Builders Hint At Lawsuit If Impact Fees Raised

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

A hint from a representative of the Homebuilders of Central Florida that a lawsuit may be the builders' answer to higher "voluntary impact fees" from new construction for roads stalled county commission action on the proposed hike Monday.

John Wright, of the Homebuilders Association of Mid-Florida, told commissioners that builders are not opposed to paying a livable or reasonable fee, but the proposed $1,000 per single family home impact fee would be outrageous. He said it would be the second highest in the state, second only to Monroe County.

The county should do a "lot more research first," Wright said, and asked that the county not levy such a "devastating fee."

Wright predicted the county will be seeing "class-action lawsuits" if the fees are adopted.

Both Public Works Director Larry Sellers and County Engineer Jerry McCollum said they will go back to the drawing board and discuss the fees further with the homebuilders association.

But County Administrator Ken Hooper said Sellers and McCollum after further discussion with the homebuilders about the "voluntary fees" will be back with a firm recommendation at a July 22 workshop for formal adoption on July 23.

The fees recommended by Sellers and McCollum, under a three choice plan, range from $1,000 per single family home to $610 per apartment and from $4,000 per 1,000 square feet of retail, manufacturing, hospital and warehouse space to $19,200. McCollum said the fees are based on the number of trips upon the highways each type of construction would generate.

And Hooper made it clear other "voluntary commitments" from developers of payments for impacts on schools, police and fire protection and the donation of road rights-of-way would also be expected to continue.

The transportation impact fees would double the $20 million estimated over 10 years from the 4-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax adopted in 1982 and the 2-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax, expected to be levied by county commissioners today. The revenues from the transportation impact fees are expected to bring in more than $20 million over 10 years, Sellers said. He said the estimates for

Teachers Ask 29% Pay Hike

By Richard Truett
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole Education Association (the teacher's union) has requested a 29.7 percent increase in starting pay for teachers in Seminole County for the 1985-'86 school year.

But Ernest Cowley, chief negotiator for the school board, said as a matter of procedure, the board will only offer last year's starting pay of $13,712.

Cowley said that any pay increases would affect all of the county's 2,200 teachers.

Experienced teachers would also receive a pay raise, based on how many years experience they have, Cowley said.

He said teacher salaries are based on an index scale determined by years of experience and degrees held.

Marshall Ogletree of the Seminole Education Association, which is the union representing Seminole County's school employees, said the 29.7 percent increase would raise starting pay for beginning teachers to $17,000, up $3,288.

SEA is hoping that monetary contract talks will get under way by July 22, Ogletree said.

A Moment In Time

Erncee Douglas Stenstrom addresses a crowd of about 200 people who gathered at Sanford's Magnolia Mall today to share a moment in time — the rededication of the downtown Clock. After opening remarks, the Clock was turned on at noon. The timepiece, torn down in 1961, represents the best of Sanford's past and its future, Stenstrom said. Stella Orloff, whose grandfather, A.H. Moses, first erected the Clock downtown in the 1920s, was ecstatic: "My whole family would be excited. We didn't think this day would ever come."

Boy's Abductor Resembles Man Who Took Regina, Authorities Say

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) —

The description of a man who abducted and quickly released an 8-year-old boy resembles those of suspects in two other abduction cases, including the June 18 kidnapping of an Orlando girl who is still missing, police say.

Police in Orlando and Cocoa Beach have agreed to work together in the three cases, which have occurred within a month. Cocoa Beach Det. Sgt. Harold Lewis says the departments will inform one another daily on their progress.

An 8-year-old Cocoa Beach boy was lifted off a sofa in the family room of his house around 4 a.m. EDT Monday and carried outside by a man who dropped him off in a vacant lot about 50 yards away, Lewis said.

The boy told police the man was white, about 6 feet tall, 180 to 200 pounds with brown, bushy hair, a mustache and dark eyes. The boy did not remember what he was wearing.

That description nearly matches that of the suspect in a similar abduction of a 7-year-old Cocoa Beach girl June 15, police said. In that case, the abductor had no mustache and was wearing faded, cutoff jeans.

"They're close enough that we feel they're the same person," Lewis said. Police would not release names of the two victims.

Authorities say the descriptions are similar to one of a man who grabbed Regina Mae Armstrong, 6, as she was playing with friends in front of an Orlando apartment complex around 4 p.m. June 18.

Her kidnapper is described as white, 30 to 40 years old, about 6 feet tall with dark brown hair.

Lewis said Cocoa Beach police don't think the same man committed all three abductions in the two cities, about 50 miles apart, but admitted there is a chance.

"We feel there's always that possibility due to the similarity of the composites," the detective said.

Orlando police spokesman Robert LaBreck said he didn't know if the cases were connected.

Disney, MGM Team Up For Studio Theme Park

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Walt Disney World officials have targeted central Florida for a $300 million fantasy factory that will feature film, television and animation studios.

According to Walt Disney Productions chief executive Michael Eisner, the project will also include a theme park where tourists will wander among the characters and sets made memorable in productions by both the Disney organization and MGM, which has also signed on in the deal.

Gov. Bob Graham joined Eisner and Disney character Mickey Mouse in unveiling plans for the complex during a news conference Monday outside the state Capitol. A marching band added to the commotion and attracted a group of about 20 pre-schoolers and their teachers to wave at the famous mouse.

Graham has been a driving force behind state efforts to lure the motion picture industry to Florida — a state whose climate attracted filmmakers in the early days of the industry but whose political leaders subsequently drove them away as undesirable.

"This project represents the next critical step in that (recruitment) process," Graham said. "With this new studio, Florida will offer full production facilities to produce major theatrical features without ever leaving the state."

Graham said he plans to meet with executives of Universal studios to determine what impact the Disney move will have on Universal's proposal to borrow $150 million from the state worker pension fund for a project similar to Disney's. The Universal

Sanford Vote Kills Gas Tax Agreement

By Rick Brunson
Herald Staff Writer

Rescinding its approval of a county-imposed 2-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax, the Sanford City Commission Monday effectively killed an interlocal agreement that would have allowed for changing distribution percentages among the county and cities.

As a result, if the county decides to levy the tax for 30 years, the distribution percentages set by state formula, will be frozen for the entire 30 years, according to Seminole County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff, who appeared before the city commission.

Early today the Seminole County Commission postponed its vote on the tax to tonight. County Attorney Nikki Clayton said she had not had time to rewrite the resolution from the version reflecting Sanford's approval. If cities representing 50 percent of the incorporated area did not approve, the interlocal agreement couldn't go into effect. The new resolution must reflect revenue distribution by state formula.

By a 3-2 margin the commission reversed its June 24 decision to approve the agreement because the majority of commissioners said the city should get a fixed percentage of the revenues from the tax, not a fluctuating percentage as the agreement proposes. The commissioners also called the county's 65 percent cut of the revenue unfair. The agreement called for the county to levy a 2 cents per gallon gasoline tax for 30 years. The county would have gotten about 65 percent of the revenues and the other 35 percent would have been divided up among Seminole County's seven cities.

"We acted two weeks ago without full explanation of what was presented to us," said Commissioner David Farr, moving to rescind the agreement. Voting with him were commissioners Milton Smith and Robert Thomas. Mayor Bettye Smith and Commissioner John Mercer voted no.

Sanford's action means the county will have to adopt a state-approved distribution formula which may mean it will get less money from the tax and the cities more. But it may also mean the figures stay the same as under the agreement, Kirchhoff said. The county can still levy the tax, as it is expected to do today at its regular meeting.

The percentages under the agreement were, according to City Clerk Henry Tamm: Altamonte Springs, 10.72 percent; Sanford, 8.69 percent; Casselberry, 5.95 percent; Longwood, 4.79 percent; Winter Springs, 2.92 percent; Oviedo, 1.20 percent; and Lake Mary, .84 percent.

But the cities' percentages would have been refigured every five years.

Youths Nabbed In Vandalism, Thefts Of Motorcycle, Bikes

Five Sanford boys were in the custody of their parents today after being charged with breaking into a Sanford auto dealership, stealing a motorcycle and doing about $6,400 worth of damage to three Jeeps.

In Lake Mary, police, working in conjunction with the Maitland Police Department, have arrested and charged a 19-year-old man and his juvenile accomplice with stealing two bicycles. It was later discovered that the man is wanted in Sanford, North Carolina, for grand theft and burglary.

The Sanford boys entered the fenced compound of the dealership at about noon Sunday and drove a black 1985 Jeep Wagoneer through the garage door of the building, according to a police report. Once inside, they stole a Kawasaki ATV three-wheel motorcycle, the report said.

To get the motorcycle outside the compound, the boys rammed another Jeep — a 1985 white Wagoneer — through the fence, according to the report.

Another 1980 Jeep was backed into the fence and then two of the boys drove the motorcycle into some nearby woods, the report said.

While in the compound, one of the youths reportedly beat a dog with a stick, according to the report.

All of the vehicles were unlocked and contained a set of keys, according to Capt. Herb Shea.

The two 1985 Jeeps were Limited Editions worth $17,000 each, according to Shea. The black Jeep received $3,500 damage, while the white Jeep and 1980 Jeep received $2,000 and $900 damages respectively, the report said.

Sanford police Sgt. Charles Tate found the motorcycle abandoned at a park near Lake Monroe Terrace at about 1:30 p.m. Sunday, according to Shea. Suspecting it was stolen from Sanford Motor Co., Tate went to the dealership where he found two youths climbing over the fence. After nabbing them, the boys gave police the names of three other boys allegedly involved

Sprinklers A 'Must'

By Rick Brunson
Herald Staff Writer

Over the objections of a Sanford contractor, the Sanford City Commission has given initial approval to an ordinance requiring sprinkler systems in some new buildings.

The ordinance requires the systems in certain types of apartments, townhouses, condominiums, hotels and commercial buildings.

Sanford Assistant Fire Chief Ron Neel said the sprinklers would suppress fires and save lives.

But Kevin Spolski, owner of Designed Structures, Inc., a Sanford contracting firm, told the commissioners Monday night that requiring sprinklers was unfair and would drive up building costs and stifle growth in the city.

"It's an absolute detriment to the future, the good growth, of the city of Sanford," Spolski said.

Commercial building costs would jump 15 to 20 percent, Spolski predicted, because of such an ordinance. As an example he cited an

Creation-Science Law Unconstitutional, Court Says

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A federal appeals court has upheld a ruling finding Louisiana's creation-science law unconstitutional, criticizing the statute as an attempt to inject religion in the classroom.

Opponents of the law applauded Monday's ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, hailing the decision as the death knell for the 4-year-old law.

Circuit judges wrote in their opinion the law, requiring the teaching of the biblical theory of creation in public schools, violated separation of church and state guaranteed in the First Amendment.

State Attorney General William Guste said he needed to study the ruling before deciding whether to appeal to the Supreme Court.

Circuit judges said the creation-science law's sole purpose was to promote a religious belief in public schools.

The doctrine of creation-science entailed teaching the existence of a divine creator and the concept of a creator was an inherently religious tenet, the district court ruled.

Sanctions Spark Heated Debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Accusations of implicit racism and ignorance of Soviet subversion boiled up in Senate debate on a bill that would impose sanctions on South Africa to pressure that regime to end its policy of racial separation.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., called on the Senate to end delaying tactics and a threatened filibuster against the bill by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

"There seems to be, at the heart of the American ultra-right wing movement, an undercurrent of racism that rises to the surface every now and then," Cranston said, mentioning no names.

The bill would impose an immediate ban on bank loans to South Africa, block the sale of computer equipment that police may use to track dissidents and bans the sale of nuclear technology to Pretoria.

Cranston, who has called for even tougher sanctions against South Africa, said some senators oppose any actions against South Africa because it is anti-communist.

"To them, any evil is acceptable — even the evil of apartheid — if it can be enlisted in the unholy crusade of blind, uncritical anti-communism," Cranston said.

Sniper Dies In Blaze After Killing

MADISON, N.C. (UPI) — Authorities say the rubble of an abandoned, two-story warehouse holds the body of a sniper who torched the building after killing his boss, wounding two other people and holding police at bay for 14 hours.

"Our presumption is he's still in the building. We see little chance of anyone surviving the fire," City Manager Steve Routh said today of suspected sniper Dolpheus "Bud" Ziglar.

Authorities said Ziglar, who withstood two police tear gas barrages and refused to talk to relatives, apparently died in a fire he set Monday night that gutted the warehouse where he had been holed up since 7 a.m.

Police said Ziglar, an employee of Suburban Sanitation, apparently got in an argument about his paycheck early Monday, went home, got a rifle and took up a position in a second story window of an abandoned warehouse across the street from Suburban Sanitation.

About 7 a.m., police said the sniper opened fire from the warehouse window, fatally wounding Tommy Sharpe, a co-owner of Suburban Sanitation.

Lawyer: Retired General Did Not Steal Spy Funds

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) — The lawyer for a retired Air Force general accused of embezzling U.S. spy funds he was assigned to manage says his client did not steal a bit of the money, but transferred it to another bank account.

Lawyer Stephen Bronis said Monday that ex-Maj. Gen. Richard B. Collins controlled spy money so secret that Congress, which funds all military actions, did not know about its existence.

In his opening statement at Collins' federal trial, Bronis said his client followed orders and did not steal a single penny of the spy money.

The government accuses Collins, 55, a much-decorated ex-fighter pilot, of diverting about $445,000 of money in a secret account to his own Swiss bank accounts and keeping $19,000 in interest.

Collins has threatened to reveal national secrets to prove his innocence during the trial about the use of U.S. funds to bankroll covert CIA operations in Southeast Asia and elsewhere.

If convicted of the six counts of embezzlement, Collins, 55, faces up to 60 years in prison and $60,000 in fines.

Murder Suspect Denied Bond

MIAMI (UPI) — An adult movie projectionist who is accused of killing his brain-damaged daughter has been denied bond even though a psychologist told the court he doubted the 25-year-old would hurt anyone or try to flee.

But Circuit Judge Edward D. Cowart Monday did not rule out freeing Charles Griffith, who is charged with first-degree murder, from jail under bond at an arraignment hearing July 18.

Police say Griffith entered a room at Miami Children's Hospital about 9 p.m. June 28 where his 3-year-old daughter, Joy, lay comatose. He sat by her crib for more than two hours, then drew a .32-caliber pistol and shot her twice in the chest.

Griffith told investigators he fired the shots to end the child's suffering. If convicted of the murder charge, he could be sentenced to death in the electric chair.

Rhetoric Or Retribution?

Reagan's Dilemma In Dealing With Terrorism

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter

ANALYSIS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There was a lot of fire and fury in President Reagan's talk on international terrorism to the American Bar Association.

But it may take time to figure out its significance and whether he wants carte blanche to act next time without congressional approval.

Obviously still smarting from the Beirut hostage crisis, Reagan Monday appeared to be back to making threats like those that got him in trouble during the 17 days of backstage negotiations and compromises that no one would acknowledge were occurring.

Again, Reagan appears to be threatening action. But of what kind?

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters: "I would say this is a part of the continuing effort on the part of the president to speak out on terrorism."

In the aftermath of the crisis, Reagan's conservative constituency who wanted him to act out his "gunslinger" image was disappointed. To them, the United States appeared a paper tiger.

Moderates and liberals praised Reagan for exercising patience and restraint. The result, they said, was that the 39 hostages got home alive.

In his address Monday, Reagan cited Iran, Libya, North Korea, Cuba and Nicaragua as members of an international "Murder Inc." that have a fanatical hatred of America and are instigating worldwide terrorism.

He said their aim is to isolate and expel "America from the world" so they can continue their totalitarian revolutions without U.S. interference.

"Their terrorist states are now engaged in acts of war against the government and people of the United States," he said. "And under international law, any state which is the victim of acts of war has the right to defend itself."

Terrorist acts can be the spark that touches off a war, as it was for World War I. But Reagan was not clear on what international law describes a terrorist act as an act of war.

The solution may be in an interpretation Reagan has yet to make.

In the meantime, he must differentiate between retaliation and revenge, rhetoric and retribution.

In the midst of a crisis as public as the Beirut hijacking, his dilemma — in the land of the free and the home of the nuclear missile — becomes crystal clear.

The president told a news conference last month that wanton retaliation would be "a terrorist act" in itself. Innocent lives, no doubt, would be lost.

A top White House official said, "Vengeance is not our policy."

But national security adviser Robert McFarlane spoke of this possibility: attack training camps for terrorists in Lebanon.

Without an outright endorsement, the president said: "The American people are not going to tolerate intimidation, terror and outright acts of war against this nation and its people."

But again he stopped short of saying what he intends to do about this "confederation of criminal governments."

On an extreme side, there was some speculation that Reagan might seek a Gulf of Tonkin-style resolution that would give him the authority to hit targets without congressional approval. But that does not seem likely now.

President Lyndon Johnson, who sought the Gulf of Tonkin resolution during the Vietnam War, lived to regret it and so did Congress.

Anti-Tax, Pro-Defense Stand Blocking Budget Compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A leading Democratic budget negotiator says President Reagan could be helpful in formulating a compromise budget but not if he continues his tough stance for military spending and against taxes.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that Reagan has invited congressional budget conferees to meetings today and Wednesday in an effort to forge a budget compromise but will resist any move to increase taxes.

The conferees have been stymied since beginning talks last month in their attempts to find a compromise between the House- and Senate-passed budgets.

But more than a week ago, the conference decided to look closer at a plan offered by Sens. Lawton Chiles, D-Lakeland, Fla., Slade Gordon, R-Wash., and others.

That plan would cut the deficit by nearly $70 billion in fiscal 1986 but also calls for raising about $60 billion in taxes over three years.

Chiles said Monday he was pleased Reagan is getting involved but, "Obviously, I'd like it better if they (at the White House) weren't talking a tough line."

Chiles defended his budget plan, saying if the president is "talking significant deficit reduction,

I don't know how else he's going to do it."

The Chiles-Gordon plan would freeze military spending, as the House budget does, and would scrap next year's cost-of-living raise for Social Security recipients, as the Senate budget proposed, except for the very poor.

The House and Senate budgets cut $56 billion from the deficit. The House protected Social Security and the Senate allowed an inflation-related increase for the Pentagon.

Over the weekend, Reagan said he would resist any effort to cut military spending further.

Speakes said Monday, "We have continued to work with (the budget conferees) but they have not come to grips with the major issues," referring to Social Security and defense.

Speakes said Reagan would not go along with the Chiles-Gordon budget because of its tax provision.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole also said the Chiles-Gordon budget is "a good effort but I don't believe either the House or Senate will accept taxes."

But Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a primary backer of the bipartisan budget, said the conferees have "looked at all the spending cuts that can be made. We've cut and cut and cut. The time has come to look at revenues."

Couple Were Out For A Walk

Sanford Man On Trial For Rape

A Sanford man went on trial today accused of raping a woman while they were out taking an early-morning walk.

On trial and held without bond in the Seminole County Jail since his Feb. 3 arrest is Terrance Frank Brundidge, 25, of 88 Castle Brewer Court, Sanford.

Jury selection in the trial before Seminole Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor began Monday.

According to court records, a 24-year-old Sanford woman was walking with a man shortly after 1 a.m. on Feb. 3 when he attacked her on Third Street near Poplar and Cedar avenues in Sanford, according to a police report.

The man then dragged the woman into a ditch and beat her, the report said.

The victim later told police the man threatened to kill her before he raped her.

The woman's screams attracted the attention of two teenage boys who saw the struggle, ran and got help, the report said. They brought a 44-year-old man back to the scene and he forced the man to stop the assault. He then followed the couple to Third Street and French Avenue where he flagged down officer Tom Bernosky who was responding to the scene. The man was taken to the Sanford Police Department, questioned and arrested at 3:25 a.m.

Bernosky noted in his report that the woman was bruised and scratched, and that articles of her clothing were found in the ditch.

If convicted of the charge, Brundidge faces up to life in prison, according to Assistant State Attorney Steven Plotnick.

Surplus Food Distribution Set For 3 Days At Crooms

Some 5,000 disadvantaged Seminole County families are scheduled to receive cheese, butter and rice in the surplus government food distribution program on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The food is supplied by the U.S. Department of Agriculture through the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. It is distributed by the Central Florida Chapter of the American Red Cross.

On Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., the food will be distributed at Crooms High School, 2200 W. 13th St., Sanford, for persons living in Sanford (ZIP code 32771), Lake Mary (32746), Lake Monroe (32747) and the Springs area (32779).

On Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Altamonte Community Chapel, 825 State Road 436, Altamonte Springs, for persons living in Altamonte Springs (32701), Casselberry (32707), Winter Springs (32708), Forest City (32714), Fern Park (32730), Goldenrod (32733), Longwood (32750), and for those living in Seminole County but whose mailing address is Apopka (32703), Maitland (32751) or Winter Park (32792).

Friday, 10 a.m. to noon, Baptist Church, Lake Mills Drive, Chuluota, for those living in Geneva (32732), Oviedo (32765) and Chuluota (32766).

Seminole County residents who believe they are eligible, but have not yet registered for the surplus food program may do so at their ZIP code location and may receive food the same day.

Those with questions on eligibility may call the Red Cross in Longwood at 631-3000.

Kay Merrill, director of marketing and public relations for the Red Cross, said the group is still looking for someone who will donate refrigeration space for the program.

The food commodities are now trucked in from the Lake Wales central warehouse for each month's three-day distribution. Enough food is delivered to Crooms for the Wednesday distribution and the balance is loaded onto a rented refrigeration truck.

She said that is very expensive. "We hope we can come up with some kind of refrigeration in Seminole County

Massachusetts Getting Cheeky With Snuff Users

BOSTON (UPI) — The state health commissioner is expected to issue an order this week making Massachusetts the first state requiring warnings on packages of smokeless tobacco, a known cause of mouth cancer.

"We have a chemical time bomb ticking in the mouths of tens of thousands of boys in this country and at least they deserve a warning," said Dr. Gregory Connolly, chief of the state's Dental Health Division.

"We could face an epidemic of oral cancer in the country by the year 2000 unless we act aggressively now."

Connolly has recommended that all snuff packages sold in Massachusetts carry the label: "Warning: Use of snuff can be addictive and can cause mouth cancer and other mouth disorders."

Sources said Monday that Public Health Commissioner Ballus Walker is expected to issue an order Wednesday requiring makers of smokeless tobacco products to put the warning on packages sold in Massachusetts.

Similar warnings are being considered in other states, but so far none have taken action.

Connolly said at least two dozen studies have linked smokeless tobacco to serious dental problems, including gum disease and tooth loss. And a World Health Organization report in November 1984 concluded there was "sufficient scientific evidence to declare snuff a human carcinogen," he said.

Officials of U.S. Tobacco Corp. in Greenwich, Conn., maker of Skoal, one of the most popular brands of snuff, could not be reached for comment.

How To Unite Against Terrorism

The president's threat recently to retaliate against Lebanon if the hostages weren't freed didn't so much reflect American bluster as it did the lack of any concerted response of all civilized nations to international terrorist attacks. We consider going it alone because there is neither machinery nor agreement about the whole world going together.

There was a time when, in the absence of effective Cuban sanctions against hijackers, American airliners were routinely seized and diverted to Havana. That stopped when the Cuban government stopped giving the hijackers safe haven. Parts of the Middle East now serve a similar purpose, with one exacerbating difference, and that's the implicit — and sometimes explicit — encouragement provided terrorists by certain governments: Iran is still harboring the hijackers of a Kuwaiti airliner who murdered two American passengers; Libya is still cheering on terrorists and, more than likely, training them and financing their activities; Syria sponsored and hosted the Lebanese militias that held Americans hostage in Beirut. Lebanon is still a training ground for terrorists of every stripe.

To isolate those nations from international air traffic would not put all hijackers out of business; certainly it wouldn't end all terrorism. But a declaration from the world's civilized nations that unless such sponsorship of terrorism ceases, their airlines will boycott the offending countries — and all airports abroad will be closed to their airlines — would send a powerful message.

To be effective, such a policy would have to include boycotts of airlines and airports that continued to traffic with the friends and sponsors of terrorism, which is to say that it will require more than lip service from the international community. But unless such steps are taken, terrorism will increasingly become an instrument of national policy and, even among civilized nations, an element to be bargained over and compromised with. And the more that occurs, the more we will all be hostages.

Step Down, Judge

The arrogance of some high-placed public officials can be oppressive. Not only for the public that those officials are elected or appointed to serve, but for the employees those officials hire to help them.

Richard Neely, the chief justice of the West Virginia Supreme Court, fired his 59-year-old secretary for refusing to continue to baby-sit for his 5-year-old son.

The secretary said that the baby-sitting demands had become too much. She had watched the child eight consecutive days in May and "on and off" for three weeks since then. She said she had stayed with the boy either at Neely's home or her home, and that it was beginning to affect her health.

The National Organization for Women is asking for Neely's resignation.

Neely says that he asked his secretary to baby-sit only when he was away on business and that his staff serves at his "will and pleasure."

To what extent is an employee expected to go in serving the personal needs of a boss? How does an employee deal with the despotism of a Judge Richard Neely?

Neely abused his public position by even asking the secretary to baby-sit. He should resign, take off his black robe, step down from Olympus and come back to earth.

More Pandamonium At The National Zoo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Zoo officials, who are nothing if not polyanthous where pandas are concerned, now are hoping Ling-Ling and Tsing-Tsing, gifts to the United States from China, will produce a cub in October through natural causes.

I hope so, too, but after 13 years I have become more ling-lingish than polyanthous. Frankly, my faith in the ability of these pandas to reproduce in captivity is wearing a bit thin.

The current optimism is based on the fact the couple set a coupling record — twice in one day by actual count — last week.

Once before, they tried artificial insemination. If the hormone injections that apparently induced Ling-Ling's brief and fragile mating cycle this year don't live up to expectations, I suggest trying X-rated movies next time.

It is true that risqué films haven't been very effective at stimulating gorillas. According to Life magazine, Michael and Koko, two California apes who have learned sign language but have no heirs to inherit that knowledge, have seen both "a gorilla sex film made in a Swiss zoo" and a rented X-rated movie.

Nevertheless, Life reports, their relations have remained strictly platonic.

Pandas, however, may be different. So perhaps a little panda pornography is worth a try.

The main difficulty may be obtaining suitable material.

Salacious films are easy to obtain. Virtually any good porno parlor renting video cassette movies for home viewing could be a source of supply.

But there is no guarantee that pandas, like the San Francisco gorillas, "imitate human behavior." To the contrary.

Hsing-Hsing's love-making technique has been described as inept, whereas male porno stars generally are credited with being extremely ept, if there is such a word. Anyway, you get the picture.

Nor is there any assurance that Ling-Ling and Hsing-Hsing might be turned on by private screenings of a gorilla sex film. It seems as likely they would imitate human behavior as ape apes.

A more productive route might be to persuade

China to make a panda sex film. Switzerland being notoriously short of such animals. But you know how the Chinese are.

A more fertile course might be to persuade a couple of human porno stars to don panda costumes. That way, they could serve as role models for Ling-Ling and Tsing-Tsing.

However, even a genuine pseudo-panda sex film in living color might not achieve the desired results. Not all females, the experts tell us on the Phil Donahue show, are aroused by pornography. If that be the case in the animal kingdom, Ling-Ling might not be excited by the sight of a male actor cavorting around in a panda suit.

And it would no good to get Hsing-Hsing in the mood if Ling-Ling only wants to watch soap operas, or whatever Pandas do in those circumstances.

Such a film seemingly has better possibilities than teaching the pandas sign language, however. Ling-Ling's first achievement probably would be to master the sign for "Not tonight, I have a headache."

Factories: End Of An Era

Americans were relieved to see that the economy grew a healthy 3.1 percent in the second quarter — healthy, that is, in rebound from the practically nonexistent growth of 0.03 percent for the first three months of the year. The recovery is now thirty-three months old, confounding the pessimists.

It has not, however, been a consistent recovery. While certain industries, such as automobiles and construction are booming, the U.S. economy has developed a split personality. Since July 1984, output from the nation's mines and factories has been flat, even while GNP grew 2.5 percent overall. In the past year, 2.5 million jobs have been created in service industries, while manufacturing employment has stagnated. The trend goes back for years. In the past decade, America's "Fortune 500" companies have lost 1.5 million jobs. In the same period overall employment in the U.S. has grown 37 percent.

The black-and-white picture is also reflected geographically. Cities, in general, are doing well — even New York has finally balanced its books. The growth of the service sector, particularly in international banking and trade, has again made cities important and attractive places to live and work, fostering a bull market in urban real estate. The dark cloud within that silver lining, though, is the decline of small towns and rural communities.

A recent paper by Daryl Hobbs, director of the Office of Social and Economic Analysis of the University of Missouri, published by the Southern Growth Policies Board, explains that the small, independent manufacturing firms which for years have provided jobs in rural communities have been hit hardest by the flattening of the durable goods sector nationwide. The traditional attractions of small towns to industry low wages, rock-bottom taxes, and no unions are less important to business today. If wages are low in the South, they are lower still in Singapore.

Even worse, the generally mediocre quality of elementary and secondary school education in rural towns — once a sure sign of low taxes, advertised to new firms — is now a waving red flag. Thus young people graduate to jobs at filling stations or fast-food emporiums, or, more and more, simply move away.

Nevertheless, it remains that manufacturing — the production of goods — is unequalled in providing jobs and prosperity.

Bankers Set To Fight Checking Reform

By Jack Anderson and Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON — The holdup men are on the other side of the counter these days at your friendly neighborhood bank — and the money moguls of the banking industry are determined to see that it stays that way.

They're gearing up for a massive lobbying effort against a proposed law that would let customers use the money they deposit right away instead of a week or two later.

For years, bankers have insisted that "clearing" a deposited check — making sure there are funds to cover it in the bank account on which it was drawn — is a time-consuming process that can't be telescoped without shaking the foundations of the banking industry. But in this era of computers and high-tech communications, the image of quill pens and celluloid

JEFFREY HART

Bomb Shiite Enclaves

It was not a happy ending. The hostages and their families have every right to embrace Weinshaden and popping champagne corks to celebrate the release of loved ones. All of that is fine on the personal level.

But the just ended ordeal of the hostages was a complete triumph for international terrorism, and the Oval Office can take no comfort in the result. The terrorists have attacked U.S. citizens, and U.S. property in the form of the TWA plane, and so far they have gotten away with it completely. This in itself was a major terrorist achievement, an astonishing political victory.

Second, they have been able to put their case on the international media, with the psychologically terrorized hostages telling us all what nice fellows the hijackers are. This is a familiar syndrome under such circumstances. Sometimes women even "fall in love" with the terrorists while in captivity, thankful evidently that they have not been raped or murdered.

Third, no one is fooled by the denial of any connection between the release of the U.S. hostages and the forthcoming release by the Israelis of their 700 Shiite prisoners. That situation is complicated, the Shites being detained were to some degree hostages themselves, held by Israel to guarantee good behavior by the Shites in southern Lebanon. In due course, Israel was going to release most of them anyway. But no one doubts that their release has been speeded up because of the TWA hijacking, and that the speedup is part of a U.S.-Israeli understanding. Even if it were not, it would look that way, and that's what counts in politics at this level.

So the Shites have got absolutely everything they could want as a result of the hijacking, and at no discernable cost whatsoever. They have even got away with the brutal murder of Robert Stethem, all of whose ribs were broken and whose face kicked unrecognizable before he was shot. Nothing has happened, or apparently is happening, about that.

It is the Shites and the hijackers who should be celebrating, drinking whatever it is they drink. Throughout the Middle East, and indeed wherever some group believes that it has a grievance, thoughtful people must be seriously considering going into the hijacking and terror business. President Reagan has indicated to them that it is absolutely risk-free.

His own statements throughout the crisis have been mind-boggling. How could a president of the United States possibly say that his highest priority was to save the lives of the hostages? If President Franklin Roosevelt had made it his highest priority to save U.S. lives, we would have never landed in Normandy — where President Reagan recently made such eloquent remarks. The president of the U.S. takes an oath of office, and after he takes that oath he is not a private person, in whom pity for individuals may well become the highest priority.

It's no mystery why the bankers cherish the clearance myth. When they can clear a deposited check in a matter of hours but make the customer wait 10 days to two weeks before he can write checks on his deposit, the banks get free use of the idle money for a while. Multiplied by millions of checks and millions of days, this gives the bankers interest-free loans from their customers amounting to billions of dollars a year.

The difference between the time a check is deposited and the time the customer is allowed to use it is called the "float," and the bankers' slogan is "Vive la difference!" — as long as they're the only ones who are allowed to use the technique.

The way the law stands now, the bankers are the only ones who can use the float legally. You'll recall the pious horror the banking industry expressed — not heard since the days of Bonnie and Clyde — when the brokerage firm of E.F. Hutton was caught floating checks on a systematic basis to get millions of dollars' worth of interest-free loans at the banks' expense.

A few perspicacious observers pointed out that the bankers' indignation was hypocritical, a self-serving exercise in outrage at the idea that a mere stockbroker had the effrontery to pirate the banking fraternity's exclusive swindling technique.

Such diverse politicians as Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., and Rep. Bernard St Germain, D-R.I., agree that it may be time to put an anchor on the bankers' float.

St Germain cited these typical abuses to our associate Lea Whitten:

— A Pennsylvania man deposited a federal tax-refund check for more than $1,000, waited nine days for it

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Congress Changes Its Mind

In refusing to extend a ban on U.S. military support for freedom fighters in Nicaragua, the U.S. House of Representatives made a dramatic change in the congressional approach to communist adventurism in Central America. The will of the Congress is hardening in the direction of aid to Nicaraguans who want to escape communist thralldom.

The Sandinista regime and its friends and apologists in the United States in effect have invoked the Brezhnev Doctrine, which is that a country, once under communist control, will not be allowed to escape. The aid authorized for the freedom fighters clearly looks to emancipation of the Nicaraguan people.

Equally important, the change in the opinion of the House indicates the growing emancipation of a section of the U.S. population from Nicaraguan disinformation. In the face of a massive communist arms buildup in Nicaragua, the friends of that regime have maintained that the United States is the oppressor and threat to peace. The visit of the Nicaraguan political chief to his masters in Moscow opened the eyes of many people in and out of Congress.

Unfortunately, not everyone has abandoned the Nicaraguan regime. A notable case in point is U.S. Rep. Bill Alexander of Arkansas who is a prominent figure in the radical camp. He has taken to referring to the freedom-fighters as "Reaganistas." This isn't surprising because Congressman Alexander, who surely isn't representative of his district or state on this issue, already has dismayed the folks at home by going to Cuba and palling around with Fidel Castro.

Congressman Alexander is out in left field on this issue. He angrily attacks the President's support for democratic forces in Nicaragua as a "cry uncle strategy" and charges that the U.S. will be "directly involved" in Nicaragua.

Rep. Alexander misses the mark. The need at this time isn't for dispatch of a division of U.S. marines but a tightening up of restrictions on the disinformation activities of Nicaragua's totalitarian regime.

Up to this point, for reasons that are hard to understand, the U.S. has allowed the Nicaraguan junta to send its political emissaries to the United States to propagandize against effective action in support of democratic forces.

to clear and then wrote a check on it. The bank bounced his check and charged him a $30 overdraft fee. It was poetic justice. He was a retired banker and his wife had been a bank regulator.

— In a small California town, a customer deposited in his checking account a check for $1,295 drawn from his savings account in a bank just down the street. He had to wait seven days for the deposited check to clear.

— A New York City man got a $1,000 check from his credit union and deposited it in his checking account at a bank a few miles away. Six days later he wrote a check for $800 to pay a credit-card bill. It bounced. The banks claim it would be too burdensome to wire or telephone the bank that a deposit check is written on to make sure it's good — though many credit unions will do this while the customer waits.

Sun Bank Forfeits Titles

Little American League champion Sun Bank, which went 17-0 and swept two straight over First Federal in the City Championship Series, will forfeit all its games and the City Championship, according to Sanford Superintendent of Parks and Recreation Jeff Monson.

It was learned that Derrick Taylor, the top pitcher for Sun Bank, is 13-years-old and ineligible.

Monson said prior to the Sub-District 3 Tournament began, it was discovered Taylor's birth certificate had been altered. Another player on the Sanford American League all-stars, Tony Chavers, was also ruled ineligible because he is 13.

"He (Taylor) admitted it that he doctored his birth certificate," Monson said. "You can tell by looking at it. This one looks like it's been altered. It's usually typed but in this case the typing was written over."

Taylor, who was born on Dec. 27, 1971, should have been playing in the Sanford Junior Major League which is for 13-14 year olds. Chavers, who never produced a birth certificate but, according to Monson admitted he too was 13, should also have been in the Junior League.

"It's really a shame," Monson said. "Derrick's really a good kid. I don't know why he did it. I don't think he really realized the extent of what he was doing."

Prom Fans 16, But Altamonte Falters In 12th

MAITLAND/OVIEDO — Don't do a double take on that date line. Monday's night's opening Little League Baseball District 14 Division 2 All-Star Tournament game was such an extravaganza it took two cities, two fields and 12 innings to complete.

Maitland's Nate Hoskins dashed home on a passed ball with two outs in the top of the 12th inning as Maitland claimed a 4-3 victory over Altamonte Springs in Senior League All-Star action in the last inning at Oviedo's Little League complex.

It was big win for us," said Maitland manager Jim Sandberg. "Oviedo (Maitland's next opponent) has just one pitcher. That's Alan Greene. If we blow him out, we have the game."

Altamonte, meanwhile, takes on Deltona, an 18-1 loser to Oviedo Monday, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Deltona.

Monday's first 11 innings were played at Maitland's Little League complex, which does not have lights. After the teams played to a 3-3 deadlock, it became too dark to continue. The umpires then moved the game to Oviedo, where there are lights.

Once there, Richard Davis grounded out to open the 12th inning against Corey Prom, who relieved Andy Anson in the third inning. Hoskins then lined a single to left. Bobby Lieflander sacrificed Hoskins to second. With Willy Daunic at the plate, consecutive passed balls allowed Hoskins to come around with the tie-breaking run.

The setback marred an otherwise heroic effort by Prom. The crafty left-hander struck 16 batters and allowed just four hits. During one stretch from the sixth through the eighth innings, Prom fanned eight consecutive hitters. He also struck out the side in the 10th.

Altamonte, which pushed across a two-out run in the seventh to send the game into extra frames, couldn't come back in its last chance. Prom sent the center fielder to deep center for the first out. Catcher Pat DeLuca followed with a single to left center. Kenny Jackson followed with another base hit to center to push DeLuca to second. Lieflander, who relieved Daunic in the 11th, induced Chad Cochran to pop up for the second out. Penny Siquerros took a pitch on the left shoulder to load the bases but Warren Woodard grounded out to the second base to end the game. Lieflander hustled over to take the throw and beat Woodard to the bag.

"Corey Prom showed a lot of heart," said Ralph Cochran, who was managing in place of Woodard who was on a business trip to Texas. "Prom wanted to stay in even after the one-hour break."

Prom said his arm never weakened. "I felt good," he said. "They just got the lucky breaks. We didn't get the clutch hits and we blew too many chances."

Prom was referring to a missed suicide squeeze in the 10th inning which would have won the game for the Seniors.

Altamonte did cash in on its first opportunity in the second inning. Jackson singled to left

Oviedo Takes On Altamonte

Davis, Cozart Stir Interesting Twist Into Tonight's Collision

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

This game needs no hype — but you're going to get some anyway.

It's Oviedo and Altamonte Springs. It's country vs. city. It's a program on the rise vs. a program entrenched in tradition. It's base hits vs. power. It's pitching vs. pitching.

And it's a natural. Oviedo's Majors, the nucleus derived from manager Wayne Jacobs' league champion Angels, and Altamonte American Leaguers, whose base is formed by manager Mike Morro's league kingpin Tigers, have collided twice already in the Top Team Tournament.

Morro's Tigers pulled out an extra-inning victory the first time around and then blew out the Angels in the championship game. Round 3 will be tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Altamonte Springs Eastmonte complex in the opening game of the Little League Baseball District 14 All-Star tournament.

The adrenalin started to flow as soon as the pairings were announced. "We're as ready as ready can get," said Jacobs Monday night. "We want to beat them bad. The boys remember that last Top Team game."

Louie Tulp, who serves as Jacobs' coach, said he knows exactly how to beat the Americans. "We have to keep the ball in the park," he said Monday. "They can't beat us defensively. And we have more pitching depth. We have six pitchers we can throw at them."

Tulp said in Altamonte's 11-1 title game romp, 10 of the Tigers' runs were courtesy of homers. "We gave up some walks which hurt us but just about all of their runs came by homers," said Tulp. "They have to hit the ball out of the park to beat us."

Tulp doesn't need a good memory to recall the power show. Chuck Lamb, John Jump and Terry "Downtown" Brown jacked consecutive homers to erase a 1-0 Oviedo first-half inning lead. Jump added a another homer later along with a ground-rule double and a single. Chris Jackson unloaded a grand slam in that game. Jackson shut the Angels down on one hit to pick up the victory.

The Oviedoans have several new additions which Jacobs said he hopes will make a difference. Danny Phillips adds a smooth glove and a solid bat at shortstop. Shelly Elliott, an all-star last year, is one of those six pitchers who also patrols center field. Both played for manager Dale Phillips' second-place Dodgers.

The next two additions — 11-year-old Craig Cozart and 12-year-old Russell Davis — stir an interesting twist into the game. Both played in the Altamonte program last year before the boundaries were strictly enforced. They live in Winter Springs, so they were always in the Oviedo district.

Jacobs and Tulp were more than happy to welcome them aboard. "Cozart is one of the best hustlers I've ever seen on a Little League field," said Tulp. "If you had right more like him, you'd never get beat."

And Davis? Well, Jacobs and Tulp think enough of him to hand him the ball for the starting assignment tonight against some of his ex-leaguers. "Russell's a big boy (5-8, 140) and he throws hard," said Tulp. "His best pitch is the fastball but he's got a little bit of a curve, too."

Tulp said Cozart and Davis were a bit reluctant to leave Altamonte's program, as might be expected after the outstanding success (three teams in the final two of the World Series the past two years) its had.

"When they first started practicing with us, they probably thought that any time Oviedo played Altamonte that Oviedo was going to get beat," said Tulp. "But after watching us practice and play, they've been impressed. They think we can take Altamonte now."

Everett Smokes Deltona

By Chris Flater
Herald Sports Writer

DELTONA — The Deltona Senior League coaches must like punishment. They just couldn't get enough of it Monday night.

Except for one inning, Deltona couldn't touch Dwight Everett and Deltona's defense couldn't handle Oviedo's speed. Pitcher Don Newhouser ran out of gas in the second inning, but the coaches left him in the whole way.

After Oviedo took a 13-1 lead at the end of five innings, Deltona could have conceded since the game was, for all intents and purposes, over. But Deltona chose to keep on playing, so the Oviedo Seniors punished it some more.

Two innings later, Oviedo walked away with an 18-1 victory in the opening round of the District 14 Division 2 Tournament at the Charles Paulus/Deltona Little League Field.

"Since they (Deltona) didn't concede I just turned the guys loose on the bases," Oviedo manager David Austin said. "We ran them right out of the ballpark."

Everett tossed a five-hitter with the only run he gave up coming on a leadoff homer in the third by Johnny Proctor. Everett struck out seven and walked none.

"Everett was blowing some smoke," Austin said. "And the defense was outstanding behind him."

Tonight at 7:30 at the Oviedo Little League complex, Oviedo goes up against Maitland. Austin will go with ace Alan Greene on the mound. The big right-hander was a key factor as the Oviedo Astros won the Top Team Tournament title.

After he heard Maitland said that they wanted Oviedo, Austin said, "They got us. And they've got all 6-3, 190 pounds of Alan Greene."

Oviedo jumped on Newhouser for one run in the top of the first. Derek Mays, who played an "awesome" game at second base, led off with a single, stole

China To Sign 5-Year Trade Pact With Soviets

BEIJING (UPI) — Vice Premier Yali Yilin left for Moscow today to sign a major, five-year trade pact expected to quadruple trade between China and the Soviet Union by 1990.

Crowning the eight-day visit will be the signing of a 1986-1990 economic and trade pact that Western diplomats say is expected to increase Sino-Soviet trade fourfold — to $6 billion — by the end of the decade.

Trade between the Soviets and the Chinese this year is projected at $1.6 billion compared to $1.2 billion in 1984.

Western diplomats say Yao and Soviet officials also will discuss possible Soviet aid in renovating up to 400,000 Chinese factories — many built under Soviet guidance during the 1950s. Several were left ill-equipped or incomplete when Moscow recalled more than 1,300 Soviet experts from China in 1960 as ideological and territorial disputes ruptured relations between the former communist allies.

Police Kill 7 Black Rioters

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police shot and killed seven black rioters in a township near Johannesburg early today in the bloodiest confrontation since officers killed 20 blacks in Uitenhage three months ago.

A police spokeswoman in Pretoria said the shootings took place about 1:30 a.m. in Kwa-Thema, a black township about 25 miles east of Johannesburg.

Police said in a brief statement that five men were killed and two were injured when officers fired pistols and shotguns at a mob that tried to burn the home of a black police officer.

"In a similar incident in the same area, two men were fatally wounded when police dispersed the mob with birdshot," the statement said. Police said they could give no further details.

At least 37 blacks were arrested as police used shotguns, rubber bullets and teargas to disperse rioters in Kwa-Thema and in other black townships near Port Elizabeth, about 600 miles south of Johannesburg.

Today's shootings followed a wave of black violence spurred by the slayings of five blacks in a police raid Friday in the township of Dudza, about 5 miles south of Kwa-Thema.

Oil Tanker Bombed, Leaking

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A missile believed fired by Iraqi warjets hit a large Turkish tanker in the Persian Gulf early today, setting it on fire and triggering an oil leak from the vessel, shipping insurers said.

Agents for the Lloyds of London shipping insurers in Bahrain reported the 188,668-ton Turkish tanker M. Vatan broadcast a distress signal.

No casualties were reported.

Vatan's SOS signal passed on to Lloyds by Bahrain radio said it was struck by a missile on its port side and was positioned not far from Iran's main oil terminal at Kharg Island, a frequent target for Iraqi air attacks.

The mayday call said oil was leaking from the starboard side of the ship, which was built in 1976 and is owned by an Istanbul company.

Lloyds casualty reporting officer Roger Lowen said the Vatan is the largest vessel attacked in the "tanker war" — an offshoot of the nearly 5-year-old Iran-Iraq war — and possibly the largest cargo ship by tonnage ever attacked.

Suspected Sex Killer Ng Judged Fit To Stand Trial

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — Charles Ng, suspected of up to 25 gruesome slayings in California, was judged mentally fit to stand trial on attempted murder and theft charges in Canada and was ordered to return to court next week.

"I presume they will proceed with the trial here," Ng's lawyer Brian Devlin said Monday after the 24-year-old former Marine underwent a psychiatric examination and then made a brief appearance at the packed Calgary courtroom.

Ng was ordered to return to court July 15 when he is expected to enter a plea. A court-appointed psychiatrist ruled that he was mentally fit to stand trial on charges of attempted murder and theft in Canada.

The developments could delay plans by U.S. authorities to have Ng extradited to California to stand trial for his alleged role in the sex-torture slayings of as many as 25 people at a mountain hideaway near Wilseyville, Calif., about 125 miles northeast of San Francisco.

A monthlong international manhunt for Ng ended Saturday when he was arrested in a Calgary department store for attempted murder, possession of a firearm and theft.

At the time of his arrest, Ng was carrying a bag of groceries, 50 feet of nylon rope and two books. Police said Ng shot one security guard in the hand with a .22-caliber handgun as he and another guard subdued the fugitive.

Ng, a native of Hong Kong who had sworn never to be taken alive, has been under a suicide watch in a special video-monitored cell at the Calgary Remand Center since his capture.

His alleged accomplice in the California slayings, Leonard Lake, 39, an ex-Marine, committed suicide by swallowing a cyanide capsule after he was arrested in a shoplifting incident June 2 in South San Francisco.

Lt. George Kowalski, chief of the police homicide squad in San Francisco, said Monday Ng told Canadian authorities Lake killed at least six of the people.

Kowalski said Ng's remarks came Sunday during a five-hour interrogation by two San Francisco police investigators in Calgary.

"He's blaming Lake, Leonard Lake, for what went on in Wilseyville," Kowalski told the Los Angeles Times. "This is nothing we didn't expect. He's blaming the other guy, the dead guy."

The officer said Ng told investigators that Lake killed Paul Cosner; Harvey and Deborah Dubs and their 1 1/2-year-old son, Sean; Jeff Gerald, and Cliff Peranteau, all from San Francisco.

The six are among those listed as missing and linked to Ng and Lake.

Nine bodies and about 40 pounds of human bone fragments were dug up on the grounds of the mountain cabin where Lake lived in California. Sheriff's deputies also found a concrete bunker with a cell-like room equipped with leg and arm restraints, allegedly used for sex-torture sessions.

Ng was charged with three counts of kidnapping and false imprisonment after authorities discovered bodies near the cabin.

On Monday, San Francisco District Attorney Arlo Smith said it will be about a week before Canada is formally told of the extradition request.

But Devlin, Ng's lawyer, vowed to fight his extradition under an article of the Canada-U.S. extradition treaty that says Canada does not have to comply with such a request when the accused faces the death penalty in America.

Canada has no death penalty and its judges in the past have been reluctant to extradite people who could face the death penalty in other countries.

Moslems Agree To End Fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Leaders of Lebanon's Druze, Sunni and Shiite Moslem communities today issued sweeping proposals to disarm and dismantle all militias in war-torn Beirut and rewrite the constitution.

Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami issued a statement at dawn on a "new national plan" drawn up by 12 Moslem leaders during an 11-hour meeting in the Syrian capital of Damascus Monday and today.

The 12 agreed to "collect all weapons and end all militias, to dissolve all militias" and to "rebuild a new army so it will be capable of carrying out its national role against the Israeli army and defend the country."

The Damascus meeting was held under the auspices of Syrian Vice President Abdel Halim Khaddam. Lebanese Moslem leaders attending included Karami, Druze warlord Walid Jumblatt, who is Lebanon's tourism minister, and Shiite Amal militia chief Nabih Berri, the nation's justice minister.

Their plan pledged "to draw up a new constitution that will achieve unity for Lebanon and affirm its identity and national role" and end "sectarian despotism."

Never before have so many Moslem leaders made such an explicit call.

with more money going to the cities that spend the most, proportionally, on roads, Kirchhoff said.

The distribution of revenues from the existing 4 cents-per-gallon tax would remain the same with the county getting 65 percent and the cities getting 35 percent. But under the agreement, the tax and the formula would be extended to 30 years instead of 10 years, Kirchhoff said.

The county needed cities representing 50 percent of the incorporated area of the county to sign the agreement by July 1 for it to become effective. That was the day the state legislature required the agreement to be signed or else the county would have to use the state-approved distribution formula.

in the incident. They were picked up by investigator Karen Reynolds later in the day.

The five youths range from 9 to 13 years of age. Their names were withheld because they are juveniles. They were charged with burglary, grand theft and criminal mischief. They were released to their parents.

In the bicycle thefts, a police report said that the man and his friend were walking 5th Street and Wilbur Avenue Monday when they noticed two bicycles parked in a wooded area near a lake.

The two apparently saw the bicycles and stole them. A witness, Thomas LaCrosse, 195 Wilbur Ave., told police that he saw the two leave the wooded area on bicycles.

The bicycles belong to Henry Bridgeman and Shane Douglas, two Lake Mary Youths who were fishing during the theft.

A computer check of Stephen Baldwin Writer, 19, of 414 Oakwood Ave., Sanford North Carolina, showed several warrants issued by that city's police department.

Writer is wanted for grand theft auto, burglary and parole violation. In a police interview, Writer told investigators that he and his juvenile friend rode the bicycles from Lake Mary to his brother's apartment in Maitland.

Lake Mary Police contacted the Maitland Police Department which arrested Writer.

...Sprinklers

8,000-square-foot metal warehouse, one of the type of buildings covered under the ordinance and what he called one of the most popular storage buildings being used in Sanford. The cost for the building is about $56,000 but with a sprinkler system it would cost $8,000 more, he said.

Commissioner David Farr agreed with Spolski, calling the ordinance thorough but "excessive." He said he agreed with requiring sprinklers in apartments and condominiums but not smaller commercial buildings. Commissioners should talk to builders before passing the requirement, Farr said.

But Neel said the size of the building isn't as important as what is stored there. Such buildings usually house combustible material, he said.

Spolski disagreed, saying if someone stores combustible materials in a commercial building they have to get a permit from the city. If it is determined combustible materials are stored in a building, then require a fire wall or other means to prevent fires, he said.

But after the meeting, Spolski said if a commercial building catches fire, "let it burn," because "that's what insurance is for."

But Commissioner John Mercer said the the commission should think first of the safety of Sanford's citizens, not the cost to a developer.

City Manager Frank Faison

annexing more land they will need more money for roads, he said.

"In 30 years there may be less county (land) than there are cities," Farr said.

But Mercer and Mayor Smith said the "rolling formula" would probably mean Sanford would get more money for its future road needs, although they both said that wasn't assured.

"We're buying a pig in a poke, let's face it," Mayor Smith said. "But at least it's a pig and not some other animal."

She based part of her support on the fact that Sanford is getting "a lion's share," about 10 percent, of the revenues from the 4-cent tax.

The Seminole County Commission is expected to approve the 2-cent tax today at its regular meeting. If approved, as expected, the tax is scheduled to go into effect Sept. 1.

that the ordinance is needed. And in what seemed a dispute of Spolski's claim that the law would stifle growth, Faison said that cities with sprinkler requirements are booming.

"Strong construction goes to those areas with strong codes," he said.

Former City Manager Warren "Pete" Knowles, appearing before the commission, said the "bottom line" of builders' opposition to sprinklers is the cost. But, he added, the city's first obligation should be the safety of the citizens, not costs to the builder.

The commission voted 4-1, with Farr opposing, to give initial approval to the ordinance. The ordinance will be given a final hearing July 22.

...Fees

revenues from the gasoline taxes are conservative, allowing nothing for growth in those revenues.

County commissioners are also slated today to extend both gasoline taxes from the original 10 years envisioned earlier to 30 years.

Hooper noted the impact fees for transportation being recommended by staff are to remain in effect until a consultant yet to be hired does a comprehensive study on impacts created by new development on the county road system.

There is no fixed date for the hiring of the consultant or for his study to begin or be completed.

Meanwhile, as commissioners discussed in workshop other ways to raise money to improve roads, Commissioner Barbara Christensen urged that the commission levy a "transfer fee" against existing homeowners when they sell their homes.

She said the existing homeowners are also creating impacts on the road system and should be helping to pay the costs.

Commissioner Sandra Glenn said before a transfer fee could be levied against existing homeowners who sell their homes, a special or general act of the Legislature would have to be adopted. She urged that discussion of such a fee be kept separate and apart from other impact fees.

She advised Mrs. Christensen to take her idea to the legislative delegation and to the transportation committee of the state Association of County Commissioners to see if she can get support.

Wright suggested that the county endorse a doubling of the cost of vehicle license tags and that the additional money be used for roads. Mrs. Glenn said the Legislature might go along with increasing that fee but would most likely keep the resulting revenues for the state.

Male Nurses Carry On In Face Of Prejudice

DEAR ABBY: I read your column about male nurses, and having been one for the last 13 years, I must comment.

Did you know that male nursing dates back to 1190 when the Teutonic Knights were founded to care for the wounded during the Crusades? Also, during Biblical times, the Knights of St. Lazarus were founded to tend the lepers.

I have had to face a great deal of prejudice while practicing my chosen profession (No, I didn't ever want to be a doctor. And yes, I care for female patients just as a female nurse would.)

I feel that I am rendering a humanitarian service regardless of whether the patient is man or woman, rich or poor, black, white or yellow. My wife, who is also a registered nurse, has been very supportive. I realize that I am not alone and must do my part to bring the male nurse to an equal footing. Until recently, the armed forces did not grant equal rank or pay to male registered nurses although our training was identical. (Female nurses enjoyed officer status automatically. Male nurses did not.)

So here I stand, heterosexual and proud to be a nurse and a man. Physicians, God bless them, spend a relatively short period of time with their patients, but nurses are there around the clock, faithful advocates of the patients' rights and needs.

Thank you, Abby, for an opportunity to air my thoughts. — RAYMOND EARL STANFORD, R.N., SAVANNAH, GA.

DEAR NURSE STANFORD: Well said. My mail these last few weeks has been filled to overflowing with kudos for the male nurse.

Read on for a letter that says it all.

DEAR ABBY: What's all this static about whether or not a male nurse should care for women patients in "intimate situations"? I am a taxi driver, and on two separate occasions I assisted in delivering a baby. And how about all those policemen who have done the same?

When a woman needs help, false modesty goes out the window.

"DOC" (MY NICKNAME NOW)

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe the prejudice of some women toward male nurses.

Women are fighting for equal rights and want to be accepted in a man's world, but they don't want men in theirs. How about equality for men? I am a young woman, but I am personally more comfortable with a male doctor than a female doctor. Who knows? The female doctor could be a lesbian, right?

And as for "Lois," who said, "Child molesters, perverts, wife beaters, etc. were men" — women can also be child molesters, perverts, husband beaters, etc., right?

So, in conclusion, it doesn't really matter who takes care of you when you're sick as long as you receive proper medical attention.

NURSE'S DAUGHTER IN JAPAN

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't believe the letter from "Lois in New York," who wrote, "If I had to go to a hospital, I'd give strict orders not to send me a male nurse to even give me a bedpan. (I would sooner be looked after by the cleaning woman.)"

The gall of that woman! If Lois should go into cardiac arrest when the cleaning woman and a male nurse are the only people around, I hope the cleaning woman knows whether to administer epinephrine, lidocaine or atropine, since she'd rather have the cleaning woman look after her than a male nurse. — L.B. Sanford Pain Control Gets To The Headache's Cause

Of all the so-called triumphs of the pharmaceutical industry the "headache remedy" is the most dangerous to life and health," according to Dr. Thomas F. Yandell, who practices chiropractic family health care at Sanford Pain Control Clinic, 2471 S. Airport Boulevard in the Winn-Dixie shopping center.

"This is not to say the headache remedies are virulent poisons, in themselves dangerous to life — although our government at times had to prohibit distribution of certain types for that precise reason," he added.

"The real trouble is that the less toxic and the more apparently effective a headache remedy is, the more dangerous it becomes," he said. "A mere headache remedy overthrows or suppresses a mere symptom, while the trouble causing the symptom remains to progress in gravity, often until a serious condition develops."

Pain of any sort is the alarm bell, which nature employs to signal trouble. Remember this when a headache occurs, you flirt with tragedy when you treat a headache rather than its cause.

Some headaches have a simple explanation, such as those of the "morning after" an evening of overindulgence in drink or food. Any other headache, particularly if chronic or recurring, is a warning signal which will send any careful person to his doctor or chiropractor.

Dr. Thomas F. Yandell, chiropractor

Intermediate causes of headache are many. They may include digestive, eliminative, kidney and heart troubles, eye troubles (chiefly eye strain), infected tonsils, nerve pressure from spinal conditions and sometimes though very rarely, brain trouble itself. In women, disorders of the reproductive system often are the cause of the headaches.

Dr. Yandell provides a primary service to prevent, diagnose and treat health problems for the whole family through chiropractic at his clinic. Sanford Pain Control has four chiropractors on staff and its open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. seven days a week for the convenience of patients.

Determining the basic cause of an illness and effecting its correction without the use of dangerous drugs are the special skills of Dr. Yandell. So when a headache troubles you, call for an appointment at 323-5763.

"Do not delude yourself that your trouble is a simple one which can be easily corrected with an 89-cent package of "pain killers," warned Dr. Yandell.

Headaches can, of course, result from many conditions, but research has revealed that a common cause of headaches can be traced to the area of the cervical vertebrae (spinal bones of the neck).

Because the neck is extremely mobile, there is constant danger of displacement of one or more of these vertebrae, which may compress and irritate the cervical nerves.

Migraine headache is particularly distressing. It has been determined that it is usually caused by irritation of the upper cervical nerves which affect the cranial nerve fibers and result in the throbbing pain associated with migraine and which later becomes a steady dull pain in the temple area.

Through reflex action, this condition also may result in stomach or liver pains, nausea, vomiting, fast heart beat, and other upsets of internal organs.

Certain activities and vocations may cause unusual stress in the neck. Athletes, mechanics, homemakers, office workers, farmers and others who must twist or maintain unnatural positions.

Remember, heeding the headache warning can avert serious complications.

Temporary-Work Industry Booming

By Sarah Oates
(c) 1984, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The temporary employee business is booming in the Washington area, many businesses report that they now regularly budget in use of temporary workers to avoid having to hire workers only for a short-term project or face eventual layoffs if the economy takes a downturn.

Even the federal government finds the idea of temporary workers appealing. Last December, Donald J. Devine, then director of the Office of Personnel Management, advised federal agencies to hire more temporary workers in place of career workers, claiming it offered better options for management flexibility.

Edward Dunkelberger, a partner in the law firm of Covington & Burling, said his firm has increasingly turned to temporary help in the last five years. "We concluded we were better off maintaining a staff for minimal demand. We can satisfy short-term increases with temporary help. It's more cost effective and better management."

"Our business has changed from a replacement and fill-in service to an effective labor tool for managing labor costs," said Frank Liguori, an executive vice president of Olsten Corp., one of the nation's three largest temporary agencies. Olsten's direct and franchise sales have leaped from $233 million in 1983 to $332 million last year, profits growing from $3.7 million to $6 million.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics rates temporary growth as one of the five fastest growing industry today. The three largest firms, in addition to Olsten, are Manpower Inc., a subsidiary of the Parker Pen Co. and Kelly Services Inc. All three firms have experienced huge growth in recent years. Kelly reported a 41 percent growth in sales, up from $524 million in 1983 to $741 million last year, profits jumping from $17.5 million to $27 million. Manpower Inc. broke $1 billion in sales for the first time last year, reporting an increase in corporate profits up from $34 million to $42 million.

Although temporary agencies stress that they do not tell companies to lay off workers to hire temporary employees, they do encourage them to use their temporary employees rather than create permanent positions. The National Association of Temporary Services, which represents the bulk of the temporary manpower business, reported that 5 million people worked as temporaries last year, with 600,000 jobs filled by temporary workers in any given week.

Temporary help is attractive to employers because there is no risk of eventual layoffs. In general, the more a company lays off employees, the greater the percentage of its payroll it has to pay into the federal unemployment fund, since the federal government computes that percentage based on how many employees a company has let go. By hiring only temporary workers, a company can keep down that percentage, which ranges from 1-2 percent to 10 percent of the total payroll, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

BLS officials have expressed concern that the use of temporary workers is masking a growth in the manufacturing segment of the economy, since employment growth in this area is normally tracked by the agency through the number of permanent jobs in the manufacturing industries.

Consult Physician For Chronic Abdominal Pain

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — For several months I've had pain in my upper-right abdomen, just under the ribs. At first I thought it was a pulled muscle or a bruised rib. Now I notice that something under the ribs — maybe the gallbladder — is slightly swollen and tender. Is this worth seeing a doctor about?

ty pulls the blood from your brain. This temporary circulatory interruption can cause lightheadedness and visual difficulties. The reason is that your blood pressure does not react instantaneously to force blood against gravity when you quickly change position. The good news: This is not serious. You can avoid the symptoms by sitting or standing with less vigor. Move more slowly and with catlike movements; look cool. The bad news: It may get worse as you age.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR READER — Any kind of recurring abdominal pain merits medical attention, especially if the discomfort is associated with a lump. It is beyond the scope of this column to speculate on the many possible causes of your symptoms. An inflamed gallbladder is certainly at the top of the list, but there are a lot of complicated organs crammed into that space; your doctor is the most qualified person to investigate the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My fingernails break and split easily. Is there any kind of vitamin I can take to help strengthen them?

DEAR READER — Some people have brittle fingernails because their hands are in water often. Others may experience nail splitting from dietary deficiency. Most people whose nails break easily can find no obvious cause for this; occasionally, occupational factors may be important — but most people's nails just tend to become brittle with age.

First, get your spouse to do the dishes, or use rubber gloves. Second, make sure you are eating a balanced diet. Third, have a medical checkup to confirm you're in good health. Last, try eating gelatin every day; the protein may strengthen your nails.

DEAR DR. GOTT — If I sit up quickly or cough hard, I see spots in front of my eyes; this can last for a minute or so. I've experienced this since I was a child. I am 28. Is this a sign of a more serious illness?

DEAR READER — No. When you sit or stand suddenly, gravi-

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
British expert Victor Mollo, in his book "The Finer Arts of Bridge," exposes the reader to the world of deception and artifice that exists in bridge. Mollo is captivated by the opportunities that abound for psychological plays. Here is his introduction to today's deal:

"Declarer starts with the considerable advantage of having no partner to mislead. He can spread the most blatant falsehoods with impunity, but more often than not, it is the simple ones which are the most profitable."

After East's lead-directing double of five hearts, West dutifully led the nine of hearts against six spades. Declarer did not think that East would be so foolish as to double with nothing in hearts, and so he rose immediately with the heart ace.

The ace and king of spades drew all the defenders' trumps, and now declarer was looking for either minor suit queen. However, there was no immediate need to undertake that search. It could not hurt to lead a heart first. But which heart?

True, leading a low heart would establish the jack for a discard from dummy, but one discard in dummy would avail nothing.

Keeping a poker face, South played the heart jack from his hand. East won the king and not wishing to give declarer the apparent sluff and ruff with another heart, switched to the eight of diamonds.

Curtains for the defense!

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY JULY 10, 1965
Opportunities to add to your holdings will develop for you in the year ahead through a unique set of circumstances. You could be fortunate by being in the right place at the right time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take extra pains today to protect your resources, as well as other prized possessions. You could suffer some type of loss if you get careless. Major changes are ahead for Cancers in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) People with whom you deal today will reflect your behavior toward them. To receive cooperation, you must show indications of being cooperative.

VRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Acting before thinking could cause unnecessary problems for you today. Consider all of the ramifications, even in situations that may appear insignificant.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Companions will influence your behavioral patterns today. Extravagant associates could easily induce you to spend more than you can afford.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually when you establish objectives, you're determined to achieve them. However, if things don't come easily today, you may toss in the towel.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could make a mistake today similar to one you made in the past. Profit from your experiences and don't repeat old errors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep your wits about you in your commercial dealings today, especially if you have to deal with someone whose standards appear questionable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

You win be more effective today if you can function independently of others. Weak associations could impede your progress or even set you back a few paces.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be optimistic regarding the outcome of events today, but also be realistic. Proper efforts can overcome your problem, but they can't be wished away.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you might feel used by someone you consider an old and trusted friend. Instead of rushing to judgment, try to comprehend the reason for his or her behavior.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Although you may be tempted to do otherwise, don't ignore the instructions of your nobler instincts today. Maintain your high standards, regardless of frustrating conditions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Guard against tendencies today to exaggerate personal achievements. If you tell a fish story, your listener may produce a tape measure.
