'Test Drive' Ended In Indiana

Man Gets 5 Years In Kidnapping Of Auto Dealer's Daughter

By Charles Cobb
Herald Staff Writer

A 28-year-old Winter Springs man has been sentenced to five years in prison for stealing a car at gunpoint from a Sanford car dealer and kidnapping the dealer's teenage daughter in 1981.

Darrell Lynn Theophilus, whose address is listed as 755 Dunlap Circle, pleaded guilty Friday to armed robbery, carrying a concealed firearm and kidnapping in the incident which occurred at Jim Lash's Blue Book Cars on July 6, 1981.

Seminole Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor immediately sentenced

Theophilus to two years in prison for the armed robbery count, two years for kidnapping and one year for carrying a concealed fire arm with the sentences to run consecutively.

The state charged that Theophilus went to the car dealership at 4114 S. Orlando Drive on July 6, 1981, and asked to test drive a 1973 Oldsmobile. When he returned from the test drive, Theophilus approached a salesman, pulled out a rifle that had been wrapped in a blanket and said he was going to take the car without paying for it, the state charged.

Theophilus forced Angelina Lash, 17, who was working as a clerk in the office to get in the car with him, the state said. Miss Lash is the daughter of Jim Lash, owner of the car firm.

Theophilus drove to Tallahassee where he set the girl free and then drove on to Indianapolis, Ind., where he turned himself in to authorities, the state said. Miss Lash was not harmed.

Later Theophilus was charged with stealing the rifle before he stole the Oldsmobile and kidnapped the girl, court records show.

Theophilus was convicted of that charge and sentenced to five years. He was serving that sentence when he was sentenced to an additional five years in prison Friday.

Games Spirits Shine Despite Rain

Sanford's Ninth Annual Golden Age Games got off to a good start Monday in spite of the gray skies and intermittent showers.

"The rain didn't dampen their spirits," said Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce President Jack Horner of the eager senior citizens here from all over the country to compete. "Everything went smoothly, they just had to reshuffle the tennis schedule because of the rain."

"We were very, very pleased with the opening ceremonies and the good turnout," he said. "At 7:30 yesterday morning the large room at the chamber (serving as Games headquarters) was full and they were overflowing on to the porch."

He said there were 114 Games participants on hand today for the complimentary breakfast served at the Sanford Civic Center at 7 a.m. each morning during the weeklong event. The many and varied activities for seniors 55 and older will continue through Saturday.

Top Synchronized Swimmer Back For 5th Games

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

One of the world's premier synchronized swimmers, Louise Wing, of Lynn, Mass., who recently turned 65, is back to compete in the Golden Age Games for the fifth time. She has won the gold medal each year in her age category for synchronized swimming; in fact she is so good she has never finished anywhere but first in her age group.

She was honored this year with the Southland Olympia Award in recognition of her contributions to amateur sport and devotion to the Olympic ideal. She was named for the award by a panel of former world and Olympic champions among them decathlon greats Bob Mathias and Rafer Johnson, gymnast Cathy Rigby, and diver Pat McCormick. She was one of 300 athletes considered for the award.

"When we originated the Olympia Award," said Mathias, spokesman for the selection panel, "we had in mind people such as Louise Wing, people who have given unselfishly of their time and energies in behalf of amateur sports. We could not have picked a more deserving person for this honor."

She comes to Sanford this year from California where she won the Masters Synchronized Swimming women's championship for her age group for the ninth year. The masters competition is for men and women age 20 and older.

She swims with a masters team from the Jewish Community Center, Marblehead, Mass., as well as coaching a synchronized swim team for older women.

It was rainy and overcast on Monday afternoon and Mrs. Wing was interviewed garbed in sweat suit and hooded jacket warming her self before an open fireplace at the Sanford Bath and Tennis Club following a workout in the chilly waters of the pool.

Mrs. Wing, as graceful in the water as a fish, has been swimming since she was a year and a half old. She was living in Chicago at the time. "The first body of water I saw was Lake Michigan," she explained, "I toddled across the beach, waded into the water and started paddling for Canada. My mother, who was frightened to death of the water, screamed until somebody came into the lake and pulled me ashore. I hadn't gotten very far."

She thinks Sanford's Golden Age Games is a good idea. "I tell everybody about them and some of them do enter," she said. "Once they get into it, they like it. I think so much of it that we had our own Golden Age Games at Marblehead in May, based on the rules here."

She said about 200 persons entered their first Games there.

Mrs. Wing said there is definitely a growing interest in synchronized swimming among older Americans. "At Santa Clara, for the first year there were more swimmers over 40 than under 40."

When she was a girl swimming for was females was an upstream battle. When she moved to the Boston area in 1923, there was only one swimming pool in all of New England that permitted women, the Boston YWCA. "Actually the 'Y' didn't open until 1928, when I was 19 years old," she added. "From where I lived I had to ride a subway and a street car for three hours just for the chance to swim for half an hour."

Mrs. Wing earned her junior life saving certificate at the age of 12 and her senior at age 18. Competition back then for girls was a dirty word back then and she had to content herself with playing in the water and watching the boys race.

After earning a physical education degree at Sergeant College, which did not have a swimming pool, she went to Wellesley for her Masters degree, which did. After that she went into Y work.

But it wasn't until after a hitch in the Coast Guard when she returned to Boston in 1946 that she heard about a new sport called synchronized swimming.

She was directing a pool at the Boston Y at the time so she looked into it and liked what she saw. That year she staged a few water shows and four years later helped stage the Boston area's first real synchronized swim meet.

After getting married in 1951, she dropped out of the sport for about 15 years, but in the mid-60's eased back by doing some judging.

"I was happy to do it because judging was about the only thing relating to the sport that people my age could do," she said. In the early 70s she got the idea that there should be a group for 18 and over synchronized swimmers. It was largely through her efforts that the first Masters synchronized swimming meet was held in America in Reading, Pa. It attracted a grand total of 22 competitors.

For the past 10 years, arthritis has been an unwelcome visitor in Mrs. Wing's life, but swimming every day, doing stretching exercises, and working out on Nautilus equipment helps.

Fight Or Switch?

Sanford Told To Decide On Blacks' Suit

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

The question posed to Sanford city commissioners Monday evening was clear. Do they want to fight or switch?

The city commission must make a decision by next Monday's meeting on whether they want to fight a law suit brought in federal court by five blacks or settle the issue by changing the at-large election of commissioners to election by districts. Under the district mode, persons within those districts would elect a representative from that district.

Attorneys Ned Julian Jr. and Bill Colbert told the commission U.S. District Court Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich in Orlando wants to have the trial completed prior to the December, 1984, city elections.

And she means it, Julian said. He explained this means that the court is telling the city it needs to take a "pragmatic and practical approach to the case."

The court asked for a decision from the city within 30 days and the time is up before the commission meets again on Nov. 21.

If the city settles the suit, it could mean expansion of the five member commission to seven members and election of all or part of that number by the voters within designated geographic districts in the city.

If the city decides to battle the issue in court, it could cost upwards of $250,000 and might go all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Julian and Colbert urged the commission to make a decision on which way it wants to go by next Monday's 7 p.m. city commission meeting or earlier if possible.

Julian said David M. Lipman, attorney for the plaintiffs in the Sanford suit, has told him that if a settlement of the suit has real potential "it will assure minority representation on the city commission."

City Attorney Colbert, who said his partner, Julian, will be assisting him in the case, added that while a year to prepare for the suit sounds like a long time, it really isn't.

The case is complex, will require considerable research and perhaps one or more trips to Selma, Ala. which won a similar suit in the federal court in recent months, Colbert said.

The class-action suit against the city was filed in late September by black residents: Alfred G. DeLattibeaudiere.

E.N. Smith, Samuel Wright Jr., R. Fleicher McGann and Hannah Pinkney "on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated." Both Wright and DeLattibeaudiere were unsuccessful city commission candidates in the past.

The suit charges that the city of Sanford has a long history of discrimination against and disenfranchisement of qualified black voters and denial to black voters and candidates of equal access to the political process.

It also says that under the city's present system of electing a city commission, not one black citizen in the entire history of the city has ever been elected to any seat on the city commission and blacks in the city "have suffered from racial discrimination perpetuated by the elected officials and others in various areas of public affairs."

Julian said in recent months, similar lawsuits have been won against the cities of Pensacola and Ft. Myers. In the Pensacola case, he said, that city was ordered to create a 10-member city commission composed of seven members elected from districts and three at large.

In the Ft. Myers case, the city was ordered to create a seven member commission with two elected at large and five from within districts.

Julian said in the Pensacola case, the city had to pay $200,000 for the plaintiffs' attorney plus court costs, while the cost to Ft. Myers was $125,000 plus $47,000 in court costs.

Colbert and Julian said if the city decides to pursue the issue in the court, they would like to go to Selma, in Dallas County, Ala. to research the court files on that case, Julian said the key to Selma winning appeared to be the word "access." The court said that minorities did have access to the electoral process there. However, that case is currently under appeal, he added.

Sanford's defense, if the decision is made to go through the court process, would key in on that word and thus would require a complete and documented history of the city showing that minorities did have access to the voting process.

Mayor Lee P. Moore advised his colleagues to consider the case carefully and to be ready to give the attorneys their instructions Monday night. He told Colbert and Julian that if commissioners indicate they have come to a decision prior to Monday, he will call a special meeting.

Crash Kills Woman, 29

A 29-year-old Sanford woman was killed when her car collided head-on with a pickup truck in Longwood late Monday.

Martha Y. Chadwick, of 2405 Stevens Ave., was killed when her northbound compact car crossed the center line on County Road 427 and collided with a southbound pickup truck just north of Myrtle Lake Hills Road at about 10 p.m., police said.

The truck driver, Ralph Illick, 23, of Altamonte Springs, suffered minor injuries and was treated in the emergency room of Florida Hospital North in Altamonte Springs and released, a hospital spokesman said.

Miss Chadwick was working as a sales clerk in Burdines department store in the Altamonte Mall and was driving home after work when the accident occurred, said her sister, Marilee McGibbon.

Miss Chadwick graduated last May from the University of Central Florida with a degree in physical education and had also been working as a substitute teacher in several Seminole County schools, including Southside Elementary School.

Mrs. McGibbon said her sister was a "very outgoing, loving" person, who was fond of jogging, tennis, swimming and all water sports.

Her death brings to 24 the number of persons killed on Seminole County roads so far this year.

Compromise Halts Sewage Plant Expansion

The Seminole County Board of Adjustment voted 3-1 Monday for a compromise that halts a planned expansion of the Lynwood sewage treatment plant.

The compromise provides an alternative sewage treatment system for two developers in the area.

The compromise was approved by representatives of the Lynwood Homeowners Association although board member Tom Kanelis, president of the Seminole County League of Civic Associations, cast the lone dissenting vote, claiming the members of the homeowners group did not have a chance to vote on the compromise.

But County Environmental Services Director Ken Hooper said the compromise "should settle the issue. We've agreed to it, the developers have agreed to it and the homeowners have agreed to it."

The Lynwood Homeowners Association had opposed county plans to expand the sewage treatment plant to handle 300,000 gallons of sewage per day, up from the present 85,000-gallon capacity. They threatened to sue the county if the expansion was permitted. County commissioners approved the expansion late in 1982 to serve developments planned by Florida Residential Communities and Cardinal Industries in the Bear Lake area near Casselberry. In the agreement, the developers were to foot the bill for the expansion.

When work began in August the plant's neighbors protested, claiming the expansion violated a zoning agreement made when the plant was constructed in 1961.

During the three months since the protests began, a variety of complaints were made about the county's maintenance of the sewage treatment plant. Residents charged that the fence surrounding the facility had fallen into disrepair, plants in the buffer zone surrounding the plant had died and that effluent from the plant was seeping into the area's drinking water.

Monday night's compromise addressed most of the complaints.

The county agreed not to expand the plant and to repair the percolation ponds already there. Service for the two developments, which will have about 650 units, will be provided by connecting to Sanlando Utilities system.

Consumers Overcharged For Natural Gas: Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumers may have paid millions of dollars too much for natural gas because the government failed to detect illegal overcharges, a new congressional report says.

In releasing the report Monday, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., pointed the finger of blame at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which oversees natural gas pricing laws.

"Through lack of interest or sheer incompetence due to primitive data collection and methods, (FERC) may simply have failed to enforce (Natural Gas Policy Act) ceiling prices for older vintages of old gas," said Dingell, who heads the House Energy and Commerce panel that sponsored the report.

A staff member said the overcharges could run into the millions of dollars.

New ERA Clears Hurdle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Equal Rights Amendment, which died three states short of ratification last year, has been approved by a House subcommittee and is slated for a House vote next week in its second time around.

"That's one little hurdle," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary's civil and constitutional rights subcommittee, which voted 6-2 Monday to send the amendment to the full committee.

Edwards expects approval by the Judiciary Committee Wednesday and by the House Nov. 16 or 17, Congress plans to adjourn Nov. 18.

Edwards defeated attempts in subcommittee to amend the proposed ERA to exempt its influence in the areas of government-funded abortions, drafting of women and preferential treatment of veterans. He believes he also has sufficient support to fend off changes in the House.

Greyhound Ultimatum

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Greyhound, beset by a strike that has stopped its buses nationwide, issued workers an ultimatum to return to their jobs by next Monday. Union leaders threatened a massive employee stock sellout in retaliation for proposed pay cuts.

The threat came Monday after Greyhound gave the 12,700 striking employees one week to return to their jobs and ran ads in 158 newspapers across the country listing salaries of Greyhound workers beside lower "average" salaries of other carriers.

Workers struck Greyhound last Thursday after rejecting a proposal that called for wage cuts of 9.5 percent. Union officials insist the offer would cut salaries and benefits by 20 to 25 percent.

E.B. Franklin, international vice president of the Amalgamated Transit Union, suggested employees sell their stock to pressure Greyhound officials into taking cuts in their own salaries.

FBI Investigating Capitol Explosion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Explosives placed in a corridor of the Capitol blew up 30 feet from the Senate chamber Monday night, and a group opposed to U.S. military action in Grenada and Lebanon claimed responsibility for the blast.

There were no injuries.

The explosion about 11 p.m. blew a door off its hinges and shattered furniture and woodwork outside the office of Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, which is near the Mansfield Room on the second floor.

Often the room is crowded with people attending evening receptions, but this night, there were few people in the Capitol. Senators who had planned to work late into the night went home almost four hours before the explosion after making progress on a military spending bill.

A United Press International reporter two blocks from the Capitol when the explosion went off said it sounded like a clap of thunder. Smoke wafted from a second-floor window, but there was no damage visible from outside.

Police quickly sealed off the entire Capitol and, with the help of dogs, were still searching the building early today for evidence of any bombs. The Senate resumed its work as scheduled at 9 a.m.

Just before the explosion, a caller to the Washington Post warned that a bomb in the Capitol would explode because of U.S. military action in Grenada and Lebanon.

The caller, in a tape-recorded message, claimed to represent the Armed Resistance Unit and said the Capitol had been bombed in support of all nations' struggles against U.S. military aggression.

A Post reporter immediately called Capitol police and was told: "Something has just gone off. I have to go."

FBI officials who took charge of the investigation declined any comment on the incident or the group that claimed responsibility for the blast.

One congressman who was working in the House side of the Capitol when the explosion went off, Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa., said he rushed across to the Senate side and found a door blown off and some damaged woodwork and furniture — damage he said would be consistent with the effects of "two to five sticks of dynamite." He did not see any fire.

Murphy said "he could smell the distinct smell of explosive powder."

"The damage was considerable, but it's repairable," he said, noting that none of the many statues in the area were damaged.

An aide to Byrd said the sergeant at arms told the senator the explosion in the Capitol, the seat of U.S. government since the 1850's, "blew the front door off his office."

The incident came several weeks after security in the Capitol was beefed up because a man was found in the House gallery with explosives strapped to his waist, and is sure to revive concerns about the safety of the 435 congressmen and 100 senators who work in the building with hundreds of staff members.

"I think we definitely have a security problem," Murphy said. "The only alternative is to wall it off like the Kremlin. We can't do that. In a free country, you're free to come in and out of your Capitol."

City Slashes Proposed 'Growth' Fees; Utility Rates Will Rise

By Donna Estes
 Herald Staff Writer

Bowing to pressure from area developers, the Sanford City Commission has slashed the impact fees it planned to levy on new homes to pay the costs of providing utility services to new residents.

As a result, rates for all city utility customers will be going up. However, City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles said he didn't know when or by how much rates would increase.

The commission Monday night voted unanimously to cut the proposed impact fee from $1,425 to $550 per single-family home. In addition, the proposed fee was cut drastically for builders of apartment housing or condominiums and duplexes. The new fees will go into effect Jan. 1.

The impact fee is to be levied in addition to the regular connection charge for water and sewer service of $550 per unit, which covers city costs.

Under the new rate, scheduled for final approval at the commission's Nov. 14 meeting, developers and builders will pay the regular connection fee until Dec. 31. On Jan. 1, they will pay the $550 per single-family home connection fee plus a $550-per-unit impact fee. The total amount to be paid to the city per single-family home will be $1,100.

That's $825 less than what Knowles and the city staff had recommended.

Knowles objected vigorously to the cuts, saying the city now won't have the money necessary for expanding the sewer and water systems to meet the demands of growth. Increases in rates to all the utility system customers will now be necessary, Knowles said.

He said that the funds from the impact fees would have been used only for growth needs and did not take into account the money which will be necessary to pay for improvements and modifications to the city's Poplar Avenue sewer plant as required by the state Department of Environmental Regulation.

Long-time Sanford developer and builder A.K. Shoemaker Jr., spokesman for the city's developers, said while he was sympathetic to the increased costs the city is experiencing, the entire burden should not be placed on builders.

"I feel the cost is too much at one time," he said.

Using a 48-unit apartment building as an example, Shoemaker said under the current schedule, sewer and water connections fees would cost about $7,300 while under the proposed schedule the cost, including the $1,425 proposed impact fee, would be $73,000.

Shoemaker said the new fees could wipe out many developers' profit margin.

Shoemaker also said that it is not fair to charge multi-family units the same fee as that levied against single-family homes since apartment dwellers do not use as much water as single-family homeowners.

Commissioners apparently agreed and decided to charge an impact fee of $550 for the first unit in each multi-family structure, to reduce the impact cost to $275 on the second unit and $137.50 on the third and subsequent units.

Knowles said the city is expecting a 35 percent growth in population in Sanford over the next 10 years, which translates into about 2,924 units of new housing.

He said if the recommended impact fee is reduced it will mean that new housing will have to pick up a higher impact cost in the future or that all residents in the city will have to pay the costs of new development.

Commissioner Milton Smith, who suggested the compromise, also suggested that the commission consider adding another $550 in impact fees per single-family home in June or July.

Commissioner David Farr said that the 35 percent anticipated growth over the next decade is too low a projection. He said 50 percent would be a truer prediction. If this is the case, the impact fee of $550 per single-family home and the impact fees for multi-family structures will bring in sufficient money to pay the costs of expanding the system to meet the needs of growth, Farr said.

Arrest May Break Up Geneva Area Burglary Ring

Authorities have arrested a 26-year-old Geneva man in what they believe may be the first step in breaking up a burglary ring that has plagued the Geneva area in recent months.

Wheeler Harold Goodenough, of Cochran Road, who was charged with grand theft in connection with the theft of a boat and trailer, was released from the Seminole County jail Monday after paying $500 bond.

On Aug. 18, William Young, 66, of Midway, left the boat and trailer parked on State Road 46 east of Sanford after a tire on the trailer went flat, according to a Seminole County sheriff's report.

The boat was recovered on Sept. 15 in a citrus grove on Cochran Road no far from Goodenough's residence, the report said.

Property, including livestock, has been stolen from a number of homes in the Geneva area in recent months, according to Capt. Jay Leman of the sheriff's department, who added, "we think a burglary ring has been operating in the area."

Leman said Goodenough was arrested after a long investigation as a result of information supplied by sources.

"We think we're on the brink of breaking the back of the ring. We hope to start recovering some of the stolen property soon," Leman said.

GROCERY ROBBED

Two men grabbed $350 in cash and food stamps out of the cash register of a Sanford food store Monday and ran out the door.

One of the men got in the check-out line at the Park and Shop store at Park Avenue and 25th Street at 12:48 p.m. to pay for a pack of chewing gum, a Sanford police report said.

When the clerk opened the cash register, another man approached and both men shoved the clerk aside, grabbed the money and food stamps from the register, ran out the front door, jumped into a car and drove off, the report said.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Dissatisfied Client Guns Down Attorney

ENGLEWOOD (UPI) — A prominent attorney was gunned down in his office by a client, and his law partner apparently was one of four others the man intended to kill, the law partner said. He survived by hiding under his desk.

A man identified as George R. Barbour, 52, walked past a receptionist into the office of Glenn W. Phipps Jr. shortly after noon Monday. He allegedly pulled a rifle from under a red and blue print towel he was carrying and opened fire, police said.

Phipps, 36, was struck several times in the chest and died at the scene, said Sarasota County sheriff's deputy James Wilson.

Barbour, who was held without bond and charged with first-degree murder, apparently was upset by the way Phipps was handling the estate of his mother, who died in February, deputies said.

Shuttle Makes Its Move

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — The space shuttle Columbia was moved from the towering Vehicle Assembly Building to its ocean-side launch pad at the Kennedy Space Center in predawn darkness today, to be readied for a Nov. 28 launch.

The shuttle began its slow 3 1/2-mile journey ahead of schedule Monday night and was secured on the launch pad by 6:30 a.m. today, space agency spokesman Mark Hess said.

Columbia was removed from the launch pad Oct. 17 because engineers decided to replace a booster rocket nozzle they believed might malfunction. The launch date was postponed from Oct. 28 to Nov. 28.

The upcoming nine-day mission features Spacelab, an $800 million orbiting laboratory built by the European Space Agency. Several of the 72 experiments planned for the mission that required special seasonal conditions were scrubbed because the launch was postponed.

Judge On Trial

TAMPA (UPI) — Opening arguments were scheduled today in the criminal trial of suspended Hillsborough County Circuit Judge Richard Leon.

A jury of four women and two men was seated late Monday.

Leon is charged with perjury, bribery, unlawful compensation and official misconduct in connection with a cocaine trafficking case involving the daughter of a friend.

Leon is accused of asking former Hillsborough Circuit Judge Arden Mays Merkle to change the drug sentence of Alisa Deen Avery, daughter of Arthur Avery Sr., after he had sentenced her to three years in prison as part of a plea bargain agreement worked out with prosecutors. After conferring with Leon, Merkle recalled Miss Avery to court and changed the sentence to probation.

Leon faces up to 25 years in prison if convicted on all counts.

Deadly EDB Found

Contaminated Well Closed; Users Not In Danger

APOPKA (UPI) — EDB contamination forced the closing of a well and made restrictions on water use likely, but residents who drank the pesticide-laced water are in no immediate danger, authorities said.

The well at Errol Estates subdivision was discovered Monday to be tainted by ethylene dibromide, said John F. McGarry, director of the Orange County Health Department.

McGarry said water in the Errol Estates well, one of six water sources in Apopka, contained .2 parts per billion of EDB. That is above the recommended safe level of .1 parts per billion but far below the concentrations of up to 15 parts per billion found in some private wells, he said.

A ban on watering lawns and washing cars is likely, McGarry said. The Apopka City Commission would have to order such a restriction.

McGarry estimated a person would have to drink about two quarts of the Errol Estates water each day for 50 years for it to cause cancer.

"That's actually such a low level there that if people drank it for another three or four months, in my opinion it wouldn't be a health hazard," McGarry said.

He said the well was shut down as a precaution because good water was available nearby.

EDB, which federal environmental officials say is the strongest carcinogen ever identified, was banned by the federal Environmental Protection Agency earlier this year.

Apopka's was the fifth city water system in Florida discovered to be contaminated by the pesticide, which has been linked to cancer, nerve damage and sterility since studies began nearly a decade ago.

Hundreds of private wells have been tainted by EDB. Of 193 wells tested in Orange County, 37 showed traces of EDB, McGarry said. Most of those were private wells and "some of those levels were quite high," he said.

A golf course is located near Errol Estates, a 14,000-acre development about 10 miles north of Orlando where some 1,000 people live, a spokesman for the subdivision said.

McGarry said EDB has been used at the golf course as well as in orange groves nearby.

State laboratories have been testing 200 water samples a week since the end of July, when fears of EDB-tainted water first came to light.

Poverty Report Called 'A Sham'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Budget director David Stockman was immediately attacked for telling congressmen the U.S. poverty rate — estimated at 15 percent of the population — actually is only 9.6 percent if non-cash government benefits, like Medicare, are counted as income.

"I think your report is a sham!" Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., told Stockman after he presented a report on poverty to two House Ways and Means subcommittees late last week. "It's full of erroneous conclusions and statistics."

Stockman called Matsui's charge a "rather reckless comment."

Stockman argued that President Reagan's economic policies have not hurt the poor and will actually help them as the economy gets stronger.

"Substantial progress has been made during the past 23 years in reducing poverty," Stockman's report said. "It is 15 percent in 1982, only when the $107 billion in non-cash assistance provided during the year is valueless."

"The official poverty count based on money income substantially overstates the rate of poverty because it ignores $107 billion in in-kind medical, housing, food and other aid that tangibly raises the living standard of many low-income families."

Stockman said when non-cash assistance is counted as income, "the rate is reduced to 9.6 percent. That is still too high. We are making steady progress in reducing the true rate of poverty."

After repeated criticism from House Democrats of Reagan's economic policies and how they affect the poor, Stockman became testy and said he would like to testify again in the spring of 1984.

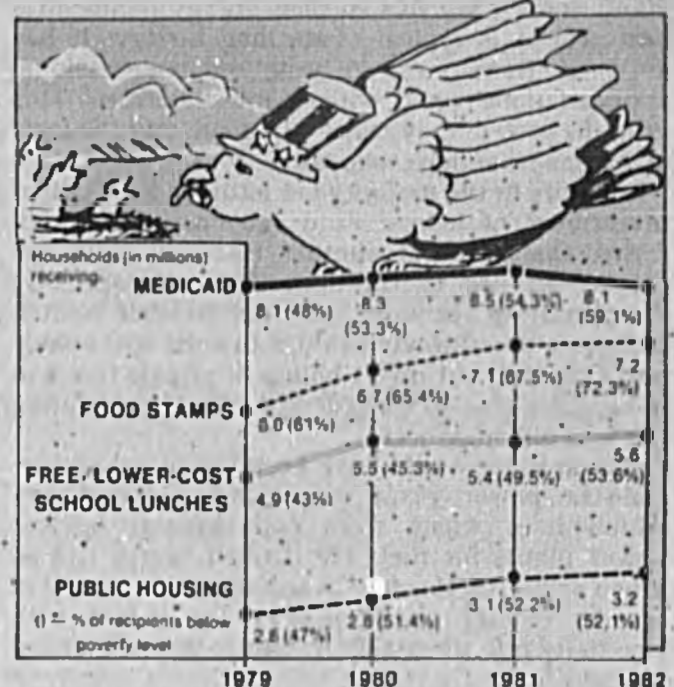

"I am absolutely confident the poverty rate is going to decline dramatically," he said.

Matsui wryly noted Stockman said in 1981 the unemployment rate — currently over 9 percent — would be only 6.5 percent in 1984 under the Reagan economic program.

Stockman said Social Security and Medicare programs "have nearly solved the problem" of poverty among the elderly, and that 85 percent of the poor in America are either single females with dependent children or adults age 25-64.

The Census Bureau estimates that 15 percent of Americans now live at or below the poverty level, which in 1982 was $9,862 a year for a family of four, $6,500 for a couple, and $4,600 a year for a single person.

Several Democratic members noted Stockman counted Medicare benefits as $1,500 in income for the elderly — thus boosting many of them above the poverty level.

Last year, 24.1 million U.S. households received non-cash aid — the same total as in 1981. That made 1982 the first year in which the total failed to grow. However, a greater percentage of these households are now ranked below the poverty level, a trend that has grown markedly since 1979.

Toyota Selling For 94 Cents...A Pound

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Would you buy a 1974 Ford Fairlane for 8 cents a pound? How about a 1977 Toyota for 94 cents a pound? Those are the going rates from used car dealer Ralph Delmonaco.

Delmonaco said he had to take some action after business had dropped off sharply for four months at his lot. While he once sold about 22 cars a month, the pace was down to eight a month before he started charging by the pound.

At Delmonaco's car lot, a potential buyer can pick up a 1975 Dodge station wagon for 32 cents a pound. Or someone can drive off on a 1976

Honda motorcycle with only 3,600 miles on it — for $1.91 a pound.

Drivers who stop at the traffic light in front of his lot on State Road 7 usually point and stare, and almost always smile.

"In this business, we'll do whatever we have to do to sell a car," said Delmonaco, a 53-year-old former accordion teacher.

Delmonaco concedes his by-the-pound price structure is only a gimmick. But he says it's a gimmick that works. Since he began proffering cars by the pound two weeks ago, the sales pace has doubled.

He has sold a 2,015-pound 1977 Toyota for 94 cents a pound. A 1974 Pinto went for 52 cents for each of its 2,451 pounds and a 3,220-pound 1974 Dodge sold for 27 cents a pound.

The cheapest car on the lot is a 1974 Ford Fairlane priced at only 8 cents a pound — $250.48.

The gimmick probably has not convinced anyone to buy a car they wouldn't have bought anyway, Delmonaco said, but it has attracted attention.

"In business, you have to be innovative," said Delmonaco. "I think it's fun."

They Think There Is No Tomorrow

The Senate has pulled the plug on the Clinch River breeder reactor. The narrowness of the 56-40 vote to kill this nuclear energy demonstration project is typical of its long history. It has survived from year to year on congressional appropriations voted with scant majorities. This time the project may be lost for good, and the logic of the Senate action escapes us.

Senators in the majority are letting a $1.7 billion investment of federal funds go down the drain rather than commit another $1.5 billion to the project to see it through. This is especially disappointing because electric utilities which recognize the ultimate value of breeder technology had agreed to put up $1 billion in private funds to reduce the cost to the government of completing the $4.2 billion project.

Clinch River would have been the first commercial-size power plant employing a technology which uses waste from conventional nuclear power plants for fuel. The United States has so much spent nuclear fuel in storage that a family of breeder reactors could provide the nation with electricity into the indefinite future without a need for more fuel.

This extraordinary feature of the technology has led France, West Germany, Japan and the Soviet Union to launch breeder programs which are in various stages of progress. They see the day when limitations on uranium supplies could overtake their conventional nuclear plants.

Our own Senate, however, prefers to think there's no tomorrow. There is surplus capacity among the nation's electric utilities. Why worry about energy when the world is awash in oil?

The demise of Clinch River surrenders the leadership in breeder technology to other nations. With it goes much of the ability of the United States to influence the direction of nuclear non-proliferation efforts as they involve breeder reactors.

Ironically, the first electricity ever generated by nuclear fission came from experimental Breeder Reactor I in Idaho in 1951. Breeder II, also in Idaho, has been operating for more than 20 years and regularly exceeds the national average among nuclear power plants in reliability and performance. Having pioneered the technology, we're now throwing it away. The Senate vote may come back to haunt a future generation.

Cutting Costs?

When candidate Ronald Reagan pledged to reduce the size and cost of government, he must not have had the White House payroll in mind.

According to figures supplied by the Reagan administration to a House subcommittee, the president appointed 107 people to upper-echelon jobs during the first two years of his term.

Jimmy Carter named 38 in the first half of his term.

Each of the Reagan staff members earned at least $63,800 as of January, 1983. The minimum figure for the Carter appointees of comparable rank was $47,500 as of January, 1979.

Of course, inflation has to be taken into account. Still, when the number of senior staff members is roughly tripled, and their base pay is raised more than 34 percent, it's not exactly the sort of frugality that Mr. Reagan's tough rhetoric suggested.

It's hard to see what Mr. Reagan had in mind, if anything, when he pledged to trim governmental costs.

In both nominal and real terms, the government is spending more today than it did under President Carter.

Federal spending now accounts for about one-fourth of the gross national product, the highest level since World War II.

"Out there by the bird feeder — is that a junkie or a junkie?"

By Donna Estes

The turnout of students and parents at last week's "Chemical People" television show and forum at various public schools in the county was good, but not good enough, according to Patti Brantley.

The second in the series of television programs, citing the problem of today's young people and others with addiction to chemicals, not only drugs but alcohol as well, hosted by first lady, Nancy Reagan, is slated for 8 p.m., Wednesday on public broadcasting's Channel 24 in this area.

As important as the television show is, says Mrs. Brantley, that students and parents interested in the subject congregate at the high schools in the county with the exception of Oviedo High or at Winter Springs Elementary beginning at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday. A panel with expertise on drug and alcohol addiction will be available to answer questions and the television show will be seen as part of the program.

Meanwhile, President Reagan has signed a congressional resolution proclaiming this week National Drug Abuse Education Week.

U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Lakeland, who initiated the resolution in the Senate, and Mrs. Chiles participated in the signing ceremony in the White House. Mrs.

Reagan, working to spotlight teenage drug problems, also attended.

Seminole County's voter registration rolls have now passed the 80,000 mark. Elections Supervisor Sandy Goard said that as of Sept. 30, the county had 80,858 qualified voters and many more registered in October. Those figures will be available later during the week.

Registration activity has been high, she said, for the past three months. Some of the interest can be attributed, she said, to upcoming city elections in Altamonte Springs, Longwood and Casselberry. In addition, she said the Democratic Party has an on-going registration at Flea World in Sanford every weekend. And the Republican Party on a recent weekend registered 500 new voters.

Incidentally, persons can register at all the city halls in the county (with the exception of Sanford) and at Mrs. Goard's courthouse office or her office at the Interstate Mall.

Some of the activity remains a puzzle, however, such as the large number of requests she is getting from Seminole Countians who are in the military and stationed all over the country. The requests are for absentee ballots when there is no countywide election this year.

"We can accept the requests and hold them until the next countywide election," Mrs. Goard said.

The next countywide election will be the presidential preferential primary on March 13, 1984.

Mrs. Goard said she understands the federal government had a workshop in South Carolina recently, and as a result there is a push to get the military registered. The military is being reminded how to go about requesting absentee ballots.

Meanwhile, local candidates who will be running for office next year are already raising campaign funds and filing regular reports on campaign contributions with Mrs. Goard's office.

So far announced candidates include: Fred Streetman, a Republican from Longwood, who is running for incumbent; Robert G. "Bud" Feather's county commission seat (Feather has not yet announced); County Commissioner Barbara Christensen, a Republican from Casselberry and Carl Patin, her Democratic challenger also from Casselberry; incumbent Sheriff John Polk, Democrat from Sanford, and his Republican opponent, Ed Standley; and Mrs. Goard.

Implant May Help Deaf Hear

By Lidia Wasowicz
UPI Science Writer

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — An implant that electrically stimulates the auditory nerve may restore the hearing of people too deaf to be helped even with the most powerful existing hearing aids, a noted researcher says.

Some 200,000 Americans are profoundly deaf, unable to hear a single sound.

With the help of experts from the Stanford School of Engineering, Dr. Blair Simmons, professor of surgery at the Stanford Medical School, is developing ear implants in which electrodes are inserted into the pea-sized inner ear or through the inner ear into the hearing nerve itself.

Through speech coding programmed into an attached microchip, the electrodes send electrical stimuli representing various sounds. What the patient "hears" is quite different from regular speech sounds registering in healthy ears — "It's tinny, distorted, sort of like having the radio dial in between two stations," Simmons said. "But with practice people can learn to use this type of code."

He said the implant, used only on profoundly deaf patients, has proven especially effective in improving lip reading "in which you 'hear' only what you see" and in enabling the deaf to "hear" the doorbell ringing, dishwasher stopping, dog barking and "other sounds that make their lives much easier."

Some 300 Americans have single-electrode implants, although it's not clear how many of the devices are working properly. The Federal Food and Drug Administration is considering approval of the single-electrode device.

There are three Americans with multi-electrode implants — two at Stanford, one at the University of Utah.

The Australians, who have implanted 22 electrodes, are about a year ahead of the American effort, he said.

"The toughest thing is to figure out what cues in the speech signal we normally use to listen to — not all people choose the same cues in the same speech sound to identify it — and code them on these electrodes," said Simmons, who has been experimenting with the implants since 1964.

Each electrode responds to a different resonant characteristic of sound, such as low-pitched thumping on a table or the high-pitched tinkle of a bell.

With a single electrode, he said, "you can code what's going on with the vocal chords and part of what's going on in the back of the throat. Very low vowels such as 'o' versus front vowels like 'e' can be easily distinguished."

The Press Fights Back

NEW YORK (NEA) — The furor over the Pentagon's failure to notify the media of the invasion of Grenada in advance, or at least to send war correspondents ashore with the first waves of attackers, raises important questions involving the celebrated freedom of the press. Walter Cronkite, Sam Donaldson and other critics of the Pentagon seem to think that nothing has happened to change the traditional rules of the game as these were laid down and observed in (say) World War II. Others are inclined to think that the situation has changed radically, and that (to borrow Abraham Lincoln's formulation) as our case is new, so must we think anew and act anew.

Spokesmen for the media argue that, unless independent reporters are allowed to cover military operations at their own risk, the American people will be deprived of a vital source of reliable information concerning such operations. As The New York Times put it editorially: "Democracies depend on trust, and trust in war, small or large, depends on credible witnesses." Without knowledgeable reporters on hand to sift the wheat from the chaff, what is to prevent generals and admirals from misrepresenting the situation, covering up their blunders, and just generally doing whatever they please?

That's one way to put it, but not by a long shot the only way. Up until the Vietnam War, the United States managed to maintain a reasonably cohesive society, in which the media and successive presidential administrations held each other in a fair amount of respect and possessed a substantial degree of common purpose. The correspondents who accompanied Eisenhower and Montgomery ashore during the invasion of Normandy certainly wished the operation well, and believed that Hitler's overthrow was an objective worth a considerable expenditure of both blood and treasure.

By the time of the Vietnam War, for reasons that are interesting and highly important but not relevant to this discussion, that state of affairs had changed radically. Rightly or wrongly, a substantial segment of American society, including a large proportion of its media, had become deeply disaffected.

The government, in both the Johnson and Nixon administrations, was now viewed by these people as The Enemy: a bunch of cynical Machiavellians whose plots deserved to be exposed and thwarted. Far from sharing a common purpose with such monsters, many reporters — under the new rules of what was called "adversary journalism" — felt morally obliged to range themselves against them. By a familiar logical progression, the Vietnam and the North Vietnamese began to seem to our media almost admirable, especially by comparison. The result, as we all know, was a lost war.

Have things changed again, under Mr. Reagan? If they have, nobody has told me about it. Would The New York Times, which has publicly flagellated itself for 20 years for concealing its foreknowledge of the Bay of Pigs invasion, have honored a request for secrecy if it had learned that we were about to invade Grenada? And what obligation, precisely, does the Pentagon have to provide facilities for reporters who are bitterly hostile to its mission and are accompanying our troops only in the high hope of getting some gruesome photographs of American casualties to wave before the folks back home?

Note that I am inquiring about the Pentagon's alleged obligation to provide facilities. If the media want to provide their own facilities, make their way to the front under their own steam, and then report back their tendentious versions of the truth, let 'em — it's a free country.

They're America's Heroes...

It is reported that the recruiting offices of the U.S. Marine Corps are doing a landrush business in the aftermath of the slaughter of 220-plus marines in Beirut and the invasion of an obscure Caribbean island.

We see, thus, that a splash of military excitement still stirs the deepest emotions of many of America's young men. They line up to volunteer after inhaling a strong whiff of the grapeshot, today, as in the first days after Pearl Harbor, and on back in U.S. history. The incidental details of what actually happened in Beirut, where the Marines were murdered in their sleep, doesn't dilute this passionate, resurgent patriotism, tinged with the allure of danger. The dreadfully complex geopolitics of Grenada, into which Marines and Army Rangers charged, doesn't slow the rush of hot martial blood.

The Grenada mission, even at its highest voltage of adventure was to pick up some stranded medical students and arrest a few leftwing pirates and a gang of Cuban construction workers. Of course, it turned out to be much more than that. But, one would think, the prospect of a few days or weeks of international police work shouldn't prompt young men to sign over two to four years of their lives to training for combat, which is still the Marine Corps' specialty.

The American dead of Beirut and Grenada will be buried as heroes who gave their lives for their country. They didn't perish with the wholehearted support of the nation behind them, but with the factions of government squabbling bitterly over whether the complicated policies they were used to implement make any sense. They are not the kind of heroes produced by Belleau Wood or Iwo Jima or Inchon. Their heroism is sadly blurred by the nation's — more precisely, the government's — loss of understanding of what heroism means. They are more like the casualties of Vietnam, whose bravery under fire was slandered or ignored by leftwing ideologues at home and abroad, whose power to make themselves heard was considerably greater than that of those who cared about such old ideals as service to country.

This broad and deep shift in the understanding of what it means to be a member of the armed forces, called suddenly to risk and even surrender one's life may be the greatest tragedy of contemporary American politics. We are not the same country that sent men to fight at Belleau Wood or Normandy, that recognized our heroes, and revered them. Even the Vietnam Memorial in Washington D.C. was contrived as an underhanded slur on the dead. Its grim funeral cast echoing the theme that their lives were wasted.

Japan Trip: Bad Timing Masterpiece

WASHINGTON — Even administration officials privately admit that President Reagan's visit to Japan is a masterpiece of bad timing.

The supposed point of the trip is to repair serious strains in U.S.-Japanese trade. But with parliamentary elections coming up next month, Japanese political leaders won't risk offending powerful domestic constituencies — such as farmers or high-technology workers — by opening the door to American imports.

"You can't have any progress with the Japanese on trade liberalization while they're preparing for December elections," one official told my associate Michael Binstein. "It's really a P.R. trip for the president."

The Japanese market could be a bonanza for U.S. industries struggling to keep the nation's economic recovery alive. But while American workers and businesses suffer from the flood of Japanese goods into this country, only a trickle of U.S. exports is allowed into Japan.

Frustrated trade officials foresee no significant concessions from Japan coming from the president's trip, though the Japanese will try to make it look as if Reagan has achieved something for his pains.

Japan would dearly love to buy Alaskan oil. Since the Japanese are almost entirely dependent on imported energy supplies, this would be a "concession" that would make them appear reasonable trade partners — yet would actually cost them nothing. More importantly, it would pose no threat to Japan's high-tech industries from American competition.

The Japanese are known to be looking for some large U.S. purchase to make before the end of the year, in hopes that Japan's $30 billion trade surplus with the United States will be trimmed a little, or at least not grow alarmingly. This will allow Japanese trade negotiators to minimize American representatives' claims that the current situation is in need of drastic overhaul.

Japan's government-owned monopolies, which control the sale of imported goods and services, are good illustrations of the problems that vex U.S. negotiators. One such monopoly is the Japan Tobacco and Salt Public Corp., which subsidizes growers by purchasing all domestically produced tobacco at three times the world price. At the same time, the Tobacco and Salt Corp. controls the sale of imported cigarettes by using various tariffs to jack the price at least 45 percent over comparable Japanese brands.

U.S. negotiators have identified an almost kabuki-like pattern to the Japanese negotiations. After dragging the talks out at exhausting length, the Japanese finally compromise just enough to prevent U.S. retaliation. Then the concessions are quietly tied up in bureaucratic red tape until a new U.S. or Japanese administration takes power — providing an excuse to start the ritual all over again.

What the United States wants is simply a sporting chance to compete with Japanese industry on somewhere near an equal basis, as Japanese industries do in this country. The Americans are particularly keen to crack the Japanese computer, robotics and agricultural markets, which are either Japanese government monopolies or fiercely protected by high tariffs and/or import restrictions.

What the American negotiators will get is anybody's guess. As U.S. Trade Representative William Brock quipped, "We'll know in about 35 years."

Indictment Could Stall Nuclear Reactor Restart

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Much-delayed plans to restart the damaged reactor at Three Mile Island may be thrown into limbo by a federal grand jury indictment stemming from the 1979 accident at the Pennsylvania nuclear power plant.

Ever since the worst accident in the history of commercial nuclear power severely damaged Three Mile Island's Unit 2 reactor, owners of the facility have been trying to persuade the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to allow restart of the Unit 1 reactor, which was not involved in the mishap.

But several tentative restart schedules announced during the last 18 months by either the NRC or General Public Utilities, which ran the plant through a subsidiary, Metropolitan Edison Co., have been discarded as new problems surfaced.

Monday's indictment of Metropolitan Edison by a federal grand jury culminates a recent series of events that began last May 24, when an NRC official, in an explosive report, told commission members he discovered that plant management falsified records of certain calculations concerning a leaking valve in order to avoid shutting down the reactor for costly repairs.

"I can tell you for a fact that the records were falsified," said Timothy Martin, director of engineering for the NRC regional office in King of Prussia, Pa.

Martin's verbal report to the commissioners came at the same time the NRC was considering a written study that said the commission's staff cannot vouch for "management integrity" at Three Mile Island.

MX Approved; Close Senate Vote Expected On Nerve Gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The powerful MX nuclear missile, subject of countless hours of debate in Congress for the past decade, easily cleared the last major congressional barrier to production of at least 21 of the 10-warhead missiles.

The Senate Monday soundly rejected, 56-37, an amendment by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., to scrap plans to spend

$2.1 billion for building the first 21 of a planned 100 missiles in 1984.

A much closer vote was expected today when Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, offers an amendment to restore $124 million for facilities to produce two controversial new nerve gas weapons. Tower's effort is expected to fail, but only by a couple of votes.

The Senate was expected to wrap up work on the $252.5 billion military spending bill containing the MX and nerve gas funds late today. The House finished work on its $247.3 billion version last week.

The United States has not made lethal chemical weapons since 1969, when President Nixon imposed a unilateral ban on production. U.S.-Soviet talks on banning chemical weapons recessed in 1980, but there has been evidence of Soviet use of toxic weapons in Laos and Afghanistan.

The first missiles are scheduled to be deployed in late 1986 or early 1987 in Minuteman missile silos in Wyoming and western Nebraska.

McKown, Malloy Win Big In Osteen Bridge Bass Tournament

The November edition of the Osteen Bridge Bass tournament was held Sunday under clear skies. A fresh northwest breeze of 15 mile an hour made for a chill factor considerably lower than the recorded 54 degrees, and jackets were definitely the order of the day as the 30 registered boats in the tournaments got off to a good start at 6:18 a.m., which was considered safe light. By weigh-in at 2 p.m., however, the bright sunshine had temperatures in the high seventies.

Throngs of fishermen and interested bystanders crowded the docks and overflowed the area as Dell Abernethy, host of the monthly tournament, called out the weights of each catch.

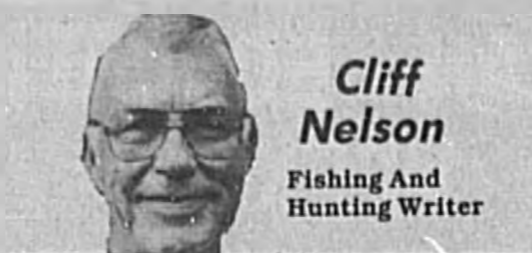

Winner of the Big Bass Trophy was Jeff McKown, with a five pound, twelve and a half ounce lunker, also worth $25 in prize money. However, Jerry Malloy won the Big Bass Money Pot of $265, a separate competition, with an entry weighing five pounds 12 ounces.

Over-all First Place was won by the team of Tim Patterson and Jim Cothorn with a total catch of 15 pounds, 13 and one-quarter ounces. This catch was worth $240 in prize money and the first place trophy.

Second Place honors went to Jeff McKown and John Patient. Their total catch of 12 pounds and one-quarter ounce was worth $180. John Harmon and Carson Byrd teamed up to take Third Place honors and $120 cash with their catch of 11 pounds even. Fourth Place was taken by the team of Doug and Carol Gilley. Their catch of 10 pounds and four ounces was worth $60 cash.

There were 56 fish weighing slightly over 106 pounds caught in the tournament. There were no dead fish checked in, a tribute to the cool temperatures. Seventeen of the 30 boats in the contest reported no fish.

All 56 fish were released into a holding tank containing chemicals to help the fish recover prior to eventual release back into the river.

Cliff Nelson
Fishing and Hunting Writer

Various contestants expressed satisfaction with the tournament which, they stated, was very well organized and managed. They also noted that the winning bass catches, although smaller than in summer months, were very good considering the temperature and wind conditions in November. Most of the contestants interviewed stated that they were eagerly looking forward to the December edition of this popular monthly event.

Fishermen in the prestigious Red Man All

American Bass Championship came to the end of the tournament trail on Kentucky Lake and Lake Barkley, near Gilbertsville, Ky., last month. Dean Starkey, a 32-year-old welder from Peru, Ind., outdistanced 29 other finalists to win the championship and $50,000 first prize money. He captured the top prize in the three day event by catching a tournament limit of seven bass weighing 17 pounds six ounces in the final round of competition.

Tom Snow of Calvary City, Ky., brought in four bass weighing 13 pounds, 15 ounces to earn second place and $15,000. Donald Carrow of Imperial, Mo., took the third place payoff of $10,000 with a limit of seven bass weighing 12 pounds, seven ounces.

Rod McClure of Mt. Vernon, Ky., won the big Bass award for the tourney, catching a 7 pound, 1 oz. fish. He won a 150 hp Mercury outboard motor.

In addition to their championship cash awards, Starkey, Snow, and Carrow were the top scorers in their respective divisions in the eliminations for the tournament. Each won a Ranger bass boat, valued at $10,000, for his divisional win.

The All American represented the top 30 qualifiers from the Red Man Tournament Trail, a circuit designed for nonprofessional bass anglers. About 240 qualifiers representing the 10 divisions of competition in 11 states competed here in the All American finale. The total cash payout was $127,000.

In 1984, the Red Man Tournament Trail will be expanded to 90 tournaments in 29 states, covering roughly the eastern half of the U.S., including Texas. More than 25,000 amateur fishermen are expected to compete in the local tournaments next year.

Because of the high interest created in the local area by the tournaments sponsored by the Red Man Tournament Trail, participation by amateur anglers in Central Florida is expected to increase next year. Who knows? Maybe someone from right here in Central Florida will win the big one next year.

Detroit Tips Giants, 15-9

PONTIAC (UPI) — The Detroit Lions are trying to get a taste of the playoffs again this season — with the help of a cream puff schedule.

Detroit nibbled its way past the New York Giants, 15-9, in the weekly nationally televised Monday night NFL offering to finally reach .500, 5-5, thanks to its fourth victory in five games.

"It wasn't pretty," Detroit coach Monte Clark admitted, "in fact, it was kind of ugly. But it sure was a heckuva lot better than being beautifully."

"It brings us back to .500 and now we're in control of our own destiny because we play the teams ahead of us."

Pro Football

The win pulled Detroit into a second-place tie with Green Bay in the NFC Central Division, a game behind first-place Minnesota, with a trip to winless Houston next on the agenda.

The Vikings are one of only two teams left on the Lions' schedule with a winning record.

New York is now 2-7-1 after failing to win for the sixth game in a row. The Giants offense now consists of the talented rookie toe of Ali Haji-Sheikh, who accounted for all his team's points with field goals from 27, 56 and 35 yards. The 56-yard boot equalled his own club record.

Detroit got the game's only touchdown, a two-yard effort by Billy Sims, a safety and field goals of 35 and 33 yards by Eddie Murray.

Watching the offenses of both clubs was like viewing a match race up a pyramid by inch-worms.

"I don't know know what it was," Clark said. "I warned them before the game. I told them not to expect them to lay down."

"They were a team picked by some to go to the Super Bowl," Clark said in a way that led you to believe he wasn't among that group. "They've got a lot of great individual players, some great running backs."

One of those backs, Rob Carpenter, suffered a sprained knee in the third quarter that put him from the game and the other, Butch Woolfolk from nearby Michigan, had the ball punched out of his grasp by defensive tackle Doug English near the New York 10 in the second quarter.

The ball bounced back into the end zone, where it was fallen upon by New York center Rich Umphrey, who was in turn fallen upon by Detroit defensive tackle Mike Fanning for a Lions safety.

The safety completed a spurt of 12 Detroit points in a span of 8:51 of the first half.

"We tried to play more conservatively than in past games," New York coach Bill Parcells said. "We thought playing that way we could eliminate most of our errors. But obviously we didn't."

"We had a chance to win this game right down to the last couple of minutes," Parcells said, "but we just couldn't execute our passing game. And we made crucial errors both halves."

Bruce McNorton, second-year defensive back who inherited a spot at cornerback last week because of an injury to the starter, intercepted two consecutive throws by Giants quarterback Scott Brunner late in the fourth quarter to snuff out New York possessions. McNorton also had an interception in his first start.

However, a questionable decision by Parcells to pass up a 57-yard field goal try by Haji-Sheikh and go for a punt backfired when Detroit marched 65 yards and Murray kicked his second field goal. That meant New York could not tie with just a field goal.

Big Plays Will Decide FSU-Miami Shootout

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — This week's game between Miami and Florida State will probably be decided by big plays in the closing minutes, coaches for both schools said Monday.

Miami's Howard Schnellenberger and FSU's Bobby Bowden also agreed at a news conference that the game will likely be characterized by wide-open football.

"We're going for all the marbles and you will not see a conservative University of Miami football team," Schnellenberger said.

"We're going to be ready to play football," Bowden declared.

"Is there any doubt when you play Florida State it's going to come stakes for both teams.

For the 9-1 Hurricanes, a win reportedly would clinch an Orange Bowl invitation and give them a potential shot at a national championship.

The Seminoles, 6-3, need the victory to attract bowl attention.

Schnellenberger predicted "the game will be decided in the fourth quarter and will be decided by several big plays."

"The game has potentially high down to the last minute?" Bowden asked, pointing to the nature of his season thus far.

The game is scheduled for 7 p.m. EST Saturday in FSU's Doak Campbell stadium.

Schnellenberger said FSU has the best receivers and running backs of any team Miami will face this year and probably the best offensive line.

He said the uneven Seminole defense has been improving.

"They have the capability of beating us with us playing at our best," the Miami coach said.

"The great matchup is their defense against our offense," Bowden said.

Evans No. 1 Item As Bidding Begins

NEW YORK (UPI) — Let the bidding begin. With the conclusion of Monday's 46-minute, 18-round baseball free-agent re-entry draft, owners of 24 of the 26 major-league clubs reached for their checkbooks while their general managers advised them how seriously to go after the players they drafted.

Who will end up with which team is anybody's guess, although most GM's said they would continue efforts to re-sign their own players. Only two players — outfielders Gene Richards of San Diego and Derrel Thomas of Los Angeles — were guaranteed to go elsewhere as their rights were not retained by their 1983 clubs. Richards was selected by four teams and Thomas by seven.

San Francisco third baseman Darrell Evans, who clubbed 30 home runs this year, was picked by 17 teams and Pittsburgh's sidearming reliever Kent

Baseball

Tekulve, who notched a 1.64 ERA with 18 saves, was chosen by 12. Both players are 36.

Two teams, the New York Mets and Minnesota Twins, opted not to enter the market for the 45 free agents.

Al Campanis, vice president for player personnel of the Los Angeles Dodgers, said his club would moderately seek to sign the four players he drafted — pitcher Dan Schatzeder and infielders Denny Walling, Enos Cabell and Evans.

"We have not been very heavy into the re-entry draft, and we just are thinking in the way of protecting a need," Campanis said. "If we can sign these players or a player or two, then we will go into it. We're not going to go into any auction bidding."

Tekulve is classified as a Type A player because he was in the top 20 percent statistically at his position over the past two years. Should he be signed by another club, his 1983 team — Pittsburgh — would thus have to be compensated with an amateur draft choice plus a professional player selected from a pool of non-protected players.

Pirates executive vice president Harding Peterson said he didn't expect to go broke trying to sign Tekulve since he thinks he has another pretty fair reliever in Cecilie Guante.

Four other pitchers — Doug Bair, Dennis Lamp, Tom Underwood and Milt Wilcox — among the 45 free agents were also Type A players and two players — Manny Trillo and Ruppert Jones — were Type B or among the top 30 percent, meaning their 1983 club would be compensated with two amateur draft choices.

Evans was exempt from such classification because he has more than 12 years of credited service. Players who previously went through the draft were also exempt.

Players selected by fewer than four teams are free to sign with any club. Each team is allowed to sign three players.

The next most popular player among the major league clubs was the New York Yankees' unhappy fireballing reliever, 32-year-old Rich Gossage, who was chosen by 11 teams. Since he has expressed his desire to leave New York, it was thought the Yankees might not retain negotiating rights to him, but they did.

The Yankees, in the past an active draft participant, chose only Evans while the World Series champion Baltimore Orioles selected seven.

"We always draft with the idea in mind that if we sign one of these players they will complement our roster," said Orioles general manager Hank Peters, "and that's the reason we draft 'em. You never know what might happen."

"Gossage is an excellent finishing-type pitcher, one that any ballclub would have to be interested in. Realistically, however, if there is a bidding contest we probably will drop out."

The Seattle Mariners, who had the worst record in baseball in 1983 at 60-102, picked 11 players. Rod Carew, the 38-year-old seven-time American League batting champion reportedly seeking a three-year contract at $1.5 million annually, had no takers although his club, the California Angels, retained rights.

Jerry Kapstein, the agent for Gossage and Evans, said from his office in San Diego he expected to begin negotiation procedures for his clients immediately.

Of the 36-year-old Evans, who was team captain of the Atlanta Braves and then San Francisco, Kapstein said, "I'm very pleased with the number of teams that picked him. At this time we have a totally open mind about the future. It's not totally an economic decision for Evans."

Besides Carew, players who were not chosen by any clubs were: pitchers Doug Bird, Don Hood, Randy Moffitt, J.R. Richard, Dave Tomlin and Jamie Easterly; infielders Art Howe, Aurelio Rodriguez, Mark Wagner and Bert Campaneris, and outfielders Jerry Martin, Jerry White and Miguel Dilone.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The "pine tar" controversy lives on.

A New York State Supreme Court Justice Monday let stand a temporary restraining order preventing Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn from holding a disciplinary hearing against George Steinbrenner over the Yankee owner's conduct during last summer's "pine tar" incident.

Justice Irwin Silberwitz announced his decision after a one hour and 20 minute hearing and another hour of private conferences with attorneys from both sides in his Bronx Supreme Court chambers.

Bucs Chase Big Monkey With Victory

TAMPA (UPI) — A 17-12 victory over Minnesota Sunday lifted a "big monkey" from the backs of coaches and players. Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach John McKay said Monday.

"The big monkey is off their backs," McKay said. "They know what we've been telling them is true. We're a better team than we've been. Our guys learned they can win."

The victory was the Bucs' first of the season after nine straight losses.

Running back James Wilder was the game workhorse, scoring on a 75-yard run — longest in Bucs' history — and carrying 31 times for a club record 219 yards. Last week Wilder set an NFL record of 42 carries in a losing effort against Pittsburgh.

McKay, who coached O.J. Simpson in college, was asked to compare Wilder to some of the tailbacks he had at Southern Cal.

"Jimmy is not a Simpson-type running," McKay said of the former Missouri player. "Jimmy is more of the Jim Brown-type runner. He's an awfully big man. He's got a tremendous start. He's not a sprinter, but he's fast."

"He's gonna be a hell of a running back, but again, he's got to have some of the blocking he's had in the past two weeks," McKay said. "He is our ultimate weapon."

McKay said the Bucs' heavy emphasis on running is a result of ineffective passing.

"We fully intend to be a running team," he said. "I love to pass — to our team."

McKay said the Bucs did not have a good offensive game against Minnesota and had "an average offensive plan, not to give the ball away."

After quarterback Jack Thompson threw an early interception it was decided to stick with the ground game.

"We said 'We're not going to give the ball to them anymore today. If they get it, they're going to have to get it the hard way,'" McKay said.

McKay admitted his belief in Thompson is not as strong now as it was when the Bucs gave away next year's first round draft pick to Cincinnati to obtain him during the off-season.

"But I would say the circumstances under which this team has developed could have a big part to play in what I think now," McKay said.

The victory was costly to the Bucs, who have been plagued by injuries this season. Offensive tackle Eugene Sanders suffered an ankle injury and will miss Sunday's game at Cleveland and tight end Jimmy Giles may be out with a leg bruise.

In addition, defensive end Lee Roy Selmon suffered a bruised knee and McKay said it was too early to tell whether Selmon will be available.

MIAMI (UPI) — There may be no such thing in the NFL as a lock, but the standings and schedule will tell you the Miami Dolphins chances for the playoffs are looking good.

Miami has a one-game lead in the AFC East, and plays four of the last six games at home. Despite the Dolphins' 84-18-1 success in the Orange Bowl under Don Shula, he's not counting his November and December victories yet.

"I'd much rather be playing at home than away from home, but the attitude I've always taken is that you don't win because you're playing at home," Shula said Monday.

"You've got to prepare and beat the team you're playing against. You can't wait for someone to come in here and lose."

"In the same way, I don't feel we're going to lose just because we play on the road," Shula said.

The Dolphins proved that Sunday by winning their fourth in a row and improving their record to 7-3 by edging the 49ers 20-17 at San Francisco.

Next is a trip to New England for a game against the Patriots (5-5), who gave the Dolphins a hand Sunday by beating Buffalo 21-7 and knocking the Bills out of a first-place division tie with the Dolphins.

"New England has played some good football. They were 0-2 after we beat them (3rd 24 Sept. 11) but they've won a lot of games since then," Shula said.

"They're really running the ball well with (running back) Anthony Collins and their offensive line — one side tilts with John Hanna and Brian Holloway over there," Shula said. "And Steve Grogan is having a fine year at quarterback."

The Dolphins are going into the game in good physical condition, although they will probably be without offensive tackle Eric Laakso.

"He has a knee sprain that isn't real sore but feels weak. He's very doubtful," Shula said.

"Defensively," he said, "it looks like we'll be in the best shape we've been in a long time."

Miami had played two games without a starting inside linebacker. Earnie Rhone had spent 17 days in the hospital with pneumonia earlier this year and A.J. Duhe had a pulled groin muscle. But both went the distance at San Francisco.

"Earnie is getting back into it and A.J. Duhe will be able to work out this week. He only had one day of practice last week," Shula said.

Elway, Schlichter Missed The Boat Evaluating Colts

NEW YORK (UPI) — I look at the hustling young Baltimore Colts beginning to come on, picking up more and more confidence every week, and after seeing how much Frank Kush, the coach, Mike Pagel, the kid quarterback, and Sanders Shiver, the team's elder statesmen, are enjoying the whole thing, I can't help wondering about those two other guys.

The ones who missed the boat. I'm talking about John Elway and Art Schlichter. How do you think they feel now?

Neither ever counted on the Colts being this good this quickly or seriously challenging for the AFC's Eastern Division lead this early. Nobody in his right mind ever counted on that. How could they? The Colts were so dreadful, they were the only team in the NFL not to win a single game last year.

Elway, the best college quarterback in the country at Stanford a year ago, pointedly told the Colts they'd be wasting their time drafting him. He wasn't going to play for them no matter what. In spite of that, they still made him the No. 1 pick in the nation. Then when they became convinced he meant what he said, they reluctantly traded him to Denver.

Now Elway isn't playing very much for the Broncos. Schlichter, back home in Ohio, isn't playing at all for anybody. He was one of the Colts' backup quarterbacks last year and very likely would've been back with them again this year had he not gotten himself into that gambling mess. When Schlichter was with them during last year's strike-interrupted season, the Colts finished 0-8-1. Now look at them. They've won six out of 10 and are tied for second place with Buffalo only a game behind division leading Miami.

You can see the enormous difference in the Colts by the way they scrap and hustle for the entire 60 minutes. Everybody on the team plays like Pete Rose. If the offense doesn't do it, then the defense does as was the case in Sunday's 17-14 victory over the New York Jets before 53,323 at Shea Stadium.

Pagel wasn't exactly spectacular, but it didn't really matter. He was as good as he had to be, connecting on nine of his 17 passes for 199 yards without having a single one of his tosses picked off. He added 22 more yards running the ball, mostly when his receiver was covered.

Raul Allegre put the Colts in front with his 42-yard field goal in the first quarter and the Baltimore defense, led by nose tackles Leo Wisniewski and Quinton Ballard and linebacker Greg Bracelin, helped the visitors hold on to that slim lead until Jets quarterback Richard Todd hit Lam Jones with a 50-yard touchdown pass early in the third quarter.

Curtis Dickey, who scored both Baltimore touchdowns, moved the Colts back in front again, skirting right end from one yard out late in the same quarter, and the winners wrapped it up on Pagel's 25-yard scoring aerial to Dickey in the first minute of the final quarter. The Colts got a little lucky on that one. Pagel actually was looking to hit wide receiver Matt Bouza, but Jets cornerback Bobby Jackson deflected the ball into Dickey's hands.

Dickey is one of those sphinxes who doesn't talk to the press. He talks to Pagel, though.

"That was just the way we practiced it, wasn't it?" he kidded the 22-year-old quarterback after grabbing the ball Jackson had tipped.

Sports Parade

By MILTON RICHMAN

It was the big break of the game, and as it turned out, the Colts needed it in light of Todd's second TD pass of the day to Jones, a 10-yarder in the end zone later in the fourth quarter.

"We're 6-4 overall but we're 6-2 in close games, so if we stay close, we figure we're gonna win," Pagel said. "We're getting more confident with each game."

Walking into their dressing room after beating the Jets, you would've thought the Colts had just won the Super Bowl.

"Where are all those people who said we wouldn't win four games this year?" Linebacker Ricky Jones wanted to know.

Kush, who has been tough on the Colts, told them they had played "one helluva game" and they could be proud of themselves.

"I thought it was an exceptionally good defensive game on our part," he said later to the media. "Our offense was sporadic but our defense gave us a consistently good performance out there."

Someone asked Kush whether he considered the Colts legitimate contenders for a playoff spot now and he smiled.

"No, no, we're just struggling along," he said. "Don't get carried away now."

The fact remains Kush has done a superb job with the Colts in a remarkably short time. Kush has no real stars to work with but his players, who average 24.5 years, keep coming at you for all 60 minutes and more often than not, that's all it takes.

Before Sunday's contest, Kush still hadn't forgotten last year's visit here when the Jets nearly decimated the Colts, 37-0, in the first game after coming back from the strike. Kush said he was "embarrassed" after that game.

"We got the hell knocked out of us," Kush recalled. "Our players hadn't worked out during the strike and we were so disorganized. It was almost like a pickup team. I think Walt Michaels (then the Jets' coach) was gracious not scoring more than he did. The following Sunday, we got shut out again by Buffalo. I don't think we ever got past the 50-yard line."

In point of service, Shiver, in his eighth season with the Colts, is the senior member of the team. He can remember all the way back to 1977, the last time the Colts made the playoffs.

"We had the best quarterback in the league in Bert Jones and the best defensive line," Shiver said. "But by 1978, practically all those players were gone. It got pretty bad. Last year was the worst, though. Now it's altogether different. We feel we're gonna outshine everybody we play. We're aggressive and we're hungry. We're only a few players away from being stand-out."

Tuskawilla Junior Pee Wee quarterback Todd Carlson can beat you with his arm or his foot. The Tuskawilla Middle Schooler ran for 111 yards, passed for 28 and kicked an extra point in Tuskawilla's victory over Teague last week. The outstanding effort earned Carlson SYSA Player of the Week laurels.

Hungry Hagler Craves Pot of Gold

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Marvin Hagler may very well be the best boxer in the world today but, as he is quick to point out, he is far from the richest.

That will change Thursday night when Hagler defends his world middleweight title against Roberto Duran. It will be Hagler's first megabuck fight and he can earn close to $10 million against Duran, the World Boxing Association junior middleweight champion who is seeking an unprecedented fourth title.

Hagler, 37-2-2, has not lost in nearly eight years, going 31-0-1 in that span, and has won his last 11 bouts. He has made seven successful defenses since winning the middleweight title on a third-round knockout of Alan Minter in September, 1980.

But while Hagler's victories over the likes of Fulgencio Obelmejias, Mustafa Hameho, Tony Sibson and Wilford Scypion have provided him with a comfortable lifestyle, none has been in the multi-million dollar class. The 29-year-old Hagler even talked of retirement after knocking out Scypion in four rounds last May, claiming he had run out of profitable opponents.

But that was before Duran upset Davey Moore in June to win the junior middleweight title. Hagler sat at ringside at Madison Square Garden, smiling from ear to ear. His big money fight was now reality.

"I remember thinking, 'this is it, this is finally it, my big chance,'" Hagler said. "I felt like kissing Roberto Duran. I finally was going to get my big money fight."

"It may sound bad but I can't help thinking about money. I was a pro before guys like Larry Holmes, Gerry Cooney, Aaron Pryor, Alexis Arguello, Sugar Ray Leonard, Wilfred Benitez and Thomas Hearns. I'm undisputed champion now, but I'm still the low man on the money list."

Middleweight Boxing

"I'm not looking for anyone to call me the greatest of all time. I just want to be the best middleweight in the world today and make some money doing it. Your time as a champion is limited and I want to be the best I can be and earn as much as I can during my time as champion. This is my way of making a living and I need to make as much as I can while I have the capability."

Hagler realizes the importance of Thursday night's fight, a bout that shapes up as the Fight of the Year. A victory probably will earn him recognition as Fighter of the Year and open the commercial avenues he is looking to enter. A loss to Duran could destroy all that he has worked to attain during his 11-year career.

Hagler spent two months training at his secluded Provincetown, Mass., camp on Cape Cod before heading into Las Vegas last week. He feels he is in perfect condition for Duran.

"This is going to be the best fight I ever had," Hagler said. "I feel a lot stronger and more confident than I've ever felt. I just plan on busting him up. His people have been talking a lot but I plan on letting my fists do my talking for me."

"Duran has never faced anyone like me. I'm bigger and stronger than anyone he's ever been in the ring with and he's been used to bullying his opponents. No one is going to bully Marvin Hagler. I'm not a young, inexperienced kid like Davey Moore. I've been in this business a long time and I'm a legitimate champion."

"Duran is going to be in the worst fight of his life. There's only one man who can give him a worse beating than Leonard did and that's me because I'm bigger and stronger than Leonard and I hit a lot harder."

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Midget Rebels Rip Ocoee For 8th Straight Victory

The All American Midget Rebels put their undefeated record on the line Saturday against the tough Ocoee Bulldogs and the Rebels were once again successful as they came away with a 14-0 victory in Pop Warner Football action at Ocoee.

The Midget Rebels now stand at 8-0 for the season and will most likely be playing the Bulldogs in the conference title game on Nov. 19 at Oak Ridge High.

The potent Rebels' offense was led by quarterback Kelly McKinnon and running back Chad Groseclose. McKinnon turned in one of his best performances, completing 7 of 10 passes for 70 yards and one touchdown. Mike Mandeville and Todd Fugli combined for 43 of those passing yards with some fine catches.

The rushing attack was led by fullback Groseclose, who carried the ball 11 times for 55 yards and two touchdowns. The first TD came in the opening quarter on a three-yard plunge over center Wayne Jackson and guard Jeff Froemming. The point after failed. The second score came through the air as McKinnon hit Groseclose on a perfect 10-yard swing pass for the TD. Fugli came on to boot the extra point to complete the Rebel scoring.

Groseclose wound up with 95 yards total offense and halfback Johnny Griffin added 51 yards rushing on 13 carries.

The awesome Rebels' defense had another fine outing, keeping the Rebels unscored on for the season. Steve Ogler played well at his defensive end spot picking up four solo tackles and two assists. Hugh Graham also had four solos and Mandeville, Scott Stiles, Robb Boss, Greg Markham and Frank Redding had three solo tackles apiece. Stiles and Groseclose each came up with an interception to thwart two Bulldogs scoring threats.

The Rebels play their final game of the season on Saturday against the Eustis Tigers. Gametime is 8 p.m. at Lake Brantley High Stadium.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.S. Massing Armada Off Coast Of Lebanon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pentagon officials describe the U.S. armada assembling off the Lebanese coast as a precautionary measure against terrorist threats to Marines and U.S. warships in the area.

But the officials discounted any suggestion Monday of a pre-emptive strike at terrorist bases in Beirut in retaliation for the suicide bombing Oct. 23 that killed more than 230 U.S. servicemen.

Two aircraft carrier battle groups, the battleship New Jersey and a five-ship Marine task force are off Lebanon's coast. A third carrier group and a second Marine force are on the way and expected to reach the Eastern Mediterranean near the end of the week.

The combined force, numbering about 30 warships, will be the biggest U.S. armada massed in those waters since the Marines landed in Beirut 13 months ago to assume a peace-keeping role.

Marines Withdraw

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (UPI) — Some of guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat's forces retreated to Tripoli's port area, triggering fears of "really heavy" street fighting in an all-out drive against them today by Syrian-backed Palestinian rebels.

Rocket fire and artillery shelling Monday marked the worst battle between the warring Palestinian factions since they began fighting Thursday near Tripoli, 42 miles north of Beirut. The Syrian-backed rebels trying to end Arafat's 14-year reign over the Palestine Liberation Organization.

U.S. Marines at Beirut International Airport battled Moslem gunmen with mortars and machine guns for six hours Monday, leaving one American soldier wounded. The airport closed briefly but reopened after midnight.

Marines today withdrew from an outpost on the edge of a Shiite neighborhood where militiamen and Marines have exchanged fire. The Lebanese army has taken control of the area, according to Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan.

U.S. Troops Could Be Home For Christmas

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (UPI) — Governor-General Sir Paul Scoon drafted plans for an interim government to rule Grenada until elections can be held and U.S. military officials said they hoped American troops could be withdrawn by Christmas.

A source close to Scoon said the leading candidate for prime minister was economist Alister McIntyre, a 51-year-old native of Grenada who is deputy Secretary-General of the Geneva-based U.N. Conference on Trade and Development.

A preliminary plan drafted by Scoon calls for a 12-member provisional administration on Grenada with elections scheduled in six months to a year.

In Washington, the State Department retracted its statement that mass graves had been found possibly containing the bodies of Prime Minister Maurice Bishop and others killed Oct. 19 during a coup by hardline opponents.

The coup that toppled Bishop's Marxist government prompted the U.S.-led Oct. 25 invasion of the small Caribbean island, 1,900 miles south of Miami.

The graves were reported Sunday to have been discovered east of Point Salines in southwestern Grenada and U.S. officials in Grenada said as many as 150 bodies may have been buried there.

The chief of the U.S. Mission on Grenada Charles A. Gillespie, said Monday Caribbean forces were being "assisted by Americans" in a search for the graves but that none had been found.

Members of a congressional delegation that visited Grenada over the weekend told reporters in Bridgetown, Barbados, they saw the remains of at least one charred body.

"It was unmistakably human flesh turned to charcoal," Rep. Mark Siljander, R-Mich., told reporters.

After meeting with the congressmen, Prime Minister Eugenia Charles of Dominica told reporters she thought U.S. troops could leave Grenada in "a few weeks or months. We are not thinking about a permanent military presence."

At the United Nations, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar submitted a report on the formation of a new government in Grenada to the General Assembly. The report was prepared following a two-day visit to Grenada by Under-Secretary-General Diego Cordovez.

"Members would be appointed exclusively on the basis of their personal integrity and professional capacity, while politicians would be excluded," Cordovez quoted Scoon as saying.

The 13-page report said American officials stressed a full withdrawal of all U.S. troops was expected by late December. At the peak of the invasion, U.S. troops totaled 8,000 men, it said.

In Washington, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said it was too early to set a precise date for withdrawal of U.S. forces from Grenada, but when asked whether all Americans would be out by Christmas, he said, "Christmas would be fine, and I would hope very much we could do that."

It "really depends on when a provisional government with some governmental authority, which is totally lacking in Grenada, is re-established," he told NBC News.

Syrian Military Moves Worry Israel

METULLA, Israel (UPI) — Israel watched Syrian moves with concern today after the Damascus government's general military callup and mobilization of its armed forces.

An Israeli army spokesman said Monday night in Israel's northernmost city of Metullah that "there is evidence of a Syrian buildup in Lebanon's Bekaa valley."

Thousands of Israeli and Syrian troops have faced each other across the narrow Bekaa valley in eastern Lebanon since Israel's 1982 summer invasion of its northern neighbor.

Israeli state-run television said Israeli leaders have made clear to Damascus they have no intention of attacking Syria despite a planned Israeli army reserve callup exercise.

The television said the Israeli military exercise might begin soon and explained how it would be done. In Israeli homes, reservists awaited the summons for the exercise drill, to gauge reaction time for reporting to units.

Israel TV said although Israel has signaled Syria it does not intend to attack, Israeli leaders were watching developments in Damascus with concern.

Israel's former military intelligence chief, reserve Gen. Aharon Yariv, said Syria has doubled its army to 400,000 men since the Lebanon war and may risk a brief war with Israel for limited political goals, such as regaining the occupied Golan Heights.

Hungry Thief Steals Supper

A man broke into a Sanford home at 7 p.m. Monday, but all he took was a hot pot of food.

According to a Seminole County sheriff's report, the bandit entered the house at 2102 Magnolia Avenue through the back door and confronted 44-year-old resident Ruth Noble in the laundry room.

The man said, "I'm messed up; I'm going to get what I want," the report said. He then went into the kitchen, grabbed a pot of food cooking on the stove and ran out the back door.

Off-Year Elections Today

United Press International

Mississippi had its dirtiest campaign; the states of Washington and Kentucky and the city of Philadelphia were positioned to write some history; and an ex-saloon, nuclear research and the lordly moose captured voters' attention elsewhere in the 1983 off-year elections today.

Three statewide elections led the list as polls opened across the nation.

—Mississippi voters cast ballots for a new governor after what the retiring incumbent, Gov. William Winter, called "the dirtiest, filthiest campaign in [state] history." Democratic Attorney General Bill Allain was favored over Republican businessman Leon Bramlett before Allain was accused of homosexual acts.

—Philadelphia's potential first was racial. Democrat W. Wilson Goode is favored to become the first black man in the city's long history to serve as mayor.

—Georgia was the only state with a House election. Kathy McDonald was locked into a close runoff with state Rep. George Darden for the seat vacated by the death of Mrs. McDonald's husband, Larry, in the Korean Air Lines jet that was shot down by the Soviet Union in September.

There were contested ballot initiatives from coast to coast.

In the East, Maine voters were deciding whether to ban hunting of the moose, the state animal; Cambridge, Mass., was voting whether to ban nuclear weapons research within its limits; Washington, D.C., was balloting on the fate of Rhodes Tavern, a former haunt of George Washington and friends but now a dilapidated downtown building threatened by a developer's wrecking ball.

Hawkins Bill Prods Congress On Unitary Tax

WASHINGTON — In a move to force Congress into addressing the future of the controversial unitary tax issue, U.S. Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Winter Park, today filed legislation that will require the Treasury Department to report to Congress in 90 days the findings of its special unitary tax commission.

"The debate over unitary taxation has been going on for a long time, but recently it has become an extremely important foreign policy issue," Mrs. Hawkins said. "The purpose of my legislation is to ensure there will be no foot-dragging on presenting the product of the Treasury Department's commission to Congress."

The commission was appointed by Treasury Secretary Donald Regan in September to address the economic and foreign policy problems arising from a recent Supreme Court decision upholding the right of states to impose a unitary tax on corporations doing business within their borders. Members were appointed last week.

The unitary tax method, which has been adopted by 12 states, allows a state to tax the national and foreign affiliates of a corporate doing business in that state if the business is determined to be "unitary," that is, functioning as a segment of a single profit-making enterprise. Florida adopted what has been described as one of the most far-reaching unitary tax laws in the country during a special session of the state Legislature in July.

Florida adopted its tax less than a month after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the legality of the tax in a California case and emphasized the need for Congressional action.

"The case brought home the need for a prompt resolution of this controversy," Mrs. Hawkins said. "There is considerable concern that the decision will be viewed by many states as a green light to adopt worldwide unitary taxation systems, which will increase the likelihood of foreign retaliation."

"At issue here are American jobs," she said. "The rapid spread of the unitary tax threatens foreign corporations located in the United States, and it hasn't gone unnoticed. Prime Minister Thatcher has warned that if the states do not revise unitary tax systems, European countries will consider retaliatory measures that undermine the attractiveness of investing in the United States."

"This is a serious threat since British firms have invested $108 billion in the U.S., more than any other nation. A similar warning was given by Japan. Such retaliation must cost some Americans their jobs," Mrs. Hawkins said.

"Florida's unitary tax is based on a company's Florida payroll. To reduce their tax burdens, I am concerned that many companies operating in Florida will simply pull their operations out of our state to avoid this tax," she said. "Prior to passage of this law, Florida was considered to have among the most favorable business climates to attract new investment. I think many American and foreign corporations will now reconsider locating in Florida, which means that the unitary tax could have the net effect of stunting our economic growth."

Mrs. Hawkins said that one of the aims of her legislation is to reassure foreign countries that the United States is seriously weighing the consequences of the unitary tax system utilizing worldwide reporting.

"My legislation will help mollify the concerns of our foreign trading partners that the Federal government will fail to act in a timely way on this issue, and it may help forestall retaliatory actions. I'm hopeful it will set the stage for Congress to address this matter early next year."

Reaction May Create Endless Energy Supply

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Scientists have come close to creating the kind of self-sustaining nuclear fusion reaction that could lead to an endless supply of energy.

A group of plasma physicists from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, led by Dr. Ron Parker, told fellow scientists Monday that for the first time they had simulated in a small reactor in Cambridge, Mass. a fusion reaction that produced more energy than it took to start it.

"This ranks as the most distinguished accomplishment in fusion research," said Dr. Harold Furth, director of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory.

Furth was one of several hundred experts attending the annual meeting of the American Physical Society's Division of Plasma Physics where the announcement was made.

Fusion is the forcing together of atoms, the process the sun uses to produce its inexhaustible energy. It is the opposite of fission or atom splitting — the principal behind the atomic bomb.

To achieve fusion requires enormous pressure and temperatures — about 200 million degrees Fahrenheit — more than twice as hot as the sun.

Parker said the development means that "we are standing at the threshold of building a device which would very close to being an actual burning reactor — one that's producing energy."

On the present timetable and with the current $470 million a year federal funding, it will be sometime after the turn of the century, he said, before a plant could be built that would produce power.

Fusion's fuel is deuterium, an isotope of hydrogen that occurs naturally in water. As a fuel, a cube of deuterium one kilometer on a side would contain about the same energy as the world's reserves of fossil fuels — coal and oil.

While the fusion reactor becomes radioactive, the byproducts produced in the reaction are harmless.

Now that the team has simulated the reaction, Parker said the next barrier is to actually create a "breaking point" reaction, one which is self-sustaining and is essentially a perpetual motion machine requiring almost no energy to run.

The reactor at MIT is a donut-shaped machine about the size of a desk and uses about the same amount of electrical power as it takes to supply the surrounding city of Cambridge.

High Court Grapples With Death Penalty

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court is facing its first serious challenge to the death penalty this term, but it appears unlikely the justices will issue a ruling that would order major changes in state capital punishment laws.

The justices heard arguments Monday on an appeal by a condemned California convict who said they should require state courts to ensure that the death penalty is handed out evenly to convicts who commit similar crimes.

Anthony Amsterdam, representing condemned killer Robert Harris, argued the state death penalty law is flawed because it does not require a determination of whether a convict sentenced to death is treated more harshly than others found guilty of the same sort of crime.

While he did not call for the high court to order "proportionality review" in all cases, he said the Harris case should be sent back to the California Supreme Court for further study.

Counting Calories Key To Weight Loss

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've tried every diet in the world but I can't seem to stay on one for more than a week. I believe part of the reason is because of the food restrictions in these diets. Now I'm trying to just cut down on my calories.
I would like to know if it makes any difference what I eat as long as I don't exceed 1,100 calories a day. Will I lose weight? My goal is to lose six to eight pounds.
I vary what I eat but an example might be grapefruit and dry toast for breakfast, cottage cheese and fresh fruit for lunch, a late afternoon snack of dry toast and melted cheese and possibly a bourbon and water before dinner. My evening meal is usually a Weight Watcher or Le Menu.
I am concerned because most diets stress food combinations and I really don't follow any. In addition to eating only 1,100 calories a day, I jog and do aerobics four times a week and take multiple vitamins daily.
DEAR READER — The name of the game is calories. If you are using more calories than you consume, you will lose weight. I would expect you to lose on an 1,100 calorie diet, particularly if you are exercising as you describe. But don't expect to lose all of it right away. Take it slow.
You should not drink any alcohol while trying to lose weight. It contains seven calories per gram. Fat contains nine while protein and carbohydrate contain only four.
I prefer for people to have a balanced meal plan but if you get a variety from each of the four basic food groups within each day that is probably sufficient. An all purpose vitamin tablet that contains all the recommended daily dietary allowances is a good idea while you are restricting your calories.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about the man with bilateral tarsal tunnel syndrome. It sounded like my husband. He complains of burning feet with severe sensitivity to three toes on the left foot and two toes on the right foot. At times it is like a torch applied to these areas.
Doctors say he should have surgery on his back as X-rays show some arthritis in the lower back. But he doesn't have back pain, only foot and ankle pain. Is it possible to get more information on this problem?
DEAR READER — I was amazed at the large number of letters I received after the article about the man with burning feet who was cured when his feet were operated on.
There are many causes for burning feet and compression of the nerves in the foot in the tarsal tunnel is only one of them. Other causes can include diabetes, nutritional deficiencies and pressure on nerve roots leaving the spinal column.
A person with burning feet needs a careful examination. A neurological examination to help define the nerves involved and the location of the involvement helps. Your husband should have a neurological consultation to help define if his problem is really in his back with pressure on the nerves or indeed in the feet. Also, some people have painful feet from arthritis of the feet.
Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Table with bridge hand details: NORTH 11-4-4-3, WEST 4-1-7-3, SOUTH 4-5, DEALER: SOUTH, PASS/PLAY counts.

have defeated it. Let's describe the bidding first. North's two-diamond response to one no-trump was forcing. Stayman and South's two no-trump rebid showed 4-4 in the minors. A series of cue-bids followed and when South finally bid five clubs, North went to six clubs to play in the known 4-4 club fit. (South had guaranteed four clubs with his earlier two no-trump rebid.)
Maybe East should have doubled four spades along the way. Probably West should have opened a spade anyway. His actual lead of the singleton heart could be a winner only if East could produce the ace.
Now all South needed to do was draw trumps and set up the diamond king for his 12th trick, but South had a real blind spot. He drew just two trumps and then led a diamond. East took his ace and gave his partner a heart ruff.
There was no swing on the board. Six hearts became the contract at the other table and a spade lead beat it the same one trick.
