"Even the oldest inhabitants, some of whom have seen the phenomenon in past years, agree that they never haw anything like it before," the Star declares, "It is no exaggeration to say that they are there by the millions, so thick that they obscure sight of the bright beauty spots on the sand and lime bottom of the stream.

"The fish are about three inches in length, allvery bige in color, and came, down the St. Johns and Ocklawaha rivers from the Atlantic ocean. They are salt water fish and grow to be 12 or 18 inches in length at maturity, and are common in Atlantic coast waters. They are not edible, and when they run in great numbers off the coast, they are caught in seines and used for fertilizer, as they are very rich in oil.

"They usually appear at the Springs at seven-year intervals, remain for about three days and then depart from whence they came. They present a beautiful sight as the sun's rays are reflected from their silvery blue bodies."

In a echool full of bright, self-respecting students, there are very likely to be one or two completely lacking in good common sense. And that goes for busimess, too ... particularly the beer retailing business.

Out of thousands of beer retailers who conduct respectable, law-abiding businesses, there may be a few "dunce" retailers who disobey the law or permit anti-social conditions.

These few unwanted retailers are a menace to the future of the beer industry...and also of the benefits beer has made possible. Right here is Florida, beer provides employment for 18,294 persons, supports an annual payroll of $15,757,151 and contributed $1,735,893.93 last year in state taxes.

It is the brewers' responsibility to make good beer - the retailers' responsibility to sell beer in wholesome surroundings - and the legally constituted authorities' responsibility to enforce the laws. All of these, working together with the public, are needed to protect the future of beer.

You, too, can help the cause of moderation by (1) patronizing only reputable places where beer is sold; (2) and reporting any violation you may observe to the duly constituted authorities.
