Marder gets association post

SANFORD — Jay Marder, planning director for the city of Sanford, has been elected State Vice President of Policy Affairs for the Florida Planning and Zoning Association.

The election took place at the FPZA's annual conference in Tampa.

FPZA is a 41-year-old organization established to encourage observance of sound planning and zoning and the proper development of land, water, and other natural resources in Florida.

The association is also dedicated to educating individuals in the planning field as well as the public, on current planning issues in the state of Florida.

In the past, Marder has served as vice president of Financial Affairs for the PFZA.

Sheriff announces crime report

SANFORD — Seminole County Sheriff Don Eslinger has announced the Uniform Crime Report for the period through October, 1993. Spokesman Ed McDonough gave the list. According to statistics, crimes handled by deputies during the first 10 months of the year totaled as follows: three murders; 90 sex offenses; 129 armed robberies; 1,560 burglaries; 643 aggravated assaults; 371 vehicle thefts; 511 drug arrests; 306 cases of driving under the influence of alcohol.

McDonough said there were also 63 assaults on deputies during that same period. The total number of arrests through October were 3,840.

GreenWay extension planned

Transportation Secretary Ben Watts has announced Florida's Turnpike will build the $165 million Southern Connector Extension, a 6.1 mile limited-access toll facility, which will connect the Central Florida GreenWay in southeastern Orange County, to Interstate-4 in Osceola County.

The Southern Connector Extension project is the largest public/private sector partnership in the history of Florida's turnpike.

Construction is to begin in the summer of 1994 and is expected to be completed by late 1997, with some segments to open earlier.

Two other expansion projects under construction are the Seminole Expressway at the northern end of the Greenway, and the Veterans Expressway in Tampa.

Local restaurant plans to reopen in two weeks

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The kitchen at Sonny's Real Pit Barbecue on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford erupted into flames early this morning leaving the back of the restaurant a pile of rubble and the rest of the building in shambles.

Lt. Steven Crews of the Sanford Fire Department said the smoke damage to the seating area alone would prevent the opening of the restaurant for a few days.

"But the damage to the kitchen is really extensive," he said. "They won't be cooking in there for a little while."

He said he does not believe there will be any trouble rebuilding the facility fairly quickly and getting back into business.

"It's a shame this fire has done so much damage to this restaurant," Crews added. "This is a Sanford landmark. But it'll be open soon."

Reduced fees requested for civic center use

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Reduced rates or free use of the Sanford Civic Center were considered Monday night. Seminole County and the Martin Luther King Committee both plan events.

The County Board of Commissioners has requested use of the facility for an employee recognition luncheon, to be held February 25. The county had asked for a reduced rate.

City Manager Bill Simmons had recommended denial. In the agenda for Monday night's commission meeting, he wrote that he felt the request does not meet adopted parameters for reduced rate.

Simmons' presentation was made by Charles Rowe, who served as acting city manager during the commission meeting.

According to rules followed by the city, the reduced rates are allowed when the user is a service organization based in Sanford, there is no charge for admission, no donations or taking of funds occurs, and the event is open to the general public.

Exceptions are local service and civic organizations which contribute their profits to local recognized charities, support community service groups or other charities which provide humanitarian service to the local community.

Under these rules however, the request for free use of the Civic Center by the Martin Luther King Committee was partially approved.

Last year, the committee had asked for use of the facility for nine days. This year, the request is for only

SANFORD — The increase in violent juvenile crime captured the world's attention when four teens in northern Florida were charged in the death of a British tourist in the ongoing story of crimes against tourists.

Seminole County had three teens under the age of 16 charged with first degree murder whose cases were resolved this year.

Teens, who were 13, 14 and 15 at the time they were involved with the deaths of two men in separate incidents in Sanford were sentenced during 1993.

Kids in trouble led away from a life of crime

SANFORD — It might have been a drawing by the late Norman Rockwell, who for years illustrated glimpses of American life and values on the cover of the Saturday Evening Post.

A stern faced mother looking on as her child returns to the grocer or shopkeeper a small toy or piece of candy taken but not paid for. An indelible lesson learned by an impressionable child. Stealing is wrong.

Life in the 90s is more complicated than in those 1950s drawings. Rockwell and the Post are gone. Mom may be so exhausted after a day's work, making dinner and doing necessary household chores to even ask whether the child's homework is done or what is going on in his or her life. Violent crimes committed by juveniles are on the rise and retail theft is almost a rite of passage.

However, early intervention is still the key to prevent youth from getting into more serious trouble as they grow to adulthood.

DAYTONA BEACH — A Sanford man is being held in Volusia County jail on no bond after pleading not guilty Tuesday to second degree murder in the death of a DeBary man.

Mark Shawn Manley, 27, is charged in the Dec. 26 death of Jonathan A. Brooklyn, 35. Manley also pleaded not guilty to a charge of aggravated battery against Clay Curtsinger.

Manley allegedly struck Brooklyn several times with a hatchet after Brooklyn approached him to talk about an altercation between his teenage daughter, Tahnya, 18, her boyfriend, James Bradley, 19, and Manley.

The teens called Brooklyn from a convenience store after a verbal fight and shoving incident with Manley at Deltona's Duck Lake. The teens were celebrating Bradley's birthday. According to police investigators, Bradley was knocked unconscious by a blow from the blunt end of the hatchet.

Officers said when they stopped to question him, they found he was wanted on a warrant issued in the state of Delaware, for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. He will be extradited.

Incidents reported to the sheriff

A burglary was reported Monday at a residence in Crown

Onks Phase II, near Longwood. A wood chipper motor, valued at an estimated $500 was reported stolen from a porch. A wrench deputies believe was used to remove the motor, was left behind and taken as evidence.

A truck owned by a construction company, parked in the 2400 block of Beardall Avenue, was reportedly burglarized Monday. A tool box with tools valued at $200 was said to have been taken, along with a water pump, power saw and generator with a total value of $2,100.

Incidents reported to Sanford police

A man told police he was walking in the 400 block of Mellonville Avenue Monday, when three men approached him, pulled the gold chain from around his neck, then fled in a vehicle which had been parked near Celery Avenue.

An estimated $1,000 in stereo equipment was reported stolen from an Orange City man's car Monday. The car was parked in the 1200 block of Palmetto Avenue at the time.

A woman told police someone threw a bottle at her car Monday near 5th Street and Olive Avenue, in the Sanford projects. She said when she stopped the car, two other men came at her, ripped three neckties from her neck, and fled. Police said the woman was not injured.

Correction

In the Nov. 7 edition of the Herald a warrant served on James Gill, 29, 2420 Lake Ave., Sanford, should have stated his arrest after a traffic stop was for failure to pay a fine. Bond was $140.

Fleeing man

Sanford police arrested Charlie Jones, 31, of 63 Seminole Gardens, on Sunday. Police said they were called to investigate a reported fight near his residence. When they arrived, they were reportedly told there was no fight, but saw Jones running down a dirt path between 6th and 7th Streets. He reportedly refused to stop, but was eventually apprehended. He was placed under arrest and charged with resisting arrest without violence.

Burglary arrest

Emanuel Johnson, Jr., 34, 146 Carver Avenue, Sanford, was arrested at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility by Sanford police Friday. Police said he is suspected of being involved in a residential burglary on Bethune Circle, on June 21. Police said he was identified through a fingerprint check. Johnson has been charged with burglary to an occupied dwelling.

Bomber wanted for killing 5 over grievance

By DAVID GERMAIN
Associated Press Writer

CHEEKTOWAGA — A bomber with a grudge against a family sent explosives hidden in tackle boxes to half a dozen places across upstate New York, killing five people and wounding two, authorities said today.

Four of the bombs exploded within 90 minutes Tuesday night after being delivered to farflung members of the same family.

Citing unidentified police sources, television stations WOKR of Rochester and WGR of Buffalo reported this morning that three people were arrested in connection with the bombings, including a female relative of some of the victims and her boyfriend. FBI Agent Paul Culligan denied the reports, but authorities did say they have a suspect.

"We are zeroing in on a person but I cannot divulge whom at this time," Thomas Staebell, Erie County sheriff's chief of patrol, said earlier. "All the folks injured and killed have some connection with the person we are looking at."

Authorities released a composite sketch of a man wanted for questioning: a white man in his 40s, with glasses, a moustache and a weak eye or possibly a glass eye.

The motive for the vendetta was not immediately known.

"We're trying to find out what method there is to this madness," said FBI agent Paul Moskal.

Two people were killed at an armored car garage in Cheektowaga, a Buffalo suburb; two died at an apartment house in Rochester, 70 miles to the east; and one was killed in a blast that burned a home to the ground in West Valley, 30 miles south of Buffalo. A bomb also exploded in Hogsansburg, hundreds of miles away in northeastern New York, and one person was wounded there.

The bombs were delivered in brown cardboard boxes measuring about 3 inches by 12 inches by 18 inches with tape wrapped around the parcels, authorities said. Inside were metal tackle boxes containing the homemade bombs.

Several boxes carried a return address of "The Liberty Iron and Metal Company" of Erie, Pa. The bombs apparently were detonated by opening the boxes. Authorities said they had not determined the type of explosive used.

Whites asked to leave festival

By KATHARINE WEBSTER
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — Discrimination or cultural preservation? That was the question after the white mother of an interracial child was asked to leave a Kwanzaa celebration.

Arthur Hardy's mother, Marie Doubleday, left the celebration at the Roxbury Boys and Girls Club on Sunday night. Several white journalists also were asked to leave.

"The spirit of Kwanzaa was ruined that night, as far as I was concerned," Hardy, 13, said Tuesday. His black father died 10 years ago.

"The black community has always felt like our extended family," Doubleday said. "We've had problems with the white community, but this is the first real problem we've had with the black community."

Sadiki Kambon, chairman of the Community Kwanzaa Committee, said the committee has a long-standing policy of asking — not telling — whites to leave.

"We've had a tradition of it being an all-African event for people of color. We have never told any white person they could not attend," Kambon said. "We're asking you to respect our tradition."

Political scientist Maulana Ron Karenga invented Kwanzaa in 1966 hoping to unite the black community. It is now celebrated by about 18 million people worldwide.

The seven-day holiday is based on the agricultural cycle of Africa; Kwanzaa means "first fruits" in Swahili. It celebrates seven principles: unity, self-determination, collective work and responsibility, cooperative economics, purpose, creativity and faith.

When asked how he would feel if blacks were asked to leave a white event, Kambon said he would not attend a Hanukkah celebration out of respect for Jews: "It's a family thing for them to work on their issues."

Kambon said Kwanzaa is the one time of year for blacks to discuss their own issues. "We consider this to be a family meeting time," he said.

What about Hardy's family? "He didn't even consider me and my mom a family," Hardy said. "All my living family is white, and the only person who has explored the black side of me is my mom."

Doubleday and Hardy were invited to the celebration by Johnette Johnson, a black free-lance radio reporter.

"Perhaps this will make everybody think," Johnson said. "There's a lot of families who fall into this category, there's a lot of interracial families — are they part of the black community or not?"

Preservation dream long held now true

After a lengthy process, regulations governing the Old Sanford District are now official. The Sanford City Commission approved it on final reading Monday night.

The two years required to prepare this ordinance was spent in fine-tuning it. The plan is aimed at providing the best guidelines possible for improvements in the historical residential district.

The commissioners, city planning officials, members of the Historic Preservation Board, and scores of other persons who have worked so diligently on this project are deserving of our appreciation.

From this point on, permits to refurbish, repaint or remodel the exterior of a historic home will have to go through the Historic Preservation Board. (HPB). This will insure that regulations are followed, and violations are prevented.

Enacting an ordinance however, does not mean an automatic or immediate revitalization of some of the century old homes in Sanford. The process is going to take time, perhaps decades.

It is also going to require the owners and future buyers of these homes to realize the plans have been formulated to best preserve the entire Old Sanford District. The city, through this ordinance is not out to bankrupt any resident by forcing extremely expensive or immediate rebuilding.

Requests for work are to be taken to the HPB. The board will provide information on how to accomplish various projects. People can select colors which will be in keeping with the period of the architecture. Roof shapes, windows, and many more plans are addressed in the ordinance.

The HPB has the power to deny a request. However, if the homeowner believes it is an unfair denial, or if what is required cannot be afforded, he or she has the right of appeal before the City Commission.

Regardless of the homeowner's concept of what is beauty, painting a historic home orange with purple stripes may not be allowed. Putting modernistic designs on a 100 year old home may not pass the HPB either.

Hopefully, people will keep in mind that their homes have historic value, and make their plans accordingly.

The ordinance governing the Old Sanford District can work if the people allow it to do so.

Some of us may not be around long enough to see the final results. But working together on this will be an excellent gift to give to our children and those who will call Sanford their home in future years.

The (expletive) hits the fan, again

Can we avoid one more media feeding frenzy, that will harm America at a time of hope?

As I write this new scandal is on the front page of the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times and the Washington Times. It is buried by the New York Times and ignored by the Wall Street Journal. On television CNN and ABC do it up big. NBC reports it. CBS ignores it. It is big on Rush Limbaugh. The New York tabloids report: "Bill's New Sexgate" and "Bill's Cupid Troopers"

The Washington Post quotes a White House aide as saying "Not this (expletive) all over again."

It now seems likely that this (expletive) will not only get on to all the front pages, but break out into a big-time media firestorm, that is, a set of linked stories, scandal-driven, that endlessly dominates the news, ending up — who knows where?

It's scandal time. The big one (for the moment) concerns the allegations about President Clinton's sexual behavior, reported in the American Spectator story "His Cheatin' Heart," by David Brock. But the New York Times wants to know whether the president and Mrs. Clinton did something very wrong in the "Whitewater" real estate deal. Other papers ask whether the late Vince Foster's diaries and legal records disappeared suspiciously.

It won't go away quickly. Take just the "Sexgate" story. There are parts that will be followed up. For example:

Are the squealing Arkansas State Troopers who claim they facilitated Clinton's extramarital affairs telling the truth? If so, did the squealers break state laws in doing what they did? If it's true, did then-Gov. Clinton act illegally by using the troopers as he used them? Will such potential (and probably minor) legal transgressions be followed up in the

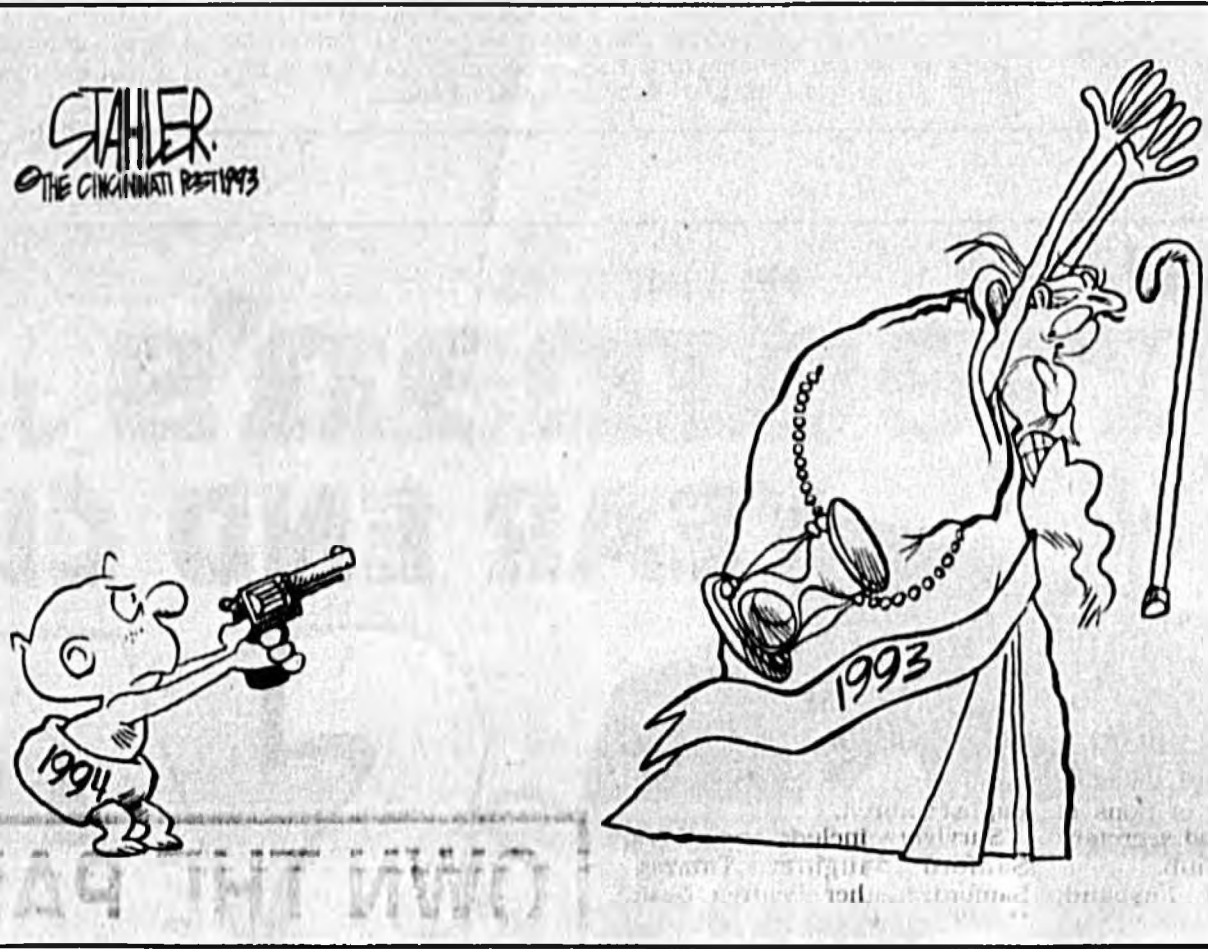

It's scandal time.

Arkansas legal system? (A U.S. senator in Texas is under indictment regarding an incident that started out by allegedly misusing state employees.)

Two of the troopers claim Clinton promised a federal job to hush up the story. Will there be a federal investigation? (Sen. Packwood is accused of something different on the job front, but not wholly dissimilar.)

And: Did Clinton lie? Is he lying now? Not about Jennifer Flowers; that's almost irrelevant. After all, American voters elected him after the famous "60 Minutes" interview in which he acknowledged prior sexual misbehavior. But the story then was that all was patched up between the Clintons. However, according to the rotten troopers, Clinton's philandering continued after he had been elected president. Americans did not vote for that.

And: If the troopers are right, is Clinton compulsive, or self-destructive — or what? Under the well-known post-Gary Hart political rules, playing around while running for president will sink a candidacy. Was Clinton willing to risk his presidency for sexual thrills? What does that say about his judgment?

ELLEN GOODMAN

Here's to a gaffe-free year

BOSTON — Each year at this time, I like to cleanse my calendar and my conscience by feasting up to the mistakes, misjudgments, and misstatements that snuck past my personal error-check software and into this column.

My annual Media Culpa rite is good for the soul. My offenses, however, were relatively modest. I was not the one, for example, who told President Clinton to just get the issue of gays in the military off the table and it would be clear sailing. I was not the one who told Bob Packwood that he really ought to put all the juicy stories in his diary where nobody would find them.

Nevertheless, there are amends to be amended.

First of all the happy mistakes. Last summer, when Joe McGinnis' dreadful, psycho-babbling bio-fiction of Ted Kennedy was thrust onto the bookshelves, I predicted that it would sell like hot cakes. Oh me of little faith. This bombshell bombed. Reports are that Simon and Schuster had to eat over 200,000 unsold copies of "The Last Brother." Alas, they made up their loss with Howard Stern's "Private Parts."

I offered another prediction about guns. I suggested that fighting the NRA wasn't political suicide anymore; it might even be political salvation in Virginia and New Jersey elections. My rumors of the death of NRA power were a bit premature. Both Mary Sue Terry and Jim Florio lost their gubernatorial races. But Jim Brady won in Congress.

The NRA took me to task for my math as well as my opinions. I had written that there were 24,000 handgun murders in 1991. No, no, the members wrote. It was 24,000 handgun deaths — including suicides and accidents as well as murders. Thank you, thank you, for setting me straight. I feel ever so much safer.

Another group hath protested ever-so-righteously about an error. Several Daughters of the American Revolution complained that my obituary on Marian Anderson repeated the charge that she was banned from singing at Constitution Hall. They have the 1939 schedule to prove the hall was already reserved. This doesn't put them on the front lines of civil rights.

Then there was Geoffrey Fieger, a lawyer who oozes all the charm of a pit bull. He complains bitterly that, among other things, I called his client, Dr. Jack Kevorkian, an "obitriatrist" when the word for death doctor was "obitriatrist." He ended his elegant note by calling me a religious nut and my column a piece of shit. I will make a deal with our boy Geoff. I will use obitriatrist, if he will try self-restraint.

Do I sound Puritanical? Or Pilgrimageal? In my Thanksgiving column, I said it was the Puritans who landed at Plymouth Rock. A sorry mistake for a Massachusetts native. It was the Pilgrims.

I also described Lani Guinier as another hit-and-run victim of Washington politics. She dashed onto the scene when nominated to head the civil rights office. She was hit with a label "Quota Queen" and then disappeared. Well, happily this woman isn't road kill. She's become well-known and well-respected.

Now on to the Guardians of Grammar and the Word Police. First, I apologize to Paul Tsongas. I referred to him as "the former male senator." Well, he is a former senator but, despite my grammatical sex-change operation, still a male.

Elsewhere I wrote that "every homicide isn't front page news." In fact, "not every homicide is front page news." But maybe it should be.

One day this fall, I found myself "pouring" over recipes. What was I pouring? Coffee? Tea? Me? I should have been "poring."

I also referred to letters about gays in the military as missiles coming in. Was I being a touch, uh, defensive. Where are you, Freud, when I slip? I meant "missives."

Then there is the tale of Tailhook. Since the story broke, I have been running the gauntlet — or is it gauntlet? — of warring wordsmiths. Here are the facts: Gauntlet is a stretch of railroad track over a bridge. Gauntlet is a glove of medieval origin. But the military punishment in which a man ran between two lines of armed men — or a woman ran between lines of grabbing men — is a gauntlet or a gantlet. Take your choice and spell it o-u-t-r-a-g-e.

Finally, I must admit to a very wordy mistake. Last year at just this time, I confessed to a gaff instead of a gaffe. A gaff is a hook, a gaffe is a blunder. I made a big one.

Here's to a gaffe-free New Year. Let's give '93 the gaff.

The NRA took me to task for my math as well as my opinions.

U.N. commission watching Iraq is close to broke

NEW YORK — The United Nations special commission that has been holding Iraq's feet to the fire on destroying its unconventional weapons is nearly broke, and subsisting on funds loaned and given primarily from the Saudi government.

Shortly after the war three years ago with Iraq, the United Nations passed a key resolution (number 687), which required Iraq to "accept the destruction, removal or rendering harmless" of all nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons materials and stocks, and "all ballistic missiles with a range greater than 150 kilometers."

The resolution is critical to the Iraqis because it says that until the work is done, the U.N. will continue trade and oil export embargoes with Iraq. If Iraq were able to start selling its oil, it would reap more than $12 billion a year.

Some companies and at least one country, Iran, have broken that embargo and secretly bought the oil. But Iraq's economy continues to be decimated overall by the U.N. sanctions.

The outfit assigned to pronounce Iraq clean or not on its unconventional weapons is the U.N. Special Commission on the Disarmament of Iraq, headed by a tough Swedish ambassador, Golf Ekes. It's a difficult job, sending teams of experts into a hostile country and, under conditions of psychological and sometimes dangerous harassment, try to ascertain the status of Iraq's previously top-secret programs. When material is uncovered, it must be destroyed by explosion or flattened by bulldozers under their watchful eye.

But what makes it doubly difficult is the financial problems that have beset UNSCOM since it was first formed in 1991. Our sources estimate that UNSCOM has needed and spent nearly $80 million to date — a tab that is supposed to be paid by Iraq.

U.N. Resolution 689 made Iraq responsible for meeting all the costs of UNSCOM, but the Iraqis so far haven't contributed a dime — even though United States and other Western intelligence reports say that Saddam Hussein alone has enough in his personal stash in Switzerland and elsewhere to pay for it himself. Some reports suggest his private treasure exceeds $3 billion.

Our sources say that behind the scenes the Saudis quietly came to an agreement, first with the United States, then the U.N., that they would pitch in the necessary funds. In fact, they have contributed at least $30 million for an escrow account that UNSCOM can use until the Iraqis are forced to pay up.

The Saudis do this partly out of gratefulness for the coalition forces back in 1991 that prevented Hussein from invading their country, and pushed his forces out of Kuwait. But the Saudis are also rightfully anxious to finance the UNSCOM work of destroying Iraq's weapons programs and ballistic missiles, all of which directly threaten Saudi Arabia.

They are particularly pleased at UNSCOM efforts to destroy Iraq's SCUD missiles, which rained down on Saudi Arabia during Desert Storm. But the Saudis have secretly expressed concern to the United States that the Iraqis have hidden more than a hundred SCUDs from UNSCOM experts. In fact, one classified Central Intelligence Agency report suggests there may actually be more than 200 Scuds the Iraqis are hiding, while they claim they've shown UNSCOM inspectors all of them.

The resolution is critical to the Iraqis.

Kids in trouble away from future crime. In Prosecution Alternatives for Youth (PAY). The diversion program is a juvenile court alternative primarily for first time offenders.

"Most of our cases are first time misdemeanor offenders who are given an option to participate in this program instead of going through the formal juvenile process," PAY director Nancy DeLong explained.

Retail theft comprises a large number of the over 1,000 PAY cases. The theft cases are so commonplace, a special workbook is completed as a sanction.

"It's (retail theft) almost a rite of passage," DeLong commented.

In the PAY program, a hearing is held for the juvenile and parent(s) during which a volunteer arbitrator determines whether the teen is guilty of the offense charged by the assistant state attorney. If so, the hearing officer assigns sanctions which are to be completed within about 75 days. After the sanctions are successfully completed, the case is returned to the state attorney's office and the charges are not pros (dropped).

The advantage to the juvenile is they do not have a record if they complete the PAY program successfully, DeLong explained.

Although there are some standard sanctions, the hearing officers are encouraged to make the sanctions fit the offense.

"The sanctions are about as varied as the hearing officers' ingenuity," DeLong said. Apologies and thank-you letters to law enforcement are part of the program.

"It takes a little stretch to thank a policeman for arresting you," she said. "But it's amazing. We see some letters that show some real thought. Kids realize they may have been prevented from getting into further trouble because they were caught. And they realize, what they want the law to be doing, is going after somebody's that's a danger rather than taking up time for something that's a minor offense."

The program uses essays, written assignments, goal statements, community service and for kids under 14, home chores rather than community service. Law awareness classes with jail tours, youth enrichment classes addressing the problems of peer pressure, self esteem and goal setting and drug/alcohol awareness classes are also taught. Curfews, restricted driving privileges and curtailing association with certain friends are also sanctioned. Restitution or donations to charities are sometimes also collected.

Community service projects are performed for government or not-for-profit groups. However, DeLong noted it is sometimes difficult finding supervised work to coincide with the teens availability after school and on weekends.

"PAY is the best thing going as far as I'm concerned," DeLong said. "In Seminole County, programs for kids who are in trouble are almost non-existent."

"Our non-recidivism rate is approximately 90 percent," she said, which improved from about 75 percent two or three years ago. "There are some kids who will come back into the system no matter what you do."

Although there are some programs for dependent juveniles, such as Seminole Village, there is no place to address problems for kids who are in trouble.

There are two classifications of juvenile cases, delinquency and dependent. In delinquency cases, youths have broken the law. Dependency cases involve juveniles who have broken no law themselves, but are in the system because something has been done to them. Some have been seriously abused, physically or sexually.

"I hope when the legislature meets in February, there are going to be some changes that will give the juvenile court some teeth," DeLong commented. "It's very frustrating. I've never met anyone who cares more about what happens to kids than Judge (Leonard) Wood does. I love working with him and the new assistant state attorney juvenile chief Laura Bosco is so dedicated and tuned into the problems that kids are facing." Wood is the Seminole County circuit court judge who presides in juvenile cases.

Of the 1,037 PAY cases logged thus far, 200 were violent offenses, about 20 percent of the annual case load, and these were first time offenders.

Another program being added to the PAY lineup in 1994 is a 10-week ongoing class for juvenile domestic violence offenders.

"We have a lot of juveniles who batter their families, sometimes siblings, sometimes parents," DeLong said. "More often parents, usually the mother. When I was a teenager, I can't imagine anyone being charged with battery against their parents. Kids are out of control. Kids are running families."

Owners Bob and Jeff Yarmuth praised the Sanford Fire Department for their quick response to the scene.

"They probably saved us days, months of work," Bob Yarmuth said. "And they probably saved the insurance company a lot of money."

Sanford Fire Chief Richard Cohen determined the cause of the fire after only a few hours this morning.

"We're blaming the garbage can," he said. "The crew was cleaning the debris and stuff out of the pit and they put it in the garbage can where there is plenty of stuff to feed a fire. Once one of those grease cans melted down, it gave it more fuel."

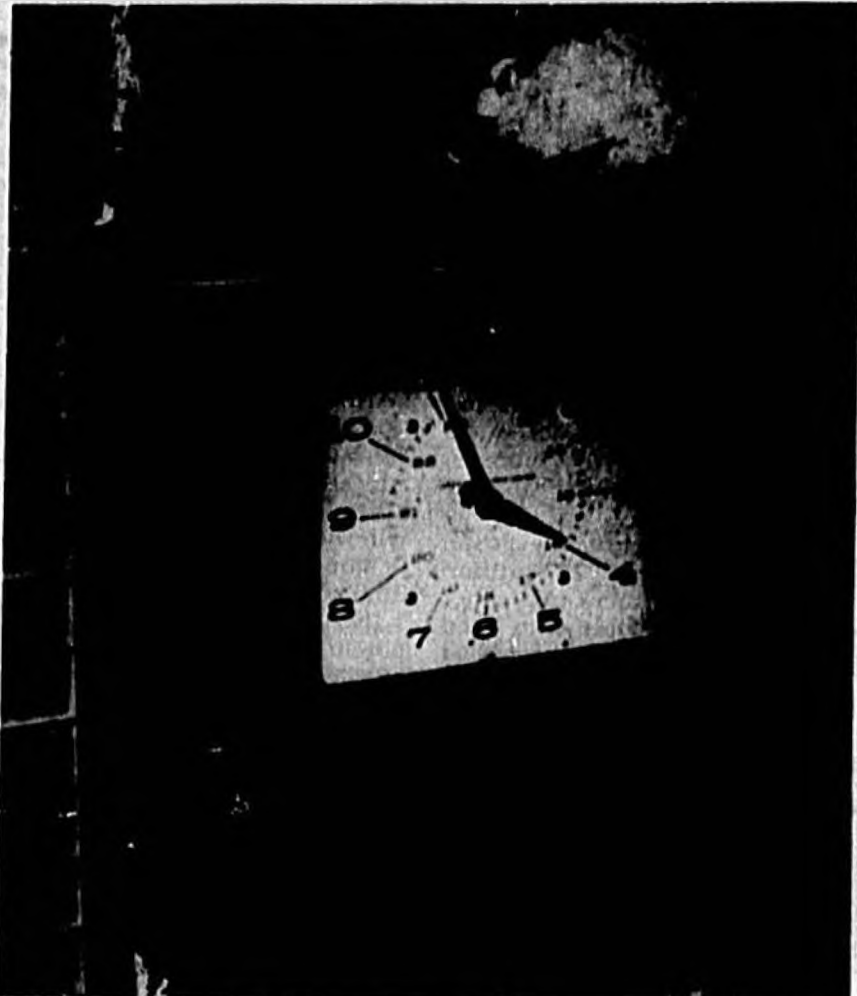

Crews said there was no one in the building at the time of the 4 a.m. fire so there were no injuries.

Firefighters were called to the scene of the fire by a mechanical fire alarm.

Manager Jamie Mahoney said he was called by fire fighters at five minutes before 4 and was pleased when he arrived twenty minutes later to see that the blaze was already under control.

"By 5 a.m. they were already packing up and leaving," he said.

Yarmuth said he believes it will take a couple of days to repair the damage in the dining room. Drywall will have to be

When Brooklyn approached Manley, he was struck several times with the hatchet and fell into the street, investigators said. He was struck and dragged by a passing car. He died of blunt trauma but Volusia County sheriff's department public information officer Cheryl Downs said the final autopsy report has not been filed. It may determine if the trauma was caused by the hatchet blows or being hit and dragged by the automobile.

Curtisinger was also struck with the hatchet but held his attacker at bay with a gun while trying to aid Brooklyn.

Bradley and Curtisinger were treated for head injuries after the incident.

Manley's friends and family members claim he is innocent alleging police have 16 statements saying he did not do it. Volusia County Sheriff's Capt. Bob Bosco was unavailable for comment about the alleged statements.

Investigators from the Seminole County Sheriff's Office Violent Crimes section are assisting Volusia County investigators in the Brooklyn case by contacting witnesses to the incident, Ed McDonough, SCSO public information officer said this morning.

four days, from Thursday January 14 through Monday, January 17.

Mayor Betty Smith suggested, "We have several choices we could make. Give them all four days at half price, two days free and two for full price, or some other arrangement."

Commissioner Bob Thomas suggested, "Why don't we waive the fees for the religious service on Sunday, and have the other three days at a minimum fee?"

Parks and Recreation Director Mike Kirby explained that if the Sunday was offered free, the reduced rate minimum for the other three days would total just over $600.

The City Commission voted in favor of Thomas' suggestion.

Happy New Year from IRS - 1993 tax forms

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR.
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Sometime next week, millions of Americans will receive their annual New Year's greeting from the Internal Revenue Service: The 1993 tax forms are in the mail.

Starting Monday, the Postal Service will begin stuffing 86 million forms into mailboxes. Some mistakenly have already been delivered.

Earlier this month, the Postal Service delivered 22 million postcards to farmers and other self-employed people who used professional tax preparers last year.

Until two years ago, the IRS had the forms dropped off the day after Christmas, but changed the practice after complaints of Scrooge-like timing.

Printing the forms cost the government $14.6 million and mailing them cost $19.9 million.

a total of about 32 cents each. The costs have risen about 2 cents per form over last year.

High-income Americans should take note of some tax law changes approved by Congress this year.

The current 31 percent top rate goes up to 36 percent for taxable income - after deductions and exemptions - above $115,000 for single people and $140,000 for couples. Any taxable income over $250,000, whether earned by a single person or couple, will be taxed at 39.6 percent.

IRS officials said about 2 percent of taxpayers will be affected by the changes.

For those not utilizing the standard deduction has been raised to $3,700 for a single taxpayer, up from $3,600 last year. The deduction for heads of households is $5,450, up from $5,250.

The standard deduction for a married couple filing jointly has been raised to $6,200 from $6,000, while the deduction for a married couple filing separately now is $3,100, up from $3,000 last year.

The maximum earned income credit has increased to $2,361 from $2,214.

The IRS is trying to keep up with busy computer-age consumers and changing population demographics, as coming up with simpler, faster ways to file.

New this year:
• About 2.5 million childless married couples can now file the 1041Z - the simplest tax form if their joint income is less than $50,000.

• Residents of seven states can file the 1040EZ form by telephone. After experimenting with the program for two years in Ohio, the IRS is adding Florida, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, South Carolina and West Virginia.

• Residents of Southern California and South Florida can use a new 1010 form written in Spanish. IRS Commissioner Margaret Milner Richardson said the agency is testing the feasibility of using forms in languages other than English.

• The contribution for the presidential campaign fund has been increased from $1 to $3. The donation, made by checking a box on the tax form, doesn't affect the amount of taxes owed or decrease the amount of a refund.

• All W-2 forms should look basically alike. Previously, workers could get W-2 forms from different employers that placed information differently.

Also of note, taxpayers can prepare their returns at home on personal computers using the 1040PC form available in commercial tax preparation software packages.

Economy finishes 1993 strongly after weak start

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The economy began 1993 as weak as a lamb and is finishing as strong as a lion.

And while economists anticipate some retrenchment as the new year begins, most expect a healthy pace of growth overall in 1994.

The gross domestic product, the value of goods and services produced in the United States, advanced in the first quarter at an annual 0.8 percent annual rate. It has improved in each quarter since, and analysts think it will top 1 percent in the fourth quarter.

It should pull back during the first three months of 1994, but not too much, analysts said. They predict a growth rate of around 3 percent.

"I'm looking for a pretty positive year in 1994," said economist Lawrence H. Meyer, a St. Louis-based consultant. "We expect to see a less erratic, more stable pattern."

Economists anticipated two pieces of good news today. The Commerce Department was releasing its Index of Leading Indicators for November and the National Association of Realtors was reporting on sales of previously owned homes during the month.

Analysts looked for the index to increase 0.4 percent for the fourth consecutive rise. Three straight moves in any one direction are considered a good, but not foolproof, signal of economic activity six to nine months in advance.

Meanwhile, they predicted home sales would increase in November for the seventh time in eight months. Sales in October, propelled by the lowest mortgage rates in 24 years, already led by a 1.4-year high.

The data has been incredibly consistent, Meyer said. The October and November data have been uniformly positive.

All of the good numbers are causing spirits to rise among consumers and business executives.

The Conference Board, a New York-based business-supported research group, said Tuesday its consumer confidence index jumped 8.3 points to 89.2. This month's gain nearly 20 points since October, reflecting renewed optimism about the economy's direction.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce said business executives' confidence in the economy improved sharply in December. Its bimonthly index rose to 44.3 in December, up from 46.4 in October.

"I think there is a change in attitude about this economy. People are no longer so pessimistic," Meyer said.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department issued its 34th annual U.S. Industrial Outlook projecting a 2.8 percent increase in orders to manufacturers in 1994 for the best increase in six years.

Low interest rates should foster a brisk pace of auto, appliance and furniture buying by consumers and computer and machinery purchases by businesses, the department said.

Church criticized for veto of soup kitchen

By LAUREN A. BORSA
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. - In the long run, the Hartford Archdiocese says, people will see the wisdom of its decision to keep a soup kitchen out of a downtown church.

In the short term, the Roman Catholic archdiocese's decision to reject the soup kitchen as bad for business has brought it stinging criticism.

"It's not a day to be proud to be Catholic," Stephen Grabek of suburban Andover, a parishioner at St. Patrick-St. Anthony Church, said Tuesday.

The Franciscan friars who run St. Patrick-St. Anthony and the governing council of the parish had both agreed to let the House of Bread operate rent-free out of the church basement.

But they were overruled by Archbishop Daniel A. Cronin, who feared the kitchen would jeopardize downtown redevelopment and the church's finances. Two-thirds of the church's money comes from rent on a parking lot across the street.

"The position that we've taken appears to be unpopular at this point, but the issue is not a popularity contest. We think that in time, hopefully, things will improve in Hartford," said Monsignor Charles W. Daly, the archdiocese's financial officer. "It will be seen that this was a wise decision."

So many people called the archdiocese to complain on Monday, the day the news broke, that the receptionist told people they would be better off writing letters. The House of Bread also said it received many calls of support.

Radio talk shows were also abuzz over the decision. After receiving all critical calls Monday, one show said reaction became mixed Tuesday.

Hartford Courant columnist Tom Condon termed "Jesus ... didn't say, 'Feed the hungry - unless they dress funny and congregate in the central business district.'"

The archbishop, however, found at least one powerful ally, Mayor Michael Peters.

"I'm all for soup kitchens," Peters said. "But you don't put them on your main thoroughfares. You don't put them downtown. We're trying to create business downtown."

Sister Maureen Faenza, one of two nuns who run the House of Bread, said the decision was "a major setback for the spiritual leadership of our church."

"We base our Christianity and faith on the Gospel message, and one of these messages is feeding the hungry, housing the homeless," she said.

The House of Bread operates out of cramped quarters three blocks from the church, away from the central business district. It feeds 200 to 250 people a day. The nuns say they need more space.

Panic attack is probable diagnosis

DEAR DR. GOTT: I experience spells or attacks of not breathing. They come in the middle of the night or while watching television. I actually gasp for breath and feel as if I am going to die. A barium swallow, chest X-ray and echocardiogram were all normal, and my doctor has diagnosed me with panic attacks. This diagnosis is insulting to me as I am stable, married, active, do volunteer work and have no emotional or mental problems.

DEAR READER: I'm going to side with your doctor on this one, for a reason that I'll explain in a moment.

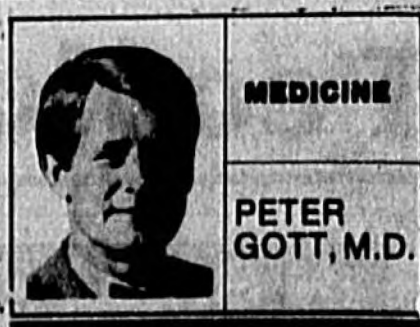

Recurring, painless attacks of "not breathing" could result from several medical conditions. • Sleep apnea. Some people, while sleeping, exhibit periods of depressed or absent breathing. This can be caused by tissues in the throat (such as a sagging palate) that temporarily block the upper airway, leading to snoring -- or by obesity, which can cause narrowing of the upper airway. You don't have sleep apnea because your symptoms also occur when you're awake.

• Asthma. This common lung disease causes periods of wheezing and labored breathing that can strike without warning. During an attack, the wheezes and squeaks produced by bronchial spasms can readily be heard, even without a stethoscope. I do not believe you could have asthma without knowing it and, surely, your doctor would have thoroughly examined your lungs. Therefore, I'll discard this diagnosis.

• Congestive heart failure. Caused by an accumulation of excess fluid in the lungs, CHF commonly accompanies a weak heart action. Patients with this condition do not stop breathing (as you apparently do), but they have difficulty respiring and feel that they are suffocating. CHF most often appears at night or during exercise. I'll discard CHF as a cause of your symptoms because it doesn't seem to fit the pattern you describe.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Erma Bombeck might have been metaphorically comparing declarer-play standards of today with those of 30 years ago when she said: "Limousines used to be reserved for the ruling class ... Today, limousines are like taxicabs with the door handles still intact."
Today's deal comes from this year's European Women's Pairs Championship. Look only at the West hand and name your opening lead. North's three-no-trump response showed 13-15 points and either 3-3-4-3 or 3-3-3-4 distribution. Four clubs set the suit as trumps; four diamonds and four spades were cue-bids; four no-trump was Roman Key Card Blackwood; and five diamonds showed either all four aces, or three aces and the club king.
Sitting West was French expert Benedicte Cronier. She inferred that South didn't have a heart control when she cue-bid four spades rather than four hearts. But North clearly had a heart control, as she had used Blackwood. So Cronier led the heart two.

Not anticipating the underlead of the ace, most declarers would call for dummy's jack and go down. But South wasn't "most declarers." She was Carla Arnolds from the Netherlands. She called for dummy's king and won all 13 tricks. Is it any surprise that Arnold and her partner, Bep Vriend, went on to win the title?

This opening lead has become standard, having appeared often in print. It would have been considered outstanding 30 years ago. But I cannot help thinking that in 1963 the lead would have worked. Progress is a two-edged sword.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 30, 1993
In the past you might have some pretty good ideas which weren't quite marketable. In the year ahead, however, if you invent or conceive something it will not be encumbered by the same obstacles.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're presently in a very favorable cycle where your desires and expectations have good chances of being fulfilled. It's imperative you believe in yourself and your abilities. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail #2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 4485, New York, N.Y. 10163.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In competitive developments today, the odds are slanted in your favor. However, initially neither you nor onlookers might believe this to be true.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your powers of observation are exceptionally astute today and useful knowledge can be acquired by watching a role model handle a situation similar to one you'll be handling later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your dealings with male friends today could be of greater substance than involvements you'll have with the ladies. Keep this in mind when selecting affiliations.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The proof for which you've been hoping regarding the loyalty and support of an associate could become evident today. It should make you feel good.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you could be extremely effective in managing critical matters for others. Your sincere efforts to protect their position will prove beneficial for you as well.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Persons who are in positions of power and influence sense a kinship with you today that is stronger than usual. One might do something significant for you without being asked.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Usually its unwise to have too many irons in the fire at one time, but today could be an exception. The more you have going for you, the greater your chances for success.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Wherever you go today your presence could have an impact, not because you're forceful or assertive, but because your enthusiastic manner will have an uplifting effect on all you encounter.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not be indifferent today with situations that are presently running rather smoothly and producing good results. These can be substantially improve upon if you have the will to do so.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have a rare gift today your peers might find enviable. It's your ability to evaluate and utilize information. They'll hear the same thing, but might not know what to do with it.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might find yourself in an arrangement today where you'll feel something important has slipped from your control. This assumption is erroneous. The opposite will be true.

4 decades of marriage haven't cured spouse's cheatin' heart

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for nearly 40 years. We are the same age, 68, and we have grandchildren who think "Popsie" hung the moon. He has been very good to me — except for the times he's been involved with other women.

Last year, I saw him kissing our next-door neighbor, who is a widow nearly our age. My husband told me he was just giving her a birthday kiss. (This was October and her birthday is in July.)

I suspected there was something between them when he went to her house to borrow something from her late husband's tool chest, and came out zipping up his pants. I had just gotten over forgiving him for getting involved with a 30-year-old woman he met in a shop at the mall when he was shopping for my Christmas gift.

Hell will freeze over before I leave him and everything I have helped him make.

I have never refused him, no matter how tired I am. If there was something I could put in his coffee to settle him down, I'd do it in a minute. He has lots of good qualities, but loyalty isn't one of them. I don't know whether I love him, or he is a 40-year habit. We were childhood sweethearts.

ADVICE

I don't expect you to answer this, but it's done me a lot of good getting all this off my chest. Sign me.

OLDFAITHFUL: DEAR OLD FAITHFUL: Don't apologize; that's what I'm here for. As Hamlet said, sometimes 'tis better to bear those ills we have than to fly to others we know not of.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 years old and four months pregnant. My boyfriend and I have gotten along fine until this past week.

I am totally against abortion and I don't think I could live with the thought that someone else was raising my child. My father and I don't talk anymore and he hates the idea that I am his daughter and pregnant.

I talk to a lot of people at school and my friends help a lot, too. I hate not having the support of my father. Is there any advice that you can give me?

DESPERATE AND SCARED IN HAMILTON, OHIO: DEAR DESPERATE AND SCARED: Your father is disappointed and probably angry that you and your boyfriend did not act more responsibly in preventing the pregnancy. And because many young women cut short their educations to raise these babies as single mothers, it is likely that he feels his dreams for your future have come to nothing. You do need to talk to your father and explain to him that his support is crucial during this difficult time.

Although you and your boyfriend are not getting along right now, he is required by law to contribute to the support of his child. If he has not already discussed this with you and your parents, you and your parents should consider discussing first with his parents — and later possibly with an attorney — how this must be arranged. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Adding to your column on people who don't return books, someone (Dorothy Parker?) wrote:

"They borrow books they will not buy."

"They have no ethics or religions."

"I wish some kind Burbankian guy

"Would cross my books with homing pigeons."

Poached Pears with Chocolate Sauce is an elegant finale to entertaining. Cranberry Sauce is a natural partner to turkey and ham or try as a topping over reduced fat ice cream.

Sweeten meals with 2 light dessert sauces

Healthy eating now and at any time of year is simply a matter of balancing your choices from the major food groups throughout the day. It means you can still enjoy your holiday dinner — with all the trimmings, including dessert — as long as you eat them in amounts that are right for you.

Think about your own food preferences and the ways you can balance your choices most comfortably. You can choose lower fat and sugar versions of foods you really enjoy, or balance your higher calorie choices with foods that are naturally low in fat and sugar. If you like cranberry sauce with your turkey or chicken and can't forego a taste of chocolate after dinner, try these light recipes. They can help satisfy your sweet tooth, and help you budget your calories to make room for other holiday favorites.

Equal sweetener replaces the sugar and a lot of the calories in these recipes. Use either the familiar pre-measured blue packets or new Equal Measure. It's the same great tasting sweetener packaged in bulk form so it's more convenient for recipes and drinks by the pitcher. Add the sweetener after the cooking process, otherwise, some loss of sweetness could occur.

POACHED PEARS WITH CHOCOLATE SAUCE

Chocolate Sauce:
 3/4 cup two-percent milk
 3 ounces unsweetened baking chocolate
 1 Tbsp. light corn syrup
 1 tsp. vanilla
 2 Tbsp. margarine
 26 packets Equal sweetener or 7 1/4 teaspoons Equal Measure.
Poached Pears:
 2 cups unsweetened apple juice
 1 tsp. lemon juice
 1 cinnamon stick
 4 whole cloves
 6 medium pears, pared, cored
 Combine milk and chocolate in small saucepan; cook over low heat until melted, stirring occasionally. Stir in corn syrup and vanilla. Remove from heat and stir in margarine until melted. Stir in sweetener. Serve warm or refrigerate and serve cold. Makes about 1 1/4 cups.

Heat apple juice, lemon juice, cinnamon stick and cloves to boiling in large saucepan. Add pears and heat to boiling. Reduce heat; simmer covered 10 to 15 minutes or until pears are tender. Cool. Remove pears from poaching liquid and place on individual dessert plates. Serve each with about 2 tablespoons Chocolate Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

 2 tsp. grated orange peel
 2 tsp. cornstarch
 2 Tbsp. cold water
 20 to 23 packages Equal sweetener or 5 to 6 tsp. Equal Measure
 1/2 to 1 tsp. brandy extract (optional)

Heat cranberries, 1/2 cup water and orange peel to boiling in medium saucepan. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 10 minutes or until soft. Mix cornstarch with 2 tablespoons water; stir into cranberries. Boil until thickened, about 1 minute. Remove from heat and let stand 2 to 3 minutes; stir in sweetener and brandy extract. Serve warm or refrigerate and serve cold. Remains of the dough: What do you do if your cash is trashed?

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Say you left $1,000 in the cookie jar and your kitchen burns to cinders. Should you just kiss those cash ashes goodbye? Not necessarily, says Vicki Singleton. Singleton solves jigsaw puzzles, piecing together bits of mutilated money to verify claims for currency often damaged beyond recognition. She's one of 20 Treasury Department experts who decide whether the ashes and paper fragments sent to the department really were money — and how much. Confirmed losses are replaced free. "It's very tedious," said Singleton, a 12-year veteran, as she sifted gingerly through the charred contents of three burned coffee cans and a small metal box. Singleton said it would take about two months to verify the owner's claim that the containers had been filled with $33,000 when his house was destroyed in a fire in Oakland, Calif., in 1991. Last year, the department redeemed about $600 million involving some 29,000 claims. "There's no limit how much people can send in for redemption," said Grace Scruggs, acting manager of the Examining and Redemption Branch in the department's Bureau of Engraving and Printing. But at least 51 percent of the mutilated bill must be recovered or, in the case of fire, enough of the note or a sufficient amount of recognizable ash to determine the currency's denomination and authenticity. Scruggs said there is a four- to six-month backlog on claims, down from a 13-month logjam that occurred following hurricanes Andrew and Iniki and the 1991 Oakland fire.

The process is very low-tech. "We use everything from knitting needles to tweezers to scalpels to adhesive tape — and a lot of elbow," Scruggs said. Sometimes money has to be boiled several times before the bills can be peeled apart, she added, displaying an ordinary kitchen pot on a two-burner hot plate. The largest claim ever was $2.5 million paid to the owner of an armored car destroyed by a 1978 explosion in New York. Scruggs said the largest amount redeemed in 1993 was $328,740 that had been buried in a metal box in the basement of a home in Hillaboro, Texas, that flooded. The owner, apparently thinking much less was involved, had submitted a claim for just $10,000. "Whatever we find, we pay it," Scruggs said.

Retired baseball star Reggie Jackson had a "substantial" amount of cash stored in a wall safe in his Oakland, Calif., home when it was destroyed by the 1991 fire, Scruggs said. Jackson sent the safe to the redemption branch, where it was pried open and the contents verified. The most common causes of damage are fire and moisture, particularly to money that's been buried, said Paul Frey, chief of the bureau's Office of Currency Standards. "Currency will not hold up in the ground or in damp places," he said. A lot of people, especially the elderly who had bad experiences with banks during the Depression, bury their money, Scruggs said. Then there is damage caused by natural disasters such as last summer's Midwest floods, hurricanes and forest fires; currency chewed into bits by animals; and notes disintegrated by chemicals.
