BANQUETED BALL PLAYERS

Seminole Hotel Gives Dinner to Sanford Pennant Winners

The Seminole Hotel gave a dinner to the Sanford ball team last Sunday afternoon at five o'clock. Ray Krauth, the manager of the hotel wanted to issue the menu cards to the "Pennant Winners" but since the pennant has not been decided as yet it could not be done but the dinner was enjoyed just as much and the Sanford team will be the pennant winners some time this week so the dinner was really to the pennant winners.

Every member of the ball team was present, together with President Spencer of the association and R. J. Holly of the Herald. Chas. Campbell, proprietor of the Seminole Hotel also sat down with the invited guests. The beautiful dining room of the Seminole had been especially decorated with roses and cut flowers for the occasion and one long table had been arranged for the boys with President Spencer at the head of the table. Ball players have proverbial good appetites and the boys enjoyed the good things at the Seminole as only healthy boys can enjoy something good to eat. At the close of the dinner Mr. Campbell introduced Mr. Krauth to the boys and said he would have them again after the close of the ball season as he knew they would also take the second series. President Spencer replied with a vote of thanks from the boys and said he knew the boys would be winners after such a sumptuous feed.

BISHOP ALONE SAW GHOST

Hoax Cleverly Carried Out by Noted Ecclesiastic Is Recalled by a British Paper.

The great Bishop Wilberforce was staying at a great country house. As he took his hostess down to dinner he glanced behind him and saw five couples following, and last of all an ecclesiastic in a monk's costume who was strange to him.

He remarked to his hostess, "I see you are not superstitious about sitting down thirteen to a table."

His hostess went dead white, and said, "For heaven's sake say nothing!"

Sitting down, he noticed that only twelve seats had been placed, and a moment after saw the supposed monk standing behind the host's chair. It was not long before he realized that no one but he saw the figure. After dinner the host explained that the monk was an apparition which none but the head of the family, in each generation, had ever seen, and that its appearance always foretold disaster.

The next day the same figure appeared to the bishop in the garden and explained that in life he had been confessor to a pre-Reformation head of the family and had been reading a written confession from a penitent. Being suddenly called away he had slipped the confession into the volume of the Fathers he was reading. He had died suddenly and could not read for fear it should be found and the secrets of the confessional revealed. He exhorted the bishop to find the confession and burn it unread.

The bishop went to his host and said, "I do not know if you have a library. I do not know if there is a volume of such and such a Father on the shelf I name. Come and look."

They looked, found the book, found in it an old manuscript, yellow with age, and burnt it. The monk never appeared again. Bishop Wilberforce told the story. But he was a wag, and among friends he never concealed the fact that he himself had invented the entire tale for the purpose of seeing what people would believe if told with a sufficiently grave face.—Manchester Guardian.

Grieving Cows.

An Essex correspondent of the London Daily Mail writes: This morning I witnessed a strange sight in which a herd of cows, an old bull and a few calves took part in a meadow near my house.

A cow that had recently calved died in the night and yesterday morning lay out stiff on the frosted grass beneath a tree. During the day cows rounded near the place and stopped to smell and lick the side and face of the dead animal. Not till this morning did the knacker's cart arrive to carry the body away.

When the vehicle was drawn to the spot the whole herd came slowly up and stood round watching intently, with heads down, and an indescribable expression, which seemed half questioning and half sympathetic, in their eyes. Seven of them and the old bull came up and licked the dead cow's face. In one instance as it was being hoisted into the cart. When it was taken away they stood watching it to the far side of the meadow and through the gate till they could see it no longer. Then they smelled all over the spot where it had lain.

Do Animals Love Music?

I was awakened the other morning by the clatter of a horse's hoofs and a man's voice singing "Killarney," says a writer in the London Daily Express. Peeping through the venetian blind I saw that a young Midland railway carter was the vocalist, and that his horse, which was harnessed to a heavily-laden van, was following him in a zig-zag fashion across and up the steep road which runs past my windows. He was not using a whip or touching the reins, and the horse kept his nose near his shoulder, but when the man stopped singing, the horse stopped pulling. I have heard the land girls say they sing to the horses and cows they look after, and that the animals love it, and I know in India some of the hardest labor is done by oxen, driven—not with whip or goad—but by the singing of the native boys in charge of them.

COWBOY NOT YET EXTINCT

May Be Fewer Than Come Years Ago, but This Traveler Tells of Meeting One.

"You mean to say," I began, "that there are still real cow—" But as smiles were beginning to pass about the platform I desisted, realization beginning to dawn why the barber said that the men we had seen driving cattle back to Kansas would be pleased to have been called cow-punchers.

The trip at once began to assume a new interest, and when the mine barber puffed back on the platform I eyed him with something of that reserve with which one contemplates a deceitful man. But nothing could penetrate his drawing saug-froid.

At a tank station farther along there was opportunity to stretch our legs; opportunity, also, to observe at close range a bronzed, dark-haired cow-puncher who had paused on his Mustang to observe the train. The barber approached him confidently.

"Neighbor," he said, "I bought a gun in K. C. Mizoo. What do you think of it?"

The puncher took the wicked .44, balanced it in the palm of his hand, twirled it around on his forefinger, and then brought it to bear upon a tin can lying in the road about 20 feet away. Bang! The can leaped into the air. Bang! It rolled five feet further along. Bang! Again it flew into the air and rolled. Bang! It rolled again. Bang! The can disappeared in the dust.

"It's a good gun," said the puncher, handing it back, "only it shoots a little high."

A little high! Rather a nice criticism, I thought. The barber snapped out the cylinder, reloaded the weapon and passed silently into the back-ground. My impression was that he was avoiding some questions on my part relative to Kansas City bad men; but I may have been wrong.

We began to fly through the level ground, perspectives on all sides dotted with peaks upon which clouds rested. Suddenly along the trail appeared an altogether amazing, unlooked-for, almost unbelievable spectacle—two Indians jogging along on horseback wearing mocassins, white buck trousers, red or pink shirts, their black hair secured by scarlet bands about their foreheads.—Scribner's Magazine.

Americanism in the Making.

Almost anything you can think of, it is said, can be seen somewhere in that long, erratic historic street that strays upward from the point of Manhattan Island, cutting across the streets and avenues of the world's largest city at its own sweet will. Something once seen there by Mr. J. R. Kerfoot, the author of Broadway, indicates that the enterprise, the daring and adaptability to new conditions that were characteristic of the early settlers in America are still characteristic of the people who are crossing the Atlantic to our shores in the twentieth century.

One day, says Mr. Kerfoot, I saw an Italian peasant woman, fresh landed from the steerage and dressed in all the fete-day regalia of her native province, chase a Broadway car for half a block in front of the post office. She caught up with it from behind when it stopped at Park place, and failing to notice the entranceway, grasped the brake handle of the rear platform, threw a sturdy, red-stockinged leg over the rail, and swung herself aboard with the satisfied air of having successfully surmounted one of the early difficulties of the new country.

Broadway smiled, collected her furs, and went on about its business.—Youth's Companion.

Quite Enough.

"When you charged over the top, did the Germans remark your style of fighting?"

"Oh, yes; they kept up a running comment."

The Crucial Test.

Of course, Algonnon, there is a legitimate way to learn whether your sweetheart's complexion is natural or applied. Rub it with a wet rag. then look at the rag.—Galveston News.

Utilizing Time.

"Ladies," announced the president of an afternoon bridge club. "It has been moved and seconded that there shall be no conversation at the card tables. What shall we do with the motion?" "I suggest," said a sprightly member, "that we discuss it while we play."

BALL GAMES FOR THE WEEK
 BOX SCORES OF ALL GAMES PLAYED BY SANFORD TEAM

Well, Sanford won the first series, clinching it in the second game with Orlando here last Friday afternoon and making it secure by winning another from Lakeland Tuesday afternoon which precludes any controversy, over the first series. We had several disputed games and one tie to play off and now we are the winners without any comeback. Our team seems to have had a bad break in the getaway for the second series and at the present moment we are not at the head of the lists but this is our way, you know.

Our little old league is already causing some excitement in this and other states and Florida is getting advertising in the northern papers over our fine little league and the good games that are being staged. Keep up the interest, you fans, and help the Sanford team win.

We like to let the other fellows get started good and then we chop them down later and climb to the top. Sanford has a team that is second to none in the league and we are getting it in finer shape every day. The boys are playing the game and even if we should fail to pull down the second series some good teams may have to play the post series with us at the end of September and there will be something doing in Florida at that time, something similar to the world's series only staged on a smaller scale but just as exciting. For instance, we will suppose that Orlando wins the second series and plays Sanford for the championship. You know that the people would flock to Sanford and Orlando from every part of the state and even Palatka to see those post series games and don't you know that our ball park here would not hold the crowds. Even if some other town in the league wins out in the second there will be considerable excitement over the question of the best team in the state league and the last games will bring out the biggest crowds that

What a lot of time lost and energy expended here upon different questions when it could all be solved quickly and intelligently by a meeting of the Board of Trade, providing of course we had every business man in Sanford in the Board of Trade. What a pleasure it is to go to other cities and even towns where they have an active Board of Trade and see how they solve these questions.

A few years ago it was my pleasure to be a member of the Sanford Board of Trade when the directors held a meeting several times a week and they would gather round the table at the hotel at six in the evening and for two hours discuss the questions of moment and how many difficult situations in our everyday life were smoothed out at those meetings. Orlando is doing this stunt now with a meeting at noon of the Board of Trade and these luncheons are doing big things for Orlando.

I also remember that some of the kickers here said the money of the Board of Trade was being spent for dinners when in fact every director was paying for his own meal and was not only spending his money but his time for the upbuilding of the city and helping to make the kicker's property more valuable and these same kickers today are enjoying the prosperity made possible by these same men who worked day and night for the things that we needed here most.

And now the Sanford Board of Trade is contemplating a campaign for memberships and every man in the county who really wants to do something for his county should pay up his membership dues if he is a member and should become a member if he is not a member. The Board of Trade will hold a rousing meeting in a few days and this body that has accomplished so much in the past will get busy again for the winter season.

Every city, village and hamlet in the United States is doing something for the returned soldiers. They are getting up big meetings, barbecues, picnics, etc., and building memorial buildings and showing the boys that they are appreciated and that the people are glad to welcome them back home. Sanford is not doing anything for the boys but the Daughters of the American Revolution will take up the plan of building them a suitable memorial in the near future and I hope it will not be an arch. Memorial arches are nice to look at but they do not mean anything in the young life of the boys. What we want here is a memorial building on the lakefront, a building that will be a place where the boys can go for recreation, for athletics and for dancing or any other form of amusement that they may need and when the D. A. R. takes up this matter I hope they will go in for the real thing. Our soldier boys have not been welcomed home as they should have been and we should make it up to them with something substantial, something that will be of service to them in the years to come. They want service for they gave service.

A man told me today that Sanford would soon have thirteen garages in the city and his eyes stuck out on his cheeks when he told it. Well, what of it? Did you ever think that Sanford and Seminole county has more cars for the population than any other community in the United States? Did you ever stop to think that there is as much money here as any other community in the United States? Why shouldn't we have more garages than any other place? And if any people are entitled to ride in cars certainly our hard working community is entitled to them. We have put it over and we are entitled to all the pleasure that we can get out of this life and if the people want cars and garages and can afford the pleasure let them have it. Eh, what?

McCluney—Green

Beautiful in its simplicity was the marriage of Miss Gertrude Green to Rev. J. E. McCluney of Franklin, Tenn., which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Brower at noon Sunday, Aug. 24th.

The living room was prettily decorated in pink roses, peach blow hibiscus and asparagus fern. To the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March played by Mrs. Tom Getzen, little Jack Getzen bearing the ring in a pink hibiscus preceded the bride who entered the living room on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Brower, who gave her away in marriage. She was met by the groom at the beautifully improvised altar of roses and ferns where the marriage ceremony was impressively performed by Dr. Geo. Hyman in the presence of the family and a few favored friends. The bride was indeed lovely in her simple though exquisite dress of white silk georgette with white hat, shoes and gloves. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and asparagus fern. Immediately after the ceremony a most delicious old fashioned southern dinner was served.

The bride's going away dress was a midnight blue French serge coat suit, with lace waist and accessories to match.

Mrs. McCluney is the accomplished niece of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Brower of this city. She is a graduate of the Emerson School of oratory, Boston, Mass. She was at one time teacher of oratory in the Sanford High School, but for several years past has been connected with schools and colleges in distant cities. The groom is a man of high integrity and sterling worth. He has only recently been installed as pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian church at Franklin, Tenn., where after a short visit to the groom's parents in Gadsden, Ala., they will be at home to their friends. Mrs. McCluney's many Florida friends wish for her a long life of happiness and great usefulness in her new home.

Stirring Up Trouble

Washington, Aug. 26.—Soviet interests apparently are supplying the funds for a propaganda to stir up race antagonism in the United States, according to information now in the hands of the department of justice. Officials of the department said today that charges of an organized propaganda made in the house yesterday by Rep. Byrnes, democrat, South Carolina, seemed to be well founded. Newspapers, they said, were springing up over the country to spread the propaganda and sow discord among the negroes.

Agents of the departments of justice are investigating. Facts thus far developed lead officials to believe that I. W. W. and soviet influence were at the bottom of the recent race riots in Washington and Chicago.

There's no doubt about it. Flies not only worry the cows and the milker, but they keep you from getting all the milk you should.

And there's no doubt about this either. The one way to get rid of flies at milking time—and the sure way to get more milk is to use

THE PEOPLES FORUM

Co-operation vs. Corporation
Sanford, Fla., Aug. 25, 1919.
Friend Holly:

I have just read with interest your second editorial Co-operation. First thing you know the Orlando Board of Trade will draft a resolution asking the President to exhaust the financial and military resources at his command to suppress you and the Herald as it did when we railroad shop men went on strike August 1st for a fair and living wage.

But when the American Tobacco Co. put 2 ounces of tobacco instead of 2 1/2 ounces as heretofore (note how they are deceived) in their packages and I, Mr. Workingman Striker Bolshevik had to pay one hundred per cent more for that package or 10c instead of 5c. This is only one of ten thousand instances I could relate I did not note any denunciatory resolutions from the Orlando Board of Trade denouncing the American Tobacco Co. for levying without a strike a 100 per cent increase, but just let the organized working man go on strike for a 25 per cent increase in wages and note the cheap, shallow, un-economic editorials hurled at him by boards of trade and newspapers that let their inspiration when they get their existence. Oh for a free press and free speech.

Now In Conclusion

If the President of the United States will draft that Orlando Board of Trade and put them to work (productive work) with some of the railroad shop men on a hot engine on one of these sizzling August days I'll show you the dardest strike before night you ever saw and a bunch of anarchists, note—not Bolsheviks. More anon.

Chairman Journalistic Committee Federated Shop Craft.

Co-operation

Let's put the postoffice in private ownership. The only place there is no profiteering is the postoffice. The only place a nickel is negotiable without one or two pennies to keep also is the postoffice. The only places seemingly unaffected by profiteering are the postoffice and municipally owned public utilities. Let's put these things under private ownership. They are a terrible menace and an object lesson.

Let's get the railroads back to private ownership quick. Else the railroad men might get more wages and the people lower freight rates.

Years for reaction,
Capitalist.

The Other Side

Editor Herald:

I have just been wondering about this latest railroad strike and what it means. I am in moderate circumstances making about the same wages I made three or four years ago and trying to pay rent, keep a family and live besides. My neighbor is a shopman and is now making twice as much as I make. He has a nice car and enjoys all the blessings of prosperity. If he wants to take a trip or his family wants to go anywhere they all get passes and go for a very little bit of money, whereas I cannot afford to go because the railroad would eat me up. Now my neighbor wants more money and if he strikes I will be forced to lose my job as a long strike would tie up all the business here. In other words, he would ask for more money and if he does not get it cause me to lose my job and be out of work. He is living twice as well as I am and I do not begrudge him his prosperity but I do not think he is entitled to any more than he is now making, especially if my family and a lot of other families are to suffer by a strike. There are other people to consider in this world and it occurs to me that the large part of the help a few who are now living well and having everything they want. And I would like to ask, where do we the great mass of middle class clerks, business men and farmers come in?

Food Value Determines the Value of Food

It should be the food value that determines the value of foods. Take self rising flour, for instance. This product is of varying grades, much of it selling for the same or even less than the plain flour, which in itself is evidence of the fact that it is of inferior quality. Naturally, then, its food value is less than that of a pure plain flour.

In the long run it really costs more and represents a waste. There is no real economy in it. Some housewives are under the impression that it saves them a little effort, but in this they are mistaken. Self rising flour must often be sifted as it is inclined to get lumpy. The food value of a prepared flour is considerably less than a good grade of pure plain flour which is made from better wheat and contains no cheap leavening agent or calcium sulphate, commonly called plaster of paris, often contained in the ingredients used in self rising flours in order to cheapen the product.

Thus the flour question serves as a very good illustration of what I mean by saying the value of foods should be determined by their food value. And likewise the economy of using various foods should be determined in a similar manner. It isn't always the cheapest that is best. In fact, the opposite is often the case.

poration, but in effect considering the amount of taxation which must fall upon the country in general. We are acting, not for private corporations, but in the name of the republic and must assess our responsibility accordingly. For it is neither wise nor feasible to take care of increases in the wages of railroad employees at this time by increasing freight rates. It is impossible at this time until peace has come and normal conditions re-established to estimate what the earning capacity of the railroads will be when ordinary conditions return. There is no certain basis therefore for calculating what the rate increases should be and it is necessary for the time at any rate to take care of all increases in the wages of railway employees through the public treasury.

Relations Between Wages and Cost of Living

"Such circumstances it seems clear to me, and, I believe, will seem clear to every thoughtful American, including the shopmen themselves, when they have taken thought, and to all wage earners of every kind, that we ought to postpone questions of this sort until normal conditions come again and we have the opportunity for certain calculations as to the relation between wages and the cost of living. It is the duty of every citizen of the country to insist upon a truce in such contents until intelligent settlement can be made, and made by peaceful and effective common council. I appeal to my fellow citizens of every employment to co-operate in insisting upon and maintaining such a truce and to co-operate also in sustaining the government in which I conceive to be the only course which conscientious public servants can pursue.

"Demands unwisely made and passionately insisted upon at this time menace the peace and prosperity of the country as nothing before, and thus contribute to bring about the very results which such demands are intended to remedy.

"There is, however, one claim made by the railway shopmen which ought to be met. They claim that they are not enjoying the same advantages that other railway employees are enjoying because their wages are calculated upon a different basis. The wage of other railway employees are based upon the rule that they are receiving for eight hours work the same pay they received for the longer workday that was the usual standard of the pre-war period.

This claim, I am told, is well founded and I concur in the conclusion of the director general that the shopmen ought to be given the additional four cents an hour which the readjustment asked for will justify. There are certain other adjustments also to be made, and which will be made.

Let me add, also, that the position which the government must in conscience take against general increases in wage levels while the present exceptional and temporary circumstances exist will of course not preclude the railroad administration from giving prompt and careful consideration to any claims that may be made by other classes of employees for readjustments believed to be proper to secure impartial treatment for all who work in the railway service.

Woodrow Wilson.
