Chance for homeless vets to stand down

ST. PETERSBURG — During a weekend break from life on the streets, more than 400 homeless veterans were offered everything from waterproof parkas to medical attention.

Three men received hospital care, two for lung ailments and the other for a knee problem. Another vet, who had been living on the streets, took advantage of a phone-home service to contact his family and go home.

"I think a lot of the success stories we'll see down the road will be the people who came to grips with their problems themselves," said Marty Comer, coordinator for the three-day Stand Down Tampa Bay.

Government agencies and more than 500 volunteers staffed the spacious ThunderDome from Friday through Sunday offering meals, clothes, showers, medical, hearing and eye tests, job and housing leads and legal aid designed to help veterans make a new start.

Stand down is a military term for brief periods of rest from battle.

The first Stand Down benefit for veterans was six years ago in San Diego. Since then, 29 cities have followed suit.

St. Petersburg's event was the first of its kind in Florida. Comer said. More than 1,300 veterans live in the Tampa Bay area.

Abandoned baby freezes

PENSACOLA — A newborn clad only in a towel froze to death after being abandoned on a convent porch in 30-degree temperatures, police said.

A sister at the St. Paul Roman Catholic convent discovered the baby when she went out to get the newspaper just before 7 a.m. Sunday, said Pensacola police spokesman Brian Barton.

The baby boy was pronounced dead a few hours later at Sacred Heart Hospital, where doctors said he was exposed to cold temperatures for about two hours.

The cause of death was ruled exposure, the police spokesman said.

"It was a full-term baby, and according to the doctor, it would have been a healthy baby," he said.

Police are now asking for help in finding the mother of the white male baby, who still had his umbilical cord attached and was probably born at home. They think the mother may be a local woman familiar with the convent, which is unmarked and not on a main street, Barton said.

The sisters at the convent have asked to bury the baby if no one else claims him, said Barton.

UM medical school honored for service

MIAMI — The first award by the governing body of the nation's medical schools for service to the community has been given to the University of Miami's School of Medicine.

Miami received the award because of its wide range of outreach programs, such as breast-cancer screening, pediatric clinics and a school for children with special learning needs, according to Joyce Goldberg, assistant director of public relations at Miami's School of Medicine.

"This honor is as important to the University of Miami as any it has received," said Edward T. Foote II, president of the University of Miami.

The Award for Outstanding Community Service, the first ever given by the Association of American Medical Colleges, was presented to Miami officials at the association's annual meeting Sunday in Washington, D.C.

Miami's School of Medicine and its affiliated teaching hospital, Jackson Memorial Hospital, were chosen from among more than 40 nominated institutions by a national panel of judges.

Given special note was the work done by teams of faculty, staff and students in South Dade County after the area was flattened by Hurricane Andrew in August 1992.

Governor cuts battered wife's sentence

TALLAHASSEE — The 17-year prison sentence of a woman convicted of second-degree murder was cut to seven years by Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet after review of her claims of battered spouse syndrome.

Shalanda Burt, 22, went to prison in May 1991 for the fatal shooting of James "Rick" Fairley in Bradenton. Chiles and the Cabinet heard her clemency appeal in September.

Under a new review system set up two years ago, a panel of domestic violence experts has reviewed the cases of prisoners who claimed they killed because they saw no other way to stop being beaten.

Under the conditional clemency order released Monday, Burt should be released, from prison sometime in late 1994, according to Mark Schlakman, a lawyer for Chiles.

Ms. Burt then would be placed by the Department of Corrections in a work-release program, which means she would get a job and live at a work-release center, like a halfway house. The agency was also ordered to make sure that she receive evaluation and psychotherapy about domestic violence.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Local students miss chance to learn about school violence

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While students across Florida on Monday watched a broadcast of Gov. Lawton Chiles and Education Commissioner Betty Castor talking about ways to curb school violence, students in northern Seminole County did not participate.

One program was geared toward the early grades and another meant for middle and high schools. Most of the state's 67 districts, including its most urban ones, told the governor's office they planned to hook up to the satellite broadcast but it wasn't immediately known how many students saw the program.

According to officials at Seminole High School, satellite link ups are not possible at the school, though there are plans to include that technology in the school's new building plan.

At Lake Mary High School, they have the technology to take part in such broadcasts, but they chose not to partake in the program.

Officials to crack down on telefraud

ATLANTA — State and federal law enforcement authorities have announced a crackdown on telemarketing fraud in the Southeast.

"This is the first time civil and criminal authorities from all levels of government are committing themselves to an organized, cooperative attack on (telemarketing) fraud," said Federal Trade Commission Chairman Janet D. Steiger, who announced the effort Monday in Atlanta.

The agencies involved in the operation are the FTC, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Secret Service, Postal Inspection Service, Internal Revenue Service, Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Justice.

Also participating are state and local authorities in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

These groups on Monday held the first of nine meetings planned around the Southeast through March 1994.

"We have all realized that telemarketing fraud is more than irritating phone calls and junk mail," said Tennessee Attorney General Charles W. Burson. "It is more often profitable, sophisticated and damaging criminal activity."

"By marshaling our state and federal enforcement resources and coordinating the targeting of these operations on a regional basis, we think we can deliver a significant blow to these operations."

The officials said telemarketing fraud costs consumers nationwide about $40 billion a year.

The broadcast was to get students thinking and talking about how to deal with angry classmates and potentially explosive situations — as well as how to control themselves.

To prompt discussion, skills were shown with different endings. Scenes included a disruptive classroom, three students picking on a fourth by tossing his backpack back and forth and shoving him to the floor, and a situation that could erupt into violence, like two students bumping in a crowded hallway.

Confronting violence isn't part of any course, Castor later told a group of students at Rickards High School who serve as mentors for ninth-graders.

"We're trying to help our school districts and our schools by saying 'It's time to find the time to talk about this because this is real,'" she said.

Chiles said he and Castor wanted to push legislation next year to make schools safer and asked the Rickards students for their input.

"We know that program won't work if we don't have students being the main cornerstone," he said.

The broadcast also included a short segment on Youth Crime Watch of America, a group that started in Miami 14 years ago. The theory behind Youth Crime Watch is to create a group of students who act as a "good gang" and attract more members who all take steps against crime by reporting incidents to officials, identifying intruders and creating an atmosphere that discourages violence.

Betty Ann Good, acting executive director of the organization, said its Miami office received calls Monday from students in various parts of the state, including Palm Beach County and Tampa.

At Rickards, junior Talicia Edwards, who said she tries to make a difference, asked Chiles and Castor how to spread that kind of attitude.

"I constantly tell myself if everybody makes a difference, then sooner or later we can change the world," she said.

"Some of us are slower learners, so to speak," the governor replied, adding that positive influence can spread from person to person.

Senior Earnest Reed said students need more positive support to stay out of trouble.

"I do it to make my mom proud," he said.

Standing against peer pressure can be difficult, Chiles conceded, using the example of speaking out against a fight.

"That really is kind of the manly thing to do, but it takes a lot of courage because it's a lot easier to say 'Fight, fight' and let it go," he said. "I've been there before."

However, the purchase of guns makes getting involved a more dangerous proposition. Three days, senior Jason Merritt said.

Lawmakers this week are trying to pass a bill that lets police seize firearms from anyone under 18 who isn't hunting or engaged in marksmanship practice, but state law already makes it a third-degree felony to have a gun at school.

A helping hand toward learning

The Sanford Noon Rotary Club has donated $1,000 toward the purchase of "The Voyage of the Mimi" by Idyllwild Elementary School. The multi-media program uses videodiscs, computer software and print materials to teach students math, science, social studies and language arts.

Once the school is able to buy the program, they will share it with other Sanford elementary schools as well. Earlier this week, principal Carolyn Towles accepted a check from Rotary president George Wallace to help with the purchase.

Mobile homeowners unite

ZELLWOOD — Unhappy over spiraling rental costs for lots, many mobile home owners are getting together and buying out their parks and trailer communities.

The homeowners form cooperatives, which run the mobile home parks more economically. This usually results in lower rents, better service and greater protection for the future.

Big national companies began buying mobile home parks as investments in the 1980s. Rents were increased to drive up profits, and home owners then began feeling the squeeze.

In the 1990s, many park owners seem willing to sell if they can get a good price, said Orlando lawyer Lee Jay Colling, who provides legal advice on such transactions.

An increasing number of Florida's 820,000 mobile home owners are taking advantage of the situation.

"Interest is incredible," said

Charity Cicardo, executive director of the Florida Federation of Mobile Home Owners.

The buy-out by residents of the sprawling community brought an immediate reduction in housing costs because a nonprofit co-op can operate less expensively. Resident-ownership also protects against rent increases, prevents a park sale to outsiders and provides local control of rules, regulations and services.

Several vehicles burglarized

Sheriff's deputies investigated five separate vehicular burglaries reported within a short period of time Saturday, in Sweetwater Country Club Estates, near Longwood. The burglaries were reported to vehicles parked on Sweetwater Club Blvd. and Magnolia Lake Drive. A cashiers check for $1,150 was reportedly taken from one vehicle. Another owner reported a purse with $275 in currency and other items was missing. A $1,000 car phone was taken from one vehicle, and an $800 car phone from another. A compact disc player valued at $120 was reported missing from the fifth vehicle.

Walking with loot

Sanford police arrested Gregory C. Buettner, 28, with no local address, on Sunday. Police said they saw him walking on 10th Street, carrying a weed wacker and tool box, valued at $750. When they questioned Buettner, the arrest report said he admitted taking the items in a residential burglary, and took officers to a residence in the 1400 block of Valencia Street where the home owner identified the items. Buettner was charged with burglary to an occupied dwelling and grand theft.

Shoplifting

Longwood police arrested Constance E. Dupree, 30, of Altamonte Springs, at a store on S.R. 434 Saturday. According to the arrest report, she had been seen hiding items valued at $16.93 in her purse. When two security officers attempted to stop her, police said she attempted to bite one man, choked another, and struck both of them with her flats before officers arrived. Dupree was charged with robbery.

Drugs and money

Longwood police arrested Bobby G. Stokes, 39, of Altamonte Springs, on C.R. 427 Saturday. Officers said they were alerted to suspected drug activities, and found Stokes in a parking lot. A K-9 dog was called in, discovering that Stokes was hiding a substance in his pants. Police said they also confiscated $1,211 in currency. Stokes was charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell.

Disorderly Intoxication

Sheriff's deputies arrested Thomas Eugene Green, 31, 2875 Midway Drive, Sanford, at an establishment on highway 17-92 in Fern Park Sunday. Deputies said he had been causing problems with other patrons. He was charged with disorderly intoxication.

Incidents reported to the sheriff

●Speakers and a speaker box valued at $520 were reportedly stolen Saturday from a garage on Queensbridge Drive, in Greenwood Lakes near Lake Mary.

●An undetermined amount of office equipment was reported stolen Sunday from a business in the 200 block of Valentine Way near Longwood.

●A grey 1992 Suzuki was reportedly stolen Saturday from an auto dealership on U.S. Highway 17-92 south of Sanford.

●$540 in basketball cards were reportedly stolen Saturday from an apartment in Pebble Creek Apartments near Lake Mary.

●A residential burglary was reported Sunday on Sun Lake Loop, near Lake Mary. Deputies said some black magic type drawings had been made on the kitchen floor, and eggs had been mixed with tabasco sauce.

●Speakers valued at $100 were reportedly stolen in a vehicular burglary over the weekend in the 900 block of Framingham Court, near Lake Mary.

Incidents reported to Sanford police

●$100 in meat and other food was reportedly stolen Saturday from a freezer in a residence in the 1700 block of W. 4th Street.

●A silver 1986 Dodge 4-door station wagon was reportedly stolen from an auto dealership parking lot on S. Orlando Drive Saturday.

●A radio and camera equipment were reportedly stolen Saturday in the vicinity of a vehicle in a parking lot in the 300 block of N. French Avenue.

●A number of items were reportedly stolen Sunday in a residential burglary in the 1700 block of Ridgewood Lane.

●A lawn mower, 18-speed bike, and smaller bike were reportedly stolen Saturday from a storage shed in the 2400 block of S. Park Avenue.

●The National Guard Armory building, 913 E. First Street was reportedly burglarized Saturday. Entry was made by breaking open a window. Nothing was immediately determined to be missing.

●A cassette player and jewelry were reportedly stolen Saturday from a residence on Meadow Hills Drive, in Hidden Lake.

●$450 in items were reportedly stolen in burglary Friday in the 800 block of Catalina Drive.

●Property in excess of $392 was reportedly stolen Sunday from a garage in the 100 block of W. 20th Street.

●A lawn mower was reportedly taken Friday from a residence in the 1400 block of W. 15th Street.

●Jewelry and other items valued at $360 were reportedly stolen Friday from a home in Seminole Gardens Apartments.

Rap group asks Supreme Court to permit parodies

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The rap group 2 Live Crew is asking the Supreme Court to rule that copyright holders cannot ban song parodies such as the rappers' raunchy takeoff of the rock 'n' roll classic "Oh, Pretty Woman."

But the song's copyright owner maintains the group is only trying to cash in on the enduring popularity of Roy Orbison's 1964 hit.

Comedy groups and satirists are lining up against songwriters and copyright owners in the dispute over when a parody of a song is a "fair use" that does not require the owner's permission.

The two sides will be heard by the justices in formal arguments today, but a ruling is not expected for months, perhaps not until July.

If copyright owners can prohibit parodies of their work, "the world of both political discourse and musical fun may be impoverished," political satirist Mark Russell and the Capitol Steps comedy group said in a friend-of-the-court brief.

But lawyers for singer-songwriters Michael Jackson and Dolly Parton maintain copyright owners have the right to control fundamental changes in their songs.

Fair use does not allow someone to "take the heart or essence of a copyrighted song, to substitute ... coarse or vulgar lyrics, and to justify the distortion by calling it parody," added papers filed by the estates of Cole Porter and George and Ira Gershwin.

The 2 Live Crew parody uses much of the Orbison song's music and the first line of lyrics: "Pretty woman, walking down the street." Then it deviates to "big hairy woman," "bald-headed woman" and "two-timin' woman."

The group told the Orbison song's copyright owner, Acuff-Rose Music in Nashville, Tenn., that it planned to use the song and pay a copyright fee. Acuff-Rose said it would not allow use of the song, but 2 Live Crew released the recording on its 1989 album "As Clean As They Wanna Be."

Acuff-Rose sued, claiming copyright infringement. A federal judge in Nashville ruled for 2 Live Crew, saying its version was intended to poke fun at the original song.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, saying the parody's "blatantly commercial purpose" prevented it from being a fair use of the Orbison song.

The rap group's Supreme Court appeal said its parody does not harm the value of the original song.

"The purpose of the parody was to mock the banality of white-centered rock 'n' roll music by attacking one of its time-honored ballads," 2 Live Crew's lawyers said in court papers.

Defense: wife angered by insensitive lovemaking

By ANNE GEARAN
Associated Press Writer

MANASSAS, Va. — A woman who cut off her husband's penis was upset over his insensitive lovemaking and only later claimed rape; a defense lawyer argued at the start of the husband's sexual assault trial.

Gregory Murphy, attorney for John Wayne Bobbitt, read portions of Lorena Bobbitt's statement to police in which she complained her husband was a selfish lover who "always has orgasm and he never waits for me to have one."

In the same statement, Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, complained her husband had initiated sex without taking off all her clothes.

"That does not sound like the statement of a woman who has been raped," Murphy said.

Mrs. Bobbitt sobbed as she testified Monday, the first time she had faced her husband since the June 23 incident.

She said her 26-year-old husband pinned her to the bed and forced her to have sex with him before falling asleep. Afterward, she said, she became angry, grabbed a knife from the kitchen and returned to the bedroom.

"I lifted the sheets and I cut it," she said. Mrs. Bobbitt severed two-thirds of her husband's penis.

Mrs. Bobbitt faces trial Nov. 29 on a malicious wounding charge. Each spouse could get 20 years in prison.

The prosecutor told the jury of nine women and three men that Bobbitt, a former Marine, frequently forced his wife to have sex.

The defense said the sex was consensual and claimed Mrs. Bobbitt is mainly concerned with making money from the highly publicized case.

"That's what this case is about," Murphy said.

Bobbitt has made no public statement since his arrest. Mrs. Bobbitt has granted two interviews. The Bobbitts, who married four years ago, are seeking a divorce.

Mrs. Bobbitt described how she fled the couple's Manassas apartment still clutching the penis and the fillet knife. She said she realized she was still holding the organ midway between the apartment and the salon where she works as a manicurist.

"I screamed and I threw it" out of the car window, she said.

Police found it on a grassy corner. The organ was packed in ice and taken to a hospital, where it was reattached in a nine-hour operation. Doctors say Bobbitt is recovering well.

"The only way to make this joint more energy efficient was to wave some green stuff in his face."

It was a bitter pill to swallow. He didn't realize that most homes over a year old could take advantage of FPL's free Home

Energy Survey and cash incentives. "Get this," I told him, "FPL will give your home a real once-over to uncover ways to reduce your electric bill. Plus they offer cash incentives to help pay for energy-saving improvements. But you gotta call FPL

Warning: Con men want your money

Unsuspecting people, mostly senior citizens, are being robbed. People who appear to be well-meaning can wipe out their life savings in just a day.

The problem is what is commonly referred to as a "scam." It is done by phone, in person, and at times by mail. It is illegal, but often hard to detect.

It's not difficult to avoid being taken by a scam artist. Simply shy away from any deal that promises to make a person rich in a short period of time.

Don't trust anyone who offers wealth or any other prosperity which may sound too good to be true. It will provide wealth, but only for the person conducting the scam.

An 87-year-old Sanford woman was almost bilked out of $5,000 recently. Someone convinced her it was tax she would be required to pay after winning a $50,975 prize. Because a bank official became suspicious, the scam was averted. Had no one noticed, the woman could have lost the $5,000.

A Casselberry woman was reportedly contacted in the same scam attempt. This bilking was done by telephone.

There are other scams which may be done in person. Someone comes to your door and offers to re-roof your home for an unusually low price. You may listen to a sad story of how he has a starving wife and sick children to support. Feeling sorry, you may give in, and hand over a down payment. That's the last you will see of the money.

Organizations that identify themselves as charitable, some even indicating they are connected with a local group, may send a letter or make a phone call requesting a donation.

In most of these cases, the contributor will never know how the donation was spent, or whether or not it even served any charity at all.

Judging from the success of the Florida Lottery, Florida is packed with people who yearn to obtain instant wealth. It makes them an easy target for scam artists, and easy prey to lose their life savings.

Senior citizens are among the biggest targets. Perhaps the scammers believe they are the easiest to convince of a rapid-profit investment.

On the other hand, maybe they believe seniors are no longer clear-thinkers.

If someone offers an opportunity to get rich quickly, report it to a law enforcement agency. In doing so you may stop the scheme and prevent others from being hurt.

But above all, don't allow yourself to be taken in.

Poor judgment

I am appalled by the poor judgment and lack of caring exhibited by the Sanford Optimist Club and the Sanford Herald on Saturday, Oct. 30th. Despite a sure forecast of torrential rains and the possibility of tornadoes, they refused to postpone the Seminole County High School Band Festival. Even worse, once the deluge began, they continued! This senseless act exposed six courageous bands to the possibility of an economic and health disaster. The sponsors refused to realize the havoc they were inducing with the potential loss of uniforms, music, and damaged instruments.

Each band struggles under an annual operating budget as high as $50,000, with a pitance from the Seminole School Board that does not even cover the price of music. The majority of band funding comes from the hard work of the students, parents, and teachers. Uniforms are expensive and hats alone can be $100. Water damaged instruments can cost hundreds to repair. I think the Optimists should get some reality therapy by making a sizable donation to each band to defray the damages caused in the name of their "fund raising."

Gun control won't stop violent crime

My mom lived in what was once a safe middle-class neighborhood, 17 blocks from the U.S. Capitol. She moved out a year-and-a-half ago, after a drug-related shooting took place no more than 100 yards from her front stoop.

Like many residents of Washington, D.C., my mom felt like a prisoner in her own home. She rarely would go out after dark, unless she had an escort. She kept her doors and windows locked (even when the air conditioning went out one particularly warm summer evening).

And, oh yes, she kept a pistol near her bed, next to her Bible.

The rash of violent crime that plagues Washington, that imbues its residents with a palpable fear of victimization, has reached crisis proportions. If the city's murderous form holds, it will record more than 450 homicides this year. That would be enough carnage for Washington to retain its infamous title as "the murder capital of America."

Of course, violent crime is hardly confined to Washington, D.C. It is a nationwide epidemic. This is borne out by FBI numbers that show that, over the past 10 years, America's violent crime rate has escalated from 538 to 758 incidents per 100,000 people.

So what do the politicians propose to do to stop the carnage? Pass more gun control laws. As if that will make more than a negligible difference in the number of gun-related slayings.

America already has more than 20,000 gun control laws on the books. They hardly have kept guns out of the hands of criminals. They hardly have prevented violent crimes.

Washington Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly was smart enough to realize that her city's rather stringent gun control law did little to slow the pace of homicides. So she recently asked President Clinton to call out the National Guard.

The mayor's request was denied (as well it should have been: the National Guard is ill-equipped to fight urban crime). So Washington residents are left wondering what to do since it is clear that the city cannot provide adequate protection from the violent criminals who are terrorizing their neighborhoods.

A lot of Washington residents are following the example of my mom. They're moving out of unsafe neighborhoods and arming themselves against the urban terrorists. Never mind the city law that makes gun ownership illegal without a difficult-to-obtain permit from the government. Mayor Kelly has a problem with this. She says that residents who keep a gun at home are breaking the law. "What do you do?" my mom retorts. "Stand by like sheep and wait for the wolves to slaughter you?"

These are the words of a woman who not only is a hard-core member of the Democratic Party, but also a dyed-in-the-wool liberal. She voted for Kelly. She voted for Clinton. But she doesn't vote for gun control.

There are a lot of liberal folks in Washington, D.C., in New York City, in Los Angeles who -- borrowing the line from Public Interest editor Irving Kristol -- have been been "mugged by reality."

She moved out over a year ago, after a shooting took place no more than 100 yards from her front stoop.

Policy forges new partnership

Mega-buck media deals, clean cars of the future and expanding world trade are all connected by a new theme being advanced by the Clinton administration. The linkage, with the environment playing a key role, is industrial policy, the idea of government and business working in parallel rather than as perpetually wary adversaries.

Japan wrote the book on industrial policy with aggressive government actions helping to open a cascade of foreign sales for domestic products.

The Clinton administration has embraced industrial policy more tentatively, aware of the pitfalls when bureaucrats pick winners and losers in a free market economy.

Yet the media merger craze is a bet that the government-financed main arteries of the optical fiber information superhighway can soon be extended into millions of homes. Mr. Clinton's recently announced partnership between the government and Detroit's Big Three automakers to develop an 80 mpg car is another facet of industrial policy. So, too, is the administration's shifting of tens of millions of dollars from defense research to high-tech commercial applications with a strong emphasis on environmental innovation.

The policy is also being tested in export trade promotion, with a decided environmental bent.

It's a good choice. The market for environmental equipment is a new global industry, one in which U.S. firms often have the competitive advantage of experience and advanced techniques drawn from compliance with our own laws to combat pollution. To be sure, the global need for environmental investment outstrips the means to finance it. The blight to air, land and water in the former communist nations is the bleakest case in point. But of necessity, developed and developing nations are finding that environmental investment must go forward to either maintain the progress they've made or to keep from being mired in waste and pollution from the new industrialization under way.

The industry is so new, in fact, that economists have no standard way of quantifying it. The latest estimate, from Environmental Business International, puts the global environmental industry at $295 billion in 1992 with an expected 44 percent increase to $426 billion by 1997.

The Clinton administration is trying out its fledgling industrial policy by probing how effectively it can help U.S. business reach the new environmental market, particularly in Asia. The program has a $100 million budget under the Agency for International Development (AID). It's called the U.S.-Asia Environmental Partnership (US-AEP).

Asia was chosen for two reasons. First, at an annual clip of 8 percent, it has the world's highest rate of sustained economic growth over the past decade. "As a region, it also has the highest rate of environmental degradation," says Lewis P. Reade, US-AEP director. The environmental costs are now due on rapid urbanization, an explosion in chemical-dependent farming, and "logging and timbering, mining coal, mining other ores, oil and gas production, and the sea-borne transport of all these things," Reade says. Added to this, "you've got rising incomes, growth of middle classes, and a democratic push of the voice of the people to do something about the environment."

Thailand, for example, expects to spend $10 billion over the next decade on basic pollution control infrastructure. Over the next six years Taiwan expects to spend $40 billion on environmental investments.

US-AEP's approach is straightforward. Offices have been set up in nine Asian cities to keep track of pending government and private sector environmental projects. That information is relayed to appropriate U.S. firms. US-AEP also assists with direct contacts, product demonstrations and a network of financing sources from the U.S. Export-Import Bank to some 1,200 private banks with export experience.

Linking U.S. environmental firms with development needs abroad is a new role for AID. It's particularly useful, as Grant Ferrier of Environmental Business International explains, because many firms take the "Yankee pride attitude of, 'We're the best, they'll come and find that out.' But in the competitive globalization of the economy, marketing and positioning are almost as important as technology and experience."

It's a small step exploring what industrial policy may accomplish, but an important one blending economic strength at home with the need for environmental progress abroad.

The linkage, with the environment playing a key role, is industrial policy.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Putting family before football

I've seldom enjoyed a brouhaha more than the oil slick created when Houston Oilers right tackle David Williams played hooky from football recently to stay with his wife and newborn baby.

Let me say right up front that I didn't immediately side with Williams, except on his decision to be with his wife during her labor and the birth -- which the Oilers brass had already given him permission to do.

Asking him to catch up with the team later. While I believe without argument that dads owe their families lots of time all year-round, except in circumstances beyond their control, Williams makes a lot of money to play a very few football games a year. I didn't think it unreasonable that the Oilers asked him to come play one of those games the day after his son was born.

And once the righteous indignation of columnists and commentators who couldn't believe the audacity of those ruffians who would TEAR A NEWBORN BABY RIGHT FROM HIS FATHER'S ARMS!!!! cleared away, we were left with an absorbing portrait of just how much attitudes about fatherhood have changed over the last couple of decades.

I was surprised at the unwillingness of younger men I talked with to find fault with Williams, who is 27 years old. But I'll never be sure if they really sided with him, or thought women might flay them alive if they didn't give the politically correct response. I thought it might just be a sign of their generation, a contrast to Dallas Cowboys' owner Jerry Jones, 51, whose son said he was "pretty" sure that in a life-or-death situation, his father would choose him over football, although "it'd depend on the game."

Also a hug removed from Williams' generation is Oilers' offensive line coach Bob Young, 51, who compared the situation to being called up to war and refusing to go. "My wife told me she was having a baby and I said, Honey, I've got to go play a football game," Young, a former NFL star, was quoted as saying in The New York Times. He added: "David ... let the guys down, and he let hundreds of thousands of fans down."

Over and over again, I heard men talking like the Alan Alda-types a lot of women have been saying they wanted (at least when it comes to some things, like having kids) for the last 20 years. I hoped these men had not only begun to talk the talk, but were also walking the walk. It's one thing for a generation of men to graduate from pacing outside the waiting room to experiencing birth with their wives, and another for them to commit that kind of time to a child until it's grown.

Another conversation -- unrelated but occurring in the middle of the Williams discussions -- gives me hope. A 42-year-old friend, a divorced father sharing custody in the same city as his ex-wife, tells me that his 13-year-old son came home from school one day and thanked him for not moving away like his friends' divorced dads.

The father said, "One of them just spends a few weeks in the summer with his dad, and the other one sees his dad every couple of months. I told him, Son, there's no way I'd move. You're the most important thing in my life, and nothing could keep me away from you."

The boy's father, a popular television broadcaster, could probably make twice the money he makes by moving to a larger market.

May you live long and prosper, Scot Cooper Williams. May you grow to be as tall and strong as your dad, and may he teach you the pleasures of responsibility to family and dedication to work ... and the wisdom to keep them in balance.

We were left with an absorbing portrait of just how much attitudes about fatherhood have changed.

Road

 "We're in negotiations with the contractor," said Ely. "We've not reached any agreement with regards to settlement."

 Ely went on to say the state is committed to completing the expressway on time.

 "This is a bonded project," said Ely. "We have a covenant, a promise, with the bondholders to open the road to traffic by February 1994."

The state notified White in July they were delinquent for falling behind schedule on their work. Punitive actions against White have not been imposed because the company appealed the notices. No hearings are scheduled on the appeals.

White is now more than a month behind their approved completion date. Although White was to have completed all work Sept. 20, they had completed about 90 percent of their roadbed fill work as of Oct. 29, the latest report available from the construction offices in Casselberry. Ely said White is being fined $6,500 daily for missing the completion deadline.

Jeffrey Spencer, White office manager, said company officials had no comment.

While the delinquent notices are on appeal, White has been awarded a $5.7 million contract to perform state road work in the Panhandle. If formally declared delinquent - even after they complete the work - White would be prevented from bidding on future state projects for the period they were delinquent.

The signs of accelerated work are evident. White trucks began hauling dirt out of the Excavated Products pit Monday. Gary Buddenhagen, county borrow pit reviewer, said Excavated Products officials met with county staff Oct. 13 to discuss what conditions must be met before work could start.

The October meeting followed two years of inactivity due to Geneva citizen opposition to the pit proposal. Seminole County commissioners granted Excavated Products a two-year extension of their operating permit due to the appeal process June 22. Excavated Products has received approval to dig a 55-acre pit, but must dig it in two phases after assurances are made there are no adverse environmental impacts.

Care

The supervision of the Agency on Aging. It includes a network of agencies and dedicated businesses who have joined forces to allow the Goldboro Site to open without expending a single state or federal dollar.

"It is a beautiful collaborative effort," Sue Allbee, director of the Agency on Aging, said. "The community is pulling together for the elderly in west Sanford."

The focus of the program, Allbee said, is to provide services, nutrition and health programs and wellness education in underserved minority and low income neighborhoods.

"We believe there was a great need for this program in the Goldboro and West Sanford areas," she said. "This is something they really need to be provided."

An added benefit extended to the Sanford seniors in this program will be the Project CARE mobile medical clinic which made its Seminole debut at this morning's grand opening.

The mobile clinic, which is known as the Medi-Bus, is a community outreach project that brings health care education, prevention and early intervention services to senior citizens, particularly those who have difficulty traveling for medical care.

"Some people just can't get out, be it because of lack of transportation or because of their health, to get the preventive kinds of medical treatment they need to stay healthy," said Renee Kopkowski, public relations specialist with Florida Hospital, one of the sponsors of the Medi-Bus.

The bus is already serving the medical needs of the elderly in Bradford, Orange and Ocala counties.

According to Kopkowski, the bus will spend one week a month in each of the counties.

"We look forward to serving Seminole County, too," she said.

Duany

he suggested removing inspections of multi-family buildings, as the HPB had determined these items were already considered in present city zoning.

Two sections of the five point occupancy standards area were also eliminated. Those included a stipulation that the construction of new multi-family buildings not be permitted, and a requirement that existing and/or original single-family buildings shall remain single family. Stubbs said these matters were already contained in city codes.

Another section had one sentence eliminated, dealing with additions of garages. The remaining portion however, drew some comments. It would have stated that "Existing porches shall not be enclosed, nor shall existing garages be converted to residential use."

City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan objected. "You mean to tell me that this would prohibit someone from screening in a front porch? I don't think that's right. What about screening against mosquitoes, are we going to prohibit that?"

Stubbs and other commissioners discussed the matter, and it was decided that it could be left in the proposal, but the city would eventually have to make a determination whenever a request was presented.

The appeals process for variances or special changes was also discussed. The commission determined that it would handle all objections made to an action regarding the codes made by the Historic Preservation Board.

Marder explained that an appeal charge would be approximately $250. "I'm absolutely against that," McClanahan said. "People have enough expense when they are remodeling a home. They don't need to spend that much for an appeal."

McClanahan suggested lowering the price to a minimum. Other commissioners agreed. Marder said he would work on the proposal.

A third section dealing with apartment buildings was also eliminated for the same reason.

In the maintenance standards, all nine items were stricken from the proposal. Some dealt with such matters as not allowing shopping carts on private property, or the number of yard sales which could be held per year. "Not that these aren't necessary," Stubbs said, "but they are not architectural guidelines, and should not be included in these code changes."

Most of the items are already in the city ordinances.

One matter, which suggested, "Grass shall not exceed a maximum height of five inches," was discussed at length. The present city codes prohibit grass from being over 12 inches in height, and weeds no more than 18 inches.

"I'd like to see that height lowered for the entire city, not just the residential area we are talking about," said Commissioner Lon Howell.

Several of the commissioners agreed. They instructed City Manager Bill Simmons to give the matter some consideration and draft a proposal which may bring that change about city-wide.

All of Duany's proposed managing standards were also stricken. "Again," Stubbs explained, "these are not architectural matters, and the city may wish to take some of these matters up separately."

Following a consensus vote that the matters discussed were important to the plan, Simmons was instructed to begin preparing a first draft of the changes, to be presented for another commission work session, possibly by the Nov. 22 commission meeting.

Simmons said the matter would be pursued based on a belief that Duany would agree to the changes suggested by the city. "We've tried to contact him several times," he said, "and we're still working on that, but I believe he will go along with this."

she responded. "You bet I'll win, if I can find someone to help get me out onto that canoe." She added, "I've won before and I'll do it again."

"She's been entering the canoe races at these games since she turned 92," said Katie Moncrief, who was assisting in the event. Katie's Landing supplied the canoes for the event, which was sponsored by the American Red Cross.

Because she could not see much, Katie Moncrief paddled a canoe a short distance in front of her, decked out in a bright yellow life jacket which Peggy could see and follow.

Russell Moncrief followed the boat in case it encountered any difficulties.

When she crossed the finish line, spectators and other participants stood in a round of applause. Her time for the course was 4 minutes, 05 seconds. This is in comparison with the fastest time recorded for the same spring lap, 1:11:22, by Russell Moncrief, who won his age group.

For the first time, the races were held in Lake Carolla, behind the Sanford Museum, just east of the Sanford Civic Center. In past years, the event was held outside of the city. Many participants expressed delight at the excellent lake area on which to compete in the races.

Each canoeist ran the course singularly, scored on the basis of timing.

Following the oldest age groups, the limits diminished through the women's classification, then the men began their runs.

Each run was only one lap around a course marked on Lake Carolla with bouys.

Following the sprint competition, the slalom got underway, again with each canoeist making the single round alone, this time having to negotiate back and forth among the bouys.

Scores for all of the canoe and other events held Monday are contained in today's edition of the Sanford Herald, Page 6A.

Beam Up Beautiful Nails At Star Tek Nails

In a galaxy not so far away, a spaceship hovers above the land. It has been traveling at some great speed, but suddenly stopped as if something had gone terribly wrong. No movement comes from within. Suddenly, a woman's blood-curdling scream can be heard in every corner of the galaxy. A door opens and a woman appears clutching her hand. What sort of alien force has caused such pain? What horrible torture could her hand have gone through? She steps slowly into the light and holds her hand out for a better view. She begins sobbing at the damage that has been done to her perfect hand. As the light reflects off her long, carefully polished red nails it is evident that the nail on her ring finger has been broken. Once again that alien force that causes women to break a nail by guiding her hand to hit a surface at an exact calculated speed and force has struck. No one is safe from this ever present monster of nature - not in another galaxy or here on earth.

Star Tek Nails started its existence in July, 1993 when Vickie Christoffer opened a business based on two of her greatest loves - doing nails and Star Trek. Her business started in the rental store in Pinecrest Shopping Center. When she is not creating beautiful nails, she can be found at monthly Star Trek meetings where she holds the fictitious position of First Officer with the rank of Commander, through a national organization, the local chapter (ship) being the Solar Queen II.

Her club raises monies for various children's charities. For Star Tek Nails, Vickie decided to become the captain of her own ship and landed her craft at its new location at 2617-B French Ave. (next to Cablevision) in mid-October of 1993. She has enlisted a new "crew member", Dory McConnell, to help with the growing demands of her clients.

Star Tek Nails offers many of the same services that can be found at other nail salons throughout the universe, but be prepared to spot a few U.F.O.'s Translation - U-identified F-ingernail O-rnamentations. There is nothing alien about tips with acrylic overlay, fills, manicures, and pedicures offered in a friendly, relaxed environment. Vickie and Dory go that extra light year of a mile by using a drill for faster, smoother nails and by making their prime directive the customer's satisfaction. Look over there! It's a U.F.O.! Vickie has placed her love of Star Trek and NFL Football into special nail designs.

Star Tek Nails has beamed into Sanford for future nail adventures. Whether you're off on an away mission or your plans include quiet time in your own quarters, call us at 321-7336. Fly in for a visit at the new location Monday - Friday 9am - 7pm and Saturday 9am - 6pm. So when earthly disasters strike your nails, beam on over to Star Tek Nails and see for yourself that they are truly the "best in the galaxy".

A Bad Day Fishin' Is Better Than A Good Day At Work!

The sign reads "Gone Fishin'". After all these years you think I'd know better. It was a gorgeous day, business was slow, and just last week he told me about how he'd discovered the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp. He said it had been there for 25 years and on a whim he decided to stop in and see what it had to offer an old fishing buff. Sure, he was expecting the usual stuff, but he was also in for a few surprises.

He went to the fish camp located under the Osteen Bridge and found some of what he'd imagined. There were wild shiners, live bait, a full line of fishing tackle, and professional fishing help. He also noticed the usual food, beer, cold drinks, and ice that most of these places stock. Of course, they also had boat rentals.

From the start, he noticed that this place was somehow unique and just a little different from all the others. For instance, the professional fishing help you're offered by Eddie Bussard and Dell Abernethy, who have 13 years experience each on the St. Johns River. The Sanford native of 31 years was a professional fisherman for 10 years, fishing bassmasters tour trail for 4 years, and a fishing guide on the St. Johns River for 13 years. Eddie Bussard, new manager, provides services as your bass guide or for information as to where the fish are biting.

At first glance, my friend thought that the food items were the same as all the other places. When he looked a little closer, he noticed that the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp has a really good lunch menu that includes hot and cold sandwiches, as well as snacks. There's no shortage of beverages as they offer coffee, cold beer, wine, and soft drinks. As for the boat rentals, I'd have to say that he was impressed to see 15 foot Johnson boats with 9.9 Mariner motors. Rent one of the boats and you'll notice that the fish camp is located away from the main traffic on the St. Johns River. Bring the family out for a day of fun and see Florida as it used to be, complete with gators, blue herons, and bald eagles.

My fishing buddy was happy to find out that the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp has a bass fishing tournament the first Sunday of the month. They even have a riverfront trailer for rent by the day or week just in case you feel like getting away from it all for a while.

If you're looking for something fun to do, then go to the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp at 4255 Peninsula Pt. (Celery Ave. and SR 415) where you can fish or just enjoy yourself while you learn the history of the St. Johns River. If you can't find something, don't be shy. Just ask them and they'll get it for you if they can. If you have any questions just call 322-3825. You're probably asking yourself why I'm telling you this story rather than being out there fishing. Well, you see I left my keys in my buddy's office and the next thing I know he's gone fishin'. So now my keys are locked in there and I'm stuck out here and he's probably having the time of his life. I guess I'll just have to wait here until he comes back. I sure hope he doesn't rent that trailer and stay forever. No sense in you worrying about me. You go and have a great time and if you see a guy with brown hair in his middle 30's wearing an old fishing hat tell him I need to get my keys out of his office. Thanks!

5 films, 1 hit: 'The Remains of the Day'

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — "The Remains of the Day," an elegant drama set in England on the eve of World War II, opened strongly at the box office, outdoing by some measures such low-brow fare as "Look Who's Talking Now."

"Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas" was the No. 1 movie over the weekend, making $7.7 million in its fourth week of release, while "Remains of the Day," playing in just a few theaters, made $1.5 million. Exhibitor Relations Co. reported Monday.

The film about a butler's devotion stars Anthony Hopkins and Emma Thompson. Although it finished 13th overall, glowing reviews and strong word-of-mouth may give it the same success enjoyed by last year's "Howards End," which had the same co-stars and was produced by the same team.

"Remains of the Day," one of five film debuts over the weekend, averaged $11,000 per theater location. By comparison, the sequel "Look Who's Talking Now" made $4 million in its premiere for sixth place, but averaged an anemic $2,165 per theater location.

The worst debut was that of "A Home of Our Own." The family drama starring Kathy Bates made a weak $808,000 for 17th place.

"Flesh and Bone," a thriller starring Meg Ryan and husband Dennis Quaid, opened at No. 2 with $4.5 million. "Robocop 3" made $4.3 million in its first weekend for third place.

Here are weekend's top 20 films, according to Exhibitor Relations. Estimated ticket sales are from Friday through Sunday, with distributor, weekend gross, number of North American theater locations, average per location, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on actual receipts and projections where actual figures were not available.

1. "Tim Burton's The Nightmare Before Christmas" Disney, $7.7 million, 1,671 locations, $4,599 per location, $26.7 million, four weeks.
2. "Flesh and Bone," Paramount, $4.5 million, 1,200 locations, $3,764 per location, $4.5 million, one week.
3. "Robocop 3," Orion, $4.3 million, 1,796 locations, $2,397 per location, $4.3 million, one week.
4. "Cool Runnings," Disney, $4.2 million, 1,741 locations, $2,434 per location, $43.6 million, six weeks.
5. "The Beverly Hillbillies," 20th Century Fox, $4.1 million, 1,830 locations, $2,256 per location, $30.8 million, four weeks.
6. "Look Who's Talking Now," TriStar, $4 million, 1,858 locations, $2,165 per location, $4 million, one week.
7. "Rudy," TriStar, $3.1 million, 1,465 locations, $2,083 per location, $15.4 million, four weeks.
8. "Demolition Man," Warner Bros., $3 million, 1,601 locations, $1,870 per location, $30 million, five weeks.
9. "Malice," Columbia, $2.7 million, 1,458 locations, $1,882 per location, $40.4 million, six weeks.
10. "Fatal Instinct," MGM, $2.2 million, 1,886 locations, $1,166 per location, $6.9 million, two weeks.
11. "Fearless," Warner Bros., $2 million, 749 locations, $2,635 per location, $3.8 million, four weeks.
12. "The Joy Luck Club," Disney, $1.8 million, 600 locations, $3,028 per location, $24.3 million, nine weeks.
13. "The Remains of the Day," Columbia, $1.5 million, 94 locations, $16,266 per location, $1.5 million, one week.
14. "Gettysburg," New Line, $976,000, 248 locations, $3,935 per location, $5.9 million, five weeks.
15. "Sleepless in Seattle," TriStar, $903,000, 670 locations, $1,347 per location, $121.9 million, 20 weeks.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask. "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE" with purchase of $3. Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.
11. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, mark them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!

Cigarettes blamed for most strokes

By PAUL HARRISON
AP Science Editor

ATLANTA — A 10-year study of more than 22,000 healthy male doctors found that smokers were twice as likely as nonsmokers to have strokes, which kill or disable a half million Americans each year.

A separate study by the same researchers found that women survivors of heart attacks or strokes could cut their risks of further trouble by eating spinach, carrots and other fruits and vegetables with vitamins C, E and B-2 and beta carotene.

Both studies were presented Monday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association.

The first study found that those who smoked less than a pack of cigarettes per day had 1.8 times the risk of nonsmokers; those who smoked more had 2.4 times the risk, said Dr. JoAnn Manson of Harvard Medical School.

The study "just re-emphasizes the terrible product that tobacco is," said Dr. James Moller, the heart association's president. "The American public should demand some action in terms of more regulation."

The study provided good news for smokers who decide to quit. It found that former smokers' risk of strokes declined quickly after they quit. Within a few years, former smokers' risks were as low as those who had never smoked.

"Less is known about preventing strokes than preventing heart disease, so finding a modifiable risk factor is important," Manson said.

In the study of vitamin-rich diets in women, the researchers found that those whose diet included the most vitamins A and C and beta carotene had a 33 percent lower risk of heart attack and a 71 percent lower risk of strokes, the researchers found.

"A modification of diet may have a dramatic effect on subsequent risk of heart disease," even in women in their 60s who might think it's too late to cut their risks, Manson said.

"The bottom line is it's never too late to eat more fruits and vegetables," she said. Spinach and carrots are potent sources of antioxidants, and citrus fruits are good sources of vitamin C.

"These are exciting new observations," Moller said. He said the heart association is awaiting more studies before recommending specific vitamins. Eating more fruit and vegetables is a widely accepted recommendation.

Manson said she and others are now evaluating whether vitamin pills for risks as effectively as fruits and vegetables containing the vitamins. In the meantime, she recommends that people get the vitamins in food, not pills.

Beta carotene, a precursor of vitamin A, is found in carrots, spinach and broccoli. Vitamin B-2, or riboflavin, and vitamin E are found in green leafy vegetables. Vitamin E is also found in nuts, milk and eggs, and vitamin C is found primarily in citrus fruit.

The stroke study did not address the question of how cigarettes raise the risk. But previous research suggests that part of the problem might be changes that occur immediately with the first drag on a cigarette.

"Some studies suggest the risk of a stroke rises while a person is smoking or immediately after," Manson said.

Within minutes, smoking produces changes in the blood that promote the formation of blood clots. Blood cells called platelets become stickier, and levels of a clotting substance called fibrinogen rise.

Those changes can increase the risk of a so-called ischemic stroke, in which a clot interrupts blood supply to part of the brain, causing that part of the brain to die.

But smoking also boosts blood pressure, increasing the risk of bleeding in the brain, which can also destroy brain tissue, Manson said.

The difficulties of trying to restrict violence on TV

By DIANE BURTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congress seems intent on passing a law to restrict television violence, but protectors of the First Amendment are betting no such measure ever will be enforced.

The courts won't allow it, lawyers for the American Civil Liberties Union and the television networks say.

Nevertheless, the bipartisan momentum in Congress for legislation to reduce violent TV programming is strong.

Eight bills have been introduced. They range from a requirement that TV sets be manufactured with a computer chip that could be programmed to block violent shows to a mandate that the Federal Communications Commission make reducing TV violence a condition of television station license renewal.

One or a combination of them is likely to be moving toward enactment at the beginning of next year.

Attorney General Janet Reno told the Senate Commerce Committee recently that several of the bills would pass constitutional muster. But she acknowledged later that she was not familiar with all the case law, so the Justice Department is continuing to review the subject.

The concern is and always has been that TV violence causes the real thing, particularly among young people. Supporters of the legislation say the courts have allowed restrictions to protect children and point to limits on indecency.

But indecency is different, say First Amendment advocates.

It has been specifically defined as references to excretory functions and sexual organs. Although a ban on such talk has been rejected by the Supreme Court, the broadcast industry has generally accepted that it should be restricted to between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Violence, however, has never been defined by law.

And even if it were, lawmakers see some violence on television as beneficial. News shows, for example, would be exempt from restrictions and "good" violence, such as war dramas or depictions of brutality designed to deter such behavior, also would be all right.

Lawmakers oppose "happy" violence, which is akin to slapstick and sensationalistic or gratuitous violence.

But imagine the questions the FCC will have to ponder if the law is passed and the commission must draw the boundaries.

Would it be acceptable to show a woman shooting a rapist in self-defense, but not a mugger shooting an innocent victim?

How much spilled blood would be needed to illustrate the horrors of war without being gratuitously gory?

The National Coalition On Television Violence defines violence as "the deliberate and hostile use of overt force by one individual against another."

Using that definition, would a drama about the Civil War be allowed on the air when children might be watching?

The creative community has traditionally made these judgments and critics of the push for new legislation say the public should complain to them, not to Congress.

"The law can't tell the difference between good and bad violence," says attorney Floyd Abrams, a First Amendment expert who successfully defended NBC against charges that a rape shown in the 1978 made-for-TV movie "Born Innocent" caused a similar real-life incident.

"When you start talking about banning or limiting or channeling the amount of violence on TV, you are talking about directly interfering with First Amendment rights," said Abrams. "Speech about violence is not only integral in the most important works of film and literature in our history, but has been explicitly protected."

A full-blown First Amendment battle over the issue has never been waged. The TV networks aren't girding for one now, but the American Civil Liberties Union is.

"We think this is a very critical fight and has implications for the information superhighway we are about to have," said ACLU legislative counsel Robert Peck.

Peck said the concern among lawmakers is that some individuals cannot separate television fiction from real life.

Pager gets waiter's attention

By DAVID DISHNEAU
AP Business Writer

CHICAGO — The raised eyebrow. The discreet wave. The angry stare. The raised voice.

And now, the pager. Motorola Inc. and ServiceAlert Inc. have a new way of getting your waiter's attention: a paging system activated by a button in the salt-and-pepper holder.

Pressing the button causes your waiter's pager to vibrate.

The system already is in use at two T.G.I. Friday's restaurants in Orlando, Fla., and Houston.

It has boosted sales in Orlando by reducing the duration of the average customer's visit, said Jeff Gaskin, one of the restaurant's managers.

"It's probably the next best thing to sliced bread," he said.

Stella O'Neill, a waitress for a restaurant chain in Chicago, said pagers would be helpful during slow periods but a nuisance when it was busy.

"We have an express lunch where you're trying to get every lunch out within 15 minutes. It's chaotic enough without people paging you all the time," she said.

A system designed for 40 tables and eight servers costs about $6,000; for 100 tables and 20 servers, about $11,000.

Restaurants from McDonald's to the trendiest eating spots have embraced wireless communications in recent years. Hosts and servers converse via headsets. Kitchens use pagers to tell servers their orders are up, and customers are issued beepers to let them know when their tables are ready.

Daly will play in Mexico

ORLANDO — John Daly, suspended indefinitely from the PGA Tour, will play in this week's Mexican Open while American organizers scramble to fill tournament rosters created by his absence.

PGA Tour commissioner Deane Burton suspended Daly two days after the 1991 PGA champion was disqualified during the second round of the Kapalua International for picking up his ball after missing a hole-in-one Nov. 11.

Daly previously was suspended early this year for a "disciplinary" violation of a club rule that he was on probation when the latest episode occurred.

Williams explains incident

LAMPAS — Lamps, Fla. businessman, facing Williams and co-accused in the 1991 Florida Press reporting incident, says he did not hit female reporter.

Williams and Melissa Kivisto exchanged words after the player pulled up on the injured player following the game. Williams said he was not involved in the incident and picked up his coat and bag to leave the gymnasium with other members who were leaving.

Kivisto, who was with Williams during the November 11 incident, says she did not see Williams hit the reporter. She says she saw Williams talking to the reporter after the game.

Kosar waived by Browns

BELEA Ohio — The Cleveland Browns waived quarterback Bernie Kosar, ending a 10-year relationship between the QB and the team.

Kosar, who signed a one-year contract with the Browns in 1986, had been benched by Belichick for the last two years.

Kosar, who has won two Super Bowl titles, was waived by the Browns on Nov. 23. He had 109 games in nine seasons after Cleveland chose him in the 1983 supplemental draft.

Pippen out

CHICAGO — Chicago Bulls forward Scottie Pippen will miss at least five games after being placed on the injured list with chronic tendinitis in his right ankle.

Suns trace Knight

PHOENIX — The Phoenix Suns traded guard Reggie Knight to the San Antonio Spurs for a future second-round draft pick.

SANFORD — Maybe you can come home again.

Former Seminole High School superstar Short Reddicks has returned to the hardwood after a two-year absence to try and help Seminole Community College get back into the elite of Florida junior college ranks.

Reddicks will join another Seminole graduate, Andrea Saunders, Lake Mary's Dawn Judd, Lake Howell's Rebecca Miller and Oviedo's Shirley and Sylvia Dames as Seminole County high school graduates on the 1993-1994 SCC roster.

That sextet will not be the only Seminole County residents hoping to rebuild the Raiders into state playoff contenders.

Head coach Helena Gallagher has also enlisted the aid of Ken Patrick to be her number one assistant this year.

Patrick, who lives in Lake Mary, is well known nationally as one of the top supporters of women's basketball, having served as the women's basketball president of the Amateur Athletic Union for a number of years.

He has also been given credit as the force behind the development of Florida community college basketball and the University of Miami's national powers, which he served as the recruiting assistant at those two schools.

Gallagher and Patrick have combined to recruit an impressive line-up of players, at least on paper, for the upcoming season.

Six of the girls stand six foot tall or better, with Miller being the tallest at 6 foot 4 inches.

Also standing at or over the 6-foot mark are Reddicks, Ft. Pierce's Trishia Thompson and Helsinki, Finland's Anna Halonen, all about 2' another Finland import, Pavi Korvasto, 6-foot 1-inch, and Shirley Dames' 6-foot.

Halonen and Korvasto both played for Junior National Team in Finland and are expected, along with Reddicks, to carry most of the load for the Raiders this season.

Also expected to make an immediate impact on the squad are a pair of Ft. Pierce Westwood products, 6-foot 7-inch point guard Jennifer Cade and 6-foot 7-inch forward Jennifer Murphy.

Cade is an "outside" type of player who can shoot from outside and excel on defense, while Murphy is an "inside" type of player who can rebound.

Thompson, Cade and Murphy are just two of five girls from the Ft. Pierce area on the team.

Also from Westwood high are Darlene Hadden, whose brother Mark played at SCC back in 1988, while joining Thompson from Ft. Pierce Central's Shonda Mingo.

The final member of the team is Deltona graduate Melissa Mendez, a shooter who did well on last year's squad and will be counted on to give the team more outside shooting when she gets to college in December.

Short Reddicks (No. 50 above) hopes she can regain the skills that made her the most feared high school basketball player in Florida back in 1990 when she took the team for Seminole Community College this year.

County teams unranked as playoffs near

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Despite having two of the best teams in the state, both offensively and defensively, in Seminole and Lake Brantley high schools, no Seminole County teams were recognized in this week's Florida Sports Writers Association High School Football Poll.

However, Seminole's opponent in the first round of the state playoffs, Merritt Island (8-2), did pick up 49 points and the number eight ranking in the Class 1A poll.

The game between Merritt Island and the Tribe will take place at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium on Friday, Nov. 19 at 7:30 p.m.

This Friday, all at 7:30 p.m., Seminole will go to Lake Mary to play for the Optimist Bowl. Lake Brantley at Lyman and Lake Howell trying to secure a playoff spot when it hosts Oviedo.

LONGWOOD — Oviedo and Lake Howell couldn't do it.

But Lyman did.

Heat Spruce Creek in Port Orange.

With senior quarterback Ben Moon running for one touchdown and passing for two more, all in a 21-point second quarter, the Greyhounds pulled off the 28-22 upset that deprived the Hawks of clinching a spot in the state playoffs and opening the door for Lake Howell.

Moon, who started the season as the back-up signal caller, rushed for 63 yards on 10 carries and completed four of eight passes, with no

Ben Moon

Lyman's Ben Moon is this week's Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

Also considered were:

• Lake Brantley's Jeff Shaw, who carried the ball eight times for 175 yards and four touchdowns of 72 and 91 yards.

• Oviedo's Oscar Duncan, who rushed for 140 yards on 19 carries and scored on a 28-yard run.

• Seminole's Cliff Branch, who completed eight of 17 passes for 122 yards and two touchdowns.

• Lake Howell's Kelvin Chisolm, who rushed for 113 yards on 14 carries and two touchdowns.

• Lake Mary's Tyson Hinshaw, who completed 11 of 22 passes for 129 yards and one touchdown.

Paddy McGee's cruises

From Staff Reports

CASSELBERRY — What were those nicknames again?

The Paddy McGee "Moo" played more like brussels and the Bruisers played more like mice in the Seminole County Recreation Department Women's Fall Monday Night Class C Slowpitch Softball League at Red Bug Lake Park as Paddy McGee's crushed the Bruisers 16-1.

The victory was the seventh straight for Oviedo-based Paddy McGee's, which has not lost since suffering a 5-1 loss at the hands of Chiers back in the second week of the season.

Fantasy Night rousing success

Auction, food, wine blend for best time

By SARABECCA ROBIER
Herald Columnist

Ginny Coombs, co-chairman for the 3rd Annual Fantasy Night 1993 was ecstatic. She said "at least 500 people came to the Silent Auction-Live Auction, Wine Tasting, Entertainment and Late Buffet at the Hilton, Altamonte Springs." The silent auction began at 7 p.m. along with the wine tasting from the night liquor on this family Saturday, Oct. 23. At 8:30 p.m. Auctioneer Art Grindle began the Live Auction.

"It's a very exciting evening with a lot of bidding going on."

-Ginger Black

Ginger Black, chairman of the events, said "It's a very exciting evening with a lot of bidding going on, an evening of fun and people going home with wonderful gifts." "Art Grindle, our auctioneer, is very enthusiastic and the music is by our five-piece band, Impulse."

Ginny Coombs and Joe Deitz co-chaired this event and said they had a very dedicated committee that made this night possible.

Some of the Live Auction items included Disney World Caribbean Beach Resort; Sheraton World Resort; Vistana Resort; signed print and book by Bill Bachmann; Creative Concrete coating; Yamaha portable

Vicki Rhodes of the Southern Bank of Central Florida with her husband, Paul, of National Health Care. The couple live in Oviedo and were enjoying the Silent Auction bidding tables.

keyboard; custom pool table with accessories; Orlando Magic basketball tickets; Shamu blimp ride; Orlando Magic autographed basketball; VMC sightseeing flight; Artistic Concepts sculptured carpet of your choice; Bell South Mobility cellular phone; Lake Mary Flooring area rug; Recoton deluxe stereo wireless speaker system; Kel's Rod n' Reel Specialty fishing rod; Courtesy cellular phone; IBF ergonomic desk chair; autographed serigraph; round of golf with Lake Mary mayor and city manager; Lake Mary mayor for the day; ride-a-long with Lake Mary police chief.

There were 23 tables laden with a myriad display of silent auction items and each of the tables had a separate sponsor in addition to all the wonderful people and companies who donated the items.

Mail from stepmoms came pouring in

DEAR READERS: When "Fed-Up Stepmother in Lancaster, Pa." asked my readers to respond, the mail came pouring in. There are many frustrated stepmoms out there, but there are others who are happy. Read on!

DEAR ABBY: The day my son was born, I sat in the hospital and cried. I knew being a parent was the hardest job in the world. The day my first husband and I divorced, I sat in the courtroom and cried. I knew being a single parent was the hardest job in the world. The day I married my second husband (and his two kids), I sat at the reception and cried. I knew being a stepparent would be a breeze after what I had already been through.

Then reality set in. Nothing is harder than raising another woman's children. You are a constant reminder to them that their mother left them. And for some reason they just know it's your fault. You are a daily reminder that Daddy and

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Mommy aren't together anymore. Somehow that is also your fault. They also have to share Daddy with "her."

I strongly believe the fathers of these children are just as much to blame for the problems. They do not believe their children are anything less than perfect. They allow these kids to control them through guilt and manipulation. These men refuse to make a united stand with their wives because their guilt would kill them. They are cowards.

I've been to hell and back with this so-called "blended family." I could write a book, but who has the time? I sleep with one eye open and my back to the wall, emotionally exhausted. I have begged my husband to face reality, but after five years, it's like banging my head against a wall.

I started counseling two years ago to save this marriage and family. Thank God, I realized I needed to save myself from any more humiliation and abuse. I love my husband, but I'm starting to love myself more. I am regaining my self-esteem. I'm getting a job, and I'm taking my kids away from this hell. I just wish I could see my husband's face in 10 years, when his kids are gone, and he starts looking around the house for me. Sign me...

A REAL MOM FIRST

DEAR ABBY: This is for the upset stepmother: It's time to step down. I don't know how long you have been one, but having suffered the same fate for almost 30 years, let me tell you - It doesn't get any easier.

When the kids are young, it's fights and tantrums; when they're teen-agers you get pulling, rebellion and "You can't tell me what to do - you aren't my mother!" You suffer through their miserable relationships, their failed marriages, and they give you their children to raise. Then your husband dies and you are the wicked stepmother who stole their inheritance.

Take my advice: Learn to drive an 18-wheeler, throw your bags in the cab and ask for long cross-country hauls. And when you're too old for the road, drive far, far away, heave your belongings into a wheelbarrow, push yourself to the nearest elderly housing project, and get an unlisted phone number.

BEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to write after reading the letter from "Fed-Up Stepmother in Lancaster, Pa." How sad for her! I fell in love with the father of three children, whose ages were 7, 5 and 2. Before we tied the knot, we had many discussions regarding my role as a stepmother.

Well, 14 years and a few bumps and "learning experiences" later, I am proud to call these charming young adults mine, and I love and enjoy them as my own.

PROUD AND HAPPY MOM IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the Pennsylvania mother whose adopted son was searching for his natural mother: I, too, gave up a child more than 30 years ago, and I do not want to be found; it would raise too many questions and create too many problems. This doesn't mean that I didn't care about my child. I gave him up because I wanted him to have a better life than I was able to give him at the time. And in so doing, I also gave a childless couple the joy of parenthood.

In some cases, it's better to keep the files closed.

Study says Haiti embargo kills 1,000 children each month

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The oil embargo and other sanctions intended to help restore democracy to Haiti are killing as many as 1,000 children a month, according to a Harvard University study.

"The human toll from the silent tragedy of humanitarian neglect has been far greater than either the violence or human rights abuses," said the study, according to The New York Times. The study is due out this week.

Although food and medicine are exempt from the embargo, the blockade makes it harder to bring humanitarian aid into Haiti, Lincoln C. Chen, director of Harvard's Center for Population and Development Studies, said in today's Times.

The embargo is meant to help force the return of democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was overthrown by the military in 1991.

In Haiti, the Western Hemisphere's poorest country, nearly 3,000 children age 5 or under die each month. That has increased by about 1,000, the study said.

The study found that vaccination programs in some rural areas and in Port-au-Prince have reached only 4 percent of their target population because of the embargo, which has choked transportation on the island.

And it said the embargo contributed to as many as 100,000 new cases of malnutrition in Haiti, which has a population of about 7 million.

Use extra caution with food storage

DEAR DR. GOTT: While cleaning my mother's refrigerator recently, I found moldy cheese. She indicated she cuts off the mold and feeds it to the wildlife behind her home. Also, she has a habit of opening cans of food, using a portion, and saving the remainder in its container for another meal. Are these habits healthy ones, or is she headed for a case of food poisoning?

DEAR READER: The mold on cheese is harmless for human and animal consumption. In fact, it's the mold that often gives cheese its flavor. I am concerned, however, about your mother's habit of storing food in open cans. When canned by the manufacturer, food is sterile. Once the can is opened, bacteria (that are normally present everywhere in our environment) can enter the edibles.

Not only can these microorganisms cause the food to spoil (even in the refrigerator), they can produce disease (food poisoning) when eaten with the food. Also, the combination of oxygen and the acid in the food can cause minerals to leach from the metal of the can, leading to a variety of toxic reactions.

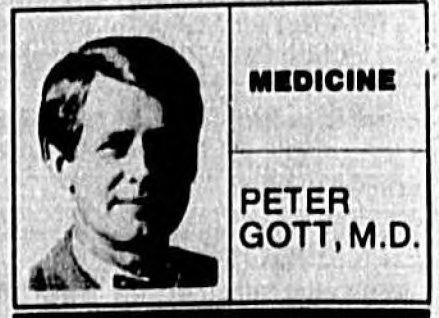

I believe that your mother should store opened food in appropriate plastic or glass containers. With respect to the cheese, don't worry.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has a large soft lump on the top of his head. One doctor claims it is a calcium deposit that is growing larger, yet I'm worried it could be more.

DEAR READER: Calcium deposits are usually hard, not soft. Therefore, your husband probably does have a problem that his doctor is not addressing. The lump may be a lipoma (a benign fatty tumor) or a sebaceous cyst (plugged sweat gland). Although these common lesions do not require removal, they can be cosmetically embarrassing, especially if they enlarge.

Therefore, your husband might consider seeing a surgeon for a second opinion. If your husband wishes to have the nodule removed, the simple operation can be performed under local anesthesia in the surgeon's office.

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Maybe you have heard of the Day Runner, a diary and organizer. Now you can get the Bridge Runner (T&J Associates, 618-234-6254). You can record all manner of things: your engagements, the systems you play with various partners, favorite deals, and so on. If you want more than just a simple calendar, this is for you.

While you are playing a deal, it pays to keep organized. Don't lose track of your tricks, the number of trumps still out, your entries. A careless person would fall in disarray to defeat on today's deal.

Against four spades, West led the diamond king and switched to the heart queen. How should South have planned the play?

Declarer made short work of going down. He won the heart switch with dummy's ace, played a club to his 10, ruffed a diamond in the dummy and drew three rounds of trumps. Then he tried to cash some clubs, but West ruffed the third round and played a heart to his partner's king. A diamond back resulted in one down.

South complained about his lousy luck, of course, but really it was poor planning. You can afford a trump loser and still have 10 tricks: four spades, one heart and five clubs. But if a trump trick has to be lost, it must happen while there is a low spade left in the dummy to ruff a diamond. Also, to avoid any chance of a trump promotion, you must duck one round of hearts. Win the second heart trick with dummy's ace, cash the spade queen and duck a spade. Unless an opponent can take a club ruff now, the contract is safe.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 10, 1993

The year ahead could turn out to be an extremely favorable period for you with lots of exciting developments. Set lofty objectives and pursue them vigorously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Persons you once felt compelled to please may now do a role reversal and feel impelled to please you. There has been a big change regarding the mantle of leaderships. You're in the catbird seat now. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There is a season for sowing and a season for reaping. This is a period where you will be paid back in larger measures by persons you have helped.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Exciting developments could be in the offing for you where your social life is concerned. Both old and new friends may play big roles in your affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's time for you to start elevating your sights where your ambitious objectives are concerned. Once you get on a roll, remarkable achievements are possible.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something is presently stirring that could produce an advantageous effect upon your future hopes and plans. Prepare yourself for your tomorrows and look forward to them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you've been contemplating a daring move, maneuver or adjustment where your career is concerned, this could be the time to do it. Trends are looking strong.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you and your mate might be required to make two significant decisions that may have long reaching effects. Fortunately, you both have good judgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A loyal friend who is concerned about your personal welfare might offer you some unusual advice today. Even though it might sound strange, wrestle with it until you understand its essence.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If things have been a trifle hectic for you lately, this is a good day to sort them out and reorganize your life. Chances for success are enhanced once you're back on track.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not let self-doubts intimidate you today, because you have excellent chances for producing the types of end results you desire. Think win.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Chance could offer a strong endorsement for your efforts today. It looks like you might say the right things at the right time to the right person who can create a fortunate happening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're now entering an extremely significant cycle, especially where your finances or material needs are concerned. If you handle things properly, surpluses will supplant your wants.
