LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Imposition of gas rationing in California's urban areas drew closer today, as desperate motorists mobbed gasoline stations for the second day in some areas Friday, bringing reports of scattered violence. But among the stories of violence and price-gouging there were also reports of unusual acts of helpfulness and courtesy.

County officials prepared to meet Monday with Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., on his proposal for a state-mandated "odd-even" rationing plan in counties that request it. It appeared many officials from heavily populated areas would do so - putting the plan into effect in those areas as early as Tuesday.

HY SHARON CARRASCO Herald Staff Writer "To make something out of my life is my biggest motivation to stay sober, " says a man in his mid-20s with long blond wiry hair. "I have too much self-esteem to see myself in the gutter somewhere."

The young man, call him Mike, is one of six readents now at the Seminole Halfway House who decided to trade their addictions to alcohol for a chance to lead normal. appy lives. About three years ago, Mike admitted to himself he had a drinking problem but it wasn't until his marriage and college career fell in that he was ready to quit. "It took three years before I could become happy staving sober," Mike says. Today, he attends a local college full-time in Seminole County where he is studying to become a registered nurse. Another resident of the Seminole Halfway House is a middle-aged man called Tom who says his drinking

"wasted some good years and lost a good wife." Like Mike, he too, is ready to build a new life for himself. "There are a lot of beautiful things out there that I don't see when I'm drinking,', Tom says. "I want to be the man

I was supposed to be in the world." The Seminole Halfway House offers men like Tom and Mike a helping hand to rejoin the community"socially, spiritually and vocationally," says John Bissell, residence

Since 1972, the Seminole Halfway House has served as a "change agency" where individuals move from detoxification to being a wholly intergrated part of the community, Bissell says. It is located just south of Lake Mary Boulevard.

The halfway house, which is under the direction of Seminole County Mental Health, has a capacity to house 10 individuals. It offers residents care services, counseling and therapeutic treatment and rehabilitation support.

"We concentrate on helping a client develop a support system he can use in terms of his ability to live without the use of alcohol," Bissell says.

Another consideration is helping the individual find meaningful employment that would instill in him feelings of self-esteem and self-worth, Bissell says. These feelings have a tendency to deteriorate in alcoholics, he explained. "They are here, we try to help them develop some kind of program for living sober," Bissell says.

But the halfway house is more than a common place for clinical treatment of alcoholism, Bissell says, It is similar to a small community where every resident contributes something "We are not a holding house or detention home," Bissell stresses. "This is a home. We do a lot of things together. We try to have everyone sit down for dinner, say grace, break bread. Try to establish that kind of identity."

Each resident is responsible for some particular aspect in the upkeep of the home to help him get into the habit of conformance. For example, a resident might be required supposed to be in the world' to have his bed made by 8 a.m. or the dishes washed by 10 a.m. "This might sound simple but an alcoholic by nature would want to rebel against that, " Bissell says, If a resident doesn't do his household chores, he isn't making a contribution to the "community," Bissell says. Fellow residents will remind him of that during the group sessions held each week, he says.

There's a different activity at the halfway house almost every day of the week. "Members of the Alcoholics Anonymous meet here on Tuesdays for their regular meetings and Wednesday nights are set aside for recreation," Bissell says. Through the mental health center, the halfway house makes available to residents the use of a psychologist, clinical psychologists , pyschological testing and other services, he says.

"We are currently evaluating and re-evaluating our alcoholic recovery program to assure we have an attitude toward the development of optimum recovery opt portunity," Bissell says.

fragments found in Burma during an exredition participated in by a University of North Carolina-Charlotte anthropologist could prove that higher primates lived in that country more than 40 million years ago, it was learned Friday.

Information on what UNCC has labeled as a major anthropological find is to be officially released Tuesday.

Dr. Russell L. Ciochon, in his first year on the anthropology staff at UNCC, and a professor at the University of California at Berkeley were the only two Americans on the

Dr. Elwyn L. Simons, director of Duke University's Primate Center in Durham, has read a copy of Ciochon's findings to be published next week in a scientific journal. Simons, in a telephone interview Friday, said anthropologists previously found creatures 30 million to 35 million years old in Egypt believed to be the forerunner of higher primates.

If the information contained in Ciochon's study proves to be accurate it could provide evidence of primates 40 million years old, the oldest known to man, Simons said.

"I think it's work that should be continued," Simons said. "He (Ciochon) and his coworkers have found only lower jaw parts so far. For confirmation that these are earlier higher primates one really needs to find more

"I still would say guardedly that their news release is more or less right," Simons said, adding that it is "subject to proof" from further findings.

UNCC spokesman Ken Sanford, in announcing Tuesday's news conference, said it would deal with "an anthropological find that may alter all previous interpretations of the origins of primates, including man. A recent expedition has found a missing link in the Simons, who has participated in several expeditions in Egypt, said the evidence reportedly uncovered by Ciochon had been suspected since 1972.

"This is not the missing link," meaning revidence linking the evolution of man from animals, he said.

"They haven't found out something sensational," Simons said. "They have made the animal easier to discuss." Ciochon, contacted by UPI, declined to divulge details of his scheduled an nouncement. Asked if he thought it would be universally accepted as a major find, Ciochon said, " think there will be some controversy over it but I think it will be acceptable" to a majority.

Simons said there must be further evidence to support the contention that the bone fragments discovered in Burma are in fact those of higher primates.

"It's not totally provable until they ge some upper jaws and parts of the skull that have undeniable features of higher primates like enclosed eye sockets ..." he said.

"You can't prove that something is a higher primate from jaw fragments," Simons said. 'I applaud their work and hope they will go back and prove for sure what these things

He said if the fragments are in fact from higher primates it could provide evidence that the earliest forerunners of higher primates were in Burma rather than Egypt. "It's possible that these things were first in Burma and later turned up in Egypt," Simons said. "It seems to be an important stage in the history of primate development," he said. ## Soaring Gas Prices Add Oil Shale Lure

Just last summer, the U.S. Senate approved legislation that would have put the federal government into the business of extracting oil from shale rock in a 17,000-square-mile area on the western slope of the Rockies.

But the bill died in the House, due to the anticipated cost, which was believed to be commercially unacceptable.

The sudden deposition of the Shah of Iran and subsequent curtailment of the flow of Iranian oil has rapidly decreased the gap between the price of crude oil from Arabian wells and the potential cost of deriving oil from shale.

Of more significance than cost at this time, perhaps, is the fact that the expanse of rock in Colorado, Utah and Wyoming is believed to contain up to two trillion barrels of oil. By comparison only 657 billion barrels of oil can be expected from worldwide petroleum reserves.

In 1974, nine large oil companies were awarded leases on the government-owned land and encouraged to perfect methods of extracting the oil. Two years later, they asked that the leases be suspended because of the doubtful profitability of the venture. Occidental Petroleum asked for a delay in a pilot project in which the federal government was a partner.

However, steady hikes in the world price of crude oil and the never-ending spiral in retail gasoline pump prices tend to blur the difference in cost of oil from shale, which has been about $6 a barrel. Production of a mere 700 billion barrels would supply the United States for 100 years.

Congress is again exploring the possibility of federal financing and operation of demonstration programs in the shale fields. A tax-credit program to give the oil industry a temporary $3-a-barrel incentive to develop an extraction system also is gaining congressional support.

An immediate decision on the route to follow. according to industry estimates, could put shale oil on the market in as little as 10 years. A philosophical battle on the financing and operation of exploratory plants, however, could delay progress until the next century. The elusive goal of energy "self-sufficiency" is attainable through application of current technology to known resources. To continue to close our eyes to an abundant supply of domestic fuel at the height of a developing fuel crisis is irresponsible, if not criminal.

Costly To Navy

The Senate Budget Committee exhibited a foolish, false economy in rejecting the chance to purchase four guided missile destroyers for the Navy at a net saving of some $800 million

The four Spruance-class ships are among the available pargains, now that the new government of Iran has cancelled major contracts for military purchases from American manufacturers. The ships are under construction at Litton Industry's Ingalls Division yard in Pascagoullas Division yard in Pascagoula, Miss. The Navy could purchase these badly needed escort vessels for $1.35 billion, roughly two-thirds the cost of the ships if construction of identical models were begun this year or next.

But the Budget Committee, alert for once to save a dollar even if it means higher costs tomorrow, vetoed the Navy's

We are told that some committee members also balked at the prospect of repaying Iran's new government the $450 million already advanced toward the purchase price at a time when Tehran is boosting oil prices. The logic of this last argument eludes us completely. Does it have to cost the taxpayers $800 million or more in lost savings just so the Senate Budge

Committee can communicate its pique over rising oil prices The full Senate only partially rectified this foolishness by accepting an amendment to the budget resolution authorizing purchase of two of the four destroyers. We can hope that common sense prevails in the House in the form of permission for the Navy to buy all four, even if something less pressing that the Navy's shipbuilding program must be shaved to finance the

There's an enormous amount of conservative self-satisfaction at the just concluded elections in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. And why not?

After all, the nearly 65 percent turnout is greater than in most elections held here. Surely this must reflect a longing for an end to the war that has been waged in that country since before Ian Smith unilaterally - and illegally declared his independence from Great Britain.

But most press accounts we read don't tell Americans how patently unfair these elections were, despite the large number of participants. Here's how it went: -In January, half of the white electorate -2

Thus white Rhodesians chose the new government's form, voted alone to fill more than a quarter of its national legislature with white seats and then voted again to help choose the

The NAACP, through its president, Margaret Bush Wilson, is firmly opposed to legitimizing this naked exercise in white domination. The 16 members of the Congressional Black Caucus stand united in opposing any recognition of the newly elected government.

Likewise, the National Urban League and the Rev. Jessie Jackson's PUSH have urged members of the U.S. Senate to refuse to relax the sanctions which have managed to push Ian Smith this minute step toward real majority rule. Over 100 blacks in leadership positions have appealed to President Carter to continue to enforce sanctions.

Administration is giving women the business figuratively but not literally. Though by law, companies owned by women can qualify as disadvantaged contractors eligible for special onsideration in government awards, in practice they are being virtually shut out by the SBA. The reason is simple: The "black capitalism"

That was in the days before women's equality became a major political issue: blacks and other ethnic ninorities were regarded as the only targets of the program, and the SBA has become oriented in that direction.

Ever wonder when French Avenue becomes Orlando Drive or when Orlando Drive officially becomes U.S. 17-92?

If so, you're not alone, according to R.C. McDowell of the Oviedo office of the state department of transportation. He said he receives numerous inquiries about the different road names every week. Highway 17-92 is probably the most misunderstood road in the area, he said. "Everyone seems to have a different name for

Give Peace A Chance In Rhodesia

Somewhere along the line, U.S. policy toward Rhodesia skewed from simply favoring replacement of white minority with black majority rule over to what amounts to tacit support for anti-democratic terrorist guerrillas.

In light of the recent elections in Rhodesia, President Carter's advisors on African policy from Andrew Young to the State Department have put the administration in the embarrasing position of appearing to be opposed to a moderate, democratic course for Rhodesia-Zimbabwe.

Foreign observers who went to Rhodesia were virtually unanimous in reporting that the elections were, on balance, fair and free. Terrorist threats to disrupt voting did not materialize and guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabee were reduced to polemicizing and posturing for U.S. television udiences in interviews on "60 Minutes."

Voter turnout, according to the Rhodesian government was even greater than expected. It reached 63.9 percent, something for American election day stay-at-homes to ponder. U.S. educated Bishop Abel Muzorewa's party won a heavy majority of the parliamentary seats although sensitivity to tribal and political patterns will ensure cabinet representation by both major black tribes and by Ian Smith's white

Mugabee, though a member of the majority Shana tribe, simply does not command any significant following within Rhodesia. So, the two are not reduced to a "rule or ruin" posture

If President Carter's advisors continue to sulk about the Rhodesian election - as they did as soon as the results were known - the United States will be in the ironic and perverted position of encouraging continuation of the bloody civil war by the terrorists.

Or Is It Part Of White House Decor? Welfare Reform Making Comeback On Carter List

By LEONARD M. GREENE Special to the Herald

Last year, welfare reform was No. 1 on the Nation's Social Agenda. So said the Carter administration. The Washington press corps chorused its agreement.

Sunk without a trace by last fall, welfare reform may now be making something of a comeback on the administration's "action list." A strippeddown version of the Carter proposal for last year is reportedly ready to be wheeled onto the Carter showroom floor.

Is it intended for an actual sale or is it merely part of the White House decor? Many observers convincingly argue that whatever zeal remains in Washington for impending battle on National Health Insurance. Neither welfare nor anything else except Health Insurance has a chance of enactment, they say - and don't bet on Health Insurance. But if prospects for welfare reform legislation seem to be stuck solid, the welfare crisis itself rages on. Everyone in the nation - rich and poor - suffers. Despite present prosperity, welfare rolls soar. Last year 10.8 million received (AFDC). A total of 33 million were getting program. Others urge incremental Medicaid and Medicare and 16.8 million were given Food Stamps.

Yes, some families, studies indicate, are able to extricate themselves quickly from velfare. But, according to a Rand Corporation Study, almost two-thirds of monthly welfare support goes to cases that have been "continuously on welfare for three or more years."

Steinbrenner Counts 'Em

NEW YORK (UPI) - George Steinbrenner isn't trying to portray the father figure. He sees no point in coming down with both feet on the neck of either Goose Gossage or Cliff Johnson. But he's counting, and according to his figures, Gossage's absence has cost the Yankees four victories already.

Speaking out for the first time since Gossage and Johnson went at each other two weeks ago in a clubhouse scuffle, which could sideline the Yankees' flame-throwing relief ace until mid-June or longer, Steinbrenner said events of the past two weeks have shown how much Gossage's incapacity has hurt the club.

"We lost five games in a row by one run and all of them in the last two innings," said the Yankee owner from his Tampa, Fla. office, where he runs the American Ship Building Company, another one of his holdings. "If Gossage had been there, we'd have won four of the five. There's no doubt of that in my mind."

Gossage and Johnson both were docked 10 days' pay for the had. In the case of Gossage, who makes $333,000 a year, that comes to $1,860 a day, and for Johnson, who makes $100,000 a After both teams scored single in the fifth before Moose scored The world champion New year, it works out to $550. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players' Association, has warned the Yanks they face a breach of contract grievance if they go through with the fines but Steinbrenner doesn't seem overly worried about it.

"The way I look at it is if you want to get in a fist fight, that's your business, but be ready to do your day's work the next day," Steinbrenner said.

"Miller says, 'These players are highly specialized.' If they're to highly specialized, they should be doubly careful. With these huge salaries paid to professional athletes today must come some assumption of responsibility on their part'' I agree with George Steinbrenner but I don't think he goes quite enough in what he save. Responsibility isn't a unilateral thing. What about the owners' sibility? If they're going to hand out these unimaginable sums, don't they have to share the responsibility for the magnitude of any calamity resulting from the loss of any of their onomically paid players? I'd certainly say so.

"We're not mad at 'em." Steinbrenner said about Gossage and Johnson. "We're just bitterly disappointed. The thing that is most disappointing and distressing is the lack of good judgment shown by these two men. Nobody can predict injury and nobody wants to be injured, of course, but if you're going to be injured, it should at east be in the line of duty and not in a fight."

With Gossage out, the Yankee bullpen isn't anywhere near as wesome as it was when he was in there. Dick "Dirt" Tidrow, olid but unspectacular, emerges as the No. 1 man in the bullpen. For help, he has Ken Clay and a pair of rookies, left-hander Paul bella and right-hander Ron Davis. The Yankees now have ht up Jim Beattie from Columbus of the International segue, where he was unbeaten this season. Although the Yanks mployed him primarily as a starter last year, he may be used as oth a starter and reliever this time around.

"We're not going out into the market looking for a reliever, teinbronner. "When you're in need, the way we are now, you over get a fair deal, particularly if you're the world champion

Well, Since You Asked ...

Q. Which catcher is rated the best in the majors defensivel right now? Would it still be Johnny Bench? - T.H., Cincinnati. The 31-year-old veteran receiver of the Reds worked himself into his best shape in several seasons this spring, but 11 full campaigns in Red livery have taken their toll. He's not the dominating force behind the plate he used to be. Most baseball people single out Jim Sundberg of the Texas Rangers as the premier defensive receiver in baseball right now. He does a great job lassoeing would-be base stealers.

Q. Was it Dave Parker's knee injury from high school football that kept a lot of teams from drafting him, or was there another reason? - R.B., Covington, Ky.

Parker, who had been a fine high school football player in his hometown of Cincinnati, did have a knee injury that discouraged some baseball scouts. But that wasn't the primary reason nobody bothered to tap him until the 14th round of the 1970 free agent draft. Most clubs, including Cincinnati, also felt he had an attitude problem. They couldn't have been more wrong because the big Pirate outfielder, now generally rated as the best all around player in the game (and the best paid), was a willing student from the time he was voted MVP as a rookie with Bradenton of Florida's Gulf Coast League in '70.

Q. How is Willie McCovey adapting to his role as a bench warmer with the Giants? Does he still feel he should play first base on a daily basis? - W.G., San Jose, Calif. Vanity is a ticklish thing. The 41-year-old future Hall-of-Famer still gets testy when anybody brings up his role as a part-timer and pinch-hitter (behind Mike Ivie) at a nice comfortable figure of $150,000 a year. The truth is that Willie is no longer capable of hitting for average -- though he can still lash out ropes in the clutch — and his woefully limited range in the field makes him a distinct defensive liability. That's where young (26) Ivie has been a big plus as an every day player for the San Francisco team.

Q. Would you tell me Franco Harris' statistics for the Pittsburgh Steelers last fall, and the Steeler's record since Franco began playing on their team? - Wesley Campbell, Sharon, Pa. The heavy duty fullback of the Super Bowl champs gained 1,082 yards on 310 rushes, the fifth straight season he has topped the .000 mark (and his sixth in seven pro years). He also scored nine touchdowns and caught 22 passes. In his seven years, the Steelers have won six AFC Central division titles outright, tied for a seventh, and won three Super Bowls. Franco contributed mightily to all of that.

Q. Isn't it time Tom Watson was recognized as the top golfer in the world? Can you tell us something about his record? - J. L. Kansas City, Kan.

NEW YORK (UPI) - Jeff Torborg had a pretty good idea what to expect. He has been managing only a year and a half but you don't need a lot of experience to sense what is going to happen in certain situations

His job was on the line, and Jeff Torborg knew it. Any time the president of a ballclub gets word to his manager that he'd like to see him in his private office and the club has won only five games all month and is rattling around at the bottom of the standings, then the manager can easily figure out beforehand he isn't being called in for a raise. Gabe Paul wanted to talk to him about what could be done about the floundering Cleveland Indians. The two men discussed a number of different things, including the Indians' team batting average, not that much over .200. Torborg was depressed over it, and Paul, seeking to cheer him up,

"Look, Jeff, you can't hit for these guys - thank God! know, you never could hit."

They both laughed and that broke the ice a little. Paul would like to keep him as the manager.

"I can't put the blame on him." he says. "It's not his fault. He can't go up there and hit for them. Imagine (Andre) Thornton hitting :140 and the team as a whole hitting :213. That has to affect the pitching. Torborg, a coach with the Indians at the time, replaced Frank obinson as the club's manager in the middle of 1977. The Tribe finished sixth in the American League East and sixth again last season, beating out only Toronto's expansion Blue Jays. In 11 games at home so far, the Indians are averaging alightly more than 10,000 persons per game. That isn't nearly enough to pay for the kind of salaries commanded by such players as Bobby konds, Wayne Garland, Rick Manning, Rick Wise and Thornton. Already there have been reports Paul will bring in Billy Martin to replace Torborg soon to help get the Indians moving and to beef up the gate.

You can discount all those reports.

Unquestionably, Gabe Paul will go for a "name" manager such time as he does decide to make a change but it won't be Billy sen; Sir Ivor Again, Don Martin and you can bet anything you want on that.

MacBeth, and Lot O'Gold, Don Martin, who still has a ticket to resume managing the Yankeys next season, has worked under Paul when Paul was president of All will carry 126 pounds and the Yankees two years ago. Similarly, Paul's next managerial choice won't be a "name" like Leo Durocher, Ralph Houk or Walter Alston. And for sure, it won't be Alvin Dark. Gabe Paul has had enough of Alvin Dark to

Sparky Anderson is a logical candidate except for the fact the former Reds' manager wouldn't take the job. The next time he manages, Anderson says, it'll be for a contender, and you couldn't possibly call the Indians that right now. The Indians have one of the best baseball men in the business right in their midst in Dave Garcia, who was a coach with them and managed the Angels a part of last year, but he isn't a "name" enough for Paul. So what the Indians' boss intends to do is to stay with Torborg, at least a little longer anyway.

"I want to run the string out as far as I can with Jeff," says Paul. "Someone asked me the other day if I was telling them that he would finish the season as our manager and I said 'I'm not telling you anything. He's our manager, damnit.' What's the use in giving anyone one of those votes of confidence? I think they're a lot of nonsense anyway. "Right now I'm satisfied. We wouldn't better ourselves !

orborg On Block

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jeff Torborg had a pretty good idea what to expect. He has been managing only a year and a half but yes don't need a lot of experience to sense what is going to happen in certain situations. His job was on the line, and Jeff Torborg knew it. Any time the president of a ballclub gets word to his manager that he'd like to see him in his private office and the club has won only five games all month and is ratiling around at the bottom of the standings, then the manager can easily figure out beforehand he im't bein called in for a raise. Gabe Paul wanted to talk to him about what could be done about the floundering Cleveland Indians. The two men discussed a number of different things, including the Indians' team batting average, not that much over .30. Torborg was depressed over it, and Paul, seeking to cheer him up

"Look, Jeff, you can't hit for these guys - thank Ged! know, you never could hit."

They both laughed and that broke the ice a little. Paul would like to keep him as the manager.

"I can't put the blame on him," he says. "It's not his fault. He in't go up there and hit for them. Imagine (Andre) Therma ting 199 and the team as a whole fifting 113. That has W after the pitching.

Torborg, a coach with the Indians at the time, replaced Frank Robinson as the club's manager in the middle of 1977. The Trije inished sixth in the American League East and sixth again last season, beating out only Toronto's expansion Blue Jays.

In 11 games at home so far, the Indians are averaging slight more than 10,000 persons per game. That isn't nearly enough to pay for the kind of salaries commanded by such players as Bobby Bonds, Wayne Garland, Rick Manning, Rick Wise and Thornton. Already there have been reports Paul will bring in Billy Martin o replace Torborg soon to help get the Indians moving and to best

You can discount all those reports.

Unquestionably, Gabe Paul will go for a "name" manager such time as he does decide to make a change but it won't be Billy Martin and you can bet anything you want on that.

Martin, who still has a ticket to resume managing the Yankes next season, has worked under Paul when Paul was president of All will carry 126 pounds and the Yankees two years ago. So what the Indiana' bees intends to do is to stay with Torborg, at least a Lidde lenger anyway. "I want to run the string out as far as I can with Jeff," more Paul. # From Abandoned Station To Pharmacy

By SHARON CARRASCO Herald Staff Writer

With the flair of a Cinderella story, an old, abandoned service station in Lake Mary has been ransformed from an eyesore to an asset to the ommunity.

Aubrey Moran said he recognized the service station's potential for his new pharmacy the moment he laid eyes on the ruddy structure.

That was in February and Thursday Moran opened his pharmacy for its first official day of business and he said he couldn't be happier.

"We had a real good opening," Moran says. "We were real pleased with the reception."

Today Moran dispenses his prescriptions in his new business at probably the same spot customers might have paid for their gas. But that is the only similarity between the lives of the two

"The building was in good shape," Moran says. "Of, course, renovation inthe lot cheaper than building a new business," he add

After he purchased the building in February. Moran contracted in remodeling agency to do a complete facelift. The walls were panelled, new carpeting was installed, a drop ceiling was put in place and within two months' time, the building had a new lease on life.

Today, the pharmacy, located at Country Club Road and Crystal Lake Avenue can boast being the only service of its kind in Lake Mary said Morarl: formerly a partner in Sanford's Faust's Drug

Its transformation from a boarded-up service station to something useful is probably the best success story the pharmacy could ever hope for.

Ask 14 Kids; Puppets Are Not An Endangered Species

Puppets are not an endangered species, according to Sandra Thompson of Longwood. Just ask any of the 14 youngsters involved in the Family Life Puppeteers, a group sponsored by the First Baptist Church of

As advisor to the group, Sandra encourages the 8th graders to get plenty of practice. "We have practice once a week. The puppeteers are so well rehearsed that they are able to switch rolls sasily. Each puppeteer knows all the roles and anybody can do the lead or be a back-up singer or do whatever is needed," she said. Jimmy Fenall, who is producer and director of the shows explained the naming procedure of the puppets. "We have 17 hand-made puppets. They are all named after church members. We say we pick the names at random, but everyone knows we are just kidding. The people take it as a compliment, having a puppet named for them. As an example, we call one Dr. Jim, after the nunister, James Hannock, and one is contact the church office.

We have performed at schools, other churches and for civic groups. I believe the young people get the most rewarding feeling from performing at nursing homes. You see, we feel this is a ministry and we don' know of anybody who doesn't like us," said Sandra The puppets resemble the famed Muppets, seen on TV. They each have an individual personality and seem to have a life of

The puppeteers are eager to perform and put plenty of pep and sthusiasm in each performance. "It's a good feeling to know we can make people laugh and enjoy the show," a puppeteer said. "Jimmy has brought a lot of professionalism to the group," said

Sandra. "He traveled on the road with the group, "Promise," as "their sound man. We work together, developing ideas for the shows. We feel we have a lot of good kids who really make the puppets come alive." Anyone wishing to obtain the group for a performance may

U.S. Time Company $100,000 Damage In Industrial Park Blaze

By GEOFFREY POUNDS Herald Staff Writer

A Seminole County fire battalion chief making his routine rounds Sunday morning noticed a puff of smoke at a building next to the fire station at the I-4 Industrial Park near State Road 46. Fifteen minutes later, firemen extinguished a blaze said to have caused more than $100,000 damage.

Battalion chief J.W. Walters was leaving the industrial park fire station just before 11 a.m. when he noticed the smoke coming from the rear of a building leased to the U.S. Time Company, Inc. Gary Kaiser, county public safety director said. The building is about 100 feet from the fire station. Kaiser said Walters sent the two men on duty at the fire station to the building and called for additional units. "The men went through the building to see if there was anybody inside, but they didn't find anyone," Kaiser said. He said firemen believed there had been someone living inside the building.

Firemen said the blaze was under control within 15 minutes. A total of four units and 12 men were called to the scene from various county stations, Kaiser said. There were no injuries, but firemen said it was necessary to use protective breathing equipment to avoid inhaling toxic fumes resulting from the burning of lacquer used by the company in finishing the cypress clocks it produces Minor smoke damage was also sustained by a nearby building leased by Herrington Research, a business machine firm which recently discontinued business, firemen said. The cause of the blaze has not yet been determined and investigators from the Seminole County Sheriff's Department and
