Rising Prices

We often hear people say what they would do if they HAVE INCREASED had a million dollars. Somehow it seems so easy to know what to do with a million dollars. So hard to know what SINCE MARCH 4 166,058 permanent and 52,060 tem-gaged, to do with a hundred. There are so many things that a SINCE MARCH 4 166,058 permanent and 52,060 tem-gaged. The second dollars were outside. hundred dollars will not buy. And yet we wonder if we had a million dollars if we would not find a lot of things even so large a sum could not buy, and if we would not find it almost as hard to know what to do with a million as what to do with a hundred.

Of NRA Bureaus

do with the things you have than with the things you don't have. As some rhymester put it the other day,

"It's not what you'd do with a million. If riches should e'er be your lot,

But what you are doing at present With the dollar and a quarter you've got."

We venture to say that as far as the welfare of society a whole goes a great deal more depends upon what everyone does with his dollar and a quarter than upon what a few men do with their millions. It is the sum total of all these little dollar-and-a-quarters which make up the real purchasing power of this country, which govern the demand n our supply-and-demand equations, and which determines the investing capacity of our savings banks and insurance

The thing which makes prices fall during periods of hard times is the fact that many of these little dollar-and-aquarters are reduced or cut off entirely. That curtails the demand for commodities and as the demand falls off prices lumbia at 1.314 and 9,500 outsiden ployees by several flourand durdecline. The decline of prices, frequently instead of increasdecline. The decline of prices, frequently instead of increase of the local that been added to the pay rolls in factor in enabling the Administraif prices are lower today than they were yesterday, they will be lower tomorrow than they are today. So men wait until tomorrow to buy.

All this downward trend is changed now. It is the considered purpose of every branch of the government to raise prices. The President has said that if prices cannot be raised one way they will be raised another. All such gius from our very selves, gantic organizations as the NRA and the AAA are primar- ial branches of the government ily devoted to the objective of putting prices up to the or the armed forced of the Army 1926 level. The gold purchase policy was devised for the same reason. And as a matter of fact for the past six years now, that, alas months prices have been going up. No one can doubt that they will continue to go up.

Since this is so, it is expedient to buy before prices go higher. If it was good business to wait, while prices were falling until tomorrow so as to buy things for less money than they could be bought today, so it is good business now to buy things today rather than to wait until tomorrow when they will be higher. With the federal government pouring money into the pockets of the unemployed and working classes by the billions of dollars, there can no longer be any hesitation about buying.

To the man receiving only twelve dollars a week it may not seem that he can have much influence on the general course of business, but when this twelve dollars a week is multiplied by millions of men throughout the whole country, it's effect is bound to be tremendous.
