Mount Trashmore envisioned

KEY WEST — Artists in this often wacky resort city want to give the local landfill a new look by sculpting four famous faces on the mountain of refuse dubbed Mount Trashmore.

While Mount Trashmore honors four presidents, these artists envision faces from the city's history including author Ernest Hemingway, playwright Tennessee Williams and Capt. Tony Tarracino, mayor and former barowner.

The fourth is still undecided, but singer Jimmy Buffett and county mayor Wilhelmina Harvey are leading contenders.

Studio owner Robert Kennedy says his proposal is likely to elicit laughs.

"It's a little bit tongue-in-cheekish, but I'm serious about it," he said. "If they could do it anywhere, they could do it in Key West."

He said the faces would be built on the ground out of chicken wire shaped with wood and stucco. Then they would put a billboard-like structure on the mountain to hang the faces on.

The landfill site, on city-owned land on Stock Island, is scheduled to close in 1993.

Others in town have already been thinking about uses for the mountain.

"I thought it would be a great water slide," said Assistant City Manager Ron Herron. He's also considered a 100-foot tall giant conch shell, lit up at night, of course.

Village to fight toilet order

FIRE ISLAND, N.Y. — The Village of Ocean Beach, known as "the Land of No," is likely to keep up its fight against public potities, its lawyer says.

A court says the village — known for its strict and sometimes peculiar rules — has committed another "no no."

The court, after a five-year battle, has ordered Ocean Beach to build public restrooms. Frank Isler, the village's attorney, said he believes the village board will vote Saturday to appeal — again.

In the late 1970s, officials in the neatly kept seaside community barred eating cookies on the sidewalk. That was declared unconstitutional after a widely publicized trial.

Other village prohibitions are still enforced: no eating or drinking on the beach; no bicycles, anywhere, during the summer; no ball playing on sidewalks. And women must cover their swimsuits once they leave the beach area.

In recent years, Ocean Beach officials have resisted court orders to install public toilets, apparently because they wanted to discourage tourists.

Correction

A $2,500 scholarship recently given to Seminole High School was donated by Mary Glenn, in memory of her husband, Norman. The award was presented by Mary's brother Bill Glenn and his wife Betty, of Sanford. The scholarship was given through COMSAC alumni-student group. The names of the donor were incorrectly reported in the Positively Sanford supplement on Sunday.

Fireworks tonight

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Be at the Sanford lakefront this evening, and enjoy the fireworks. The local Independence Day fireworks display will climax the local observance of the nation's 215th anniversary.

The 2nd annual Peoples Fireworks display is scheduled to begin at 9 p.m. The event's primary organizer, Steven Alford said the total spent for fireworks this year was $5,000, a thousand more than last year. The total fireworks program will last slightly under a half-hour. "We are going to launch the fireworks one after the other," Alford said, "so we can really put on a display. We don't want to let time elapse between the shots, so people certainly won't be bored." He added, "We promise, no stalling in the launches." In all, there will be 500 aerial rockets.

The fireworks launch site will be on the northern side of the New Tribes Mission headquarters. Alford said the best location for watchers will be at Fort Mellon Park, from the Civic Center eastward. Persons wishing to have a more comfortable seat may consider taking lawn chairs to the park.

During most of the days events, certain street areas will be closed to traffic. The extreme northern end of Mellonville Avenue, from First St. to the lakefront will be closed, as will San Juan, on the eastern end of Fort Mellon Park. Seminole Boulevard, along the lakefront from the Civic Center to its eastern end will be closed all day.

A portion of east First Street will be closed only during the parade, scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. this evening, as will a portion of north Sanford Avenue near the Chamber. See Fireworks, Page 7A

Furlong says 'No' to sales tax hike

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County Commissioner Larry Furlong said Wednesday he is opposed to the proposed one-cent sales tax.

The explanation, he said, is that it is based on projections of too high of population growth and ties up a penny sales tax that may be needed to solve a possible drinking water crisis.

But all four of his fellow commissioners disagree, saying the road improvements are needed and the sales tax is the fairest way of paying for them.

Next Tuesday, residents will decide whether to increase the sales tax by a penny for 10 years to pay for $300 million of a $450 million transportation improvement program for the next 10 years. The tax would apply to purchases less than $5,000 and would automatically end in 10 years.

Furlong said the tax-financed road program encourages population growth, rather than controls it.

"How can we ask the people to vote for a road program that's driven by a comprehensive plan that is likely not to be accepted by the state?" Furlong said. "I think we need to scale down the plan, then maybe we can look at the sales tax, but we should also look at all sources of revenue."

Furlong residents who think if the sales tax is approved, it will eliminate the need for a property tax increase should think again.

"People are being misled if they think if the sales tax passes, there will be no property tax increase for 10 years," Furlong said Wednesday. "That is just not going to happen."

Furlong also said the recent release of a preliminary county study that shows drinking water in Sanford and other locations around the county could be threatened with saltwater within 14 years indicates the county shouldn't give up the sales tax option if it faces a water emergency.

"If we get some years down the road where many of our wells are pumping brackish water, we're going to have to have some way to pay to replace those wells," Furlong said. "Conservation is not going to solve the problem."

But Furlong's fellow commissioners disagree. All four commissioners said the tax is the fairest, least painful way to solve a real problem of congested roads.

"More people pay for it than just those who live here," said commission chairman Fred Streetman. "The road list won't stimulate growth, it accommodates the growth that will be here. Even if we

Bill of rights - for kids

Teachers' Union chief calls on Bush to endorse children's welfare

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

MIAMI BEACH — The head of the nation's largest teachers union called on President Bush today to embrace a "children's bill of rights" aimed at assuring that all youngsters come to school healthy enough to learn.

"In spite of the rhetoric, in America, children are not a priority. Because children don't vote," Keith Geiger said in remarks prepared for delivery before 8,500 delegates gathered here for the National Education Association's annual convention.

He called on the federal government to endorse a five-point "bill of rights" guaranteeing children ample nutrition, medical care, a secure place to live, a quality education, and adequate safeguards from abuse, violence or discrimination.

Geiger, a former math teacher running unopposed for a second term as president of the 2.1 million member NEA, accused Washington of skewed priorities. He said the nation's leadership is willing to fund questionable foreign aid or savings and loan bailouts, but unwilling to adequately fund successful early childhood development programs such as Head Start.

Geiger's address marked a continuation of recent efforts by the union to shift the spotlight of the school reform debate away from problem schools or teachers to aiding problem-plagued families.

"I can guarantee our fellow citizens that schools are improving. It's childhoods that are not," he said.

In an interview, Geiger said teacher delegates were also likely this week to consider a resolution crystallizing the union's opposition to President Bush's call for a voluntary system of national testing as a means of increasing school accountability.

Union officials said the convention would also discuss the worst threat to teacher jobs in more than a decade. The threat is posed by budget problems facing more than 30 states.

Geiger's remarks also focused on the failure of President Bush and the nation's 50 governors to take steps to achieve the first of six goals agreed upon at an education summit nearly two years ago: that by the year 2000, every child will begin school physically, emotionally and academically ready to learn.

"That is only a wonderful dream unless the government gets involved," Geiger said.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Bridge demolition to begin

ST. PETERSBURG — It will take workers 18 months to dismantle and dynamite the Old Sunshine Skyway Bridge in what could be the largest bridge demolition project in the country.

Work began Wednesday to remove the four miles of the bridge's two spans, made up of 12 million pounds of steel and 64 concrete piers.

"It's kind of like coming in and sweeping up ... with a very large broom," said Joe Blasewitz, who will oversee the $8.1 million project for the state Department of Transportation.

The span between St. Petersburg and Manatee County has stood for the past decade as a mangled, rusted reminder of one of Florida's worst maritime accidents.

In May 1980, a phosphate ship crashed into part of the southbound span, sending 35 motorists to their deaths in the storm-tossed waters of Tampa Bay. A modernistic replacement bridge was built in the mid-1980s.

Woman convicted for drowning her sons

JACKSONVILLE — A jury will return July 12 to determine if Veronica Perdue should die in Florida's electric chair for the murder of her two young sons.

A jury deliberated only two hours Wednesday before finding Mrs. Perdue guilty of first-degree murder in the Feb. 10, 1990, drowning death of her sons, Devin, 4, and Corey, 2.

Mrs. Perdue, 24, lowered her head and began crying when the jury returned its verdict.

"We never doubted this woman was guilty of killing her two children," said Assistant State Attorney Frank Ashton.

During the penalty phase the jury will recommend to Circuit Judge Peter Dearing whether Mrs. Perdue should die in the electric chair or receive a life sentence. Judges are not bound by the jury's recommendation, but usually follow it.

Prosecutors speculated the woman killed her children for insurance money, but grandparents had stopped paying the premiums on one policy and her claim was rejected in the other.

DUI conviction results in prison term

WEST PALM BEACH — John Gasiorowski is a three-time loser as far as Florida's legal system is concerned — and he will pay with a seven-year prison term for his latest drunken driving conviction.

Gasiorowski drove drunk once in 1983 and was convicted. His license was suspended for six months. He did it again three years later. This time he killed someone and injured four others.

Two months ago, out of jail and driving without a license, he rolled a friend's car into a canal. His blood alcohol level was 0.24, more than double the legal level of intoxication.

"The man just cannot learn his lesson," Assistant State Attorney Greg Coleman said Tuesday. "He just keeps drinking and driving."

Medals awarded 46 years later

SPRING HILL, Fla. — Forty six years after he was injured in combat and imprisoned by the Nazis, Francis Hengesbach was finally awarded his military medals of honor.

Hengesbach, 78, an Army sergeant during World War II, was given the Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Prisoner of War Medal and six other military awards in a presentation Wednesday by U.S. Sen. Bob Graham.

The retired auto dealer said he said he didn't start thinking about the medals until a few years ago, as his 12 grandchildren began growing up.

"I decided for posterity reasons, I should apply," he said in an interview last week. "I'm no hero by any means. I did what everyone else did and had to do."

After 45 years, adopted son locates birth mother, siblings

Associated Press

BRANDON, Fla. — More than 45 years after he was put up for adoption, David Hurley's six-month search for his natural mother culminated in a name, a number and a nervous telephone call.

"Who is this?" snapped the 69-year-old widow who answered. "Why are you looking for me?"

The caller said simply, "I was born on Nov. 5, 1945."

There was a pause on the other end of the line. Then a softer voice replied: "I had a son who was born on that day. And I wonder every day of my life how he is and where he is."

Tears came to Hurley's eyes as he told his newfound mother. "You can stop wondering."

The Brandon engineer said he was at first apprehensive about the search, afraid he would hurt his adoptive parents or he would be his mother's worst nightmare coming back to haunt her. "But I suddenly realized that she was getting old, and if I was going to find her, I should do it now," Hurley said.

Over the Fourth of July holiday, Hurley, who was raised as an only child, is to meet mother Lucy Ballenger of New Castle, Ind.

The reunion is set in Burnside, Ky., where one of his three newfound half-brothers lives. There also is a half-sister.

During his first telephone call with his mother, "We spent 20 minutes crying," Hurley said.

Cameras do not disrupt courtrooms

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — Cameras in four state criminal trials did not distort news coverage of the trials or disrupt the judicial process, a University of Florida study showed.

The findings released Wednesday could foreshadow the results of a federal experiment that began this week, said Sherry Lee Alexander, a UF journalism researcher.

Up to 45 states allow some form of camera coverage in the courtroom. Beginning July 1, eight federal courts will follow by allowing cameras in civil proceedings as part of a three-year experiment.

"After interviewing judges and attorneys, surveying jurors and analyzing TV and newspaper coverage, I found no examples of inaccurate coverage," Alexander said. "Most people I spoke to before I began the study predicted I would see distorted coverage."

"Our study suggests that courtroom cameras may have been a scapegoat for the disruption in the Lindbergh kidnapping trial, which led to the original courtroom camera ban more than 50 years ago," she said.

Alexander studied broadcast coverage of four first-degree murder trials in Florida's Eighth Judicial Circuit in Alachua County in 1989. She watched the proceedings from jury selection through sentencing, and conducted interviews before and after the trials.

Her research is believed to be the first such study of the actual behavior of broadcast journalists in the courtroom.

North Florida town tries curfew

Associated Press

GREEN COVE SPRINGS — A summer curfew for teenagers is being imposed by this North Florida community to see if it has any effect on crime and violence.

"This community has asked for this and we are responding to their needs. I don't go along with a permanent curfew, but this will let things cool down for a while. We may have to extend it," said Mayor Don Fullerton.

The City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to adopt an emergency ordinance making it illegal for youths under 18 to be out in public after 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and midnight on Friday and Saturday.

It took effect immediately and expires Sept. 1, when the council will review its effectiveness.

Parents whose children violate the curfew face fines ranging from $50 for the first offense to $500 for the third and subsequent offenses.

Police Chief Gail Russell has been asked to closely monitor the curfew and report back monthly to the council.

The curfew was proposed in May by a group of students at R.C. Bannerman Learning Center, where an estimated 60 percent of the 158 students have either seen someone killed or know someone who was killed.

Study: Cremations on the rise

Associated Press

CORAL GABLES — More Floridians are choosing to be buried where they died rather than having their remains shipped to their original hometowns.

The statistics on burials in Florida, compiled by the University of Miami, show that many elderly people are now considering Florida their home and feel more people will be attending their funerals here.

The decision on what to do with the dead is closely related to religious values, income, race, ethnicity and the rural or urban nature of the area, said Ira Sheskin, a UM professor who directed the study conducted by graduate student Lisa Meday.

"The fact that the percentage being shipped is on the decline means we're reaching the point where the family of the elderly are living in the state," said Sheskin.

Sheskin said a survey of the demand for cemetery space in South Florida led him to prepare the unusual survey.

The study also showed that cremations are on the rise while the rate of burials has decreased.

Statewide figures for 1980 to 1988 show that burials were down by 12 percent, shipment of bodies for out-of-state burials decreased by 16 percent, and cremations increased by 73 percent.

Dade County varied somewhat from the statewide pattern. Dade was one of only four counties to show increasing burial rates, as well as Gadsden, Hamilton and Holmes counties.

POLICE BRIEFS

Habitual offender arrested

Michael Joseph Matuszski, 43, 1480 N. Oregon Street, Sanford, was arrested Tuesday by Altamonte Springs Police. According to a police report, when his pickup truck was seen stopped in a fire lane at the Altamonte Mall parking lot, he was asked to move it. After the vehicle was seen driving in a dangerous manner, it was detained, police said. Matuszski was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, driving while his driver's license was revoked, and being a habitual offender. A check of his driver's license indicated it had been suspended 16 times.

Theft resolved

Bobby Washington, Sr., 38, 323 Station Street, Altamonte Springs, was charged Tuesday with burglary and theft by Seminole County Sheriff's deputies. Washington was in confinement at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility at the time, on a separate charge. The latest case involved the theft of an auto battery. The incident occurred June 22 at Johns Auto Repair, 102 Brewer Street in Altamonte Springs. Finger prints taken at the scene were reported to have matched those of Washington.

Man turns himself in

When Sanford Police were called June 24 to investigate a suspected domestic dispute at 732 Cherokee Circle, Sanford, they reported finding several drug-related items. Tuesday, Philip Gregory Overbec, 35 of that address, turned himself in at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. He is charged with possession of cocaine, and possession with intent to distribute cocaine. He was held under $5,000 bond.

Multiple theft charges lodged

Sean Clement Murray, 19, 207 Sanora Blvd., Sanford, has been placed in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility after reportedly trying to escape arrest.

According to three separate case reports, Murray was first seen driving a 1977 Dodge stationwagon on Elm Avenue near 13th Street in Sanford. The vehicle was identified as having been stolen, and an officer gave chase. The car reportedly stopped at 20th Street and Elm., with Murray attempting to escape.

A report made by a second officer reported that Murray apparently stole a bicycle at 2100 Oak Avenue during his escape attempt. He was finally stopped at 25th Street and Magnolia Avenue.

Charges made against Murray include grand theft auto, reckless driving, fleeing in an attempt to elude, and driving with a suspended license. Connected to the bicycle incident he was also charged with burglary and petty theft.

The stationwagon has been identified as one reported stolen from James Wilson, while parked at the Midway Commerce Park, 5449 Benchmark Road, in Sanford.

Warrant arrests

The following persons have been arrested on outstanding warrants:

● Linda Scrma Abbott, 45, 308 Wild Olive Avenue, The Springs, Longwood, was located at her home Tuesday. She was wanted on a warrant issued in Pinellas County Court, on charges of grand theft and exploitation of the elderly. She is being held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility awaiting transferral.

● James Bachoffer Robinson, 28, 229 Acorn Drive, Longwood, was apprehended Tuesday, during a suspicious person check by Sanford Police, at 1st Street and Laurel Avenue, Sanford. He was wanted on a warrant issued for violation of parole.

● Edward Louis Gordon, 21, 508 Cedar Creek Circle, Sanford, was arrested by Sanford Police Tuesday. He was wanted by his probation officer on charges of violation of parole, connected to a charge of battery.

Sheriff contender expresses doubt

By J. MARK DANFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A one-time contender for Seminole County sheriff may remove his hat from the ring.

Ed DePuy of Sanford said he is devoting more time to his job with a Tallahassee lobbying firm which is keeping him out of Seminole County except on weekends.

"For many years, I've wanted to be sheriff of Seminole County and I believe I could do a good job," DePuy said Wednesday. "I had actively sought the appointment and had people supporting me. Now, I'll just keep my options open."

DePuy is a former Seminole and Brevard County deputy and former Seminole County

State Attorney's Office Investigator. He is active in the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee.

DePuy said he is spending more time with the firm of Hebrock and Associates, a firm that lobbies the Florida Legislature on business issues. The firm is also the national fundraiser for the Adam Walsh missing children foundation and is an active fundraiser for political campaigns. DePuy said he has worked for the firm for several years, but has recently become more active in it.

If DePuy decides not to seek the sheriff's office in 1992, the Republican primary field will be narrowed to two announced candidates. Private investigator Harvey Morse has staged an active campaign and former Seminole County deputy Larry Conniff has been building a primary bid for the office. Conniff ran an unsuccessful campaign against former sheriff John Polk in 1988.

The only Democrat considering a sheriff's bid is David Locker, an Orange County State Attorney's Office Investigator. Locker has opened a campaign account but is not actively seeking the office. Locker said Wednesday evening he is gaining support and may be prepared to announce whether he will seek the office in January. Locker cannot run for sheriff without resigning his job.

Also said to be considering a bid for sheriff is Terry James, who ran for Orange County sheriff former Seminole County captain Harold "Beau" Taylor.

Delta rocket launches navigational satellite

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL — An unmanned rocket roared into space Wednesday with the latest in a series of advanced navigational satellites, ending a seven-month hiatus in building the military constellation.

The Delta rocket blasted off from Cape Canaveral Air Force Station at 10:32 p.m. EDT. The 13-story booster lit up the sky for miles as it rose and streaked over the Atlantic Ocean.

It was the first time the Air Force sent up a Navstar satellite since November. The launches were put on hold because of an electronic problem with the last Navstar placed in orbit.

Air Force officials said they wanted to make sure they understood the problem, and could prevent recurrences, before resuming the $8.5 billion program. The $65 million satellite separated from the booster 25 minutes into the flight, joining 10 advanced Global Positioning System spacecraft already circling the world. Its final orbit will be 12,530 miles high.

Military officials said the GPS network was invaluable in helping U.S. forces navigate during the Persian Gulf War. Troops tuned in to the network's radio signals with receivers as small as a hand-held telephone. The spacecraft guided them with an accuracy of within 50 feet and sometimes 10 feet.

The Air Force plans to have 24 Navstar satellites in orbit by 1994, three of them spares. The first Navstar was launched in February 1989.

Ed Parsons, a spokesman for the Air Force Space Systems Division, said the problem with the satellite sent up Nov. 26 was traced to one of two electronic units that operate the solar panels.

Parsons said the problem with the satellite sent up Nov. 26 was traced to one of two electronic units that operate the solar panels.

Seminole asked to assist financing Vets' hospital

Associated Press

ORLANDO — Orange County and private landowners are offering a $20 million package of land, public services and improvements to attract a new veterans hospital to the Orlando area.

The county commission voted Tuesday to put up $3 million in road, water and sewer services to assist one of two landowners offering to donate sites to the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs for the 470-bed hospital.

Commissioners also would like the city of Orlando and Seminole County to put up $1 million each to improve services. The donated land is valued at $15 million.

The department is considering either Orange, Brevard or Volusia counties for the facility to be completed by 1998. The project also may be split, with the hospital in one county and a smaller clinic in another.

Big Red One: Defending freedom in 4 wars

EDITOR'S NOTE — Getting there first is a proud tradition of the 1st Infantry Division, the Big Red One, a fighting force that has served honorably in four wars this century, from the trenches of France in World War I, from the sand dunes of Iraq in Operation Desert Storm. Now back home in Fort Riley, Kan., the division will get a special salute this Fourth of July.

By GEORGE ESBER
AP Special Correspondent

FORT RILEY, Kan. — The warriors of the 1st Infantry Division, the famed Big Red One, today are celebrating the nation's birthday among family and friends and hospitable surroundings far from the din of battle and horrid sights of war. Less than five months ago, the latest generation of the division broke through Iraqi defenses in Operation Desert Storm, the first troops to breach Saddam Hussein's bulwarks and minefields. It was apt that it was the 1st Division to blaze the path for others, since it was the first outfit to go overseas in World War I, the first American fighting force to reach France in World War II and the first Army division in Vietnam.

Manhattan with parades and sundown salutes on America's 205th birthday, its homecoming celebration.

The ceremonies will honor 1st Division veterans, from 91-year-old Clinton Dattel and Max Ottenfeld to 19-year-old Raphael Crews. This Independence Day sits memories of another parade 74 years ago. On July 4, 1917, troops of the 1st Division's predecessor, the 1st Expeditionary Division, marched to the adoration of the French along the boulevards of Paris to the tomb of Lafayette, the French nobleman who fought with the rebel colonies against the British in the War of Independence.

Two days later, America's first division was born when the expeditionary force was redesignated the 1st Division. It included the 16th, 18th, 26th and 28th Infantry and the 5th, 6th and 7th Artillery, all handpicked by Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the forces sent to Europe.

The division's ranks span four generations and four wars, from the trenches of World War I to the beaches of World War II, from the jungles and mountains of Vietnam to the rolling desert sands of Kuwait and Iraq.

The only war the division missed in the past century was Korea, in the early 1950s, and only because it was on occupation duty in Germany after World War II.

The division is rich in tradition, its heritage as old as the America it protects. One of its units, Delta Battery, 1st Battalion, 5th Artillery, is the oldest in the Army, organized in March 1775 by Alexander Hamilton.

Its feats are volumes of history, a roll call of 32 Medal of Honor recipients, America's highest honor.

Barrett, Bondsteel, Brown, Colyer, De Franco, Durham, Edwards, Ehlers, Ellis, Henry, Hibbs, Law, Leonard, Lindsey, Long, McGraw, Merrill, Miller, Monteth, Morelock, Parker, Peterson, Pinder, Reese, Robinson, Rogers, Rubio, Schaefer, Stryker, Thompson, Warner, Will.

More than 14,000 of its men and women fell on the battlefields that live on in history and in the minds of surviving old soldiers of the division who gather once a year in reunion to perpetuate the legend.

Cantigny, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne of World War I; Normandy, Omaha Beach, the Battle of the Bulge, of World War II; the Iron Triangle, Bau Bang and the Michelin rubber plantations of Vietnam.

While it is a joyful homecoming for the warriors of Desert Storm, 17 comrades-in-arms, one of them a woman, are mourned, fallen along the howling desert sands: Belas, Carr, Collins, Damian, Daugherty, Douthit, Kamm, Miller, Morgan, O'Brien, Perry, Plasch, Streeter, Swartzendruber, Tillar, Trautman, Wedgewood.

"We had men who were dedicated," says Max Ottenfeld, 91, of Chicago, who enlisted in World War I right out of high school. He fought at St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne, was gassed by the Germans and suffered shell shock.

"They were proud of what they had accomplished," Ottenfeld adds. "We were never withdrawn trying to make an advance. We made all our objectives."

Clinton Dattel, of Southampton, Pa., also 91, was among the first volunteers for World War I.

"We broke through every battle," he says. "We were the first ones to do the fighting and we did the first breakthrough of all the fronts. After we broke through, the other divisions would come in and hold the places that we conquered."

Cantigny was the first victory of the war in May 1918.

It has been on continuous duty ever since and in August 1942 it was again redesignated the 1st Infantry Division. Again in World War II and Vietnam, the division was the first into combat.

On D-Day, June 6, 1944, the Big Red One spearheaded the biggest allied offensive of the war, the invasion of Normandy, the cataclysmic battle of World War II.

2 Floridas remained loyal to Britain in 1776

By BILL KACZOR
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA — Florida and southern portions of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana will join the nation in celebrating Independence Day, but they didn't share that revolutionary spirit 215 years ago.

On July 4, 1776, two of the 15 British colonies now part of the United States remained loyal to the crown while the other 13 declared their freedom.

The Loyalist colonies were East and West Florida. They stretched from the Atlantic Ocean to the Mississippi River, separated by the Apalachicola River in what is now the Florida Panhandle.

Their continued fidelity to Britain primarily was a matter of dollars and cents, said Bill Coker, chairman of the History Department at the University of West Florida in Pensacola.

"East and West Florida were in a different financial relationship with England than were the other 13 colonies," Coker said in a recent interview.

The British Floridas, formerly a single Spanish colony, were funded by parliamentary grant. Therefore, they did not face the issue of taxation without representation that became a battle cry of the revolution.

"They had some taxation, but it was not to the degree that the other colonies were," taxed, Coker said. "If they joined the rebellion here they'd lose their parliamentary subsidy, which in essence pretty well paid for most of the governmental operations."

West Florida was the biggest of the 15 colonies in territory, covering all lands south of 32 degrees, 28 minutes north latitude to the Gulf of Mexico and west of Georgia to the Mississippi River except New Orleans, which was Spanish.

Pensacola, a wilderness trading post, was West Florida's capital. The colony included what now are Mobile, Ala., Baton Rouge, La., and Natchez, Miss.

East Florida's capital was St. Augustine, but it had few other settlements. Deerskins, naval stores, indigo and oranges were economic mainstays of the two colonies.

The other 13 colonies made overtures for the Floridas to join in their revolt, but they weren't very strong overtures and received little response, Coker said.

"Early on they discovered the people of East and West Florida were not interested," he said. "They didn't have the same complaints as the others did."

Another factor was the Floridas were just too far away, he said.

The Floridas were still frontier colonies populated not just by Englishmen but a diverse mixture including free and enslaved blacks, Indians, Spanish, French, Creoles, Cubans, Italians and Greeks. There also was an influx of Loyalists from the other colonies after the revolution began.

At St. Augustine, Patriot heroes Samuel Adams and John Hancock were hanged in effigy, wrote Marjory Stoneman Douglas in her history, "Florida: The Long Frontier."

In 1777, Burton Gwinnett, Georgia's military commander, sent proclamations across the border urging East Floridians to rise in revolt, but nothing happened. He then invaded East Florida but was unsuccessful. His Georgia volunteers and Continental troops failed to meet as planned. The invaders were attacked by Seminole Indians and many of the volunteers deserted.

Meanwhile, the East Florida Rangers conducted raids into Georgia to capture cattle and participated in several battles, including Yorktown, on the British side.

The Patriot threat to East Florida disappeared in 1778 when Loyalists and British soldiers captured nearly all of Georgia. W.B. "Woody" Skinner and W. George Gaines wrote in "Adventures in Florida History."

Continental loyalists also made an incursion into West Florida in 1778. A force led by James Willing, a captain in the U.S. Navy, captured Natchez.

"The British at Natchez were not very sympathetic to the cause because Willing took their slaves and their cattle and everything he could lay his hands on... and took them all down to New Orleans" where they were sold, Coker said.

Although the Floridas didn't join the revolution, they may have played a part in the outcome. When Spain declared war on England in 1779, Bernardo de Galvez, the Spanish governor of Louisiana, invaded West Florida, capturing Baton Rouge and other Mississippi River outposts in short order.

The following year, he took Mobile and in 1781 captured Pensacola in the biggest battle of the campaign, ending British control of West Florida.

"If they had been able to just turn loose everybody here and send them over to Yorktown and places like that... I'm not saying that the British would have won, but you leave the question mark there," Coker said. "A couple extra thousand troops at Yorktown might have had some bearing on it."

East Florida remained British throughout the war but was returned to Spain by treaty in 1784. That same year, the other parts of the British Empire, primarily the Bahamas and West Indies.

National pasttime

Operating on the theory that more is better, the National League is on the verge of giving Miami and Denver expansion major-league baseball franchises in 1993. There's no quarrelling with the fact of more: $180 million in franchise fees from the new cities to be distributed among baseball's owners, and more jobs, at a minimum salary of $100,000, for players. But better?

Expansion will make baseball greener and grayer. Expanding by two new teams means adding to big league rosters 50 players who would otherwise be in the minor leagues or in forced retirement. More players past their prime will stay a year too long before hanging up their spikes; more rookies who can't bunt or hit a good curve will show up in the big leagues a year too soon.

Fuddy-duddys — that's someone old enough to remember pre-expansion baseball of the 1960s — already complain that baseball's earlier expansions have diluted the talent and lowered the quality of play. In 1993, younger fuddy-duddy's will join the chorus.

Expansion to mile-high Denver also will create novelties. Yale Professor Robert K. Adair, whom the late Bartlett Giamatti appointed physicist to the National League, has calculated that a ball struck hard enough to fly 400 feet in New York or Oakland will travel 440 feet in Denver's thin air. Home runs will be cheap, curve balls will break less, fastballs will get to batters an instant quicker and visiting outfielders will misjudge line drives and fly balls. All that will be mildly amusing but it will make purists cringe.

Still, adding two new franchises brings baseball an opportunity, if owners seize it: the possibility of realigning its leagues to create some natural rivalries. With 28 teams, baseball could have four leagues of equal size aligned geographically. In the West, the five California teams would be direct competitors, and fans would see the Giants playing the A's instead of the Atlanta Braves. Toronto vs. Montreal, Houston vs. Dallas, the Mets vs. the Yankees. Those contests might even be enough to make fans and the sports pages forget fights over big salaries and even bigger egos and pay a little more attention again to the game.

So's your old umlaut

The road to European unity is often a bumpy one, whether it's about agreeing on a common foreign policy or, less comically, bickering about the use of diacritical marks — accents which, in many languages, are placed above, below or sometimes through letters as a guide to pronunciation.

Case in point: a lot of Spaniards, including the foreign minister, took umbrage over what they saw as an attempt by the European Community to take away their tilde, that squiggly little thing placed above the letter n that changes the pronunciation of the word underneath — as, for example, in Espana, which is pronounced Ess-PAHN-ya and means Spain.

It turns out that the Eurocrats weren't really trying to ban the tilde, just objecting to Spanish regulations requiring imported computer keyboards to have a tilde, a rule viewed in Brussels as protectionist. Madrid is amending the regulation, but Spaniards still wonder why the tilde shouldn't be as routinely included on keyboards all over Europe as the french cedilla and acute, grave, and circumflex accents, the German umlaut and those thingamabobs used by the Danes: the little circle above the letter a and the diagonal line drawn through the o, both of which make the word virtually unpronounceable for a foreigner.

Good question! And for that matter, why don't most American firms including newspapers, use keyboards with all those funny-looking gizmos so that we don't have to employ an artist to explain what we're talking about? New world order. Indeed!

A global trend toward bigotry?

One of the hippest jazz albums in the past 40 years is the Count Basie band romping behind Frank Sinatra. It swings with an awesome majesty, and the power of two jazz legends kicking up a storm hasn't dimmed with the years.

In contemplating the current ideological mood in world affairs, I thought of one of the fastest-paced numbers in the Basie-Sinatra album, "Looking at the World with Rose-Colored Glasses."

That's because no amount of rose-colored tint could elicit optimism about a global trend that seems to be giving aid and comfort to bigotry: neo-conservatives in America, young neo-Nazis in Germany and Japan-bashers all over.

Neo-conservatives will take immediate umbrage at any assessment that remotely ties them to neo-Nazis and Japan-bashers, and I don't blame them. After all, neo-conservatives ought to fall within the protected reciprocity of civility that has always governed discourse in our democracy.

John Stuart Mill put it nicely in his discussion of "intemperate discussion, namely invective, sarcasm, personality and the like," then went on to lament: "The worst offense of this kind which can be committed by a polemic is to stigmatize those who hold a contrary opinion as bad and immoral men." That sentence has nagged my conscience for decades, because I have never been mature enough to avoid sinking into the dialectical quagmire of argumentum ad hominem. Unlike most of my conservative adversaries, however, I am not convinced that all of my opinions are unassailable. (Only 98 percent!) But bear with me. I believe there is a legitimate connection.

When 2,000 young neo-Nazis recently marched through Dresden, Germany, sporting Adolf Hitler mustaches and chanting "Sieg Heil," it may not have been considered a cause for alarm among some people. After all, they make up only a minuscule percentage of the total population of Germany. But a similar small cadre of young fanatics in the 1920s paved the way for Hitler's rise to power in the early 1930s.

I don't think Mill's concern about labeling dissenters as "bad and immoral men" would apply to neo-Nazis. Nor would it apply to those who sweepingly indict an entire nation because of its obnoxious trade policies.

What's so disturbing about opposition to Japan's xenophobically inspired restrictive trade policies is that opponents in both the United States and Europe seem more intent on issuing scathing denunciations of Japan than on seeking negotiations to resolve the conflict.

A recent contract report written for the CIA calls the Japanese, "racist" and "amoral." Edith Cresson, the blunt-talking French prime minister, accused the Japanese of staying up nights, thinking of ways "to screw the West." Lee Iacocca has repeatedly warned of Japan's threat to American economic stability. Western corporate and political leaders frequently decry a "Tokyo economic war plan."

A Eurocentric civilization still cannot accept an Asian nation controlling its economies. But we have yet to hear similar howls of indignation when a Western country exerts economic power in Latin America, Africa or Asia.

Not all went well in Gulf War

WASHINGTON — In the weeks following the successful conclusion of hostilities in Iraq and Kuwait, we were bombarded with glowing reports from the Pentagon on how perfectly men, equipment and systems performed. However, now that the military services and joint staff are conducting a more thorough review, stories are beginning to seep out that not everything worked as well as initially indicated.

As was the case with the conflicts in Grenada and Panama, the biggest U.S. military problem continues to be interservice rivalries. According to one analysis prepared for the Joint Chiefs, Desert Storm commander Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf spent as much time refereeing interservice disputes as he did planning to fight the Iraqis.

Each service insisted that it be given its fair share of the workload, and its fair share of the glory. As a result, many decisions were made not on the basis of military necessity but to placate service heads.

The joint command structure Schwarzkopf headed had been designed to prevent this. However, problems arose nonetheless, such as planners from one service refusing to believe that another service's weapon systems could be trusted to accomplish a mission.

One example is that Air Force officers, planning the air war, refused to believe that the Navy's new Tomahawk missile would work. At first they simply refused to include the Tomahawk among available weapon systems. When the Navy came running to Schwarzkopf, he ordered the planners to include Tomahawk strikes. But they were still so unsure of the missile's reliability they ordered two to three times the number of Tomahawks fired at each target as the Navy thought necessary.

In the end the Navy was proved right. The Tomahawks hit their targets 85 percent of the time. But with each missile costing almost $2 million, one Navy estimate is that a half-billion dollars was wasted in shooting Tomahawks at targets already destroyed.

Air Force planners were also unsure that Navy aircraft were suited for the kinds of bombing missions needed. So most key missions in the air war were given either to Air Force pilots or Army attack helicopters. The war ended so quickly that the Navy and the Marine Corps ended up having only minor roles.

Now the Navy is said to be downplaying the results. Adm. Frank Kelso, chief of Naval Operations, has reportedly circulated a long memo within the Pentagon calling the Gulf conflict "unique" and warning that it should not be used "as a model for all future operations."

There appears to be general agreement within the Pentagon that the three biggest difficulties encountered in the Gulf were communications, transport and intelligence.

The most famous story from the 1987 Grenada invasion recounts how an Army unit found itself pinned down, wanting to call in a fire mission from a Navy ship offshore. However, the soldiers could not communicate with the ship. So an officer crawled to a pay phone, made a credit-card call to the operations officer at his home base in Georgia; he in turn called the Navy at the Pentagon, which in turn radioed the ship to order the fire mission.

The Pentagon has insisted such communications problems no longer exist. But one preliminary analysis of the Gulf conflict asserts they not only still exist, but they may be worse than ever. On countless occasions, Army and Air Force units could not communicate with Naval ships, and Air Force pilots had difficulties communicating with Naval pilots they encountered in the skies over Iraq and Kuwait, using secure, scrambled communications.

Things got so bad that Air Force commanders in Riyadh — who were unable to send daily targeting information directly to Navy computers aboard carriers — resorted to hand-delivering floppy disks with the information to each carrier every night.

The transportation problem has long been known. The buildup took much too long. On the day the land war began, after six months, some units' equipment had still not arrived. One analysis says that if the war had lasted even four weeks — instead of four days — it is likely that critical shortages would have occurred.

As for the intelligence failure, Gen. Schwarzkopf has already told a congressional committee that much of the intelligence he was given "was so watered down that it was essentially useless."

Less critical, that is unless you were a soldier in the field, the Army now admits that its much-heralded MRE — Meal Ready to Eat — didn't work as a way to feed large numbers of troops over an extended period. An order has gone out to find a better way to feed troops in the field.

The biggest military problem continues to be interservice rivalries.

How the military disguises playing

WASHINGTON — You won't find anything in Congress' budget for the Air Force that mentions a state-of-the-art golf course sprinkler system or a refinished bowling alley. Nowhere does it specify spending $21,000 on inlaid carpets for the officers' club or $772,000 on a skeet-shooting range.

But the Air Force feels free to spend the taxpayers' money as it chooses anyway. As a scathing internal audit reveals, Air Force officials routinely ignore congressional wishes on how to spend money.

Congress has tried to tighten the purse on military recreation programs and make them pay for themselves, but the Air Force dodges the new rules as easily as it evaded Iraqi anti-aircraft fire.

Instead of complying with the new spending guidelines, the Air Force has kept on funding its pet projects while disguising them in the spending reports as essentials. The Air Force misspent $7.7 million on ill-advised recreational frills over a three-year period, according to the audit report obtained by our associate Jim Lynch.

Almost no base could resist siphoning off funds to improve its golf course. Auditors found more than $1.6 million had been improperly spent on military golf courses. Another $459,500 was doled out for bowling alleys in violation of the spending guidelines.

Myrtle Beach Air Force Base in South Carolina spent almost $600,000 on 21 separate golf course projects. In 1989, base officials even used military prisoners as laborers to maintain the links. The base also blew the wad on lobster cookers, crab traps, bicycles, swim fins, swimming masks, snorkels and badminton sets.

Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio spent $446,068 on golf course projects including a deluxe sprinkler system. Tyndal Air Force Base in Florida spent $13,109 on golf course amenities including a pro shop and score board.

At Eglin Air Force Base in Florida, officials somehow managed to convince themselves that tennis courts fell under the heading of a "mission sustaining facility," and spent $103,775 without alarming anyone.

Officers' clubs loom as a favorite rat hole for pouring money down. At Mendenhall Air Force Base in England, a $70,000 club project mushroomed into a $2.2 million renovation without congressional oversight. The club at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois is undergoing a similar face lift, this one costing $2.4 million. The auditors said that the work "was not accomplished in the most efficient and cost effective sequence."

That's an understatement. The new floors and carpet were put in before the ceiling was torn out for a sprinkler system. In one room the decorators chose inlaid carpet that cost $20,823 for a 12-foot-by-18-foot piece. The Air Force explained that the fancy carpet was necessary to "enhance the aviator image." We hope the aviator image holds up longer than the carpet, which is already fading.

In a bit of creative bookkeeping at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma, officials tried to use money from the B-2 bomber program to relocate and expand a skeet-shooting club. Only 24 of the 7,000 active duty personnel at Tinker are members of the skeet club, but the base was ready to spend $772,000 on the new club when the auditors arrived.

Air Force base commanders defend their actions saying that the spending guidelines are too vague. Most of them maintain they have done nothing wrong. Sources told us that the Air Force hopes the post-war euphoria and pride in the military will help bury this audit.

Congress has tried to tighten the purse on military recreation programs.

A 'Wing-Dang-Do' of a party, Chiles predicts

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — To honor veterans of the Persian Gulf and Vietnam today, Florida planned to light a "freedom flame," hold the biggest military parade in state history and display Iraqi equipment.

"We said we were going to have a shindig, and I think it's going to be a wing-dang-do," Gov. Lawton Chiles said Wednesday, standing on top of a U.S. tank parked in front of the governor's mansion.

Some 15,000 people were expected to attend the day-long festival, according to Jeff Sharkey, executive director of the affair.

People who traveled to Tallahassee for the holiday would be able to see captured Iraqi military hardware, Chiles said.

"I think that's the first time anybody in the country is going to see Iraqi equipment," the governor said.

The events were to begin with the dedication of a "freedom flame" memorial and will conclude with fireworks.

In between, there will be a parade of 86 military units as well as a free luncheon at the mansion for an estimated 5,000 veterans and their families.

Families of soldiers killed in the Gulf War and Floridians who have won the Congressional Medal of Honor will be guests.

The governor said the festival was organized for Desert Storm troops but also would be the "first welcome home Florida has had for Vietnam veterans."

Chiles proposed holding a big Fourth of July celebration months ago.

So far, $70,000 to $80,000 in cash has been donated to pay for the celebration, Sharkey said. He estimated that $100,000 worth of time and supplies has been donated.

Sanford police suggest caution to motorists driving in the area of the parade and other events, especially those in the Fort Mellon Park area.

The parade will consist of a number of antique automobiles, plus a number of displays and marching groups representing various businesses and organizations in the Sanford and Seminole County areas.

It will begin on north Sanford Avenue between the Chamber of Commerce building and the Civic Center, then move to the lakefront. It will travel east to the end of Seminole Blvd., head south to First Street, then west on First back to the Chamber building.

Appreciation for the fireworks and for the arrangements for the various events of today, should be extended to a number of people, including Alford, who instigated the first Peoples Fireworks display last year through the use of public funds. This year, Alford was able to obtain enough additional contributions and public support to increase the amount of fireworks, and make the overall day's event almost double in size and participation.

In Casselberry, another fireworks display will take place this evening. The Seminole Greyhound Park will have its annual fireworks display at the track beginning at approximately 9 p.m. The first fireworks will be sent skyward immediately following the 7th race, with additional displays during the remainder of the evening. The Grand Finale of the fireworks will take place after the 13th race. The display will be set up on the side of the lake near the center of the greyhound track. The best views are expected to be from the grandstand, although there will be limited viewing from outside the park.

The Seminole Greyhound Park is located at 2000 Seminola Boulevard, Casselberry.

Celebrations honor veterans

By KAREN SCHWARTZ

Americans heeding President Bush's call to make this Fourth of July a tribute to veterans of Desert Storm held parades and fireworks displays with a Gulf War theme, and Kuwait even helped bankroll one event with $10,000.

The celebration began early, with a number of marches and fireworks shows getting under way on Wednesday. Many more were planned for today.

In Tallahassee, Fla., captured Iraqi equipment was to be displayed at a parade. "We said we were going to have a shindig, and I think it's going to be a wing-dang-do," Gov. Lawton Chiles said Wednesday as he climbed atop a tank in front of the governor's mansion.

In Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence was adopted 215 years ago, parade organizers made last-minute arrangements for today's activities after Kuwait came through with $10,000 to help cover the cost.

Vietnam veterans planned to exchange POW-MIA flags with their Desert Storm comrades. "This solemn passing of the colors will make our parade more meaningful than any other," said parade coordinator Robert McMahon.

Across the country, millions also prepared for a round of good old-fashioned fun, with barbecues and trips to the beach the order of the day.

Santa Monica Beach near Los Angeles was expected to be jammed. The forecast was for hot weather, and a huge fireworks show was scheduled for dawn.

An explosion at a fireworks show in Chicago Heights, Ill., injured at least 11 people Wednesday, authorities said. Several were hospitalized, including children ages 1 and 2.

After the allied victory over Iraq, Bush urged Americans in March to make July Fourth "a day of special celebration for our returning troops ... a holiday they'll never forget."

Columbia, S.C., did just that on Wednesday. More than 50,000 people lined the capital's main thoroughfare in a sea of red, white and blue to honor returning troops.

Bush urges reflection on freedom

Remember the sacrifices

By CHRISTOPHER COWELL
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — President Bush, celebrating "an extraordinary Independence Day," exhorted Americans to reflect on the sacrifices that have won their freedom as they celebrate today's holiday.

Bush was marching in Fourth of July parades in Marshfield, Mo., and Grand Rapids, Mich. The Marshfield parade is reputed to be Missouri's oldest.

Later today Bush and his wife Barbara were to participate in Grand Rapids' Freedom Parade before returning to the White House in time to catch tonight's fireworks on the Mall.

On Wednesday Bush led a sun-splashed 50th anniversary tribute at Mount Rushmore to the "soaring and unafraid" American spirit.

Following that ceremony, the Bushes went hiking and fished for rainbow trout in sylvan Horseshoe Lake, a few miles from the famed granite sculpture of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

don't allow any new growth, there will be an increase in population just from the children of people living here now. And they'll buy cars and drive on the roads."

"I'm supporting the taxes because the choices are so limited," said commissioner Bob Sturm. "It is either the sales tax or the property tax."

"Even if we could use the gas tax, it would have to be more than a penny to raise the kind of money we need," said commissioner Jennifer Kelley. "I think it will help us to keep up with where we have to be."

"If the voters will show they have confidence in the board to solve the road problem, then the board and I will be very frugal in our other spending," said commissioner Pat Warren. "I believe this is the most painless way to pay for it."

Patriotism: An idea, a protest, a deep love

By MIKE FEINSLDER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — "Our country, right or wrong" is what American naval hero Stephen Decatur said in 1816, but the commodore would get an argument today.

One hundred political liberals, asked to think about patriotism, came up with a lot of ideas. But all rejected Decatur's lock-step loyalty. And some asked whether patriotism is even proper anymore.

"What they call patriotism down there in Washington stinks to high heaven of brainlessness, racism, greed, fear and hatred of the common people," fumed novelist Howard Fast.

To observe the nation's 215th anniversary and its own 125th, The Nation magazine asked its clan — liberals, leftists, anarchists, war resisters and others frequently accused of being unpatriotic — what patriotism meant to them. The magazine, a liberal bastion, runs the observations in its forthcoming issue.

Unsurprisingly, there was disagreement. Some proclaimed their patriotism while others challenged the very roots of the concept.

"Why is it nobler to love your own country than to love someone else's?" asked playwright Wallace Shawn.

"In due course," said novelist Gore Vidal, "the idea of the nation-state may become as obsolete as the nation-state. In fact, already is. Russia is more a mirror of us — or we of it — than either cares to admit."

"Nationalism is archaic," said actress Margot Kidder. And Sandy Close, executive editor of the Pacific News Service, found patriotism provincial.

His case: "In an era of worldwide migrations and travel, with lives in flux, borders coming down, multiple homelands and cultures, a world economy, international plagues and global popular culture," the sense of fierce loyalty to a homeland has become an anachronism. As commonly practiced, patriotism is evil, said former Attorney General Ramsey Clark. "A principal cause of war and exploitation."

"When it proclaims nationalist superiority over others, it is racist," Clark said. "When it compels absolute obedience to government authority, it is fascism."

Erwin Knoll, editor of The Progressive, another liberal magazine, recalled in his essay what his friend, Milton Mayer, used to say — "It's a great country — and what he used to then mutter under his breath: 'They're all great countries.'"

"That," said Knoll, "sums up the trouble with patriotism: It's an absolute claim in a world where few absolutes make any sense."

On the other hand, the Rev. William Sloane Coffin, a leader of anti-war sentiment during the Vietnam era, said he was unwilling to accept blind love of country, but still willing to love his land.

Apple-IBM Pact Continues Trend

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The decision by rivals Apple and IBM to share technology is the latest strange-bedfellows alliance in a computer industry struggling to standardize its products so that they can be mixed and matched.

Industry analysts said Wednesday's agreement is a step toward eliminating the way one company's software often is incompatible with another's computers.

"We are at a stage where no one, including IBM, is strong enough to fend off the competition and dominate any sector of the industry," said Peter Kastner, an analyst with the Aberdeen Group Inc., in Boston. "There's a growing realization that nobody holds all the technological cards."

Axel Rose flings self into trouble

MARYLAND HEIGHTS, Mo. — Police weighed charges against Axel Rose over a riot witnesses said broke out after the lead singer of the rock group Guns N' Roses leaped offstage into a crowd and tried to take a camera from a fan.

A spokeswoman for the band's record label said Rose and other members of the heavy-metal rock group complained that security was lax at Tuesday's concert at Riverport Amphitheater, where the melee left 80 people injured.

Concert promoters and witnesses said that Rose demanded that security guards take a camera from a concertgoer, then jumped into the audience and fought with the fan. The band then abruptly exited the stage.

Thousands in the audience responded by tearing up chairs, destroying the stage and smashing the band's equipment.

Thomas once criticized Marshall

By JOHN HARRIS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The mounting paper trail of Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas suggests he supports school prayer. His writings also include a pointed attack on the man he hopes to replace on the high court — Justice Thurgood Marshall.

Other speeches, essays and interviews given by the 43-year-old federal appeals court judge over the past decade offer evidence of staunchly conservative views and a belief that many affirmative action programs designed to help minorities are a waste of time, energy and money.

Unlike the case of David Souter, named to the court last year, there is no shortage of pre-confirmation comment by Thomas on issues that might come before him as a justice.

The record is being scoured by supporters and opponents alike for material to be used at Senate hearings for Thomas, whom President Bush nominated to the high court this week.

The retiring Marshall was the court's first black justice; Thomas would be the second.

With Thomas almost certain to steer the court further to the right, liberal and moderate groups are expressing alarm at some of his past statements, including several they interpret as indicating he would vote to reverse the court's 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

New attention also is being focused on Thomas' remarks on other controversial subjects, including school prayer. The Supreme Court ruled nearly 20 years ago that prayer in public schools violated the separation of church and state. Both Presidents Reagan and Bush have called for a constitutional amendment allowing voluntary prayer in public schools.

"My mother says that when they took God out of schools the schools went to hell," Thomas said in a 1985 Heritage Foundation forum when asked about Reagan's support for a constitutional amendment. "She may be right. Religion is certainly a source of positive values and we need as many positive values in the schools as we can get."

The Thomas nomination has placed civil rights groups in a quandary. Many leaders of such groups wanted a black to replace Marshall — the staunchest civil rights ally on the court — but are at odds with Thomas over affirmative action and other policies.

In a 1987 commentary in the San Diego Union, Thomas said he found it "exasperating and incomprehensible" that Marshall had criticized the celebration of the bicentennial of the Constitution.

Marshall, citing the failure of the Constitution to prohibit slavery, had said he did not find "the wisdom, foresight and sense of justice exhibited by the framers particularly profound."

In his response, Thomas wrote of Marshall, a hero of the civil rights movement, "His indictment of the founders alienates all Americans and not just black Americans. ... Justice Marshall's understanding of blacks and the Constitution stands in stark contrast to that of notable Americans from Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln to Martin Luther King."

Thomas long has acknowledged that such views might hurt his standing among more liberal black leaders and the black population at large, which he said had wrongly come to perceive big government as its best ladder from poverty and discrimination.

"I have not considered popularity one of my major achievements in life and it is not something I stay awake at night worrying about," he said in a 1982 interview.

Boy held in 5 savage deaths

Associated Press

BALSAM LAKE, Wis. — A family of five whose charred remains were found in a burned car had been shot and dismembered before they were torched, according to documents released Wednesday.

The bodies of two adults and three children also were mutilated and at least one of the three children was decapitated, the documents show. In addition, body parts were scattered in the car, a duffel bag and near the family's trailer.

A 15-year-old boy was taken into custody in the deaths and is being held in juvenile detention, authorities said.

There was no confession or comments in the documents from the teenager, only circumstantial evidence linking him to the crime, according to WCCO-TV in Minneapolis.

Polk County authorities released the documents late Wednesday by order of Circuit Judge James Eaton. They were reported on by WCCO, KSTP-TV in Minneapolis and the Saint Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press.

Rick Brenizer, his live-in girlfriend, Ruth Berentson, and three children, ages 5, 7 and 10, were reported missing April 23 by Brenizer's son, Bruce, 15.

The family's remains, charred beyond recognition, were found May 11 in a wooded area about three miles from their home.

The documents reportedly indicate the family was killed by a rifle at their trailer home between April 22 and April 26, when neighbors observed smoke in the area where the burned car was found.

The bodies had been dismembered and put into the family car, which was driven to a wooded area and set afire, the news media reported.

A rifle believed to have been used to kill the family was recovered by sheriff's investigators in a pond, the documents said.

A report from Dr. Kenneth Bennett, a University of Wisconsin anthropologist, concluded that all five victims had been dismembered and the body parts had been badly burned and cut in small pieces.

The family was last reported seen April 23 before leaving for a shopping trip in the nearby Twin Cities.

A hearing is scheduled Tuesday on prosecutors' request to move the case into adult court.

IN BRIEF

Heathrow's Ford takes first

CAMELIA, Ga. — Gavin Ford, the Director of Tennis at the Heathrow Racquet and Swim Club, finished first in the $60,000 Lite South-east Pro Invitational Tournament played June 20-23 at the Mitchell-Baker Service Center.

The tournament is the largest Senior Pro tennis benefit played in the United States and invites only the top 35-and-over players from throughout the country.

Ford, a top-ranking member of the 35+ circuit, was one of only 20 pros invited to participate in the tournament, a yearly event benefiting the Association of Retarded Citizens.

Capriati to play in Du Pont

AMELIA ISLAND — Jennifer Capriati is the latest entry in the Du Pont All American Tennis Championships, which will be held Sept. 11-14. It was announced Wednesday.

Capriati, currently ranked No. 12, joins previously announced defending champions Michael Chang and Kathy Rinaldi in the $190,000 event.

Capriati on Wednesday became the youngest women's semi-finalist in Wimbledon history when she defeated nine-time champion Martina Navratilova in the quarterfinals.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE

Stars eclipse SunRays

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Apolinar Garcia pitched a five-hitter as the Huntsville Stars topped the Orlando SunRays 6-2 Wednesday.

Garcia (3-2) gave up five hits and two runs while striking out three and walking one. He retired the last 18 hitters in a row.

In the second inning, the Stars (53-50) took a 3-0 lead as Craig Paquette walked and Mike Conte was hit by a pitch. After Kurt Abbott walked, Paquette and Conte scored on a single by Jorge Brito. Abbott came in on Kevin Dattola's single.

Orlando (40-40) cut the lead to one run by scoring twice in the third. Bob McCreary singled and scored on a groundout by Shawn Gilbert, and Jay Kvasnicka singled and scored on a sacrifice fly by Rafael Delima.

In the third, the Stars increased their lead to 4-2 on a homer by Troy Neel. The Stars added a run in the fourth and one in the seventh.

Knights overtake Suns

FORT MILL, S.C. — Alex Arias extended his hitting streak to seven games with a four-hit performance, and Elvin Paulino hit his league-leading 17th home run Wednesday night to lead the Charlotte Knights to a 9-4 victory over the Jacksonville Suns.

Jeff Wetherby's two-run home run in the second inning gave the Suns a 2-0 lead.

Paulino led off the bottom of the second with his home run off Jacksonville starter Dave Evans (4-7). Billy White and Jeff Baldwin followed with singles, and after White scored on a fielder's choice, Arias stroked a two-run double to lead Charlotte to a 4-2 edge.

White's run-scoring single in the fifth helped the Knights raise their lead to 5-2. The Suns came back to within 5-4 on Jim Bowie's two-run home run in the sixth.

The Knights fought off the threat with White's two-run homer in the seventh and a two-run shot by Kevin Roberson in the eighth.

AUTO RACING

Marlin turns fast lap

DAYTONA BEACH — Sterling Marlin turned the fastest lap Wednesday in practice for the Pepsi 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

Marlin's speed was 190.864 mph. Ken Schrader was second-best at 190.331.

Pole qualifying will be held Thursday, with the race scheduled for Saturday.

Practice speeds were well shy of the 185,533 mph lap that won Greg Sacks the pole last year.

Davey Allison, who won the Daytona 500 pole in February, had a practice lap Thursday of 189.986. Geoff Bodine reached the same speed.

Joe Ruttman was next at 189.765, and Ernie Irvan, this year's Daytona 500 winner, hit 189.681.

Bullets to host tournament

By ROBBIE STOCK
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — While many will turn to the skies to enjoy fireworks on the 218th anniversary of the United States, baseball players from across Seminole County will look to make some of their own in the 4th of July Invitational at Lyman High School.

The host team, the Bullets (comprised of players from Lyman High School), round out the tourney's first day of competition with a game at 5 p.m. against Daytona Beach.

Other first-round games today include Sanford American Legion Post 53 playing Lake Howell at 11 a.m., Lake Brantley tangling with Oviedo at 2 p.m. and Laked Mary facing Dr. Phillips at 5 p.m.

"If everybody has some fun, we'll stick with it," said Bullets coach and tournament organizer Bob McCullough. "It's an opportunity to have some fun."

McCullough tried to start this competition last year after his squads had traveled to DeLand for Fourth of July games too many times. The Bullets, currently riding a hot streak, look to be a pre-tournament favorite in the eyes of many fans — but not McCullough, who thinks Daytona Beach is the team to beat. Unlike the other teams, Daytona Beach carries college as well as high school players on its roster.

No matter who looks the best entering the four-day, 14-game event, consistency and solid hurlers will win the tournament.

"Good pitching always wins," said McCullough. "Good-hitting teams and defensive-oriented ball clubs are often eliminated. You can only score so many runs."

McCullough takes a deep rotation into the competition, anchored by starters Kevin Stuckey and Jason Goodpastor.

And despite the fact that his squad must clash with Daytona Beach tonight, McCullough is looking forward to the games.

"When you play this kind of team, you move up a little bit (in playing level)," commented McCullough.

The final is scheduled for 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Hornets swatted by Bullets

By ROBBIE STOCK
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — By the time the sixth inning rolled around in Wednesday night's contest between the Bullets and Bishop Moore, the Hornets' coaches were playing the lottery on the mound, searching for anyone who could throw the ball over the plate and maybe even get some batters out. They never found their man.

Five hurlers from Bishop Moore struggled in a three-hour marathon at Lyman High School, walking 11 batters and giving up nine hits as they were routed by the Bullets, 16-2.

Lake Mary

 playing in Lyman's 4th of July Invitational tournament. Oviedo takes on Lake Brantley at 2 p.m. with Lake Mary facing Dr. Phillips at 5 p.m.
 Bullock, whose primary position is catcher, had pitched only one other time in his high school career and that was a one-inning stint last spring. It seemed that the long layoff between appearances didn't have an adverse effect as he allowed only two hits and one unearned run.

Meanwhile, his teammates were taking advantage of the wildness of Oviedo starting pitcher Chris Stokes, Jason Rasmussen and T.J. Hamilton both drawing walks and scoring during Lake Mary's three-run first inning. Scott Johnston drove in one run during the inning with a double and later scored the third.
 Jose Gonzalez relieved Stokes in the first inning for Oviedo and labored into the sixth inning, giving up two runs in the second and one in the fifth as Lake Mary built a 6-1 advantage.
 The wheels came off in the sixth inning as Oviedo tried four different pitchers -- including another effort by Stokes -- to keep the game close. Gonzalez started the inning and was followed by Stokes, Chris Roscoe and Louie Traeger to the mound as Lake Mary iced the game with a four-run rally.

 Ben Rovito came in to pitch for Lake Mary in the bottom of the sixth and worked a pair of scoreless innings to close out the win.
 Johnston led Lake Mary's eight-hit attack with his double, RBI and two runs scored. David Hudick and Matt Deimer each added a single, RBI and one run scored while Chad Ebbert and Chris Shade each had a single and an RBI.

 Also chipping in were Dan Anson, Brent Wilmont and Chris Barfield, who each hit single and scored a run. Rasmussen and Hamilton scored a run each in the first inning.
 For Oviedo, Chris Roscoe broke up Bullock's bid for a no-hitter when he singled in the third. Kevin Twigg wrecked the shutout when he singled in Stokes, who had reached base on an error.

Chase

 had a single in the inning.
 Florida Manor stretched the lead to 5-0 with a pair of runs in the top of the third as Nick Perpes and Joe Perpes made their way on base and scored on sacrifice flies by Hartman and Cliff Partlow, respectively.
 D.C.C. cut into the lead with a run in the bottom of the fourth. Danny McCoy hitting a single and scored when Sonny Eubanks hit into a fielder's choice.
 Then, in the fifth, D.C.C. scored five runs on six hits to take a 6-5 lead. The rally started with Frank Turner, Mike Brodericks, Joe Lipscomb and Jimmy Ramos stringing together four consecutive singles. After Roger Kinnard walked, Ira Hall and Mike D'Amico each delivered a sacrifice fly. McCoy and Aaron Johns then added two more singles.

 Florida Manor tied the score with a run in the sixth, Hartman reaching base on a fielder's choice and scoring on singles by Cliff Partlow and Blake Murray. That set the stage for Dibartolo and Reneger.
 D.C.C. tried to rally in the home half of the seventh, Hall stroking a two-out double and D'Amico following with a single, but Florida Manor was able to

Bullets

 get the third out before any more damage was done.
 Joe Perpes and Hartman each singled once and scored twice to lead Florida Manor's nine-hit offensive. Kyle Brubaker, Nick Perpes and Reneger each hit a single and scored a run. Partlow, Murray, Leauge and Rick Poore each hit a single while Jerry Dibartolo scored a run.
 For D.C.C., which out-hit Florida Manor 12-9 but hit into one double play and stranded eight men on base, was led by McCoy, who collected three hits and scored a run, and Ramos, who hit two singles and scored a run.

which barely made it halfway to third base -- but still managed four runs, thanks largely to five walks, two coming with the bases loaded.
 But from there it got even stranger as the Bullets sent 14 men to the plate in the sixth inning, the first eight batters scoring in what seemed little more than batting practice. Chad Siemer, Jeff Bouley and Kevin Scott each singled home runs in the inning. Four walks, a hit batsman and a dropped fly ball also contributed to the outburst.
 The Hornets grabbed two runs in the fifth inning, using an error, a walk, and a base hit by Shane Howat.

Pinehurst

 Contributing to the 10-hit H.D. Realty offense were Jim Schaefer (home run, triple, single, two runs scored, six RBI), Mack Thorne and Mark Blythe (one home run, two singles, three runs scored and four RBI each), Brian Jones (double, single, two runs scored, two RBI) and Phil Hancock (double, single, two runs scored).
 Also contributing were Chris Dapore and Bob Kelly (two singles, two runs scored and one RBI each), Chryst Doney (triple, run scored, RBI), Carl Thorne (single, two runs scored, RBI) and Mark Morgan (run scored).
 Doing the hitting for Ensey, Inc. were Chris Boyles (double, single) and Richard Beckner, Sean Gould and Barry Sweat (one single each).

Teen helps parents communicate

LAKE MARY - Julie McDonald, 18, of Lake Mary, was named one of five national winners at the RespecTeen "Straight to Parents" Awards Gala in New York City, July 1. Julie is the daughter of Helen and Daniel McDonald.

Julie, a June graduate of Lake Mary High School, was chosen from 3,000 students across the United States who created video and print Public Service Advertisements (PSAs) offering parents tips on better relating to teenagers. Julie's PSA suggested that parents should communicate with their teens. Her PSA will be distributed to media nationwide as part of the 1991 RespecTeen public service campaign.

"Parents often complain about how difficult it is to relate to their teenagers, but they tend to forget that teenagers are a valuable source of information," said Charles DeVries, RespecTeen National Advisor. "Some very sincere, insightful and poignant messages came through in the PSAs. I think parents will listen and learn from them."

Entries were judged based on content, clarity, poignancy, originality, effective persuasion, and technical/artistic quality by a blue ribbon panel of judges, including: James Calvin of New Julie McDonald, one of five national winners of the RespecTeen competition.

York University, Nancy Garfield of the Girl Scouts, Ben Jones of Seatchi and Seatchi, David Gray of Seatchi and Seatchi and Suzanne Holeyton of the Ad Council. "The PSAs were well scripted, well thought out and right on target," said Calvin.

"I'm amazed at the self-confidence in these students." The RespecTeen "Straight to Parents" PSA competition is part of a nationwide program sponsored by Lutheran Brotherhood called "RespecTeen: Helping Parents and Teens Respect Each Other and Themselves." "Straight to Parents" is co-sponsored by the Ad Council and The National Collaboration for Youth. Lutheran Brotherhood is a fraternal benefit society with one million members nationwide.

Woman finds that pillars of church have feet of clay

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to the Arizona woman whose family was banned from the church was right. You told her to complain to someone higher in the church. However, I hope she had better luck than I had.
I am a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America. The new pastor of my church did not know me, but she refused to speak to me; in effect, she ostracized my children and their terminally ill father from their congregation.
Apparently my "ain" was providing shelter to another pastor who had two children, no job, no place to live and very little money. When I complained to the bishop, I was told that since I had given the appearance of having "truduced" (defamed or slandered) my marriage vows, my family could be treated whichever way the pastor

DEAR NEW JERSEY: What an eye-opener my mail has been this week! Most of us were raised to believe that all members of the clergy are somehow closer to God, and therefore superior beings. But, alas, they too are only human.
CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Make this holiday a happy one. If you're drinking, don't drive. And if you're driving, don't drink.
P.S. Happy birthday, Stacie!

Head-first high diving prohibited

Associated Press

ORLANDO — There will be no bungee jumping in Orange County despite the efforts of two commissioners to persuade their colleagues to allow people to dive head first off a 230-foot crane.

"I know there are idiots out there who want to jump," County Commissioner Vera Carter argued Tuesday. "I know because I was an idiot in my younger years, and I probably would have jumped too."

But Ms. Carter and Commissioner Mable Butler were on the losing side of a 4-2 vote on a request from Scan Group Partners to let adventure seekers drop, bounce and dangle at the end of an elastic bungee cord.

The company wanted to set up shop next to Shooters Waterfront Cafe, a popular Orlando bar. "It's a nuisance to area homeowners," Commissioner Hal Marston said. "I'm sure there would be some unusual noises coming from it."

Ms. Carter argued that noise shouldn't be a problem "unless it's a loud spat."

But that wasn't funny to Tom Wanchic, the company's operations manager. He said his company had invested more than $80,000 to bring the sport to Orlando.

"They thought it was funny, but this is serious," Wanchic said. "This is a worldwide recognized form of entertainment."

For $60, patrons are elevated to about 230 feet and, with bungee cords attached to their ankles, dive from the platform. The cord is designed to snap the diver back before he hits the ground.

Thomas H. Maxwell Jr., the company's consulting engineer, said the sport has a detailed set of standards and regulations developed in New Zealand.

"It's no more dangerous than mountain climbing and actually uses some of the same equipment," Maxwell said.

Buerger's disease linked to smoking

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have what appears to be a hundred questions about Buerger's disease. Can you answer some of them such as medication for control, symptoms, what causes it and my prognosis?

DEAR READER: Buerger's disease (thromboangiitis obliterans) is an arterial disorder, primarily affecting men, marked by progressive circulatory deficiency. The cause of the disorder is unknown, but it is seen almost exclusively in cigarette smokers.

The disease begins gradually as inflammation of the lining of the arteries and veins, which causes blood clots (thrombi) to form, thus progressively blocking the blood vessels. Patients usually experience coldness, numbness and pain in the extremities, leading to death of tissue (gangrene) and ulceration of overlying skin. Fingers and toes tingle and turn blue. Arterial pulsations are diminished or absent. The disease progresses proximally, meaning that arms and legs are eventually affected.

The diagnosis is confirmed by arteriography, special X-ray studies of the arteries showing multiple blockages of small and medium-sized arteries.

Therefore, patients must stop smoking, stay warm and avoid injury to tissues (from chemicals such as iodine, infection, tightly fitting footwear, and minor trauma). In the early stages, patients are encouraged to exercise (to stimulate circulation); however, in severe cases, bed rest may be necessary. Hands and feet may need protection with bandages and foam-rubber booties.

Drugs, such as calcium-channel blockers, may improve circulation, but other medications, such as cortisone (to reduce inflammation) and anticoagulants (to prevent thromboembolism) are not effective. In some cases, nerve surgery (to prevent arterial constriction) and amputation may be required to save life. Surgery, such as bypass grafting to improve circulation, is almost never helpful.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
It is well-known that on July 4, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was signed. Less well-known is the fact that afterward four of the signers didn't go out on the town celebrating. Intensive research reveals that John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, John Hancock and Thomas Jefferson retired for a game of cards bearing a remarkable resemblance to bridge. Today's hand is the first one of the evening.

decided to shoot out a slam. West led the spade 10; Jack, queen, heart two. Declarer drew trumps in three rounds and cashed dummy's A-K of clubs. However, when West discarded on the second round, Jefferson paused, seeing that the club suit was blocked. He could play on diamonds, hoping to have only one loser there - an approach that was destined to fail. But instead Jefferson led the spade king from the dummy and discarded a blocking club from his hand. East won with the spade ace and switched to a diamond, but declarer won with the ace and then cashed dummy's three club winners, discarding his two diamond losers. It isn't recorded whether Jefferson felt happier about this tour de force or about the earlier signing. (C)1991, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 5, 1991
Bonds will be strengthened between you and the one you love in the year ahead. Conversely, if there has been a void in your life, it could soon be filled.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Business and pleasure make a compatible mix today. Take the initiative to promote a light diversion as a prelude to a serious discussion. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for Cancer's Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In order to advance your personal interests today, you may have to be a trifle assertive. If this is required, do so with a dab of humor to lessen the sting.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The greatest pleasure you can derive today will be in spending time with the one you love and admire. Don't spoil it by letting others into what should not be shared.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could be quite fortunate today in dealings with clubs or large groups, especially if you're trying to put something together where you have to draw on the many resources of their members.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You should be able to find time today to perform a labor of love you've been putting off. It might be insignificant to others, but when heart and mind gel, things take on importance.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Developments that may be chancy for associates could turn out to be suitable for you, as long as you don't push your good luck beyond reasonable limits.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The results should be lasting and pleasing in regard to any beautification projects you're involved in at this time that enhance your residence or workplace.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your sex appeal is quite strong today, however not in the physical sense. When it comes to your demeanor, though, members of the opposite gender will find you attractive and irresistible.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your probabilities for material acquisition are very good today - if you are strongly motivated. If there is something you truly want, you'll figure out a way to get it.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) In addition to your customary attributes of personality, you'll have an extra dash of boldness and excitement about you today. This will make you even more charismatic.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) While others might ignore the plight of an unfortunate friend today, your conscience won't permit you to do the same. Admirably, you're likely to do whatever you can - and without any fanfare.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Everyone is pleased by compliments, provided they're sincere. Someone you're closely involved with, who has recently done something notable, will welcome comments from you. (C)1991, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
