It's a boy, again

GREENWOOD, S.C. — The Childbirth Center at Self Memorial Hospital was awash in blue ribbons after the non-stop births of 21 boys.

"There were blue ribbons up and down the halls over there last week," said hospital spokesman Dan Branyon, who put the odds against such a streak at more than 2 million to one.

The first little bundle of boy was born at 12:52 a.m. on March 14. The last came in at 8:04 a.m. on March 19, Branyon said. A girl broke the streak with her arrival at 2:05 p.m. that day, but it was a brief break. Two more boys were born by midnight.

"It's the first time I've known this to happen like this. ... It's quite unusual," said Millie Sexton, a nurse at the hospital for 19 years. "Usually we go three or four and then the string is broken."

A nursery secretary spotted the trend when she noticed the accumulating males and started keeping count.

Hero becomes arson suspect

PORT RICHEY — A youth who saved a retired couple from their burning home seemed to be a hero — until investigators learned he started the fire.

Billy Mashaw, 17, woke Ralph and Olive Dudley early Sunday morning after seeing flames coming from their garage. The teen-ager ended up going to Riverside Hospital for treatment of smoke inhalation.

According to investigators, Mashaw, smoking a cigarette, entered the Dudleys' unlocked garage about 3 a.m. Sunday.

The teen-ager spotted a case of liquor. He flicked the still-burning cigarette into some craft supplies, then took the liquor home.

Minutes later, he returned and found the garage burning. Mashaw told Lawless he then went back home, where he got a can of gasoline and returned to the couple's house.

Deputies lasso man with knife

LOS ANGELES — A sheriff's deputy used a garden hose to lasso an elderly man threatening his family with a knife, an official said.

Oscar Campbell, 79, was taken to a psychiatric hospital for evaluation, Deputy Victoria Berenbau said.

Campbell, who uses a walker, was in his driveway waving a knife at members of his family when deputies arrived Saturday, Berenbau said. He warned them to leave and taunted them to shoot him, she said.

One deputy distracted the man while the other picked up the hose and threw it around him from behind, Berenbau said. The officers then disarmed him.

Sanford joins phone fight

City votes to hire co-op lawyer for toll-free service

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission approved spending up to $7,000 in attorney fees last night. The money is the final third of the legal expense expected in a joint battle to obtain toll-free phone calls between north Seminole County and Orlando.

Seminole County had approved its $7,000 early last week, and the City of Lake Mary followed suit last Thursday. The cost of the legal fees is expected to be approximately $20,000, but there might be some additional charges depending on appeals or other problems.

The focus of the battle is to eliminate long distance phone charges for calls made between north Seminole County and its cities, and the Orlando area. While the move has been considered a projected saving for area businesses, many Sanford and Lake Mary Commissioners believe it will also save on phone charges for private residences.

Southern Bell Telephone has reportedly made an offer to reduce the charges of phone calls between the two areas, but the three governmental bodies are seeking to get the Public Service Commission to force Southern Bell to eliminate the toll charges entirely.

Legal arrangements are being made by Lake Mary City Manager John Litton. "The next step," he said, "will be to officially sign an agreement with the attorney." Richard Benton, of Young, van Assenderp, Varnadoe & Benton, will represent the two cities and Seminole County.

In presenting the proposal to the Sanford City Commission last night, Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons explained, "Mr. Benton's firm is considered experts in the field of dealing with the Public Service Commission and telephone matters."

The commissioners approved the move by a unanimous vote, with hardly any discussion. "I think it is our responsibility to pursue this on behalf of all of our citizens," Commissioner Whitney Eckstein said.

For just the City Government operations alone, Simmons projected the elimination of the toll charges would save Sanford between $4,000 and $5,000 per year.

In Lake Mary this morning, Litton explained, "Actually, work has already started. The firm has already issued interrogatories and is working on obtaining more." He added, "The next work will be the taking of testimony by letter, which is scheduled for April 17."

SANFORD — The City's anti-loitering ordinance was announced as acceptable last night. The move came just hours before a new one was to be considered.

During a workshop meeting of the City Commission yesterday, a copy of an anti-loitering ordinance currently on the books in Orange County was to have been studied. Commissioners hoped the wording might be something that could be adopted to replace the Sanford ordinance.

Sanford's anti-loitering ordinance was adopted in 1989. Police Chief Steve Harriett explained, "Shortly after it was adopted, it was appealed, and it has been in the courts ever since that time."

Although the Fifth District Court of Appeals had declared the old ordinance as constitutional on Feb. 28, Harriett said he was not notified of the ruling until yesterday.

"This means the ordinance Sanford already has is valid," Harriett said.

City Attorney Bill Colbert, however, suggested the wording of the Orange County Ordinance should still be considered. "This seems as though it is worth look into," he said, "to see if there is anything in it we might be able to bring forward into our own ordinance."

Harriett said he had discussed the ordinance with a number of Orange County law enforcement officers. "They basically use it in cases that involve loitering to commit prostitution," he said. "They don't necessarily use it to disburse crowds or check into drug sales."

The chief admitted however that the Orange County

Officials pleased that crime did not spiral during 1991

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Area law enforcement officials are pleased crime didn't spiral upwards in 1991, but they're not ready to say illegal activities are under control.

"There are no significant differences and there's some comfort in that," said Sanford Police Chief Steven Harriett. "But the fact that there's any criminal activity is not good. Let's not take any comfort in that our crime rate is stable."

Sheriff Don Estinger said crime will continue to increase as long as conditions are ripe for it to do so.

"Whenever we have an environment that breeds crime, recession and high unemployment and terrorism, you're going to see continued increases," said Estinger. "Have we really established a deterrent to crime when we have an overburdened court system and early releases?"

The Sanford Herald asked area law enforcement officials last month to compare reported crime incidents for 1990 and 1991. Statistics for the unincorporated areas of the county, along with Sanford, Lake Mary and Longwood were reviewed.

Crime statistics reviewed were for murder and manslaughter, sexual assault, robbery, assault and battery, burglary, theft, auto theft, arson, drug-related crimes, prostitution and criminal mischief. Incidents reviewed were based on whether a report was made as a result of a citizen complaint or witnessed by a law enforcement officer.

Sanford showed slight decreases in reports of three of the most common crimes — robbery, assault and battery and burglary. Robberies decreased from 175 in 1990 to 162 in 1991, a 7 1/2 percent decrease. Assault and battery and burglaries each decreased by about 6 percent, Harriett called the drops "typical" fluctuations.

Although the number of crimes classified as rape increased by nearly 68 percent, from 28 to 47, Harriett said the main reason was because more sexually-related crimes are being reported.

"There's a closer working relationship between the police department and HRS (Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services)," said Harriett. "They're turning a lot more reported incidents over to us. We've seen a marked increase in the number of custodial and familial rapes."

A custodial rape is often an assault on a child by someone assigned to watch over them, such as a relative or baby sitter. A familial rape is one that occurs on a person known to them, such as a "date rape."

Reports of drug-related crimes increased 18 percent in Sanford, Harriett said the increase was not substantial because many people arrested in 1990 were re-arrested again in 1991 for similar crimes.

Prostitution represented the largest increase in reported Sanford crimes. There were 33 prostitution

Lake Mary considers next park

LAKE MARY — The City of Lake Mary is continuing its neighbors for neighborhoods park projects. The next refurbishing will be at what is known as Estella Park.

The small park area is in a small pond area, on the southern side of Estella Road, just east of Country Club Road, near the older Evansdale subdivision.

Lake Mary's Director of Parks and Recreation, John Holland, said, "We haven't determined exactly what will be done in the park at this time, but we hope to have all of the plans completed so they can be brought up for City Commission approval at the next meeting on April 2nd."

In discussing the park area last week, Mayor Randy Morris described it as "overgrown with brush, and probably requiring a

Senator meets with boat builders

SARASOTA — U.S. Sen. Bob Graham met Monday with unemployed boat builders at Wellcraft, a company whose work force has been cut by half in five years, with some blame going to a federal tax on yachts.

"The boat industry has survived recessions before. But piling a new tax on top of recession puts survival in doubt," said Graham, renewing his call for repeal of a 10 percent federal tax on luxury boats.

The tax, applied on the initial sale of boats costing upwards of $100,000, took effect at the start of 1991.

Wellcraft, with a peak work force of 1,500 in 1987, is down to 750 now.

Graham said the tax has cost Floridians jobs and driven sales and potential manufacturing to other countries.

Prisoner escapes

BUSHNELL — A man facing a first-degree murder charge in a 1991 Orange County case escaped in Sumter County when guards transporting him from Texas stopped at a fast-food restaurant, authorities said.

Richard Eugene Bishop, 30, remained a fugitive late Monday despite a search using a helicopter and tracking dogs, a Sumter sheriff's spokesman said.

Bishop was indicted in December in the Feb. 13, 1981, slaying of Albert G. Cushing, 36, a custodian at Walt Disney World. Cushing's landlord found him stabbed in his duplex. A knife had been broken off in Cushing's chest.

Bishop was being returned to Orange County by a private company, Transcor America Inc., when he escaped from a van while the guards were inside the restaurant Sunday, Sumter deputies said.

Senate delays banking law rewrites

TALLAHASSEE — A Senate panel voted to delay rewrites of the state's banking and insurance laws but restore an 18 percent limit on credit card interest rates.

Bills filed Monday by the Commerce Committee would keep existing banking and insurance laws, with some modifications including the interest cap, on the books for another year.

The laws are scheduled to expire in November under "sunset" provisions designed to force lawmakers to periodically review statutes, but the Legislature has been distracted by reappointment and budget problems.

The Senate panel balked at massive rewrites agreed on by legislative staffers, lobbyists for banking and insurance interests and the state agencies that regulate them.

The House Commerce Committee, meanwhile, voted 21-0 for the banking code rewrite and 21-2 for a massive workers' compensation reform act. Both measures go to the House Appropriations Committee for further review.

Senate Commerce Chairman W.D. Childers, D-Pensacola, said no workers' compensation bill has been introduced in the Senate, and he didn't anticipate taking up the issue in the first special session.

Bill prevents bingo deregulation

TALLAHASSEE — A Senate panel approved a bill that would prevent bingo deregulation but retain an existing law some consider too lax.

The Senate Commerce Committee unanimously approved the measure Monday. It makes changes in a new bingo law passed last year in response to allegations of exorbitant profits by commercial bingo operators.

The law required operators to undergo background checks, keep extensive records and pay the state a $350 licensing fee.

Charitable groups said the new law was too restrictive, and the Legislature repealed it during a December special session. The Senate passed a bingo bill during the regular 60-day session but the House took no action.

Shuttle Atlantis blasts off

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — Space shuttle Atlantis blasted off with seven astronauts today on a mission to study the environment of our planet.

Atlantis roared off its seaside pad at 8:14 a.m. EST. The spacehip rose on a 700-foot pillar of flame and headed out over the Atlantic Ocean and up along the East Coast.

Low clouds over the emergency landing site at Kennedy Space Center caused a 14-minute delay in the launch. Other weather problems, including a worrisome storm off the coast, had dissipated earlier.

Atlantis' twin solid rocket boosters dropped into the ocean two minutes into the flight as planned, and the shuttle continued toward a 184-mile-high orbit on the thrust of three main engines.

It was NASA's second attempt to send up

Atlantis. The first, on Monday, was halted 5 1/2 hours before liftoff by fuel leaks that officials later said were temporary and minor.

The eight-day flight — shuttle mission No. 46 — is the first devoted to atmospheric research. The shuttle carries 13 scientific instruments. Among other things, scientists hope to learn more about damage to the ozone layer.

During the flight, about 200 research stations around the world will make observations as well. The combined effort is expected to yield the most comprehensive study of the atmosphere ever.

Researchers from seven countries have been working on the mission since the early 1980s. The flight originally was scheduled for 1986 but was put on hold after Challenger exploded that year.

"It's speaking much more to the people now than it was at that moment," said Dirk Frimout, a Belgian physicist and crew member. "It's surely on time that we do it now."

A report last month indicated an ozone hole probably would form in the skies over the Northern Hemisphere later this year.

Besides Frimout, the only non-American aboard Atlantis, the crew members are commander Charles Bolden, pilot Brian Duffy, David Leestma, Kathryn Sullivan, Michael Foale and Byron Lichtenberg.

The mission is part of a long-term NASA program to study the environment from space. Scientists want to measure ozone and other components of the atmosphere over an 11-year solar cycle, the period from one peak of solar activity to the next.

One of the instruments aboard Atlantis, an electron beam gun, will fire streams of electrons into the atmosphere to create artificial auroras.

SANFORD — The Corps Cadet Brigade of the Sanford Salvation Army was honored Wednesday. For the fourth consecutive year, the Sanford brigade came out top in the entire State of Florida.

The citation, known as the Divisional Commanders Award, was originally presented on Feb. 29th, at the Division's Youth Council meeting in Daytona Beach by Lt. Col. John Busby, Divisional Commander. Busby is in charge of all Salvation Army work in the State of Florida.

The local acknowledgement was made during the Advisory Board meeting at the Salvation Army facilities last week.

Capt. Gary Bergen commented, "The Cadet Brigade is basically a future leaders training course. Brigade members work on points received for such areas as bible study, Salvation Army history, attendance, testing, leadership training, active participation in community service, and other factors."

Capt. Bergen said, "The brigade is made up mostly of Seminole County residents, but we have a few from Volusia County who belong to the Sanford Salvation Army."

"I'm extremely proud of the group," Bergen said, "especially when you consider they came out first among 42 Salvation Army units throughout Florida."

Redistricting map OK, House says

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A House committee endorsed its version of a map to draw 23 congressional districts Monday, while Senate Democrats released a competing proposal for consideration later this week.

The Senate version features two black districts: one 53 percent seat stretching from outside Tallahassee through Jacksonville to the Orlando suburbs and a 60 percent seat in Broward and Dade counties.

The major differences between the two are the number and composition of districts for blacks and Hispanics, the same Voting Rights Act issue that has gummed up the debate for more than two months.

Lawmakers are meeting in a two-week special session partly to reach a redistricting compromise.

The House Reapportionment Committee voted 25-12 along party lines for a Democratic plan (HB 1E) that would create one black-majority seat and two others where blacks would control the outcome. Two are in South Florida and the third is centered in Duval County.

The House proposal, which is scheduled for House floor debate Wednesday, also carves out two Hispanic seats with more than 63 percent Latin populations.

The upper chamber plan also has two Hispanic seats, both over 60 percent Latin. One, however, is 53 percent Democratic.

Chiles says report on children puts pressure on lawmakers

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's 43rd ranking on major child health and well-being indicators should convince lawmakers to look again at spending more on social programs, Gov. Lawton Chiles said.

"If the Legislature fails to act then we'll continue to rank among the worst of the states in the well-being of our kids," Chiles said Monday at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital

Child Care Center, where he played with toddlers and talked to reporters about the report.

Florida's child death rate was 41st among the states, with nearly 38 of every 100,000 children dying between ages 1-14, said the 1992 Kids Count data book issued by the Center for the Study of Social Policy.

Nearly eight of every 100 newborns weighed less than 5.5 pounds, nearly 10 of every 1,000 babies died before age 1, and 9.8 percent of Florida babies were born to single teen-age mothers, compared with 8.6 percent nationally, the report said.

"If the Legislature fails to act then we'll continue to rank among the worst of the states in the well-being of our kids."

-Gov. Lawton Chiles

It said nearly 38 of every 100,000 children ages 1-14 died and more than 74 deaths per 100,000 were counted among teen-agers ages 15-19.

ing from high school, with 56.5 percent of ninth graders failing to graduate with their class.

"What we are pointing to here is political child abuse. We have no excuse for acting like a poor state," said Jack Levine, director of the Florida Center for Children and Youth, who held a news conference on the report with Dr. Wil Blechman, Florida Kids Count chairman.

Chiles used the report as an argument for his proposals to raise $1.1 billion through business tax changes and the end of some sales tax exemptions to increase spending on schools, social programs, corrections and the environment.

He vetoed a $30 billion no-new-taxes budget the Legislature passed in its regular session. He said the report showed lawmakers should shore up spending in those areas in a budget session expected to start in late May.

"Not paying for prevention doesn't mean saving money, it simply means paying a much higher price later," Chiles said.

Tutorial program helps students get assistance

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole High School wants to help those students who are having trouble in some of their classes get back on track.

"We want to remove whatever obstacles are in the way of them getting the assistance they need," said Roger Campbell, the district's full service schools facilitator, who is organizing the program. "There are no more excuses."

The academic assistance program is free to all those ninth and tenth graders who have not passed at least one nine-week grading period in a key core course area, such as English, algebra or earth science.

Remedial assistance will be offered on an individualized basis to the students by teachers in those subject areas.

The 12 one-hour study sessions will be offered after school, but the district will be providing free transportation to those who need a ride home because they have missed the regularly scheduled bus so they could attend the tutorial sessions.

Space is limited in the program so that individualized attention may be paid to each student so Campbell said that spaces will be assigned on a first come first serve basis for the sessions which will begin on March 31.

County teachers will try to add appeal to science, math

By Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Elementary and middle school math and science teachers are starting a program that will soon make them the envy of the state and nation, Florida Education Commissioner Betty Castor says.

According to Clem Boyer, coordinator of math and science for the Seminole County school district, the district began discussions with the University of Central Florida about the program, but they have not yet set up the details.

The teachers will learn new techniques to help them make their subjects more appealing to their students.

The curriculum will be taught beginning this fall to Central Florida teachers at a special academy at the University of Central Florida. The innovative program is to be funded by a grant of $1 million from Martin Marietta Corp. and $750,000 from the state.

"We are looking at this right now, but it has been a year since we've done anything," Boyer said.

Teachers from Orange, Osceola and Seminole counties will return to their schools to share what they've learned with other teachers. Program developers say it will help both instructors and students.

"Teachers need to be up to date in new math and science methods," said Harby DeCou, a first-grade teacher at Aloma Elementary School in Winter Park. "Children are not learning from math and science textbooks. They need enrichment materials."

The academy will attempt to overcome some of the present shortcomings among students and get more children interested in math and science at an early age.

Businesses complain that schools aren't training enough kids in technology and science to keep up with the nation's production goals.

Martin, based in Bethesda, Md., operates defense plants in Orlando and Ocala. It plans to fund similar programs in Tennessee and Maryland, said spokeswoman Carol Smith on Thursday.

"I do think some of these children wonder why they are studying science," said Arlene Bridges, elementary science specialist for Orange County Schools.

"They don't realize that by the time they graduate, they will have to be technically literate. And that means having a high degree of math and science just to survive in this world."

The teachers also will visit Martin, Sea World, area science museums and other places to see math, science and technology put to practical use, said Ms. Smith.

The academy will be more thorough than the usual refresher course. Each session will last 16 months, with teachers getting most instruction after school and the most intense sessions during vacations. They also will get a follow-up program to help them stay current.

The project will make the three counties "the envy of the state and, in many cases, the envy of other parts of the country," Ms. Castor said.

She told The Orlando Sentinel her visits to workplaces such as the Martin plants have shown "there is a tremendous gap between the level of jobs being performed ... and the capacity to teach those tasks in the public schools."

Pain, no gain

Providing comfort has long been one of the healing arts. But in a culture that still owes much to its Puritan roots, pain relief has sometimes been suspect. In literature and religion, Americans learn that pain ennobles, pain purifies, pain builds character. Grin and bear it, the culture says.

What passes as aphorism, however, is no longer good enough for medicine. In guidelines issued recently, the new U.S. Agency for Health Care Policy and Research called on doctors and nurses to treat pain more aggressively in patients recovering from surgery or trauma.

Often, doctors order painkillers for patients "as needed." That means patients do not receive medication until they complain.

But as the new guidelines point out pain is more difficult to control once it has started. And uncontrolled pain can slow recovery and lead to longer hospitalization.

A more sensible approach, which has been widely and successfully demonstrated, is for doctors and nurses to plan for managing the inevitable pain from surgery. By following such plans and carefully monitoring patients to see that medicines are working, the guidelines say, doctors can make patients more comfortable and speed their recovery.

No pain no gain, dedicated athletes say. But what's true on the jogging track is not true in the hospital. Unnecessary pain is the enemy of healing. The new national guidelines on the treatment of discomfort show the way for doctors and patients to divorce medicine from the cultural stoicism to which it has been so uncomfortably wedded.

Hold the blood

Who has not been moved by the stirring strains of "La Marseillaise," France's national anthem and, to paraphrase Thomas Jefferson, the world's second favorite patriotic hymn?

Well, at the moment some unwelcome French people have been moved to propose new lyrics to replace a text that they claim is the most sanguinary anywhere. French traditionalists have responded by taking, if not arms, a great deal of umbrage.

Those unfamiliar with the French tongue might be surprised to see a translation of this fierce battle hymn, penned by a French army captain during a siege of Strasbourg by Prussian troops some 200 years ago (the title derives from a band of soldiers from Marseille who sang it during a march into Paris). Among other things, the text calls on citizens to take arms and "drench our field" with the "tainted blood" of the enemy - the enemy at that time being the Germans, now among France's best friends.

What spurred the reformers was the recent spectacle of a young French girl sweetly singing the "Marseillaise" to the whole world during the opening ceremony of the winter Olympics. Somehow, images of a "bloodstained banner" and "fierce fighting men...who come...to slaughter our sons, wives and kin" seemed out of place.

So a committee that includes the wife of President Francois Mitterrand has suggested text that calls on citizens not to spill blood but to "sing on until our songs silence all cannons."

One staunch defender of "La Marseillaise" in its original form insists that the Germans, whose own anthem once described German areas now part of several other countries, don't seem upset about their neighbor's paean.

True or not, our own judgment is that no foreigner in his or her right mind would take sides in this family feud. Vive la France!

Tough code enforcement good

I would like to comment on the disagreement over the code violations and new ticketing process. I qualify as an "old timer" as I'm a third generation Sanfordite. I'm all for it and it is about time! Clean up this town before any more snide comments and jokes come our way. It's depressing to see the disregard of property.

I ride my bike all over town and can't believe how trashy many people keep their homes and property. Twenty-five years ago it sure didn't look like this! The caliber of people has changed. Once there was pride and hard work to keep things neat and clean. This code doesn't aim at making Sanford a Winter Park or Heathrow - we are better than that! We have small town roots with lots of history. We have character and loads of beauty. It is no hardship to pick up trash, sweep your front porch of old beat up furniture, rid yards of junker cars and tall weeds, and even slap paint on houses. It only takes elbow grease and hard work to repair and clean and maintain. Even in the Great Depression the poor had pride in their belongings as well as themselves.

If the new transplants, renters, and commissionaires don't want to follow codes I'm sure most of us support, they should please move on.

We true old timers want the trash out and a return to the good ole days of a lovely town our children can be proud to live in.

I don't see why this code is an issue for argument. We need standards.

Keep tabs on Congress

Foreign aid destroys American jobs, bleeds our economy, and subsidizes our foreign competitors. And that is precisely what it was planned to do. That is what foreign aid is all about.

The insiders of the Eastern Establishment who direct the destiny of our nation have, for decades, been diligently and covertly leading us down the road to a "new world order" - world government. The insiders envisioned from the onset that to merge affluent America with the rest of the world, their standard of living would have to be raised and ours drastically lowered. For this reason foreign aid was conceived and implemented. The result: Japan, Germany, South Korea, etc. are thriving power-houses. In America, our banks are failing; our industries are gone; our unemployment funds are exhausted; our debt is $4 trillion; our deficit is $3.5 hundred billion. We can't even fund our schools.

The good news is, we still have the vote. The key to turning America around lies in the House of Representatives, where all money bills must originate. On June 20, 1991, the House passed yet another foreign aid bill, $25.4 billion. Roll Call Vote 185). My representative voted for this gigantic giveaway. How did you vote? Ask him - get it in writing. Nov. 3 should be the day for America's great about-face.

Demagogues need their own ticket

The smart money is spreading the word and it's got the activists all a-twitter - never has the time been so ripe for a third-party candidate for president. Why, even the Demagogues may field their own slate. They've already got two clear frontrunners: Jerry Brown and Newt Gingrich.

Brown and Gingrich - in their own special ways, they have demonstrated irrefutable qualification and unabashed inclination to demagogue with their every twirl in the television spotlight.

Gingrich and Brown - they are very bright, very creative, very ambitious, and very similar in method and madness in their perpetual, panicky pursuit of political gain, real or perceived. No principle seems too dear, no accusation too irresponsible, when Brown and Gingrich are in attack mode, which is to say, when they are awake.

Consider Jerry Brown. This is one of the most frustrating people in politics, because he has indeed shown flashes of caring, commitment, innovation and leadership that could have made him just what we desperately need today. But he can't bring himself to sit still for that kind of politicking. He prefers instead the politics of self-promotion, sans principle.

To understand Brown's demagoguery, follow the bouncing ball of his career: (1) as California governor, he benefited grandly from special-interest campaign money; (2) in his first presidential campaign, in 1976, Brown was funded by the labor union/special interest effort to stop Jimmy Carter; (3) in his latest post, California Democratic Party chairman, Brown was a champion raiser of special-interest money; but (4) nowadays, Brown accuses his Democratic opponents of being tools of a "corrupt" system because they get special-interest money.

Now consider the video-age demagoguery of Newt Gingrich.

We saw Gingrich pitch his partisan tantrum about the House bank scandal on ABC News' "This Week With David Brinkley": "I just want to be blunt.... This is a Democratic machine political scandal.... There is an institutional problem of corruption of power involving the Democratic leadership." But he, too, wrote bad checks - months ago, he said it was two or three, then he conceded it was 20, now it's grown to 30. (Three Bush Cabinet members also wrote bad checks.)

Meanwhile, the conservative Gingrich liberally babbed accusations of "corruption," claiming House Speaker Thomas Foley's office "sat on" a cocaine-selling scandal in the House post office "for 10 months and told no one" - but Foley, who has his faults, quickly put the lie to that. Foley said his office had contacted the U.S. Attorney's office after being told someone sold cocaine in the post office and suggested postal inspectors probe the matter, which was publicly disclosed last fall.

So demagoguery may be our one growth industry in this campaign year. We await only the formation of the party: Demagogues United for National Government. Under that banner, Brown and Gingrich can unite and even borrow the idea that Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford almost made a Republican reality at the 1980 convention - a co-presidency ticket.

After all, what was considered good enough for Reagan/Ford to spread their GOP gospel will surely be good enough for Brown/Gingrich to spread the politics of DUNG.

To understand Brown's demagoguery, follow the bouncing ball of his career.

Campaign cash is rolling in WASHINGTON - As if there were any need to make the point, Campaign '92 is proving once again that money is the fuel driving the engine of politics.

In quick order Sen. Robert Kerrey of Nebraska and Tom Harkin of Iowa dropped out of the race for the Democratic nomination because their financial support had all but dried up following their slow start in the early primaries.

Now the Federal Election Commission has come out with its first fund-raising scorecard of the election year. To no one's surprise congressional candidates are raking in the money at a record pace.

The House

During 1991, candidates for House seats raised some $82 million in cash, which is about 25 percent more than was raised in 1989, the last pre-election year. Spending in the pre-election year was also way up as many candidates began campaigning earlier. House campaign spending in 1991 was almost $52 million, and this does not include some $90 million in taxpayer money spent by House incumbents on free official mailings.

Among House members, 1991's biggest fund-raiser was Missouri's Richard Gephardt - the Democratic majority leader and potential presidential contender - who raised $1.9 million. He far outdistanced Rep. Jim Moody, D-Wis., who raised $1.09 million. He, in turn, was far ahead of Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., who raised $598,814.

Rounding out the top 10 were: Reps. Martin Frost, D-Texas ($598,348); Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. ($595,196); Sander Levin, D-Mich. ($588,829); Marty Russo, D-Ill. ($575,076); Henry Waxman, D-Calif. ($554,894); Charles Taylor, R-N.C. ($547,667); and John Murtha, D-Pa. ($537,978).

As yet another example of the advantages of incumbency, at year's end current House members had $91.5 million in "cash on hand" while their opponents have managed only $5.8 million. Top among House incumbents was New York Democrat Stephen Solarz; at year's end he had $2 million in the bank, followed closely by California Republican David Drier who had $1.87 million and New York Democrat Charles Schumer who had $1.8 million.

The Senate

Candidates for the Senate, incumbents and challengers together, raised some $77 million in 1991. In contrast to the House, where incumbents got almost all the funds, some of the biggest fund-raisers for Senate seats included candidates for open seats and challengers. The top 10 were California open-seat candidate Rep. Thomas Campbell, R-Calif. ($3.2 million); Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore. ($3.1 million); Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif. ($3 million); Sen. John Seymour, R-Calif. ($2.9 million); Rep. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif. ($2.8 million); Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis. ($2.4 million); Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa. ($2.3 million); Sen. Richard Shelby, D-Ala. ($2 million); former Democratic San Francisco mayor Dianne Feinstein ($1.9 million) and former N.Y. Democratic Rep. Geraldine Ferraro ($1.9 million).

The parties

As in recent elections, the GOP and its fund-raising arms continue to vastly outpace their Democratic counterparts. In 1991 the Republican National Committee and its Senate and House campaign committees raised $75 million plus an additional $18.4 million in so-called "soft money" - large corporate, union and individual contributions that cannot be used in specific federal campaigns. In contrast, their Democratic counterparts managed to raise only $23 million plus almost $8 million in soft money.

Political action committees

PACs continue to play a major role in funding federal candidates. In 1991, House candidates gathered $34 million from PACs - almost half the total raised. Senate candidates received 35 percent of their total contributions - $15 million - from political action committees. As is usually the case, 95 percent of PAC contributions went to incumbents.

In the House the top five PAC recipients were all Democrats: Richard Gephardt ($727,308), Henry Waxman ($348,950), Marty Russo ($333,888), Sander Levin ($319,931) and Michigan's David Bonior ($316,130).

In the Senate, every incumbent running for re-election received at least $200,000 from PACs in 1991. The top of the list was South Dakota Democrat Tom Daschle ($853,574) followed by Richard Shelby ($823,478), Louisiana Democrat John Breaux ($774,090), John Seymour ($689,124) and Kentucky Democrat Wendell Ford ($655,560).

Team

"Brain Bowl" were selected by their schools to represent the county at the state tournament at Walt Disney World on April 30, May 1 and 2.
From Lake Mary, the participating students are: Will Hultner and Naunihal Verdi. From Lake Brantley: Janet Beogher and Derek Martin. And from Lake Howell: Gabe Bouch and Alletia Brody.
"They each have their strengths and weaknesses," Coursey said. "This is a strong team."
Coursey has sample questions taken from the last five years of state competition that he will use to test the brain power of his team members.
"These are tough questions," he said. "There are many that I can't answer myself."

Questions come from the areas of humanities, math, science, history and literature. Students are not only challenged to dredge trivial facts from the far recesses of their minds, but they are also challenged to think and, at times, pool their mental resources to find the solution to a complex problem.
"This is a team effort," Coursey emphasized. "We have got to learn how to work together."
Many questions work to the strengths of one individual team member. Coursey said the students recognize that and are learning to make that a part of their team strategy.
"It's funny to see, for example, when a difficult math question is thrown out to them," he said. "You just see the non-math students put down their pencils and all back."

Coursey said that defining strategies and fine tuning those skills is the most important part of his job as a coach.
"I can't teach them facts, but I can teach them thinking skills and I can teach them things like how to buzz in for different types of questions and things like that," he said.
The coach said that he is getting assistance from the coaches of the academic teams at the other schools. That cooperation, he believes will help build a very strong team.
While Seminole County teams have had strong showings in past state tournaments, they have never brought home the trophy. Coursey thinks this year's team has a chance.
"They are an intelligent bunch," he said.

Ordinance

Ordinance was only recently enacted and has not been challenged in courts as yet. "Actually," Harriett said, "General Council Ted Mills said the ordinance has not been used yet."
Although the original Sanford ordinance has now been declared as valid, Harriett suggested it should be expanded. "Ours only includes loitering connected with drug sales," he said. "Perhaps we could take something from Orange County such as loitering to commit prostitution, and include it in ours."

Attorney Colbert commented, "With ours approved as it is, I don't think we should change it, but we could give consideration to adding some new sections to it."
The commissioners agreed that Colbert should review the arrests in 1991 compared to nine in 1990. Harriett said the increase was more due to community and police focus than an increase of activity.

Crime

"You can work as much prosecution as you want to work," Harriett said. "The courts give it a low priority but the community doesn't like it. You frequently find it tied to drug dealers or drug users."

The number of reported crimes in unincorporated areas increased in most categories between about 7 and 14 percent. The number of murders and manslaughters increased by 50 percent, from eight to 12. Prostitution incidents increased by 43 percent, from 93 to 133. But drug-related crimes decreased by about 7 1/2 percent, from 523 to 484.
Although the murder and manslaughter rate increased by 50 percent, Eslinger said a murder-suicide and a homicide-suicide in 1991 accounted for five of those 12 deaths. All but one of the murders have been solved, Eslinger said.

robberies increased by about 12 percent, from 17 robberies in 1990 to 19 in 1991.
Thefts represent the most persistent of any reported crime in the city. There were 431 reported thefts in Longwood in 1991, compared to 355 in 1990, a 21 percent increase.
Longwood Police Chief Charles Manning could not be reached.
In Lake Mary, where the actual number of crimes in each category is often less than 10, burglaries, thefts and criminal mischiefs remained the greatest number of reported crimes. Burglaries decreased from 141 in 1990 to 134 in 1991, about a 1 1/2 percent decrease. Thefts increased from 97 to 125. And reports of criminal mischief increased by nearly 3 1/2 percent, from 81 to 157.

great deal of work to get it to a usable state."
He said, "It's actually an old retention pond area that has grown to the point where it can't be used for a park area without some work."
Holland explained, "Some of the neighbors in that area have already come up with a lot of good ideas for what might be done including putting in a boardwalk area and a gazebo, but we'll have to have some more discussion before we determine exactly what we may propose and how much money might be needed."
The Estella Park project will be the fourth in the series of Neighbors for Neighborhoods projects undertaken in Lake Mary. The assistance of neighbors living in the areas near the various parks, as well as many organizations in Lake Mary, has grown with each project.
While no specific date has been established for this latest endeavor, Holland expects it could be set for sometime in the middle of April.
Morris added, "We will first have to see how much money we might have to invest in this one then bring it up for Commission approval."

According to Litton, "As presently scheduled, J. Craig Spearman, who heads Lake Mary's Business Advisory Board, is scheduled to testify on the technical aspects of the elimination of long distance phone charges, while Seminole County Commissioner Bob Sturm is to testify on the overall community of interest."
"Of course," Litton added, "the testimony is all subject to cross examination in the case."

He projected, "The next gathering will be coming up in Tallahassee on May 1 when they will hold a pre-hearing and rules will be laid out for the major sessions."
The main meeting will take place at the Lake Mary City Hall, May 12, when representatives of Lake Mary, Sanford and Seminole County and their attorneys, will meet Southern Bell and their attorneys before the Florida Public Service Commission in a full public hearing.

Inn

Commission.
Holiday Inn at Monroe Harbor Marina, has been behind on paying property rental. The problem was scheduled to be brought up during a workshop meeting of the commission last night.
The Holiday Inn leases the land at the Marina from the City. According to a statement prepared by the city Finance Department, the amount due included two months in the current rental fees and a lack of payments and interest on an agreement for payment of back rent made in January of 1990.
At the beginning of the discussion however, City Finance Director Carolyn Small reported having received a check in the amount of $41,669. "This brings them up to date on the present arrears," she reported.

Commissioner Lon Howell remained upset however. "I'm getting tired of this," he commented. "It's an on-going thing. What will happen if they don't pay their bill the next time it's due?"
City Manager Bill Simmons reported, "There will be another $33,000 payment due on May 1, and we'll have to wait and see what happens."
City Attorney Bill Colbert commented, "If payment is not made, if the creditor (the city) chooses, it could take the matter into the bankruptcy court which has jurisdiction and we would then let the court decide."
Howell added, "I think we as a Commission, have just been too lenient with them."
The commissioner suggested,

"If we took the property back and had it bulldozed down, just think of how much money the city could make leasing the land out there on the marina."
Simmons commented, "Prior to the receipt of this payment, I had intended to get together with our city attorney and the representative of the Holiday Inn to try to reach a meeting of the minds from here on out!" He added, "With the next payment due to come up in May, I think this might still be a good suggestion. I would like to do it and see if we couldn't make it work from this point on."
Mayor Bettye Smith, with agreement from the Commissioners, suggested Simmons "meet with the Holiday Inn representative and Colbert's office to pursue the matter and see what could be accomplished."

Questions raised on standards of math achievement

By TAMARA HENRY
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — A General Accounting Office report questions the math performance levels set for students by a federal agency and warns against using similar standards for reading and writing.

The federally funded National Assessment of Educational Progress — popularly known as the Nation's Report Card — set three levels for math achievement two years ago. But the GAO said an investigation "found problems of procedure, of reliability, of validity and of reporting."

Eleanor Chelmsky, assistant comptroller general, said the GAO had examined standards being developed for reading and writing proficiency tests and concluded that "commitments to the further use of levels now being set in similar fashion seem premature."

The achievement levels were defended by Roy Truby, executive director of the assessment board.

"I think setting the standards, deciding what is good enough, how much students ought to know is a judgement," said Truby. "It's more of a judgement than it is science. We're comfortable with what we have done so far. We think it can be improved, that was why it was a trial."

Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., and the chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, and panel member Dale E. Kildee, R-Mich., requested the investigation when researchers charged that political pressure skewed the release of a national math-achievement assessment they said was too negative.

The Nation's Report Card, in releasing the first math results according to the levels last Sept. 30, indicated American school children can do little more than simple calculations.

The math report said just over 60 percent of children in grades four, eight and 12 can perform simple math problems using basic skills. It said that less than 20 percent of those in the three grades can tackle solid grade-level work and that 1 percent or less of the fourth- and eighth-graders, and 2.8 percent of high school seniors can do advanced work.

The assessment, mandated by Congress, is the only nationally representative and continuing assessment of what American students know and can do in various academic subjects. Its governing board decided in 1990 to set achievement levels of proficient, advanced and basic.

Traditionally, the assessment showed the percentage of students performing specific tasks in reading, mathematics, science, writing, history, geography, and other elementary and secondary school subjects — without judgement.

The GAO report said the levels were "only generically defined" and the assessment governing board failed to "provide a clear standard for judging the proportion of students" at each achievement level.

"Differences in interpretation may well be responsible for weaknesses we found in the reliability of the results of the judgement process," the GAO said.

The GAO report also criticized the assessment board for failing to disclose the limitations of the data when it published the mathematics levels. It warned against applying the achievement levels approach for the 1992 assessments currently underway in mathematics, reading and writing.

Feds seize cat food sold as tuna

By JOSEPH NEFF
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. — Federal agents have seized 38,640 cans of cat food that had been labeled tuna for human consumption.

The 6½-ounce cans, confiscated Monday from a Teerboro warehouse, were labeled Ocean King Chunk Light Tuna in Water but instead contained decomposed tuna fit only for sale as pet food, the Food and Drug Administration said.

Some of the cans were sold, the FDA said. The agency said all canned foods are sterilized during processing, so it isn't dangerous. "But who wants to eat decomposed cat food?" asked Lillian Aveta, an FDA compliance monitor.

M. Chu, president of Ocean King in New York City, did not immediately return calls Monday.

The cans belonged originally to a lot of 25 million to 50 million cans produced in 1985 at a cannery in St. Andrews, Canada, the FDA said. The Canadian government closed the cannery because of unsanitary conditions.

The tuna was supposed to be labeled 7th Heaven cat food in the United States.

"But at some point, some cans were relabeled as tuna," Aveta said. "We don't know yet how many, or when or by whom."

Some tuna labels were pasted on top of the cat food labels. The decomposed tuna that was distributed was labeled under four brands — Ocean King, IGA, Blue Bay and National, the FDA said.

The investigation was prompted in July by complaints in Minnesota, including one from Darlene La Muga of St. Paul, who opened a can and took a bite.

"I went to pull off the label and I saw there was another label underneath," she said. "It said ... 7th Heaven cat food. It gagged me and I threw up in the wastebasket."

The affected cans carry a two-line product code: the fourth character on the first line is a "v" and the second character on the second line is a "t."

Owners of Sanford Airport Golf Driving Range Eddie and Beverly Johnson and their 9 week old puppy, Jessica.

At Home On The Range

Sanford Airport Golf Driving Range is a nice place to practice your swing. Practice is the key word here, and you can do just that without feeling the pressure to perform, the way you do on the course. Owners Eddie and Beverly Johnson have tried to establish a comfortable atmosphere, focusing on the basics.

Eddie believes the least necessary thing in golf is strength. It's the swing not the hit that makes your game. The only way you improve your game is by practice. All the golf articles in the world won't help unless you're out there hitting hundreds of balls. The best way to practice those tips you've heard is to have someone critique your form and your swing. With so many irons to choose from Eddie can show you how each one will help you achieve that shot you've been striving for.

The Johnson's purchased the golf range in March of 1990. The range had been in existence for 12 years before the Johnson's purchased it. The range is 325 yards long, 300 yards wide and can accommodate 50 hitters. There is a grass hitting area as well as a mat area. The Johnson's have gone for quality all the way, right down to the quality of the balls. Ultimately, good balls hit better, so you hit better.

Eddie and Beverly try to make the range feel like home. They've had their share of hardships over the years. Eddie battles with Multiple Sclerosis (MS). MS attacks the central nervous system and often sends mixed signals to the body's muscles. In spite of the MS Eddie continues to play and teach. Eddie says "without the golf range I just wouldn't have anything special to strive for. I know I won't play professionally again but I can teach someone else to be a successful golfer." Beverly was diagnosed with lung cancer in 1981 and surgery was performed immediately. Despite the medical problems and pain Bev experienced she overcame the cancer. Bev and Eddie are grateful to have the range. The feeling they want to project is comfort in a friendly atmosphere.

Eddie played on the PGA Tour from 1958-1965 and was the Head Golf Professional at Meadowbrook Country Club for six years, and other country clubs in St. Louis. He has been a member of the PGA for 35 years. Now he spends his days running the golf range and offering lessons to those looking to improve their game. Eddie offers private lessons. You can also buy discount tickets for $15.00 worth of balls for only $12.00. The range is open from 9 AM to dark.

This Saturday, March 28, at 10:00 AM, Sanford Airport Golf Driving Range will be contributing to the war on recession by offering a FREE Golf Clinic. You buy the balls and they will give the instruction. It's best to bring your own clubs, but clubs are available if you need them.

Eddie is dedicated to helping you improve your game. Frank Hewitt says Eddie is the finest instructor he's ever seen and that he has learned more from Eddie than anyone else.

Ed Williams states "with each lesson I get better and better, not only at my game but in understanding the terminology."

Stop out today at 2300 E. Airport Blvd. in Sanford or call 322-1853 for more information on how you can improve your game.

Farmers may get just pennies for disaster relief

By JENNIFER DIXON
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Struggling farmers who saw their crops washed away by floods or parched by drought may get only pennies for every dollar in losses when the government sends out disaster relief checks next month.

That's because the Agriculture Department has only $995 million to divide among thousands of farmers, nurseries and orchards that lost crops to bad weather in 1990 and 1991.

Lawmakers say it isn't nearly enough to cover two years of vicious weather. As a result, USDA will have to spread payments among producers.

Estimates of what farmers can expect range from 10 cents to 50 cents for every dollar lost. Many observers believe the checks, which should be mailed in mid-April, will be close to 30 cents on the dollar.

USDA will begin tallying up the losses after farmers get in the last of their paperwork Friday. But lawmakers and farm groups are already predicting that claims will easily exceed the fund.

For one, California, the top farm state, was in its fifth straight year of drought by 1991, and its citrus orchards and winter vegetable crops were damaged by a winter freeze in 1990.

Record floods last year in East Texas and the Mississippi Delta washed catfish right out of their ponds and damaged wheat crops across the region.

Hot, dry weather withered the peanut crop in the Southeast in 1990 and corn, soybeans and wheat from the mid-Atlantic westward to Illinois a year later. Frost and violent storms battered fruit orchards across Michigan.

Lawmakers and farm groups fear an outpouring of anger from producers when they open their mail next month and find that only a fraction of their losses have been covered.

"Agricultural producers are rightly complaining that 'the disaster program is a disaster,'" said Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said he's worried that farmers may only see a dime's worth of relief for every dollar in damages. In Texas alone, farmers lost $618 million on just three crops — cotton, corn and sorghum.

And in Florida, producers have filed claims on 3,600 different kinds of ornamental plants, such as roses, shrubs and trees, said Keith D. Bjerke, administrator of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"Farmers tell me the program is too little, too late, and it may be turning into a sad joke," Bentsen said. "Clearly more than $995 million is going to be needed to meet the needs of all farmers across the country."

Bentsen called on President Bush to release $775 million more authorized last year by Congress.

Congress had sought to spend about $1.75 billion for disaster aid for 1990 and 1991 crops, but Bush opposed anything over $1 billion.

Administration officials contend the $775 million is supposed to be used, in part, for losses in 1992, so it can't be spent when the year is far from over.

Merger approved creating second largest bank

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — BankAmerica Corp. is working to complete the largest bank merger in U.S. history after winning Federal Reserve Board approval to acquire Security Pacific Corp. and become the nation's second biggest bank.

The 7-0 approval by the Fed, released after the close of stock markets Monday, represented the last major regulatory hurdle for the deal. It will create a bank with $192 billion in assets and more than 2,000 branches spread across 10 Western states and Hawaii.

The board conditioned its approval on the merged bank's agreement to meet lending goals in poor neighborhoods, improve its financial health and sell branches under antitrust commitments with the Justice Department and state attorneys general in California, Washington and Arizona.

"Based on ... compliance with all commitments ... the board concludes that ... this proposal would not have a significantly adverse effect on competition," the Fed said in its 66-page order.

In a statement, BankAmerica said it anticipates completing the merger shortly after a 30-day waiting period imposed by the Fed. It expects to take about a year to fully combine operations.

The new holding company will retain the BankAmerica name and will rank second only to Citicorp, which has around $217 billion in assets but is struggling.

Ranked by deposits, it will be the largest bank in California, Washington and Nevada, second-largest in Arizona and third-largest in Oregon.

BankAmerica is still eyeing acquisitions and eventually should regain its lost status as the nation's largest bank, analysts predicted.

"I think the feds will probably let them swallow another big bank in Texas and I think they can probably handle that," said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

BankAmerica is clearly the stronger of the two partners. Security Pacific has been particularly hard hit by a downturn in Southern California commercial real estate and lost $765 million last year. BankAmerica earned $1.12 billion.

BankAmerica, with headquarters in San Francisco, now is the nation's third-largest bank holding company with $116 billion in assets. Los Angeles-based Security Pacific is the seventh largest with $76 billion in assets.

BankAmerica and Security Pacific announced their intention to merge last Aug. 12. However, the Federal Reserve delayed approval of the transaction while it conducted public hearings in states affected.

Community groups objected to the banks' post-merger layoff plans, criticized their record of serving poor people and minorities and complained that the combined bank would overly dominate some markets.

Juice for Japan

Florida citrus producers eye rapidly expanding market

By JENNIFER DIXON
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Florida citrus growers see a rapidly expanding market for their orange juice in Japan once the splat opens April 1.

That's when quotas on imported orange juice will expire under a U.S.-Japanese trade agreement signed July 5, 1988.

Producers believe that once U.S. orange juice begins moving into Japan, exports will begin increasing quickly and could top $1 billion a year within a decade.

According to the Florida Department of Citrus, the United States is currently exporting some 10 million gallons of juice a year to Japan. The total projected market for orange juice in Japan is expected to be 250 million gallons by the year 2000.

"Japanese consumers already understand the superior quality and health benefits of Florida citrus products because of the availability of fresh Florida grapefruit and grapefruit juice," said Dan Gunter, executive director of the Florida Department of Citrus.

Japan liberalized its import policies on grapefruit in 1971 and on grapefruit juice in 1984.

"Florida supplies the lion's share of the Japanese fresh grapefruit and grapefruit juice market, and we expect to dominate the Japanese market for premium 100 percent orange juice. Many Japanese distributors already have announced plans to switch from their Brazilian orange juice sources to the all-Florida juice," he said.

Gunter said the Florida Department of Citrus would spend $1.4 million on an advertising, public relations, merchandising and market research campaign beginning this spring to promote 100 percent Florida orange juice to Japanese consumers. He said the agency is planning to expand the size and the scope of the marketing effort over the next few years.

The agency also plans spot checks and sample tests in Japan to ensure products carrying the Sunshine Tree logo are 100 percent Florida orange juice.

Gunter said Florida is ready to meet an increase in orange juice demand.

"Our citrus growers have planted a record number of trees and adopted state-of-the-art agricultural practices, which will mean much larger crops in the near future," he said.

He said the industry expects to set new production records in the 1990s.

The 1991-92 orange juice quota, which is now expiring, had restricted orange juice imports to 50 million gallons annually.

Orlando company plans film on Chappaquiddick

Associated Press

BOSTON — A Florida film company is seeking confidential records for a movie about the car accident at Chappaquiddick in 1969 in which a campaign worker of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's was killed.

Quest Entertainment Inc. has hired Washington, D.C., attorney Myron Mintz to obtain the release of confidential records. "There has been such controversy and apparent cover-up to the accident itself and the questionable 10 hours before the accident was reported that we were trying to find some additional information out that could have been withheld," Quest marketing director Jon Shirley said Monday.

Production of "Death at Chappaquiddick" is scheduled to begin in late May for release in early fall.

"We felt that it was a good topic for the time," Shirley said. The film is to be based on a book of the same name by Richard and Thomas Tedrow.

The project will be filmed on the Universal Studios lot in Orlando, where Quest is based, and on location in other parts of Florida, Washington, D.C., and Massachusetts.

The senator's passenger, Mary Jo Kopechne, drowned after Kennedy's car went off a bridge and sank in a shallow pond on July 18, 1969.

Founded in 1989, Quest has produced eight movies.

Court will review case of church that sacrifices animals

By RICHARD CAPELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to review communities' power to ban the sacrificial killing of animals at church rituals, a case that could yield important new guidelines on religious freedom.

Although the Florida case involves a church practicing an underground religion, the court's decision — expected sometime in 1993 — could carry significance for mainline religious denominations as well.

The Miami suburb of Hialeah, Florida's fifth largest city, passed ordinances in 1987 to restrict the killing of animals just after the Church of Lukumi Babalu Aye leased an abandoned car lot and prepared to open a Santeria church.

Santeria is a mixture of Catholicism and of ancient African religions that were carried in past centuries to Cuba by slaves. It came to the United States in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

The sacrifice of animals — chickens, pigeons, doves, ducks, goats, sheep and turtles — is an integral part of the rituals and ceremonies conducted by practitioners of Santeria.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman of Miami, although not citing his statistical source, estimated in 1989 that as many as 60,000 practitioners of Santeria live in South Florida.

The judge, who has since died, upheld the ordinances after noting that they "are not religiously neutral." The ordinances permissibly regulate conduct rather than interfere with beliefs, he ruled.

In 1990, the Supreme Court ruled that states may outlaw the religious use of the illegal drug peyote. That decision in an Oregon case said people's religious beliefs do not excuse them from having to comply with a "neutral and generally applicable" law.

The 1990 ruling disturbed numerous religious organizations because it abandoned the court's longstanding rule that laws must satisfy some "compelling interest" if they interfere with religious practices.

Since the 1990 ruling, for example, lower courts have upheld historical landmark laws even if they have an adverse impact on some churches.

"The (1990) case did leave the door open to continued use of the compelling-interest test where religion is targeted for discriminatory treatment," said Brent Walker of the Baptist Joint Committee.

Walker said the Hialeah case gives the high court its first chance "to rule that the (1990) standard doesn't apply where religion is singled out for discriminatory treatment." He said the court also could "reconsider the ill-advised (1990) standard altogether" and return to the compelling-interest test.

"This is of concern to all religions. What the government is allowed to do to the most unpopular sect it will eventually be able to do to mainstream denominations," Walker said.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, affirming Judge Spellman's ruling, upheld Hialeah's ban.

Lawyers for the Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye and one of its priests, Ernesto Pichardo, said the ordinances must be struck down.

Their appeal noted that no city ordinance or state law bans hunting, fishing or trapping, or the killing of diseased, injured or abandoned domestic animals.

"Religion is almost the only unacceptable reason for killing an animal in Florida," the appeal argued.

Alligator farm is near century mark

Associated Press

ST. AUGUSTINE — Nearly 100 years and countless chickens since two trolley operators began charging admission to view "nuisance" reptiles, the St. Augustine Alligator Farm bills itself as Florida's oldest commercial tourist attraction.

Managers at the attraction on Florida Highway A1A, south of St. Augustine's historical district, are making plans for next year's centennial festivities with "the big bash" in May 1993, manager Mark Wise said Monday.

The farm draws some 250,000 paying customers a year to stroll wooden walkways meandering beneath the trees and above the pools and sand banks where alligators lie.

Over the years, the farm has evolved from a collection of native alligators removed from populated areas, adding rare species as well as snakes, birds and other animals with the 2,500 members of a world-class assembly of crocodylians species.

"I do think this is probably the best collection in the world," said Kent Vliet, a University of Florida researcher who has done studies at the farm since 1980. His doctoral dissertation was on alligator courtships.

Nine of 10 species hatch offspring annually at the farm, Vliet said.

Only one — an Australian variety — of the 22 documented species of crocodylians is missing from the collection, said Alligator Farm curator Greg Lepera.

Among the top current attractions: Chinese alligators, white alligators and Gomek, a 17-foot, 6-inch crocodile from New Guinea that weighs more than 1,700 pounds. Gomek is the largest crocodile in the Western Hemisphere.

Through April 30, a pair of rare white alligators found in Louisiana in 1987 will be on display. The 6-foot-long alligators are not albinos but get their coloration from genetic mutation.

"They look like white chocolate," said Carlissa Lacey, a St. Augustine resident visiting the farm.

Visitors today pay $7.95 each to tour the farm; tickets are $5.25 for children ages 3 to 10, and free under age 3.

Its roots are in 1890, when George Reddington and Felix Fire were running a trolley through the swamps from St. Augustine to St. Augustine Beach. Alligators were always climbing onto the tracks and blocking the way.

The two men began catching the reptiles and putting them into an empty beach house and in 1893, began charging admission to see the reptiles.

During the next 30 years, storm erosion sucked the land from around the attraction, so it was moved inland to the site south of St. Augustine's historic district. About 7 acres are open to the public.

Lepera, the farm's curator, said the focus of today's attraction is information about nature, without the thrill shows of past decades.

"We're trying to get away from that man vs. beast kind of thing," he said. "We've eliminated a lot of the tricks that can hurt the animals."

Coach Tim Winkle welcomes Steve Pridden (top photo) to third base after the second of two singles for the Wrecking Crew's leading hitter on the night. Pridden drove in two runs with his hits but they went for naught as the Crew lost 10-7 to league champion Ken Rummel. Pitcher Craig Appel (bottom photo) also had a good offensive night with two singles for the Wrecking Crew.

sixth-degree Black Belt. "And from 1986-89 I coached five state champions at Seminole High School in the 110- and 330-yard hurdles. In the same period we also had one National Champion and two Junior Olympic Champions."

"Currently I am training Frank Barnett. He recently ran a 13.8 in practice and needs a 13.4 to qualify for the Olympic Trials."

Menefee said that the system is a true American System that borrows from Karate.

"The system respects and recognizes the ancient ideas of Oriental Martial Arts," said Menefee, a 1978 graduate of Seminole High. "It is not just a kicking and punching system. It is a mixture of kicking, punching and ground fighting. It is an all-around system for the street."

And while Menefee has had several students compete in karate competitions, that is not the main object of the school.

"We are here to teach the art of Karate for personal well-being," said Menefee. "But we will also teach you for competition if that is what you want."

Menefee also said that the school is open to students of all ages.

"My oldest student is an 81-year-old handicapped man," said Menefee, who currently has around 30 students. "So you can see the school is open to anyone."

Menefee closed by saying that Sanford could take pride in the system.

"It's not too often that a city has it's own system," said the

Quick test can alert you to diabetes

DEAR ABBY: Please help the American Diabetes Association find 7 million Americans who are missing vital medical treatment and who may be at high risk for heart disease, kidney disease, stroke, blindness and amputation.

There are 14 million Americans who have diabetes, and half of them do not know they have the disease. These people need to be reached before they suffer from one of these life-threatening complications.

You can help by running the Diabetes Risk Test in your column during the American Diabetes alert on March 24, as we urge Americans across the country to "Take the Test, Know the Score." This simple test can help determine if there is a risk for having diabetes, and if a doctor should be contacted.

With your help, we can improve and save lives by enabling people to find out if they have diabetes.

JAMES B. SKYLER, M.D.,

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

PRESIDENT, AMERICAN DIABETES ASSOCIATION

DEAR DR. SKYLER: Since early intervention can make a critical difference in the quality of life for a person with diabetes, I am printing the Diabetes Risk Test you recommend for my readers:

"Take the Test, Know the Score"

1. I have been experiencing one or more of the following symptoms on a regular basis:
Excessive thirst

Yes 3
Frequent urination

- Yes 3
Extreme fatigue
- Yes 1
Unexplained weight loss
- Yes 3
Blurry vision from time to time
- Yes 2
2. I am over 30 years of age.
- Yes 1
- 3. I am at least 20 percent over my ideal weight.
- Yes 2
- 4. I am a woman who has had more than one baby weighing more than nine pounds at birth.
- Yes 2
- 5. I am of native American Indian descent.
- Yes 1
- 6. I am of Hispanic or black American descent.
- Yes 1
- 7. I have a parent with diabetes.
- Yes 1
- 8. I have a brother or sister with diabetes.
- Yes 2

Now, add up your score. If you scored three to five points, you are probably at low risk for diabetes. If you scored more than five points, you may be at high risk, or even have diabetes. See your doctor, and don't delay.

For more information on diabetes, contact your local American Diabetes Association or send a self-addressed, stamped (29 cents) envelope to The American Diabetes Association National Center, 1660 Duke St., Alexandria, Va. 22314.

Gainesville slaying suspect convicted of bank robbery

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — After 2½ hours of deliberations, a federal jury found the man charged with the August 1990 murders of five Gainesville college students guilty of bank robbery.

Danny Harold Rolling, 37, showed no emotion as the verdict was read Monday after a weeklong trial. He faces a possible life term and 30 years in prison for his latest convictions — even though he's already serving four life sentences for armed robberies in Ocala and Tampa.

Rolling, a drifter from Shreveport, La., was convicted of armed bank robbery, use of a firearm during a violent crime and possession of a firearm by a felon.

His Gainesville murder trial is not expected to be held for about two years as defense attorneys review the mass of evidence collected by investigators.

U.S. Attorney Ken Sukhia, who held a press conference after the verdict, said that if Rolling gets a life term during his sentencing hearing, scheduled for May 22, he will serve 87 percent of his federal sentence.

The other convictions and prison terms are in the state system, where inmates serve, on the average, about one-third of their sentences.

There was no overt reference to the murders during the week-long robbery trial. But the name of Christa Hoyt, one of the victims, came up during testimony when a crime analyst told jurors that a public hair matching Hoyt's was found in a cassette that prosecutors said was Rolling's.

Hoyt's mutilated body was found Aug. 27, 1990, the same day a masked gunman robbed the First Union National Bank in Gainesville of $7,000.

Citizens' group targets HRS

Associated Press

ORLANDO — A citizens' group has paid nearly $40,000 for newspaper advertising supplements accusing the state's social services agency of making false child-abuse cases against parents.

The eight-page ads in four newspapers around the state target the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services and claim 100,000 Florida residents will be wrongly accused of child abuse this year.

"Currently, innocent people don't have any way to protect themselves once they're accused," said Dale Krazmien, a spokeswoman for the Orlando-based Family Rights Committee, which is placing the ads.

The ads, which compare HRS to the Gestapo secret police in Hitler's Germany, accuse the agency of kidnapping children.

Most child abuse claims are unfounded, and many children removed from homes by HRS investigators are abused in state foster homes, Ms. Krazmien said.

"These children do not come back the same way as when they left," she said. "They're deeply scarred."

Try another drug for nocturnal leg cramps

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from nocturnal leg cramps for which I was using quinine pills. I've stopped taking them because I find large bruises behind my knees every morning following ingestion. Why does this happen, and what can I do for the leg cramps now?

DEAR READER: Although quinine is generally a safe and inexpensive drug, which is useful in treating leg cramps, it can interfere with blood coagulation, leading to bruising and hemorrhage. This occurs because, in some patients, quinine damages blood cells and affects blood proteins necessary for clotting.

You were correct to stop the quinine on your own. If the bruising continues, see your doctor for advice. Also, you might ask him or her if a substitute medicine, such as a calcium-channel blocker, might help alleviate your cramps.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm seeking help on impotence. In 1985 I had bypass surgery and have been on medication for a heart attack. I'm treated with Lopressor and Dyazide. On discussing this with my family doctor, he suggested I drop my medication for two weeks as a trial, but this didn't improve anything. At this point he doesn't know what to say, and he really doesn't advise me about much anyway.

DEAR READER: Your impotence doesn't appear to be caused by either of the medicines you were taking. Therefore, you will have to consider poor circulation as the culprit.

The fact that you required bypass surgery indicates you have arteriosclerotic buildup that affected your heart. I believe it's a good bet that you have blockages in your lower body, too. In particular, the arterial supply to the penis is vulnerable to arterial blockage; without adequate blood supply to that organ, erection will not occur.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

For some years, books have been produced by desktop publishing: a computer and a laser printer are used for typesetting them. Now the video business is feeling the effect of these home-grown systems. In 1990, leading teacher Bill Root joined forces with Henry Hahn to produce videotapes of Root's lessons. Their second two-hour tape covers three topics: squeezes, throw-in plays and duplicate-bridge strategy. It is available (as is the first tape) for $39.95 from Root-Hahn Enterprises, P.O. Box 7205, Heights Station, Concord, NH 03301.

Today's deal is the first from the second lesson. Cover the East-West cards and plan the play in four spades. West leads the club queen.

North made a limit raise, and South bid aggressively by moving on to game. At first, it looks as though declarer must lose four red-suit tricks. The chances of playing the diamond suit for no loser are remote. But that diamond suit, with its life-saving nine and 10, is ideal for an endplay.

South won trick one with the club ace, the honor from the short side first. He drew trumps, cashed the club king and ruffed a club, eliminating that suit. Finally South exited with a heart.

The defenders cashed their three heart tricks, ending in the West hand. West defended well, switching to the diamond queen, but South knew that the odds favored playing for split honors. He won with dummy's ace, led a low diamond and finessed his nine successfully.

West said that next time he would lead a heart, killing the throw-in.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 25, 1992

Improved conditions in your chosen field of endeavor are likely in the year ahead. Before this cycle is finished, you may climb several rungs up the ladder.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If someone tries to take credit today for something you did, don't be overly concerned. This individual will eventually be identified as a second-stringer. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Aries' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Conditions in general are better than you may think they are today, so don't let negative thoughts or self-doubt paint an unrealistic picture and induce failure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your possibilities for personal gain look encouraging today, provided you don't dilute your sense of duty with indifference. Take nothing for granted.

CANCER (June 21-July 21) You might be offered some sound suggestions today by someone whose judgment you revere. Unfortunately, you might not appreciate its value until it's too late.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Consider the long-range aspects of something you're presently involved in, and you won't find your task so distasteful. Your awareness of the project's benefits will inspire effective effort.

VERGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be rather lucky today in most areas, with the exception of finances. Subdue inclinations toward extravagance and risk-taking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might be in a position today to help an old friend with whom you are presently at odds. Don't be vindictive; let your nobler impulses direct your behavior.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something unfortunate -- and which you're responsible for -- may occur at work today. Instead of trying to cover it up, bring it into the light where others can help you resolve it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Chances for gratifying your material ambitions look hopeful today, but you might not get everything you desire. Just be grateful for being on the plus side of the ledger.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you do not take yourself or events too seriously today, you'll avoid needless problems. Relax, and you'll not only accomplish more but have fun doing it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Guard against the inclination today to look a gift horse in the mouth. A lack of gratitude might make someone who wants to help you withdraw the offer.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In agreements you enter into today, the more generous you are, the more you're likely to receive in return. Subdue tendencies to be too self-serving.
