CHRISTMAS CHEER...

Classmates of Terry Summersill, 10, Longwood, fifth grade student at Longwood Elementary School, presented him with a giant Christmas card and two 3-channel citizens band radio units so he can talk with his parents while he is in the hospital. Terry was injured earlier this year in a dirt-bike accident, according to school officials, and then fell and re-injured his legs. With the help of teacher Anthony Gromak and anonymous donors, his class mates collected the money to turn Christmas into a special sharing time for Terry and his family.

Energy Talks Break Down, Conferees Adjourn

WASHINGTON (UPI)The prospect that Congress might quickly pass energy legislation upon its return in January has been all but shattered with the breakdown of a compromise plan on natural gas prices.

A House-Senate conference committee negotiating an agreement on the politically touchy question of gas price controls broke up in anger Thursday. Weary negotiators, who stayed behind when Congress adjourned a week ago, headed home for Christmas.

Explosion Injures 19

TUPELO, Miss. (UPI)- Authorities speculated an explosion that injured 19 persons at a Tupelo dog and fish food manufacturing plant Thursday may have been triggered by a spark from some electrical or welding work being conducted at the site.

Authorities said the explosion apparently originated in a grain drying room of the Sunshine Mills and Grain Inc. plant about 11:30 a.m. A flash fire was quickly brought under control, but not before it had burned some employees critically.

Witnesses said the explosion blew debris 100 to 150 feet into the air. It buckled concrete walls, ripped away metal roofing and siding, and damaged smaller buildings in the mill

Water Pollution Funds

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Florida will receive $172.6 million in federal funds next year for improving sewage treatment plants and curbing a major cause of water pollution. U.S. Sen. Richard Stone says.

The assistance will jump to $191.8 million annually from 1979 to 1982, Stone, D-Fla., said Thursday. Congress, he said, has passed for President Carter's expected approval legislation calling for $24.5 billion nationally in sewage treatment assistance funds from 1978

Energy Package Not Under Tree

Like an ominous flicker of the lights, the signal from Washington is that we have let another year slip by without putting a national energy policy

The placing of energy at the top of the agenda. President Carter's appeals to Congress and the public for support - these were high points of 1977 in the domestic news.

But Congress has gone home for Christmas with no energy package under the tree.

The implications of this failure are sobering all around - certainly for President Carter, who put his leadership on the block and found a paucity of followers; certainly for Congress, which finds its calendar for the election year of 1978 burdened with unresolved energy issues; and certainly for the American people, who have been told there is an energy crisis at hand but are getting vague and contradictory marching orders to go out to meet it. The lesson for Mr. Carter is that the vaunted powers of the presidency are limited after all. If he expected his energy addresses to the public to create pressure on Congress for prompt approval of his program, he was mistaken.

With the help of Speaker Tip O'Neill, his program moved smoothly enough through the House, as flawed as it was. The Senate balked, and is still balking, at its effort to accomplish by taxation and price regulation what could better be achieved by letting a deregulated market respond to pressure that would maximize the development of our energy resources.

The administration has managed to let this domestic setback become an embarrassing intrusion into foreign policy.

Mr. Carter scheduled an ambitious foreign tour, then postponed it to be in Washington for the final push on energy legislation.

Now he will leave after Christmas on an abbreviated tour, leaving energy policy up in the air at home at a time when our allies and trading partners are expressing impatience with America's failure to curb its appetite for fuel

The shellacking which the U.S. dollar has been on currency markets is evidence enough that Mr. Carter was not sounding empty alarms in his energy messages.

Due largely to our heavy oil imports, the U.S. trade deficit hit an all-time high in October and is expected to run at a staggering $30 billion for the

The president will have a hard time convincing foreign leaders that he has awakened the people to the necessity of controlling this economic hemorrhage.

It can be controlled in part by putting into effect some of the conservation measures in Mr. Carter's stalled program.

So far the House and Senate have agreed on programs to stimulate fuel savings, including a tax on gas-guzzling cars and utility rates which encourage conservation and to encourage more use of coal by industry. But what is needed, and what still escapes the House and Senate conferees, is a stimulus to substitute more oil and gas from domestic sources for oil and gas we now buy from abroad.

That need was neglected in Mr. Carter's original program, and the task of Congress will not be completed until it is dealt with. So the energy debate will resume in Congress in January - putting the issue under the additional squeeze of an election year, reducing chances for action on comprehensive tax reform, and leaving business and industry in a state of uncertainty about taxes and energy costs which already is causing a drag on the economy.

It was four years ago this month that an Arab oil embargo was presumed to have jarred us into understanding the scope of our energy crisis. But did it?

An inventory, "The Report on Women in America" has been published by the Department of State Publication under the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization

The report begins with women in American history and goes through to the International Women's Year. Women's roles in the country's work force is described as follows: Women have contributed to the Nation's economy and to their own support from colonial times to the present. During the 17th and 18th centuries, women contributed to the support of their families largely through home-production tasks and farm duties. But from the colonial era into the 19th century, a few women earned money by operating shops taverns and inns, and working in the needle trades and cottage industries.

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (UPI) -South African police armed with shotguns shot and killed a black youth near the home town of black activist Steve Biko and wounded at least three others, police said.

Santa Comes To Jail

SHREWSBURY, England (UPI) - Santa remembered his old pals in jail Thursday and promptly got arrested himself. Derek Dodmere, who has spent some time inside for game poaching, donned a Santa Claus costume and used a ladder to climb up to the chimneys of Her Majesty's Prison in broad daylight.

From his sack he scattered Christmas presents of cigarettes and tobacco to 200 inmates in the exercise yard below. As police, prison officers and soldiers in an emergency firefighting truck tried to reach him. Dodmere stood on a chimney pot and called down to the inmates, "Sorry, I couldn't bring the reindeer lads. Some bloody poacher has shot them all."

After an hour. Dodmere agreed to come down and was arrested for illegally taking cigarettes and tobacco into the prison, 135 miles northwest of London.

Palatka's Manure Bowl -- 'For The Good Ole Boys'-

PALATKA (UPI) — The crowd won't be as big as the one at the Rose Bowl and media coverage may be limited, but that won't diminish the thrills and excitement at the 15th annual Manure Bowl Jan. 1

T-shirts advertising the game are selling briskly in this northeast Florida community, a radio station has announced it will broadcast play-by-play and a jeweler has donated a goldplated trophy for the winner.

The Manure Bowl — it gets its name because it's played at a cow pasture six miles southeast of Palatka - was first played on New Year's Day 1963 by a group of children whose parents were busy watching the better known bowls on TV.

"All the adults sat around and watched the TV bowl games," said Mrs. Ruth Richter whose son, Steve, is one of the participants. The children would rather be participating. so they started their own football game and it just grew and grew."

Mrs. Richter recalled how the main event at those first Manure Bowls when the players were still youngsters usually came after the

"They used to have their big fight after the game and throw cow chips (dried manure) at one another," she said.

A crowd of about 300 is expected this year to watch the Shirts and Skins renew their rivalry. The bowl is also a community feast and beerdrinking festival, and Mrs. Richter added, "We'll have barbecued chicken, pork and venison."

"It's just a bunch of good ole boys, having a good ole time," said Lou Cameron, a girlfriend of one of the players.

Notre Dame Revisited?

NEW YORK (UPI) - The attorney for one of the three football players involved in the Arkansas crisis says this one isn't at all like Notre Dame's messy scandal three years ago, and if that's the case, why is everybody trying to sweep the whole thing under Something of a pall fell over most of South Bend in 1974 when it came to light that a woman had complained to the sheriff's office she had been raped by some Notre Dame students in one of the dormitories of the school.

Although the woman swore out no formal complaint, Notre Dame officials conducted a hearing regarding the incident, after which six of the team's football players were cleared of criminal charges, as far as the school was concerned, but drew a year's suspension for violating the school's dormitory code forbidding after-hour visits by women.

The pattern in the Arkansas' affair is strikingly similar. On Wednesday, Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz suspended three of his offensive starters, running backs Ben Cowins and Micheal Forrest and wide receiver Donny Bobo, and said they would not play in the Orange Bowl game against Oklahoma on Jan. 2. The obvious question was what were they being suspended for.

but Holtz would not provide any reason. "The players will not play in the football game. Last Time: Sanford, 1963

'When I Saw Mom, I Remembered...'

By JANE CASSELBERRY

Herald Staff Writer For 14 years Maureen Hall Sitton thought her mother was dead.

This Christmas Maureen knows better. Maureen had lived with her father, traveling from one state to another, never knowing that her mother was alive and had never given up her search for her The last time Maureen saw her mother was at age four when the family, living in Sanford, split up. Then, by quirk of fate, an aunt went to Bayfield, Colo., where Maureen, 18, was living with her husband. Curtis Hall told his parents Maureen had died in "She didn't know my married name, but because Bayfield is such a small town and she had heard we were living here, my aunt came for a surprise visit, inquired around about a Hall and found me,' Maureen told a Herald reporter by telephone. It was Maureen's aunt who told Maureen ber mother was still alive. Maureen and her relatives gave this account of the incident, picking up the story from 1963 in "The family was living in Sanford at the time and my parents were going through a divorce." Maureen explained. Her father, John Hall, took her to Kentucky to visit relatives while her mother remained in Sanford with her eight-month-old brother, Curtis Martin Hall, she said. "I was the last one of our family to see Maureen." said her 82-year-old great-grandmother, Lettie Allen, of 2422 Orange Ave., Sanford, who was then living in Winchester, KY. After the visit, John Hall and Maureen just dropped from sight. Mrs. Allen lives with her daughter, Helen Padgett, Maureen's great-aunt. Mrs. Padgett said that young Hall had kept in touch with his father, who had never revealed his whereabouts. She said Maureen's mother had tried in vain to find her ex husband and daughter. At one time,

Nova Scotia. But there was no record of the death at the Bureau of Vital Statistics. Maureen said her father had told her that her mother and grandparents were dead, and that her mother, "never wanted me anyway. That is what always hurt the most when I was growing up," she

She said to avoid being traced, her father kept them on the move and they lived in "Wyoming, California, Wisconsin, all over. My dad remarried and he and his wife were together off an on for four years," she said, "but they are separated now." "My aunt came to see me last summer and that's when I found out about my mother," Maureen said. "My aunt had not seen me since I was six. I asked her about my mother and she told me she was still living, but didn't know where. She said ther were relatives in Winchester, KY., and that the family at one time lived in Sanford, Florida. "I learned then that everything I ever believed birth records and everything else for several months, but she had remarried and I did not know her last name. Later I found out her new name was Helen Bennett and she was living in Jacksonville, but that is a big city and the schools would not release any information." In desperation, Maureen wrote letters to the Evening Herald and to a newspaper in Winchester appealing for help in locating her mother. Within hours after the letter appeared in the Winchester paper, she received a phone call from a man who said, "I am your Uncle Bill," she said "I was so shocked when I found out I had aunts, uncles, a great aunt and a great-grandmother."

'I was so shocked when I found out

I had aunts, uncles...' Maureen said. Soon, she was talking by phone to her mother in Jacksonville and other relatives in Sanford. Later, Maureen flew to Jacksonville for a reunion with her mother and brother, Cutis. Shortly after there was a reunion with relatives in Sanford. Curtis had been adopted as a child by his stepfather, Preston Bennett, who was the only father he could remember, she said. Because of her brother's close resemblance to his father, Maureen said when she first saw him she was shocked because she momentarily thought it was her father. See REUNION, Page 2A
