LAST HOPE IS GIVEN UP FOR ENGLISH SUB

PORTLAND, Jan. 29. (A.P.)—The last straw of hope for the rescue alive of 61 men and officers who went down with the British submarine M-2 Tuesday was snatched away today by the publication of an admiralty statement saying it is no longer possible to hope. The object sought yesterday, on the theory it might be the submarine, was found to be an old wreck.

Desperate efforts were made yesterday, to reach the object 18 fathoms below the surface of Portsmouth which naval officials believed might be the ill-fated craft.

The battle against choppy sea and swirling tides was spurred on by the reception of "sub-surface signals" on the hydrophone of the destroyer Thruster, and by a great patch of oil discovered by the destroyer Sabre.

Rescue workers were aware, however, that there was no moment to be wasted. The official estimate of from 18 to 50 hours in which the crew could remain alive expired about 6:30 last night but with exceptionally favorable circumstances it was believed they might have a few hours more.

Several vessels clustered about the site. Four great lifting cranes, known to navy men as "camels," were towed out from Portland.

These divers were sent down yesterday, the failed to reach but (Continued on Page Two)

Gandhi Adherents Defy British Police With Stones

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 29. (A.P.)—Militant Nationalists defied police last night with stones and shouts while the government resorted to whipping to check the activities of juvenile hooligans.

A Hindu boy of 14, charged with picketing a British bank, was sentenced to be flogged.

Three Nationalists were killed at Allahabad when police fired on a threatening mob after the arrest of several Nationalist pickets.

The round-table conference committee carrying on the work here in London met at New Delhi. They are scheduled to come here today. Mahatma Gandhi's rebels are prepared to shoot, "Go back home," when they arrive.

The Nationalists last night lighted bonfires as fast as the police put them out, shouting anti-British slogans and stoning foreign automobiles.

The Bombay government enacted a new anti-boycott measure providing for the arrest of Indian merchants who closed their places of business in protest against the arrest of Gandhi and against the previous series of emergency laws designed to put down the civil disobedience movement for independence.

Gandhi, in jail at Poona, has gained two pounds since his arrest three weeks ago.

Further Testimony Is Given As To Drigible

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. (A.P.)—High naval officials are considering selling the Los Angeles and using the money to enlarge the ZRS-5, slatership of the Akron. In testimony of the House Naval Committee's investigation of reported defects in the Akron Commander Garland Fulton, of the Navy's design division, today read a letter from Rear Admiral Moffett suggesting the ZRS-5, now under construction will be increased to the capacity of 7,500, 000 cubic feet or a million feet more than the Akron.

The Senate Finance Committee decided against passing any general relief measure in this session. Speaker Garner said the emergency tax increase legislation, now being formulated, can be repealed when the budget is balanced and the nation's income placed on a sound basis.

County Agricultural Club Declines To Accept Prices Of Celery Hauling Crews

The Seminole Agricultural Club last night declined to accept the prices for hauling of celery and prices laid down by several individuals engaged in that business. Low cost of other automobiles and gasoline was given as a reason for demanding that the celery haulers reduce their prices and accede to the rates recently laid down by a special committee from the club, headed by Roy Pippin, chairman.

Mr. Pippin presented the haulers' demands and pointed out that some of the prices asked were the same that many members have been paying for the past several years, although materials and labor are now far below the cost paid in other years. The committee was asked to present the haulers' demands and the following year to pay. Crew hauling, any

Garner Fined For Resisting Arrest But Other Counts Fail

W. F. Garner, Sanford farmer who was arrested for driving while drunk, information and resisting arrest on Jan. 1, was fined $50 and costs on the latter charge by Judge James G. Sharon in County Court this morning. The charge of driving while drunk and of information were dropped and the case was continued until January 31, 1932, when the case will be heard on the information charge. The case was continued until January 31, 1932, when the case will be heard on the information charge.

Other cases disposed of before Judge Sharon were Wednesday morning were:

George Carlson, charged with carrying a pistol without a license, pleaded guilty. Judge Sharon suspended any sentence in payment of court costs.

Novel Burns, charged with assault and battery, pleaded not guilty, but was found guilty by a jury and fined $10 and costs.

D. C. Moran, charged with possessing liquor, pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs or three months with $75 suspended upon promise of good behavior.

S. E. Grant, charged with aggravated assault, pleaded not guilty, but a jury declared him guilty. Sentence will be passed later.

Deals Of Modern "Midas" Probed By State's Attorney

BEAVERDALE, Ill., Jan. 29. (A.P.)—The business affairs of "King Midas" are under investigation again, the state's attorney's office revealed.

The "king" is Alfred W. Benham, who won this nickname as well as "Fifty Per Cent Al" because his business repeatedly paid that much interest. That was about a year ago.

Subsequently 14 indictments were returned, charging for the most part, operation of a confidence game and Benham announced he was retiring from the business world. He said he dealt in bankrupt stocks, and the bankers complained that his high rates of interest paid investors caused the withdrawal of approximately $10,000 from local banks.

The investigators from the state's attorney's office said his latest project has to do with notes, sold for $100 and purchased for $120 at the end of 30 days.

A complaint from the Rockford, Ill., Chamber of Commerce prompted the present inquiry, they added.

out the Chinese or Japanese delegates participating, which declared that no treaty settlement imposed by Japan's invasion of China would be recognized.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 29.—(Friday.)—(A.P.)—American Consul General Edwin S. Cunningham expressed indignation today at the Japanese actions in Shanghai. He said he was at a complete loss to understand the Japanese actions which he said were contrary to their statements made to foreign officials during the past several days.

The Japanese consul general assured the entire consular body at a meeting last night, Cunningham said, that the Japanese did not plan to use force, at least during yesterday and today. Developments during the night had increased the seriousness of the situation tremendously, the American consul general added. He said he was concerned with the safety of all Americans in outlying areas and would again urge them to come within the international settlement for safety.

Cunningham said a report that the consulate had been bombed was untrue and malicious.

SHANGHAI, China.—(Friday.)

Jan. 29.—(A.P.)—Japanese marines battled the Chinese defenders of Shanghai today, broke down their resistance in a series of bloody battles in the narrow cobble streets, and precipitated the most critical international complications of the Sino-Japanese conflict by occupying the native city.

After the occupation had been effected, Japanese airplanes, flying in high circles, dropped bombs on the Chapel native section. Fire swept the little mud-brick and wood houses of the area, and the Chinese populace was in consternation.

The bitterest fighting of the occupation, which was carried on with the same machine-like precision displayed by the Japanese when they pushed their Chinese enemies out of the cities of Manchuria, took place at the very edge of the international settlement.

Within the barbed-wire boundaries of the settlement patrolled United States marines and the military forces of other nations, backed by artillery and tanks. Advancing along the boundaries, the Japanese attempted to break through these defensive lines, but were refused passage.

The civilian male population of the foreign city was mobilized, armed with rifles and put on guard in the business district. No clashes between Japanese troops and the soldiers of any nation except China were reported, but Shanghai was tense with apprehension.

Several hours after the first wave of the Japanese advance moved through the tiny streets of the native city, Chinese reinforcements were rushed up for a corner-attack of major proportions.

Two armored trains brought these reinforcements, which were deployed and hurriedly put into action in an effort to stem the inexorable Japanese advance. It was then that the Japanese airplanes were brought into action.

The bombing activity was brief. But after a pause of a little more than an hour, it was resumed again at the first trace of the dawn. In the interim planes had circled over Chapel, dropping flares.

A drizzle of rain made visibility low, but the glare of burning Chapel was plain enough. At least 500,000 Chinese live in the tortuous warrens of the district, and it was reported that fire was sweeping through it unhampered.

The explanation of the air activity was reported to be unexpected reverses suffered by the Japanese. Reinforcements were ordered into the district by the Japanese command.

Just before the planes went out the second time to drop their bombs on Chapel, Japanese headquarters announced its losses were nine killed and 110 wounded. No figures were available on Chinese losses, but they were reported to be heavy. Many civilians were believed to have been killed.

It was estimated by the Japanese that 4000 Chinese opposed their 2000 marines at the beginning of the fighting. But considerable reinforcements were moved in by the Chinese. About 24,000 Chinese troops were believed to be in the immediate vicinity of Shanghai.

The semi-daylight of 1 A. M. revealed menacingly over the foreign settlements and the Chapel district.

Rain an hour later another plane joined them. They confined their activities for the most part to scouting, although occasionally they dropped a bomb.

Meanwhile the flames spread. As they swept through the lightly constructed houses of the native quarter they could be seen for miles around. Several sections of Chapel were burning to the accompaniment of the rattle of machine guns and occasional burst of rifle fire.

The occupation was effected by two waves of invaders, totaling 2,000 men. The first started exactly at midnight from positions outside the Chinese sections of Hongkew and Chapai. Many of the men were crowded into motor trucks for the push into the territory of China.

They operated efficiently. As they moved along the boundaries of the Chapel section they dropped a strong detachment at the head of every alleyway. These detachments, in accordance to a signal, moved as one to the interior of Chapel, brushing back the lines the Chinese raised against them.

The movement caught the Chinese between the boundaries of the international settlement and the economic Japanese line. When the second wave began to be felt, the Chinese put up vicious resistance. Reinforcements were rushed to them. But the outcome appeared certain. There seemed no possibility that the Chinese would be able to provide any more than a temporary barrier against what promised to be a greater penetration into the Chinese territory than the mere occupation of Shanghai.

One of the Japanese tricks was to plunge the whole Chinese city into darkness. All street lights were shot out—a measure taken, a Japanese officer explained, to protect the advancing soldiers from the rifles of Chinese snipers.

Heads down, rifles at the ready, with bayonets fixed, the Japanese line swept onward in the darkness through the little alleys of the Chinese section toward the open country beyond.

The advance was carried on under the protection of the guns of 37 ships of war lying off the Shanghai bund in the Whangpo. Simultaneously the Japanese shelled Woosung, the fort 18 miles from Shanghai. A Japanese detachment then landed there.

In those sections of the Chinese part of Shanghai where no resistance was made, Japanese residents crowded the street to cheer their soldiers, and Japanese photographers took pictures of the troop movements.

But for the Chinese it was a night of terror. They remained in their houses, hiding behind barricades as the streets outside were swept by the machine gun fire of the advance guard. It seemed certain that many civilians were killed.

Three hours and a half after the first wave of the attackers got into action, Japanese headquarters announced that virtually every position outlined in their original plan had been seized. But heavy fighting still was going on.

A detachment of marines was dispatched along the railroad leading from Shanghai to Fort Boosung. The Japanese plan seemed to be to seize the road in order to prevent Chinese troop movements.

The long threatened occupation of Shanghai, declared by the Japanese, to have been necessary to stop anti-Japanese agitators, was looked upon as the most critical complication of the Manchurian conflict because of the foreign interests in this port. It was undertaken after the Japanese had served two ultimatums on the Chinese municipal authorities.

The original ultimatum expired at 6 P. M. yesterday. Two hours before that deadline Japanese Consul General Mushi presented three-hour program emphasized the fact that during this time of stress in this country and abroad it is especially appropriate to celebrate the bicentennial and to study the principles of Washington. Dr. L. A. McNair, Presbyterian minister of Orlando, gave the two reasons why the country should participate wholeheartedly in the celebration as—the greatness of Washington's character and accomplishments and the fact that his spirit is needed now, as never before.

Col. W. E. Kay of the law firm of Kay, Adams, Ragland & Kurz, another one, demanding the removal of all Chinese armed forces stationed about the city. The immediate release of all Japanese goods seized during the boycott and the freeing of Chinese merchants held as prisoners by anti-Japanese associations.

The original ultimatum, calling for suppression of anti-Japanese societies, already had been accepted by the Chinese authorities when the new demands came. This acceptance was contained in a communication to the Chinese general from Mayor Wu Teh-Chen. But the consul replied by remarking that it remained for the Chinese to make effective their promises.

"If the promises are not carried out," he said, "the Japanese will act without further warning."

Meanwhile male residents of the international settlement had taken steps to protect their homes and families. The volunteer corps of the settlement was called out under arms to augment the regularized troops of the treaty powers.

The famous race course became the military center of the community. It was the assembly place for the regular troops, steel-helmeted and carrying field equipment. Cavalry units and tanks were included among them.

United States marines were posted along the Avenue Haig and Soochow creek. Troops from the standing Japanese detachment on duty in the settlement took over the protection of Honkew and the Yangtze districts north of Shanghai. The British were sent to the Hunglo area west of the city, and other strategic posts were assigned to the French.

Jacksonville, introduced by Governor Carlton as a veteran attorney, interested not only in law but in everything relative to civic betterment, urged that more attention be given to an utterance in Washington's farewell address, in which he warned the country to beware of entangling foreign alliances.

"It is time for us to pause and see whether we are drifting," he declared. "The country is never so great as when it lives within its borders and follows the principles of Washington."

Rabbi Israel L. Kaplan, Mayor John T. Alsop, Jr., Gen. Edward Anderson, Mrs. Ida Floyd White and Mrs. W. M. L. Wilson, president of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, were others from Jacksonville who spoke, and pledged the support of various organizations represented.

Others present from Jacksonville were: Mr. and Mrs. John B. Floyd and Mrs. H. A. Pillars.

Three members of the governor's cabinet, Secretary of State R. A. Gray, Attorney General Cary D. Lanis, and Superintendent of Schools W. S. Cawthon were present and spoke briefly.

Harry Lee Baker, state forester, and Dr. Edward Conradi, president of the State College for Women, were other speakers from Tallahassee.

The three members of the Florida Bicentennial Committee, appointed in the summer of 1929, were present and made short addresses. They are: Ray Ferran of Eustis, Thomas M. Shackelford of Tampa, and Walter P. Corbett of Frostproof.

Mayors, organization representatives and others from Pensacola to West Palm Beach pledged their support to the celebration committee and the governor.

and bottled milk was scarce, so I tried using Klim

...NOW I WOULDN'T KEEP HOUSE WITHOUT IT!

You'll find Klim convenient, too! When you make creamed dishes or puddings or cakes you simply spoon in Klim dry—just as you do flour or sugar. And another thing: with Klim on the pantry shelf, you have a never-failing supply of pure, fresh milk.

For Klim is milk—powdered for safe-keeping. All the nourishment and flavor remain. Only the water has been removed, and nothing added. Re-combine Klim and water, and you again have pure, rich, fresh milk.

Let Your Family EAT Milk

Children and grown-ups need plenty of milk. Let them eat it—that's the simplest way. Just add a few spoonfuls of Klim to your regular recipe. It's no more work and it doesn't disturb the balance of your recipe—yet what a difference it makes in flavor and nourishment!

This FREE booklet tells you how

Send for your free copy of our new recipe book, "Klim Values Unlimited." We'll also send you a free sample of Klim so that you can see its convenience, rich flavor, extra nourishment.

RAIL WORKERS

mands for additional "closed shops."

Only one definite "demand" was sponsored publicly and it was contained in a resolution adopted only a few hours before labor executives said they were "in complete accord." It was made by the brotherhood of railroad trainmen, one of the "big four" brotherhoods, and was embodied in the following paragraph:

"Resolved, that the arrangement specifically provides that the railroads, parties to these negotiations, will not undertake to reduce wages for a period of one year after the termination of this agreement."

Neither A. F. Whitney, head of the trainmen, nor David H. McElroy, spokesman for the entire labor group, would say whether all the labor organizations had adopted the trainmen's resolution or the trainmen had backed down on their demand. Whitney said, however, that his organization had held no meeting since its resolution was passed.

The probable action of other labor organizations was indicated in authorized its executives to "join the representatives of the other standard railway labor organizations dealing with the wage matter and undertake to make the best settlement possible."

The authorization was to "negotiate a settlement of the wage matter on the basis of a percentage deduction from each pay check (not to exceed 10 percent) for a period of one year." The trainmen then specified that the "arrangement" made between the road and the employers must include the provision of full pay the year following the 10 percent reduction.

It was distinctly a surprise move as Whitney announced the decision to the press ostensibly before communicating with the other labor leaders who had waited on the trainmen for 24 hours.

Nineteen other brotherhoods and unions had checked in with the statement they were ready, but without disclosing how they stood on the wage reduction plan. One union, the international longshoremen's association, had dropped out of the national negotiations to take up the matter with local railroads.

The trainmen asserted the monthly earnings of their members are now "far below the amount to permit them to live in comfort and decency" and that it was the position of the brotherhood that wages of such classes should not be reduced. The delegates said they felt, however, that they should join with their brother organizations to make the best settlement possible "in view of all the circumstances now confronting us, for which we are not responsible."

BUSINESS RESUMES

AURORA, Ill., Jan. 29. (A.P.) A blast of whistles at 9 A. M. yesterday gave the signal, "play ball," and business resumed in Aurora after a five-day moratorium. Factory workers returned to their machines, clerks were at their counters again, stenographers again were tapping the old mills.

due to such an extent that it is now forced to suspend this work unless it can be secured from the state's marketing sectors.

After a meeting with Karl Lehmann, secretary of the county trade body, the celery booth sales committee reported that a booth will be opened on the Orlando road where a first class celery will be offered for sale. It is also the intention of having salesmen meet trains and buses with celery. The booth now at the corner of First Street and Monroe boulevard will also sell celery under the sponsorship of the committee.

F. E. Donner, president of the club, appointed a committee to follow up another committee to see that all small sized celery is destroyed according to a decision of the club and binner, recently. This action will extend through the week Ralph Shannon, C. H. Brown and Mr. Bolly were named on the committee. They will start work on the celery.

Karl Lehmann spoke briefly upon the intention of the trade body taking an active part in any celery which will all the farmers of this section.
