County Re-Enlists Cleveland To Battle Sheriff's Budget

What worked once might work again. That seems to be the Seminole County Commissioners' thinking in preparing to fight Sheriff John Polk's budget appeal. The county has decided to hire former state senator Mack Cleveland — who won the same battle in 1976 for the county the last time Polk decided to appeal — to work with county attorney Nikki Clayton.

"There are pressure tactics building in Tallahassee and Cleveland would be a good utilization of experience," said

Roger Neiswender, county administrator. 1967 was the last time Cleveland was in the Florida legislature, according to Neiswender. "We don't have budgetary flexibility now if the sheriff should win," Neiswender cautioned.

Polk is asking the county to come up with more than $5.7 million he says he needs to fight crime. This figure is $330,000 more than the commissioners feel the sheriff is entitled to.

The commission is strongly opposed to the budget increase because the increase would mean the board might have to raise taxes in an extremely tight budget year, and the commissioners have said they intend to keep the millage rate at $5.247 per $1,000 assessed valuation.

If the Sheriff wins his appeal, Commissioner Sandra Glenn says, in her opinion, the county will have to find other sources of revenue to fund the sheriff's budget.

Polk, as an elected official, is justified in asking the governor and Cabinet to rule on his budget request. He will be appearing in front of a Democratic state body appealing an all-Republican county commission decision.

The sheriff is also going to bat in the same ball game with the same players as well. Doug Stenstrom, a Sanford lawyer, will again represent Polk as he did in 1976. Betty Simpco, spokesperson for the sheriff who is out of town for the rest of the week, says the sheriff came very close to winning the 1976 budget decision. "The vote was six to one in favor of the sheriff, but the governor (Reuben Askew) cast the 'no' vote representing a veto, so by law, the sheriff lost," said Simpco.

Stenstrom was also a member of the Florida legislature. He was elected in 1954 to represent Brevard and Seminole counties and he was re-elected for a second term.

If Polk wins his decision he says he needs for fiscal year 1981-82, the sheriff's budget would have nearly doubled in the last five years — from $3.33 million in 1977-78 to the proposed $5.7 million for next year.

Polk has said he needs the extra money because his department needs 13 more uniform deputies, 13 more corrections officers, a booking clerk, and five clerk typists. —DARLENE JENNINGS

School Board Hikes Taxes 36.2%

Many with crossed-arms symbolically defiant of the Seminole County School Board's proposed tax increase, about 150 citizens pack the Seminole School Board meeting room Wednesday night to comment on the $2.20 per $1,000 assessed valuation increase in school property taxes for fiscal 1981-82.

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Despite opposition from many citizens the Seminole County School Board Wednesday night voted 4-1 to increase property taxes by 36.2 percent and to adopt a $97.7 million budget for fiscal 1981-82.

The tax rate set is $8.28 per $1,000 assessed valuation, up from the current year's $6.08.

The new rate will mean a person with a home assessed at $50,000 after a $25,000 homestead exemption will pay $55 more in school taxes in the new year, up from $151.95 to $206.95. The owner of a home assessed at $50,000 and who does not qualify for the $25,000 exemption will be paying $99 more, up from $273.51 last year to $372.51.

Homeowners who have not resided in Florida 5 years can only claim a $5,000 exemption.

Only School Board member Pat Telson voted against the budget and the proposed tax rate, saying all the alternatives to increasing taxes had not been examined.

"Possibly if we had looked at all alternatives such as renovating older schools, this would not have been necessary," Mrs. Telson said.

The school board and Superintendent Bob Hughes listened for nearly three hours as 39 persons spoke for and against the proposed tax increase. The majority — 29 of the 39 — opposed the proposed hike.

Urging approval of the record budget, Hughes said it is the popular stand to levy no new taxes.

"This is a very sensitive and emotional issue," he said. He added, however, he and the board are charged with the responsibility of providing adequate housing for the county's school children.

Hughes insisted alternatives were considered. He said the budget maintains the status quo, except for the $2 per $1,000 assessed value tax increase to build a new elementary school in Tusawilla area and exceptional child suites at Altamonte, Klywilde and Sterling Park elementary schools.

Aside from the $2 increase for the capital outlay program, the tax levy for school operation was increased by only 20 cents per $1,000 assessed value. Hughes said schools near the Tusawilla area will face double sessions next year if the new school is not built.

Noting the county has 1,022 more students this year than last, Hughes said elementary schools in the county are stretched to their limits. He said auditoriums and cafeterias have been modified to provide classrooms and portable classrooms are located at many sites.

"It's a responsible budget with no fat in it," Hughes declared.

Dan Dagg, assistant superintendent for instruction, said an eight-member committee which included: County Administrator Roger Neiswender, County Planner Woody Price, Hughes and school staff persons, Roger Harris, John Colbert and Hugh Carlton and School Board member Roland Williams and himself agreed the new school is needed.

Dagg said the committee met for more than 100 hours and staff personnel did 150 hours of research before coming to the conclusion.

During the public hearing prior to adoption of the budget, citizens complained the tax increase is too much for retired persons, recommended cancellation of the school system's controversial counseling program and contended the system has too many unnecessary programs.

Injecting a bit of humor during the public hearing, Sherry Shultz of Eastbrook said her family has thought she is a wizard with handling money over the years, while she has actually "been robbing Peter to pay Paul" in her budget.

"If you increase the taxes, you're going to blow my image," she said, indicating she would no longer be able to manipulate her finances.

Some spoke in favor of the increase — like Jo Field of Casselberry. She said if it takes more taxes for quality education, "So be it."

Andrea Baxley of Winter Springs, striking out at senior citizens who opposed the tax increase, said, "I'm tired of hearing the elderly talk about paying taxes. I'm paying Social Security for them." She added school zones were changed to bring enrollment down at Winter Springs Elementary. But, she said, enrollment has gone back up almost to where it was year before last.

Fred Streetman of Longwood, saying he was saddened by the division evidenced between the elderly and younger generation, said, "Somewhere along the line we've got to learn we owe the elderly a great deal. We've got to help each other and not criticize each other."

Dr. Stewart Able urged the board to consider an alternative method of using the schools, suggesting year round education and keeping teachers working year-round.

"The progressive litany of tax increases is oppressive," said Ken Bechtel of Longwood. He added the school board apparently has no scheme to get out of the situation.

Al Landgraaf of Winter Springs said the Sugar Creek Homeowners Association strongly opposes the tax increase, believing it is unfair, unrealistic and unjustified.

Former School Board member and current County Commissioner Robert Feather said the school system is in the best shape ever. He pointed to the excellence of the system and to the fine teachers in the county and how much the system has grown during the past 15 years. He urged the board of call a referendum on to approval gain approval from the voters on a tax increase rather than levying it against the wishes of the people.

No Agreement In Teacher Talks

No contract agreement was reached between teachers and the Seminole County School Board Wednesday despite efforts of federal mediator Dick Deem and a 12-hour plus session at the bargaining table with negotiators for both sides.

But during the "grueling" session, School Board Chief Negotiator Ernest Cowley said today the two sides narrowed items of dispute considerably.

"We are much closer than we have been all along," Cowley said. "I can see the real possibility of reaching agreement tonight."

The negotiators are to meet with Deem again at 7:30 p.m. today in the guidance suite at Lyman High School. Cowley said the deadline for making the contract and whatever pay raises are approved for teachers retroactive to Aug. 24 is Friday.

Seminole Education Association (SEA) Executive Director Ron Boeth, chief negotiator for the teachers said,

"I remain hopeful. Mediation is an approach between two sides. I don't believe further comment is appropriate."

The two sides passed the 100-hour mark in negotiating on the contract, Wednesday night, Cowley said, noting the session began at 5 p.m. and ended at 5:15 this morning.

Meanwhile the school board negotiating team will meet at 4:30 p.m. today, also at Lyman, with the Non-Instructional Personnel of Seminole County (NIPSCO) negotiating team in try to iron out three-to-four remaining items in a contract with Deem serving as mediator.

Several weeks ago the two sides declared an "impasse" in negotiations and requested a special master to settle the areas of dispute. Cowley said since both sides are so close the possibility also exists of settling contract disputes with this union with Deem's help before a special master can arrive.

Cowley said night session with the teachers' union was fruitful. He said no dispute remains on working conditions; one hyphenated word remains in dispute on personnel reduction; four items of dispute remain on teacher evaluation; only one dispute remains on the teacher calendar; only one dispute remains on compensation and that is whether teachers will receive 20 or 24 paychecks; only one dispute remains on the use of the school courier service by teachers and that is over whether political use can be made of the service.

Other areas of dispute are the terms of agreement, Cowley said, calling teachers' efforts to change the term from three years to one year "regressive bargaining."

He said an 8.49 percent increase in base salary for teachers offered by the school board negotiators would raise the salary from $10,600 to

He said by using last year's salary and the percentage increase being offered for this year, a teacher with a bachelor's degree who had received $10,600, would receive $11,960 this year, in addition to fixed charges and payment by the school board of a 26 percent increase in life and health insurance.

An annual contract teacher with 14 years experience last year received $13,462 and under the proposal would receive this year $18,400, an increase of $4,938 or 36.7 percent, Cowley said.

The largest possible increase, under the school board proposal, Cowley said, would go to a teacher who has taught elsewhere in Florida in excess of 15 years on a continuing contract in another Florida county and came to Seminole last year. The teacher would have received $15,254 last year and being awarded a continuing contract would receive $21,735 this year for an increase of $6,471 or 42.4 percent.

County, Judiciary At Odds Over Fees

By DARLENE JENNINGS
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Commissioners and county judicial representatives, after some harsh words and little compromise, arrived at no firm agreement on who is going to be responsible for keeping an eye on the judges' purse strings during this "lean" budget year.

The commissioners insisted a four to five month backlog of unpaid court fees, stemming mostly from court reporters and public defenders fees become current so the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) won't have to pay these bills "blindly" according to Roger Neiswender, county administrator.

However, S. "Joe" Davis, Jr., administrative circuit judge, told the board there was no way for his small staff to compile the billing information requested by the board.

"We don't have the staff to do this and we don't want a staff. With the staff we do have, it's impossible to tell you what's going to happen two months down the way," Davis said.

OMB Director Eleanor Anderson requested the judges at least, provide a trend or an indicator of how the flow of bills will look.

"Budgeting becomes a problem the last half of a budget year. Possibly a major increase in case loads will indicate whether you will be under budgeted or not," Anderson said.

Chris Ray, assistant state attorney for Seminole County, offered to help the board and OMB by establishing a pattern of case loads from July until September, 1981. However, Ray said the pattern would not reflect information about court reporters and public defenders specifically.

Ray also admitted there might be a 2-3 month lag in bills from his office.

"I hate to submit a bill before I know the content of the bill, like for autopsies. I like to know the autopsy has actually been done," he said. Neiswender suggested that Ray not submit the bill until he has received the autopsy report.

The board also instructed the judges to put someone in charge of the judicial billing system because, right now, there exists a backlog of bills that doesn't show up in monthly bills, according to Neiswender.

"I'm asking someone in responsible areas to assume this responsibility," Neiswender told commissioners during a work session Tuesday.

"We just can't pay the bills blindly and never know if we're going to make it," he said.

Commission Chairman Bob Sturm reiterated that the board wants someone put in charge of keeping the bills current. "Somebody has to be accountable

Seagull Dangles As Help Is Juggled

It can be hard times for an animal in need of help after 5 p.m. here in Seminole County.

A caring citizen, lost for a solution to rescue a seagull caught on fishing line in Lake Monroe, across from the New Tribes Mission in Sanford, called the Evening Herald office Wednesday evening.

The bird, hanging like a puppet from an abandoned wharf's piling, struggled for its life as the waves and wind batted it back and forth off a wooden post.

A call went in to the Audubon Society only to be answered by a phone message machine. Next, a call to the Seminole County Humane Society was met with a caring but helpless answering service.

After getting through the Central Florida Zoo switchboard, an official sympathetic for the bird couldn't help after learning it would take a boat to effect rescue — something no one at the zoo had at their disposal.

The Zoo suggested calling the state Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. Commission officials had no one near and suggested the Audubon and Humane Societies. After being told those avenues had already been tried, the receptionist suggested the city fire department. A reply was quipped:

"Do you know if they have floating fire trucks?" After a long pause, the receptionist suggested a call to the Seminole County animal control department.

The emergency number for animal control reached the sheriff's department and the reruns of phone numbers began. Desperate for a solution, the sheriff's department dispatcher said it was a game and fish commission problem.

As it always seems to work out, the red tape was unraveled long after an official answer was found. A volunteer from the New Tribes Mission headquarters, Tim Wynn, swam out to the seagull and set it free. —BILL HORNING

Anti-Khomeini Rebels Declare Overthrow Soon

By United Press International
Iranian Revolutionary Guards and anti-government guerrillas shouting "death to Khomeini" clashed in downtown Tehran street battles that left at least two guards dead, witnesses said today.
The witnesses, reached by telephone from London, said the fighting Wednesday was the heaviest since the street battles that preceded the downfall of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr in June.
One Tehran resident who saw the fighting from his fourth floor room said, "I could hear shooting non-stop for nearly half an hour."
The guerrillas shouted "death to (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini...this is the month of blood...Khomeini will be overthrown this month...people: rise for freedom," the witnesses said.

Cuba Alleges Germ Warfare

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Cuba escalated its war of words with the United States with a charge Washington is using germ warfare to spread highly contagious "pink eye" disease that has infected more than 1,800 Cubans.
The official Cuban Prensa Latina news agency said Wednesday an outbreak of hemorrhaging conjunctivitis, also known as "pink eye," struck last weekend and the "strange and inexplicable way the disease appeared...confirmed our most profound suspicions that the U.S. government is using germ warfare."
In Washington, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said the charge was "absurd."

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Woman, Black Not On Supreme Court List

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Gov. Bob Graham will not be able to break up the all-white, all-male Florida Supreme Court unless he asks the Supreme Court Nominating Committee for a new list of recommendations.
The panel nominated three men Wednesday to replace Justice Art England — but all three were white.
Nominated were Raymond Ehrlick, an influential Jacksonville attorney, Stephen Grimes of Bartow, a member of the 2nd District Court of Appeal, and Alan Schwartz of Miami, who serves on the 3rd DCA.
The governor had been urged to appoint a black or a woman to succeed England, who resigned last month to take a better-paying job with a private law firm.

Family Awarded $5 Million

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Toyota Motor Co. must pay a family $5 million for the deaths of three sisters in a fiery crash two years ago, according to a circuit court jury.
The decision came after a six-week trial before the four-man, two woman panel, which deliberated three hours Tuesday before finding the world's third largest automaker negligent in the deaths of Wendy, Denise and Pamela Moll of Broward County.
The girls' parents, Betty and Wayne Moll, had sought $185 million from Toyota, for the deaths of their daughters July 16, 1979, when their 1973 Toyota Corona was rammed from the rear.
The gas tank exploded, burning the three sisters to death.
Toyota claimed its 1973 Corona was as safe as any subcompact on the market, and it met all testing standards and recommendations of the time.

Murder-For-Hire Trial Enters 2nd Day

The trial of Clarence Zacke for allegedly soliciting-to-murder Kenneth Merithew, a pilot formerly employed by Zacke, entered its second day today at the Seminole County Courthouse.

According to Brevard-Seminole County State Attorney's office personnel, the trial resumed today at 9 a.m.
Zacke, 43, of West Melbourne, is charged with hiring Thomas Kiker, Rockledge, to solicit someone to kill Merithew who allegedly flew marijuana missions for Zacke while acting as an undercover police agent.
At Wednesday's trial session, state witness Kerry Moss testified that he was paid $2,500 in July to kill a witness against Zacke in a drug-smuggling trial. Moss has been given prosecution immunity for agreeing to testify at the trial.
This is the second solicit-to-murder charge that has been made against Zacke, resulting in court action.
In April, Zacke was convicted and sentenced to 60 years in prison for conspiring to kill Merithew and hiring Richard Hunt to carry out the murder.
Zacke is also charged with soliciting to murder Hunt and Brevard-Seminole County State Attorney Douglas Cheshire Merithew is currently in hiding under police protection. Hunt, however, has not been seen since Jan. 28 and is presumed dead by police.

HALT! POLICE!

An Orlando man was arrested in Altamonte Springs, Sunday, and charged with burglary and aggravated assault, police said.
John David Shook, 7608 D. Forest City Road, Orlando, was arrested for attempting to rob the Texaco Gas Station at State Roads 400 and 436, police said.
Shook was charged with aggravated assault when he refused to obey police orders to stop his car by a police officer standing in the car's path.
Shook was arrested approximately one mile from the gas station, police said.

robbed by three men Friday, Altamonte Springs police said.
Police said the youth was reportedly riding his bicycle home Friday evening through the Park Federal Savings and Loan parking lot, 355 E. Altamonte Ave., Altamonte, when three men told him to give them his money. When the boy refused, the men struck him on the head, knocking him unconscious, police said.
When the youth regained consciousness, he found his wallet on the ground near him but $8 in cash and a $12.50 concert ticket were missing, according to police. No arrests have been made.

CASH AND GUNS STOLEN
Bobby Bodiford came home from a camping trip Monday and found that his Longwood house had been burglarized and several weapons stolen.
Bodiford, 36, of 1899 Hanchland Trail, told Seminole County sheriff's deputies that thieves entered his home through a window. Once inside, they took two shotguns, two rifles, a pistol, $60-$70 in cash, and a movie projector.
A dollar estimate of the stolen merchandise was not available.

ALTAMONTE BURGLARY
A total of $1,250 worth of property was stolen from an Altamonte Springs residence Tuesday night.
According to a Seminole County sheriff's report, burglars struck the home of Max Paul, 40, of 328 W. Citrus St. between 6:30 p.m. and 9:27 p.m., gaining entry by cutting a patio screen and prying open a kitchen window.

Taken was a .22-caliber derringer, some jewelry, a camera and $50 cash.

"PENNY-ANTE" THIEVES

During these times of economic inflation, everyone is watching their pennies — even burglars.
Burglars broke into James R. Dycus' home, 2305 Mellonville Ave., Sanford, on Wednesday and stole two coffee cans filled with approximately $50 of pennies, Sanford police said. The burglars also took one white gold man's tie tack with diamonds, and a combination-lock box containing three insurance policies from Dycus' bedroom closet, police said.
According to police, the total value of the stolen items is $400. No arrests have been made.

CURSES, FOILED AGAIN!

Two men wearing uniform-like green clothing, stocking masks and armed with a revolver attempted to rob the Phillips 66 Discount Store, 1201 Airport Blvd., Sanford, Wednesday night, but their efforts were made fruitless by a locked door, police said.
According to police, the robbers appeared at the store's entrance donning stocking masks just minutes after store cashier Burney Veronica had locked the door. When the would-be thieves realized the door was locked they fled on foot, Veronica told police.
No arrests have been made.

PURSE-SNATCHER

While shopping at the Winn Dixie grocery store, W. 1st Street, Sanford, Wednesday around noon, Ruthie Mae Rogers' purse was stolen from her son by a man who fled the store on foot, police said.
Rogers, No. 93 Shenandoah Village, Sanford, told police the purse contained approximately $63 of cash, food stamps and two rings.
A description of the suspect was given to police by witnesses in the store at the time of the purse-snatch. No arrests have been made.

for these bills. We can't afford to be fat and happy and pay the bills in a lean budget year," he said. "Otherwise," he warned, "we will shut down the court system so the system can catch up," he said.
"That's highly irresponsible on your part," was the quick response from circuit court judge Robert McGregor. Neiswender told the board he does not advocate the board pay the backlogged bills. "That's not your sole purpose," he added.

McGregor told Neiswender he is operating under an "awful misconception." "We're not record keepers. Don't charge us with that knowledge.
We take the information and try cases and as they come to us. You're now confronting us with a problem we have no control over," he said.

Sturm informed the judges that the payment of these backlogged bills could wipe out the county's contingency fund for this year and next. Neiswender added, "we budgeted low this year because of your past history."
Judge Davis said if a 20 percent increase in cases continues next year, as it has been the trend since last year, the only thing the board can do is "make adjustments."

According to Neiswender the bottom line of Tuesday's meeting is that the two staffs are going to have to work closer together.
After the meeting Judge Davis said he felt the judicial branch would try to cooperate with the board. "We will do the best we can with the information that is furnished to us," Davis said.

Altamonte Springs Election Attracting Few Candidates

By TENI YARBOROUGH

While there have been two announcements of intent to run for the Altamonte Springs mayor's post, only one person has tossed a hat into the city commissioners race for the Nov. 3 election.

It's been nearly a week since candidate qualification began and according to City Clerk Phyllis Jordahl, only three persons have announced plans to run for election.

Incumbent Mayor Hugh Harling and Ray Ambrose, an Altamonte Springs police officer currently on leave of absence, are vying for the mayor's seat, Jordahl said.

Dudley Bates of San Sebastian has officially declared he will seek the Altamonte Springs District 1 commission seat currently held by City Commissioner James Thompson, city officials said.

However, no one has announced intentions to run for the City Commission District 3 seat, currently held by City Commissioner Dolores Vickers. Vickers announced Tuesday night she will not seek re-election.

Deadline for candidate qualification is Sept. 21, Jordahl said.

Controlling Violent Crime

A federal task force has certainly gauged the mood of the country in a report to Attorney General William French Smith recommending 64 steps to tighten the control of violent crime. Most of the proposals would be effective only at the federal level, however, having little impact on the state courts which are at the root of the problem.

That is why the task force's most significant recommendation is to provide $2 billion in federal matching funds to expand and improve aging and inadequate state prisons. There may be disagreement between liberals and conservatives over how to fight crime, but both agree the nation's prisons are overcrowded, usually understaffed, and more often contribute to recidivism than rehabilitation.

Chief Justice Warren Burger called for a broad-scale physical rehabilitation of all prisons in a speech to the American Bar Association recently, and other experts on law and justice have also singled out overcrowded and antiquated prisons as a major national problem.

The task force's recommendation for federal aid to state institutions is in the same vein as an earlier proposal by presidential counselor Edwin Meese to turn over jails and prisons on unused military bases to help state and local governments relieve jail overcrowding. The government is also considering selling or renting idle federal lands to local governments for new correctional centers.

All of these steps may be needed to help the states cope with an unprecedented crime wave. California alone is seeking $400 million to build new jail cells, and 39 states are being sued over inadequate housing of their prisoners.

A number of the task force's other recommendations deal with ways to put violent criminals behind bars and keep them there longer. These are steps most Americans would welcome, but only a few categories of violent crime are tried in federal courts. Providing mandatory federal sentences and authorizing federal judges to deny bail to violent criminals may have little impact on local crime statistics.

Similarly, the task force's call for a federal law to modify the exclusionary rule laid down by the Supreme Court would not automatically extend to the state courts where it is urgently needed. This rule bars the use of evidence against an accused person that has been obtained in violation of his rights. In the hands of some state courts—the exclusionary rule has become a club to punish police for improper searches by freeing criminals.

Still, setting a federal example may curb the trend in some state courts toward regarding the criminal's rights as more important than society's right to protection.

In recommending federal aid to expand and improve prisons, the task force has addressed a pressing need now faced by most populous states. And the group's proposal to stiffen federal court rules and penalties point a direction the nation's courts must follow if crime is to be curbed.

They Try Harder

At times it is debatable whether humanity is making progress or backsliding in pursuit of a better world, but in terms of physical prowess we seem to be getting somewhere.

Time was when swimming the English channel—the 21 miles of rough water separating England and France—was one of the ultimate tests of human strength, guaranteeing instant celebrity to anyone who could make it across.

Recently, a 26-year-old Chicagoan named John Erikson swam back and forth across the channel, three times, without stopping and his achievement was hardly front-page news.

Is homo sapiens evolving before our eyes into a superior creature? Or is it all in the mind? Maybe athletes keep breaking records simply because they are willing to try a little harder—which suggests the key to progress in a lot of other human endeavors.

"MARK MY WORDS! Next year, it'll be ZIP plus EIGHT!"

By JANE CASSELL BERRY

Interest is already building for the seventh annual Post Fun 'n Fitness Golden Age Games to be held in Sanford Nov. 9-14, and 100 entries have already been received.

Jim Jernigan, chairman of the Golden Age Games and Sanford Parks and Recreation director, Jack Horner, executive manager of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, and Jack's wife, Peggy, left Tuesday afternoon for Washington, D.C., where they will attend the first National Conference on Fitness and Aging. The conference was organized by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports under the sponsorship of Post Cereals and Sanka Brand Decaffeinated Coffee of General Foods Corporation, is being held Thursday and Friday at the Shoreham Hotel.

Jernigan and the Horners will have a booth at the conference to promote Sanford's Golden Age Games. The Games provide a wide variety of sports and recreational events for seniors 55 and over from many parts of the United States and several other countries.

Chamber secretary Virginia Longwell says she is receiving 40-to-50 inquiries about the Golden Age Games each week. Most of the entries have been for golf, swimming and track and field, and the predominant age is 67. A man from England is entering the Pinochle tournament.

This year's participants will each receive a hat (for the men) or a shoulder bag (for the women) with the Golden Age Games logo printed on them.

The bags will be assembled by the women of the Seminole County Extension Homemakers Clubs.

The program book for the Golden Age Games goes to the printer this week, Virginia said. Schedules and entry forms are already available from the Chamber office.

This year for the first time data on the senior citizen event will be fed into a computer being programmed by a Tampa firm.

First Baptist Church's senior citizen group is planning to enter a team in the Golden Age Games and is challenging other churches to do the same, said Virginia.

On Teenage Fatigue

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If a teenager says he is often fatigued, a Florida doctor says it's always a signal that something is wrong and should be taken seriously.

Dr. Arnold Melnick said the fatigue may only be caused by inadequate rest and sleep or it may be the result of a disease or drug use. Or there may be a psychological cause such as a conflict with parents or just plain boredom.

Melnick, professor of pediatrics at the Southeastern College of Osteopathic Medicine in North Miami Beach, said in a report in the medical magazine Consultant that if a teenager comes to a doctor complaining he is tired all the time, the doctor is being sent two messages.

"First, 'I think there is something wrong with me, tell me what it is.' Second, 'I'm scared about something, please help me.'"

"We have to pay attention to these hidden messages," Melnick wrote.

He said fatigue caused by inadequate rest, tension, dieting, pregnancy, too little or too much activity is common among adolescents.

"Even though teenagers think they get enough rest, they frequently overextend themselves," he said. "They stay awake to 2 a.m. watching television and then have to get up early for school the next day. Fatigue is a natural consequence."

Melnick said intense or prolonged stress or tension will also cause fatigue. And so will what he calls "stringent fad dieting." Fatigue can be the first indication to an adult that a teenager is pregnant.

Melnick listed 30 diseases that can cause fatigue. He said anemia is probably the most often considered cause of teenage fatigue, but he said youngsters can compensate for mild anemia and the red blood cell count has to be fairly low before symptoms can develop.

Another overdiagnosed condition, he said, is hypothyroidism, a disorder caused by the body's insufficient production of thyroid hormone.

Melnick said teenagers frequently take medications, whether prescribed or not. He said the fatigue they can cause often goes unrecognized. He cited tetracyclines for acne and antihistamines for allergies as examples of drugs which can cause fatigue.

Alcohol, sedatives, tranquilizers, nicotine, insulin, and small overdoses of vitamins A and D also were among the drugs listed as capable of causing fatigue.

Melnick said doctors should suspect a psychologic cause of fatigue if the parent is doing the complaining.

"If a young man is fatigued at home or in school and is active outside, or if a young lady is always tired at home but can manage to go out and dance half the night, suspect psychologic fatigue."

"If the teenager is too tired when it comes to meeting parental requests, such as tidying up, clearing the table, or doing the dishes, but moves quickly for a basketball game or going out with the girls, you have to be suspicious."

Melnick said an adolescent who has psychologic fatigue can take a nap and get up just as tired as when he lay down. But if the problem is caused by an illness, the youngster will feel somewhat improved after a rest.

ROBERT WALTERS

Blame The Economists

WASHINGTON (NEA) — At this late date, politicians ought to be properly suspicious of economics, a murky business characterized as "the dismal science" more than 100 years ago by Thomas Carlyle, the British author and social critic.

"I have been gradually coming under the conviction," economist Kenneth E. Boulding confessed five years ago, "that there is no such thing as economics."

"We have crystal balls," Alfred Kahn, the Carter administration economist, explained two years ago "but they don't work."

Despite those warnings, President Reagan selected as the cornerstone of his domestic policy "A Program for Economic Recovery" based on a questionable assortment of "supply side" theories, projections and assumptions.

Suddenly, the entire program is in danger of collapse. Stratospheric interest rates, which dropped very briefly in the early spring, have remained phenomenally high and quite unshakable for more than four months.

The consumer price index rose by 1.2 percent during July, the most recent month for which the figure is available. That's the fastest pace for inflation recorded in 16 months and is equivalent to a 15.2 percent annual increase.

The Dow Jones industrial average, the most widely accepted index of common stock price trends, has plummeted more than 142 points, from a high that topped 1,024 last April to less than 882 in late August.

There's a temptation to blame Republicans, conservatives and "supply side" zealots for the sorry state of affairs, but the fact is that Democrats, liberals and Keynesian fanatics have not fared especially well in recent years in their efforts to revive a sagging economy.

Perhaps the cause of the problem lies with "the dismal science" and its practitioners. "An economist," says the man best known for propounding the "Peter Principle," Dr. Lawrence J. Peter, "is an expert who will know tomorrow why the things he predicted yesterday didn't happen today."

When many of the country's most thoughtful men and women assembled in Houston two years ago for the biennial Woodlands Conference on Growth Policies, several participants were highly critical of economics as it is currently practiced.

"One wonders why it is that, as the signs of economic decline mount, the majority of 'experts' denies the reality of the situation and the minority prescribes a pill too bitter to swallow," noted James O'Toole of the University of Southern California.

"The set of factors economists have been intently optimizing for two centuries is today incomplete, insufficient and inappropriate," added O'Toole, who warned that "in our desperate confusion, we are willing to listen to every snake-oil salesman who comes along."

Indiana University's James Lee Miller noted that economists have a fixation about counting everything — an approach that places undue emphasis on whatever can be quantified while totally ignoring qualitative distinctions.

"Whether the poor of Chicago's South Side receive basic human needs or the rich of Grosse Pointe receive luxuries is all the same not only to national income accounting but also to the market and to economic science," added Miller. "The price of the rich man's cigar must be measured neutrally against the price of milk for the hungry child."

Robert D. Hamrin, a senior policy economist with the Environmental Protection Agency, noted that economics generally focuses on short-term periods ranging from three months to three years even though "short-run equilibrium analysis is not conducive to dealing with long-run structural changes."

In addition, Hamrin argued that contemporary economics has ignored "almost completely the economic impact of social institutions, political power relationships and cultural attitudes and values."

Politicians and economists alike ought to give serious consideration to Hamrin's conclusion that "much of the malaise afflicting Americans is due to their perception that the United States is walking backwards into the future."

African Speech Furor

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The Reagan administration has been criticized in recent months for its apparent lack of a coherent foreign policy — or, at least, of a clearly enunciated one — beyond cries of, "The Russians are coming — everywhere." President Reagan himself brushed aside such criticism at a news conference by saying that he was satisfied that his administration did indeed have a foreign policy.

But the issue has arisen anew following a recent speech by Chester Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, to the annual convention of the American Legion.

State Department sources say that Crocker was only one of a number of middle-level administration officials who were to make courtesy appearances before a group that had supported Reagan's election. His speech was to have been a simple restatement of policy toward Southern Africa.

As late as the day before the speech, Crocker's office was telling reporters that the assistant secretary would say nothing out of the ordinary. The same information was given to representatives of South Africa and several black African countries.

Instead, Crocker delivered a major policy address that went far beyond anything that had been said previously and that sent shock waves through the diplomatic community here and abroad.

The speech dwelled at length on the strategic importance of South Africa to the West. "It is not our task to choose between black and white," Crocker said. "In this rich land (South Africa) of talented and diverse peoples, important Western economic, strategic, moral and political interests are at stake... We have no intention of destabilizing South Africa in order to curry favor elsewhere."

Coming on the heels of South Africa's invasion of Angola and of statements in which South African leaders backed off promises to modify their apartheid policies, the speech was viewed in Pretoria, Washington and black Africa as an endorsement of the new get-tough policy of Prime Minister P.W. Botha and his white minority government.

The State Department sources say that Crocker originally drafted a "moderate" speech for delivery to the Legionnaires. Major changes were dictated to Crocker following review of the text by State Department officials, including Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

Haig reportedly insisted that the speech contain certain specific language, including references to the presence of Cuban troops in Angola. He is also said to have brushed aside objections from middle-level State Department officials that the timing of the speech was all wrong given that South African troops were still in Angola and that the United Nations was about to debate independence for South African-ruled Namibia. In fact, the changes were dictated after Haig had agreed to meet with the foreign ministers of five black African countries on their way to New York for the U.N. meeting.

The speech also apparently caught the U.S. Embassy in Pretoria by surprise. When the wire services began reporting on Crocker's speech, embassy officials was besieged by telephone calls and had to frantically cable Washington for a copy. The final text bore little resemblance to the preliminary draft that they had received earlier.

Rating Lawmakers: The Senate's Turn

WASHINGTON — The inner workings of the Senate are largely shielded from the public. And since no single senator can be held accountable for what the whole Senate does, each of the 100 members can afford, if he wishes, to be irresponsible.

Some senators are exemplary public servants, devoted to the national welfare, whose contributions will never be adequately appreciated. But others are petty politicians whose devotions are limited to privilege, patronage and pork.

The collectivity and secrecy which obscures the dedication of the former also cover up the dereliction of the latter. Only Senate insiders can truly distinguish the doers from the drones. The rules and customs that prohibit one senator from disparaging another also prevent the public from ever sharing in this knowledge.

But I have succeeded in getting behind the scenes in the Senate and appraising its 100 members, with the help of my reporters Tony Capaccio and Ginger Fannon. I have selected the best and worst senators and assigned them to the categories I think they deserve. The envelope, please:

MOST EFFECTIVE — Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.; Budget Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M.; Alan Cranston, D-

Calif.; Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W. Va.; Orrin Hatch, R-Utah; Robert Dole, R-Kan.; Jesse Helms, R-N.C.; Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.; Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Warren Rudman, R-N.H.

LEAST EFFECTIVE — Larry Pressler, R-S.D.; Steve Symms, R-Idaho; John Heinz, R-Pa.; Harry Byrd, I-Va.; Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala.; S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif.; Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.; Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.; Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., and John Melcher, D-Mont.

MOST POPULAR — Baker; Dole; Paul Laxalt, R-Nev.; Charles Mathias, R-Md.; Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, and Russell Long, D-La.

LEAST POPULAR — Donald Riegle, D-Mich.; Robert Byrd; Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.; Helms; and Heinz.

Note that personal popularity or unpopularity don't necessarily determine a senator's effectiveness in the clutches. But personality still plays an important role in the Senate's inner circles. Heinz, for example, was a diligent and effective fundraiser for his fellow Republicans in 1979, yet he was passed over for a leadership position when the GOP took control this year.

BIGGEST BORES — In a legislative body of 100 that allows unlimited debate, this is a tough call to make. But I'll give the nod to Humphrey; Charles Percy, R-Ill.; Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., and Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M.

BRIGHT LIGHTS — Bill Armstrong, R-Colo.; Bill Bradley, D-N.J.; Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.; Slade Gorton, R-Wash.; Rudman; Nunn; and Weicker.

DIM BULBS — Humphrey; Schmitt; Harry Byrd; Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa; Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

HATFIELDS AND McCOYS — There are a number of private feuds running beneath the surface of senatorial camaraderie. Heinz, for example, has no love for his fellow Pennsylvania Republican, Arlen Specter, who once ran against him. There is also a simmering hostility between Ohio Democrats John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum.

And Ted Kennedy's Irish wit drew blood from Hayakawa when Kennedy cracked that his seat on the Senate floor was next to Hayakawa's bed and pillow — a reference to the elderly Californian's habit of nodding off during debate. Stung, Hayakawa retorted: "We Japanese have been sleeping on the floor for a thousand years. Maybe Sen. Kennedy should try it. I understand he does some of his best work in bed."

Now some special recognition for outstanding individual achievement:

RUBY KEELER AWARD — John Warner, R-Va., went out on the Senate stage a nobody and came back a star. Widely sneered at as "Mr. Elizabeth Taylor," Warner has proved he's no lightweight, but a hardworking senator who has made his critics eat their words.

BEST ACTOR — Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., is both voluble and articulate. His Irish wit and righteous indignation can be summoned up at a moment's notice. The senator, of course, will disdain this Oscar. In fact, preparing for a television show, he once protested that acting make-believe was "not something I do every day."

EMPEROR NERO MEDALION — Robert Byrd plays hillbilly fiddle and gets really absorbed. Deeked out in a red vest, he was playing "Turkey in the Straw" at a press conference when an aide tried to catch his eye. Byrd kept playing. The aide slipped him a note. Byrd ignored it and played on. When he finally finished, to the usual applause, Byrd discovered that he had been fiddling while then-Secretary of State Cyrus Vance burned in the senator's office.

NATION IN BRIEF

Federal Budget Deficit Twice As Big As Expected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Congressional Budget Office projected today the federal deficit next year will be $80 billion — nearly twice the size the cost-cutting Reagan administration had anticipated earlier.

And, CBO said, President Reagan's goal of a balanced budget by 1984 may be crushed as it now seems the deficit that year — even if Reagan's current economizing measures are adopted — will be close to $50 billion.

Despite these gloomy statistics, the nonpartisan CBO predicted the economy would improve next year.

"The updated economic forecast of the Congressional Budget Office shows substantial improvement in the economy compared with the lackluster performance of recent years," CBO Director Alice Rivlin said in a statement prepared for delivery to the House Budget Committee.

Reagan, Begin Forge Bond

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin discussed strong differences and common goals during their first meeting, and afterward exchanged words of praise.

The world leaders Wednesday agreed to forge a closer "strategic alliance," despite staunch disagreement over whether the United States should sell surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia.

Following the first round of talks scheduled to resume today, Reagan hosted a White House state dinner in honor of Begin.

Murder-Suicide Kills 6

CHICOPEE, Mass. (UPI) — Police have no idea why a wealthy businessman shot and killed five members of his family and their pet poodle before turning the gun on himself in an apparent murder-suicide that left neighbors baffled.

The bodies of six members of Richard Grochmal's family, described by one neighbor as a "perfectly normal, very close, church-going family," were found scattered throughout their posh glass-and-wood home Wednesday.

"We really don't have any ideas," said Police Capt. Joseph Wilk. "Anybody who could tell us is dead."

Police classified the case as murder and suicide pending further investigation.

O'Connor Nod Assured

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sandra Day O'Connor testified about her views on abortion — past and present — trying to shake the little opposition there is to her nomination as the Supreme Court's first woman justice.

Today, Mrs. O'Connor was expected to field more abortion questions during the confirmation hearings by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The hearings conclude Friday and approval appears certain.

Mrs. O'Connor, 51, testified Wednesday she would not have an abortion, but would not condemn any woman who did. And she seemed to back off her support of a move to decriminalize abortion in Arizona 11 years ago — prior to the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing it.

Shuttle Tests Finalize

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Engineers are studying tests completed Wednesday to try to find any last minute bugs that could delay the second launch of the space shuttle Columbia.

Computers took the space shuttle Columbia through a mock ignition and make-believe launch pad engine failure Wednesday — one of the final tests preparing the orbiter for its second trip to space Oct. 9.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly took the controls while computers simulated the firing of the shuttle's engines then shut them down at three seconds before liftoff would occur.

The test took place with the Columbia sitting on its ocean-side launchpad, attached to its huge external fuel tank and two massive booster rockets.

Informer Jumps At Immunity

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (UPI) — An Air Force missile officer facing a court-martial for allegedly passing secrets to the Soviets leaped at an offer of immunity if he confessed to his superiors and passed a lie detector test.

Tape recordings of one interrogation session disclose Air Force 2nd Lt. Christopher Cooke, former deputy commander of a Titan II missile complex in Kansas, said the immunity option — one of three presented by the Air Force — "looks super."

More than 1½ hours of scratchy recordings of Cooke's May 9 interrogation by Lt. Col. Jerome Hoffman of the Air Force's Special Office of Investigation were played Wednesday in a military courtroom.

Foreign Student Costs Face Seminole Schools

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County School Board will spend more than $200,000 this year to educate 131 foreign students in the public school system and there's nothing it can do to collect those costs from the students' non-taxpaying parents.

During a workshop prior to its regular meeting Wednesday night, school board members were told by Dan Dag, assistant superintendent of instruction, the federal courts require school boards to admit foreign children to school.

At the same time, Dag said the Seminole County school administration is grateful that Gov. Bob Graham vetoed a bill passed by the state Legislature empowering school administrators to collect the costs from the foreign parents. Trying to collect that money — about $1,800 per student — would be a nightmare some feel. "I don't know how we would extract money from foreigners," said board member Al Keeth.

Member Pat Telson asked if this requirement extended to Iranians who have criticized the U.S. government and indicated they do not want to be here.

Dag replied that the federal courts also require school districts to admit illegal aliens to the public schools.

In other action, the board instructed Keeth, an official of the state School Board Association, to urge that group to sponsor legislation to exempt school boards from following the calendar set forth in last year's Truth in Millage Law (TRIM).

The board's finance director, Roger Harris, and Superintendent Bob Hughes said the schedule of public hearings and times for adoption of the budget are not appropriate for school boards.

A later time period is needed, they explained, because it is not known exactly what financial assistance will be given to education by the state until sometime after the Legislature adjourns in June.

Keeth said he will bring the matter to the state association's attention at its Sept. 19 meeting.

Meanwhile, Hughes reported that the state Association of school superintendents is proposing inclusion of the definition of the term "hazardous area transportation" in upcoming legislation to provide state funding for courtesy busing for elementary school children living within the two mile limit.

The usual rule for busing school children is that they live more than two miles from a school.

The association is also considering pushing legislation allowing the State Department of Education (DOE) to forgive school districts' past capital improvement debts.

Hughes pointed out that Seminole County's school board owes the DOE $11.7 million it received in advance funding for the construction of Lake Mary High School. He said the board will have to begin paying on that loan in the 1982-83 fiscal year. The county loan will be paid back at the rate of 80 percent of allocated state funds for capital improvements annually.

Another piece of legislation being supported by the superintendents calls for limiting the scope of collective bargaining to wages, hours and fringe benefits, and to provide for multiple annual contracts for teachers rather than continuing contracts.

Farmers Testify On Farm Loans

By IRA R. ALLEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Farmer Thomas Davis was handed a subpoena in his Blakely, Ga., peanut patch Tuesday, and 15 hours later was answering tough questions before a Senate committee.

According to the Senate Small Business Committee, Davis illegally took more than $400,000 in disaster relief loans from the Small Business Administration and the Agriculture Department for the same disaster.

Davis, the panel said Wednesday, used $90,000 of the money to buy land, $34,000 to renovate a farmhouse, $20,000 to start a savings account and a little over $100 on a boat payment.

Davis' case was among a dozen instances of apparent fraud in the SBA's Farm Disaster Loans program cited by the panel, which contends the program is riddled with widespread abuse.

"You can lose a pile of money on a farm," Davis said, explaining his plight. He said he did not think at the time he was doing anything wrong by violating terms of the loan. But, he said, "Looking back now, I see where I messed up."

SBA Inspector General Paul Boucher testified there were perhaps "hundreds of millions of dollars" in fraudulent loans made to farmers hit by weather disasters from 1977 to 1980.

And, he said, there were another $1.2 billion in delinquent payments — about 20 percent of the money lent under the brief, scandal-ridden program.

In testimony prepared for today's second day of hearings, SBA Administrator Michael Cardenas said his agency has concentrated more on making loans than on collecting them.

But, Cardenas pledged, it will now move faster to recover fraudulent farm disaster aid payments.

"Debt collection is going to be given the viability and support it has never before received at SBA," he said. "I can promise you we will move quickly within our authority to recover everything that is due to the SBA."

Cardenas said the agency will centralize its farm-loan paperwork for the Southeast region into a single office, will strengthen its supervision of debt collection and will increase staffs in field offices.

The abuses detailed Wednesday involved farmers applying for loans from both SBA and the Agriculture Department, which has had traditional authority over emergency farm aid, neither telling the other.

Silver Hawks Baptize Lake Mary Tonight

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Sports Writer

Lake Mary High School's new head football coach Roger Beathard has been there before.

Curtain call. When the drapes are drawn aside to make way for opening night of a spanking new high school football season.

And while Beathard confesses to a slight case of butterflies in his debut as a head coach, don't look for his Lake Mary Rams to suffer from a case of stage fright in their first-ever game—a 7:30 clash against Lake Howell this evening at Lyman High School.

"Yes, I've got a little case of the butterflies, probably more than previous opening nights," explained the former Seminole High defensive coaching whiz.

"I'm probably a little more nervous than the kids."

Beathard's troops of sophomores will play a junior varsity schedule in their maiden season, switching next season to either a 2A or 3A varsity campaign.

The Rams face a stiff challenge in tackling Lake Howell tonight. Most of the Silver Hawk lineup is composed of players that led Lake Howell's freshman team to last season's county title.

"Sammy Weir left behind a solid program when he moved on to UCF," compliments Beathard. "Lake Howell's football program has really turned the corner and Harry Drivas does an excellent job with the junior varsity."

If psychology plays a more effective role in younger plays than seniors, the

Rams

Rams have several things going for them.

"When Lake Mary opened up this year, principal Don Reynolds called it, 'The beginning of the best,' points out the Ram skipper.

"We've got a beautiful new school and our player enthusiasm is really high."

Beathard hopes to show some of that enthusiasm at Lyman High School tonight, the site of the Ram-Hawk game.

Lake Howell's offense will get a look at Beathard's patented 50-slant defense, his trademark as Seminole High's defensive coordinator.

"We'll go with the 50-slant, but we'll keep it pretty basic," says Beathard.

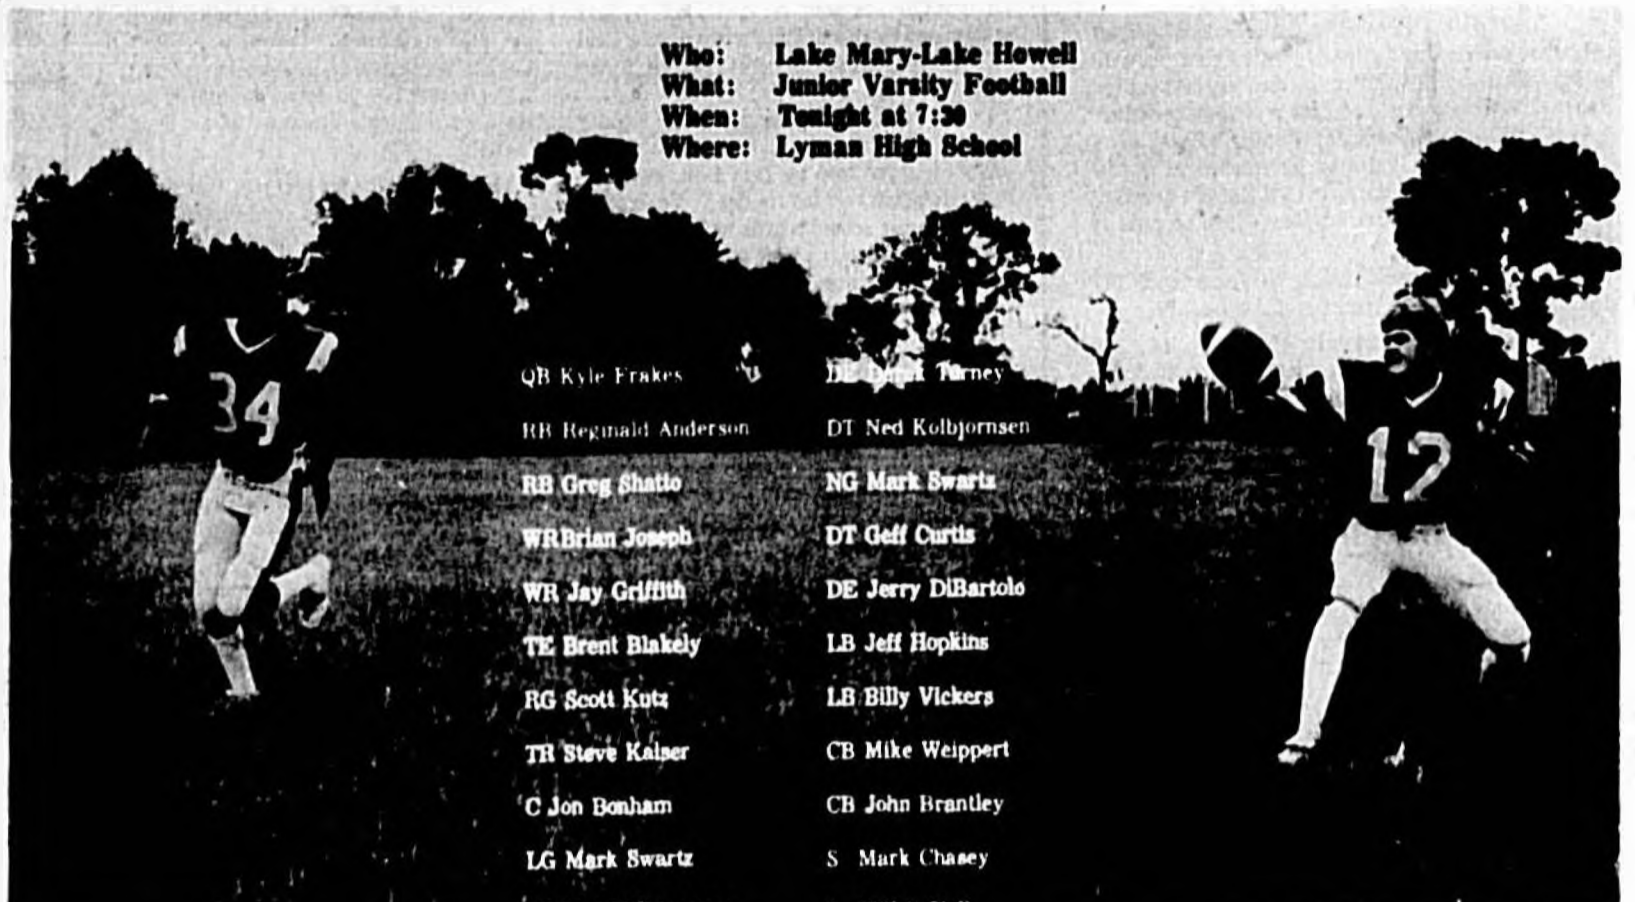

If the Ram boss has one area of concern, it has to be the kicking game.

"Our kicking game is looking a little shaky right now," admits Beathard. "We hope it shapes up in the next day or two."

Offensively, Lake Mary will operate primarily out of the I and Veer formations to best utilize the speed in the backfield and the ball handling prowess of quarterback Kyle Frakes.

"Offensive coordinator Ron Safford and I have been working extra hard on the offense. Going into the season opener that's where I have the most confidence," explained Beathard.

And just what goals has this brand new coach set for his brand new players and school in a brand new football season? "We've made the Seminole County junior varsity championship our goal," says Beathard. "We didn't and haven't talked about going undefeated or non-loss records. We've just talked about being there at the end of the season.

For Beathard, the Rams and "the beginning of the best," the first test comes with tonight's kickoff.

Still The Same... County Football Coaches Look For Tight Races

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Sports Writer

There's a few new faces on hand for the opening night of Seminole County prep football. But the story is the same. As the Five Star Conference schedule unfolds, the consensus among prep skippers is pretty much the same as it has been for the past three seasons.

Seminole County's entry in the Orange Belt circuit, Joe Montgomery of Oviedo, is likewise eyeing a balanced and competitive struggle for post-season laurels.

Jerry Posey at Seminole and Bill Scott at Lyman head into Friday night's openers without the benefit of a fall jamboree. For Scott's Greyhounds, that may be a blessing in disguise. Two years ago the Lyman skipper lost the services of standout quarterback Jeff Myers a week before the season opener to a jamboree injury.

The Greyhounds will be out to reverse an 0-10 season of a year ago. Lyman's roster is chalked full of young talent and a new spirit and winning attitude has developed at the 'Hound campus.

The Greyhounds will be looking for a strong running game to carry the load until that young defensive squad develops. The Hound backfield that hopes to move against opening opponent Boone will revolve around junior running back Vince Presley and junior signal caller Dwayne Johnson.

Presley was impressive to say the least in the spring jamboree and along with Johnson has benefited from a fair amount of sophomore game time.

Boone lost the services of one of the top runners in Central Florida when Jerris White transferred to Merrill Island, but Scott feels the Braves will come out with a more balanced, wide-open attack.

"They've got a quarterback that's a pretty good passer," says Scott. "The Braves are always a tough opener for us." Jerry Posey's Fighting Seminoles can likewise look forward to a tough opener when the Tribe plays host to 3A power Titusville Astronaut, ranked among the pre-season top 10 in the state.

"If we stay away from first game jitters and mistakes, I feel we can beat them," says Posey, looking to rebound from his first losing season at Seminole.

"They've had the benefit of a fall jamboree and we haven't, but I'm pleased with our defensive progress. Offensively, we'll go with our same wide running game."

Senior Jeff Litton will be directing that patented, wide-pitch offense for the Tribe that once again features a potentially strong ground attack in the form of seniors Lenny Sulton, Victor Williams and Johnnie Little.

"Astronaut is a sound football team and they don't make many mistakes," closed Posey.

At the Big Blue campus in "Lake Brantley Country," second-year head coach Dave Tullis and the Pats embark on improving last season's 5-5 slate when Colonial's Grenadiers come calling.

A week ago in fall jamboree action, Lake Brantley looked ready for opening night, especially on defense.

"I was happy with the defensive play," agreed Tullis.

The Patriots are looking for strong defense over four quarters against Colonial. When these two teams have met over the past four seasons the winning margin has been by a touchdown or less.

A pleasant surprise for Tullis in last week's jamboree was the passing performance of Al Rollison, a backup a year ago who was sidelined in the spring with injuries and saw virtually no fall practice time. Rollison relieved converted safety Fred Baber in the jamboree and connected on 4-of-6 passes for 63 yards. Two others, one a potential scoring strike, were dropped.

"Credit that to Jack Blanton," says Tullis of Lake Brantley's offensive back coach. "He does just an incredible job developing our quarterbacks. He can squeeze out every ounce of ability in a player."

Colonial will have to put the squeeze on what appears to be a tough and deep Patriot running back group. Senior Kevin Beasaw along with Rob Brown and Danny Freeman should help Brantley's ball control attack.

New Lake Howell boss Mike Blaciegla gets his first taste of football, "Seminole County style," when his Silver Hawks entertain the visiting Bishop Moore Hornets.

Blaciegla had to be pleased with Lake Howell's mix-it-up drive displayed in a 6-0 jamboree victory over Apopka. Behind the running of senior vet Scott Grant and the surprising performance of sophomore fullback Jay Robey. Joe Montgomery's Oviedo Lions draw Umatilla for their opening assignment on the road.

Montgomery is happy with the passing game and despite throwing up 21 points against Bishop Moore in one quarter.

"We got the point but we really didn't move the ball much," points out Montgomery. "Specialty team play was good, we blocked a punt, recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass that gave us field position."

The Lion defense will be faced with the task of stopping speedy Cecil McKenzie, Umatilla's returning tailback who led the squad in rushing last year.

"He's a jet," says Monty. Five-foot-9 and a 190 pounds and he's running behind two tackles who go 6'4" 230 and 6'3" 220."

"If we play as a team and not individuals we should get it going," he added. "Our quarterbacks are throwing well so I think we'll be in good shape."

Computer Backs Beathard, Glenn, Posey Gridiron Prediction Prowess

Some people believe that these two smiling ladies that are found forecasting football games in this column were chosen because their husbands were football coaches.

Nothing could be further from the truth. After spending hours upon hours pouring over data from a very specialized computer, I was able to discern that Martha Posey and Linda Beathard along with Seminole County Commissioner Sandra Glenn would be the most qualified ladies for this week's forecast.

Posey was the first name the computer provided. Her credentials, as you can see, are all in order. POSEY...MARTHA...20 years married to a football coach (Jerry)...die-hard Florida Gator fan...went with present husband since he was a football star at Haines City High School...romance blossomed their sophomore year..."I'm no dummy, he was the football hero, I wanted a nice

Sam Cook
Sports Editor

(letterman) sweater to wear."

Then came Beathard. BEATHARD... LINDA... 10 years married to a football coach (Roger)...met and was love-struck when they were both teaching in Harrison, Ohio...first six dates with Roger were to sporting events...Linda's Brookville, Ind. High School team went to the state football championship her senior year..."We beat Roger's school the same year."

Then came Glenn. GLENN... SANDRA... former flag football coach in Atlanta, Ga. ... ex-sportswriter for her college newspaper at Valdosta State University... 13-year-old son who has gone through the SVSA ranks in Seminole County... former basketball star in high school... avid sports follower of all Seminole County sports and teams..."son Benny wouldn't let me attend his basketball games because my yelling unnerved him."

Yes, I think we have three very qualified prognosticators. Now, looking at the male side, this guy will probably do. Joe DeSantis, a former sports editor at the Evening Herald until it found someone better, is a veteran forecaster.

Billy Stripp is a senior at Lake Howell High School as you'll be able to tell from his picks. I'll overlook this ingrown Hawk prejudice because of his age.

I don't like picking football games, but I'll do it because it is expected of me. Remember pick with your head and not your heart.

Here we go.

Titusville Astronaut at Sanford Posey says of course Sanford. "It makes my life easier when Sanford wins," says Martha. Beathard goes with Astronaut. "Astronaut has been a good team in the past and Seminole never seems to do well the first game," observes Linda. Glenn says Sanford. "They will have one of the better teams in the county. The spirit will be high and the players pumped up for the first game," says Sandra.

DeSantis picks the Tribe by seven. Stripp and Cook say Astronaut. Stripp feels 3A powerhouse will beat a good 4A team. I tend to agree unless Seminole defense scores two TD's.

Lake Mary JV vs. Lake Howell JV at Lyman High School You'll like this one. Posey says Lake Mary because Beathard's a good coach. Beathard says Lake Mary because "obviously there's no doubt about it."

LINDA BEATHARD
...love-struck in Harrison

MARTHA POSEY
...likes football sweaters

Glenn says Lake Howell because "the boys went through a good SVSA program and have played together longer." DeSantis disagrees and says the Rams' backfield has been together four years. Lake Mary by one. Stripp, of course, shows his silver and blue blood and picks Lake Howell. Frank Schwartz, Rams' freshman coach, says the Rams are going undefeated. I'll go with Frank for this game anyway.

Lyman at Boone No one wants a win more than Bill Scott. Last year's 0-10 season was like a week without food. I know how much you like to eat Bill.

Cook, DeSantis, Posey, and Glenn say Lyman wins. Beathard picks Boone in a close game and Stripp sees the "greyhound string of losses continuing."

Oviedo at Umatilla This game should be a joke, although Joe Montgomery is throwing up the annual coaches smoke screen. Unanimous selection of Oviedo by the men and women.

Bishop Moore at Lake Howell Another easy pick. Stripp makes good point that all the coaching transitions at Bishop Moore hamper the program.

Oviedo ripped the Hornets 21-0 in just one jamboree quarter. All the forecasters take the Silver Hawks in a walk.

Colonial At Lake Brantley This one has everybody uneasy. All feel it will be the lightest game of the week. Five of these so-called experts picked the Patriots to win. Guess who didn't? Sorry

Big Blue, I'm a Jay Poag fan. When he left, so did your win over the Grenadiers.

Presbyterian College vs. UCF at the Tangerine Bowl

Beathard is a Presbyterian, so she picked them. I'm not of the faith, but I pick them too. That 48-0 two years ago is hard to get out of my mind. Glenn concurs.

Posey, DeSantis and Stripp like the Don Jonas-Sam Weir combination. Oh, by the way, Stripp, where did Weir used to coach? You're showing your feathers again.

Furman at Florida Glenn says hungry Gators will come alive. So do the rest of us.

Memphis State at Florida State The Seminoles must feel like a man awaiting his execution, while puffing on his last cigarette. After the Memphis crew, Florida State tackles (?) Nebraska, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Pittsburgh and LSU — all on the road.

Bobby Bowden is a religious man. He'll have to be to survive the following five. Everybody says FSU and hopes its the last drag takes forever.

Tampa Bay at Kansas City Posey calls them "poor old Tampa Bay," but she picks them to win. Beathard thinks Bucs will have a good season, so does Stripp. Glenn and DeSantis also like Tampa in close game.

I think Martha was right the first time. "Poor old Tampa Bay" reverts to form in Kansas City. Chiefs by SEVEN.

IN BRIEF

Cedeno Appeals Indefinite Suspension For Fan Grabbing

HOUSTON (UPI) — Houston Astros' first baseman Cesar Cedeno has appealed his indefinite National League suspension for going into the Atlanta Stadium stands and grabbing a heckler.

Piersall Rankles Wives

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jimmy Piersall has survived tangles with players, umpires and writers during his five years as a Chicago White Sox television announcer but his disparaging comments about players' wives has again put his job on the line.

Piersall was suspended indefinitely with pay by the team's owners Wednesday night because of his comments on a recent television show hosted by Chicago Sun-Times columnist Mike Royko.

White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf denied Piersall had been fired, saying he and club President Eddie Einhorn will meet with Piersall within the next several days to discuss the television announcer's future with the club.

Piersall had told Royko, "I think each ball club should have a clinic once a week for wives (of players) on the ball because I don't think they don't know what the hell baseball is. First of all, they were horny broads that wanted to get married and they wanted a little money, a little security and a big, strong ballplayer."

Matthews' Blast Buries Montreal

By United Press International Gary Matthews' batting average was .317 at the beginning of the season but dropped to .190 since the games resumed after the strike. But he may be getting his second wind.

NL Baseball

Wednesday night the left-fielder finished Tuesday's postponed game with a three-run homer to cap a five-run, eighth-inning rally for the Phillies 11-8 victory over the Montreal Expos.

"This is the only time I can ever remember not hitting the ball for this long a period of time," said Matthews, who finished the night 3-for-3 with four runs scored. "Tonight ... I was really pleased."

"We really wanted to win tonight," Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green said. "And, it's that much more valuable coming from behind because you leave doubt in the minds of the opposition."

Ron Reed, the fourth of five Philadelphia pitchers, gained his fourth win in five decisions and Sparky Lyle worked the ninth for his first save of the season. Woodie Fryman, 5-3, took the loss.

In other games, Cincinnati edged San Diego, 5-4, Atlanta shut out Houston, 9-0, Chicago downed St. Louis, 7-3, New York topped Pittsburgh, 7-3, and San Francisco beat Los Angeles, 6-3, in 11 innings.

Reds 5, Padres 1

At Cincinnati, Johnny Bench slugged a sixth-inning homer and capped a three-run ninth with a two-out single to lead the Reds.

Braves 9, Astros 6

At Atlanta, Phil Niekro tossed an eight-hitter for his 24th career victory and Bob Horner cracked his 100th major-league home run to power the Braves.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 3

At St. Louis, Bobby Bonds drove in three runs with a pair of homers to lead the Cubs to their third straight win over the Cardinals.

Mets 5, Pirates 3

At Pittsburgh, Hubie Brooks went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs to lead the Mets and give New York second place in the NL East. The win went to reliever Terry Leach, 1-0, while Ray Searage picked up his first save.

Giants 6, Dodgers 3

At Los Angeles, Dave Bergman's two-run homer off reliever Tom Niedenfuer, in the top of the 11th, capped a three-run rally to lift the Giants after the Dodgers had tied the game twice.

BERT BLYLEVEN ...105 strikeouts

Blyleven Snaps Oriole's Winning Streak At Four

By United Press International Bert Blyleven did what he thought he had to do Wednesday night.

"I thought that to beat the Orioles, I had to make good pitches and those good pitches had to come in key situations. And I think I did that," Blyleven said, after he had pitched seven strong innings, leading the Cleveland Indians to an 8-5 victory over the Orioles at Baltimore.

Blyleven, who leads the American League with 105 strikeouts, allowed just four hits and struck out six to end Baltimore's four-game winning streak.

The Indians pounded 15 hits to back Blyleven's pitching, including a pair of RBI singles by rookie Von Hayes.

"There's no question that we had to have this game tonight," said Rick Manning. "... We needed a good pitching performance and we got it."

The Orioles ended Blyleven's shutout bid in the fifth on singles by Eddie Murray and Doug DeCincea and Terry Crowley's three-run homer.

Yankees 5-3, Brewers 2-5 At New York, Jerry Mumphrey had four hits, including a two-run homer, and three RBI to help Tommy John, 8-5, in the opener. In the nightcap, Cecil Cooper hit a three-run homer in the first inning to pace the Brewers to the split.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 3

At Detroit, Gary Allenson grounded a one-out single in the 11th inning to lift the Red Sox.

Twins 3, Blue Jays 1

At Bloomington, Minn., Fernando Arroyo and two relievers combined on an eight-hitter to lift the Twins.

Royals 7, Angels 3

At Kansas City, Mo., George Brett tripled twice and drove in two runs to lead the Royals. Renie Martin, 4-5, was the winner and Dan Quisenberry got the save.

Mariners 3, White Sox 1

At Chicago, Tom Paciorek slammed a two-run homer, his 10th of the year, in the first inning to lift the Mariners. Bob Stoddard got his second major league win in as many starts since being brought up from Spokane.

Rangers 9, A's 4

At Oakland, Bill Stein cracked a three-run homer off Oakland reliever Jeff Jones with one out in the ninth, to cap a seven-run rally and give the Rangers the victory.

Tanner Stands In Front Of Borg-McEnroe Rematch

NEW YORK (UPI) — Before Bjorn Borg gets the opportunity to face John McEnroe in an expected U.S. Open final, there remains one obstacle — Roscoe Tanner.

Though the Borg-McEnroe matches have been more celebrated, Borg has had nearly as much trouble with Tanner, who will test the Swede once again in the quarter-finals today.

The Stadium match between Borg, seeded second, and the ninth-seeded Tanner, from Kiawah Island, S.C., is one of only two singles matches today as the men complete their quarter-final round. On the tournament's final evening card, fourth-seeded Jimmy Connors meets No. 8

Pro Tennis

Eliot Teltscher. Wednesday, the first men's semifinal pairing was determined when McEnroe continued his climb with an unimpressive 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory over India's Ramesh Krishnan, and reborn Vitas Gerulaitis fashioned a 6-4, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1 triumph over Bruce Manson of Fort Worth, Texas. After a two-day rest, the two New Yorkers will collide Saturday.

It wasn't until the ninth game of the third set that McEnroe was able to head Krishnan.

"I wasn't moving like I should have," McEnroe said. "I had trouble with his serve and all I had doing was getting it in. He had me off-guard and playing his game ... he kept hitting winners by me."

Gerulaitis, who was seeded 15th, quickly raced through the first two sets, then double-faulted on break point in the seventh game of the third set to vault Manson back into contention. However, Gerulaitis broke in the second game of the fourth set and never gave Manson another chance.

The night duel took place in front of an Open-record 18,649 fans.

"It's a match I have to win and should win based on ranking and past performances," Gerulaitis said. "I haven't played that well this summer, and now I'm on a roll I didn't want to ruin it."

In a fourth-round match postponed from Tuesday night because of rain, Teltscher outlasted No. 16-ranked Brian Gottfried, 6-4, 6-0, 5-7, 1-6, 6-3, in three hours and 32 minutes to gain the berth against Connors.

On the women's side, Tracy Austin, Martina Navratilova and Barbara Potter scored straight-set victories to join top-seed Chris Evert Lloyd in the semifinals. The two teenagers, third-seeded Austin and 11th-seed Potter, will meet in one match while "old vets" Evert and Navratilova square off in the other.

Austin ousted sixth-seeded Sylvia Hanika and No. 4 Navratilova eliminated Anne Smith, both by 6-4, 6-3 counts. Potter ended the upset hopes of 17-year-old amateur Barbara Gerken with a 7-5, 7-5 lesson.

Austin has looked devastating in not dropping a set thus far, but Potter, 19, from Woodbury, Conn., has been confidently and steadily improving and is excited about her prospects Friday.

"I hope there is a full stadium," she said. "I play well in front of big crowds. I've never beaten Tracy. But I'm serving well and I finally feel like I belong here."

Photographing Eagles In Their Nest Complicated Task At Kennedy Space Center

Special To The Herald

Within sight and sound of the launch pad where the Space Shuttle now leaps to the heavens sits another "launch pad" where equally splendid bald eagles perch. Both species of bird have been photographed in the nest.

The Space Shuttle, of course, has been the subject of literally miles of film and videotape photography, but to capture images of breeding bald eagles on film has been an exceedingly difficult task. Until now, only the most dedicated of wildlife photographers had overcome both the extreme wariness of the eagles and the wearying months of surveillance required.

Such photography demands that the cameraman first find an accessible nest, no easy task itself, then establish a blind close enough to observe the eagles but not so close as to frighten them away. Because eagles have vision perhaps eight times as acute as man's, that distance was sometimes several hundred yards—beyond the range of even powerful camera lenses.

At NASA's John F. Kennedy Space Center, eagles have prospered hand and wing with high technology. The vast majority of the center's nearly 140,000 acres of land and water has remained a refuge for hundreds of animal species, including more than a dozen endangered or threatened species. Only about 10,000 acres has been developed for space launch activities, the rest has been purposefully left as it was when the land was acquired by the government.

A vast expanse of wetlands, pine and palmetto scrub for the most part, the center currently contains at least 30 eagle nests, of which about a dozen are home to breeding pairs of bald eagles. The best known of these breeding pairs has built its nest within a hundred yards of one of the center's major roadways in a huge pine tree.

Of all the bald eagle nests anywhere, it was thought at this one nesting photography could best be accomplished.

The nest's proximity to the highway and the birds' tolerance of human activity due to that location were the main factors in one man's efforts to film the birds in their nest. That man, Klaus Wilckens, is a photographer for Technicolor Graphic Services, Inc. which holds the photographic support contract with NASA at the space center. Klaus had done ground level photography of the eagle nest and its inhabitants for years, but he longed to get some truly spectacular shots of the inside of the nest and the nesting habits of the birds.

Wilckens believed he could construct a remote camera box and mount it high in the 60-foot tree in a location which allowed him to peer down into the nest. But there was a catch.

Because bald eagles are an endangered species, federal laws prohibit harassment of the birds or any interference with their nesting. One of the first steps, therefore, was for Wilckens and space center officials to obtain U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service permission and cooperation for the experiment. The service agreed to the experiment, but only if the eagles would not be disturbed during their nesting season.

The nesting season lasts from the first week in September until late June, meaning that the remote camera box would have to be mounted in place before the eagles returned from their migration, and would have to remain until the eagles departed for the summer.

The camera box to be used was designed at the space center in 1976, and would have been used in 1977, but Wilckens was sent on a summer migration of his own—assigned to film the Space Shuttle Enterprise's free flight tests in the California desert that year. He could not return to the space center until after the eagles had. Scratch 1977.

A month after the birds arrived...a grass cutting operation has cut the release wires as they lay on the ground between the two trees. But the problem was potentially more than just a cut wire. When cut, the wires may have shorted together long enough to run the entire 250 shot roll of film through the remote camera. There was no way to check...

The next year everything was again ready for the installation, but the eagles showed up about two weeks before they were expected, foiling Wilckens' plans to install the camera box. Then, in 1979, increased activity in Space Shuttle launch preparations caused Wilckens to postpone his grand experiment once more.

Finally, in the summer of 1980 it seemed the dream might be accomplished. Wilckens, Fish and Wildlife Service agents and a "cherry picker" trucker crew assembled at the huge pine to install the camera box. They tested several lenses and mounting locations to get the best possible sun and viewing angles, then shot several test rolls of film to determine the best exposure for average conditions. Wilckens settled on a 35mm wide angle lens, set at f-5.6 and a shutter speed of 1-250 of a second.

The 35mm camera was fitted with a special back to accommodate the 250 exposure roll of film, then batteries for the motor drive and the electrical release were installed and the box was sealed. It would have to function flawlessly and without adjustment for the next 10 months. The release wire, made of stainless steel military field telephone cable, was strung to a small tree about a hundred yards from the nest pine, and Wilckens sat back to await the arrival of the eagles.

The eagles swooped in less than a week later, about September 1. When his other photo assignments would allow Wilckens would drive past the nest, watching for the eagles.

With binoculars, he watched the eagles as they busily added to the ten by six foot nest or simply perched nearby. When everything looked good, he would press the release switch, rationing his film for the hoped-for raising of young in the coming months.

But bad luck still stalked Wilckens. In the past, this pair of birds had always been very tolerant of humans nearby, and had allowed Wilckens to approach to less than a hundred yards. Now, one of the birds was extremely wary, and would fly off as soon as the dark blue government truck approached.

Theorizing about the change in behavior, Klaus believed one of the eagles, which mate for life, was killed during the summer and the remaining bird had found a new mate. Perhaps the new bird was not yet accustomed to the hum of activity so nearby.

Then, more bad luck.

A month after the birds arrived, Klaus returned to the site one day only to find that a grass mowing operation had cut the release wires as they lay on the ground between the two trees. The problem was potentially more than a simple cut wire. When the mower cut the wire, the wires may have shorted together long enough to run the entire 250 shot roll of film through the camera.

With no way to check the camera to determine what, if any damage had been done, there was only one possible course of action. Shooting would continue as if everything were still functioning. The release wire was restrung to a different tree about two hundred yards.

Soon, it became apparent the eagles were caring for at least one egg. In mid-winter, an eaglet could be seen from the ground as it peered over the nest edge, and Wilckens eagerly watched the scene, pressing the release button when the baby was being fed, or when it was otherwise being tended by its doting parents.

The eaglet grew and began learning to fly. The months passed, and the number of exposures reached the full 250 shot capacity of the film roll. Wilckens' now had only to wait until the eagles departed on their summer migration to the north so that he could retrieve the camera and its film. The days grew hotter, and he fretted that the heat could cause the film to change its color balance if it were not processed soon.

Finally, after a week when no sightings of the eagles had been reported, it seemed safe to again assemble with game agents to remove the camera box.

Once in the tree, they discovered immediately that a mowing tractor is not the only thing which can cut super-tough military field wire. The eagles, as they perched on the limb where the release wire had been run, had apparently pecked at the wire and their sharp, hooked beaks had neatly snipped the two-stranded cable.

Back at the laboratory, Wilckens and camera technicians found that the camera's batteries were completely discharged, but the entire roll of film had been run through the camera.

On the emerging roll of film were 67 images, all taken during the early stages before the egg was laid. The pictures stopped at about the time of the mowing incident, but the pictures that emerged were excellent, with hardly any color shift due to temperature. Why the remainder of the roll went through the camera but failed to record any images is a mystery.

Still, Klaus Wilckens is excited by the success, however limited. This fall he intends to repeat the experiment, with the release cable routed under the tree limbs.

He is also searching for someone to supply a miniature television camera and microwave link so that he can obtain live pictures of the nest activities.

One of Kennedy Space Center's four pairs of nesting eagles during the 1980 winter season keeps a sharp vigil on their territory along State Road 3. This unusual, closeup photograph was taken with a remote camera mounted in the nest three months before the eagles arrived. The presence of the camera did not deter the pair from renovating the five-year-old nest and raising a family which left the nest in June. The cable connecting the camera to the remote station was severed accidentally before the appearance of young in the nest, but photographers vow they will try again this winter.

Freshman's Goal: To Become THE Geneva-Based Vet

Becky Burkett was home for the Labor Day weekend visiting her parents, Harold and Janet Burkett, after her first taste of college life at the University of Florida.

Miss Burkett, an '81 graduate of Astronaut High School, Titusville, has lived in Geneva 11 years, working Saturdays and summers for the past two years for Titusville veterinarian Dr. John Dunn.

Becky insists that while Dr. Dunn encouraged her to seek the vet-medical profession, he also showed her the "downs as well as the ups."

When asked what her most exciting on-campus experience was, she replied, "The BCM," going on to explain that the Baptist Campus Ministries sponsors many wholesome activities at the student center — her favorite is a happening on Thursday nights called "GATOR" where several hundred students gather for an evening meal.

After breaking bread, they enjoy an evening of fellowship, including ping pong games and rap sessions. She confessed that this had really helped her over the "homesick slump," and added that all activities there were open to students of all faiths.

Becky plans on majoring in Microbiology, which will include four years of pre-vet training, and then she hopes to be accepted into the College of Veterinary Medicine. It is exciting to learn of this young lady's goal — to become THE Geneva-based Vet.

As Geneva grows, it is important that organizations such as the Geneva Citizens Association grow, too. In a recent letter sent out to all Geneva post office boxholders from the citizens group, it was announced that the Sept. 14 meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at the community hall.

Dues of $2 per person, or $4 per family may be paid at any regular meeting or mailed to the treasurer, W. A. Myers, P.O. Box 354, Geneva, 32732.

This organization has served the community well in the past by opening membership to all residents of voting Precinct 6, and allowing them an opportunity to express their ideas, and by giving them an organization that exposes and airs the issues that in any way affect the community of Geneva.

The Rev. Gary Isner and his wife, Nellie, are settling back into their routines at the Geneva United Methodist Church after a month in Dallas, Texas, where Gary continued his theological studies at the Southern Methodist University.

Gone during July and part of August, the Isners returned to Geneva in time for their sons, Randy and Howie, to resume studies at the University of Central Florida, and Robby and Scott — at Oviedo High School.

Also, while Mom and Dad were in Texas, Howie was a camp counselor at Camp Pinewood in North Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon W. Steinmeyer Jr., will host a weekly interdenominational fellowship in their home beginning Sept. 15 at 7 p.m.

For the first meeting, E. Don Cox, pastor of Rock Church, Maitland, will be sharing, the Rev. Cox, former pastor of the First Assembly of God Church in Sanford, has recently returned from a mission trip to the island of Jamaica.

For information and directions to the home off Ridge Road, contact the Steinmeyers, 349-5579.

It's time again for the Leisure Time men's softball team to take the field — something they did well last year with a 13-2 season. Their first game will be Sept. 18 at Red Bug Park, 6 p.m.

The four-foot first place trophy they received as first place winners of the Red Bug Park League, Class B men's softball last year is on display at Leisure Time. This will be the team's fifth year of play with two championship wins under their belts.

According to team captain, Truby Kinnaid, good heads-up softball can be seen five nights a week under the lights on the three softball fields at the Seminole County's Red Bug Park on Red Bug Park Road.

Garden Gate

Kiwi Adapts Well In Area

By JACARANDA CIRCLE
Garden Club Of Sanford

About 10 years ago a novelty fruit called "Kiwi" appeared in the supermarkets. Being a nation of impulsive buyers, nearly everyone has tried Kiwi at one time or another.

The fruit is the size of a golf ball or a little larger, covered with a fuzzy brown skin. Peel and a green fruit is revealed, delicious but incomparable, since it does not taste like anything else. Research reveals the following:

Botanical name is Actinidia chinensis of the family Dilleniaceae. Common names include "Chinese gooseberry", and "Monkey peach". Actinidia is a deciduous vine, hardy in the South. It is a native of China, but was introduced into the U.S. commercially from New Zealand.

Being deciduous (losing its leaves in winter), its most vulnerable time is in spring when new leaves and flowers appear. Then it must not be exposed to cold. This should be no problem in this area, normally.

Fall and winter are best seasons for planting, using any good loamy garden soil. It is best to have a trellis or wires for plants to climb, and be prepared to thin and prune in late Winter.

In order to get fruit, it is necessary to have male and female plants, at least one male for each six female vines. Flowers of Actinidia are ray-like, turning from cream-white to buff-yellow and are somewhat fragrant.

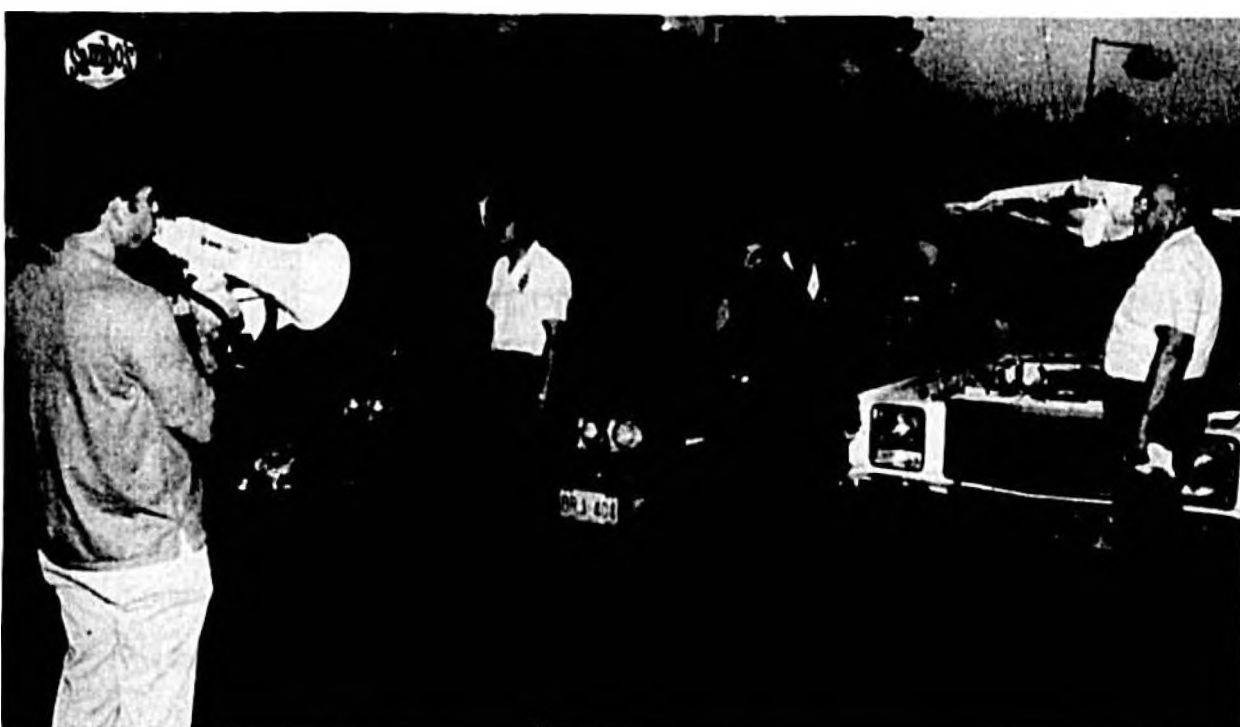

The vine bears fruit in its third or fourth year, and in this area, should be ready for harvest in October. Fruit is somewhat imperishable and can be held in cold storage for a long time. When ripe, it feels somewhat like a ripe avocado and is rich in vitamin C.

Propagation is from seed, tip cuttings or ground layering of semi-woody stems. Cuttings should be from current year's growth. A source for purchasing stock is Armstrong Nurseries, Inc.; Dept. C-2, P.O. Box 4060; Ontario, California 97761.

Commercially grown fruit rarely produces seed, so it is best to rely on purchased starting stock and be sure to specify at least one male plant for up to six females.

There is also a strictly ornamental kind, Actinidia Kolomikta, which grows to about 15 feet, has small white fragrant flowers and pink and white variegated leaves on the male variety.

Warning: The Kiwi vine reportedly affects some cats in the same fashion as catnip, so be prepared for your Sylvester to spend a lot of time around the vine.

State President To Visit Jaycees

Florida Jaycee State president Scott Gabrielson will be the guest speaker at the Sanford Jaycees membership night Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Jaycee building, 427 S. French Ave.

Gabrielson is an Orlando Jaycee who has just returned from presenting a check to Jerry Lewis at the Labor Day Telethon for Muscular Dystrophy. The Sanford Jaycees and Jayceettes raised over $5,000. toward the statewide goal.

The public is invited to the M-Night, especially young men and women ages 18-35, according to George Currie, president.

Hold It! Don't Judge All Society

DEAR ABBY: Your recent article in which you stated that "anyone requesting money instead of a gift is tacky" is from the 19th century.

When my daughter was growing up, every time I found a "good buy" in china or silver, or whatever, I bought it for her hope chest. Consequently when she marries, she will have the best of everything for less money. So what's wrong with the couple requesting money instead of a gift? Actually, it would save the guests the trouble of shopping and wrapping a gift that will probably be returned anyway.

Those who come to a wedding are there to celebrate the joy of a union of two people in love, so why saddle them with three toasters and six coffee pots? If our society has accepted "living together" and brides with a six-month bulge walking down the aisle in white, who is to say that asking for money instead of a wedding gift is "tacky?"

IN THE SAME BOAT DEAR IN: Hold it! Society has not unanimously accepted living together, or brides with a six-month bulge walking down the aisle in white. And there are many who would rather send a wedding gift than throw money in the pot to help pay for the wedding.

DEAR ABBY: I am a responsible 22-year-old woman living with my parents. I am going away for a month's vacation, and my problem is my parents and my guinea pigs. My parents have told me that the minute I am out the door they are getting rid of my guinea pigs. I've told them that they won't have to do one thing because I've already made arrangements with a girlfriend to come by every day to feed them and clean their cages.

Abby, they still insist that the guinea pigs are going as soon as I leave. I have explained that the guinea pigs are my pets and not their property to do with as they please. Also, I said that I think I am old enough to take care of my affairs, but is it obvious that they have no respect for me or my wishes.

If they get rid of my guinea pigs while I'm gone, I will never forgive them. Tell me what you think should be done, and who is right.

NO RESPECT

DEAR NO RESPECT: "Miss Piggy's Guide to Life" might be helpful here. I think you're right, but it's your parents' home and their wishes will prevail. If you want to be absolutely certain that you don't lose your pets, ask your girlfriend if she would look after them at her place. If that's not possible, find some other temporary home for your guinea pigs.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widower in my early 70s who has been seeing a widow in her early 60s. We've known each other over 40 years. We both own homes, have savings, and both have children.

I want to pop the question, but I also want a pre-nuptial agreement. Would it be out of line for me to state that when I die, my home and half my savings will go to my son, and anything my new wife and I acquire together, plus the other half of my savings, will go to her?

A friend of mine had such an agreement and thought it showed a lack of love and trust. My deceased wife and I worked for over 50 years together and we planned on

Bad Breath Can Be In Your Blood

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — When I eat something that has been spiced with garlic I tend to have garlic breath for two to four days afterward. I can't taste it or smell it by my husband has convinced me that it's very much there. I am very conscientious about brushing my teeth and tongue so I don't think that's the problem. I do avoid garlic when I can now, but sometimes I don't know it has been used in a food. Is it possible that the garlic remains in my stomach for that long? Is there anything I can do?

I know this happened frequently until we figured out what was going on. I'm generally quite healthy. Having never heard of a problem similar to this I would appreciate any information you could send me.

DEAR READER — It is far more common than you think. Most people think that bad breath means there is some problem in their mouth — and that certainly can be one cause. That is why a person with a bad breath problem should have a dental examination. But a surprising large number of people don't realize that a lot of bad breath comes from the bloodstream and the lungs. Breath mints and mouthwash won't reach those odors.

Garlic is a good example and it is similar to alcohol in this regard. The chemical that causes the scent is in your bloodstream, not in your stomach. As the blood flows to the lungs, the chemical vapor passes out with the air you exhale. That is the basis of the alcohol breath test.

You can brush your teeth all day and it still will be there from your bloodstream until the chemical causing the odor is eliminated from your body. Some chemicals that cause bad breath can be manufactured by your own body. A good example here is the ketone breath that occurs when a person is fasting.

I have discussed the main causes of bad breath in The Health Letter number 9-4, Hallmarks: The Breath.

Problem and What to Do about It, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Your best course is to avoid garlic. That applies to anyone who has bad breath from any spice. There is no way you can hasten its elimination from your bloodstream once it has been absorbed. Masking it temporarily by other scents from various mouthwashes and mints is about your only hope, and that is temporary and often provides minimal help.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in the paper about a man living to age 112. The man had said the secret to his longevity was he ate raw eggs and poured a cup of salt in his bath each day. I was interested in the statement about salt. Is soaking in salt water considered healthy?

DEAR READER — It is not likely to do you any good and not likely to do you any harm. Its effects are strictly local on the surface of the skin. It won't help what is inside the skin, and that is where the action is which determines one's longevity.

You read strange statements about one individual and why that one person lived a long time. It usually doesn't mean anything. The good studies of groups of people show that longevity is based on heredity, a good diet that keeps them lean and other good habits. However, some people live a long time in spite of their bad habits — which doesn't prove a thing. Eating raw eggs yolks is not a particularly good habit.

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
For Friday, September 11, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY September 11, 1981
You should be luckier than usual this coming year in commercial ventures catering to the public's basic needs. Keep your eyes peeled for things you feel everyone could use.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
The ship for which you've been looking could come in today. You'll want to share some of its bountiful cargo with people who have been helpful to you. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph that begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 488, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Your peers would be wise to designate you chairman of the entertainment committee today. You'll have an instinct for scheduling an agenda all will enjoy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Your unselfish urges are admirable today. Those in need of your help will get it without any fanfare or strings attached.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Trying to impress others with what you have or who you are will be the farthest thing from your mind today. By just being you, you'll be held in the highest regard.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Material gains could come your way today, much to your surprise. You may feel you did nothing to earn them. However, a forgotten kindness triggered their flow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Keep in touch at this time with influential contacts, even though they may reside at a distance. Something mutually beneficial could develop.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
You're a bit of a dreamer today, but a realistic one. There's a strong possibility you can bring your fantasies into being.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Good things could happen today from involvements with people whose ideals and standards are on par with yours. Noble thoughts produce worthy results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
It's important to take pride in your work today, whether your tasks be large or small. An unusual bonus could accrue from a job well done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
An individual who may be a trifle difficult for others to get along with is not likely to cause your problems today. You'll understand his point of view.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Follow your instincts today to inaugurate changes that you feel could be beneficial to your family. Your hunches are likely to be right on the mark.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
You communicate well verbally today, enabling you to organize anything from a major enterprise to a successful social activity. Express your ideas.

WIN AT BRIDGE

East's three-diamond opening bid is not recommended. But A. M. Barnes, the only man at that table still alive today, elected to bid it.

Eddy Hynes, sitting West, passed and Jimmy Maier, sitting North, bid three notrump. Howard Schenke, sitting South, went to four hearts and Hynes opened the 10 of diamonds.

Howard was one of the greatest players of all time (possibly the greatest) and certainly one of the top 10. This hand shows him at his best.

He rose with dummy's ace of diamonds. He could not afford to duck. Barnes might well have a seven-card diamond suit.

At this point, the average expert would lead a low trump from dummy to his queen and West's king. A second diamond would be led. East would win and lead a third diamond whereupon West would score three trump tricks and beat the contract.

Howard did not fall into that trap. He played a king of spades and ruffed a spade. Then he led a low trump and was sure of his contract.

TV Has Yet To Capture Romance Of Newspaper Era

Electronic Lou Grant? By VERNON SCOTT UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The romance of newspapers can be traced back to the penny papers of the colonies up through the competitive tabloids and the era of yellow journalism to "All The President's Men."

Journalists earned a reputation, deservedly or not, as two flared drinkers, womanizers, swaggering guys with press cards in their hats and cigarettes hanging out of the sides of their mouths.

They were immortalized in countless scores of movies wherein the city editor summoned his ace reporter, assigned him to a story and beseeched him to come back with a scoop. Subsequently Scoop Scardale, or whoever, would become embroiled personally in the story which inevitably involved an imperiled beautiful young woman.

After much drinking and derring-do, old Scoop foiled the villain, won fair lady's heart and returned to the Daily Blat with an exclusive.

Following the tried and true script, the jubilant managing editor would rip the copy from Scoop's faithful Woodstock typewriter, pick up the telephone to the press room and bellow, "Tear out page one! We've scooped them again."

Almost all of the newspaper movies of old were, of course, about as accurate a portrayal of journalism as "Dukes of Hazzard" is of farm life in the South.

There were a few exceptions, among them Charles MacArthur's and Ben Hecht's "The Front Page," first made in 1930 with Pat O'Brien as the fast talking reporter and Adolphe Menjou as his scheming editor.

It was remade and retitled "His Girl Friday" as a 1940 comedy with Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell. "The Front Page" was made again in 1974 with Jack Lemmon as the reporter and Walter Matthau as the editor.

The last great newspaper movie was "All The President's Men" with Dustin Hoffman and Robert Redford playing the Washington Post investigative reporters Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward.

Television's "Lou Grant" provides a reasonably sophisticated version of a modern newspaper operation with understandable shortcomings, including a limited reportorial help and occasional lapses in professionalism. Until now, video journalism and the men and women behind television's nightly news programs have failed to inspire the same romantic drama that the print medium has. Perhaps it's because TV journalism is relatively new.

Certainly Walter Cronkite, the late Chet Huntley and David Brinkley could not be made out to be dashing, daring Dana who became involved in the news itself.

Mike Wallace comes a little closer as does Dan Rather, who was criticized for dressing in Arab garb to cover the Afghanistan war.

Until now the networks have steered away from a dramatic series based on the machinations of television news coverage.

But CBS is already producing "Jessica Novak," starring Helen Shaver in the title role as an intrepid video newswoman for a local Los Angeles channel. Her boss is hard boiled Maxwell Kenyon, played by David Spielberg.

Kenyon sees Novak as his "ace human-interest reporter" but she dreams of becoming a top investigative reporter. All the old elements present in the old movies are there. A scoop by any other name is still a scoop.

Will sophisticated, world weary spawners tune in to watch the modern version of "The Front Page" or an electronic version of "Lou Grant"?

Spielberg, who looks as if he can play a convincingly tough editor, says if the scripts continue to be as good as the pilot show, the series will be a hit.

"There's a lot of drama involved in the evening newscasts for local stations all over the country as well as for the networks," he said.

"I hung around the newsroom at WCBS in New York and KNXT here in Hollywood. There are slow spots during the day but as the deadline nears for the news show to go on the air, it's like curtain time for a play. It's exciting.

"There are last-minute changes, breaking stories, stories that fall through, technical problems and all the rest. The tempo increases and the tension grows until the red light goes on to signal the newscasters are on the air.

"There is a lot of drama inherent in the news editor's job, making the assignments for his field reporters and crew, determining what will go on the air and what won't.

BEFORE THE FLORIDA PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION DOCKET NO. 81049-BU NOTICE OF HEARING TO FLORIDA POWER & LIGHT CO. PARSONS AND WHITTEMORE, INC. and RESOURCES RECOVERY (DADB COUNTY), INC.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Florida Public Service Commission will hold public hearing on the above docket at the following time and place:

9 a.m., Friday, September 11, 1981 101 E. Gaines St. Room 104 Tallahassee, Florida PURPOSE

The purpose of this hearing will be to allow the parties to give testimony and argument regarding interconnection with their interconnection. According to the petition, Parsons and Whittemore, Inc. (P&W) and Resources Recovery (DADB County), Inc. (RRD), are entitled to have Florida Power & Light Company interconnect with their interconnection facility located in Dade County, as provided in Rule 25 17.87, Florida Administrative Code. P & W and RRD further assert that the facility is a "qualifying facility" under the Commission's rules. Florida Power & Light (FPL) asserts that interconnection is not required because the facility is not a "qualifying facility" as defined by Rule 25 17.87, F.A.C.; that P & W and RRD lack standing to require interconnection; that this Commission's regulations do not apply to the case; and that interconnection would constitute an unfair burden on FPL ratepayers.

JURISDICTION Jurisdiction over F&L is vested in the Commission by Chapter 366, F.S. Jurisdiction to regulate the rates of electric generating facilities is vested in the Commission by the provisions of 366.62 (b), F.S. Commission rules applicable to interconnection with cogenerators and small power producers are 35 25 17.80, F.A.C. THROUGH 25 17.89, F.A.C. This proceeding will be governed by the provisions of Chapter 126, F.S., and Chapter 252, F.A.C. By Direction of the Florida Public Service Commission, this 28th day of August, 1981. (SEAL)

Rugby Game May Cause Violence

CHICAGO (UPI)—One hundred members of a new-Nazi group will "use violence if necessary" to protect a South African rugby team and its fans from anti-apartheid demonstrators at a scheduled Sept. 18 match, a spokesman for the group said.

Michael Allen, leader of the National Socialist Party of America, said Tuesday party members wearing street clothes and armed "with what's legal" will mingle with the crowd to prevent violence.

Allen said they will not interfere with marching, chanting or picketing, but will prevent demonstrators from "physically trying to stop the game."

"We'll physically stop them. We going to be right there in the middle of it. We'll use force or violence if necessary and we'll detain them until the police get there. It's high time that somebody stood up to these people."

The visit by the Springboks team has been criticized because opponents say it violates the United Nations' resolution calling for the isolation of South Africa's sports teams. Civil rights groups have announced they play to demonstrate during the match.
