Good Advice Worth Paying For

When old Commodore Vanderbilt was organizing the New York Central Railroad and taking particularly long chances in doing it, he often encountered unusually technical legal problems—"Well, what's wrong with this way?" he said in his brusque way one day after an exceptionally baffling conference with his attorneys. "Why, you can't do that," one of them said. "That's against the law." "I don't hire you to tell me what I can't do," Vanderbilt snapped back. "I hire you to show me how to do what I want to do."

That seems to have been the mind of many of our big men in years gone by. For them, laws were not made to be obeyed, but to be artfully dodged in one way or another. The success of a man often depended not so much on his innate ability, his financial acuteness, or his clear-headed insight, as upon the skill of his attorney in devising ways and means of defeating the real purpose of the law. And, with most of our laws made by lawyers and with the law-making lawyers so concerned with the corporations lawyers, sophists were commonly found.

One of the amazing developments of the Morgan investigation has been the intricate series of vast and complicated transactions carried on by this company and accomplices, scrupulously within the law. The testimony reveals in enormous domain of financial detail, reaching into every part of the country, with special force, out-reaching leaders in every branch of political life and independent profits which made one fairly choke on accumulated debts and unpaid income tax.

Mr. Morgan's attorney, John W. Davis, undoubtedly there are other, probably scores of them, who have worked the Morgan case. Davis has been the superior genius who has stored the Morgan ship of state and it seems, legally, between Seth and Charlotte. Mr. Davis has shown his client how to do what he wanted to do and it has cost money. Davis has taken tremendous losses in inventory which he has not accounted for in his tax returns. The disbursement of the United States Treasury has been a high degree of protection by war, where would have found no domestic market for their production, and have taken tremendous losses in inventory which he has not accounted for in his tax returns.

Cyrus Curtis

Most great men, when interviewed about the reasons for their rise to a lofty level of virtue to which they fly claim. There was one exception to this general rule which died yesterday morning.

Cyrus H. Curtis, as head of the house which produces the Saturday Evening Post, the Daily Mail and the Country Gentleman, and as president of the firm which publishes the Philadelphia Morning and Evening Ledger, Philadelphia Inquirer, and the New York Evening Post, was modest in the estimation of his own talent. He said his success was due to his ability to select men who could do a better job than he could.

Judging from the good fortune which attended all of his ventures, Mr. Curtis must have been a veritable genius. His fortune, estimated at half a million dollars, allowed him to possess the purest luxuries of civilization and to live in a house which he had built for his father and to come to a more independent sight to see if it also remembered that Mr. Curtis was an old man.

Because of his self-effacing manner, there are probably countless millions of admirers of Mr. Curtis' magazines who have never heard of him. But here in Florida, where he never failed to make his annual winter pilgrimage, his name is widely recognized. In Miami and St. Petersburg, few people do not know that he is the owner of a beautiful white yacht, which he has named "The Endeavor," and who comes to our shores to spend a few days in the winter.

EDITH'S NOTE: This is the sixth installment of a simple story which is being published in this paper. It is an important story which deals with the value of your liberty, the value of your home, and the value of your property. It is a story which is being published in this paper for the purpose of showing you how to protect your property and your home.

It is essential that we keep in mind the fact that the transactions which are being carried on by the Morgan group are not merely a matter of money. They are a matter of power. They are a matter of control. They are a matter of influence. They are a matter of prestige. They are a matter of respect. They are a matter of honor. They are a matter of dignity. They are a matter of pride. They are a matter of self-respect. They are a matter of self-dignity. They are a matter of self-honor. They are a matter of self-pride. They are a matter of self-respect. Luckies Please!

Men aren't the only ones who know Luckies are better

We women know that there's always a good reason for everything. And when a cigarette is so unusually mild, so pure and fine-tasting as Luckies are—what other reason but "Tasting" could there be? No man has to tell me that fine tobacco play an important part—but Luckies please me completely in still another way. My cigarette is such a personal thing—when I place it between my lips I want to be sure not to offend my sense of feminine daintiness. You men have your reasons for saying "Luckies Please!"—but with me it's the welcome purity as well as the flavor and mildness that "Tasting" impresses.

In the senate investigation it came out that Norman H. Davis, who represents the United States at the Geneva peace conference, had loaned $300,000 from the Morgan company and still owes $100,000.

"The average American," says Arthur Brisbane, reaching a long way for a monkey wrench, "would have thought it more fitting if the Allies had been demoralized during the war, and they were in no position to ship to us the necessary surplus quantities of goods that we would have required. Furthermore, the United States was fully able to produce all the manufactured goods which its population could absorb.

Thus, it was perfectly clear to everyone that no matter how hard the Allies were working to get back their feet, the average American would think it more fitting that this country's spokesman should be a person of more business acumen than one who gets his personal account by selling surplus quantities of goods which have been produced in our country.

Many Wood, Grass Fires Threaten To Do Heavy Damage

(Continued from Page One) night fires were called by E. Kent garage where a small fire was quickly put out. Someone struck a match to burn a garden tank that was being filled, and a small blaze resulted.

Yesterday there were three fires. One in a grass fire near the Crown Paper Co. plant on North Elm Avenue, one on 11th and Cypress Avenue where a small truck had caught fire, and a third near the City greenhouse on Elm Avenue where grass had been set fire.

Mr. Papworth this morning expressed his appreciation to the Department and particularly Assistant Chief Tom Vernon for the efforts that were made in putting the Sunday and Tuesday fires in Loch Arbor under control.

As a property owner in that section, Mr. Papworth said, he is not in the least sorry that the fire was not his. The fire was not his, but the property in the Loch Arbor section.

HOW NEW YORK PROTECTS HER CHILDREN! This electric taping and sealing machine (below), shown in use at the great New York bottling plants of Standard Milk Company, provides an added protection to the milk.

The machine places a hooded cap upon each bottle (which already has a single cap) and fastens it on with a welded wire seal which cannot possibly be broken without detection. Scientific tests prove that this extra cap completely protects the milk in the bottle. Picture shows machine with Charles Heston, supervising foreman, holding safety-tapped bottle beside one from which the extra cap has been removed. The machine sets-tape 35 bottles per minute.

SHOWDOWN ON VET PROGRAM TO BE FORCED

ment would be worked out that would meet the approval of a majority of the House, leaders in both parties frankly predicted that before the bill is sent to conference the House would accept the Senate amendment.

The President was described as having taken the stand that instead of all disabilities that arose within six years after the war being presumed to be of service origin, it should be demonstrated to the government that they are before compensation is awarded.

Members of the special Democratic veterans' committee that conferred with President Roosevelt, Director Douglas of the budget, and Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, said the President was willing to accept and increased veterans' outlay of up to a hundred million dollars annually, but that he was opposed to the principle that the Senate amendment would lay down. This was construed as designating as service connected all cases arising within six years after the war.

Meanwhile Speaker Rainey flatly predicted that if the Connally amendment was adopted the President would veto the bill and that if the measure was passed over his veto without Congress increasing taxes to meet the outlay and maintain a balanced budget the President would call the Congress back into extra session.

"The budget has got to be balanced," Rainey said.

"If the Congress adjourns after accepting the Connally amendment to the independent offices bill, throwing the budget $170-

000,000 out of balance, the President would be justified in calling an extra session."

Copies of the President's revised regulations, issued Tuesday, were received in both the Senate and House yesterday but advocates of the Connally amendment said it did not meet with their entire approval.

"WELL! BILL PERKINS !!"

HAVE you ever walked along a street in a strange city . . . strange faces passing you . . . Then, a face you knew . . . recognized immediately? "Bill Perkins!" you exclaimed, "Gee, I'm glad to see you."

Have you ever shopped in a store in a strange city . . . a score of local products stared you in the face, all good, perhaps all reliable. Then you saw a familiar advertised brand of what you wanted. "Good! I'll take that," you said. Right then you subconsciously were glad for advertising. You felt an immediate warmth, closeness, confidence—the reliability of old friendships.

Advertising is one of the greatest public benefits ever invented for business. It enforces quality, full value, honest statement of fact. For, when a manufacturer advertises his product, calling attention to it risks his very business existence—if it is less than he states.

This paper is constantly presenting advertised products for your attention. Many of them are old friends. But, many of them perhaps greet you for the first time. Read the advertisements, get acquainted with new friends you'll be glad to know and patronize.
