11:06 to play in the district finals against Lake Howell Friday night before 501 fans at Lake Mary High School.

Lake Mary improved to 22-2-2 and won its first ever district title in the program's history. The Lady Silver Hawks, who played brilliantly in the final, completed their season with a 16-7-2 mark.

Rohr, who has compiled over 70 goals in her career, came up the biggest play of her career when she grabbed hold of a ball that was heading for an open net. At first the shot was thought to be a goal, but the line judge over-ruled that the ball did not cross the plane of the goal and that there was to be a penalty kick.

Lake Howell keeper Heather Brann then came up for the PK attempt. Brann, though, hit under the ball and sent the shot over the net and Lake Mary held on to its 2-1 lead.

"We've been coached to save the ball," Rohr said.

The worse that can happen is the other team gets a penalty kick. And fortunately they (Lake Howell) missed on the PK. Lake Howell played tough, they definitely deserved to be here.

The Lady Silver Hawks outshot the Lady Rams 17-7 and had a number of opportunities to score in the second half but could not get any strength behind their shots and keeper Tammy Scott came up with 10 saves.

All the scoring came in the opening half as Lake Howell struck first. The Lady Silver Hawks had pressured Lake Mary from the outset before Lori Campbell took a pass from Dawn Lowe, who had had a run down the right side before sending a cross pass to the middle of the box, and sent a hip shot over a diving Scott to register the game's first goal and give Lake Howell a 1-0 lead with 27:24 to play in the opening half.

Then Lake Mary's tandem of Dana Hoover and Crissie Snow teamed up for a pair of net goals to lead the way to victory. Hoover and Snow played an excellent game up front for the Lady Rams and provided the margin of victory.

Lake Mary's Crissie Snow (No. 13) gave the Lake Howell Lady Silver Hawks fits on Friday night, assisting on both of the Lady Rams' goals in their 2-1 win to claim the 4A District 3 title.

Hornets, Geltz set marks

By TONY DeSORMIER

ORLANDO — With the introduction of a Class AA girls soccer, the opportunity is now there for 16 more, smaller schools to earn district titles that might have otherwise been lost among the state's larger schools.

On Friday night, the Bishop Moore Lady Hornets made the most of that opportunity and claimed their first ever district title in girls soccer with a 5-0 win over Utrillo.

The Lady Hornets now advance to the 3A Region III title game against Tampa Berkley Prep, 4-1 winners over Tampa Prep on Friday. Bishop Moore will have the option of hosting the game on Tuesday night and will almost definitely choose to do so.

"I'm happy I can be here at Bishop Moore when they won their first district title," said

Lake Mary frosh finish perfect season

From staff reports

DELTONA — The frosh is so far, they're especially impressive.

But somehow the Lake Mary High School freshman boys basketball team had managed that very thing, and finishing their 1988-89 campaign with a 14-1 record. And they did so Friday to complete an unblemished District 10 season.

"We have a couple of players that have some natural ability, but they hadn't played any organized ball," explained Lake Mary coach Bill Whaylen. "In the process, we spent most the time with them on fundamentals and pressing on defense."

Whaylen only has to dig out in Shaugh Weathers' shooting instincts with any real size. Whaylen's coaching staff is doing a terrific job.

On Friday night at Deltona, Washington was the only team that could get to the 15-14 mark. But Mike Brantley added 14 points, including three-point goals to the cause.

It was the dunk by Lake Mary's win over Deltona and their successful year is the Rams' depth and what it allows Whaylen to do.

"We can get nine players into the game on a regular basis," he said. "We have a lot of depth and we've got a lot of games down. The kids really picked up the game late. That helped out."

On Friday, Lake Mary was ahead by just five points at halftime, 27-22. In the second half, the Rams' surge of 17 points started to pay. The Rams, who outscored the host Wolves 14-25.

LAKE MARY (14-1) defeated the host at Washington, 44-25. Bishop Moore (14-1) defeated Tampa Berkley Prep (1) 41-15. Bishop Moore (14-1) defeated Tampa Berkley Prep (1) 41-15.

DELTONA (15-1) defeated Bishop Moore (14-1) 22-17.

Halftime: Lake Mary 21, Deltona 22. Three-point goals: Lake Mary 2, Bishop Moore 1, Tampa Berkley Prep 2, Bishop Moore 1, Deltona 1. Free-throw: Lake Mary 10/13, Bishop Moore 10/13, Tampa Berkley Prep 10/13, Deltona 10/13.

LAKE MARY (14-1) defeated the host at Washington, 44-25.

Seminole stays undefeated in SAC

Lady 'Noles get ready with romp

LONGWOOD — With a killer week ahead of them and the districts coming up after that, the Fighting Lady Seminoles of Seminole High School got themselves into the right frame of mind with a 79-25 win over the rebuilding Lyman Lady Greyhounds.

Once again, Sheri Reddicks led the Lady 'Noles, scoring a game-high 17 points and pulling in eight rebounds.

Seminole also received strong efforts from Aretha Riggins (11 points), Adrian Hillsman (10 points, seven assists and eight steals), Liz Long (10 points, nine rebounds and six blocked shots) and Yolanda Baker (10 points).

"The girls played extremely well and played under control," said Seminole coach John McNamara. "With a score like this, you usually see a lot of individual play. But they worked the ball around and did some good things. I admire them for that."

"Lyman's just going through one of those years. They're rebuilding. Most coaches have been through those."

The Lady 'Noles blew the doors of Lyman right away, taking a 27-2 lead after the first quarter. By halftime, the bulge reached 32 points as Seminole had a 42-10 lead into the intermission.

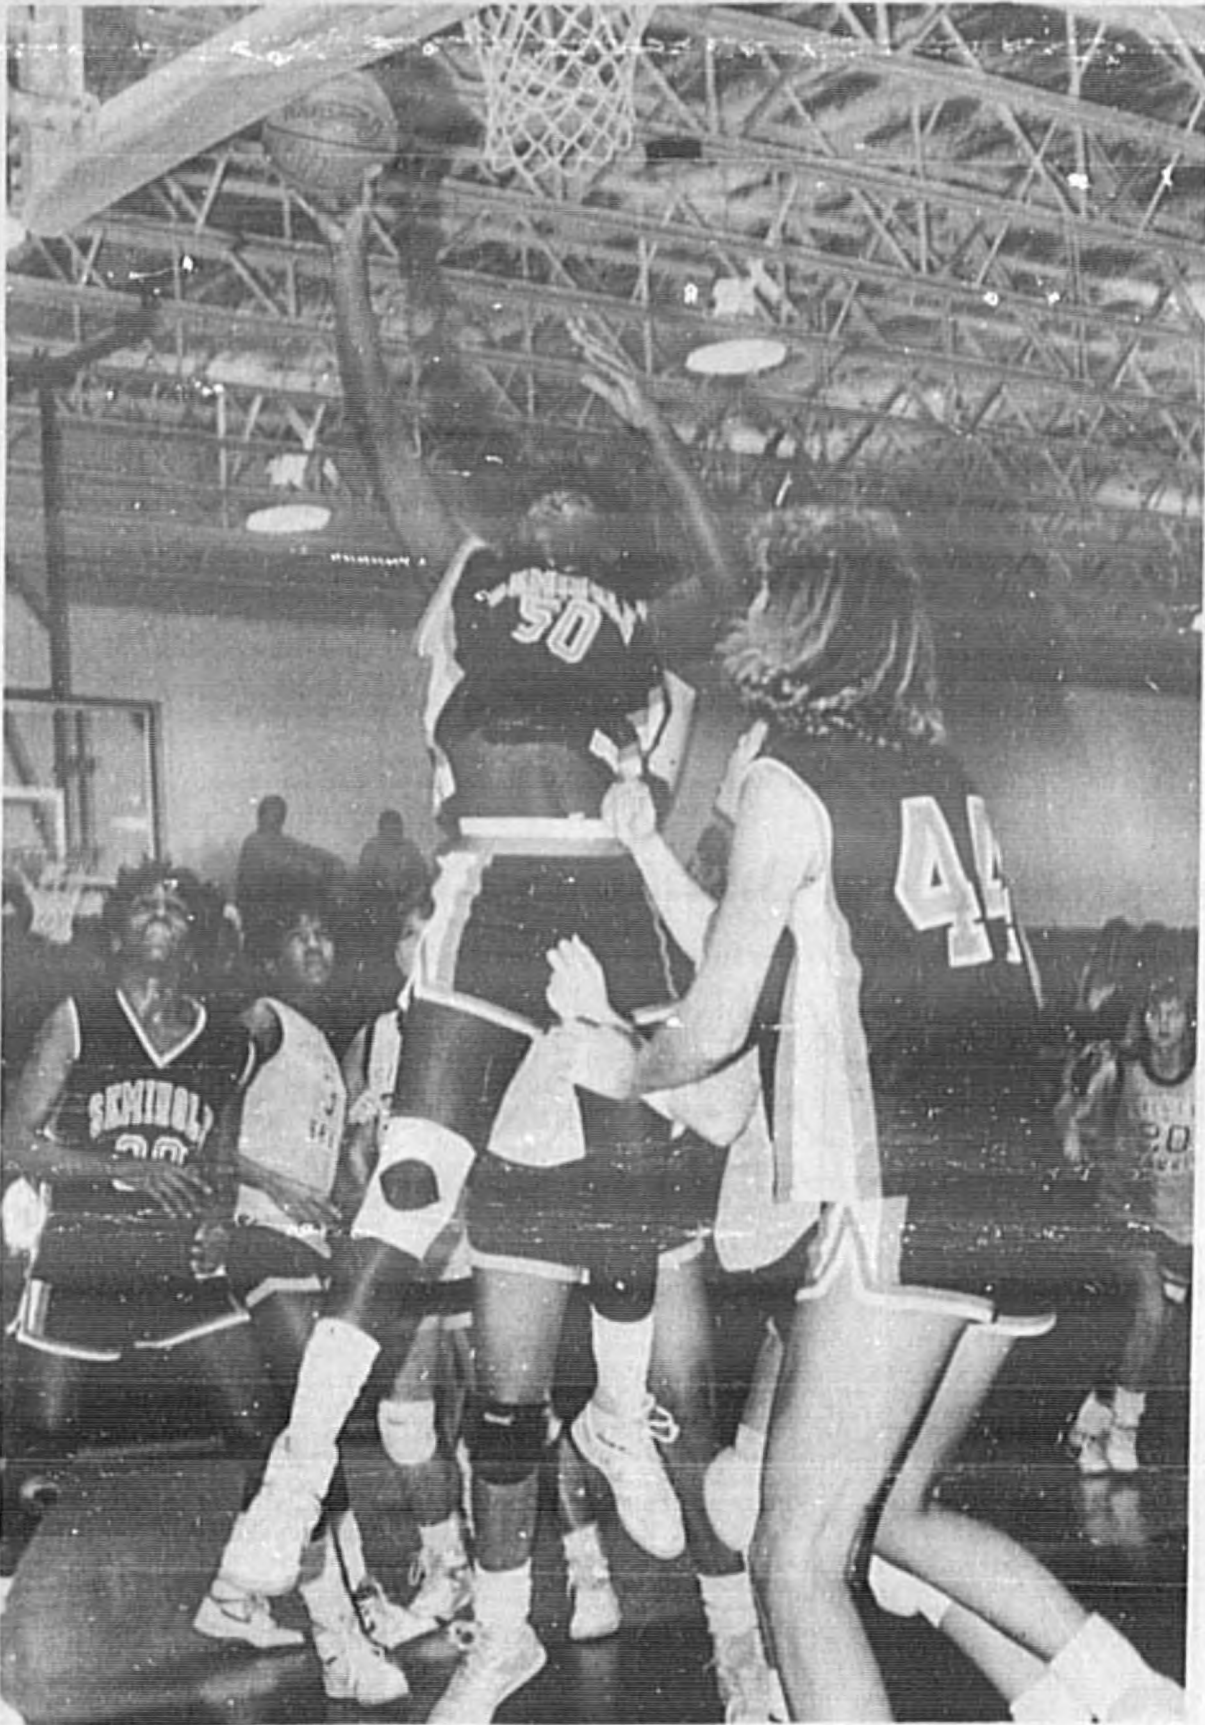

With this one out of the way, McNamara and his band are looking ahead to a week that will feature three games on the road against strong opponents.

"We've got three tough ones coming up," said McNamara. "We play Maitland, Oviedo and Lake Mary, all away. It's a good week right before the tournament. It'll get us ready for districts."

keeps on dominating play. Against Lyman on Friday night, she scored a game-high 17 points and pulled in eight rebounds.

Tribe keeps rolling with win over Lyman

From Staff Reports

Von Eric Small and Robert Moore controlled the inside play and kept Seminole unbeaten in Seminole Athletic Conference with a 73-65 victory over Lyman Friday night at Lyman High School.

The Tribe improved to 14-8, 9-0 in the SAC, and will return to action at home against Oviedo. Lyman dropped to 11-9 overall and 6-3 in the conference.

"We started slow but played real well in the second and third quarters," Seminole coach Greg Robinson said. "We did a good job of getting on the boards and managed to get a big lead late in the game, then we didn't do a good job of taking care of the ball."

Small led Seminole with a game-high 21 points and nine rebounds, Moore added 20 points with a game-high 15 board as Bernard Eady netted 16 points, handed out six assists and came up with four steals. James Flint led Lyman with 19 points as J.J. Miller contributed 13, Mike Whittington 11 and Mike Harden eight.

The Tribe, powered by the play of Small and Moore, built a 35-27 halftime lead and expanded the lead to 54-42, at the end of three quarters. Seminole led by as much as 14 before several turnovers brought the Greyhounds within striking distance.

"They (Lyman) cut the lead to six points with two minutes to play," Robinson said. "We then went to (Bernard) Eady who scored on a layup and picked up an assist to put us back up by 10."

67-55 Friday night in Seminole Athletic Conference action at Lake Mary High School.

The Rams improved to 10-9 overall and will return to action next Friday at Seminole in a big SAC matchup. Oviedo dropped to action Monday at home against Seminole.

"We've had to use our bench quite a bit in our last two games and the kids who haven't been getting much time have really been performing well," Lake Mary coach Willie Richardson said. "We're still in a transition period but it looks like we're going through it smoothly."

Bernard Mitchell led Lake Mary with 21 points, four assists and four rebounds with Jalmon Perry adding 10 points and eight boards.

Despite record, Hawk wrestlers ready to make their move

From staff reports

CASSELBERRY — Despite coming into their Saturday match with a 2-13 record, the Lake Howell Silver Hawk wrestling team has been on something of a roll.

That roll continued on Saturday as the Silver Hawks scored a 56-12 decision over the DeLand Bulldogs, raising their record to 3-13.

"Lately, we've been coming up with a full squad, so we're doing much better," said Lake Howell coach Jeff Sirota. "We're not giving up as many forfeits. And the kids are starting to listen to us and learn."

Saturday's dual meet was a quicky as seven of the 14 matches featured forfeits (two were double forfeits) and six were won by pins in the first or second period.

John White, the Silver Hawks' star at 103, got things moving in the right direction for Lake Howell as he pinned Keith Wittorf in just 58 seconds.

Two of the next four matches went to Lake Howell on forfeits, the other two being won by Mike Coffin (pinning Wes Clark in 1:59 at 119 pounds) and Kevin Garrett (sticking Trevor Brant in 1:41 at 130 pounds).

"We feel that John White is one of the best in the state," said Sirota. "He should be the state champion at that weight."

We'll soon find out as the district tournament, the first step on the road to the state championship meet, is next weekend. Again, despite the subpar record, Sirota is confident his team will do well.

"The kids are going to do well," he said. "We've been working on developing a tournament team. And we try not to emphasize on winning or losing. We tell the kids that the important thing is to try the best and enjoy it."

Lake Brantley 45 Deltona 30

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Powered by first-period pins by the Meredith brothers, Scott and Brian, the Lake Brantley Patriot wrestling team scored a 45-30 win over Deltona in a dual meet Friday night.

With the scored tied 10-10 after the first four matches, Scott started the Patriots on a run by pinning Chris Folsom in 64 seconds at 130 pounds. It took Brian an extra 46 seconds, but he pinned Matt Hodge in 1:50 at 140 pounds.

When Greg Syka followed suit with a pin in 86 seconds of Deltona's Kevin Post, Lake Brantley was firmly in control of the match and went on to raise its dual meet record to 9-6.

"That's been the strength in our lineup all year," said Kevin Carpenger, the Lake Brantley coach. "We're inexperienced in the upper weights. Our middle weights really came through for us tonight."

According to Carpenger, the Patriots made a switch in their lineup just before the match started, moving Brian Meredith to 135 pounds and letting Wyka wrestle at 140.

"We thought it prudent to have Syka wrestle a physically stronger opponent in Post at 140," Carpenger explained. "As it turned out, it worked out for us with Brian getting a pin at 135."

Seminole 64 Edgewater 15

It's not often that a wrestling team has a dual meet clinched after the first match, but on Friday night at Seminole High School, the Fighting Seminoles had that very luxury.

With visiting Edgewater having to forfeit seven matches, all Seminole had to do was win one of the remaining seven matches to win the meet.

Dan Misuraca ended the suspense early when he scored a pin in 43 seconds of his Edgewater opponent at 103 pounds.

"We only wrestled two varsity wrestlers, Troy Rollins and Julius Bennett," said Seminole coach Glenn Matolini. "We were going to wrestle our junior varsity against them."

"They were missing three out of their lineup. They usually don't forfeit that many."

Rollins upped his record to 19-1 with a win by disqualification at 171 pounds. Bennett improved to 18-2 after moving up a weight class to meet and beat by major decision Edgewater's best wrestler.

With the win, Seminole improved its record to 10-4, the third time the 'Noles have won 10 or more matches in a season. Edgewater is now 2-12.

Showdown

Edsel Bester (team-high 16 points) nailed a three-point shot to give UCF its last lead, 42-41. Wolf's ensuing three pointer and Forbes' two free throws secured Rollins' six-point halftime advantage.

Arterburn, a transfer from the University of Tennessee, took matters into his own hands after intermission, turning a 50-45 lead into a 58-46 cushion with a multitude of offensive moves that turned plenty of heads.

"Cameron and I have been working on our inside moves," said Arterburn, whose experience at Tennessee's large arena undoubtedly helped Saturday. "We've worked hard and usually make good connections on our passes. We definitely got them in foul trouble by taking it to them."

The Tara's lead swelled to 65-49 with 11:29 remaining, but Rollins experienced several successive turnovers. The Knights were unable to capitalize, getting as close as 10 points twice before Rollins raced away down the stretch.

Only one person in sports history has been elected to both the pro football Hall of Fame AND the big league baseball Hall of Fame. The only person ever to get both those honors is Cal Hubbard. Hubbard was voted into pro football's Hall of Fame in 1963. He was one of the great linemen in National Football League history. Then he was a long-time umpire in big league baseball and was voted into baseball's Hall of Fame in 1976.
Did you know that NO team has won the Super Bowl 2 straight years since 1967. The last team to win the Super Bowl 2 straight years was the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1978 and 1980.
Here's an unbelievable fact: In a National Football League game between Detroit and Chicago in 1943, Detroit had MINUS 53 yards rushing for the day yet won the game 7-0. That's hard to believe but it's true.

Lady Rams

It didn't take long for the two to even the score as Snow took a pass from Amy Alexander and worked the ball down the right side of the field. Hoover then broke down the center of the field and Snow sent in a nice pass from the wing. Hoover then ripped a shot by Brann and evened things up at 1-1 with 23:34 remaining in the half.

"I just took the ball down the line and then saw Dana (Hoover) in the middle," Snow said. "I crossed the ball over and knew she had a good chance for a goal."

The game then became even as the play revolved around midfield. Lake Howell had two strong opportunities to put the ball in the net with Towle managing to get a breakaway that Scott made a finger tip save on with 12:40 to play.

The Lady Silver Hawks then sent three shot on goal but could not find the net on any their chances and Lake Mary held on to a tie.

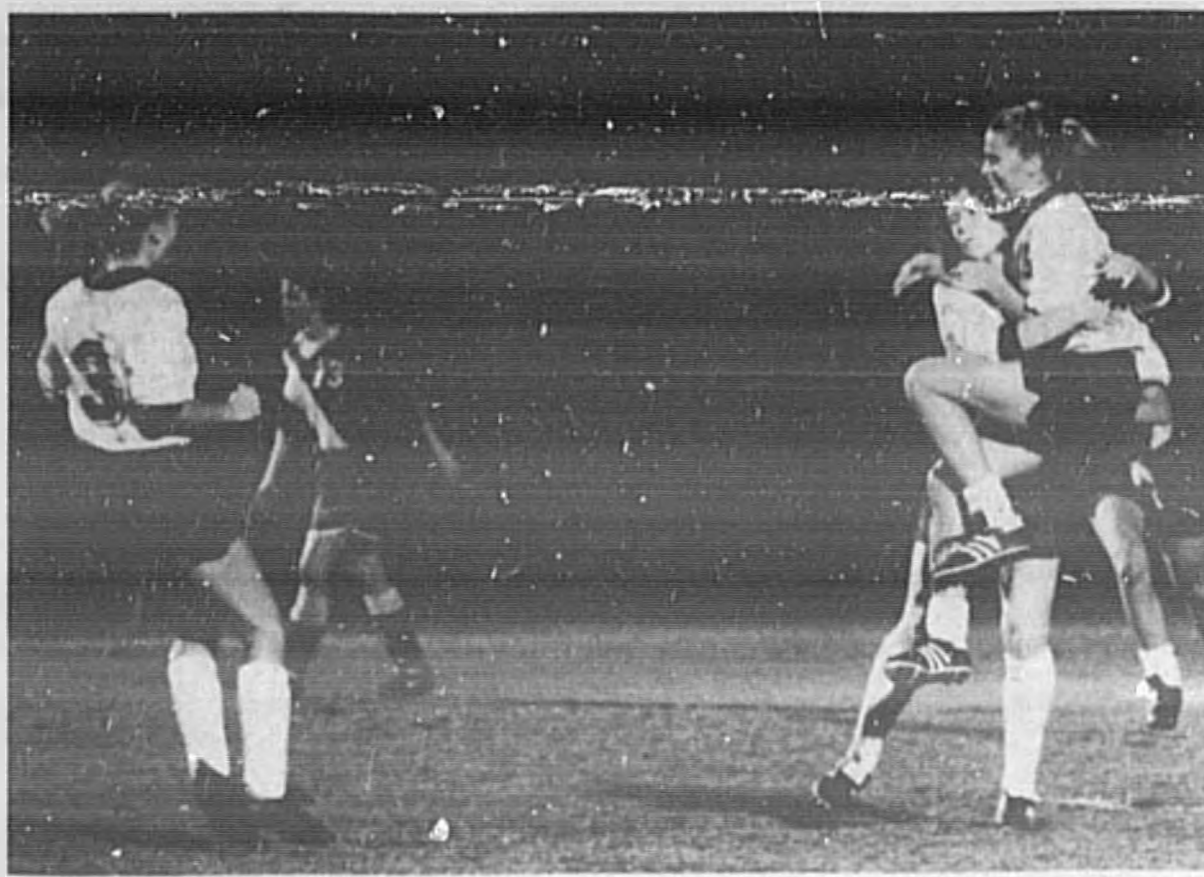

The deciding goal then came with just 10 seconds to play in the half. Snow won a ball from Dana Boyeson and made a run down the center of the field and worked the ball to the right of the box.

The Lake Howell defense shifted to stop Snow and she sent the ball to a wide open Hoover who sent the shot in to give the Lady Rams a 2-1 lead.

"We just kept trying and we earned this win," Hoover said. "We kept hustling and came up with the win. We really wanted it tonight."

Lake Mary will now face Winter Park on Tuesday at home in the Regional confrontation. Winter Park was a 12-0 victor over Boone in its district final Friday night.

Dana Hoover (No. 16, right) celebrates after scoring one of her two goals in Lake Mary's 2-1 win over Lake Howell in the finals of the 4A-District 3 tournament on Friday night.

After missing 10 games at the beginning of the season with a deep thigh pull, Kristen Adamkewich (No. 11) has returned to Bishop Moore's starting lineup and played a key role in their 5-0 win over Oviedo in the finals of the 3A-District 5 tournament Friday night.

Bishop Moore

Larry Betsinger, coach of the Lady Hornets.

Actually, it wasn't that difficult to do as Bishop Moore, the No. 2-ranked team in the final 3A state polls, was clearly the class of the district. The 5-0 score against Oviedo, for example, is misleading because it could have easily been twice that.

As always, Amy Geltz was the focus of the Bishop Moore attack despite being slowed by a bruise on one of her big toes. It took just 5:55 for Geltz to put Bishop Moore on the board as she converted a beautiful cross by Stephanie Gringer.

That goal was Geltz's 47th of the year, tying the record set by Lake Mary's Donna Rohr last season. The tie lasted all of 15 minutes before Geltz added to her mark, scoring on a 35-yard free kick that faded just inside of the left goal post.

Goal No. 49 came at the 37:26 mark of the first half when Karen Butz played a nice diagonal ball over the Oviedo defense to Geltz, who quickly turned and beat Lady Lion goalie Michelle Freeman for the hat trick.

In between those goals, both Geltz and her sister Jill had shots hit the post and bounce away.

Bishop Moore's final two goals came in the second half, Nikki Souza ripping a 30-yard shot past Freeman at 45:16 and Stephanie Feulner turning a through ball from Amy Geltz into a goal at 62:45.

At 52:29, Gringer had a goal called back for offside.

"We played a bad first half and a good second half," assessed Oviedo coach Gene Lescallette.

According to Betsinger, the effort wasn't his team's best, but it'd do in a pinch.

"We were a little lackluster when we came out early," he said. "You could see that both teams were very jittery. One thing that's troubled us all year is playing games on back-to-back days."

"Things started to pick up when we scored the first goal. We played well up through the first 20 minutes of the second half, when I put my substitutes in. And I was glad to see them play well."

This is the third time Oviedo has lost to Bishop Moore this season, but Betsinger said the Lady Lions played their best match against the Lady Hornets on Friday night.

"Oviedo's backs and midfielders played a pretty good match for the first 15, 20 minutes," Betsinger said. "They are greatly improved since the last time we played them."

"Their goalkeeper (Freeman, who was replaced by Jennifer Whitaker after injuring a finger) has come a long way. She made some good moves and some good saves."

Barnes lifts SCC past Vikings

From staff reports

Terrell Barnes sank a pair of free throws with three seconds left on the clock to boost the Seminole Community College Raiders to a 74-72 Mid-Florida Conference victory over St. John's River Community College Vikings before 201 fans at the SCC Health and Physical Education center.

St. John's Dennis Hanna had a 55-foot attempt at the buzzer to win the game, but it hit the rim and bounced away.

The Raiders improve to 19-8 with the win, 7-3 in the conference. St. John's River is now 9-14, 3-7.

With the score tied 39-39 at the half, St. John's came out strong in the second half. Seminole managed to build a six-point lead — the largest of the game by either team — with 11 minutes left, but the Vikings outscored the Raiders 19-13 over the next seven minutes.

At the 4:06 mark, Melvin Smith threw in a three-point shot to put St. John's River ahead 66-64. The teams traded baskets over the next three minutes until Barnes tied the score for the fifth time with a basket at 1:11.

After the Raiders' Terry Acox missed the front end of a one-and-one with 52 seconds left, the Vikings tried to hold the ball for the last shot. Then, with 10 seconds left, William "Wimpy"

Woods stole the ball from Hanna and passed it to Barnes, who was fouled.

Barnes and Hanna both finished with 20 points, the game high.

Vincent Emerson scored 14 points for Seminole on 7-for-11 shooting. He also had three rebounds and three assists. Woods finished with nine points, 11 assists and five steals.

Nick Milidakis came off the bench for the Raiders to score seven points including a three-point goal at the buzzer to lift Seminole to a 39-39 tie at the end of the first half.

Seminole next plays the Lake City Community College Timberwolves on Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Health and Physical Education Center on the SCC campus.

No. 18 Stanford beats Gators

By JIM RICKENBACKER
Herald correspondent

ORLANDO — Florida's Dwayne Schintzius spent some of this past summer at the Olympic Trials getting acquainted with Stanford seniors' Todd Lichti and Howard Wright. That was quite different from what he and the Gators (11-10) experienced in their 84-69 loss to the Cardinals (16-5) at Orlando Arena Saturday afternoon.

Lichti demonstrated to a state-record crowd 14,684 why he is Stanford's career scoring leader and holder of seven additional school records, totaling 18 of his game-high 27 points in the first half. Wright, meanwhile, racked up 12 of his 17 points after intermission, almost single-handedly dashing any Gator comeback hopes along with Terry Taylor (13 second-half points).

Schintzius and Livingston Chatman totaled 27 points between them but ran out of steam in the second half. The Cardinals also connected on 15 more free throws than the Gators, who meet Ole Miss in Gainesville this afternoon in a crucial SEC encounter.

Will subject of race hinder White's work?

United Press International

NEW YORK — Bill White faces various challenges in his new job as National League president and, despite what the baseball hierarchy says, not all of them can be separated from the issue of race.

As the first black to head a major pro sports league in America, White must not only learn his assignment but also avoid being saddled with every issue dealing with minorities.

"That's always a danger," said Dr. Harry Edwards, head of minority affairs for the commissioner's office.

Edwards describes a syndrome in which, for example, a black professor is assigned to deal with minority affairs on campus. Edwards ridicules this post as "head Negro in charge of Negro affairs."

Even at the news conference where he was introduced, White was already facing such pressure. A member of a philanthropic group trying to stage an All-Star game in honor of Jackie Robinson asked White if, as a black man, he would be more inclined to support such a contest.

White no doubt would prefer executing the same duties as the previous 12 NL presidents. They report to the commissioner and oversee umpires, rules interpretations and discipline.

"I do not have any specific goal except to do the best job I can," White said. "I think I know how players look at the game. I think I bring a love of the game and I hope I bring more harmony to the game."

Baseball officials have denied White's race affected his selection, even though the industry is trying to improve its record on equal opportunity. White himself has tried to minimize the issue of race, saying, "We should be judged on how well we do the job."

White, 55, will replace A. Bartlett Giamatti, who is succeeding Peter Ueberroth April 1 as baseball commissioner. White, unanimously approved by league owners, was hired for four years.

Circumstances may help White avoiding the syndrome Edwards describes. A field incident involving an umpire could let him define his administration, just as Pete Rose's clash with umpire Dave Pallone allowed Giamatti to gain a reputation as a law and order executive.

Giamatti suspended the Cincinnati manager for 30 days for twice bumping Pallone. No one could mistake Giamatti's toughness if he dealt so harshly with a man who had more hits than Ty Cobb.

White lacks administrative experience but his baseball career helps balance a criticism made of Giamatti, namely, that he is an ivory tower academic with little practical knowledge of the game.

White said he has made harmony a priority for his term, and he may soon learn what a difficult goal he has set. Baseball has experienced player strikes in 1981 and 1985, and another may be brewing for 1990. This issue probably belongs on Giamatti's new desk, although then-American League President Lee MacPhail figured prominently in the settlement of the 1981 strike.

White acknowledged the complexity of certain relationships in baseball, but urged the parties to enjoy themselves.

ORGANIZATION

Kiwanis found Builders Club

LONGWOOD — A newly chartered Kiwanis International-sponsored youth organization, the Builders Club, was begun Jan. 27 at Pace School in Longwood.

Sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Casselberry, the club was organized to give Pace students an opportunity to work together in service to their school and community.

Brett Baker was elected president for the school year. Other officers are Bridey Sudakts, vice president; Stacy Angellillo, treasurer; and Kevin News, secretary.

A steady hand, a dying breed

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald correspondent

LONGWOOD — George Valdich's hands are steady as a rock despite his 80 years. His fingertips, yellowed a bit from years of cigarette smoking, handle the tools of his trade with confidence and artistic flair.

Valdich, a Sanford resident, is an engraver. In a profession that has been taken over by machines, Valdich's meticulous handwork stands out above the rest.

He took his first job as an engraver on June 21, 1920 at the Traub Brothers Jewelry Company in Detroit.

"When I came from Yugoslavia, I was 10 years old. They put me in the first grade. I felt like a great big jackass," he recalled of his impetus for learning a trade.

Dropped out of school, went to night school to learn English and then I was accepted into art school when I was 14.

He knew he had an aptitude for art, but had no specific plans for his professional future.

Upon graduation, he landed a job as a copy artist. He boasted that he could, and still can, reproduce any design or illustration put in front of him. For a few years he was satisfied with his employment, but he wanted more of a challenge.

A representative of Traub Brothers saw his work and was impressed. Valdich was offered an apprenticeship.

For 10 years he applied himself to learning the fine details of the engraving trade. His ability to reproduce artwork was a valuable asset, but using the engraver's tools added a new dimension to his skills that took years to perfect.

"Once I learned to use the tools, I could reproduce things on metal as well as I had on paper," he said.

Valdich worked with Traub for a quarter century before they went out of business. It was then he thought he would give the business world a shot on his own.

"I was well known in Detroit," he said. "I was considered one of the best in the state."

He had, as a result, no trouble in finding work. His clientele included the likes of Henry Ford. When Ford's son Benson married Edith McNaughton of Grosse Pointe, Valdich was called upon to engrave the gifts for the wedding party and various items for the bride and groom.

And no one retires from Ford Motor Company without a platter engraved by George," commented Valdich's current employer, Hector Rivera of the Jeweler's Workbench in Longwood.

One of Valdich's current projects is a such a platter, which includes, in addition to the retiree's name and years of employment, exact duplicates of the signatures of 54 of the top brass at Ford.

Valdich said that his ability to reproduce signatures is so precise that the FBI keeps careful tabs on him.

"Maybe you shouldn't put my picture in the paper," he joked.

A half decade ago, Valdich suffered a stroke that forced him into a temporary retirement. He has recovered completely except for a slight hearing loss.

Valdich was never tempted to learn the mechanical advances in his trade over the years. He has always been convinced that the hand-wrought craft will always be superior.

Arlene Boyd, administrator of Bram Towers, pins a corsage on Bertha Brown at a birthday party in her honor Wednesday.

100th birthday is big deal to all but her

By BRIAN HEDBERG
Herald People editor

SANFORD — Still sharp as a tack, is how most anyone who knows Bertha Brown will describe her. And they'll say how thrilling it is that she's turned 100.

Thrilling for everyone except Brown, that is.

Brown, a resident of Bram Towers in Sanford, was asked if she was excited about an impending birthday party Wednesday afternoon.

"Nothing excites me anymore," Brown said frankly. "The main thing that would excite me is to be out on a farm with a horse."

A charming and good-humored woman, Brown has the misfortune of having crowds. To her disdain, nieces, nephews, grandchildren, great grandchildren, great-great grandchildren and others turned out in droves for a birthday party thrown for her late 28th birthday day of birth.

"I didn't ask any questions. I just let them have a good time," she said.

But did she party?

Party? "You just don't know."

More than 200 people showed up at that party in costume, preparing for another party at Bram Towers on Wednesday.

If I went through that Saturday, I can go through anything," Brown said.

Born on Jan. 28, 1889, in Osborn, Brown was the daughter of Bulah and Zenobia Brooks.

At that time, Osborn was called Saulsville, named after Brown's grandparents, George and Adeline Sauls, who were two of the first five Eva Matheny's Pekingese suffers no lack of self-esteem.

Due to being bred as the pampered pillowed pets of Oriental dynasties, Pekingese have a "what can the world do for me" attitude. They'll take on anything on four legs," said Matheny of Casselberry.

Her Pekingese once bit her husband's Doberman on the ear, sending him away yelping.

Matheny's uncle once brought a horse into a yard that a Pekingese considered its turf. The feisty canine drove the horse out.

Barbara Weaver of Winter Park used to take her West Highland white terrier, Paisley, to a local home for the retarded as a therapy outreach. On one occasion Weaver said a mean-spirited girl who was kissing and hugging Paisley suddenly put the dog's paw in her mouth and bit down hard.

Poor Paisley. She was so good. She let out a pathetic cry, Weaver said. But there was no aggression. Things like this will happen. That's why they're selected in the outreach program.

Weaver now takes Paisley to an adult day care center.

Both women adore purebreds, and both are members of the Seminole Dog Fanciers Association, the first and only organized dog club in Seminole County.

Many believe that purebreds are more temperamental, less friendly and less qualified to be a good pet than mutts. All such is untrue," said Matheny, who defends the pure strains.

Too many of these mixed breeds are wandering around on the streets getting hit by cars and leaving puppies like crazy that have no place to live," Matheny said. "Very rarely will you find a purebred being put to sleep in a shelter."

The organization was organized in 1970 to accommodate dog owners, breeders and exhibitors, who were finding it impossible to attend other clubs not within easy commuting distance of Sanford. Today SDFA has 118 members and promotes purebreds through exhibitions, classes and meetings.

The Dog Fanciers will present a purebred exhibition at Flea World in Sanford on Sunday, Feb. 12, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Some 50 breeds are to be represented. Obedience demonstrations will be given, and owners will be on hand to answer questions about the breeds, exercise, grooming and training.

Training classes, all held at Secret Lake Park in Casselberry, are as follows: puppy training classes at 7 p.m. Tuesdays; conformation classes for potential showdogs at 8 p.m. Tuesdays; basic obedience classes at 7 p.m. Thursdays; and advanced obedience classes at 8 p.m. Thursdays. Non-members must pay a small fee.

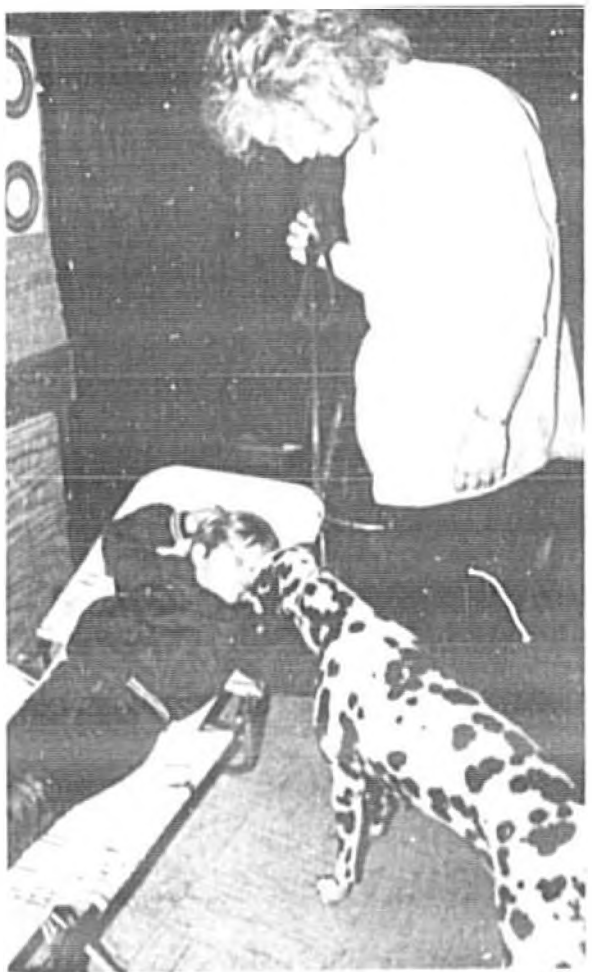

"We teach the dogs how to heel properly in a crowd of people," Weaver said. "They learn how to sit and stay on command. They learn to call when you call the dog and the dog comes and sits at your feet."

In the advanced obedience classes, dogs go over jumps and retrieve wooden dumbbells. More advanced lessons include training sense discrimination, so dogs recognize their owner's scent and commands by hand signals.

The club hopes to have its first Central Florida dog show in the fall, having been cleared to do so by the American Kennel Club through a series of preliminary matches.

Regular membership is offered for those 18 years and older with dues of $10 per year. Junior members are 10-17 years old and are given a free membership for participating in activities. Honorary members are made of those who serve the club in a meritorious way. Family memberships are $15 per year.

Jewish Community elects officers

The Sanford Jewish Community, founded in 1928, held its annual business meeting Jan. 23. New officers elected are: Betty Tollesrud, president; Dick Tollesrud, vice president; Millie Levenson, secretary; Melvin Siskind, treasurer; and Dr. Edwin Epstein, parliamentarian.

The main order of business was deciding how to disburse more than $1,000 to charities. Among the recipients of the funds are Good Samaritan Home, Jewish Family Services and Children's Wish Foundation.

Betty Tollesrud said the group plans an inter-faith tea in late May when representatives of local churches will be invited to gather. She also said the group is "constantly striving to find new Jewish families to the area."

families settling there. Brown said her grandfather Sauls also was one of the first contributors to Stetson University.

Her father was a county commissioner in Volusia. This dictated that he climb into the horse-and-buggy once a month and ride to the commission meetings in DeLand. Her father also had served in a Civil War cavalry at age 18, but hadn't been in combat.

Her father had an orange grove, and Mom had cattle.

The youngest of five brothers and three sisters, Brown had a normal, tree-climbing childhood, she said. The town's common social activity was church-going. Everyone in town went to both the Methodist church and Baptist church for all services.

Brown had to quit school in the eighth grade. She first explains her brief schooling with a joke: "We didn't graduate. We went till we got tired and quit." Then she tells the truth about the nearest high school being in DeLand: "It would have been a long trip to go to DeLand in a horse-and-buggy every day."

In 1911, on a trip to Brunswick, Ga., with a friend, she met Charles C. Brown while he was decorating a house.

"Our courtship was by Uncle Sam," Brown says, meaning she kept the postal service busy by their correspondence.

They married in 1913 and moved to Georgia for 40 years of marriage. She lived for a while in New Smyrna, then Osteen, and came to Sanford around 1974 to reside.

Out of Brown's matrimony came a son, Lyle. Through him, Brown has two grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

Brown has outlived her son, husband and siblings, but has had her share of health difficulties.

"We've been through the mountains and we've been through the valleys, but we've pulled through. The Lord has helped me through all these years."

The centenarian owes much to her extended family members, especially her niece Grace Gianeski of Tarpon Springs, who is her main aide.

"Now I only have my needs to depend on, and they're doing a bang-up job!" Brown said.

In her prime, Brown was some kind of galloping gourmet, she said. "I tell everybody that that's the best thing about me—my appetite."

Brown is quick to say what she does most. "Read, honey, read. And watch some TV. But my eyes are going out on me and I switch from one to another."

"I like to go to bed early and I like to get up early. I'm not one of those who stays up till 9 or 10 o'clock," Brown said.

She enjoys nearly every type of food. "Except seafood. And that's brain food—what I ought to eat."

Brown said she thoroughly enjoys living at Brown Towers. But a recent comment by another resident disturbed her.

"Someone said the other day they didn't like someone. I said, 'God loves everyone, regardless...'"

She said she prays for all those in the governmental hierarchy. "I pray that Mr. Bush will keep his promises," she smiles, a Democrat.

TV weatherman celebrity Willard Scott sent Brown a letter of congratulations for her 100th birthday. He would like her. He, too, is sharp as a tack.

Runners, masseurs became fast friends in charity race

A runner couldn't have asked for a nicer course on a nicer day than the Seminole Winter Classic Road Race, held on Saturday, Jan. 28. The lovely, newly opened shoppes at Heathrow and the surrounding area was the setting for the race.

Runners congregated from all parts of Orlando at 8 a.m. to participate in the 2-kilometer, 8-kilometer and kiddie runs organized by the Longwood Rotary Club.

"The weather was beautiful," commented Fred and Evelyn Jennings.

The Jennings each placed in their age category. Fred won first place in the 8k men's age 60-64 category. Evelyn took second place in the 8k women's age 60-64 group.

Coming from Windemere, the Jennings enjoyed the north side of town. They frequent the area for other runs. The couple also ran in the recent Sanford run.

"There was a lot of community involvement," Don Ardell remarked about the atmosphere of the race.

Ardell lives close to UCF, where he teaches and runs a wellness center. He placed first in his age category and enjoyed a massage after the run.

Marlo and Kristina Sillingauskas were two of many masseurs and masseuses rubbing tired legs and backs on cots set up in the parking lot. The Sillingauskas couple are studying massage and working towards their license. They were sure getting a good start on clientele after the race.

Greatly in need of a massage was the third-place overall winner, Chris Daniels. Daniel's roommate, Ed Juba, was the first-place overall winner. Juba had the fastest time for the 8k race.

"I knew I couldn't get first," said Daniels. "but, I was hoping for second. Anyway, I'm happy with third."

Fourth-place overall winner was David Smith. He and his wife, Dawn, ran in last year's Seminole Winter Classic which was held in Sabal Point in Longwood. The Smiths liked the new course this year.

"I liked the free food from Publix best," commented Chris Westervelt about the day's events (to his mother's embarrassment.)

Chris, age 17, is the oldest child in the Westervelt family of Lake Mary. The whole family participated in the races on Saturday. Floyd and Fran Westervelt were happy to have finished. Meaghan, age 9, and Justin, 11, had fun running in the kiddie race.

"It was the first time we all ran as a family," Floyd said. The family thought the spirit of the runners was impressive.

Another family running together was the Bristers from Winter Springs. Rusty, age 10, runs in track in his school and beat his mom's time for the race on Saturday. Joining Rusty in the kiddie run was his brother, Geoffrey, age 7. Their parents, George and Mary, feel it is important for a family to run.

The money raised by the Longwood Rotary Club will be donated to various charitable organizations.

Golfing for the dance

The Heathrow community has been active in fund-raisers this month. A fund-raising golf tournament was held at the Heathrow Country Club on Monday, Jan. 23.

The money raised will benefit the Southern Ballet Theatre's Apprentice Dancer Program. Ken and Beth Murray, residents of Heathrow, organized the event for the ballet. The Murrays are eager supporters of the Southern Ballet.

More than $3,000 was raised for the non-profit organization, with the tournament entrance donations at $125 each. Golfers enjoyed a lively sandwich spread for lunch. An awards ceremony with refreshments followed the tournament.

The first-place team was led by Ken Murray, R.R. Wesley captained the second-place team. Coming in third was Dr. James Baker's team.

This was the dance company's second fund-raiser, but its first golf tournament. According to Kip Watson, the director at the Southern Ballet Theatre, this was the first annual golf tournament. Because of the success of the event, another is planned for next year.

Rain can't spoil vacation

The Wells visited the Longwood home of Tim Sims, president of Regency Temporaries in Winter Park, from Jan. 20-26. Remember that it rained non-stop!

Sims was planning to take his high school buddies on his boat down the St. John's River. Instead, they ended up strolling around Church Street Station, along with everyone else in Central Florida!

The Wells are avid water-skiers and own their own boat in Indiana. They were looking forward to having the chance to ski in the middle of January.

Finally, on Wednesday, the weather seemed warm enough to attempt some water-skiing. The trio enjoyed an afternoon at Lake Brantley. Jeff Wells even braved the water without a wet suit.

Sue Wells's comment upon leaving was, "Longwood is a nice place to visit, but..." (we all know the rest of the sentence!)

A head for places

Congratulations to Christina Molltek, a fourth-grader at Woodlands Elementary, for being the winning finalist at her school for the National Geography Bee.

The final bee was held on Jan. 27. Twenty-two fourth- and fifth-graders scored high enough on a test in their homeroom to go on to the final bee.

The questions ranged from the relatively easy ("In which state do most Navajo people live?") to extremely difficult ("Madagascar is located in which body of water?") The latter question was one of the final questions that Christina answered correctly.

By the way, the answer to the first question is Arizona. The second answer is the Indian Ocean.

The next step for Christina is to take a written test at her school. Her test will be submitted to the state, where the top 100 scorers will go on to the state bee on April 7. Good luck, Christina!

Crime and fashion

Members of the Lake Mary Woman's Club now know the inside story on tipping police. Jim Bishop of the Orlando Police Department's Crime Line informed the club about the department's service to Central Florida at the club's meeting Jan. 26.

"He gave a very informative, interesting and amusing talk," said club member Marjorie Dale.

Dale said Bishop's Crime Line is on all three local television stations as well as a radio station. The volunteer service is supported by private contributions.

When someone has information about a crime featured on Crime Line, he can call the Orlando number, 423-8477, and tip police while remaining anonymous.

Dale learned that one can get up to $1,000 in reward money for aiding in apprehending criminals.

The Lake Mary Woman's Club is gearing up for "Swing into Spring... a fashion show/luncheon featuring New Trend Modeling Studio models.

Set for March 17 at the CIA Building, Country Club Road, Lake Mary, the show/luncheon is to begin at 11:30 a.m.

Tickets are $8.50, and proceeds will benefit the club's scholarship fund. The public is invited.

For tickets, call Marjorie Dale at 323-5042 or Frances Pratt at 322-3118.

Doctors are far from perfect

DEAR ABBY: I laughed when I read the letter from "Flabbergasted," the woman whose physician of many years didn't know that she wore dentures. It can happen. It happened to me when I was being examined by an Army doctor many years ago. He looked into my mouth and said, "My, your teeth are beautiful—not a filling or cavity!"

I said, "I hope not—they're false."

He looked into my mouth again and said, "You're right. They are."

ALSO FLABBERGASTED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ALSO: Read on for a letter that takes the platinum stethoscope.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter in regard to a physician's indifference?

For more than 20 years, I've had the same good doctor for my routine checkups, physicals, Pap smears and so forth. He is one of the best doctors in town and is on the staff at one of our leading hospitals.

After a pelvic examination this year, he asked, "Have you ever had a hysterectomy?" (I'm 56 years old.) I still can't get over it. Can't a doctor tell from the examination?

FLABBERGASTED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: I had to write and set you and "Flabbergasted" straight. "Flabbergasted" was upset because her doctor, who had been her doctor for years and had brought all her children into the world, didn't know that she wore dentures. You seemed equally shocked, Abby, saying that this information should be on the patient's chart.

Please! Most physicians see an average of 20 patients per day, or from 100 to 120 per week.

We must constantly cram new information into our heads and select the most important to remember. Please, don't reinforce the public's unrealistic expectations of us. We are only human.

Dear Abby: What a warm outpouring of love and support we experienced from Americans back home who shared the true meaning of the holiday season with all of us! So far (Dec. 20, 1988) we have received more than 60,000 Hanukkah and Christmas cards, letters and culinary delights. But we received much, much more—we received the love, warm thanks and appreciation of America. That outpouring of gratitude made each and every one of us here on the Constellation more committed to doing the jobs we do at sea and around the world—preserving the peace we cherish as Americans.

Students meeting students

By CAROL J. RUMSEY
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Student government leaders from high schools throughout the county met last week to exchange ideas on fundraising, student activities, and community service projects.

It is the first time such a meeting has occurred, but students say it won't be the last. Plans call for formation of an inter-county council to bring issues of student concern to the School Board and the public.

"This is just the beginning," Freddy Terral, Lake Mary student body vice president, said Wednesday. "We can build on the friendships we've made here, and we're committed to making our ideas work."

Terral's enthusiasm was shared by the approximately 60 students attending the three-hour workshop Wednesday at Lake Mary High. The idea originated in a Lake Mary leadership skills development class. Ten students meet daily for an hour and learn how to turn talk into action. It is the first year the course has been offered at Lake Mary, and instructor Desta Horner says it is making a world of difference.

"You can tell students how to do something, but there's nothing like doing it yourself," Horner said. "That's what the students are receiving, hands-on experience. They are given the opportunity to prepare agendas, plan projects, and in so doing we have a much more organized student government than in years past."

Students not only gain experience, they gain self-confidence.

"At first I was so shy," Neana Witt, Lake Mary senior, said. "But once I got involved and started working, I was fine. I went to leadership camp over the summer and that helped a lot too." She is now interested in a career in business management. Witt was encouraged by a teacher to join student government, others were dragged to meetings by friends or had older sisters and brothers to encourage them. All say it has made their years in high school much more enjoyable. It allows them to meet more people, and feel an active participant in their education.

and not a popularity contest. Involving the entire student population in school events seems to be the most difficult task. They were eager to hear how other school governments handled the problem of sagging school spirit. How they managed pep rallies, homecoming and school dances.

After breaking into small groups to scribble down ideas, they gathered for a final commitment to meet again. A Seminole High student said it was time to quit the rivalries and unite for positive results. They are all anxious to show that young people can do good and important things within their communities. They spoke of county-wide dances, with money to be donated to a local charity, and the impact they can have as a group upon the School Board.

"Coordinating activities, is a big problem," James Steere, Lake Brantley student council president, said. "What to do on a Friday night. We need to give kids something to do besides going out and getting drunk every weekend."

Both Steere and Terral say Wednesday's meeting was a success, and with the kind of support they've been shown, they're confident they can go forward.

For years teachers told Sharon Routledge that her son, Patrick, was poorly organized, disruptive, and negligent with assignments.

"It got to be so frustrating," Routledge said. "Everyday it seemed someone was calling me about my son. He did this, he did that — it really makes you feel bad."

What teachers and even Patrick didn't know was that his difficulties stemmed from a physical problem. Like an estimated five to eight percent of the population, Patrick suffers from Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD). It is not a form of mental retardation, and it is not a learning disability. However, more than half of ADD children also suffer from LD difficulties such as visual and audio perception problems.

Most with ADD are of average or above average intelligence. They are kids who have been told they're immature, could do better if they tried, or are not working up to their potential. They have trouble focusing on a single person or subject, when there are many distractions in the room. Some are very impulsive. They may start reading aloud in the library, shouting out answers without first raising a hand, or jump up from their desks. Routledge said their biggest difficulty is the lack of understanding on the part of the public.

"These kids can do great things if they learn to channel their energies," Routledge said. "They're not bad kids."

The cause of ADD is unknown. What is known is that children are not to blame, they have a real physical problem. Jayne Roberts, with the Parent Resource Center, said more men are affected than women, and the disorder seems to run in families. Commonly it results in frustration for everyone involved, and in the past there's been nowhere to go for help.

"Patrick was turned away from daycare facilities," Routledge said. "It was so hard, I didn't know what to say, what to do. You really get angry."

Patrick was in the second grade when he was diagnosed. His mother found there was little literature available, or support groups for families to take advantage of. Today, she is working to change that. She and four other parents have formed a group called "Parents Actively Responding to Attention Deficit Exceptionalities," or PARADE. Members provide an ear for parents who have just discovered their child has ADD. Someday they would like to see a research center formed in the Central Florida area.

"That's our big dream," Routledge said. "Right now we're just here to offer parents support. It helps to know you're not alone out there."

Health professionals are invited to speak at PARADE meetings, literature is provided, and parents share ideas that have worked for them. A strong emphasis is placed on team building. This means providing information to teachers, principals and caregivers so that all can work together to help the ADD child. "I know what I'm working with now," Routledge said. "Once you know what the problem is you can start working on a solution."

That's what has happened for Patrick. He recently brought home the best report card he's ever received, and he's learning to feel good about himself and his abilities. They call it setting kids up to win, and it is of vital importance to children's well-being. Health experts estimate that 40 percent of ADD children suffer from depression, but it doesn't have to be that way.

"There are a ton of kids in this town who are functioning beautifully with ADD," Roberts said. "They have a 'hey look what I can do' attitude, and there's no stopping them."

For more information call either the Parent Resource Center at 425-3663 or PARADE, 834-7673. The next meeting of PARADE is set for 7:30 p.m., Feb. 7, at West Lake Hospital. The topic will be early diagnosis and intervention for the ADD child.

Castor warns of massive school construction crunch

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Commissioner of Education Betty Castor said Thursday the state will run drastically short of classroom space over the next five years without a $3.5 billion bailout by the Legislature.

Castor announced at a news conference that she is appointing a task force of educators and business leaders to study the problem and suggest new taxes to solve it.

But with Gov. Bob Martinez firmly opposed to any new taxes in 1989, Castor stopped short of recommending any specific tax increase.

"I can't second guess what the task force will recommend. Part of their job frankly will be to help explain the needs to the public," Castor said.

She acknowledged taxpayers might also have to bail out overburdened transportation and prison systems but warned, "Unless we can solve our education needs, we'll need a lot more prisons."

Castor said part of the blame lies with unprecedented growth in the school-age population. An additional 238,000 students are expected in kindergarten through the fifth grade alone through 1993, she said.

Housing them will cost $2.3 billion more than the state expects to have for K-12 school construction, she said.

"We can't control that growth. We are not going to recommend people leave Florida," Castor said. "But we have a productive society and students moving into our schools at an unprecedented rate. We simply cannot house those kids."

The task force will be headed by Burke Kibler, a partner in the politically connected Holland and Knight law firm. Its report is due in time for the 1990 legislative session.

Castor said she will ask the 1989 Legislature to approve more than $491 million for construction of schools, colleges and universities. More than $318 million would be earmarked for new construction, with $63.4 million for maintenance and $44.5 million to remove asbestos and meet fire codes.

The public schools are better off than the colleges and universities because school boards can rely on property taxes for some school construction.

The community college and state university systems are entirely dependent on the Public Education Capital Outlay, or PECO, fund for construction and maintenance. They have to share the money with local school districts.

VIEWPOINT

Crampton controversy just a misunderstanding

You meet all kinds of people in this business but the ones I've been most intrigued by are the sports personalities.

I've always had a great deal of respect for professional athletes, despite whatever horror stories you've heard about what they're like off the field.

Sure they make a lot of money and usually only work, if you want to call it work, about six months a year. But still, most of the ones I've known are very much dedicated to whatever sport with which they are involved.

"People talk about the money, I don't worry about that. Just play your best game every day and the paycheck will be there," one of them told me once.

Most are pretty nice people, at least around the press. But a few are somewhat less than cordial.

The nicest sports-related person I have ever met is Johnny Bench, the former Cincinnati Reds perennial all-star catcher and now a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame.

John was the kind of guy who would go out of his way for the press and his friends. He would sit in the lockerroom after games and grant interviews as long as you wanted to talk to him. It didn't matter who you were or what news agency you represented. If you wanted an interview with Johnny Bench, you got one. That's just the kind of guy he is.

I have never had much of a difference of opinion with most sports stars although there was one occasion where I and a professional golfer didn't quite see eye to eye on some things.

The golfer in question is Bruce Crampton, the Australian who, along with Chi Chi Rodriguez, dominated the Senior PGA Tour last year.

Crampton came to The Greenbrier two years ago to play in the Greenbrier-American Express Championship. It was a tournament that Don January had won the two previous years.

If there's anything I love more than covering professional golf, I can't think of it at the moment. It is, and most of the media assigned to the tour will agree, a dream beat. There are people waiting in line to cover the pro golfers and a lot of them never get to do it.

Crampton is a soft-spoken man but can often demonstrate a biting wit, at least I think that's what they call it in Australia. He came to the tournament that year with a bit of a press problem. It seems he had demonstrated some uncooperative behavior with the press prior to the Greenbrier event and had developed a reputation as a troublemaker, the kind of pro who you don't particularly care to interview.

Two weeks before the tournament, a prominent writer with a major sports magazine had referred to Crampton in a most uncomplimentary way. I won't repeat the phrase but it had something to do with the rear portion of a horse's anatomy. Obviously the Australian was having an identity crisis with the media at the time.

During the first round, Crampton shot a 66 I think I can't really remember the score but I know he was the leader after the first round) and was escorted into the media room after his game was over to talk with the press.

He always has to have a glass of orange juice after every round. If he doesn't get it, he can be quite cranky. He sat in the chair in front of several rows of writers and was pretty nice. He was brief with most of his answers and had to be pumped to get additional information. He was a little nervous, no doubt still stinging a little from prior stories.

After the interview session, some of the writers were less than impressed. Most felt the interview didn't go well and blamed Crampton for that, although it's no secret that writers sometimes ask stupid questions and never believe they may have something to do with the failure of an interview.

The next day the weather was somewhat of a problem. It rained on and off most of the day and play was suspended a couple of times. Crampton struggled with his round and didn't break par that day. He shot, I think, a 73.

When he was escorted back into the media room, you could notice the anger he was trying to hide from the press corps. He was upset with something or someone, probably himself for not playing well, and you could tell he wasn't in the mood to answer a whole lot of questions.

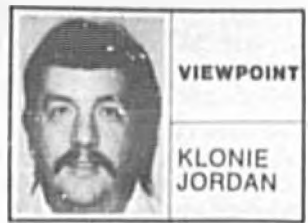

He was introduced and some of the writers, in an attempt to get even for what they felt was a lackluster first-day interview, ignored him. Crampton sat through a couple of minutes of silence and threatened to leave before one writer broke the ice.

"Bruce, you shot a 66 yesterday and a 73 today, what was the difference in the two rounds?" one of the writers asked.

"About seven strokes," was the cool reply. With that response, many of the writers shook their heads and turned back to their portable PCs. I dropped my pencil with a mild note of disgust, knowing there was no way to get any usable quotes from Crampton on this day.

He noticed the pencil fall to the floor and quipped, "I see that gentleman (nodding in my direction) didn't like that answer," in his best Aussie accent. Any other athlete and I might have been embarrassed a little, but this was Bruce Crampton, a well-known PGA "bad guy" so the edge he might have had with witticisms and sarcasm were not quite as sharp. His reputation had preceded him. Now he had to prove himself all over again, to the media and to

Probes ready for launch

Magellan, Galileo may revolutionize space knowledge

United Press International

SPACE CENTER, Houston — After years of delay and bitter disappointment, NASA is finally gearing up to launch two costly interplanetary probes that promise to revolutionize knowledge about Earth's solar system.

The $530 million Magellan probe, scheduled for launch April 28 from the shuttle Atlantis, will use a sophisticated radar imaging system to peer through the clouds that shroud Venus, allowing scientists on Earth to create high-detail maps of the planet's hidden surface.

With Magellan safely on its way, NASA plans to launch the $1 billion nuclear-powered Galileo probe Oct. 12 on a voyage of discovery that features two asteroid flybys, detailed space imagery of the Earth, moon and Venus and a 20-month orbital tour of giant Jupiter and its major moons.

A highlight of the showcase mission will be the parachute descent of a small instrument package into Jupiter's swirling atmosphere. Before the probe is destroyed by extreme pressure and temperature, it is expected to radio priceless data back to the Galileo mothership for relay to Earth.

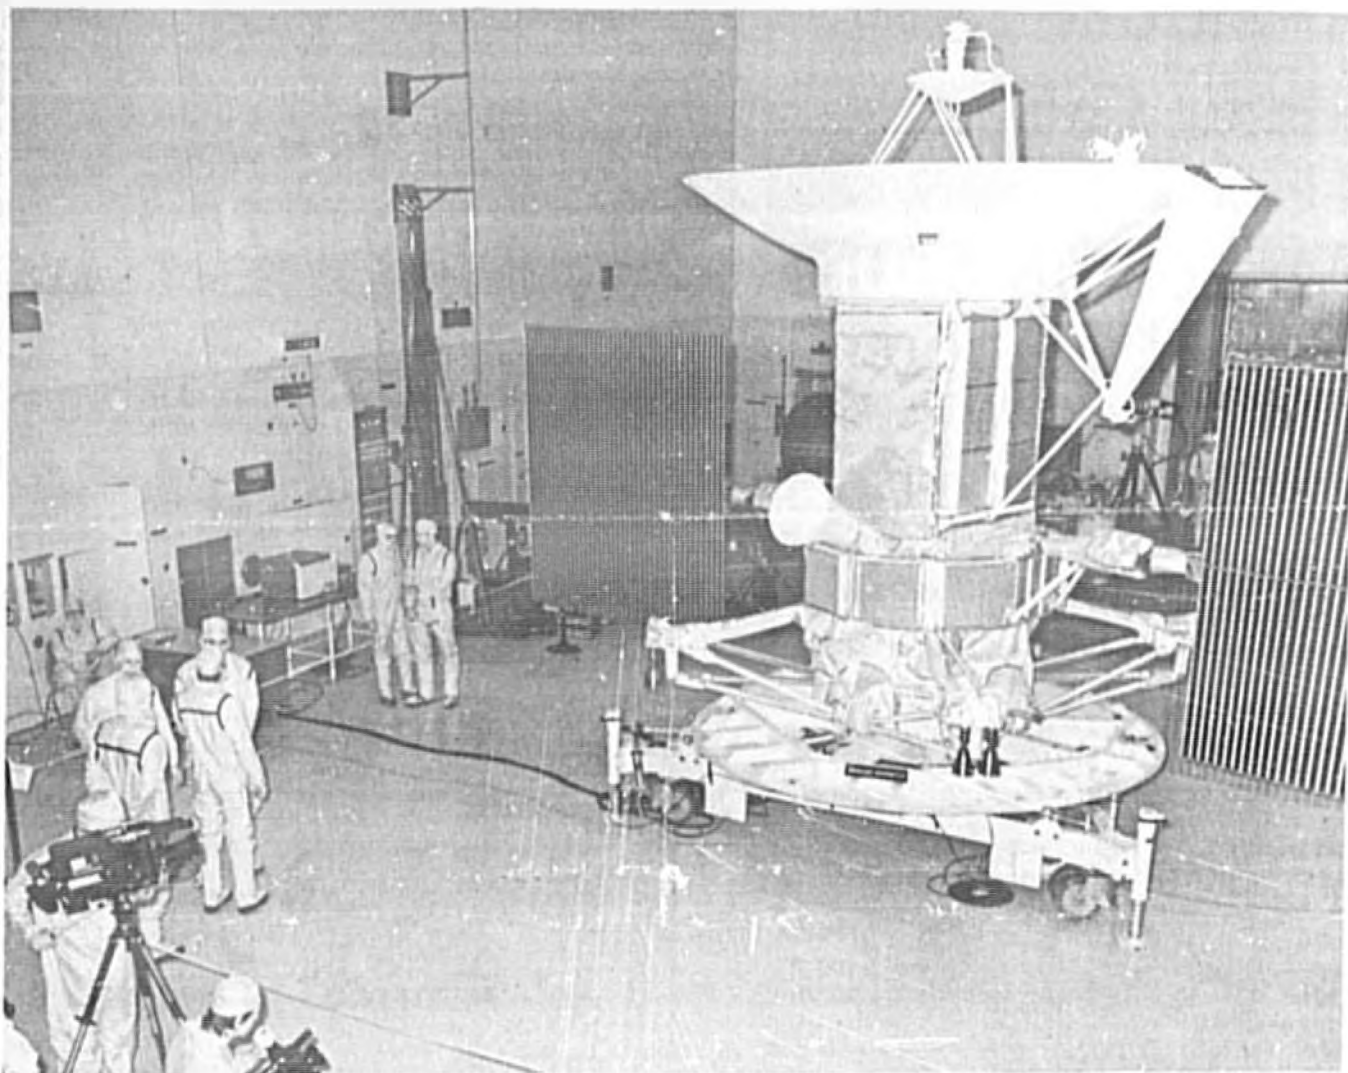

NASA plans to cap 1989 with the long-awaited Dec. 11 launch of the $1.3 billion Hubble Space Telescope, the largest optical instrument ever placed above Earth's obscuring atmosphere and one that will allow astronomers to gaze deeper in space and time than ever before.

"It's obviously the year of space and planetary and solar system science. It seems to me, and maybe even universe science once we get telescope out at the end of the year," said astronaut Donald Williams, commander of the Galileo mission. "It's been a long time since we've had any of those sorts of payloads."

"I think that's good in that we're starting to explore again and a nation that doesn't explore is doomed to become a second-class citizen in the world. So I'm looking forward to a really great year in the space and planetary science business."

Galileo and Magellan, both equipped with powerful hydrogen-fueled Centaur boosters, were to have been deployed one month apart in 1986 to meet tight "launch windows" defined by the relative positions of Earth, Venus and Jupiter.

But the destruction of Challenger

In this photograph, the spacecraft Magellan is in its completely assembled, on-orbit configuration in the Kennedy Space Center's planetary spacecraft checkout facility as preparations are made for weight and balance checks. Magellan's mission is to conduct radar mapping of the surface of the planet Venus.

on Jan. 28, 1986, grounded the shuttle program and in the aftermath of history's worst space disaster, NASA abandoned the Centaur rockets, built by General Dynamics, for safety reasons.

The only other shuttle-compatible booster available for Magellan and Galileo was the $45 million Inertial, solid-fuel rocket built by Boeing for the Air Force and used by NASA to launch its first Tracking and Data Relay Satellite — TDRS — communications relay station.

Because the IUS is less powerful than the Centaur boosters, mission planners at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., were forced to devise innovative trajectories for Magellan and Galileo.

And in both cases, NASA and the planners at JPL still face tight launch windows. Magellan must be launched between April 28 and May 23 or the spacecraft will be grounded for two years while Earth and Venus return to positions favorable to an IUS trajectory.

The problem is equally severe for Galileo, which will have to use gravity-assist flybys of Earth and Venus to build up enough speed to reach distant Jupiter.

Because Galileo's trajectory depends on the ever changing positions of three planets in what amounts to a celestial billiard shot, NASA must get the probe off the ground during a one-month launch window or that mission, like that of Magellan, will face a two-year delay.

For NASA, then, the pressure is clearly on to meet a demanding schedule. But barring unexpected problems, top agency managers are optimistic.

"The pressure, I think, is in preparing the vehicles for flying," said Milt Hefflin, lead flight director of both the Magellan and Galileo missions. "Any hiccup along the way with the equipment on the spacecraft is going to make a big difference."

"I have a great deal of empathy toward the Jet Propulsion Laboratory right now. They've been down so long — I'm real anxious and excited for these people to be able to get back in the business of flying again."

Magellan, built by Martin Marietta, will be carried into orbit by the crew of Atlantis — commander David Walker, co-pilot Ronald Grabe, Mary Cleave, Mark Lee and Norman Thagard. Cleave and Lee are responsible for actually deploying Magellan and its IUS.

Lee, an expert on the IUS, said the deployment of the spacecraft will be similar to the launch of NASA's TDRS satellites, although less on-orbit checkout is required by the crew. As with any IUS deployment, once the spacecraft is released from the shuttle it cannot be retrieved if anything goes wrong.

"We can't do much with it once it gets off," Walker said. "We do check it out pretty thoroughly before it leaves, but ... we cannot go back out and retrieve it and put it back in because we don't have any way to put the IUS away. However, it has more redundancy built into it than some previous probes ... and we're fairly confident in the IUS these days."

Magellan will be deployed about six hours and 18 minutes after blastoff, Lee said, shortly before 8 p.m. EDT.

Boston declares war on city's plethora of uncivilized drivers

United Press International

BOSTON — Genteel Boston's reputation for uncivilized driving — and parking — makes it easy prey for traffic jokes.

Even Bill Cosby poked fun at the demolition derby mentality of Boston commuters in a monologue during local comedy appearance.

But city officials and business leaders say cavalier drivers aren't funny anymore. Nor are the inconsiderate who double- and triple-park their cars on crowded streets and jaywalk boldly where others fear to tread.

The city and the business community have teamed up on a $1 million advertising campaign, called "Keep Boston Moving," to encourage safe driving and legal parking.

The Vault, a consortium of business leaders, put up $125,000 and the city is trying to raise another $825,000 in private funds to finance the long-term ad campaign. The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority donated $1 million worth of free ad space in stations and on buses and subway cars.

It's not a matter of civility as much as economic survival, Boston risks losing business because so many people are put off by clogged traffic in and around the city, and having to fight for parking space.

Providence, R.I., 50 miles to the south, has been taking its own shots. Its expressway billboards in Boston, pitched to frazzled motorists, have generated more than 200 relocation or expansion business leads.

"The business community believes we will choke on our own success if we don't do something about traffic flow. We continue to conduct commerce in the city as if it was still 1960, even though the town has done through a helluva lot of development since then," says Joseph J. Burnietka Jr., president of Arnold & Co., a Boston ad agency coordinating the new campaign.

Burnietka was skeptical, until he really thought about the problem. In Boston, rush hour is a misnomer. Tunnels, expressways and major intersections suffer gridlock for three hours each morning and evening.

Burnietka knew first-hand about clients who refuse to come to his Park Square office because they can't get there fast — or find a place to park. He then volunteered to handle the effort for free.

The new campaign is using radio and TV advertising, mass transit ads and billboards to make drivers and pedestrians more aware of the need for more manageable traffic. The city is matching it with other tactics, including intense ticketing and assigning 50 police cadets to traffic hotspots.

One television ad shows an ambulance with a stricken woman aboard that is unable to maneuver through traffic because of double-parked cars, or gridlocked intersections caused by cars that tried to beat the yellow light. "You could be killing more than time for other commuters," the announcer says.

Other ads seek strict use of pedestrian crosswalks and more reliance on mass transit. Billboards along the prime expressways soon will urge van and car pooling with the messages: "Backseat drivers needed" and "Prevent hardening of the arteries."

Major employers are asked to encourage employees to use fringe parking through mass transit subsidies and adopt flexible work schedules that avoid the peak commuter hours. Any new employer locating in Boston is required to adopt those techniques.

Next fall, Burnietka, a former teacher, hopes to move the campaign into public schools. He wants to use civics, geography, math and science to teach youngsters about traffic's impact on the economy. Changing generations of poor habits has to start with another generation, he says.

City Transportation Commissioner Richard Dimino says rush hour parking restrictions on major streets and more ticketing is already showing results.

We want to raise the consciousness of the motorists coming into the city, to get them to

DRIVING IN BOSTON

The drivers and conditions in and around Boston are the butt of many a joke and tall tale in the area and across the nation, among them:

- Beantown doesn't have pedestrians; it has moving targets. In fact, the city may have inspired the bumper sticker: "So many pedestrians, so little time."
- It has more color-blind drivers than any place else in the world. How else can one explain the constant confusion between red and green traffic lights?
- Did you hear the one about the metered parking space? So rare that when people find one, they nominate it for museum status.
- Never make eye contact with a competing driver as you race for an expressway on-ramp, or a parking space. You pretend he's not there, rather than surrender any advantage.

The curse of the baby boomers

When the baby boomers begin to retire in 2015, will Social Security be there to gild their golden years? That question, supposedly settled earlier in the decade, is once again on the table, as America's budget profligacy threatens the nest egg Social Security is building for next century's retirees.

In its first 50 years, Social Security could finance pensions simply by taxing workers at relatively low rates and transferring the money to retirees. But government recognized in 1983 that providing for the enormous baby boom generation presented a new challenge. It saw that by 2020 the proportion of retirees to workers would grow so large that Social Security taxes would have to rise to extortionate levels. Instead, President Reagan and Congress decided to revise the pay-as-you-go system, increasing payroll taxes now to deliberately create a growing Social Security fund that will be used in the next century to pay benefits to baby-boom retirees. Unlike their parents, members of the postwar generation would be asked to pay for their own Social Security pensions, as well as those of their elders.

That nest egg already is accumulating. In this fiscal year, Social Security will collect $52 billion more in payroll taxes than it will pay out to current retirees. The surplus is deposited in the Social Security Trust Fund, which uses it to purchase government bonds. By current projections, the fund will grow to $12 trillion in the next century.

The problem for baby boomers is that the government is double-counting the Social Security surplus. On one set of books, the surplus is already committed to pay out future retirement benefits to baby boomers. But because Social Security is included as part of the unified federal budget, government also counts the surplus as revenue, offsetting federal spending.

As long as the surplus is used to mask current deficits, the nation will be faced with a stark choice when Social Security begins cashing those bonds to pay baby boomers' pensions: raise taxes, borrow from future generations or skip out on its pension promises. Thus accumulating a Social Security surplus is not enough. If the nation is not to break its commitment to workers who expect a lifetime of higher payroll taxes to be repaid in future retirement benefits, it must guarantee that the surplus is invested in building America's economic strength, not spent for current programs.

To that end, a number of groups, including the Business-University Council on Competitiveness and economists at the Brookings Institution, recommended that Social Security be taken out of the federal budget. That would expose the larger deficit that the Social Security Surplus hides. All of that deficit, they believe, must be eliminated. For baby boomers, the good news about that is that it would protect their nest egg and guarantee that the surplus would go to increasing U.S. investment. The bad news is that baby boomers, like everyone else, would have to pay higher taxes to eliminate the deficit. Such is the curse of a generation unlucky enough to have been born in such numbers.

Opinions about abortion change

When one side in a public controversy starts resorting to outright falsehoods, you can just about figure it's slipping. That's what the pro-abortion activists and their pals in our liberal media have been doing lately, and why I take a certain encouragement from their behavior.

One can certainly see why they sense that the abortion cause is losing ground. For one thing, the pro-life forces have recently begun "putting their bodies on the line": engaging in non-violent forms of civil disobedience, such as blocking the entrances to abortion clinics and compelling the police to drag them away.

In the 1960s, when civil rights advocates and Vietnam war protesters did that sort of thing, the media covered their activities with husky-throated reverence. In the case of the pro-life demonstrators, the media's tone is likelier to be one of open contempt. But don't be deceived: The moral passion of the protesters is getting across to the public, and having a very definite impact.

As a result, it's becoming harder for pro-abortion activists to find polls that support their contention that a majority of the American public favors abortion on demand. At the moment they are hanging on to a New York Times/CBS News poll conducted in mid-January which asked, "If a woman wants to have an abortion and her doctor agrees to it, should she be allowed to have an abortion or not?"

Sixty-one percent of those questioned said yes, and only 25 percent said no. (Eleven percent said it depended on the circumstances.)

But what is that weaselly little clause about the doctor's consent doing there? It seems to imply a medical necessity of some sort. Why not just ask, "If a woman wants to have an abortion, should she automatically be allowed to?"

Because, naturally, the answer would inconvenience the pro-abortion lobby. As the Times itself pointed out, not once since 1975 has the National Opinion Research Center found a majority of those questioned in favor of abortion if a pregnant woman simply "is not married and does not want to marry the man." In recent years, not even 40 percent have favored it.

And Gallup, in the past five years, has consistently found nearly 60 percent of those questioned declaring that abortion should be "legal only under certain circumstances."

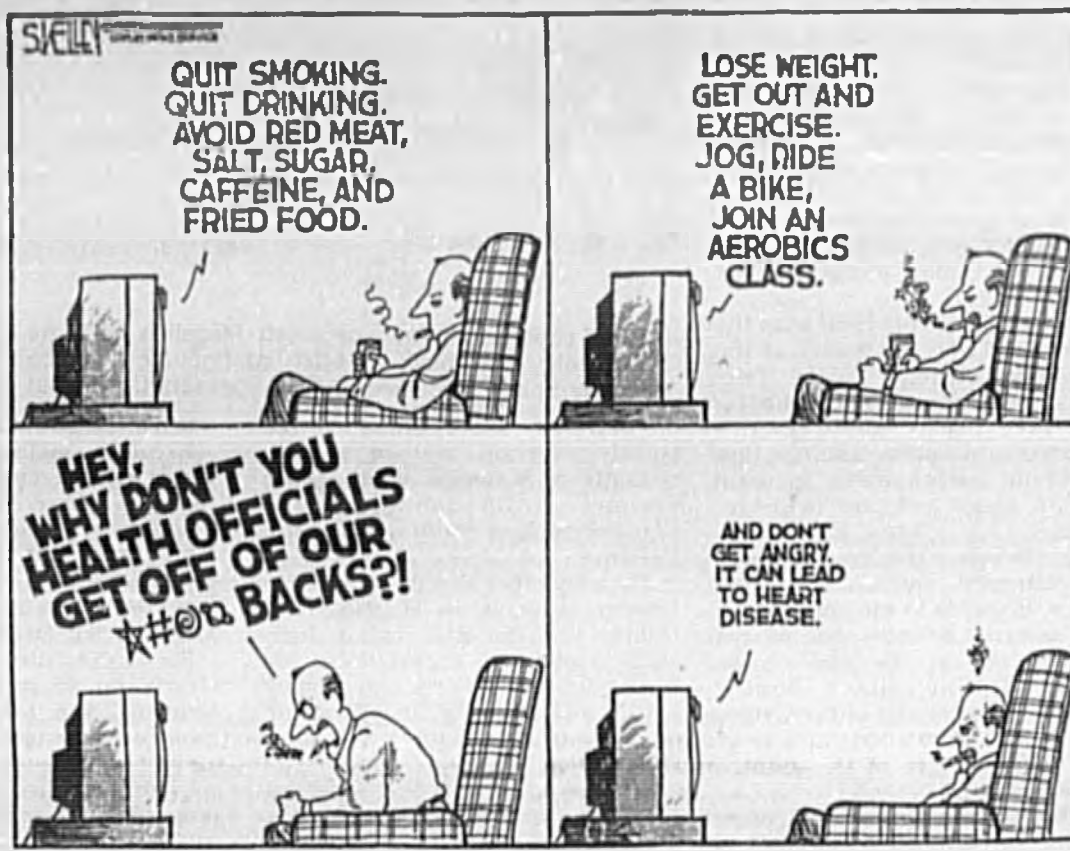

Add to these statistics President Bush's recent outspoken attack on abortion-on-demand, the Supreme Court's apparent decision to reconsider Roe vs. Wade, and Attorney General Richard Thornburgh's frank hope that that case will be overturned, and one can see why abortion activists are plunged into gloom these days.

But that doesn't justify flat misrepresentation of the facts, which is what they are now resorting to. Again and again, TV news reporters and commentators have described abortion on demand as having majority support in this country, when the facts (as described above) show no such thing.

And on the day after the annual pro-life march in Washington last month, I personally heard the number of marchers described, by reporters with differing views on the issue, as "10,000," "tens of thousands," "60,000," and "70,000."

Righting reverse discrimination

WASHINGTON — Like a pebble dropped into a pond, a presidency radiates lingering ripples. Last week's Supreme Court decision sharply limiting reverse discrimination by government is a ripple from the Reagan administration, which advocated such a ruling.

It does much to roll back the racial spoils system that exists for certain government-favored minorities.

Unfortunately, the ruling only inhibits, not proscribes, reverse discrimination. Government may still allocate shares of wealth to groups — groups, not just individuals — to which government awards the lucrative status of victim.

A Richmond, Va., statute, which resembles hundreds of others nationwide, required prime contractors on city construction projects to subcontract at least 30 percent of the dollar amount of each contract to businesses owned and controlled by these groups (the list was taken from a similar federal statute): blacks, Spanish-speaking, Oriental, Indian, Eskimo or Aleut citizens anywhere in America. This statute, passed by a Richmond city council with a black majority, would enable, say, a Hispanic firm in Houston to receive preference in Richmond, ostensibly to remedy past discrimination in Richmond.

Justice O'Connor, writing for the majority, said, among many other things, that such "set-aside" programs, to be valid, must remedy "identified discrimination," not just respond to "societal" discrimination. Although the ruling will go far toward stopping reverse discrimination, the Court flinched from the correct course. It should have retreated all the way to the high ground of this unassailable principle: Government may allocate benefits on the basis of race only to compensate identified individual victims of the government's own past system of racial classification.

Only Justice Scalia affirms that principle. However, Justice Kennedy, who occupies what some of us think of as the lark seat, strongly sympathizes with Scalia's position.

Some parts of the Reagan administration came comfortably to terms with set-aside programs. However, the Justice Department and many judicial nominees seem to understand this: The 14th Amendment's guarantee of "equal protection of the laws" expresses the constituting doctrine of all open societies. Rights belong to individuals, not groups, and least of all races.

The Court is gingerly backing out of a swamp. It waded waist-deep into this in 1980 when Chief Justice Burger, writing for the Court, upheld a 1977 set-aside law. It was the first law by which Congress legislated a classification for entitlement to benefits based solely on race.

Using conservative language to rationalize a profoundly anti-conservative position, Burger said that "appropriate deference" toward Congress' power to provide for the "general welfare" required a ruling that reverse discrimination is compatible with the 14th Amendment's equal-protection guarantee. Besides, Burger said that interfering with "experimentation in things social and economic is a grave responsibility."

But surely some areas are now off-limits to what Burger antiseptically called "experimentation." Justice Stewart, dissenting in 1980, noted that only twice before had the Court upheld government programs that inflicted injury (as reverse discrimination does to those not on the list of government-favored minorities) on the basis of race. These were the Japanese-American curfew and exclusion cases during the Second World War.

The 1954 desegregation ruling seemed to say that governments cannot classify students racially. But soon, many school districts were under court orders to do precisely that for the purpose of forced busing to achieve "racial balance." Hubert Humphrey, the prime mover of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, denied that quotas or other preferential treatment of any group was required by that law. But "race-conscious" actions soon came.

Perhaps we are slowly zigzagging our way back to Justice John Marshall Harlan's principle, enunciated in a noble dissent from a ruling that segregation was constitutional. He said, "Our Constitution is colorblind."

But what is the caliber of thinking on this subject in George Bush's Washington? Here is a sample.

Lee Atwater, Bush's chairman of the Republican National Committee, says he is optimistic about attracting black voters because: "Affirmative action has worked and there's now a much larger black middle class." His words imply something unsubstantiated, almost certainly false, and surprising coming

Japan seizing economic beachheads in U.S.

WASHINGTON — Despite a strong economy and bright peace prospects, the United States is rapidly losing altitude, and George Bush could go down in flames.

Unless the new president can reverse present trends, he will wind up with a bankrupt nation that is trillions of dollars in debt, with its economy mismanaged, and its industrial base eroding — a nation ravaged by drugs, ridden with crime, disintegrating from within.

This would be the result of generations of failed policies, self-serving politics and myopic vision. The connecting thread has been the political opportunism of the moment and postponement of inconvenient consequences to the next fellow's term. Bush is the next fellow and the day of reckoning will come on his watch.

Sources familiar with Bush's economic strategy tell us something that raises the hair on the backs of our necks. He will encourage the Japanese to expand their beachhead in the United States. He is counting heavily on that country's investments to subsidize the economy, thus permitting America to continue blissfully spending borrowed money and consuming imported goods.

While America has run up a massive public debt, Japan has piled up massive cash reserves. Now Japanese business is investing that cash in the United States, buying everything it can lay its hands on.

Within his inner circle, Bush has contended that the Japanese are injecting new capital into the United States. He says that Japanese investments provide new jobs, increase economic stability and reduce the federal deficit. The Japanese have also brought dynamic new management to America.

All of this is true enough. From Manhattan to Waikiki, they have bought up prime real estate and started up new plants. They have taken over banks, businesses, malls and hotels. In the process, Japan is building a sub-economy in America that is outproducing the regular economy.

This could lead eventually to the collapse of American manufacturing. It also gives Japan a dangerous measure of control over our economy. Ever so subtly, control is shifting from Washington, D.C., to Tokyo.

The American work force has slacked off, even as Japanese workers have intensified their efforts. In America, too many workers have adopted a shrug-of-the-shoulder attitude. The Japanese are operating on the shoulder-to-the-wheel ethic.

The Japanese believe a stable U.S. economy is vital to both nations. But our own politicians have become so dependent on foreign borrowing that they won't adopt reforms and tighten their belts.

Japanese investors now finance 30 percent of the U.S. budget deficit. They could use that as a weapon to force economic reforms here, provoking an early economic crisis by pulling the rug out from under the dollar. As the Japanese strategy has been explained to us, they will wait a few weeks for Bush to settle into the White House. If he fails to take swift measures to reduce the deficit and stabilize the economy, they will precipitate an economic mini-crisis.

That may be the only way to gain the attention of a president who still thinks politics can override reality.

Advice on Lake Jesup criticized

In regards to Lake Jesup and the proposed expressway bridge, I have read of an "original design," a bridge with a slight arch in it to keep anything that collects or spills on the bridge to be manageable instead of just running into Lake Jesup.

Now I read of a trade off, a flat span that will allow anything that spills on it, as long as it exists, to run into the lake.

The trade off — a creek will be cleaned up. The expressway authority's environmental consultants say it causes more pollution than the bridge will.

In the papers they quote various pounds of "heavy metals" from each source.

What they don't say is the creek would become cleaner every year because of the current strict environmental regulations. The bridge would be carrying every type of material in every form known to man. A minor accident would negate any advantage of cleaning up six mile creek, a major one could ruin the lake and run into the St. Johns River.

I feel the environmental advisory committee of the Seminole County Expressway Authority is giving advice detrimental to the future quality of Lake Jesup.

Artist praises ceramics story

I read your review, (People, Jan. 20), of the show in ceramics at Seminole Community College, and it was quite nice to see the Herald do that. Susie Hudson is one of our members, and will be delighted at the article and picture.

There are several members of Creative Art Gallery that call Sanford home, including me. In fact my grandfather was mayor of Sanford in the forties. Among Sanford members are: Linda Bulmer, photography; Sherry Lee, watercolors; Jane Porter, drawing and graphics; Jo Zimmerman, paper; Perry Allen, sculptor, and Deborah Hildinger Allen, printmaker and graphics.

Creative Art Gallery is a non-profit co-operative of 25 artists in Central Florida. Membership is attained only after an extensive jury of each persons work, along with a review of their past achievements in their field.

At last fall's Festival of the Masters, first place in sculpture, first and third place in photography, and second in craft went to members of Creative Art Gallery, and three of those were from Sanford.

Individuals can make a difference

In February, we honor two of America's great Presidents. Washington, often called the "Father" of his country, made an imprint for his truthfulness and honesty. Lincoln, the "Gret Emancipator," was known as "Honest Abe!" Both are remembered for what they were, as well as for what they said and did. The quality of their lives and character made a difference in the world of their times.

Both Washington and Lincoln were concerned with preserving the nation from conquest and division. Both believed in the guiding hand of God in the affairs of men and nations. Washington, in one of his first official acts, stated, "It is the duty of all nations to acknowledge God, to obey, to be grateful." Lincoln expressed his view that "It is the duty of men to own dependence on the over-ruling power of God. All are blessed whose God is the Lord."

While most of us will never attain "greatness," in being widely known for our accomplishments, we may wonder, sometimes, "How will I be remembered?" "How can I make a difference?"

More important than the words we say are the thoughts we live by and the actions that follow. In the long run, more important than the amount of money we can make, or the extent of our business or political achievements, is "How can we make a difference?" What has been the impact of our lives upon the people we meet, upon the communities in which we live, upon our relationships with groups and organizations.

This calls for a depth of character, a degree of idealism, an intensity of commitment, combined with a strong faith in the Divine presence and guidance. These will inevitably produce an indelible imprint upon the world in which we live and move.

While we are no Washington and Lincoln, yet to a lesser degree, it is just as important to the circles in which we move, and the people we meet along the way, what our influence upon them might be. If we can "...make a difference!"

We are not expected to do the impossible. Too often, however, we tend to neglect the hidden talents, the latent capabilities. Action becomes lost in lethargy. Vision becomes lost in daydreaming. We need awakening. We need encouragement. We need a creative obsession that "We CAN make a difference!"

What we are as individuals, what we believe, and what we do about it, can create the verdict, "His life has made a difference!"

Weapons trade looms in U.S.-Japan competition

By DAVID BUTTS

TOKYO — When the icon of American business, Lee Iacocca, recently visited Japan, the nation that repeatedly beats the pants off U.S. businessmen, he cited the defense industry as America's one indisputable area of competitive dominance overseas.

There are increasing signs, however, that Japan may some day challenge America in the weapons marketplace.

American defense experts are questioning the wisdom of aiding Japanese companies that may soon be competing against American firms.

President George Bush must decide how much technology the United States is willing to share with Japan and what Americans should demand in return.

The Reagan administration favored increased technology exchange and recently reached an agreement to allow Japan to develop a new jet fighter based on the General Dynamics F-16 fighter.

For their part, the Japanese will give General Dynamics the technology needed to manufacture an advanced composite material for aircraft wings.

The agreement was hailed by both governments as a model of cooperation between allies, but Japanese industry officials openly said they would use the deal to boost Japan's fledgling aerospace industry.

Defense is increasingly becoming a high-tech industry and it is at this level that American business has the most to fear.

As Japan becomes more competitive, the U.S. defense industry is bound to lobby the Defense Department increasingly to buy only American products.

Perhaps partly at the urging of U.S. defense contractors, Pentagon officials have been concerned about excessive dependence on overseas suppliers for key parts in the defense industry.

The United States already depends on Japan for microelectronic products needed for high-tech weapons systems. But Japan's defense industry is still minuscule and not likely to threaten the U.S. industry significantly — for the time being.

David Butts is a reporter for United Press International.

Bush rekindles blacks' hope

President George Bush has promised a kinder, gentler nation. His words rekindled the hopes of blacks, the largest minority in this country.

Blacks have striven for equality in education, employment, housing; all phases of American life. This struggle has continued since their initial enslavement on this continent, the last half of the 17th century.

The hopes and aspirations of many minorities were dashed upon the rocks of despair during the Reagan years. The 1960s and 1970s had been full of hope and promise, that those in poverty might also share in the American Dream. However, the Civil Rights Laws and Affirmative Action Programs, were challenged by the Reagan Presidency. The country appeared to move from an expansive attitude of justice, equality, compassion and understanding of minorities to a more restrictive self-centered lack of concern for others mode.

Words are hollow if not followed by positive deeds. Americans of African descent are waiting to see what President Bush really means.

Historically, the past three centuries have witnessed the use of words to justify the treatment afforded Blacks. Rationalizations for this treatment were religious, scientific, social and economic.

Perpetual slavery was justified because blacks were heathens, whose nature was unchangeable. They had to be instructed in the Christian doctrine. The "curse of Ham" also was cited. When leading theologians courageously pointed out that Ham was white and oppression of peoples contradicted the teachings of Jesus Christ, this argument was rendered invalid.

One of the scientific reasons for contending the natural cognitive and biological inferiority of blacks was Darwinism. Scientific investigations have refuted these allegations. When given the opportunity African-American participate in professions and or employment requiring cognitive facility and biological skills.

The alleged social and economic inferiority of blacks has been studied in detail, because many blacks live in poverty. Economic disadvantage and the concomitant social problems that ensue are blamed upon the victim rather than the system. The real problem has been the economic structure of this country: slavery — perpetual work without pay; peonage — economic slavery; discrimination-labored, first fired, lowest paying jobs; makes a statement that the poor are without "money or merit."

The man-made pattern of enslavement, segregation, discrimination and exploitation dates from the colonial period. At that time the economic system was legitimized by the judicial branch and codified by the legislative branch. This system was reflective of the prevailing social and ideological order. The system blamed the oppressed for the conditions that had been skillfully arranged for them.

In spite of the hardships encountered, African Americans love their country. They continue to dream that the promise of the Declaration of Independence truly will include them.

Here's a boost for drug-free workplace

By H. JEROME MIRON

A new chapter in America's efforts to reduce the demand for illegal drugs began on Nov. 18, when President Reagan signed the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988. Federal law now requires that any contractor or grantee who receives money from the national government must comply with policies and procedures aimed at maintaining both a drug-free workplace and drug-free employees.

By the simple stroke of a presidential pen, millions of employers and employees were enlisted in our war on drugs. Yet, there are very few who are aware of this new development and its potential impact on our nation's $9.8 billion private sector employees and more than 20 million employees who perform work associated with federally-sponsored grants in the state and local governments, universities and not-for-profit corporations.

The law is simple to understand and, from a federal perspective, relatively easy to administer. It creates no new bureaucracies and, generally, will add little to the current administrative costs of government.

The law requires that companies doing business with the government in excess of $25,000 (or any grantee regardless of the size of the grant) must establish a policy outlawing the use, sales, distribution or trafficking of controlled substances in their workplace, must specify the actions that an employer will take for employees who violate these rules, and must establish and maintain a drug awareness and education program for employees.

Employees convicted of drug violations in the workplace are to notify the employer who, in turn, is to report such convictions to the government.

Failure to comply with the law subjects the company or the grantee to suspension or termination of current contracts or grants and debarment from bidding on future proposals.

The law takes effect on March 18. Given the national importance of this law, it is not inconceivable that every company and government will follow the lead taken by these primary federal contractors and grantees.

Given the reach of the law into private and public workplaces, one can ask if such a law was, itself, over-reaching and over-reactive.

Law enforcement officials and experts from the National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA) both agree that the law is necessary and, probably, the only benign way to decrease our national demand for illegal drugs.

Illegal drug use has created an historic and unprecedented crisis in the administration and financing of law enforcement and criminal justice agencies. Officials and experts agree that the law enforcement effort to control and interdict the supply and sales of drugs anywhere is failing.

The national taxpayer cost to control the supply and sales of illegal drugs is in the billions and increasing every day. Our agencies cannot succeed without a corresponding national effort to reduce the demand for drugs. Nor can we wait for a future generation of adults to be shaped and formed by current drug education programs.

We have run out of time.

There must be a new approach.

The Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 is perhaps our last hope. When employers and employees begin to recognize that there is an economic price associated with illegal drug use — the loss of a contract, a grant, or a job — then the process of drying up the demand for drugs can begin in earnest.

Whether governments can require random or mandatory drug testing of public employees or grantees is a national question that will soon be decided in this term of the Supreme Court in three major landmark cases: National Treasury Employees Union v. Von Raab; Burnley v. Railway Labor Executives Association; and Harmon v. Thornburgh.

The Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 does not require federal contractors or grantees to institute employee drug testing programs. However, partially all drug policy experts have concluded that drug testing is the only valid and accurate way to determine if someone has been or is using illegal drugs.

Drug-free workplace programs — including the use of drug testing — have been developing in the public and private workplace for several years. The new law may have the effect of expanding such programs throughout the nation's work force.

In the private sector, as many as 30 percent of all Fortune 500 companies have drug testing programs. These companies are getting the results they wanted. They have observed a decline in the number of job applicants testing positive for drugs.

North is long way from being scott-free

By LEON DANIEL

WASHINGTON — Oliver North's lawyers may empanel jurors they can persuade not to dispatch their heroic but flawed client to prison for shredding documents and lying to Congress.

After all, the former Marine lieutenant colonel who was decorated for valor in Vietnam already has acknowledged such misdeeds.

Anyway, what's so terrible about tearing up bureaucrats' paper-work? Or duping lawmakers who currently are ripping off the taxpayers by secretly giving themselves a 51 percent pay raise?

look less like felonies than mere shenanigans.

Count on North's lawyers to argue that since the former aide to the National Security Council was working in America's best interests, the acts with which he is charged were patriotic rather than criminal.

The mouthpieces can even summon as a witness former President Reagan, who has called North a national hero.

For a while, it looked as if North might indeed become something of a folk hero. His grinning countenance graced book and magazine covers and even T-shirts. He still is the darling of the radical right.

But don't bet the farm yet that North will walk out of federal court free and unpunished.

He will be in deep trouble if the prosecution can convince the jury that he improperly used tax-deductible contributions to arm the Nicaraguan Contras.

Americans believe that war is too serious a business to leave only to the military, particularly an obscure lieutenant colonel working in secret.

If Congress cuts off aid to the Contras, most Americans don't believe zealots should be able to resume it unilaterally and secretly.

When defense attorney Brendan Sullivan attempts to wrap North in the flag, prosecutor John Kecker — who was wounded in Vietnam while leading a Marine rifle platoon — will be there to counter such appeals to patriotism.

Conspiracy and fraud charges against North were dropped because they threatened national security, but a dozen felony counts conceivably could put the retired lieutenant colonel behind bars for 60 years.

Although North has become a celebrity who makes speeches at $25,000 a pop, it would take him a long time to pay off a possible $3 million in fines.

Among those who hope North does not have to do a lot of hard time are many Americans who sternly disapprove of his actions but find a lot to like about him.

The respect North earned from men who served with him in war cannot be discounted. Nor can the Silver Star he earned for valor in combat.

Reality pushes Sandinistas from socialism

By DOUGLAS TWEEDALE

MANAGUA — Pressured by a collapsing economy, Nicaragua's government leaders are moving away from socialism toward free-market economic policies — and suffering an identity crisis in the process.

Inflation of more than 20,000 percent, rising unemployment and continuing recession have forced the Marxist government to dismiss 30 percent of its workers, slash government spending by 43 percent and negotiate with farmers and businessmen to try to boost private enterprise.

The austerity moves are particularly wrenching for a revolutionary regime like the Sandinistas, who took power almost 10 years ago under a banner celebrating the working class above all others.

"In their heads, they are committed to opening up the economy and making peace with the private sector, because they know that is the only way they can get over this crisis," said a top Sandinista adviser. "But in their hearts, they are having a hard time telling thousands of workers they will lose their jobs."

Conflict between what Nicaragua's leaders would like to do and what they have to do was especially evident Monday, when President Daniel Ortega delivered what had been billed as a watershed speech that would set the new "pragmatic" tone for Sandinista rule in the post-Reagan era.

But Ortega left both supporters and opponents confused in his rambling two-hour discourse. Trying to have things both ways, he described the Sandinistas as Marxist-Leninists who "have not given up the socialist orientation of our revolution" but then appealed to capitalist producers to help boost the economy.

In addition, Victor Tirado, a leading member of the Sandinista junta, downplayed the advent of socialism in a newspaper interview, saying, "We won't see it even in the 21st century."

Officials hastened to assure baffled foreign correspondents that they intended to open up the economy to the private sector, despite contradictory messages.

"Watch what we do, not what we say," an official said, citing negotiations under way between the government and farmers and government promises not to confiscate more land.

There are many signs Ortega's government is moving to cut back a large, inefficient state apparatus, trim investment in government projects and offer joint ventures to private investors.

Negotiations with coffee farmers and cattle ranchers have reportedly been cordial, and some independent businessmen have agreed to deal with the government.

But skeptical businessmen say there are also contradictory signals. Sandinista officials say if the private sector fails to cooperate in the current anti-inflation plan, the government will implement a "war-time economy," putting all goods and services under state control.

Which message is to be believed? The answer lies more in politics than in economics, and will depend on how seriously the economic crisis affects the Sandinistas' popularity since elections are scheduled next year.

Those who oppose the switch to free-market principles say the economy can still fall much further before posing a political problem.

SANFORD — Ground has broken for the first and exclusive United States distribution plant of Epelsa International. The manufacturer of low- and heavy-capacity electronic scales has begun construction on a 24,500-square foot plant in Sanford Central Park. The Epelsa plant will be a manufacturing, assembling and distributing center for the Spanish corporation. Initially metal portions of scales will be assembled in Sanford. Within a year of completion of the Sanford plant, scheduled for June, electronics will be assembled at the local facility.

Weight loss program is for teenage girls

ORLANDO — An 9-week weight loss program for teenage girls will begin with a Feb. 9 orientation program in the Florida Hospital Conference Center.

The program, entitled "Weight No More," will be offered twice a week for girls ages 12-16. Parents are encouraged to attend the free introductory meeting and the first two sessions.

The introductory course will be held from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. Barbara Friedrich, hospital spokesman, said there has been a dramatic increase in adolescent obesity during the last 15 to 20 years. "Research indicates that as many as 70 percent of obese adolescents will become obese adults," she said.

"Weight No More" is a skill-oriented weight loss program specifically designed to minimize and eliminate many of the problems teenage girls experience with weight control, Friedrich said.

A group of trained professionals guide parents and adolescents to develop skills that lead to higher levels of communication, self-direction and decision-making, Friedrich said. She said the program will offer emotional support, stress management, assertiveness training, physical activity and nutrition education that reinforces permanent weight loss.

The fee for the course is $165. For more information about the program, interested people may call 897-1785.

Stop smoking program for women

ORLANDO — "For Women Only: How to Stop Smoking Now," one of only two programs in the country specifically designed for women smokers, will be offered by Florida Hospital beginning Feb. 7.

The new program is taught by women, for women, addressing specific need women encounter in quitting, said Donna Seery.

A group of trained professionals help smokers deal with the fears of quitting like weight management, withdrawal symptoms and emotions, Seery said. The team includes:

- A specially trained woman instructor
- A clinical counselor who assists with the emotions associated with quitting.
- A staff physician with advise on the effects of nicotine on a woman's body and suggestions for ways to handle that nicotine craving.
- A registered dietician and exercise physiologist to help manage weight while kicking the habit.

The program begins Feb. 7 and include eight sessions. A second program will begin Sept. 12. Classes are from 6:16 to 7:45 p.m. in the Resource Center at the Florida Hospital Center for Women's Medicine. Cost of the program is $120.

For more information or to register, women may call 897-1785.

Orientation program is for volunteers

We Care, Inc., Central Florida's 24-hour suicide prevention/crisis intervention center, is conducting orientation sessions for those interested in becoming telephone volunteers.

Part one of the new orientation will be held every Tuesday and Thursday from 7-10 p.m., beginning Feb. 7 and concluding March 9. The sessions will be held in the Board room of the Orange County Mental Health Services building at 2520 N. Orange Avenue in Orlando.

Area professionals will share their expertise on subjects such as listening skills, addictions, loneliness, AIDS, lifestyle adjustments, and suicide.

We Care, Inc., has been listening and befriending people in the Central Florida community for over 23 years. If you are interested in helping We Care help our community, call 644-2027 for information and ask for Mary Ann, We Care's Training Coordinator.

Program gives relief to caretakers

LONGWOOD — South Seminole Community Hospital recently started a program to give people who are taking care of elderly or ill relatives or friends a break from their duties for up to two weeks.

This week the hospital started a day-care program for the same type of patients.

Ken Peach, director of marketing at the hospital, said as far as he knows South Seminole is the first hospital in Central Florida to offer such services.

The respite care program, which offers one- to 14-day care, has received a good response, he said. Many people use the service for care of elderly relatives when they want to go somewhere for a weekend. Others have booked up to two weeks next summer when they plan vacations, he said.

The program is housed on a floor at the hospital not normally used for patient care, so it does not reduce the number of beds available for patients, he said. Rates for the respite care program are $75 per day, considerably lower than regular room rates. Cost for the day care service is $40 per day.

The charges include a private room with telephone and television, all meals and snacks and nursing assistance as needed.

Donna Kellmann, director of nursing at South Seminole, said

"This type of program has been found to improve the relationship between the caregiver and the elderly person receiving care. It gives both parties the opportunity to change their surroundings for a period of time.

Anyone interested in learning more about the respite care or day care programs may call Kellmann at 767-1200, extension 100.

New nursing center opens in Longwood

LONGWOOD — Dr. Glen Davis has been appointed Medical Director of Meridian Nursing Center — Island Lake, Meridian's new nursing facility in Longwood, and Judith Yarusinski has been appointed director of nursing.

The $3.2 million, 119-bed, long-term care facility is being completed at 155 Landover Place, and will begin accepting residents as soon as paperwork for its state license is completed.

A native of Winter Park, Dr. Davis is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine. He is a graduate of the University of Miami School of Medicine, with a 3-year residency in internal medicine at Washington University (Jewish Hospital), St. Louis. He has hospital privileges at Westlake Hospital, South Seminole Community Hospital and Florida Hospital North.

Dr. Davis is a member of the American Medical, Florida Medical and Seminole County Medical associations and is on the board of directors of the American Heart Association.

Judith Yarusinski graduated with a B.S. in nursing from Neuman College, Aston, Pa., where she was named to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" in 1972. She worked as an assistant head nurse before relocating to Orlando in 1982.

Ms. Yarusinski developed a nursing assistant program curriculum currently being used at Orlando College. She was staff development coordinator for Orlando Memorial Convalescent Center from 1984-86. Before coming to Meridian, Ms. Yarusinski was Home Care Supervisor with Medical Personnel Pool, Mattland.

Meridian will employ approximately 100 people to help operate the long-term care facility. The two-story stucco building with a shingled, hip roof is located on a site with the Chambrel, Island Lake retirement complex. The nursing center includes a spacious dining room with a 20-foot ceiling, activity room, beauty/barber shop, study and a fully-equipped physical therapy room. In announcing the two appointments, Ken Eimers, Administrator of Meridian Nursing Center, stated "We are pleased the Dr. Davis and Judith Yarusinski will help us fulfill Meridian's commitment to providing quality medical services in an environment of warmth and caring."

Link between diseases doubted by researchers

United Press International

BOSTON — Researchers say the organism that causes Lyme disease does not also cause Lou Gehrig's disease, dashing the hopes of those suffering from the devastating muscle disorder that their illness could be treated with antibiotics. It was reported.

Doctors at the Tufts University

School of Medicine said they found no correlation between being infected with a bacterium that causes Lyme disease and Lou Gehrig's disease in a study involving 71 Lou Gehrig's patients.

Lyme disease usually causes a rash followed by flu-like symptoms and possibly neurological or joint damage.

GETTING THE SUPPORT YOU NEED

You may not realize it, but the mattress and pillow you sleep on, your choice of couch and chairs, even the way you drive a car can directly affect your back.

Improper support is one of the major causes of pain and discomfort in your neck and spinal column. If this has thrown your spine out of alignment, you may be suffering from persistent aches and pains in your back and other parts of your body.

A spine out of alignment may interfere with the proper functioning of your nervous system. All of your body's nervous systems are connected to the brain, which sends impulses through the spinal column in a complex network that extends to all of your body's organs and cells. Interference with nerve supply can not only affect your back but other parts of your body as well.

If you are feeling any pain or discomfort now in your back or in other parts of your body, you may be able to benefit from a chiropractic examination and treatment.

IBM repairmen charge more than most doctors

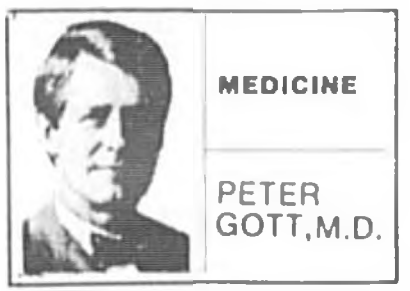

Let's be fair. Although doctors have a reputation for charging an arm and a leg, this reputation may not be based on fact. We live in a service-oriented society where, in many cases, the cost of non-medical services is escalating far faster than physicians' fees.

For example, when I take my Volkswagen in for routine repairs, I am charged $48 an hour for labor. Heaven knows what I'd pay to keep a luxury car on the road. To my knowledge, the Medicare authorities have no pending legislation to limit auto mechanics' charges, depending on what ails your car.

Last month my IBM typewriter went on the fritz. My secretary called the corporation service center for our area to request assistance. The company representative agreed to send out a repairperson — at a staggering $158 per hour labor, including travel time, plus 25 cents a mile. After some backing and filling, we acceded to a service call when another client needed help, thereby sharing the cost of travel time. A week ago, the fix-it man came and replaced a $4.50 drive belt that had broken. The belt was not guaranteed. I grudgingly paid the $265.14 bill; it seemed like a lot of labor cost for the service I received. I think I was ripped off. IBM either needed my money to buy carpeting for its corporate executive suite or, more likely, the company is more interested in selling computers than fixing Selectric typewriters.

Years ago, as an elderly colleague of mine was preparing to take down his shingle, he decided to separate the wheat from the chaff. He doubled his office fees to an astronomical figure — I think it was $30 then — in the hope of attracting well-heeled patients to ease him into retirement. In those days, it was pretty well understood that you didn't seek assistance from doctors who charged more than you could afford. Patients of modest means were content to see the young doctor down the street (in this case, me) who was starting a practice and needed all the business he could get, whether it paid well or not.

The system has changed. Boy, has it changed. Today, physicians (whom government agencies have identified as "overchargers") may be required to refund money to patients and, in Massachusetts at least, can lose their licenses. I'm not aware of any watchdog committee that will force IBM to pay me back part of its overcharge, although I have been a loyal customer for years.

MEDICINE

I don't make $158 an hour when I'm working. If I'm lucky and the office is running at full capacity, I may make $100 an hour. Of that, half goes to overhead. Of the remaining $50, about 30 percent is paid in taxes. So, on a good day, my take-home pay is about $35 an hour. I'm not even paid for my time on-call, giving advice on the telephone, driving, researching difficult cases, filling out insurance forms, sitting alone thinking and planning, consulting with other doctors, teaching or carrying out committee work at the hospital. I have no sick time or paid vacations. When I stop working — even for a weekend — the income stops. I am not permitted to raise my fees for the elderly who are invariably more time-consuming than are younger patients. When I provide a late-night service or see sick people on holidays, I don't get time-and-a-half; in fact the differential is ludicrous. I'm told by the government that when I attend a desperately sick patient in the hospital's Intensive Care Unit, I cannot charge more than $21.60 per hour. Bored by this litany? So am I.

I'm not sharing this information with you to complain; I just think you ought to know the facts. I live comfortably, but I work a 100-hour week to do so. Although some doctors are able to gouge the public, most practicing physicians in my generation are caught in the same bind as I am. We muddle along day by day, shaking our heads at the dizzying array of regulations and restrictions that seem calculated to drive the private practitioner nuts.

Sometimes, it's depressing. I wonder about a society whose priorities permit a typewriter repairman to demand and receive $158 per hour (plus 25 cents a mile), most of which goes to corporate upkeep, while physicians are restricted by law to a fraction of that figure.

BOOK REVIEWS

Burgess is best with language

Any Old Iron
By Anthony Burgess
(Random House, 416 pp., $19.95)

If any serious student of the modern English novel is still unconvinced that Anthony Burgess is among the finest writers the language has found, "Any Old Iron" should dispel that belief.

The brilliant British writer, whose 30-odd works of fiction, drama and criticism include "A Clockwork Orange," "Honey for the Bears" and "Tremor of Intent," has outdone himself with a mesmerizing tale of our century that tracks the intertwined stories of two families — one Welsh, one Jewish.

The story, which stretches from the sinking of the Titanic through two world wars to the founding of the state of Israel, confronts the vagaries of existence unflinchingly but with the wisdom of learning and experience.

It is an unsentimental yet compassionate rendering of the life of the individual and of the state, whose purposes are so often served uncomprehendingly by its minions as they slide toward their own appointments with destiny.

Harry, who narrates but is by no means the principal character, sets the novel's tone.

An articulate "retired terrorist and teacher of philosophy," Harry is an outsider, but one whose absorption of the milieu he observes and describes is complete.

The educated eye Harry brings to bear on the story of his brother-in-law, Reginald Morrow Jones, heightens the interplay of their families' lives with the turbulent events of the 20th century.

At the same time, however, there echoes in Reg's life a deeper reality that has persisted in the form of legends and myths handed down by the Welsh people through the centuries.

These echoes in turn resonate forward to the largely fruitless struggles of modern revolutionaries that form the backdrop for Reg's life.

"Any Old Iron" has many rewards. It is riveting on the superficial levels of language and narrative, but it will repay the efforts of readers whose probing will unfold further meanings in the interconnections between the past and present.

The extraordinary overtones of the lives of ordinary people have been the stuff of many books that have made their authors rich. "Any Old Iron" may or may not further Burgess's probably already substantial fortune, but it certainly enriches us.

Share of Honor
By Ralph Graves
(Henry Holt, 464 pp., $19.95)

Watch out Herman Wouk. Ralph Graves is moving in on your World War II tableaux.

From the former managing editor of Life magazine comes a historical novel of Americans caught in the Japanese invasion and occupation of the Philippines during World War II.

Graves, who grew up in Manila before the war and returned as a U.S. Army Air Force sergeant in the 1945 liberation of the islands, weaves a rich tapestry of history, people and suffering.

The author is most comfortable in recreating and describing the real events that took place during the occupation: the Bataan death march, the Santo Tomas internment camp for American civilians and the infamous O'Donnell and Cabantuan prisoner of war camps.

It is when Graves develops his characters that he weakens.

The novel revolves around four Americans and a Filipino, through whom the reader sees life in the Philippines during the turbulent three-year Japanese occupation.

While some of Graves' characters — notably the Filipino singer — are wooden and almost straight out of a pulp novel, they nonetheless ingratiate themselves with the reader.

It is in the POW camps and in the mountains of the Philippines where Graves shines. Much of the story of the POW camps is told through the letters Army Maj. Jack Humphrey composes to his wife, poignant letters that reveal the suffering and inhuman treatment GIs were forced to endure.

Outside the camp, Lt. Brad Stone provides a different side of the war. Stone, Graves' symbol of American innocence lost, heads a rag-tag guerrilla group that harasses the Japanese and eventually takes part in the liberation of both the POW and civilian camps.

The other two Americans — businessman Amos Watson and Judy Ferguson — are not nearly as well-developed or believable, and Graves seems to have trouble at times fleshing out their personas.

"Share of Honor" is not literature; it is escapism, and Graves is as good at that as Wouk was in "The Winds of War" and "War and Remembrance." This is the perfect television miniseries.

This is also the near-perfect winter book: hard to put down, easy to read and not too taxing on the brain.

Fish 'n' chips shop goes global

United Press International

GUISELEY, England — Stand by, world. The most luxurious fish 'n' chips shop on earth — "More of a legend than a restaurant" — may soon be heading your way.

"We see no reason why fish 'n' chips — particularly Harry Ramsden's fish 'n' chips — can't be exported all over the world," said Richard Richardson. "After all American hamburgers are,"

Richardson is marketing manager for the one and only Harry Ramsden's, a genuine British institution which has just celebrated its 60th birthday. He's thinking of exporting a phenomenon which is to ordinary fish 'n' chips shops what the World Series is to little league baseball.

Traditional "chippies" carpet the land. They vary little — small or corner shops with steel counters surmounted by glass cases holding ready-fried fish.

Perhaps they have a few basic tables. But most customers go for take-away — traditional, deep-fried battered fish and usually soggy French fries, doused in vinegar and salt and wrapped in white paper cones. Using old newspapers as wrapping is now outlawed.

Well, Harry Ramsden's is not like that.

Probes

Magellan will follow a "type 4" trajectory, one that will take the probe around the sun one and a half times before it finally slips into an elliptical orbit around Venus on Aug. 10, 1990, some 15 months after launch from Atlantis.

For the next 18 days, engineers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory will check out the spacecraft's systems before it begins 243 days of radar mapping. The mission will formally end in April 1991, although if funding is available, data collection can be continued indefinitely.

The goal of the Magellan mission is to map up to 90 percent of Venus's surface with a best-case resolution of 500 feet or so, meaning objects or features 500 feet across can be distinguished.

Such high resolution maps of Venus's surface could help scientists learn more about how continental plates move, assuming continental drift is at work on Venus, and could provide insight into "greenhouse effect," in which chemicals in the atmosphere trap solar radiation, raising atmospheric temperature.

"The average American, if you will, is starting to get wise to the fact that we're polluting our atmosphere at an enormous rate and that the things that contribute to the greenhouse effect here are important to us," Walker said.

"Venus is kind of a worst-case greenhouse effect, probably not from anything like the same factors we're experiencing here, things like defoliation of the central equatorial forests and massive burning of hydrocarbons, but for whatever reason, Venus does have major league greenhouse effect.

"We can see a lab model of things that we hope will never happen here but in their worst manifestations, could, by looking at Venus. And maybe we can use that information to help us prevent something similar from happening here on Earth."

The solar system features two general planetary types: terrestrial planets — Earth, Venus, Mercury, Mars and Pluto — and gas giants like Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune.

While Magellan is devoted to studying a terrestrial-type planet, one similar in many respects to Earth, Galileo is devoted to studying Jupiter, which has more than twice as much mass as all the other planets in the solar system combined.

The Galileo spacecraft is scheduled to be carried into orbit aboard Atlantis on Oct. 12 and deployed by astronauts Shannon Lucid and Eileen Baker. The other crewmembers aboard Atlantis will be skipper Williams, co-pilot Michael McCulley and Franklin Chang-Diaz.

Like Magellan, once Galileo is deployed "there's nothing we can do with it," Lucid said in an interview. "We just let it out, back off and then it's on its own. Hopefully it was put together right ... and it'll go do its job right."

At the time of the Challenger disaster, Galileo had been scheduled for launch in May 1988. Using a high-energy Centaur booster, the probe was to reach Jupiter in December 1988 after a direct flight from Earth.

With the less-powerful IUS, JPL planners had to devise a much more complicated trajectory and one that will take six years to complete. Assuming an October launch, Galileo will not reach Jupiter until early December 1995.

Called Venus-Earth-Earth-Gravity-Assist, or VEEGA, trajectory, Galileo's IUS will fire the spacecraft toward Venus so the probe can use the planet's gravity in February 1990 to sling it back toward Earth at a higher speed.

Two such slingshot flybys of Earth are required, the first of which in December 1990 will fling Galileo out into the asteroid belt beyond the orbit of Mars. The probe will then fall back into the inner solar system for a second Earth flyby in December 1992 at an altitude of just 200 miles before departing, at last, for Jupiter.

One dividend of the convoluted trajectory is that Galileo will pass within 700 miles or so of two asteroids, giving scientists an unprecedented closeup look at what might be debris from a destroyed planet.

"We feel very fortunate to have a small part to play in the deployment of Galileo," Lucid said. "In the future, six or seven years downstream, it'll be really neat to be sitting there on your front porch and listening about Galileo as it goes around Jupiter."

The atmospheric probe, built by Hughes Aircraft Co., will be released in July 1995, about five months before the Galileo mothership, built by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, goes into orbit around the giant planet.

The 737-pound probe will slam into Jupiter's atmosphere at more than 100,000 mph, subjecting the vehicle and its six instruments to a deceleration force of 250 times the pull of Earth's gravity. As the probe descends to its doom, it will radio data to the Galileo spacecraft as it soars overhead and into orbit around Jupiter.

For the next 20 months, Galileo will sail through a series of ever changing orbits, flying past Jupiter's major moons in an orbital ballet sure to revolutionize knowledge of what amounts to a mini solar system.

Powered by two compact nuclear generators, Galileo will beam back its data at up to 134,000 bits per second to more than 100 scientists on Earth during the probe's 10 orbits of the solar system's largest planet.

"The shuttle was always designed to be a payload carrier of one kind or another and it ends up being a truck to haul things," Williams said. "However, in the case of Galileo, it's a rather unique piece of cargo and something that will hopefully contribute to the knowledge of people throughout the world. That's what this is all about and what the agency is all about."

Crampton

away from the golf course, found him to be an intelligent, caring, even somewhat humble human being.

This was a good lesson for the both of us.

I learned not to judge someone before getting my own view of what that person is really like.

I think Crampton found a better way to deal with the press during that tournament. At the end of the event, he was quite a different person than on the first day.

We live and learn, I guess.

He came up to me that night during dinner and we chatted for a few minutes. I found that his attitude and overall demeanor weren't necessarily because he was trying to be a smart-aleck. Most of it had to do with the fact that he wanted people to like him, he was just unsure as how to go about it. He didn't understand American humor, it seemed, and several of his attempts were simply misinterpreted by writers.

Drivers

understand that we're serious," Dimino says. "People will change their habits because they don't want to be towed. It is a strong deterrent."

Boston police officer Joseph McNulty has seen it all, particularly when he works traffic duty.

"There are certain areas of the country where drivers seem to be a little more reckless. Boston is one of them. If you try to stop traffic, it's almost like you're putting that driver out a bit so somebody else can get through. Some take it as a personal affront," McNulty says.

"If I'm standing in an intersection, putting up my hand in a 'stop' motion just doesn't work anymore. There was a time many, many years ago when people would hit their brakes. Now, you have to make eye contact with the driver to make sure he or she is aware you are going to stop them. Then you have to physically start moving yourself in front of that vehicle."

Cezanne: Letting it all hang out

UPI report

WASHINGTON — The impact of Paul Cezanne — whose impressionist and post-impressionist work signaled the beginnings of cubism and modern art — is undeniable. But what pressures, what aspirations and what motives acted upon him and pushed him onto the path of greatness?

A new exhibition at the National Gallery of Art answers those questions with "Cezanne: The Early Years 1859-1872," a comprehensive chronicle of his formative years and his development as an artist.

The show, which includes 57 paintings and 15 works on paper, opened at the Royal Academy of Arts in London in April 1988 and traveled to the Musee d'Orsay in Paris. It will be at the National Gallery through April 30.

"This show, for the first time, explores the early work of Cezanne," said National Gallery Director J. Carter Brown at a press preview. "It has a particular human dimension, showing his enormous pressures for self-expression, trying to become a talent."

"It's an intensely human story and these are extraordinary works of art."

In addition to the show of early works, the National Gallery "has hung a mini-Cezanne show out of our own holdings," said Brown, including 25 works completed after 1872.

The paintings done in the early 1860s demonstrate a variety of influences on Cezanne, from the traditional skills of figure drawing learned at the Academie Suisse
