Bush reverses tax opposition

WASHINGTON — President Bush, reversing a long-standing opposition to tax increases, announced that "it is clear to me" the need to reduce the budget requires "tax revenue increases" and cuts in domestic spending.

In a brief two-paragraph statement following a two-hour meeting with Republican and Democratic leaders, Bush laid out a new package of proposals.

Thues moves on

ORLANDO — The New Jersey Nets, surprising Orlando with their interest, acquired veteran guard Reggie Thues from the Magic for second-round draft choices in 1993 and 1995.

Thues, 32, was a first-round selection of the Chicago Bulls in the 1978 NBA draft. He was traded to the Kings in 1984 and was dealt to Atlanta two years ago. After just one season, the Hawks left Thues unprotected in the expansion draft and the Magic made the 6-foot-7 guard their second pick behind Sidney Green.

Sidewalk surfers receive boost

SANFORD — Sidewalk surfers received a boost from city hall last night when commissioners unanimously voted to allow recreational ramps to be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. instead of from after school to dark.

"We just extended the hours for the ramps, because kids aren't in school in the summer," Mayor Bettye Smith told the audience.

The skateboard restrictions were adopted earlier this year.

Pool ordinance

SANFORD — The city commission passed an amendment to the swimming pool ordinance on the first of two readings last night.

The amendment dictates that enclosures to swimming pools should include doors with latches on them to keep them closed, as a safety and security measure to prevent people from using pools without owners' consent.

Serpent suspect collared

RICHLAND HILLS, Texas — Police thought at first the woman was overreacting when she called to report a snake was breaking into her house.

Sgt. Mike Davis said he figured she had seen a grass snake. But when he arrived at the woman's Richland Hills home in northern Texas, he found a 10-foot python on her porch.

TELLING PARENTS ABOUT ABORTION

Just over half of all minors who have had an abortion say they have told at least one parent about it, according to research.

Parental-consent ruling doesn't affect Florida

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is not affected by a pair of U.S. Supreme Court rulings upholding parental notification laws that limit a minor's access to abortion, several officials said Monday.

"Florida's state constitutional right to privacy protects young women seeking abortion services from being legislatively forced to obtain parental consent," said Robyn E. Blumner, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Florida.

Tom Horgan, executive director of the Florida Catholic Conference, agreed that the rulings would have no impact in Florida, but added that the high court's actions could revive efforts to adopt a parental-consent requirement in the state.

"It may be possible for [the Legislature] to come back and adopt a parental notification law, or it may be necessary to come back and amend the Constitution and clarify that it does not extend to abortion," he said.

Horgan and Blumner were referring to the Florida Supreme Court's ruling last October striking down a parental-consent law. The court said the state's right-to-privacy provision, approved several years earlier by voters as an amendment to the state constitution, protects minors as well as adults.

The U.S. Supreme Court, in one 6-3 ruling by Justice Anthony Kennedy, upheld Monday an Ohio parental notification law. In a second ruling by Justice John Paul Stevens, the court upheld portions of a similar law from Minnesota.

The court's decision upheld not only mere notice, but requirements that impose a 48-hour waiting period for a minor to obtain an abortion, and a requirement that both parents be notified as long as there is a legal system in place for minors to bypass their parents.

About half the states require some parental involvement. See Abortion, Page 5A

SANFORD — Residents of Sanford face a 1 mill property tax rate hike to pay for a 10 percent city budget increase that may have to be financed with cuts in personnel, city officials revealed today.

The city's proposed spending plan for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 has increased to $22.14 million from $20.9 million. The proposed property tax rate would increase from 6.87 mills to 7.87 mills.

City Manager Frank Faison said this morning that the city is mandated by the state to increase financial contributions to pension funds and for workers compensation. Faison said that contributions to pensions have gone up to 17 percent and have been increasing for a couple of years.

Tax plan OKed for city's mall

By J. BRADLEY DILLING
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The city commission last night agreed to grant a $3.3 million tax increment finance package to an Indianapolis developer to build a mall that is expected to bring 5,000 jobs to the area.

The commission voted 4 to 1 to grant the TIF to Melvin Simon and Associates to build roads to accommodate the proposed $100 million Seminole Town Centre mall. The plan would use a percentage of tax revenues collected on the 214-acre mall property at Interstate 4 and State Road 46 to help build roads to accommodate mall traffic.

Commissioner A.A. McClanahan, who cast the dissenting vote, said, "The TIF was created with the intention of correcting blighted areas. What's blighted out there? It's a cow pasture. I will not support this. I have been against it from the very beginning."

McClanahan said only a loophole in a state statute allowed for the TIF to exist.

"The law says that a TIF can only happen in a blighted area, and they define blighted as any place that doesn't have adequate transportation needs, before or after the development of a [building] project. It's a glitch. They are creating the need for the transportation network in an area that doesn't need it and calling it blight," he said.

McClanahan also disagreed with a timetable submitted by a vice president of Melvin Simon and Associates, outlining the amounts of money to be made each year of the 11 years and the percentage of the money to go to the TIF.

Leaked gasoline appears to be contained

By J. MARK BARFIELD

GENEVA — The 800 gallons of gasoline that spilled into the soil under Geneva Grocery June 10 appears to be contained at the store site, a state environmental official said Monday.

Bill Postwick, administrator of the waste management division of the Central Florida office of the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, said four of five borings taken Monday near the spill site showed no gasoline had reached the 45-foot depth.

One boring about 50 feet northeast of the spill site revealed low levels of the hydrocarbon elements of gasoline, but DER officials also discovered a tank containing an unknown liquid that might have leaked into the ground, Postwick said.

Postwick said an additional boring will be done to determine if the newly found tank had leaked or if the spilled gasoline had spread. See Geneva, Page 2A

Florida per-person income rises

United Press International

CANESVILLE — Florida's per capita income rose 2 percent after inflation between 1988 and 1989. Largely because of profits from property transfers in the southern part of the state, according to a study released Monday.

At $17,691 Florida's per capita average ranked 14th nationally, slightly above the national average of $17,007, according to a new University of Florida study of federal Commerce Department statistics.

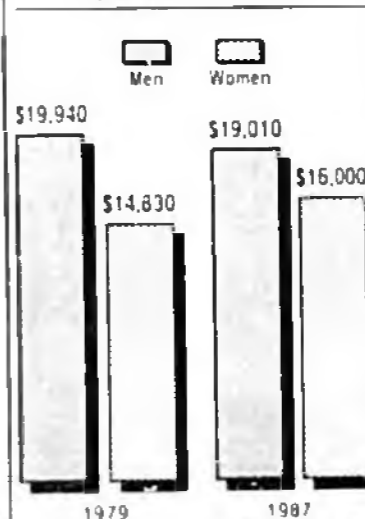

The state ranked 24th in 1986, said David Denslow, interim director of the university's Bureau of Economic and Business Research.

That's good news because we're moving up relative to the rest of the country. Denslow said a large part of the chief cause is Florida's heavy reliance on property income, which is rising faster than the rest of the country, he said. However, wages in Florida haven't risen proportionally.

The 2 percent rise follows a 1.12 percent increase between 1986 and 1988, said the study, prepared by Florida See Income, Page 5A

Historical group sets new agenda

LAKE MARY — The newly enlarged Lake Mary Historical Commission met for the first time last night at the old city hall building to work on a new slate of officers and discuss proposed artwork to be displayed at the new city hall, scheduled to be dedicated July 14.

Outgoing Chairman Robert Petree opened the meeting with a report on the background of the commission, formed in 1983 when Petree was city attorney for Lake Mary. Petree said the group's first project was examination of a manuscript written by Margaret Greene Wesley on the history of the city, and through assistance from the city commission, got the book published. He noted that the book, "Lake Mary's Beginnings" is still available through the city clerk, and that proceeds from the sale help finance the work of the Historical Commission.

"The main goal of the historical commission is to function as an advisory board, especially in areas concerning the historical development of the city," Petree said. "We must always ask ourselves, 'What can this commission do to fulfill its mandate from the city?'"

During the introduction of new members, many revealed they were third, fourth, even fifth generation families living in Lake Mary. One new member, City Commissioner David Meador, reported his children represented the "fifth generation

Petree said due to the pressing needs of his law firm in Orlando, he would be unable to continue serving as chairman, and suggested a nominating committee be formed to select a new chairman, vice chairman, secretary and treasurer. The committee will be headed by Wesley.

Representing the city, Associate Planner Mark Regentin addressed the group telling them of the city's needs for

Funeral set for officer killed at friend's funeral

United Press International

ORLANDO — Funeral arrangements were announced Monday for a motorcycle police officer killed while escorting the widow of another officer to her husband's funeral.

Officer Mike Burson, 42, an 18-year department veteran died Saturday when his motorcycle went out of control on a rain slick road and slid under another vehicle, said police Sgt. Mike Holloway.

His funeral was set for Wednesday at 10 a.m. at St. James Catholic Cathedral with burial to follow at Greenwood Cemetery, Holloway said.

Burson was escorting the widow of police Officer Steve Raffin, who had died of natural causes, to his funeral when his motorcycle hit a median reflector, Holloway said.

"Normally you hit one of those on the motorcycle, it makes a little bump — but it put his front wheel into a wobble," Holloway said.

The cycle went under an oncoming vehicle and Burson was pronounced dead about 45 minutes later at Orlando Regional Medical Center with massive head injuries.

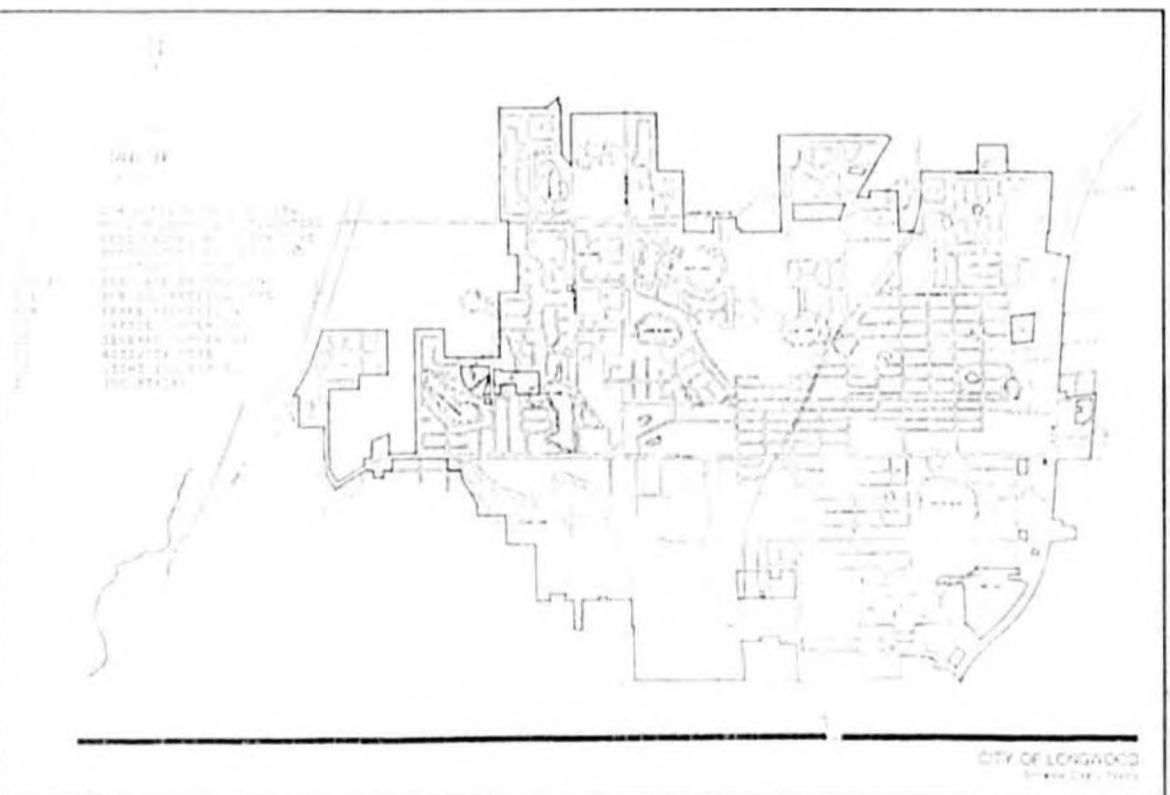

Burson is survived by a wife and two sons, ages 17 and 9.

Shuttle leak eludes detection

By WILLIAM HARWOOD
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — Exhaustive weekend tests failed to find a leak in a fuel line fitting taken from the grounded shuttle Columbia's external tank, focusing attention on hardware aboard the orbiter itself, officials said Monday.

Shuttle program director Robert Crippen ordered engineers to remove the 17-inch wide disconnector fitting from Columbia and to replace it with hardware currently installed aboard the new space shuttle Endeavour.

While Columbia remains officially targeted for launch in mid-August, sources said the decision to remove the fitting could delay the flight to later in the month.

The shuttle Atlantis, meanwhile, is on track for launch the morning of July 25 on a secret military flight.

In a crucial test, engineers plan to pump supercold liquid hydrogen rocket fuel aboard Atlantis Thursday to make sure there are no leaks like the one that grounded Columbia.

Atlantis' flight, the longest yet, is a 10-day, 100,000-mile mission. It is scheduled to begin Thursday at the Kennedy Space Center. An official launch target date is expected to be announced at the end of the week.

Friday, assuming no problems crop up during the fueling test.

Columbia's launch on a 10-day astronomy mission, originally planned for May 30, was put on hold indefinitely when hydrogen gas began seeping into the ship's engine room the night before blastoff as the ship's external tank was being loaded with fuel.

Despite a battery of tests, engineers were unable to pinpoint the source of the leak, although it clearly involved the 17-inch disconnector fitting, which allows the shuttle to separate from its tank once in orbit.

Gate valves on either side of the point where the fuel line enters the belly of the orbiter are open during launch, allowing liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen rocket fuel to flow from the external tank into the ship's three main engines.

Once the engines shut down, the valves are closed to prevent any fuel that might be trapped in the lines from spilling out. The tank is then abandoned.

The 17-inch disconnector hardware mounted on Columbia was first tested in 1984 and shipped to a Rockwell International facility in Downey, Calif., for extensive testing. Engineers were unable to get the valve assembly to leak even in the presence of liquid hydrogen.

Deciphering the numbers

The fact that a team of mathematicians has succeeded in splitting a 155-digit number into its three prime factors is hardly the sort of news that has most people gripping the edges of their chairs.

Nevertheless, in the cryptologist's arcane world of espionage and secret messages, it is a major triumph. Only a year ago the feat seemed utterly impossible.

But researchers Hendrik Lenstra, of the University of California at Berkeley, and John Pollard, of Reading, England, have come close to confirming Edgar Allan Poe's famous dictum that human ingenuity cannot concoct a cipher that human ingenuity cannot resolve.

But what practical effect does their mathematical discovery have on the man in the street?

Perhaps more than he realizes. Bankers use these large code numbers to move funds electronically. Phone companies use them to ensure privacy. The Defense Department relies on them for security. And governments use them to transmit secret intelligence.

Breaking other nations' codes produces more and better information than all the world's spies put together.

History is peppered with references to cryptology. Mary Queen of Scots was executed after an enciphered plot to assassinate Queen Elizabeth I was unraveled by Thomas Phelippes.

Nearer home, the Zimmermann telegram propelled America into World War I. German Foreign Minister Arthur Zimmermann offered Mexico the return of her "lost properties" of Texas, New Mexico and Arizona if she would declare war on the United States. The coded telegram was intercepted and deciphered. America's outrage erupted into a declaration of war on Germany.

During World War II, the solution of coded Japanese naval messages led to the American victory at Midway Island. Conversely, the U.S. Marine Corps confounded Japanese code-breakers throughout the Pacific with a code fashioned from the little-known Navajo language.

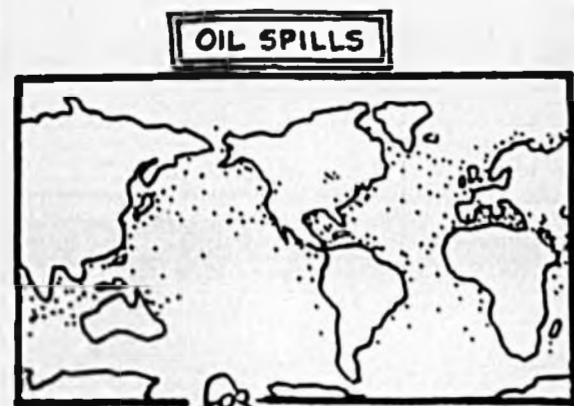

The discovery of a way to break more-modern codes based on lengthy numbers is likely to have an immediate impact on security systems used widely in American commerce and industry. And, since national security is no longer protected by codes based on 155-digit numbers, the discovery also will influence the way the federal government conducts its secret business.

But breaking codes and gathering intelligence is only part of the game: that was made plain in 1941, when the attack on Pearl Harbor succeeded despite the breaking of the Japanese code by American experts.

No matter how good we become at solving codes, military and diplomatic intelligence will always need to be backed up by another form of intelligence.

As the latest team of mathematicians has just shown, there simply is no replacement for human ingenuity.

Berry's World

I'm not suggesting racism in that reaction, but it does indicate a double standard. One person's failure seems so much more riveting than others' success. Even more disturbing was the clear belief on the part of many people I met on reporting trips around the country this past year that Marion Barry was so typical of Washington politicians that he might well be able to continue in politics if he chose.

I have lunch bets to collect all across the country from people who challenged my flat assertion, even before the FBI sting that led to his indictment, that Barry was finished. Some of those people are so cynical about Washington, the political capital, that they think literally anything goes. In other cases, they seemed to believe that the predominantly black constituency of Washington, D.C., would not hold a black politician to the same standards that they themselves would expect of their elected officials.

They could not understand — or believe — that the people who were angriest with Barry were Washingtonians of both races who had witnessed the steady deterioration of local government services and standards as the mayor's personal behavior led him into deeper and deeper trouble.

The Barry story has elements of personal and political tragedy. Coming to Washington during the civil-rights struggle, he showed himself a vivid personality and, quickly, a gifted politician, the first authentic, up-from-the-streets leader Washington had produced, when Barry in 1978 defeated Walter Washington, an important transition figure in Washington's journey from federal colony to home rule, self-government really began.

For all the embarrassment his behavior has brought to the city, Washington today is a more vital and thriving community than it was before Barry became mayor. It is also a more corrupt city. Unrestrained by long-established governmental norms and largely uninhibited by the threat of political competition, Barry and his friends followed a path of municipal favoritism deeply etched in American history. Lincoln Steffens could have covered the District Building beat blindfolded these past dozen years. The practices that landed more than a dozen officials of the Barry administration, including two deputy mayors, in court and in jail were exactly those Steffens had described almost a century ago in Cleveland, Philadelphia and other cities.

It took the contractors and developers — some of them opportunistic blacks and many of them long-established whites — very little time to set up mutually beneficial dealings with the Barry inner circle. Forgotten in all the publicity about his more recent gaudy exploits is the fact that the first taint on Barry's record was the disclosure of a sweetheart mortgage deal a District savings and loan association had given him soon after he became mayor.

The real surprise is that so many people seemed to have thought that in this wicked age and especially in this city, Barry could get away with it. Whether or not he is convicted, he has lost what he most craved: power. And the people of Washington — who are better than the nation apparently thinks them to be — have a chance to find leadership more worthy of their trust.

Washington — As the world's foremost practitioner of labial literacy, George Bush, has a phenomenal capacity for communicating his intentions when he believes in them. "Read my lips. No new taxes." That's about as straightforward a statement as you could ever find from a straight-talking man. He is equally straightforward in his opposition to abortion and burning the American flag. Pass a constitutional amendment. You can't get any more direct than that. But when he is forced to tap dance around a policy about which he is uneasy, he tergiversates.

CHUCK STONE

Bush's moral compass goes awry

For example, does he support majority rule in South Africa? Only if it protected the rights of all, he told James McCartney of the Knight-Ridder Washington bureau. "I want to have that matter sorted out through negotiation.... I think we're going to have to be a little careful there." The reader has to be extra careful to discover what Bush really means here. Instead of a firm "read my lips" declaration, this statement requires an interpretation. Translation: Unless a degree of white control can be maintained, Bush doesn't think South Africa is ready for democracy.

There is another issue far closer to American families — legislation mandating unpaid leave for workers with new babies or family emergencies — that also exposes George Bush as a magnificent well-intentioned hypocrite. During his 1988 presidential campaign, candidate Bush appeared before a group of Republican women in Illinois and declared: "We also need to assure that women do not have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child or caring for a child during a serious illness. This is what I mean when I talk about a gentler nation. That isn't fair the other way, and it's not right, and we've got to do something about it."

"Two questions: Who's we? And what is it that we're going to do? If 'we' meant a future presidential 'we,' then President Bush has a glorious 1990 opportunity to fulfill candidate Bush's 1988 pledge. His promised veto of the Family and Medical Leave Act — passed by both houses of Congress — is a hypocritical renege on his commitment to a "gentler nation." Granted, Bush's concern for the impact of this legislation on business has economic merit. But he could have at least convened a national conference of family organizations supporting the legislation and CEOs whose businesses would be affected.

When he is forced to tap dance around a policy about which he is uneasy, he tergiversates.

That would have sent a powerful signal that "we" were really trying to address a concern of candidate Bush. Even some members of his own party are worried that a Bush veto of legislation that hits people where they live will hurt Republicans this fall.

"This is a very precarious position for our party to be in," lamented Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., who supported the bill. "It's clear-cut that the Republican Party should be supporting this.... We've protected the legitimate concerns of small business." Instead, George Bush is revealing a tragically misplaced sense of values. He is placing a higher moral priority on protecting the American flag — which already enjoys a far greater protection than any proposed constitutional amendment could give it, the respect and love of 99.999 percent of all the American people — than on preserving the American family, which needs far more economic assistance than the flag needs cosmetic protection.

Washington rises above race

Washington — Cleaning out the garage over the weekend, a headline in an old newspaper caught my attention. "Barry Lashes Out Against Allegations of Using Drugs," it read.

This particular Washington Post happened to date only from last Sept. 16. But the running story of Washington, D.C., Mayor Marion Barry and his battle with drug allegations goes back a lot farther than that.

Last week, after finally admitting his past problems as a drug-abuser, the mayor announced he would not seek a fourth term. He is, instead, standing trial for drug and perjury charges stemming from the FBI cocaine-smoking sting in a Washington hotel last January. And all across the country, judging from the press reaction, people are jumping to erroneous conclusions about the meaning of the Barry saga. It's understandable that the story caught the public's fancy. When the local U.S. Attorney let it be known that he had videotaped Barry doing drugs with a fashion-model girlfriend, the saga of the swinging mayor obviously intrigued people who normally have little interest in the local politics of the nation's capital.

Still, it was surprising to see the news of his noncandidacy positioned as the lead story in the New York Times and to get such heavy play in newspapers and television broadcasts from coast to coast.

Barry's announcement that he would not run drew far more coverage than the success other black politicians had achieved in the immediately preceding days in winning precedent-setting, contested nominations for senator from North Carolina, governor of South Carolina and lieutenant governor of Arkansas.

I'm not suggesting racism in that reaction, but it does indicate a double standard. One person's failure seems so much more riveting than others' success. Even more disturbing was the clear belief on the part of many people I met on reporting trips around the country this past year that Marion Barry was so typical of Washington politicians that he might well be able to continue in politics if he chose.

I have lunch bets to collect all across the country from people who challenged my flat assertion, even before the FBI sting that led to his indictment, that Barry was finished. Some of those people are so cynical about Washington, the political capital, that they think literally anything goes. In other cases, they seemed to believe that the predominantly black constituency of Washington, D.C., would not hold a black politician to the same standards that they themselves would expect of their elected officials.

They could not understand — or believe — that the people who were angriest with Barry were Washingtonians of both races who had witnessed the steady deterioration of local government services and standards as the mayor's personal behavior led him into deeper and deeper trouble.

The Barry story has elements of personal and political tragedy. Coming to Washington during the civil-rights struggle, he showed himself a vivid personality and, quickly, a gifted politician, the first authentic, up-from-the-streets leader Washington had produced, when Barry in 1978 defeated Walter Washington, an important transition figure in Washington's journey from federal colony to home rule, self-government really began.

For all the embarrassment his behavior has brought to the city, Washington today is a more vital and thriving community than it was before Barry became mayor. It is also a more corrupt city. Unrestrained by long-established governmental norms and largely uninhibited by the threat of political competition, Barry and his friends followed a path of municipal favoritism deeply etched in American history. Lincoln Steffens could have covered the District Building beat blindfolded these past dozen years. The practices that landed more than a dozen officials of the Barry administration, including two deputy mayors, in court and in jail were exactly those Steffens had described almost a century ago in Cleveland, Philadelphia and other cities.

It took the contractors and developers — some of them opportunistic blacks and many of them long-established whites — very little time to set up mutually beneficial dealings with the Barry inner circle. Forgotten in all the publicity about his more recent gaudy exploits is the fact that the first taint on Barry's record was the disclosure of a sweetheart mortgage deal a District savings and loan association had given him soon after he became mayor.

The real surprise is that so many people seemed to have thought that in this wicked age and especially in this city, Barry could get away with it. Whether or not he is convicted, he has lost what he most craved: power. And the people of Washington — who are better than the nation apparently thinks them to be — have a chance to find leadership more worthy of their trust.

The saga of the swinging mayor intrigued people who normally have little interest in local politics.

Fed's new building may cost $1 billion

WASHINGTON — What has been hailed as one of the most innovative federal buildings in history, second only in size to the Pentagon, now has a price tag to match its excess and congressional investigators want to know why.

Why has it nearly doubled in price? Why did the development contract go to the highest bidder? And why did Washington Mayor Marion Barry have a say in who got that contract?

The building is just one more example of the twisted way in which the federal government shops for office space — leasing when it should buy, buying when it should lease and paying more than it should in both cases.

The project is an International Culture and Trade Center in Washington, D.C., on the Pennsylvania Avenue thoroughfare between the White House and the Capitol. The concept for the building is fuzzy — federal offices from various government agencies, including some that deal with trade policy, plus a performing arts center and shops. The plan is to have a private developer build the trade center and lease it to the federal government for 30 years, after which the taxpayers would own it.

It was inevitable that the federal government couldn't pull off a project of such magnitude — 3.1 million square feet — without stumbling. Construction has not yet begun and the price tag, once estimated to be $450 million, is now well over $800 million. It may hit $1 billion before Congress says enough is enough.

A presidential commission, the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp., made up of business people, federal bureaucrats and Washington, D.C., government officials, is overseeing the project.

Some members of Congress suspect the PADC may have violated the law in the way the development contract was awarded, and that the rising costs will turn into a major financial disaster.

"It may be the biggest white elephant the government has ever gotten itself involved in," one congressional insider told our associate Scott Sleek.

Last October, the PADC gave the contract to the Delta Partnership, a company that offered to do the job for $746 million, which was nearly $250 million higher than the lowest bidder. The PADC said simply that it liked the Delta design better than the others. Delta is controlled by people who have developed other controversial projects in Washington, including one man who is a former consultant to the PADC.

Barry is a voting member of the PADC but rarely casts his ballot. He is normally represented at meetings by one of his underlings. But the mayor showed up at the October meeting and cast his vote for Delta. We have learned that Congress is probing the legality of Barry's vote because of a law that says federal money can only be committed by federal employees. One of the losing bidders and a minority contractors coalition have sued the federal government for giving the work to Delta. Their suit claims the PADC made some last minute changes to the specifications so Delta could qualify. Before that tinkering, the General Services Administration and other government agencies had said that Delta's proposal wasn't up to par, particularly on the issue of minority participation in the work.

Before the vote, Barry, the black mayor of a predominantly black city, had written a letter to the PADC saying that "commitments to affirmative action" were just as important as the design of the building.

Why did Washington Mayor Marion Barry have a say in who got that contract?

Abortion

In the abortion decision of minors and statistics show that over 1 million teenagers between the ages of 15 and 19 become pregnant each year. About 40 percent of those pregnancies end in abortion.

Blumner said the court's actions in upholding the Minnesota law with a judicial bypass, the Ohio single-parent consent requirement and the 48-hour waiting period significantly broadened state legislative opportunities to regulate a minor's reproductive choices.

"The sad part of all this is that an overwhelming percentage of pregnant youngsters choose, without legal compulsion, to involve a parent in the abortion decision," she said.

"It is only when a teen faces a violent or distorted reaction by a parent that she chooses not to discuss the matter with her family. Yet these laws force communication even in highly dysfunctional family situations," said Blumner.

Anti-abortion forces in Florida have considered mounting an effort in the state to win passage of a referendum removing the parental-consent requirement from the Constitution, but they concede that the process is difficult and not likely to succeed.

Several leaders have said they will focus their efforts instead on defeating pro-choice lawmakers and candidates in the November elections.

but average 39 percent at the end of 14 years.

The other commissioners were far more supportive.

"I went down to the Altamonte Mall — I almost never go — and all the way down there, I saw so many people from Sanford," Commissioner Whitey Eckstein said. "If they go all the way down there, think what we'll have here."

Mayor Bettye Smith said the mall would begin earning tax money quickly, because malls are, among other things, favorite dating spots for teenagers.

Commissioner Bob Thomas praised the mall for the jobs it would bring.

"We'll get so many people working," Thomas said. "We could really put a dent in unemployment."

Commissioner Lon Howell said he would be in favor of the mall, as long as developers didn't ask for more tax money.

"If they want one penny more from the city, then I am not in favor of this."

The commissioner said if the developer earned less money than was on the proposal, the tax money garnered by the city would also be less.

After the commission meeting, Schneider said the way TIFs work is through percentages, not flat sums.

"I think (McClanahan) thought they were going to get a straight sum, no matter how much money the project earns, and that just isn't the way a TIF works," Simon said.

The mall project also is facing an appeal from the state Department of Community Affairs, which recently released a memorandum saying the developer was responsible for meeting the needs of affordable, or low-income, housing.

The memo said the developer would have to provide for 900 low-income living units.

Bruce Scott, a representative for Central Florida Legal Services, said he was pleased that the state was addressing the affordable housing issue.

Income

fell in 26 of Florida's 67 counties, Denslow said.

Four Florida metropolitan statistical areas ranked in the top 25 in the nation in per capita personal income in 1988: West Palm Beach was tenth at $22,824, followed by Sarasota with $22,100, Naples with $21,595 and Ft. Lauderdale with $20,533, the study said.

The metropolitan area with the highest average income was Bridgeport, Conn. at $29,084, while the lowest was McAllen, Texas at $7,302.

Florida metropolitan areas also held five of the top seven spots nationally for percentage growth in total personal income between 1983 and 1988, the study found. Naples' 87 percent increase was the greatest in the nation, while Ft. Myers ranked second with a 75 percent growth rate. West Palm Beach was fifth with 70.8 percent, Orlando was sixth with 69.6 percent and Ocala ranked seventh with 69.4 percent.

Denslow said a quarter of Florida's income growth comes from the transfer of property, including rent, interest and dividends. It is for that reason that the slowest growth occurred in the less-developed northern half of the state, where fewer people rely on that kind of income, Denslow said.

"South Florida has an incredible share of its income come from property transfer," Denslow said. "North Florida resembles the rest of the U.S. because more of its income comes from wages."

Young recommended beginning the concurrency management system in April 1991 when the county submits its comprehensive growth plan to the state for review. He said the system should be in place no later than when the state approves the plan in September or October 1991.

Concurrency is the state requirement that counties and cities must follow in allowing new construction. If the services are available for the project, then it can be built. If the services aren't available in an area of the county, then a moratorium will be in effect in that area until either the county or the developers build the needed services.

The services that must be available for new development are roads, water, sewer, garbage, drainage, parks and mass transit. Young said some necessary services affected by population growth that aren't included in the concurrency factors are jails and schools.

Young said the system will work when a builder comes to the county building department to get a permit to build a house. The house location will be checked with a computer database to determine if the services are available for the house. If they are, then the building permit can be issued. If the services aren't available, then the builder may have to wait until the services are available before the house can be occupied.

A developer may "reserve" road and other service capacities during the development approval process, but those reservations may last for no more than three years. If construction hasn't begun or some other needed official action has not been sought within the timeframe, the service capacity rights are lost to the next person "in line" for development rights.

Vested developments should be treated the same, Young said. Before the concurrency management system is begun, un-built vested projects will be granted the capacities they need for their approved projects. But if they fail to begin construction within the reservation period, those reserved vested rights will be lost.

Young said developers with vested projects in areas where roads are already congested or a drainage system is poor may be limited to building a portion of their development until the services are improved enough to allow the development to continue.

For new developments, Young recommended the "first come, first serve" method. He said if two developments are seeking services in the same area and there is only enough service capacity to serve one, then the first project submitted and approved wins the development rights. The second project won't be built until additional services are available.

Young recommended allowing some developers to "leap-frog" over earlier submissions if the first developer takes too long in getting his project approved.

Trees

mangroves last year on a Casey Key site where he and associate William H. Burke planned to build expensive homes.

Burke, 65, of Sarasota, pleaded no contest to five counts but County Judge Alan Dakan withheld a finding of guilt and imposed no punishment.

Miller and Burke had been scheduled for trial Tuesday in Fort Myers, where Dakan had ordered the case moved because of publicity in Sarasota.

Assistant State Attorney Steve Cooley said the case against Burke was weak because Burke did not know the trees had been illegally cut. Burke's only responsibility was as an officer of Lots of Casey Key Inc., the company developing the land, Cooley said.

"The evidence against him showing knowledge and intent was questionable," Cooley acknowledged. "With Miller, there was no doubt."

When county environmental officials warned Miller in March 1989 that 2,000 trees on the property had been illegally cut, they reported that he replied: "Go ahead, fine me. It's the cost of doing business."

Then, prosecutors said, Miller had 75 more trees cut, resulting in the charges.

State law enforcement and environmental officials said the case is the first of its kind in which prosecutors have sought jail time. Miller and Burke were charged under a 1983 county tree protection ordinance.

Mangroves serve several ecologically important functions. Their intricate root systems help prevent shoreline erosion, and their branches provide nesting areas and shelter for birds and other wildlife.

Tax hike

a garbage recycling program that would require more people and equipment.

In addition, he said, "Demand for police services has gone up because of the drug problem. In the past five or six years that I have been here, we have had to double the size of the police department from 50 to 100, and those things are not related to growth — not Sanford's growth. That has yet to hit us. We won't be feeling the impact of the mill taxes until 1994."

City Finance Director Carolyn Small said of the total budget amount, "It's a little higher than last year's." She also said, "One mill means about $618,000 to the city. Increases are going across the board."

Small said the budget proposal would go before the city commission on July 2, 3 and 5. She said discussions probably would take four to six days.

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein estimated that the one mill increase would probably mean about $50 more for the owner of a $75,000 home, after the standard exemption.

Eckstein said that he was not in favor of an increase and will make suggestions at the commission's first budget hearing on Monday, but would not reveal what they are.

"I intend to keep the budget down," Eckstein said. "I do not want to go into the reserve fund. The budget has gone up every year since for the past few years. I vote against it last year, and I'll vote against it this year."

To help offset revenue shortfalls, Faison has proposed the freezing of $369,067 in budget accounts and payroll items, although he could not be specific on which items were frozen.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Jogger trial opens with grisly detail

NEW YORK — The prosecutor in the trial of three teens accused of gang raping and beating a woman jogger described in grisly detail the Central Park rampage that left the victim near death.

In her opening statement Monday in state Supreme Court in Manhattan, Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer said a pack of youths went "wilding" through the northern end of the park on April 19, 1989, randomly attacking people.

The defendants' lawyers countered in their statements that the case rests almost solely on confessions that were coerced by police from the defendants.

On Tuesday, several male jogger victims of the rampage were expected to begin taking the stand as the prosecution case unfolds.

Women testify against Barry

WASHINGTON — One woman said Mayor Marion Barry forced her to have sex with him, others testified that he used marijuana and cocaine while in the Virgin Islands, and one simply called him "a pig."

Several of the mayor's former companions took the stand Monday in his drug and perjury trial, but the more familiar name of Rasheeda Moore also crept into the testimony, setting the stage for the star witness's own appearance.

Moore, 39, is the woman who lured Barry into an FBI-police sting operation Jan. 18 at the Vista International Hotel that led to his cocaine possession arrest. She was seen in the courthouse but did not testify Monday.

Four women testified at the trial Monday, including Jonetta Vincent, who was working in the Virgin Islands, and said she smoked marijuana on a boat with city worker Charles Lewis. She said Lewis carried the drug to the front of the boat and shared it with Barry and an unidentified "young lady."

Non-smokers dying from lung cancer

WASHINGTON — About 3,800 non-smoking Americans die each year from lung cancer caused by "secondhand" cigarette smoke, says a preliminary study issued by the Environmental Protection Agency for public comment.

The study, which does not constitute a formal EPA position on passive smoking, also said Monday scientific evidence "strongly indicates" that smoking by parents — particularly the mother — is associated with increased respiratory illness in infants.

The Tobacco Institute criticized the study as "speculation without an adequate scientific foundation." It said the findings were not supported by previous research on passive smoking and probably would not hold up under scrutiny by EPA's Scientific Advisory Board, which will review the study for technical accuracy in preparation for any final EPA findings.

Anti-smoking advocates hailed the study for providing the first specific "body count" attributable to passive smoking. But they said the estimate of 3,800 lung cancer deaths represented only a fraction of the total death toll caused by inhalation of tobacco smoke from other people's cigarettes.

House passes new Amtrak bill

WASHINGTON — The House passed a new Amtrak authorization bill Monday to replace one vetoed by President Bush because of a provision that would have expanded government review of railroad takeovers.

The bill, which was passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate, authorizes $684 million in 1991 and $712 million in 1992 for Amtrak operations.

Bush vetoed the original bill May 24 because of a provision that would have given the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to review the takeover of major railroads by non-rail companies, just as the ICC currently reviews mergers among railroads.

Midway to return to sea Friday

TOKYO — The U.S. aircraft carrier Midway will return to sea Friday for routine flight operations, nine days after a pair of explosions killed two sailors and injured 16 and before the cause of the blasts is determined, a U.S. Navy spokesman said Tuesday.

Cmdr. Henri Chase of the U.S. 7th Fleet's amphibious forces has been appointed to head the main investigation team searching for the cause of the explosions, said Cmdr. Mark Neuhart, spokesman for the 7th Fleet.

The 45-year-old Midway was rocked by two explosions while on routine maneuvers June 20 off the coast of Japan.

Homicide witness spots second killing

NEW YORK — A witness in a homicide case being driven to court in the Bronx spotted a second slaying as she peered from a detective's car window and alerted the officer who then nabbed the suspect, police said.

Detective George Reich was driving two women, who were witnesses to a May 14 killing to court about 12:45 p.m. Monday, said Officer Fred Weiner, a police spokesman.

"One of the women told Reich she saw a male outside who had just been stabbed by another male," Weiner said.

The detective hopped out of the car, ran after the suspect and managed to grab him, he said.

The victim, Angel Vasquez, 59, of the Bronx, died about 1:30 p.m. at Lincoln Hospital, Weiner said.

Death ruling seeks balance of state, individual rights

By STEVEN HEILBRONNER
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruling allowing states to require extensive evidence of a person's wishes before withdrawing life support, is a classic case of an attempt to balance the rights of an individual and the responsibilities of the state, legal experts said.

In its first ruling on the subject, the Supreme Court held 5-4 on Monday that states can legislate standards that individuals must meet if they wish to cut off life-sustaining equipment in terminal cases. The ruling by Chief Justice William Rehnquist will make it tougher for families to end such treatment for loved ones who are in a coma.

The ruling stems from a Missouri case involving attempts by the parents of Nancy Beth Cruzan to end medical treatment. Cruzan has been in an irreversible coma since a January 1983 car accident.

The high court affirmed the decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri, which held that trial testimony in the Cruzan case did not amount to "clear and convincing" proof of the patient's desire to have withheld food and nutrition.

"The Supreme Court makes clear that a competent individual can refuse nourishment but that the Constitution permits the state to impose standards," said Barbara Mishkin, a Washington lawyer specializing in health law.

While state officials and the Bush administration praised the court's decision, private attorneys and medical ethicists worried that the ruling could have negative effects on the thousands of people who lack explicit wills but are terminally ill.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh called the case "difficult," but said the decision was "proper on the basis of the argument we presented" in a friend of the court brief.

But Alan Meisel, a professor of law and psychiatry at the University of Pittsburgh, said, "I would have hoped that the court would have said that states cannot require 'clear and convincing evidence.'" Meisel, who has written widely on the subject, added that the standard, adopted by only two states — Missouri and New York — "infringes on the personal liberty of patients to terminate life support."

The American Medical Association and other medical groups agreed.

Dr. Nancy Dickey, former chairman of the AMA's Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs, said the best decisions are made at a patient's bedside, not in a courtroom.

The decision "really puts a lot of onus on the individual to be crystal clear," said George Smith, a bioethics professor at Catholic University in Washington. "On the other hand," he said, "maybe that's good."

Bush accepts tax increase need

By BUD NEWMAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush, reversing a long-standing opposition to tax increases, announced Tuesday that "it is clear to me" the need to reduce the budget requires "tax revenue increases" and cuts in domestic spending.

In a brief two-paragraph statement following a two-hour meeting with Republican and Democratic leaders, Bush laid out a new package of proposals, without giving details, and said that the "bipartisan leadership agree with me on these points."

The president also said that "growth incentives, discretionary spending reductions, orderly reductions in defense expenditures, and budget process reform" are needed "to assure that any bipartisan agreement is enforceable and that the deficit problem is brought under responsible control."

He said the budget negotiations "will resume promptly with a view toward reaching substantive agreement as quickly as possible."

"It is clear to me that both the size of the deficit problem and the need for a package that can be enacted require all of the following: entitlement and mandatory program reform; tax revenue increases; growth incentives; discretionary spending reductions; orderly reductions in defense expenditures; and budget process reform — to assure that any bipartisan agreement is enforceable and that the deficit problem is brought under responsible control."

"The bipartisan membership agree with me on these points," he said.

It was the first time that Bush has mentioned tax increases since the budget summit negotiations, although he had appeared to be easing away from his presidential campaign promise to "read my lips, no new taxes."

Court upholds restrictive abortion laws for minors

By HENRY J. RESKE
UPI Supreme Court Reporter

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, continuing the process of undoing the landmark Roe vs. Wade ruling, upheld Monday the constitutionality of two tough parental notification laws limiting a minor's access to abortion. The court, in one 6-3 ruling by Justice Anthony Kennedy, upheld an Ohio parental notification law. In a second ruling by Justice John Paul Stevens, the court upheld portions of a similar law from Minnesota. The court's action continues a process begun last year in its ruling in Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services of chipping away at the right to abortion guaranteed in the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling. While the court has previously upheld both parental notice and parental consent laws, Monday's opinions take the laws further.

The court's decision upheld not only mere notice, but requirements that impose a 48-hour waiting period, and a requirement that both parents be notified as long as there is a legal system in place for minors to bypass their parents.

The court's ruling will have a wide effect.

Reaction mixed to high court's abortion ruling

By HENRY J. RESKE
UPI Supreme Court Reporter

WASHINGTON — Abortion rights activists said Supreme Court decisions upholding parental notification laws for minors have "ominous implications" while anti-abortion forces declared a "victory for family unity."

While the court's rulings Monday on statutes enacted in Minnesota and Ohio generated emotional reaction from both sides, they also opened the door for further challenges.

In New Jersey, abortion opponents promised to renew their push for a parental consent law, and in Louisiana, the state Senate was set Tuesday to begin debate on a measure to outlaw abortions in most cases. The proposal is essentially designed as a challenge to the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion.

The plan, which proposes to ban all abortions except if the pregnancy endangers the woman's life, would be the toughest abortion law in the country, if enacted. The Louisiana House already has passed the measure.

Senate set to vote on flag amendment

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A constitutional amendment to ban flag desecration faced a symbolic Senate test, one that will have significance only in the November elections.

Because the House last week rejected the amendment, the issue is legislatively dead this year. But it remained politically alive because of the efforts by President Bush and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole to insist on a Senate vote.

The vote was not expected until the early evening on Tuesday, following a series of votes on suggested anti-flag burning statutes and proposed substitutes to the constitutional amendment.

The issue was before Congress because last year, and again two weeks ago, the Supreme Court ruled that flag burning was constitutionally protected.

Lightening Upholstery Does Quality Work

Lightening Upholstery could be thought of as a "Mom and Pop" operation. Yet the professional results that are achieved reflect experience in the upholstery industry.
 "Our employees have 100 years of collective experience," says Margie Mitchell, owner. Margie just opened her business in November of 1988. (She has been upholstering since 1964). A new Sanford resident, she looks forward to meeting people and getting involved in the community.
 Formerly located at 5350 McIntosh Point, Margie recently relocated her business in Crown Square in downtown Sanford. She feels the location is more convenient to her customers and almost inspiring when you consider the history of the building.
 The property on which Crown Square now stands was originally sold by Gen. Henry Shelton Sanford as part of a 12,500 acre tract to Edwyn Sandys Dawes of London, England in 1880.
 The property has been used as a citrus wrap printing plant, a bakery, a small farm and a storage warehouse.
 Renovation of these properties was begun in 1987 and it became the 40,000 square foot complex given the designation "Crown Square". Every effort is being made to retain the original decor of these 70 year old fully fire-sprinkled buildings while incorporating every modern convenience for the pleasure of many commercial enterprises and their clientele.
 Quality professional finished pieces have brought success to the business. She has done a great deal of commercial work for motels, restaurants and offices. Margie points out that she is also expert in professionally restoring fine antiques, as well as other residential use pieces.
 She has an excellent selection and variety of fabrics to choose from.
 So if you love your old sofa or chairs but they are looking a little worn; or if they no longer match your decor...consider reupholstering them. Fine furniture is expensive to replace and reupholstery is the answer.
 Lightening Upholstery is located at 200 North Elm Avenue Annex. For a free estimate call Margie at 324-2770 or leave a message 330-4398.

IN BRIEF

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Reed homers Bosox into first

BOSTON — After all the hitting going on in Fenway Park Monday, the littlest Red Sox player collected the biggest hit of the night.

Jody Reed cracked a solo homer, snapping a 7-7 tie in the sixth inning, to halt Boston's 15-game Fenway losing streak against Toronto and lift the Red Sox into first place in the American League East with a 10-8 victory over the Blue Jays.

"That's my first win right there, playing against Toronto in Fenway," said the 5-foot-9-inch Reed. "Hopefully, it's not the last."

Elsewhere in the AL on Monday night, Minnesota thumped Texas 9-1; Cleveland topped Milwaukee 10-5; Oakland edged Detroit 4-3; and Chicago blanked California 2-0.

Save-the-Juice rally set

Fans of the Orlando Juice will gather Thursday night in a show of support at the All-Star Sports Pub in Orlando to try and keep the Senior Professional Baseball League club playing in Orlando this winter.

Because of ownership problems last year, the Juice are in danger of relocated for the upcoming season.

According to rally organizer Dick Campbell of Wekiva, league founder Jim Morley and league commissioner Rick Harlow have both been invited to the event and have said they will try to attend. John Von Achen, a pitcher for the Juice, is also scheduled to attend.

The rally is set to start at 6:30 p.m. The All-Star Sports Pub is located 924 W. Colonial in Orlando where Malcolm Tate's old Hungry Bear Buffet used to be.

FOOTBALL

Flutie signs with CFL

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Doug Flutie, a former Heisman trophy winner and former NFL quarterback with the New England Patriots, signed a contract Monday with the B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League.

The contract is for one year plus an option. Flutie, who won the Heisman in 1984 while at Boston College, spent the last three seasons with the Patriots. He was released after the 1989 season by the Patriots and was unable to sign with another National Football League team.

The 5-foot-9 Flutie was drafted by the Los Angeles Rams in the 11th round of the 1985 draft. Flutie opted to play with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League before starting his NFL career with Chicago, playing one season with the Bears before moving on to New England.

BASKETBALL

Kimble takes one-on-one crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Bo Kimble, the nation's leading division I college basketball scorer last season, added another title Monday night when he captured the first One-On-One National Collegiate Challenge.

Kimble, from Loyola Marymount, defeated Oregon State's Gary Payton 30-23 for the championship at Trump Plaza, garnering the $100,000 first prize.

In reaching the finals, Kimble defeated Texas's Travis Mays 31-18 in the first round, then held off his former Philadelphia school boy opponent, La Salle's Lionel Simmons 34-30.

Payton, who received $50,000 as runner-up, ousted Virginia Tech's Bimbo Coles 40-36 and Louisiana State's Chris Jackson 23-19 to reach the championship contest.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Reed comes through for Bucs

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland, short on every kind of pitching, was hoping to get six good innings out of inexperienced Rick Reed in his first start of the year Monday night. Reed, trying to earn a permanent spot on the Pirates' roster, had his heart set on seven.

Both got more than they hoped for — a four-hit, 5-0 shutout victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The triumph was the first shutout of the 25-year-old Reed's 10-start, 23-appearance career — as well as the first by a Pirate this season. It put his season mark at 1-0 and his career record at 3-4.

Elsewhere in the NL on Monday night, Cincinnati bested San Francisco 5-2; Los Angeles knocked off Atlanta 5-2; Montreal hammered Chicago 7-3; Houston downed San Diego 5-3; and New York shaded St. Louis 3-2.

Bambinos down to one game

From staff reports

LONGWOOD — Now it's down to a one-game, winner-take-all showdown.

When Southeast Seminole takes on Longwood tonight for the Bambino All-Star district title tonight, a trip to the state tournament beginning on July 12 in Tavares is at stake.

The Bambinos, a division of Babe Ruth Baseball, is for players ages 11 and 12.

Southeast forced a third and deciding game with a 3-1 victory over Longwood Monday night in their second meeting in the tournament.

Longwood won the first contest 9-8, giving each team one loss in the double-elimination competition.

"It was a good ballgame all the way around," said Southeast coach Bill Thomas of Monday's contest. "They were more intense when they have to play better. Tonight they were real intense, sharp."

No one was finer than Southeast pitchers Joe Thomas and Trace Wilson, who gave up only two hits and struck out nine batters.

Thomas threw a no-hitter for three innings before Wilson hurled the last three, striking out six, including the last two batters of the game. Thomas caught the last three innings.

Southeast scored with a single run in the second and two in the fifth. In the second, Nick Cardwell singled, advanced to second and third on overthrows, and scored when Emile Mohrboard singled.

In the fifth inning, Jack Conners walked, stole second and crossed home after two passed balls. Mohrboard stole home for Southeast's final run.

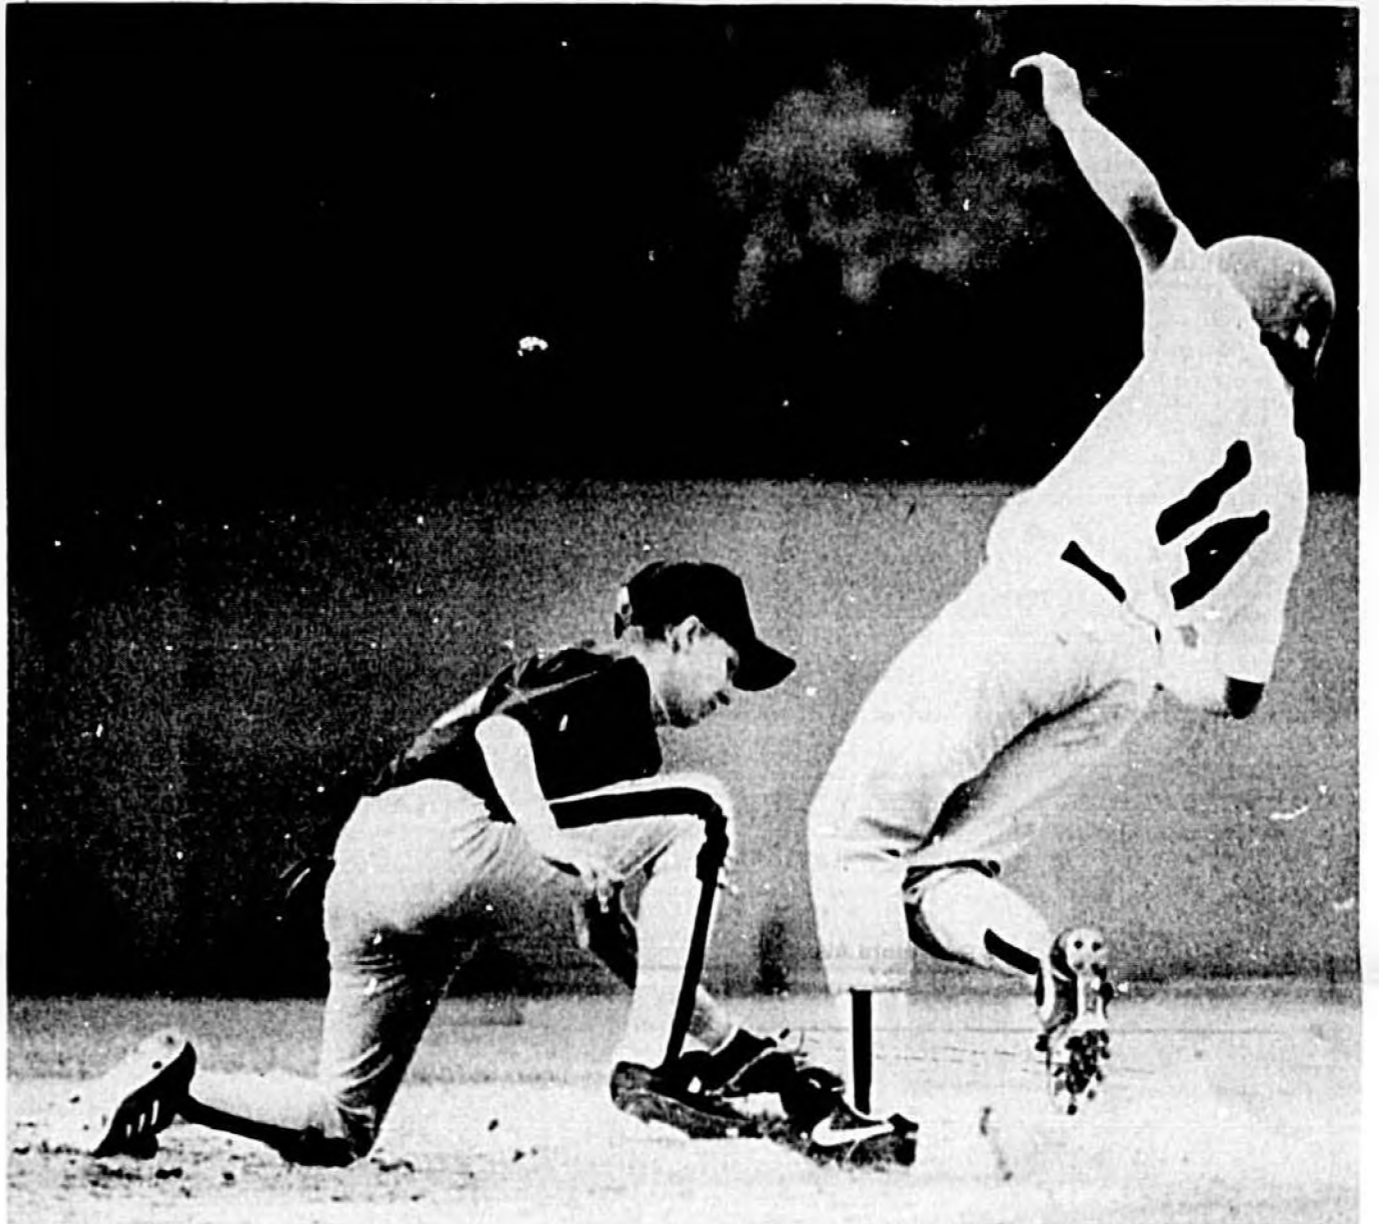

Longwood rallied for one run in the sixth, but it was not enough.

"They've got to put the ball into play," commented Bill Thomas on what his team had to do to win the championship contest. "It we do that, we can force some plays."

Southeast Seminole is a first year league that draws its players from the Oviedo and Tuskawilla areas.

Dana Dearth (No. 14) hit a double and a home run to lead Lake Mary past Trinity Prep.

Rams, Trinity experience growth

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY — Summer sunshine and rain does wonders for growing things like grass and flowers. And it doesn't hurt baseball teams, either.

Take, for a couple of examples, the Lake Mary and Trinity Prep high school summer baseball teams that met in the sunshine, rain and lightning at Lake Mary High School on Monday night in a National Amateur Baseball Federation game won by Lake Mary 6-2.

For Lake Mary, the win was an example of how the young Rams are blossoming into a solid team. For Trinity Prep, a collection of Class 1A players from Seminole and Orange counties, the contest was an exhibition of how competitive they can be against teams representing larger schools.

The game was marked by six errors — five by Trinity Prep — a number not uncommon during the summer season because of players occasionally playing out of position. Lake Mary showed its maturity by turning every error into a run while Trinity Prep refused to let the errors keep them down.

Dana Dearth was the hitting star for Lake Mary, ripping a one out double in the second before launching a two-run home run in the sixth for the Rams' only earned run of the evening.

Dennis Harney added a triple, run scored and an RBI. Scott Johnson doubled and scored a run. Chris Barfield singled and scored a run. Mike Merfittie scored two runs and Steve Reyes added a single.

"That wasn't a surprise to me," said Lake Mary coach Allen Tuttle of Dearth's homer. "I knew he had it in him."

Dearth's blast helped make a winner out of Victor DeSilva, pitching in his first game since the end of the junior varsity season almost three months ago. He gave up a first-inning run on a double by Dan Iosie and an RBI single from Rick Werner, then was touched for another run in the sixth when Iosie scored on a bases-loaded single by Ariel Linares.

In between the two Trinity Prep runs, DeSilva retired 12 of the 15 batters he faced. He was aided by some sharp Lake Mary defense and some not-so-sharp Trinity Prep base running. Twice, Trinity Prep runners were doubled off first base after line drive outs.

"Victor did a great job," said Tuttle. "That's the first game he's pitched in three months."

For Trinity Prep, the fact that they played with a roster of 15 players is an direct improvement over last year, then they had problems with forfeits. According to Coach Al Iosie, who is guiding the team in the absence of Coach Andy Denevol (currently coaching Team Florida), the team is made up of players from more than one school.

"They all go to Class 1A schools," said Iosie, who is an assistant coach at Oviedo High School during the school year. "We have a couple from Master's Academy, one from Mount Dora Bible and one from Orangewood Christian. Just about all of them live in

Magic swaps Theus to Nets for second-round picks

United Press International

ORLANDO — The New Jersey Nets, surprising Orlando with their interest, acquired veteran guard Reggie Theus from the Magic Monday for second-round draft choices in 1993 and 1995.

Theus, 32, was a first-round selection of the Chicago Bulls in the 1978 NBA draft. He was traded to the Kings in 1984 and was dealt to Atlanta two years ago. After just one season, the Hawks let Theus unprotected in the expansion draft and the Magic made the 6-foot-7 guard their second pick behind Sidney Green.

"Guards at Reggie's age are very obviously near the end of their careers and nobody's going to give you a first-round draft choice," said

Orlando General Manager Pat Williams. "They offered us one pick (second round) and we negotiated."

Theus, a streak shooter, averaged 18.9 points per game for Orlando but shot just 44 percent from the field. He will enter the 1990-91 season as the 31st leading career scorer in NBA history with 17,505 points.

"Reggie's a 12-year veteran and we're pretty excited about this deal," said Bob Cascola, chief operating officer for the Nets. "He is a guy who will bring a new chemistry and Coach Bill Fitch knows Reggie well. He can score and we think Reggie is very compatible with (point guard) Mookie Blaylock. The two picks we gave up do not concern us — they're something we can make up."

Orlando Coach Matt Guokas said the trade will open up playing time for last year's No. 1 draft pick, promising guard Nick Anderson.

"It was a frustrating thing for Nick as well as for us last season because we just had trouble getting him on the floor," Guokas said. "We were kind of surprised last week when New Jersey called and said they wanted Reggie."

Cascola said the acquisition of Theus would not impact on New Jersey's choice with the first pick in Wednesday's draft. Syracuse forward Derrick Coleman, Georgia Tech forward Dennis Scott and guard Gary Payton of Oregon State are being considered by the Nets, but Cascola reaffirmed Monday the club is entertaining offers for the top pick.

Refrigerator repairman holds his tongue as well as nose

DEAR ABBY: I am a refrigerator repairman with a simple question:
A woman called the shop and said she thought there was some kind of a "gas" leak inside her fridge, causing a very bad odor. I went to her apartment, opened the refrigerator and immediately identified the problem. The shelves were covered with decaying food particles!

If I had told the lady her refrigerator was filthy, she would probably have thrown me out of her apartment, so I told her I would have to take her refrigerator to the shop, take it apart and locate the problem. So, that's exactly what I did.
All I did was give the refrigerator a good cleaning, and brought it back the following day. She was very pleased to see the appliance so bright and clean with no bad odor, and she paid me in full on the spot. Being an honest man, I charged a reasonable fee for the "labor" and the cost (two men) of transporting it to the shop and back.

My question: How do you think I should have handled it?
PENNSYLVANIA PROBLEM
DEAR ABBY: I would have told her that her refrigerator appeared to need a thorough cleaning and would have asked for some baking soda and proceeded to clean it - explaining that she should thoroughly clean it at least once a month.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published warnings for senior citizens about potential poison hazards. May I add another:
We nearly lost our father because he accidentally ingested a garden chemical. Because he lived alone on a limited income, he felt it was safe and economical to mix and store gardening chemicals in an empty milk carton. One day while gardening, he left one of those milk cartons on the kitchen counter, only to pick it up later, and bolt down a mouthful of chemical - thinking it was milk!

ADVICE

Dad suffered seizures, became unconscious and nearly died as a result. He remained in the hospital for more than a week and spent several months recuperating.

Abby, please warn other senior citizens never to use food or drink containers for the purpose of storing poisonous substances.

P.J. IN SAN FRANCISCO
DEAR P.J.: Thanks. You just did.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Help find best pet

During June, Adopt-a-Cat month, the Sanford Herald will be searching for pet stories from our grade school and middle school-aged readers.

We need you to write us a letter about you and your pet to be reviewed by our panel of judges. Tell us how you adopted your pet, what your pet means to you, and include any anecdotes about you and your pet. Your pet does not have to be a cat to qualify.

Judging will be based on sincerity and clarity.

You must live in Seminole County to enter. We will select one winner from grade school and one winner from middle school. We will be running a different contest for high school students in the near future.

Letters should be typed or printed legibly. Include your name, your pet's name, street address, city and daytime phone number at the top of your letter.

Deliver or mail to "Love a Pet Contest," Sanford Herald, 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, 32771.

There is no maximum length limit on letters. Entries are due at the Herald office by 1 p.m., Friday, June 29.

The two winners will be featured with their pets in an upcoming edition of the Herald.

Treat insomnia with suitable sleep remedy

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have insomnia for which my doctor has prescribed Tranxene. Could you please suggest another medication that won't affect the mind?

DEAR READER: Insomnia is one of mankind's most common ailments. All of us experience it on occasion, especially during times of stress and worry. Insomnia is worsened by stimulants (such as caffeine), alcohol and many medicines. Also, environmental factors — such as noise and light — may interrupt normal sleep patterns. People who are required to sleep at odd hours or who must frequently change their sleep patterns often suffer insomnia. Temporary sleeplessness is common.

Nonetheless, there are patients who are simply unable to sleep — night after night, week after week. Their personal lives and work habits may be affected. They become concerned; this very concern may exacerbate the insomnia. Such people are often aided by the limited use of medication.

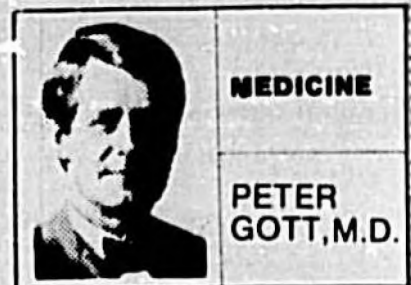

Fortunately, there are many effective sleep remedies available; unfortunately, they all affect the mind and, therefore, have side effects, including drug dependence, dizziness, lightheadedness, hangover, headache, nervousness and poor coordination.

Tranxene (clorazepate) is such a drug; it is primarily an anti-anxiety medication that is occasionally used for anxiety-induced insomnia. The manufacturer does not recommend it for long-term use.

I've found that insomniacs who do not wish to take mind-altering drugs are often helped by over-the-counter Benadryl, an antihistamine that causes drowsiness — without side effects or hangover. The drug is extremely safe, and when taken in a dose of 100 to 150 milligrams at bedtime, will result in a restful sleep. Ask your doctor about this. Also, you might consider treating your anxiety with non-drug therapy, such as transcendental meditation, counseling or relaxation techniques.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please inform me on the details on Adrenalin addiction. How prevalent is it in today's world?

DEAR READER: Epinephrine is a substance produced naturally in the human body. It stimulates the adrenal glands and causes increased heart rate and blood pressure. It also relaxes certain involuntary muscles, especially those lining the bronchial passages. Adrenalin is the trademark for synthetically manufactured epinephrine. It is used by injection to counter shock and treat asthma. To my knowledge, it has no addiction potential. Therefore, I believe Adrenalin addiction does not exist.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Many times it is right to kill an established side-suit winner in dummy by letting partner ruff, even though declarer will overruff. But that approach is wrong when it fails to set the contract. When South passed North's jump invitation to game, he marked himself with a very minimum opening bid. Now place yourself in the West position after the opening lead of the king of clubs. East follows with the seven, either a singleton or a doubleton. If West continues with ace and a club, East will ruff and declarer will overruff. Declarer will then proceed to force out the ace and king of spades. Eventually South's good diamonds will take care of two of the small hearts in dummy, and the contract will make. There is a good case for West to switch to the 10 of hearts at trick two. First of all, it may not be necessary for East to ruff even if declarer started with J-10-4 of clubs. If East holds A-10-7-x or K-10-7-x in trumps, he will score two natural trump tricks anyway. But if he holds strength in hearts, it is likely that the switch to hearts must be made immediately. If West plays a heart, the defense will take five tricks. If West continues clubs, nine tricks will be made. Lesson: Even when your partner can ruff the suit you have led, be aware that the best defense may still require attacking another side-suit.

The transformation will be positive on behalf of both parties. Cancer, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Measures can be taken at this time to upgrade your earning potential, but you'll have to use your ingenuity and resourcefulness in order to bring them into being.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is one of those unusual days when your social contacts could be more helpful to you commercially than the people with whom you usually conduct business. Play your aces.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't let small setbacks disturb you, because your chances for successfully doing something important you've been wanting to do look better than you think. Be hopeful and assertive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If your expectations are kept within realistic bounds today they will have marvelous chances of being fulfilled. Strive to be a visionary, not a wishful thinker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It looks like you might have to alter your plans a bit at this time in order to accommodate people with whom you are involved. The changes will be worthwhile.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

Assume a more dominate role today if you're involved with persons who are having a hard time trying to resolve a difficult matter. Your input could be very constructive.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is a good day to iron out matters which should be discussed with one with whom you're closely associated. Frankness will strengthen the alliance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You are presently in a good achievement cycle so shift your emphasis to your most meaningful endeavors. If you apply yourself properly, you'll like the way things turn out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Social involvements will serve to stimulate your more appealing attributes today, so let the real you emerge. Happenings with friends could prove to be not only fun but more rewarding than usual.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Several domestic projects you've neglected to finalize to your satisfaction can be concluded effectively today if you make them priority concerns.
