NEWS DIGEST

BRIEFS

Tick, tick, tick

Illustration by Vicki DeBormier

This Sunday morning, some people will be sitting in their church parking lot for an extra hour before the service begins. These are the people who will have forgotten to turn their clocks back before going to bed Saturday night.

Daylight savings time officially ends at 2 a.m. this Sunday morning. With the old motto "Spring forward, Fall back," people are to set their clocks back one full hour. It is suggested this be done before going to bed Saturday night.

In making the change, 11 p.m. Saturday night should become 10 p.m. Then, when the alarm goes off Sunday morning at 7 a.m., it will be as light outdoors as it was the previous day, by 8 a.m.

The problem however, is for people who work during the day, and need time to do yard work in the early evening. As a result of the change, they will find it wanting to become dark an hour earlier.

This past week, it was possible to go for that long walk or do outdoor work until at least 6:30 p.m. Starting Sunday, it will be too dark to run that lawnmower by as early as 5:30 p.m.

As of 2 a.m. this Sunday morning, the last Sunday in October, we will be officially in Eastern Standard Time.

The date was selected through the Uniform Time Act of 1966.

The time will stay with us now, until the first Sunday in April of 1995.

Speed limits raised

SANFORD — Get ready to put the pedal to the metal on the Seminole Expressway — legally, that is. Crews today will be replacing the current 55 mph signs with 65 mph signs on the section between U.S. Highway 17-92 in Sanford and Red Bug Lake Road. The speed change was authorized by transportation secretary Ben Watts earlier this month. Watts also endorsed a speed increase between Red Bug and the East-West Expressway, but that will require federal highway administration approval. One other note, cautions Seminole County expressway director Gerald Brinton, you can't drive at the new speed limit until the signs are changed. Legally, that is.

Correction

SANFORD — Due to a typographical error, the wrong date of a shelter reconstruction fund raising event for the Humane Society of Seminole County was published in the Sanford Herald Thursday. The date of the ceremonial groundbreaking is Nov. 13 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Crime: New approach

Deputies more visible

SANFORD — The Seminole County sheriff's office has implemented a new approach to crime fighting that they believe will help make Seminole County a safer place to live.

Sheriff Don Kolinger has re-engineered the way law enforcement operates in the county and the way correctional services are provided at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Neighborhood Policing takes a proactive approach to law enforcement.

"Typically, we have been reacting to crime," said Undersheriff Steve Harriett. "You call. We come. That wasn't enough."

At the beginning of this year, Kolinger assembled a steering committee to develop a community policing plan.

The county, formerly divided into 13 patrol zones, has been broken down into 27 community service areas. Each area is serviced by four deputies.

Cops to set up shop at the mall

By NICK PFENFAUF

SANFORD — Police, sheriff's deputies and possibly other organizations are expected to have offices in a combined facility at the Seminole Towne Center Mall.

This past Monday night, the Sanford City Commission agreed in principle to waive up to $30,000 of the impact fees in the mall construction, in exchange for a community center.

Seminole County Undersheriff Steve Harriett said it will be very beneficial to the sheriff's department. "With our new neighborhood policing now underway," he said, "this will provide a mini station for our deputies working in the north-west quadrant."

Harriett said Sheriff Don Kolinger has been in discussions with Sanford officials toward working out what may end up to be not only a combined-use facility, but one in which both the police and sheriff's office will share in the cost of furnishings.

The city commission first discussed the proposal during a meet-

Get ready for historic home tour

By SHAR BROOKS

SANFORD — "Twas six weeks before the tour, and from Old Sanford town, came banging and sawing and other familiar sounds..."

Five homeowners in the Sanford Historic District are busily making last minute preparations, getting ready to open their homes for the sixth annual Sanford Historic Trust Holiday Tour of Homes, to be held Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 3 and 4.

Featured on the tour this year will be the homes of John and Juanny Mercer, Michael and Julia Gorb, Mark Platt and Bess Simons, James and Tricia Thomas and Frank and Wendy Rencke.

The Cultural Arts Center, itself a Sanford landmark, will again be the starting point for the tour and will be decorated with a tree and other floral by Sanford Flower Shop, to fit the part. Expect to find complimentary fresh baked cookies, soda

Lynn Sonnenberg loves to draw, but she hasn't been doing a lot of it lately. As every artist will tell you, making a career out of art can be a hard thing to do, so Sonnenberg bides her time working as an office manager in a furniture gallery.

While she has a degree, with honors, in fine arts from the University of Florida, she finds that the necessities of making a living keep her from practicing her art as much as she would like to.

But she may just have found something and someone to give her

Halloween: Ghosts, goblins, nip in air

When should you trick or treat?

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The kids are clamoring to put on their ghoulish and glamorous costumes and take to the streets. There's a (very slight) nip in the air.

And, it's Halloween.

Well, not exactly.

Though the little ones will try to convince you they need to go trick or treating on Saturday, Sunday or both, Halloween is not until Monday.

Officials at the Sanford and Lake Mary Police departments and at the Seminole County sheriff's office say that the time to go door to door begging for candy is on Halloween. They said there's no need to stretch the celebration out over several days.

The law enforcement agencies did offer a few suggestions for having a safer time on what could be a spooky day.

Before Halloween comes, review the trick or treating route. Tell them where they'll be going and how they're expected to behave. Establish a time when they are expected to return home.

Children under 8-years-old should be accompanied by a responsible adult, so select such a person or make plans to accompany your children yourself.

Review traffic safety rules such as crossing the street at the corner, obeying all traffic signs and looking both ways before crossing the street.

Though the costumes were probably selected long ago, make a few last minute checks for

New owners for Lake Mary Centre

By NICK PFENFAUF

LAKE MARY — It took just six days from foreclosure to new ownership for Lake Mary Centre.

On Oct. 18, an attorney for Mutual Of New York (MONY), a life insurance company, filed a notice of foreclosure on the center, against Lake Mary Centre Ltd., and its general partner LMC Management, Inc., a District of Columbia corporation.

On Oct. 24, MONY announced that it plans to acquire the community shopping center near the southeast corner of Lake Mary Blvd. and Lake Emma Road.

Bruce Fernald, MONY regional vice president for the southeastern United States, noted that Lake Mary Centre is an attractive property which is more than 95 percent leased. "We are pleased to acquire this property, and MONY intends to own and operate it for the benefit of tenants and customers," he said.

He noted that MONY intends to retain Hardy & Callaway Development Group Inc., as property manager for the Lake Mary Centre.

Built in three phases from 1987 to 1990, the center is a 288,450 square foot shopping center located on 46 acres. Anchor tenants are

Firemen fund drive

SANFORD — While Sanford Fire Chief Tom Hickson is now dealing with the last days of the drive to raise money for the replacement of an old fire truck, firemen are working on another drive.

Firemen will be located at the Wal-Mart Plaza and at the Central Florida Regional Airport during the air show this weekend. They will be selling raffle tickets for a 12-gauge shotgun. All proceeds from this drive will be going toward the Firemen's Benefit Fund.

Meanwhile, as of this morning, Hickson has only this weekend in which to raise enough money with which to buy the 1921 fire truck. The truck was originally used by the Sanford fire department, but has been missing for many decades. It was recently located in Tennessee, and is said to be in running condition.

The owner however, has plans to purchase another antique vehicle, and has told Hickson the old truck must be sold by November 1st. Hickson said another prospective buyer for the truck is apparently standing in the wings, should not enough money be obtained in Sanford.

The total amount needed for the actual purchase is $8,500. As of yesterday, $3,275 had been obtained, less than half.

Hickson said he will attempt to have the end date for the fund drive extended, but was not certain the truck's owner would do that.

Unless there is an extension or a last minute influx of donations is received, the drive will be over, and unfortunately, unsuccessful.

For information on this Firemen's Benefit Fund drive, or the fire truck purchase drive, phone the Sanford Fire Department at 322-4952.

Red Baron team to perform Show to present many types of entertainment

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — If Snoopy (in the Peanuts comic strip) plans to chase the Red Baron, Sanford will be the place to be this weekend. The famous Red Baron Stearman Squadron will be performing both this Saturday and Sunday during the big air show at the Central Florida Regional Airport.

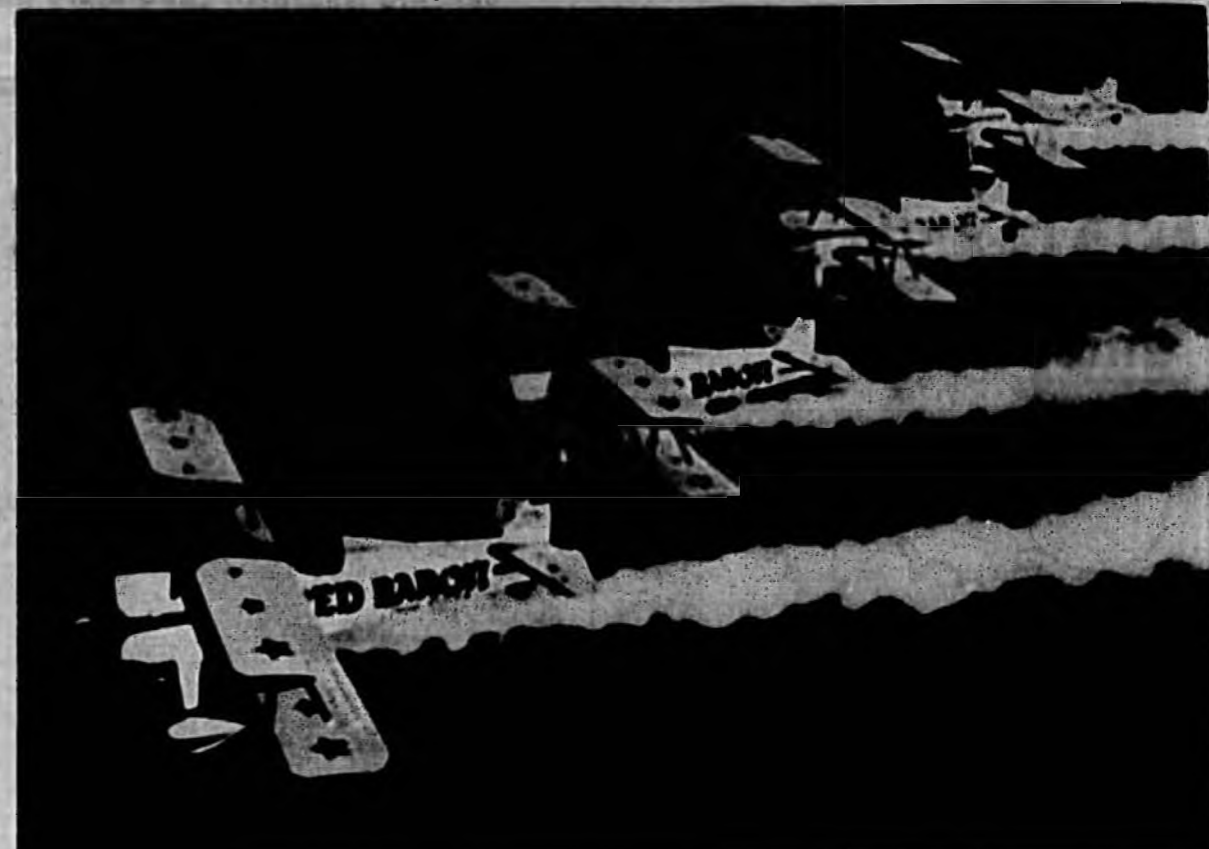

The squadron of Stearman A-75 biplanes was built in the late 1930s and early 1940s as training aircraft for both the Army and Navy.

The squadron derives its name from the real Red Baron, Baron Manfred von Richtofen, famous during World War I for downing a reported 80 Allied aircraft. The plane he flew was bright red, hence the nickname "Red Baron."

The planes used now have all been restored and modified for their current role as airshow planes. The modifications include 450 horsepower Pratt & Whitney Wasp Jr. engines, which provide more than twice the original power.

The smoke seen coming from the rear of the planes has been installed to help identify the path of the planes through the sky, and make the performance more spectacular.

The squadron started barnstorming in 1979. They presently fly nine months of the year, and have raised millions of dollars for various children's charities. Since starting their performances at air shows in 1984, they have won many awards for professionalism and showmanship.

The four pilots are Steve Thompson, John Bowman, Jim "Sonny" Lovelace, and Randy Drake. Bowman has been with the group since 1982, and serves as the lead pilot. In addition to the four, the squadron maintains five additional pilots, all highly qualified, to help meet their heavy schedule.

Jerry van Kempen will provide the narration during the performance in Sanford. He and his wife Margaret have been associated with the squadron since 1988. He is also a veteran aerobatic pilot, with over 42 years of aviation experience.

The Red Baron squadron will be performing during each of the two day air show.

Gates at the Central Florida Regional Airport will open at 9 a.m. Admission is $9 for adults and $5 for children 7-12 if purchased in advance. At the gate, admission will be $12 for adults and $7 for children. Children under seven will be admitted free with a paying adult.

Parking is $2.

The Air Show Orlando is sponsored by the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce and the Central Florida Regional Airport.

Father of girl reported missing confesses

By The Associated Press

RIVIERA BEACH — The stepfather of a 7-year-old girl initially reported missing at a Fort Lauderdale flea market has confessed to killing her, a newspaper reported today.

Walter John Zile, 32, was charged Thursday with first-degree murder and two counts of aggravated child abuse more than seven hours after police began questioning Zile and his wife, Pauline, 24.

State officials also took over custody of the couple's two young boys, Daniel, 5, and Chad, 3. The Palm Beach Post reported.

Late Thursday, after more than nine hours of interrogation, Zile went with investigators to Tequesta, where he told police he buried Christina, the 7-year-old, late Wednesday.

Local authorities and the FBI were digging for the body before dawn today but suspended the search until daylight. Frank Jackovino, communications supervisor for the Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office, told The Associated Press.

Mrs. Zile, 24, has not been charged in her daughter's death. She left the station Thursday night with her mother.

Mrs. Zile broke down and told investigators she and her husband concocted a tale of abduction to cover up the girl's murder. The Miami Herald reported.

She was granted immunity but still might be charged with filing a false report or with perjury if she lies to police again, Riviera Beach Police Lt. David Harris said.

Harris said investigators believe Mrs. Zile witnessed the murder but didn't participate.

"In my opinion, he's got one heck of a psychological grip on her," Harris said.

Police were unsure when Christina died, the Post said quoting unidentified sources. But investigators believe the girl went into convulsions and died after a severe beating, the Post said. Police found traces of blood in the couple's apartment earlier this week.

The charges against Zile were filed a day after he and his wife disappeared for 12 hours. Mrs. Zile was given a blood sample for genetic typing, a common procedure in missing children cases.

"They explained to Riviera Beach police that the reason that they missed their appointment with sheriff's officers was that they felt they needed some time alone to stop and think," Broward County sheriff's spokesman Jim Lejedal said Thursday.

The couple was spotted before dawn Thursday at a Port St. Lucie service station and voluntarily went to police headquarters there, said FBI spokesman Paul Miller.

Mrs. Zile had reported her daughter missing Saturday in the Swap Shop, but investigators determined the girl hadn't been seen outside the family for 10 days before that. Investigators raised suspicion of abuse after finding blood in the couple's apartment and car trunk.

Central Florida can connect with Cuba

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Central Florida has many residents who either came from or have relatives in Cuba. One of the larger Cuban concentrations is in the Deltona area.

Beginning this Sunday, people in Central Florida will be able to make a direct-dial telephone call to Cuba, via AT&T Corp., marking the first time an operator hasn't been needed to complete a call from the United States to Cuba.

The service is the result of an agreement AT&T signed earlier this month with EmteCuba, the Cuban national telephone company. It comes amid growing interest in doing business with Cuba and sporadic U.S.-Cuba talks over casings the U.S. trade embargo.

Weekday calls will cost $1.49 per minute. Charges fall to 98 cents per minute under certain AT&T calling plans.

A direct call requires use of the 011 international access code, followed by 53, the country code for Cuba, a city code such as 7 for Havana and the local number.

Several other long distance companies also have announced plans to provide long distance service to Cuba. AT&T has had the only service from the United States since 1921, relying at times on connections through Mexico or Europe to meet demand.

Information from Associated Press is contained in this report.

POLICE BRIEFS

Shoplifting

Peggy Mitchell, 36, 3834 1/2 Main St., Sanford, was arrested on a shoplifting charge by Sanford police Wednesday afternoon after an employee of the Wal-Mart on South Orlando Drive reported she tried to leave without paying for 846 in children's clothing.

Anti-theft alarm sounds

Holly B. Parsons, 41, and Brenda L. Parsons, 42, both of 110 Sun Vista Court, Sanford, were arrested on shoplifting charges by Longwood police Wednesday at the Eckerd Drugs on South U.S. Highway 17-92. A store employee reported an anti-theft alarm sounded when they attempted to leave. When they were checked, the employee reported finding Brenda Parsons had 833 in store cologne in her possession and Holly Parsons had a 95 air freshener in her possession.

Warrant arrests made

The following wanted persons were taken into custody:
 • Aaron Capriotti Jr., 25, 1828 Blackstone Ave., Sanford; on a charge of failure to appear in court to answer to a cocaine sale charge.
 • Kelly Gene Sawyer, 40, 4015 Henryline Point, Sanford; after turning himself in at the county jail on a probation violation charge for attempted cocaine possession.
 • Roger Sherman Oatman, 34, 2421 N.W. Midway; on an Orange County history probation violation charge.
 • Jimmy Lee Daniels, 25, 73 Castle Street Court, Sanford; on charges of failure to pay a court-ordered fine and two charges of failure to appear in court to answer to the fine payment failure charge.
 • Justice Joycelyn Clark, 40, 232 Jones Ave., Sanford; on a probation violation charge for attempted cocaine purchase.
 • Tommy Glenn Blue, 38, 1408 W. 24th St., Sanford; on a grand theft probation violation charge.
 • Tovaana S. Scott, 34, 116 Dorchester Square, Lake Mary; on a Volusia County charge of failure to appear in court to answer to a battery charge.

• Adria Charnell Taylor, 21, 301 W. Eighth Street, Sanford, was located at her residence Tuesday by sheriff's deputies. She was wanted on two warrants for failing to pay fines, one for driving with a suspended/revoked license, and one for failing to appear on a charge of grand theft.
 • Casey James II, 31, 2307 Coronado Concourse, Sanford, was arrested at his residence by deputies Tuesday. He was wanted for failing to appear on a charge of obtaining property with a worthless check.
 • Arcotus Montoya Allen, 24, 1216 W. 13th Street, was located at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility Tuesday. He was wanted for failing to appear on a charge of resisting an officer without violence.
 • Lorenzo Tillman, 46, 115 W. Seventh Street, Sanford, was located by deputies at the jail Tuesday. He was wanted for driving with a suspended/revoked license.
 • Willie Lee Jones, 38, 615 E. Ninth Street, was located by deputies on C.R. 427 Tuesday. He was wanted on a warrant for obtaining property with a worthless check.
 • Petrinia Denise Lawson, 21, Princeton Avenue, Sanford, was served a warrant at the jail Tuesday. She was wanted for retail theft.

Crimes reported to deputies

Violence
 • A Soldiers Creek Place woman reported Wednesday she and her son were threatened by a 13-year-old youth last week. The woman reported the youth threatened her son on Oct. 20 with a baseball bat. When she arrived in her car, the boy came up to her and said he was "going to snuff her."

Crimes reported to Sanford police

Violence
 • A 25-year-old Sanford man reported he was robbed at gunpoint Wednesday evening on Mulberry Avenue. The man reported he was walking in the 1200 block at 6:20 p.m. when a car pulled alongside him and a passenger pointed a black gun at him, demanding his jewelry. The man said he gave the assailant his $300 ring and $100 necklace and the car left. The man described the car as a mid-sized blue two-door with an Orange County tag. The suspect was described as black, 18 to 25 years old, of medium height and build and wearing a purple shirt with a white stripe, blue jeans and sunglasses.

Grim prison landmark: 1 million inmates

By CAROLYN GRONBERG
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The United States hit a grim landmark this year: More than 1 million people behind bars for the first time in history.

Of the 1,012,851 inmates as of June 30, 919,143 were in state prisons and 93,708 in federal prisons, the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Thursday.

That means one of every 280 people in America was imprisoned, and that doesn't include the approximately 440,000 in jails, many of whom are awaiting trial or serving short sentences. The total is more than double the 462,008 prison population of Dec. 31, 1984.

"If you look over the last decade or so, the reasons for the growth are clearly linked to adults arrested for serious crime and the increasing likelihood of incarceration given an arrest for a serious crime, most prominent for those arrested for drug violations," said Allen Beck, the deputy associate director of the statistics bureau.

The number of arrests for drug-law violations has doubled and there has been "a fivefold increase in the likelihood of incarceration given an arrest for drugs," Beck said.

But Marc Mauer of The Sentencing Project argues that the growth in inmate population hasn't bought the nation any security.

"Clearly we need a prison system for people who are truly violent and dangerous, but what's happened in recent years is that we've been locking up increasing numbers of drug and property offenders and we have very little to show for it in terms of reduced rates of crime," Mauer said.

The rate of prison population to the general public, according to the bureau, is 373 prison inmates per 100,000 residents, up from 187 in 1984. In calculating that rate, the bureau included only prisoners sentenced to terms longer than one year.

California's 124,813 inmates and Texas' 100,136 accounted for more than one-fifth of the total.

Texas had the highest incarceration rate, with 548 people sentenced to more than one year per 100,000 residents, the bureau said. Second was Louisiana at 514 per 100,000, followed by South Carolina at 504 and Oklahoma at 501. California's incarceration rate was 382, and New York's was 361.

North Dakota had the lowest incarceration rate, with 75 per 100,000 residents. Next was Minnesota, with 100 per 100,000 residents, followed by West Virginia with 106 and Maine with 113.

The recently passed crime bill authorizes spending $7.9 billion for state prison grants to help the states cope with a rapid inmate expansion.

Overall, the state and federal prison population grew by more than 71,000, or almost 1,400 a week in the 12-month period through June 30. But in the final six months of that period, the population grew by almost 40,000, or more than 1,500 a week. The annual growth is 11 percent faster than the average annual growth during the previous five years, the bureau found.

Eleven states had inmate population growths of 10 percent or more during the year: Connecticut, 20 percent; Texas, 18 percent; Tennessee, 15 percent; Montana, 14.5 percent; Virginia, 14 percent; Georgia, 12 percent; Arizona, Florida, Mississippi and Wyoming, 11 percent; and Idaho, 10 percent.

Several states experienced declines: Alaska, down 6.5 percent; Nebraska, down 4 percent; Vermont, down 3 percent; Kansas, down 2 percent; and Maine, down 0.1 percent.

Cops arrest man for tearing down signs

By MICK PEPINIAUF
 Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Seminole County sheriff's deputies have arrested Michael Pettis, 42, of 1249 Silver Palm Drive, Altamonte Springs, on charges of criminal mischief and petit theft.

According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, Pettis is accused of tearing down political signs belonging to Dr. John Kang, a candidate for the Altamonte Springs City Commission. Kang had filed a complaint with the sheriff's office on October 25, saying his signs were being vandalized.

McDonough said deputy Daren Tjomatol, off duty at the time, was driving his personal vehicle at approximately 6:45 p.m. Wednesday, when he noticed a car parked alongside the road at the intersection of Pine Street and Pearl Lake Causeway, near Altamonte Springs. The rear of the car reportedly contained two Kang campaign signs.

McDonough said Tjomatol questioned Pettis, and subsequently arrested him for criminal mischief and petit theft. Pettis was given a notice to appear in court, rather than being booked at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

According to deputy Tjomatol, Pettis said he thought it was legal to tear down campaign signs if they were on the right-of-way. However, McDonough said the Kang signs were located on private property in the front yard of a homeowner who had reportedly given Kang permission to place the sign at that location.

The location where the arrest was made was reportedly the same area in which other Kang signs were destroyed earlier this week.

Casino gambling referendum

We doubt if there is any eligible voter or adult in Seminole County who has not read or heard both pro and con discussion on the gambling referendum to appear on the ballot November 8.

Proponents make it appear as though gambling will be directly responsible for saving Florida's economy. It will provide tens of thousands of jobs, and bring in all kinds of revenue.

Opponents question - bring in revenue to who? Many agree it will certainly bring about an improvement in employment. Cities and counties will need more police officers and deputies to combat expected problems.

It will also bring a great deal more money into the coffers. (Although we doubt it will be of such governmental significance as to help reduce any property taxes.)

Proponents tout Las Vegas' success: strong economy and low crime rate.

Opponents point to Atlantic City: Crime infested and an economic disaster for other business people.

But Seminole County is not Las Vegas nor Atlantic City. The only way to really know what would happen here is to try it. Do we want to take that chance?

It is unfortunate the gambling issue has been lumped into one referendum. We believe people should have been given more choices. Do you want casino gambling? Do you want only riverboat gambling? Do you want both riverboat and casino gambling? Do you want it restricted to no more than one operation per county (or less)?

These questions, asked individually, would have given voters a better choice. As it stands now, it's all or nothing.

Although we like the idea of limited riverboat gambling, we think there are too many unanswered questions about the tremendous impact three casinos would have on Seminole County. Trying it, becoming the gaming capital of central Florida, is just too risky.

Vote NO on the referendum that will appear on the ballot Nov. 8. As it is offered to us, the majority of Floridians won't benefit, and as such, it's not needed.

A theory, some praise

That was a splendid story about the Montezuma Hotel in the Sunday Herald of Oct. 16.

The name of the hotel which recently burned was once Bye-Lo. Just why it was called that is not known for sure but here are some reasonable theories.

Remember when we told children to go Beddie-Bye? And when parents sang lullabies to their babies?

One of these songs was in the school song book and was called "Sweet and Low." It went like this:
Sweet and low
Sweet and low

Wind of the Western Sea
Blow, blow, breathe and blow.

Father will come to thee soon
Over the rolling waters go.

Come from the dying moon and blow.
Blow him again to me -

While my little one -

While my pretty one -

Sleeps...

Bye-Lo certainly gives the ambience of a safe place for a tranquil night's sleep.

I lived two blocks from the Montezuma for awhile when I was a child. I cried when it burned.

Dressing for the balancing act

BOSTON - Mr. Blackwell wants to share his years of collected wisdom with the folks on the O.J. Simpson case. This week, the man who churns out Hollywood's Worst Dressed List had some advice for Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark.

"She has to stop wearing white."
"She needs to bring her hem in just above the knee."

In the best legal opinion of this one-man jury of good and bad taste, if Marcia just gets the skirt a teeny-weeny bit longer, she'll be more likely to get a guilty verdict.

In fairness, Mr. Blackwell is not the only O.J. watcher who has made a small cottage industry of measuring Clark's hemline and color coordination. The woman's style - sartorial and prosecutorial - has been the task of L.A. since she arrived at the jury selection having undergone a "makeover."

It appears that some focus group in Phoenix had convicted Ms. Clark of the unwomanly crime of abrasiveness. The former dancer who hasn't lost a case in five years wasn't warm or wiggly. She lacked that crucial Je ne sais quoi of jury appeal.

So she was feminized or mommified, as some put it. The hairdresser who wicketed the scissors to her black locks said he had just "softened her up." Indeed "soft" was the watchword.

She lightened up the suits and the effect. She smiles to the media and talks about her kids. She comes on friendly and non-threatening to the prospective jurors, actually asking one. "You won't hold it against me if I ask just a few questions?"

Nevertheless, when Clark goes into court she still runs the gantlet of hemline-watchers and gender-assessors who are there to see if she can hew the fine line between strong and tough, warm and weak.

woman and D.A. Indeed, willy-nilly, Marcia Clark is becoming a perfect portrait of the balance women must maintain just to go about their work lives.

In this case, remember that the woman who was accused of having a prosecutorial style actually is a prosecutor.

Now it's true that men also have to worry about appearance. O.J. would not plead his case in a hooded sweatshirt. For that matter, few of us would buy heart surgery from a male doctor with an earring. We rarely see ponytails on CEOs.

But if you want to know how differently the style lines play out for male and female professionals, consider what would have happened if Marcia Clark had posed for People magazine the way defense attorney Robert Shapiro did. Without a shirt on.

Women do have an endless array of personal choices. They can have "looks" as individualistic as their DNA. But it's much harder to find a style for professional life that fits the work and the chromosomes.

This is more than a matter of wardrobe. After all, another self-described media consultant warned recently that the thing Clark couldn't do, besides wear short skirts, was get angry. Public displays of female aggressiveness are as inappropriate as professional displays of female thigh.

She lightened up the suits and the effect.

Partisan school board elections

In November voters decide whether to switch to partisan school board elections or to maintain the nonpartisan status quo. Following are some reasons I think it's time to "un-quo" the status.

Nonpartisanship is a misnomer: Opponents of change say politics and partisanship should be removed from all aspects of education including elections. Sounds good, but it's not reality. Elected school board members are politicians, whether or not they want the label. As voters, they are registered partisans. As candidates, they pay qualifying fees, campaign, make speeches, raise funds, address issues, and do all that partisan political candidates do - except reveal their party affiliation (political philosophy) to voters. It's a mistake to believe nonpartisan races really are. In fact, it's confusing, misleading and deceptive.

Other elections are partisan: Except for judges, all county, state, and federal candidates must declare party affiliation. If doing so harms education, then why not demand nonpartisanship of other elected officials who propose education policy and mandate how taxes are raised and spent for education? The Education Commissioner, Congress, Governor and Florida Legislature come to mind. Partisan county commissioners vote on zoning, impact fees and other school-related issues. School boards work politically with partisan government officials both informally and formally through contracts, grants, legislative packages, resolutions and lobbying on behalf of education. The majority of school boards in Florida are partisan (only five of 67 are not). Shouldn't all elected officials involved with education be playing by the same rules, including the method of electing them?

Nonpartisanship limits voter information: Voters may know all about school board candidates except one vital piece of information - party affiliation. Most voters like to know if a candidate is Democrat, Republican, Independent, Libertarian or something else. Party labels help predict a candidate's views and future voting record - liberal, conservative, moderate or radical. Because Seminole County's School Board is nonpartisan, candidates may not put party affiliation on their signs or literature or even respond to questions about party affiliation. It is a guessing game except for the few who know or call the supervisor of elections to find out. A voter has a right to all candidate information (including a candidate's political stand in a political election).

Nonpartisanship violates candidates' rights: Running for school board shouldn't mean giving up freedom of speech. As registered voters, candidates should not be denied the right to declare that registration openly. School board candidates' literature and speeches may list club, church and civic affiliations, but not party affiliation. In partisan races, candidates receive support, endorsements and inclusion in their party's literature, but nonpartisan candidates are excluded by law.

Nonpartisanship does not eliminate politics: Both during and after election, school board members are involved in politics as they should be. Special interest groups (unions, homeowners, PTA, chambers of commerce and community groups) have strong political voices, as they should have. The word politic means "prudent, judicious, astute with regard to the state and its government." Who wants school board members with no such regard or no openly stated political persuasion? The word partisan means "adhering to a particular viewpoint or cause." It is naive to believe school board members check their viewpoints and causes at the political door to government service. Merely being called "nonpartisan" does not and shouldn't remove people from their convictions. Unless ashamed of their politics, all elected officials (school board members included) should want the public to know the political party platforms and beliefs with which they have allied themselves.

Seminole Opinion

Political pride: All citizens (including school board members) should be politically involved and proud of their political involvement. If politics is a dirty word, then it's the fault of voters (or, worse, non-voters) who fail to support the best candidates. It's said we get the kind of government we deserve because in America voters determine which politicians are in office. Cleaning up dirty politics and demanding accountability begin and end with well-informed voters. Being well informed includes knowing candidates' politics. Understanding candidates' politics includes knowing their partisanship.

I'm not ashamed to be a committeewoman actively involved in my party executive committee where candidates and issues of good government are measured by my personal political philosophy. I ran twice in non-partisan races, so don't ask which party I had to campaign by keeping my party affiliation a "secret" from the very people I was expected to represent if elected. Seems ludicrous, doesn't it?

I say either eliminate party affiliation from all races and candidates, or stop discriminating against those who choose to run for the Seminole County School Board. I'm voting for partisan elections!

Editor's note: Barbara Kuhn is chairwoman of the Seminole County School Board.

Bryant flips over Gingrich reverse

WASHINGTON - Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, thought lobbying reform was a done deal on the eve of a House vote last month. Then the phone rang.

It was 7:30 p.m. when a staffer called alerting Bryant that Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Cal., was on the House floor condemning the bipartisan legislation. Bryant switched on his office television to the House floor and glared. Gingrich and other Republicans were winking on a deal struck after 20 months of negotiations. Bryant leapt from his desk and sprinted to the House floor to debate Gingrich.

But Gingrich - who justified his flip-flop by claiming the reform bill would erect a barrier between ordinary Americans and their government - had finished speaking by the time Bryant had arrived. Ordinarily a quiet and self-effacing man, Bryant was livid enough to crash the Republican cloakroom looking for Gingrich. He found Gingrich and berated him for his ambush attack, for not having spoken up earlier and for hiding behind the guise of "grass roots" and religious liberty.

"I don't believe you acted honorably," Bryant charged.

Although the bill eventually passed the House, Gingrich's gambit killed it by the time it reached the Senate. Looking back on the episode, Bryant observes: "What [the Republicans] had done that afternoon, we learned later, was notify all the right-wing organizations and all the right-wing talk show hosts what the line was going to be. It gave the members of the House and Gingrich cover for what they really wanted to do anyway, which was stop the gift provisions of the bill. And it helped him make it seem that Congress couldn't make itself better."

Under Bryant's legislation, lobbyists would no longer be able to curry favor with lawmakers by paying for meals and entertainment, or by offering all-expense-paid recreational travel. It also would have tightened disclosure requirements. Bryant says that a minority of Democrats and Republicans - whom some have dubbed the "golf caucus" - were concerned that reform would lower their standard of living.

Gingrich was able to scuttle lobbying reform, side up to the religious right and scapegoat the Democrats for lacking the will to clean up Congress. Bryant notes that the language Gingrich found offensive had been in the bill since last November, yet Gingrich failed to voice his concern until the eleventh hour. It's what Fred Wertheimer of Common Cause called a "disinformation campaign."

"Lobbying reform is the case example of why Newt Gingrich is not only dangerous but unreliable," fumed one House Democratic leader. "Bob Michel [retiring Republican leader] is a man of integrity and his word was his bond."

"There have been (other) instances where he [Gingrich] has not completely lived up to the understanding," one senior White House official told us. "If they use these kind of tactics it will just turn people off and we will benefit from them."

A Gingrich spokesman says that when he became aware of the "technical provisions" regarding grass roots lobbying, he voiced opposition. "Sometimes there are miscommunications and not everyone knows," he said.

Although Gingrich tried claiming the high ground in the lobbying debate, the GOP's money machine has been at the forefront of his concerns this political season.

Although the bill eventually passed the House, Gingrich's gambit killed it by the time it reached the Senate.

ing on Oct. 10, but gave a consensus vote to hold off on the proposal pending an investigation into the need for such a facility.

Tom Schneider, vice president of Simon and Associates, had proposed the facility, to be located inside the mall, as not only a police substation but one used also by the sheriff's department.

Sanford police chief Ralph Russell had explained how his research indicated approximately 2,340 calls had been made during this past year to the Altamonte Mall.

At the Oct. 10 meeting, Commissioner A.A. McClanahan had suggested that the city shouldn't be locked down to a particular area. "We may want to have some type of floating police department," he said.

"If there is room at the mall, we may need it, but let's look into this more."

During the Oct. 24 commission work session discussion on the matter, McClanahan supported the proposal, but suggested that any agreement with the mall people should be for at least five to 10 years. "We wouldn't want to set up there, then have things change after a year or so," he said.

City Manager Bill Simmons noted that he believed it should be at least 10 years.

Under the general agreement, the facility would be considered as a "Community Center." As such, it is proposed to be available to various agencies as well as the city, free of charge, except for utilities. The Sanford Police Department will not be obligated to staff the facility on a set schedule.

The day to day cost of operating the center is to be discussed at a later date between all agencies utilizing the center.

Monday the commissioners voted unanimously to have the proposal drawn up for approval, with the stipulation that the lease be for at least 10 years.

Under Sheriff Harriett said the facility will be of considerable help in law enforcement. "This is a unique opportunity. We'll be able to have police as well as deputies, in addition to the private security people at the mall, and this will be of help to everyone," he said.

"I'm sort of doing this for my brother," she said of her drawings of the homes. She said he always guided her to do more with her talent. Sonnenberg's brother was a teacher at Valencia Community College and spent his summer break bicycling. Sonnenberg said he had cycled in every state but North Dakota, which was his destination at the time of his death. His parents recently completed his journey for him, taking some stones from the site of the accident to North Dakota, on bicycle.

Bob was the oldest child in the close family of three children. Sonnenberg was the youngest and drew a lot of inspiration from her older brother. There is also a lot of artful inspiration in the family. Her mother, Bettie, has an art education degree and both of her grandmothers were artists. Her grandmother liked watercolors and her grandfather painted oils until his late 80s.

free lance artist and for an interior designer, but said she would eventually like to get her degree in education and teach, like her brother. She would like to teach art to children.

Sonnenberg works with Karen Ratliff-McNeil, one of the tour coordinators, at the Design Collection in Altamonte Springs. Ratliff-McNeil asked her to do the renderings of the homes. Sonnenberg said each drawing took about two hours to complete. She likes working with pen and ink, pencils and pastels and would eventually like to learn more about printmaking.

A lover of antiques and old homes herself, Sonnenberg recently moved into her brother's home in an older section of Winter Park. She is still unpacking, but has definite plans in mind for the circa 1940s home she calls "typical Florida."

"I like the odd," she said of her taste in decorating, which ranges from the old, such as her 100-year-old secretary, to the ultra modern and "metropolitan." Her kitchen is cobalt blue with chartreuse valances and she would like to paint her guest room lipstick red.

And, of course, there is a studio in the home, situated to get the southern and eastern light that artists love.

Approach

These deputies don't just drive through the neighborhood. They get out and talk to the residents. get to know them and become a part of the neighborhood.

"The residents get to know the deputies and vice versa, sometimes on a first name basis," Harriett explained. "It's like the old beat cop, but much more."

In addition to offering law enforcement services, Harriett explained, the deputies are equipped to offer assistance in finding help, when needed, from other community service agencies.

Each service area is a "mini Sheriff's Office," able to tailor the service delivery procedures to suit the needs of the community they serve. Every area is different, Harriett explained. As needs differ, services should differ to reflect that difference.

The decentralization process is tearing down barriers between law enforcement and the community, Eslinger believes. In addition it is making people feel less afraid in their homes.

"This gets at reducing crime," Harriett said, "but it also reduces the fear of crime."

Harriett said the community policing has also reduced the response time to crime scenes considerably.

"On non-emergency calls, we used to take as much as 30 minutes on average, now we average about 12 minutes," he said. "On emergency calls we can be on the scene in under two minutes because of our proximity to the community we serve."

Investigators have also been decentralized so they are able to avoid the bureaucratic delay that can often result from investigators being far-removed from the crime scene.

Harriett said the community policing has already shown dramatic results. Law enforcement and the community have begun working together to fight crime, Harriett said, and there is a much more amicable attitude between the deputies and the people they serve.

and tea. Tickets will be available both days of the tour, for $10, which includes a souvenir program with a map and descriptions of all of the homes. Advanced tickets, at a reduced rate of two for $15, will be available through any trust member, at the Sanford Chamber of Commerce, the Welcome Center or the Main Street office, or by calling Mary Larsen at 321-0144.

A special feature of the tour this year is the inclusion of the newly renovated rectory of All Souls Catholic Church and the home of Father Richard Trout. The complete story of the improvement of the rectory was featured in a June 23, 1994 article in the Sanford Herald.

According to Trout, the house was built in 1890, and called Chase Mansion, for the Chase family who built it. The Chases sold it and other property to the Catholic Church in 1954. "It had been neglected for such a long time," Trout said. "It had an almost haunting way. Past priests felt it was somewhat spooky and gloomy."

Beside the interior and exterior renovation, to open up and brighten the house, a lot of landscape work has been done. "There are lots of flowers," said Father Trout's brother, Jon, who also lives in the house.

Right now the house is decorated for Halloween. Jon said his brother the priest has no qualms about celebrating this secular holiday, for the children. Trout said All Hallow's Eve is believed to be the night all evil spirits are dispersed before All Souls Day, the church's feast day. With this in mind, the Trouts have gone all out to capture the "spirit" of the holiday, right down to orange and yellow marigolds around the fountain in the garden. This should give you some idea of what to expect on the home tour.

Jon said that an extensive family collection of Christmas decorations and ornaments will be on display inside and out, right down to a Nativity scene in the garden, and lots of lights in the trees. Only the downstairs will be open for the tour, which includes two bedrooms, a dinette and kitchen, dining room, living room and a parlor, a sun porch and a chapel. The upstairs is comprised of three apartment suites and the master suite.

Tour committee members are working hard this year to include a variety of events to round out the viewing of the lovely old homes, decorated for the holidays.

Horse-drawn carriage tours of the district, with the clop, clop of horses hooves on the brick streets will be available both days, for $10.

An antique automobile club will have period cars parked in front of the homes, to add a touch of realism to the street scene.

And the sounds of guitar and flute music will also be provided in some of the homes. Two musicians will stroll from home-to-home, both days. The sanctuary at All Souls will be open at various times both days with choral presentations.

The plans for the tour were headed up this year by Karen Ratliff-McNeil and Gigi Giles. Members of the Historic Trust who have coordinated the tour activities this year are Ray and Mary Larsen, tickets; Jami Meeks, headquarters; Gretchen Gomez and Carmen Sharpe, program; Laura Strachla, entertainment; John Mercer, advertising; and Steve Myers, signage. Besides putting together the home tour, the trust is also preparing for CraftFest in November, the annual lighting contest, which begins Dec. 3, and for participation in Light Up Sanford, the second weekend in December. The tour is the main source of income for other trust projects such as grants to those renovating home in the Historic District. Several members have also worked on a dollhouse that will be on display at the CraftFest and at the Cultural Arts Center during the tour. Raffle chances will be sold on the dollhouse.

After last year's tour Loretta Bingham said, "I've been on the tours like this all over the state and I really believe this is the nicest I've seen."

Again this year, tour coordinators plan to invite Orlando realtors to the tour. Reportedly, one home under contract, in the district, was open during the tour last year and sold very quickly afterwards.

The tour hours are noon until 5 p.m. each day.

Susan Wimmer and Vicki Desjardis contributed to this story.

Abortion pill available to U.S., but where?

By PAUL RABURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — The French abortion pill RU-486 is now being made available to 2,100 American women in a study, but the organizers won't say where because they fear anti-abortion violence.

"You may have noticed there are some nuts out there who do bad things to people who deliver abortions," said Dr. C. Wayne Bardin, research director at the Population Council, the nonprofit group sponsoring the study.

He said the study is being conducted at "more than 12 and less than 20" centers across the country.

More than 100 women have been given the drug so far as part of the $8 million study, which could help make the abortion pill routinely available in the United States by 1996, Bardin said.

At the New York hotel where the study was announced, security guards were posted at the entrance to the news conference and reporters were asked to show identification.

Immediately after the news conference, Planned Parenthood Federation of America announced that its clinics in Aurora, Colo.; Cambridge, Mass.; Des Moines, Iowa; Houston; San Diego, and Williston, Vt., are participating in the study.

"We're excited to be a part of its introduction into the United States," said Jane Johnson, executive vice president of Planned Parenthood Federation of America. She said she did not anticipate the need for additional security.

In response to a reporter's questions, Dr. Daniel Mishell of the University of Southern California and Dr. Suzanne Poppema of Aurora Medical Services in Seattle confirmed that they were also participating in the study.

"My security people at the university are quite concerned about the issue," Mishell said. There has been no hint of protest or violence, he said.

Poppema thought fears of violence were justified. "In this day and age, given the frantic and less and less sane approach of the 'antis', it's a reasonable concern," she said.

Richard Glasow, a consultant for the Life Issues Institute in Cincinnati and former education director for the National Right to Life Committee, said the secrecy was an effort to hide the data.

"This way they can pick and choose which data they want to have come out and which data they don't," he said.

In July, Dr. John Britton and his bodyguard were shot to death outside an abortion clinic in Pensacola, Fla. The National Abortion Federation in Washington has reports of 38 bombings and 91 cases of arson at abortion clinics since 1977.

The study is aimed at determining the safety and effectiveness of RU-486. When it is completed in the spring of 1995, an application for approval of the abortion pill be submitted to the Food and Drug Administration, which has promised to expedite its review, Bardin said.

The Population Council is testing the drug under an agreement reached in May with the drug's maker, Roussel Uclaf of France. The company acted partly in response to pressure from the Clinton administration, which, unlike its Republican predecessors, wanted the drug made available in the United States.

Abortion foes then announced a boycott against 76 drugs made by two of Roussel Uclaf's U.S. sister companies, Hoechst-Roussel Pharmaceuticals and Copley Pharmaceutical. All three companies are part of Hoechst AG of Germany.

The Population Council is

At a glance

The abortion pill is ordinarily given up to the 49th day of pregnancy. It blocks the action of progesterone, a hormone that prepares the uterus for pregnancy and is essential to maintain a pregnancy. Two days after women take the abortion pill, they take two tablets of a prostaglandin, which causes the uterus to contract. Within four hours, about 70 percent have a miscarriage. Others miscarry a short time later. The combination fails to work in about 4 percent of women, who must then undergo a surgical abortion. Its side effects include heavy bleeding and cramps. According to the Population Council, the advantages of the abortion pill — formerly known as RU-486 and now called mifepristone — include the following:

● It requires no surgery or general anesthesia.
● It can be used with greater privacy.
● Some women feel it gives them more control over their bodies.
The advantages of surgical abortion include these:
● It requires fewer office visits and is over more quickly. (The abortion pill requires three visits for administration and follow-up.)
● The loss of blood is less noticeable than with RU-486.

negotiating with a manufacturer to produce the drug and is seeking a distributor.

RU-486 is administered in combination with another drug called a prostaglandin. RU-486 is given first. It disrupts the pregnancy. A prostaglandin called misoprostol is then given to cause the uterus to contract.

The combination leads to an abortion in 96 percent of the women who take it. It can cause cramps and heavier bleeding than that from surgical abortions.

Economy grew 3.4 percent in third quarter

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy surged ahead at a 3.4 percent annual rate in the third quarter, practically assuring another increase in short-term interest rates soon.

The Commerce Department said today that most of the larger-than-expected expansion in the quarter that ended Sept. 30 was due to accelerated consumer spending. It advanced at a 3.1 percent rate, more than double the gain in the previous quarter and the biggest increase since a 6.4 percent jump in the fourth quarter last year.

Analysts said in advance of the report they expected a 2.8 percent growth rate in gross domestic product. They predicted that even that relatively moderate advance would be enough to persuade the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates next month to check possible inflation.

Fearing the economy is heating up, financial markets had nervously awaited today's GDP report, which measures the total output of goods and services produced in the United States.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan has suggested that the optimum growth rate after inflation is 2.5 percent. The economy boomed ahead at a 6.3 percent rate for the last three months of 1993, slowed to 3.3 percent in the first quarter and picked up speed to close out the second quarter at 4.1 percent.

Also, analysts have said they expect the economy is gaining momentum in the current fourth quarter with many expecting a strong Christmas shopping season.

Still, inflation appears to remain under control. One gauge of inflation tied to the GDP actually declined in the third quarter, to 2.7 percent from 2.9 percent the previous three months.

The economic recovery is more than 3½ years old and has surprised many observers by its continued strength despite five interest rate increases by the Federal Reserve since February.

"Right now the economy is exceeding the speed limit. We're going to get some more tickets in the form of higher interest rates," said economist Sung Won Sohn of Norwest Corp., a Minneapolis bank.

In the second quarter, much of the robust expansion was due to a big buildup in inventories that analysts said could be a drag on the economy if consumer spending slows.

But a series of reports in recent weeks, confirmed by today's data, suggested that interest rates have not slowed spending appreciably — particularly for cars and homes. Today's report is a preliminary estimate and will be revised in the months ahead.

The Commerce Department said the annual rate of growth was $45.1 billion in the third quarter, with spending accounting for $26.1 billion compared with $11.5 billion in the second quarter.

Outlays were higher across the board — with Americans buying more big-ticket goods such as cars and appliances as well as spending more for food, fuel and services.

Inventory buildup and a 5.9 percent jump in government purchases, the biggest increase in that category in 4½ years, also contributed to growth. But net exports and construction decreased in the July-September quarter.

The Federal Reserve this year has boosted the federal funds rate, what banks charge each other for overnight loans, from 3 percent to 4.75 percent. The most recent increase was Aug. 16.

The central bank's policy-making Federal Open Market Committee next meets on Nov. 15. Analysts expect the Fed to wait until then — after the Nov. 6 congressional elections — to raise short-term rates another half percentage point.

But they say the Fed could act sooner, or raise rates more than a half point, as it struggles to convince financial markets that it has not fallen behind in its battle to keep inflation at bay.

The higher rates have reverberated through the economy and have caused tremors on Wall Street. But they have done less than expected to slow the pace of growth.

Surprisingly, the housing market is still brisk even though fixed-rate 30-year mortgages averaged 9.03 percent this week compared with a 25-year low of 6.74 percent a year ago.

Analysts said job growth and job security have helped ease the fears of many Americans about the affordability of a home. Also, they said that even though rates are rising they still are relatively low compared with what they had been.

In advance of today's report, the Clinton administration — claiming credit for job growth — said it is pleased with the way things are going.

"What is obvious to us is that the economy is in a strong recovery and is getting a lot of jobs produced and that's what we want," said White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta.

HHS visits teen parents on welfare

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The federal government is launching a three-year experiment to test whether sending local case workers into the homes of teen-age parents on welfare can improve their chances of becoming self-sufficient.

Donna Shalala, secretary of health and human services, announced Thursday that the government would spend $1 million this year to begin the home-visiting projects in five communities: Chicago; Portland, Ore.; Dallas; Montgomery County, Ohio, including Dayton; and Baltimore.

HHS expects to spend $3 million over the next three years on the demonstration. The Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation will contribute about $1 million to finance an evaluation of the project.

The home visits will target teen parents participating in the federal Job Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) training program, which provides parents on welfare with education or job training.

Kevin Concannon, director of the Oregon Department of Human Resources, said the home visitors will be "friendly mentors."

Linda Rae, a planning specialist with the Texas Department of Human Services, said she hopes the home visits help the women become better parents, decrease the number of repeat pregnancies, and encourage preventive health care.

The experiment will test the feasibility of including weekly home visits in the JOBS program. Visits will be made by staff members who work with the JOBS case managers, and they will try to establish a close relationship with the mothers and their children.

HHS said the demonstrations would attempt to improve the health, economic, social and personal well-being of the families. Home visitors will provide instruction and guidance on parenting skills, family planning, health care and child support.

"There is evidence that the presence and active participation of a caring adult is often the critical factor which influences positive outcomes for teens," said Mary Jo Bane, assistant secretary for children and families.

"This demonstration is an example of our continued efforts to assist teen parents who are at risk for long-term welfare dependency," Bane said.

Deep-rooted labor-management problems plague postal service

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The current leadership of the U.S. Postal Service is trying, but it has a long way to go to dismantle the service's ingrained "dysfunctional organizational culture," according to congressional investigators.

"Overall, we found that labor-management problems are longstanding and have multiple causes that are related to an autocratic management style, adversarial employee and union attitudes and inappropriate and inadequate performance management systems," the General Accounting Office said in a two-volume report released Thursday by Sens. David Pryor, D-Ark., and Carl Levin, D-Mich.

And while Marvin Runyon, named postmaster general in 1992, has taken some promising first steps toward changing the environment, "no clear framework or strategy exists for moving agreed-upon values and principles down to the first-line supervisors and employees working at processing plants and post offices."

"The GAO report is bad news for the Postal Service, its employees and the American public," Levin said. "It shows an organization plagued by a destructive, time-consuming approach to labor-management relations."

Pryor and Levin asked for the analysis after a shooting rampage in 1991 at the Royal Oak, Mich., post office in which a fired postal worker killed four managers before committing suicide.

The GAO observed working conditions and relationships at seven mail processing and distribution plants and 12 post offices around the country. Investigators also conducted more than 475 interviews with postal employees at all levels.

Management's traditional attitude has been that workers respond best — and perhaps only — to discipline, the GAO found. Workers are frustrated because they feel managers don't value their input on how to organize and accomplish their work.

Over the years, the Postal Service, its unions and managers have tried to improve labor-management relations and conditions on the workroom floor, the GAO noted. These efforts have had limited success "because of a lack of participation of some unions and a lack of sustained commitment by local management and union officials," the study found.

A key problem in labor-management relations is the high number of grievances filed and the inability of managers to resolve them. In fiscal 1993, almost 52,000 grievances that were not settled on the workroom floor had been elevated to higher levels and were awaiting resolution, the GAO found.

"The failure of the Postal Service to resolve its labor-management disputes in a fair and timely manner contributes to the tense atmosphere found in plants and post offices around the country," said Pryor, chairman of the Governmental Affairs subcommittee that oversees the Postal Service.

He and Levin plan to hold a joint hearing on the GAO report when Congress reconvenes in November.

FDA announces new drug safety rules

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration wants tighter monitoring of experimental drugs being tested in humans.

The FDA on Thursday proposed making researchers more quickly report safety data on experimental drugs and to presume that anytime a patient gets sick during the experiment, that the new drug is to blame.

The rules are expected to go into effect early next year.

The changes were prompted by last year's experiments with flutridine, or FIAU. The liver drug was touted as the best hope for fighting the incurable hepatitis B virus until it began killing patients in a National Institutes of Health study.

NIH maintains there was no way to predict FIAU's toxicity. But the FDA says scientists missed warning signs, including five additional deaths dating to the drug's earliest trials in 1990. Every time a patient got sick, the scientists blamed the hepatitis or some other illness — and didn't promptly report the incidents so regulators could determine the drug's danger, the FDA said.

Thursday's proposed rules "will help us avoid repeating that tragedy," said FDA spokesman Jim O'Hara.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

Orangewood gains final

MAITLAND — Chaz Smith and Sebastian Janickowski scored three goals each as Orangewood Christian School advanced to the finals of the District 2 Boys' Soccer Tournament with a 7-2 victory over The Master's Academy Thursday night at Lake Destiny Park.

The Rams (19-1) will meet Merritt Island Christian (15-2), which defeated Montverde Academy 4-3 in a shootout, in tonight's 7 p.m. final at Lake Destiny Park. Admission will be $4.

Jacob Hardrick had the other goal, while Janickowski added two assists and Chris Miller one. Patrick Moore had seven saves in goal.

WSBL final registration

WINTER SPRINGS — The Winter Springs Basketball League is set to tip off its 1994-95 season for boys and girls in grades 1 through 9.

Associated again with the Orlando Magic youth program, the WSBL season will go from Dec. 3 through Feb. 12. The season-ending tournament is scheduled for Feb. 13-18.

League registration will be conducted at Indian Trails Middle School between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. tomorrow, Saturday, Oct. 29.

The registration fee is $45 for the first child and $35 for each additional child. Add $10 for an official WSBL basketball.

AROUND THE NATION

Bagwell NL unanimous MVP

NEW YORK — Houston first baseman Jeff Bagwell joined Orlando Cepeda and Mike Schmidt as the National League's only unanimous Most Valuable Player selections.

Bagwell, who hit .368 with 39 homers and led the majors with 118 RBIs, swept all 25 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America for 392 points.

No NBA lockout

NEW YORK — The NBA and its players' union announced a no-strike, no-lockout agreement, ensuring the season will proceed while the sides negotiate a collective bargaining agreement.

Principal suspended

CUYAHOGA HEIGHTS, Ohio — A high school principal was suspended for 10 days without pay because he led a premature on-field football celebration that set the scene for his team's loss.

The Cuyahoga Heights school board voted unanimously to suspend Jim Jackson, principal of Cuyahoga Heights High School.

Jackson and other fans raced on the field last Friday night after Cuyahoga Heights tied Aurora late in the game. Officials penalized Cuyahoga Heights 15 yards on the point-after, the attempt failed and Aurora won 33-27 in overtime.

Trickle to drive for Moore

PHOENIX — Dick Trickle, 52, has been named to drive for Bud Moore Engineering in 1995. He will replace Lake Speed in the No. 18 Quality Care Ford Thunderbirds.

Making a clean sweep

Oviedo takes 6A-4 title without losing a game

From Staff Reports

OVIDEO — While the other rest of the top seeds saw their seasons end in upsets, the No. 1-seeded Oviedo Lions took care of business and swept to the 6A-District 4 girls' volleyball championship.

The Lions, ranked No. 7 in last week's Florida Sports Writers Association's Class 6A state poll, defeated the fifth-seeded Deltona Wolves 15-3, 15-4 in their semifinal match, then came back to knock off the sixth-seeded Lake Howell Silver Hawks 15-6, 15-5 in the finals.

Lake Howell, which knocked off No. 3 seed Spruce Creek in the first round on Wednesday, rallied from a loss in the first game to upset No. 2 seed Lyman 10-15, 15-11, 15-2 in its semifinal match Thursday.

Deltona disposed of No. 4 seed Lake Mary on Wednesday.

"It's been a while between district championships," said Oviedo coach Anita Carlson. "Our last one was four years ago. We finally pulled one off."

"Lake Howell was really coming on. They've been playing well here at the end of the season. But our girls have played pretty steady this week. Lisa Liljenquist and Stephanie Nolasz really played well this evening."

The Lions employed a balanced attack in eliminating Deltona. Nolasz collected seven kills while Liljenquist and Kim Dreyfus each had four kills. Leah Harkiewicz served six aces in the match.

Nolasz had nine kills and four blocks against Lake Howell. Liljenquist had four kills, eight assists, and three blocks. Michelle Cutter served three aces while Harkiewicz had two service aces and a kill.

Lake Howell, which won the Bishop Moore Invitational tournament last weekend, finishes its season 16-12. Deltona bows out at 18-11 while Lyman wraps up the campaign with a 16-5 mark.

Oviedo (23-3) will host Jacksonville-Mandarin in the 6A-Region II championship match next Tuesday night. Mandarin defeated Tallahassee-Lincoln 15-11, 15-10 for the 6A-District 3 championship Thursday night.

The regional championship match tentatively is scheduled to start at 7 p.m. Admission, as set by the Florida High School Activities Association, will be $4.

Leah Harkiewicz (No. 10) served eight aces Thursday as the Oviedo Lions swept through the semifinals and finals of the 6A-District 4 tournament. Oviedo will host Jacksonville-Mandarin in the 6A-Region II match Tuesday.

Patriots escape Tribe, wild finish

By TONY BOGDANSKI

Herald Sports Editor

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — If anyone tells you that they saw a football game where a team attempted 80-yard field goals or scored twice with no time on the clock and still lost, don't laugh them off.

Truth is stranger than fiction, especially when Lake Brantley and Seminole meet on the football field.

The Lake Brantley Patriots won 21-14 Thursday as Heath Ritenour scored on a 1-yard run with less than 30 seconds left, then rushed for a two-point conversion.

But the Seminole weren't done yet.

After the ensuing kickoff went out of bounds and set up the Tribe at their own 35-yard line, Cliff Branch took over at quarterback and rushed the ball 20 yards into Lake Brantley territory. An illegal participation penalty (12 men on the field) against the Patriots moved the Seminole to the 30-yard line.

An illegal procedure penalty later, Branch appeared to throw for a potential game-tying score when he found Derrick Shaw with a 35-yard pass in the end zone. But Branch was flagged for being across the line of scrimmage when he threw the ball.

Even though time had expired, the Patriots had to choose between refusing the penalty (which would give the Tribe the touchdown) or taking the penalty (which would give Seminole one more play since a game can not end on an accepted penalty).

Again Branch scrambled and again he struck. This time, the ball was tipped before Erik Smith caught it at the 5-yard line. As he was being tackled, Smith lateraled the ball forward (which is illegal) to Shaw, who was able to score.

And once again, the Patriots had to choose between a Tribe touchdown or accepting the penalty and giving Seminole another play.

Operating this time from the Lake Brantley 10-yard line, Branch threw an incomplete pass that finally ended the game.

Rams

Trailing 20-13 at halftime, Lake Mary tied the score 20-20 in the third quarter on Hineshaw's 14-yard touchdown pass to Caery.

Mainland rallied behind Tolliver's heroics and had first-and-goal at the Lake Mary 8-yard line with under one minute left to play.

Patriots

"We were flat in the first half, but the guys came back strong in the second half," said Lake Brantley coach Fred Almon.

Seminole scored first, mounting a 91-yard drive that Terrell Jackson capped with a 3-yard quarterback sneak with 5:20 left in the first half.

Cyrus' third kick pinned the Patriots deep in their own end of the field when Brown attempted to field the ball and was tackled.

Greyhounds

far corner of the end zone with a 21-yard touchdown pass. Toby Morris added the extra point.

Following the Lyman touchdown, the defenses controlled play as both teams finished with less than 200 yards in total offense.

The Silver Hawks, who boast Seminole County's best pass defense, pressured Dixon the entire game.

IN BRIEF

Chase inducted into honor society

LEXINGTON, VA. — Torsten Frederick Chase of Lake Mary, a sophomore at Washington and Lee University, was recently inducted into Phi Eta Sigma national honor society which honors students who complete their freshman year with superior academic records.

To be eligible for Phi Eta Sigma, a student must achieve at least a 3.5 grade point average during his or her freshman year. Forty-one Washington and Lee sophomores were inducted into the society at a ceremony held during Parents' Weekend (Oct. 14) at Washington & Lee. Torsten is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney O. Chase III of 816 Brightview Drive in Lake Mary.

Economics and cosmetics

Price, not ingredients, the only difference

Consumers tend to give up their rationality when they step up to the cosmetic counter. An immense amount of marketing hype caters to egos and creates unrealistic expectations.

Author Paula Begoun tested 25 major brands of cosmetics and concluded that the difference between a $100 moisturizer and a $6 one was price, not ingredients. Each costs the manufacturer about $1 to create. Begoun shares tips for buying makeup:

- Expensive does not mean better. All makeup has the same basic ingredients.
- Wear a product for two hours before you buy it. Have a mirror with you so you can leave the store and look at yourself in daylight.
- The more products you use on your skin, the more likely you are to irritate it.
- Don't assume that a salesclerk is trained or knowledgeable.
- Don't buy eye shadow sets. Rarely will you use all the colors, and you get less product for the money.

CONSUMER FOCUS

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

• Beware of scientific jargon, such as cellular balancing complex, micro-targeted, bio-synergetic, isotonic energy, micro-lid-concentrate, and hydra-film. All these terms have been created by the company to sound impressive.

Consumer decision-making and comparison shopping information targeted to women and young teens starting to wear makeup are important and can be used to dispel makeup myths. High-dollar makeup may not be worth the markup and cannot perform miracles. Women need to compare ingredients and invest their grooming dollars wisely.

Soldier, nurse embarrassed in different wars

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from John C. Jones, who told about a World War II soldier named Eddie Koslovski who covered his face with a washcloth when surprised in a GI bath (an open field) by a truckload of nurses who yelled, "Look at the tan on the blond kid!"

I didn't laugh. A generation later, I was a nurse in Vietnam. At one point, we were setting up a field surgical unit. Things were hot, filthy and primitive. Shortly after dark it started to rain, so my fellow nurses and I sneaked out the back of our tent (in the buff) for a Mekong shower. The camp had very few lights as yet so we figured we'd be safe if we kept quiet.

Unfortunately, we weren't quiet enough. The perimeter patrol heard "something," and beamed their spotlights on us.

After a moment of silence, some guy yelled, "Holy [expletive]! Look at the bikini line on that redhead!" Just like Eddie, the redhead covered her face with her washcloth.

I didn't laugh at Eddie because I was that redhead.

At least I got sympathy from my tent mates. Eddie deserves some, too, but he didn't get it — not from you. I sure hope you changed his name when you published John Jones' letter. F.S., GAINESVILLE, FLA.

DEAR F.S.: I was not able to locate Eddie, but John C. Jones assured me it would be OK to use their real names.

DEAR ABBY: You recently printed a letter from a right-handed woman who said that her pet peeve was the fact that when she uses a roll of stamps, they come off upside down. (When she had a lot of envelopes to stamp, she couldn't be bothered turning each stamp right side up.)

Well, I have a suggestion: If she will stack her envelopes so that the "stamp location" is in the lower left corner (instead of the upper right), her stamps will be right side up! I hope this is clear.

RIGHT-HANDED DON WESTON

DEAR RIGHT-HANDED DON: It's clear to me. Thanks for licking the stamp problem.

DAWN M. KINDLE
LACKLAND AIR FORCE BASE, San Antonio — Air Force Reserve Airman Dawn M. Kindle has graduated from Air Force basic training here.

During the six weeks of training the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Kindle is the daughter of Larry and Jan Kindle of 609 Belltower Drive, Deltona.

She is a 1994 graduate of Tom C. Clark High School, San Antonio, Texas.

ADRIAN T. THOMAS
Navy Seaman Recruit Adrian T. Thomas, son of Ronald C. and Sylvia A. Thomas of 164 Bethune Circle, Sanford, recently completed basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the cycle, recruits are taught general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 occupational fields.

Although the Navy is getting smaller, the state-of-the-art ships, aircraft and high tech systems in today's fleet require bright, talented young men and women to operate them.

He is a 1994 graduate of Lake Mary High School, Lake Mary.

Monday sickness concerns mom

My daughter is in fifth grade and she is quickly changing from a little girl to a young lady. She's been missing an awful lot of school this year, complaining of headaches and stomachaches. However, I've noticed that she misses school mostly on Mondays and never complains about feeling bad on Friday afternoons or Saturdays.

I go from worrying that something might be seriously wrong to wondering if she's just making it up. Once when I told her what I'd noticed about when she gets sick, she got so upset she spent the entire evening in her room crying, then she threw up.

Now, I'm afraid to even suggest that she might be making some of it up. How can I tell

FAMILY COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

what's normal or if I'm just overly concerned?

UPSET MOM

DEAR UPSET: Welcome to the wonderful world of pre-adolescence and teens! We cannot totally dismiss the possibility that there may be a physical cause to your daughter's feeling ill until she has had a thorough medical evaluation. This should include a conversation about the onset of menstruation and some of the physical and emotional changes many girls experience prior to the onset of their periods.

If she receives a clean bill of health from the doctor, you must begin dealing with the "Monday morning flu" symptoms. It's best not to suggest that she's faking her symptoms; as you found out that just makes a person defensive and hardens their position. Indeed she very well may feel sick, even if she isn't physically ill.

You must gently but firmly insist that she goes to school on Monday mornings even if she doesn't feel well. Then you need to find out why she's malingering — what or whom she wants to avoid, is she afraid of someone or something; is someone bullying or teasing her? Some people develop "Monday morning flu" because they're afraid of what they might find when they get back home. It is possible that she's concerned about this?

Be supportive of her and let her know that you want to help her work on whatever the problem is, but it will be done while she is maintaining her school responsibilities. A very wise person once said, "Most of the work of the world is done by people who are tired, or don't feel well."

Inez Collins honored on her 97th birthday

OSTEEN — Inez Collins celebrated her 97th birthday on Oct. 8 at a party at the Osteen home of her daughter, Joann Riggs. Sharing the hostess honors was Dorothy Mero, Osteen, also the honoree's daughter.

Most of Collins' family, including five generations, attended the gala occasion. A number of friends came bearing gifts, cards, flowers and congratulations.

The colors of pink and white were carried out in the decor. The white birthday cake was embossed with pink flowers and pink and white balloons heralded the birthday celebration.

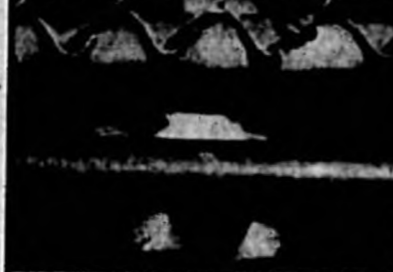

Collins was born in West Virginia and moved to Louisville, Ky. at an early age. She later owned and operated a grocery store there. The family moved to the Osteen area 45 years ago and many of the descendants still live there. Collins also owned and operated Collins Grocery Store on West First Street in Sanford. She is a member of the First Baptist Church of Osteen.

A Moment in Majesty

For a majestic moment the deer stands with stately poise; then, with ghostly grace and a soft snick, he is gone.

How incredible to imagine that God would, in yet a final stage of creation, go on to surpass such magnificence as He had already created. The psalmist David expressed this so eloquently in Psalm 6:5-6... "When I look at the heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars which Thou hast established; what is man that Thou art mindful of him?"

Yet God was mindful, bestowing upon humankind the royal crown of creation in His image and dominion over all of creation. As we worship each Sabbath, may we be mindful of our unique hierarchy...our God-given moment in majesty.

Controversial lobbyist killed registry plan

By JENNIFER BAZZON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Adopted as a day-old infant, Linda Sargent Thompson has spent 30 years searching for her birth mother. She scans faces everywhere she goes, looking for a resemblance that will bring her closer to the family who can make her feel complete.

For many adoptees and the parents who give them up, a reunion is a healing experience. Until they find each other, they say, there's a hole in their hearts.

"Knowing who your brothers and sisters are, who your (birth) parents are, is a basic, basic human desire," said Bill Betzen, administrator of Catholic Counseling Services in Dallas. "It goes right to the core of being human."

Congress came close to helping reunite the adult adoptees, birth parents and siblings who search for one another. The legislation, which would have established a centralized, national network to process requests for reunions, died in the last days of the session.

Sponsored by Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and backed by the Clinton administration and numerous adoption organizations, the registry ran into sharp opposition from William Pierce, president of the Washington-based National Council for Adoption, which represents 130 private adoption agencies.

Pierce argued that Levin's registry was an intrusion by the federal government into a state issue and raised questions about privacy rights.

Levin, however, said Pierce's campaign against the bill misstated what it would do and the opposition generated by the lobbyist wound up killing it during a House-Senate conference.

"Pierce has flat-out lied about my bill. The word 'distorted' is too weak a word for what he's done," Levin said. "It's inhumane to do what he's done."

Pierce replied: "I think it's certainly not accurate and I find it very disappointing."

"That kind of rhetoric doesn't have any place in civil discussions between people who have different points of view," Pierce said.

Levin cites a 1991 document from Pierce's group that claimed the registry would "bankroll search groups" and private investigators who snoop and confront people who want to be left alone.

Levin said his plan was "totally mutual and totally voluntary."

Pierce argued that a national registry is not an appropriate federal activity and that thousands of Americans "want their privacy rights protected and are particularly concerned about any federal data bank which could possibly lead to inappropriate disclosure of their private, sensitive information."

And he said that Levin's plan was too vague and was unnecessary because 47 states already have a system for exchanging information.

Rep. Thomas J. Bliley Jr., R-Va., also questioned the measure and was on the House-Senate conference committee that stripped it from a larger bill, minority health legislation that later died in the Senate.

Bliley, who adopted two children, is an honorary member of Pierce's advisory board, but his spokesman, Charles Boesel, said that had nothing to do with the congressman's position. He said Bliley opposed the registry because it was being rammed through at the last minute.

Pierce's tactics have been questioned before. Last fall, pushed by complaints, the State Department wrote to 50 nations explaining that the National Council for Adoption was not an official U.S. agency and that governments can work with whomever they choose in international adoptions.

Some adoptees, birth parents and their advocates are unhappy that the registry was not approved. And they are angry with Pierce.

David Hodgson, a psychologist whose Gaitersburg, Md., practice includes counseling birth parents and adoptees, said Pierce's claims about the Levin bill are "totally inaccurate, fallacious." Hodgson is himself a birth parent who searched for and found his daughter.

"All the research indicates that open records are the direction we need to go for the sake of children and adults in adoption," added Betzen. "Secrets do not do anyone any good."

Susan Cox, who was adopted from Korea at age 5 and then searched for her birth mother at 40, said efforts to prevent reunions among consenting adults are "shortsighted and ill-advised."

Cox is the director of development for Holt International Children's Services in Eugene, Ore., an international adoption agency that is a member of Pierce's organization.

For Linda Sargent Thompson, who lives in North Augusta, S.C., and turns 50 in December, the search continues for her birth mother and any relatives.

She needs them, she said, "for medical reasons, to get a sense of being, a sense of place, a family." Until then, "there's a part of you that's not complete."

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advertise your items to be sold. Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale. Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide refreshments. Do not make every person eat. "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly areas. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE with purchase of $3". Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be especially kind when advertising your sale in the newspaper, list, individual items. Don't simply say, "Various things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.
11. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, mark them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!

What's going on in diabetes research?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an insulin-dependent diabetic with a family history of the disease. I have four children and figure that at least one of the four will have it some time in the future. Is there any new research going on today that might make this condition a thing of the past?

DEAR READER: Researchers in many medical centers are actively working to discover a cure for diabetes, an inherited inability of the body to metabolize sugar efficiently because not enough effective insulin is produced in the pancreas. As yet, there has been no breakthrough, although pancreatic transplants do show promise.

To date, most diabetics must rely on traditional therapy: a low-sugar diet, weight loss (if the patient is obese), pills to stimulate the pancreas to produce more insulin, or insulin injections, depending on whether the disease requires insulin or can be controlled without it.

Many authorities consider diabetes to be an auto-immune disease, which causes people to become allergic to their own normal pancreatic cells. This is probably accentuated by a genetic tendency.

Therefore, any real advance in curing diabetes may well depend on new knowledge related to the diagnosis and prevention of auto-immunity. New evidence implicating a virus infection in children who develop diabetes is being aggressively studied.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Surgical repair of a left rotator cuff tear led to infection at the point of surgery. Intravenous medication, daily dressing changes and all precautions were taken. Three and a half months have gone by and the wound will not heal. There is a fluid discharge and my doctor cannot say how long the condition will last. What is your experience with such problems and what is the cause?

DEAR READER: Most simple post-operative infections can be cured by the methods you describe. In the presence of a chronically draining wound, however, one must consider the possibility of a foreign substance.

For example, perhaps the surgeon used wire sutures to repair your shoulder and the stitches are causing a continuing source of inflammation.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

In my view, three and a half months is too long to put up with a persisting wound. Seek a second opinion from another orthopedic surgeon.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Look at only the North-South club holding in today's diagram. What is the percentage play to that suit for four tricks? Now look at all 52 cards. Is there any logical way for South to win all 13 tricks?

This deal occurred during the General Two Worlds Trophy, held last August at the Villaggio del Bridge in Italy. At two tables, the contract was six no-trump. Both declarers made the "right" play, leading a low club to the nine. Here, though, that resulted in the loss of two tricks.

In the given auction, two no-trump was a balanced game-force that might have included a major; three clubs was Stayman; four no-trump was quantitative, not Blackwood; and six clubs showed a five-card suit. Now South should have bid six no-trump, because North rated to have a weak club suit.

However, if he had, there would have been no story. West led the diamond 10, into declarer's first-bid suit. South, American Peter Weichsel, wondered why. Perhaps West was hoping to give his partner a diamond ruff. Weichsel thought not. Instead, he was convinced that West held the club king. So, after winning the first trick with dummy's king, Weichsel led a club to his ace.

As you can see, Weichsel was right. He was about to make his slam. However, West, Englishman Tony Forrester, could see it too. He made an excellent play, dropping his king under South's ace. Perhaps South would try for a trump endplay. But declarer had too few trumps. Weichsel continued with the club nine. And when West played low, dummy did likewise. Weichsel had won an overtrick!

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Oct. 29, 1994

A more exciting you might emerge in the year ahead as your personality transforms. You're likely to be more active, more communicative and sharper in money matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not impose yourself upon any group or clique today that do not welcome you with open arms. Your absence from their presence is their loss, not yours. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Good things might happen to you today, but if you are unwilling to share your good fortune with others, it could have a hollow ring.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today there is a chance you might turn down some helpful information just because you dislike the purveyor. Don't cut off your nose to spite your face.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't take things at face value today, especially if money is an issue. There could be hidden benefits as well as pitfalls; each must be carefully discerned.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Treat serious matters respectfully today, but don't endow them with powers they do not possess. If you do, you might spoil what could otherwise be a fun, productive day.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Most of the day you'll be cognizant of positive developments and apt to perform well. As your attention span wanes, however, you're likely to do things the hard way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be aware of the needs of others today. If you consider only your own position, you'll arouse their animosity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you might attempt to do something at which you've recently failed. Your persistence is admirable, but learn from your mistakes. Discard methods and procedures that don't work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Watch out when discussing religion and politics with colleagues today. These could be extremely volatile topics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something promising in which you are currently involved might require more resources than you have at your disposal. Start looking for an ally with funds.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your chart indicates that your views and those of your mate might be diametrically opposed today. For the sake of harmony, try to compromise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to appreciate the fun things this day has to offer, first take care of your basic responsibilities. If left unattended, a guilt trip is likely.
