

Big Shots In Baseball Are Picked By Chance In Race For Good Green Material

By DAVIS J. WALSH International News Service Sports Editor
NEW YORK—Baseball's unrelenting hunt for raw material is pretty much a glorified grab bag, in which one draws a prize or a blank, by sea, and the major league season of 1929 furnishes some excellent illustrations of the fact, if not downright proof of it.

One of the rarer stars of the campaign, for instance, is Babe Herman, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, a third in Lloyd Waner, of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Frank "Lefty" O'Doul, of the Philadelphia Athletics, of the Giants also must qualify in any man's list. And all of them were "blind buys" meaning that they were picked up as a gamble.

They weren't louted into the major leagues by expensive scouting stiffs. They actually had to beg their way in. Today, they could buy their way out.

For example, couldn't he be bought from the Athletics for $100,000? He looks like one of the right hand hitters of the generation; yet friendship alone got him his trial with the ball club. He was recommended to Charlie Mack by Frank Baker, who apparently remembered "Lefty" in a kindly light in spite of their many differences of twelve years ago, which resulted in Baker's leader to the Yankees.

"Take this boy now," Baker urged, "if you wait a year, he'll cost you plenty."

Mr. Mack didn't wait. He knew nothing of Foxe, who was playing in small leagues around the Boston Shore of Maryland, but was willing to take a chance on Baker's judgment. All he got out of it is a man who can pay first base, third base and catch, besides leading the American League in hitting and from the opening game of the season. It is Foxe's third year on the big time.

It's a case not altogether dissimilar. A friend who had watched him catching for a high school team came to Louisa, sent him to Louisa to McGraw that the latter arranged for the extra-ordinary to appear at the training camp. He was a great hitter now, and he was a great pitcher, and he was a great outfielder, although able to get by at several bases.

Herman, the National League's leading hitter, had trials with the Boston Tigers and the St. Louis Cardinals. He looked like a ten hit ball player. He could hit, although many thought he was a fluke hitter, who wouldn't keep going over a sufficient stretch of games. He could hit a left hander, however, and was allowed to first round the major leagues, unopposed for several years. Herman got his first shot in 1920 when the Dodgers need hitting so badly that they were willing to take a flier with this lefty. There he hit, hitting him in the line up, in spite of his malfeasance, at all, although they laughed at him, he lived the dream and today he is the center of the league with his hitting. Once a terrible first baseman, he seems to have made an adequate outfielder of himself into the bargain.

Lives Down Post
O'Doul also had to live down his part. Failing as a left hand pitcher, an outfielder with the Red Sox. He couldn't take himself seriously they said. And so they fell into the spirit of the thing and refused to take him seriously, too, even when he led the Coast League in nearly every department of play. So little attention was paid the performance, in fact, that the Giants picked him up in the draft. He delivered for McGraw last year, after being traded to the Phillies during the off season, he finally showed the stuff the boys thought he had ten years before. He has today the highest batting average of the contention for the batting championship all year.

The junior Waner was picked up by the Pirates, eight years ago. Why? Because the senior Waner recommended him, the senior Waner took the big shot with the ball club at the time. Who's one of the big shots with the ball club now? The junior Waner. That's baseball.

MALONE DEFEATS LARRY BENTON IN PITCHING BATTLE

Cubs Down Giants In Pretty Game; Yanks And Mackmen Lose

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 19.—(INS)—Three baseball followers who are accustomed to pick up their morning papers—glance at the box scores—and immediately get up a wall after reading of the amazing flights of the so-called riddle ball are no doubt heavily wakened this morning.

For there were but three home runs hit in seven major games yesterday and several of the what is known as "pitchers' battle." The Cubs won 1 to 0, Malone against Benton in the seventh but four. Hendricks' sacrifice fly saved Cuyler in the seventh for the single run of the game. William Watson Clark pitched himself a mighty neat ball game limiting the Cards to five singles as the Phillies triumphed 2 to 1 in one hour and thirty minutes. Outfielder Frederick left up his sensational work at bat by getting his twentieth home run.

In the only other game scheduled in the National, Boston turned back the Reds, 19 to 9. Out in Chicago Ted Lyons threw some rather explosive balls to win the Yankees, giving them but six hits as his White Sox teammates won a 3 to 2 victory. In addition to doing such a nice job of hitting, Lyons sent in the winning run in the ninth inning with a resounding double.

The Athletics gained nothing on the second-placers as Sam Rice was a decision from Lefty Grove, though Grove held 81.00 in six hits while Grove was nipped for 10. The score was 3 to 2 with Jimmy Foxe hitting two homers a double and scoring all of the Mack's runs. It was Grove's fifteenth win of the year and Grove's third loss.

The Red Sox scored their seventh victory in 12 games, but were nipped by the Yankees, 5 to 1, in 11 innings. Cleveland pounded Garfield Hinton hard to humble Washington, 8 to 1. Four errors aided in the Indian's scoring.

Zeppelin Lands At Tokio Completing Hop Ahead Of Time

America's, English and Japanese, many of the latter in colorful costumes, incited as never before by the first sight of the monarch of the air which has devastated the distances which separate the ends of the earth.

As the zeppelin's motors for the first time in 85 hours ceased their dull roar and whined down to a stop, the "sailer" coils of landing ropes were thrown down from halfway, and seized by the hands of the ground crew.

Slowly the great ship was nosed down to earth, and the "bananas" of the alpha condole.

The landing was accomplished without great difficulty and the first of the landing ropes was thrown down from halfway, and seized by the hands of the ground crew.

Tokyo was an ode for the occasion of the Graf's arrival, and thousands upon thousands of Japanese from all over the country had flocked to the city for a holiday and to watch the majestic craft son overhead. The Graf arrived over the capital 15 minutes after leaving Kasumigaura, and after circling the city for a while, finally the entire population thronged into the streets to watch the sight, flew southward to visit Yokohama.

its courtesy trip in order to give the passengers and crew a fitting welcome.

The Graf Zeppelin has now carried her 20 passengers and crew of 41 almost half the way around the globe. In the opinion of Dr. Eckener, the most difficult part of the journey has now been completed—the spanning of the barren, uncharted wastes of Siberia.

By its early arrival here, the Graf Zeppelin has performed even better than the most sanguine hopes of its commander. Before leaving Friedrichshafen last Thursday, Dr. Eckener said he hoped to make the trip in four and a half days, but was fully prepared to take at least 120 hours for the journey.

Fearing that head winds might seriously hamper his progress, the commander informed his passengers that they must be prepared to spend even as long as 180 hours in the air, and in the event that such a long time might be necessary to span the Asiatic expanse, Dr. Eckener promised the trip with only four out of the ship's five motors in operation.

By this means, he conserved fuel to allow leeway in the event adverse winds were encountered. However, despite the fact that at several points along the route rainstorms and winds of considerable force succeeded on her way with favorable results were met. The regularity of speed of an ocean liner.

MILL WORKMEN OF DIXIE TO HAVE OCTOBER PARLEY

Will Gather To Plan Campaign To Fight Bad Labor Condition

By Henry Lesons International News Service Staff Correspondent
CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 19.—

Following close upon sporadic outbreaks of strikes, sabotage and bloodshed in the "New Industrial South," organized and unorganized textile workers are planning to send delegates here in October to map out a campaign to fight "unbearable" labor conditions.

The occasion is a general conference of textile workers called by the provisional executive committee named at a recent conference of textile workers at Bessemer City, N. C., near here, under the auspices of the National Textile Workers Union, which has had organizers in Piedmont, North Carolina, for many months.

It will be held October 19 and 20. After that time, the date of the meeting will fall five weeks behind the beginning of the trial here of Fred Erwin Neal, National Textile Workers Union Southern field director, and fifteen other organizers and strikers for the assassination of Police Chief O. P. Aderholdt of Gastonia, slain in a police raid on a strike headquarters at Gastonia.

After the sixteen self-styled martyrs who claim they were framed by a capitalist justice were arraigned at Gastonia last month, a change of venue was obtained in this adjacent county on the ground that four currents of stonewall sentiment precluded the possibility of impartiality in Gaston County. The International Labor Defense, which is directing the strikers' fight against the electric chair, has established headquarters here.

The conference here is designed to bring about the formation of a united and south-wide movement to end the so-called "attribution" efficiency system in Southern mills to obtain substantial wage increases, inauguration of the eight-hour day and putting an end to child labor.

"COLYUMISTS" BY SAM SMALL IN ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Many newspaper readers have the idea that the preparation of their morning's "things" is just one of those easy and desirable jobs that is wholly avoidable. ## Human Cargo of Graf Given Big Reception

had left Kasumigaura Aerodrome for Tokyo by special train following the arrival, brigades of engineers and inspectors, provided by the Zepplin company, swarmed over the great ship. The motors were subjected to minute inspection, the steering and stability apparatus tested and additional fuel taken aboard.
Other employees began the task of replenishing stores, and the immense quantities of mail and express packages destined for transportation across the Pacific Ocean were stored aboard.
Twenty-four hours after the zeppelin's arrival here, the ship still remains the focal point of Singapore curiosity. Throughout the day, an unceasing swarm of Japanese, anxious to see the great air monster which swept across the desolate Siberian wastes with three times the speed of the fastest train, journeyed to Kasumigaura field. Under the watchful eyes of police and air officials, they passed in a single line through the hangar, gazing in silent awe at the silver sides of the huge dirigible.
The first official receipt took place outside the Kasumigaura hangar soon after the Graf's arrival, when Japanese statesmen, aeronautical officials and about 300 guests gathered in the hangar to welcome Dr. Goetz.
Praised to speak of his brilliant achievement in floating the huge dirigible across the uncharted waters of Siberia, Dr. Goetz then addressed the crowd with characteristic modesty and paid tribute to the nations of the world which had cooperated in making the flight possible.
"All in all, taking every item I recall them in my memory, it is the most wonderful, most marvelous journey I ever had," declared Dr. Goetz. "Nothing could compare with this speedy flight over the utterly desolate regions of Siberia where little-known inhabitants still live in primitive huts, and to whom an airship is a thing of deepest mystery."
"And nothing could have been more impressive than our battle with the typhoon in our course down the Pacific of Tartar over Vulcan Bay and out into the Pacific. From the air, the island empire of Japan is one of the most beautiful sights in the world. And our reception here, where no commercial airship had touched before, is simply stupendous."

When Labels Are Literature

Most people think of canned foods as provender for the "cave-dwellers," the ever-increasing millions of people who live in apartments in our great cities, and that these people never give labels more than a glance, for Hiram Haubel, writing in "Printer's Ink" about merchandising in Alaska, throws a new light on the labeling of canned foods. Out there the labels are literature, and mighty interesting literature at that.
Recipes in Demand
"I need to wonder," he wrote, "what good is it putting so much printed matter on cans, boxes and cartons. It is small and hard to read and people never look at it. I thought, this may be true in civilization where we are all so busy, but when we get into the outskirts of civilization, where people have more time, what manufacturers print on their containers is of great importance.
"Such matter should not least about the purity of the contents, etc., but should explain how the food within should be cooked, how best preserved, how to use it, when once opened, and other useful information. Recipes are particularly welcome, as women are scarce up in this country and I venture that a large majority of the cooking is done by men. You'd be surprised to see the tasteful dishes that some of those old fellows—trappers, miners, prospectors, homesteaders, etc.—dink up by following out the recipes printed on tin cans. In out-of-the-way places where reading matter is scarce, everything in print is carefully devoured and so cans and cartons can carry very important merchandise messages on their exteriors I know—by experience."

Real Equality of Sexes Found In Radio Fields

are twenty-five different branches of radio activity open equally to men and women, all high-paying positions. As a singer her salary is as much as that of a Metropolitan Opera star. The radio, she further claims, offers a golden opportunity to the girl who has a voice but cannot afford professional training.
"I never had a lesson in my life," she confesses. "Radio singing is a new technique and you must teach yourself. A girl's voice may, indeed, be her fortune today with no need of even small capital for initial training.
"You do the song in your own way and frequently the untutored singer gets the greatest amount of fan mail. I've had hundreds of letters about a song I do frequently. 'And Especially You,' a novelty favorite, which I expressed myself as I please. Probably with much training I would not do it so naturally!"
Mrs. Mildred Hunt, known as "Radio Sweetheart", is the message she brings to other women.
"In other professions, men had a head-start while women were still in the kitchen or engaged in such ladylike jobs as teaching," she declares. "In radio we started with an equal chance. ## East Sanford

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Chopping arrived here Friday in their car from Cleveland, O., for a visit with Mr. Chopping's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Chopping, brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Chopping and sister, Miss Bessie Chopping, Mrs. Helen Chopping and Miss Alyx Chopping.
Mrs. Vestie Ransom Fay of Canton, Ala. announced the marriage of her daughter, Martha Susan Fay, to James Cyril Ashton on Monday, August 13, at Glendale, Cal. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Ada R. Hughes, 418 West Lexington Avenue, Glendale, with the Rev. W. E. Edmunds of the Glendale Presbyterian Church, officiating.
The bride, who was attended by her cousin, Mrs. J. Stuart Mills, wore white lace and tulle and carried white sweet peas, bride roses and cutting lilies. The groom was attended by H. H. Hughes. About 20 relatives and friends of the couple were present and after the ceremony a two course supper was served.
After a honeymoon at Catalina Island, Mr. and Mrs. Ashton will be at home to their friends at 248 West Wilson Avenue, Glendale, Cal. Mrs. Ashton is well known here where she resided for some time.

Fashions for the Smart Woman

THE UNEVEN HEMLINE
Now that the tea-time has gone formal, every self-respecting frock for afternoon must have its dipping hemline. Sometimes the skirt trails drawers in the back, extreme models have a long point in the front, and others lengthen panels at one or both sides. And since the irregular hemline is the distinguishing mark of the formal frock, Pictorial Review presents this model with fulness in the skirt that dips below the hemline on the side. The neckline, of course, is evenly divided, and the popular color, either of plain fabric, stands a chic contrast.
Pictorial Printed Pattern No. 4836. Sizes 14 to 42. 30 cents.

So Popular Star of Air, Who Has Tested It

New York City—Radio has opened a new professional and business field to women into which they may step as high, free and easy as any man.
Mrs. Mildred Hunt, known as "Radio Sweetheart", is the message she brings to other women.
"In other professions, men had a head-start while women were still in the kitchen or engaged in such ladylike jobs as teaching," she declares. "In radio we started with an equal chance. The result is that today there are as many successful women radio singers and executives as men. And they've won their success without the aid of sex appeal, too."
According to Miss Hunt, there

Human Cargo of Graf Given Big Reception

had left Kasumigaura Aerodrome for Tokyo by special train following the arrival, brigades of engineers and inspectors, provided by the Zepplin company, swarmed over the great ship. The motors were subjected to minute inspection, the steering and stability apparatus tested and additional fuel taken aboard.
Other employees began the task of replenishing stores, and the immense quantities of mail and express packages destined for transportation across the Pacific Ocean were stored aboard.
Twenty-four hours after the zeppelin's arrival here, the ship still remains the focal point of Singapore curiosity. Throughout the day, an unceasing swarm of Japanese, anxious to see the great air monster which swept across the desolate Siberian wastes with three times the speed of the fastest train, journeyed to Kasumigaura field. Under the watchful eyes of police and air officials, they passed in a single line through the hangar, gazing in silent awe at the silver sides of the huge dirigible.
The first official receipt took place outside the Kasumigaura hangar soon after the Graf's arrival, when Japanese statesmen, aeronautical officials and about 300 guests gathered in the hangar to welcome Dr. Goetz.
Praised to speak of his brilliant achievement in floating the huge dirigible across the uncharted waters of Siberia, Dr. Goetz then addressed the crowd with characteristic modesty and paid tribute to the nations of the world which had cooperated in making the flight possible.
"All in all, taking every item I recall them in my memory, it is the most wonderful, most marvelous journey I ever had," declared Dr. Goetz. "Nothing could compare with this speedy flight over the utterly desolate regions of Siberia where little-known inhabitants still live in primitive huts, and to whom an airship is a thing of deepest mystery."
"And nothing could have been more impressive than our battle with the typhoon in our course down the Pacific of Tartar over Vulcan Bay and out into the Pacific. From the air, the island empire of Japan is one of the most beautiful sights in the world. And our reception here, where no commercial airship had touched before, is simply stupendous."

When Labels Are Literature

Most people think of canned foods as provender for the "cave-dwellers," the ever-increasing millions of people who live in apartments in our great cities, and that these people never give labels more than a glance, for Hiram Haubel, writing in "Printer's Ink" about merchandising in Alaska, throws a new light on the labeling of canned foods. Out there the labels are literature, and mighty interesting literature at that.
Recipes in Demand
"I need to wonder," he wrote, "what good is it putting so much printed matter on cans, boxes and cartons. It is small and hard to read and people never look at it. I thought, this may be true in civilization where we are all so busy, but when we get into the outskirts of civilization, where people have more time, what manufacturers are twenty-five different branches of radio activity open equally to men and women, all high-paying positions. As a singer her salary is as much as that of a Metropolitan Opera star. The radio, she further claims, offers a golden opportunity to the girl who has a voice but cannot afford professional training.

Real Equality of Sexes Found In Radio Fields

"I never had a lesson in my life," she confesses. "Radio singing is a new technique and you must teach yourself. A girl's voice may, indeed, be her fortune today with no need of even small capital for initial training.
"You do the song in your own way and frequently the untutored singer gets the greatest amount of fan mail. I've had hundreds of letters about a song I do frequently. 'And Especially You,' a novelty favorite, which I expressed myself as I please. Probably with much training I would not do it so naturally!"

Implied Agreements

Dorothy Fooks (Lawyer and Author of "Law's Law")
A woman was working as a domestic in another woman's home. Her duties were the usual work of the ordinary domestic. For her work she was paid by the month. She also was furnished at the home and received her board.
One day, while the domestic was having her afternoon off, she remained in her room at this house. She had previously purchased some material and some frames for lamps. During her spare time she made some very pretty lamp shades. On her day off, she called on several people for whom she had worked in the past and sold her lamp shades to them.
This day while working, and this was her own time, the lady of the house dropped into her room and saw the work. She asked the domestic to make some

Greta Garbo To Be Seen Wednesday In Film Of Romance

These film fans who have been waiting breathlessly for another picture with Greta Garbo and Nils Asther, will be gratified to see the lovely "The Sign of the Cross" which opens Wednesday at the Edison Theatre at 8:15. Greta Garbo's newest offering, a highly romantic tale with musical and sound synchronization.
The filmation of the senile (Grand) Adolphe Roger, St. John Hall is the first appearance of either Miss Garbo or Asther since they scored so profoundly in "Wild Orchids" and it is a happy choice of world of admirers in the same picture brings them back before their fans.
Miss Garbo back from a lengthy vacation in Sweden, gives the finest performance of her career in this glamorous vehicle and in addition to the handsome and swarthy Asther, she also has Jimmy Mack Brown, a share leading man himself. Both Asther and Brown do tremendously fine work in their opposite roles, each splendid cast and capable of the difficult parts they portray.
This picture is one of the most dramatic emotional that is at once human and convincing. John S. Robertson, who directed the new Garbo feature from Josephine Lovell's adaptation of the novel, may be credited with rare appreciation of the sophisticated and with keen understanding of entertainment values.
