

2-HOUR PRACTICE HELD BY TULANE TEAM ON COAST

PARATHENA, Calif., Dec. 25. (AP)—Tulane's football team enjoyed Christmas yesterday if the tall team of Mount Lowe after a hard two-hour workout in the morning at Tournament Park in preparation for the University of Southern California football eleven and the Rose Tournament game New Year's Day.

For many of the squad it was the first opportunity to enjoy a Christmas in snow and they made the best of it with snowball fights and much hilarity.

The Green Wave wasn't given an opportunity to forget the objectives of the trip, the grid classic of the year which many consider to be the game deciding the national championship.

Coch Bertie Herman put the team through a snappy workout, stroking his own attack principally, although spending considerable time on plans designated to halt the Trojan power since September 23, when little St. Mary's turned the trick.

The team continued to show much enthusiasm as it went through the drill. Capt. Jerry Dalrymple is showing steady improvement and is confident he will be able to handle his end assignment in the fashion which gained for him All-American honors.

Dalrymple scoffs at the business of All-Americans, and has no other explanation of his ability to play a great game except that he does what he considers most logical and hopes for the best.

The fact that the Trojan power plays run and opposite side of the line to Dalrymple means nothing to him.

"Sometimes I go over to that side of the line myself," he laughed, "and I'll probably have there a lot of times when Southern California punks the ball in that direction."

He may not be needed, Vernon Hayes, the other end, while lacking in the publicity given his captain, has many who swear by his ability to keep pace with Dalrymple. The general opinion from Southern followers seems to be, however, that as the captain goes, so goes the Green Wave.

Howard Field, in Los Angeles, where the downfall of some of the country's leading gridiron eleven was plotted, was empty yesterday, as the University of Southern California football team spent Christmas far from that which favors of the game they have followed almost four months.

Coch Howard Jones, a bit fearful of overwork, gave the Trojans a holiday, but hopes to settle down again today to determined till in preparation for Tulane. The Trojan stamping grounds will be very active today, however, as Southern California renews preparation to turn back the invasion from the South, and will continue to be the site of secret workouts until Wednesday of next week.

Coch Jones feels he can work better with his team at Howard Field and with more seclusion than at Pasadena, and proposed to keep the men of Troy there until a day or so before the conflict.

ACCIDENT AND VIOLENCE MAR CHRISTMAS DAY

(Continued from Page One) Injured persons from the overturned auto, and with Henry Witte, Jr., lying nearby, brought them to the Fernald-Lalonde Memorial Hospital. The girl was the most severely injured, and suffered a great loss of blood before physicians were able to reach her. Mr. McClelland and his wife and son received numerous cuts and bruises, as well as fractured ligaments.

The negro was arrested at once, and is in the County Jail awaiting the outcome of injuries.

Clarence Parrish, young white brother of Lake Moore who notified a blow over the hood with a monkey wrench in the hands of John Lewis Oglesby on Christmas Eve, is also at the hospital, recovering slowly.

Oglesby, his brother-in-law Oglesby, and a friend, Ed Vincent, were in the County Jail this morning, the latter charged with being drunk, and John Lewis Oglesby awaiting the outcome of Parrish's injury.

The Oglesby's and Vincent were in a group of persons celebrating Christmas Eve on the streets of Lake Moore. An argument ensued over someone's shooting firecracker in front of the latter shop. Parrish captured the group to which he was smiling with the Oglesby's, Parrish was

LEGAL GAMBLING BEGINS TODAY AS RACE OVAL OPENS

PARATHENA, Calif., Dec. 25. (AP)—The bugle will call thoroughbred to the post at Tropical Park here today for the first legalized gambling on horse races in Florida in many years.

Tropical Park is under the direction of Frank J. Bruen, former director of Hialeah Park and Havana race tracks and a former vice president and general manager of Madison Square Garden Inc. The Tropical Park plan was built in quick order after voters of Florida gave their approval August 20 to racing in Dade county under provisions of the new Florida racing law.

Horsemen who have stabled their racers at Tropical Park and those who expect to run their racing stock from Hialeah Park, about five miles away, were enthusiastic yesterday about the prospects for an auspicious inaugural today.

The recently completed track was declared to be a fast one with prospects of fast time in the seven races billed for today's opening day. Hundreds of visitors thronged the plant yesterday to inspect the track and its individual features before the gates are thrown open officially to racing enthusiasts today.

Bruen has approximately 200 horses stabled at Tropical Park, it was announced yesterday, but he expects to draw many of his racing entries from Hialeah stables. Some concern was evidenced by horsemen stabling at Hialeah, with the appearance yesterday of notices that those who lanned their horses from the Hialeah stables would be required to get new permits for their stable space. But many planned to run their horses at Tropical Park.

Governor Doyle Carlton, who vetoed the racing bill at the 1931 state legislature only to see it passed over his veto, was invited to attend the inaugural program at the Bruen track, as were other state officials.

The $2,000 Inaugural Handicap, for three-year-olds and up will be the feature for today's opening day. There also will be a $1,200 race named in honor of Hillsborough county for 3-year-olds and up.

Bruen was confident last night that his inaugural would be a successful one. He predicted that early Southern migration of winter visitors would give Tropical Park an influx at the gates that would rival first days of Hialeah Park in previous years. In spite of the latter's generally later opening day.

struck over the head with the wrench, fracturing his skull.

Deputy Sheriff O. R. Partridge arrested the Oglesby's and Vincent at the Oglesby home on Maple Avenue, and placed them in jail.

Yesterday afternoon Road Officer E. T. Hamill arrested and placed in jail, L. A. Summerlin, white, and George Johnson, who were riding on a county highway in a car driven by Johnson, who was charged with possessing liquor and driving while intoxicated. Summerlin is charged with possessing liquor.

Last night Deputy Sheriff J. V. Martin, arrested and placed in jail W. A. Knight, white, charged with selling liquor.

REACTIONS TO BASEL REPORT ARE REVEALED

(Continued from Page One) arations which is expected to be held in January, the report will be the text for the discussions at that conference, the paper said.

The News-Chronicle declared: "A catastrophe is inevitable if these questions are not now treated by the various governments in the light of economic law."

BERLIN, Dec. 25.—(A.P.)—Chancellor Brüning said yesterday the Basel reparations report could be called satisfactory, considering what had been expected of the committee, although it fell short of being a large-minded solution of the finances problem.

The chancellor declared the report was a less clear-cut statement of the German situation than that contained in the findings of the committee headed by Albert H. Wiggin, New York banker, which conducted an investigation into Germany's problems last summer.

Finance Minister Hermann Dietrich said the Young plan "has been out-dated by events."

"It rested on premises which have fallen to materials," the finance minister averred. "These premises had the props taken from under them by the fact that the states with which Germany has trade relations, and to whom the signatures of the plan chiefly belonged, acted in their trade policies contrary to the way they should have acted according to the meaning of the plan."

Dietrich explained that instead of enabling Germany to make payments through exporting goods, the nations had barred such goods by raising tariffs.

Basel, Switzerland, Dec. 25.—(A.P.)—Fifty-one pages of economic and political interwoven in one document—the Young plan advisory committee's report on reparations—were given to the world here on Christmas Eve.

Summarizing the financial and economic situation of Germany and the world business depression in general, the experts' report, extracts of which were given out yesterday, was accepted by a committee here as the best available collection of information about reparations questions and kindred subjects.

Concluding with an appeal to the governments to act immediately to alleviate the world depression, the document accepts Germany's plea of inability to make conditional reparations transfers after the end of the Hoover debt holiday.

It infers, also, that the unconditional annuities provided by the Young plan should be reduced or suspended.

While the document is valuable only as a guide for the forthcoming conference of governments on reparations, the opinion here was that it would act in the crystallization of the various attitudes on the debt and reparations questions.

It was freely predicted that the result of the experts' investigation would be a continuation of the principles set forth in the Hoover holiday program, under which conditional annuities were suspended and the unconditional portion was lent back to Germany by the bank for international settlements.

The complete text revealed that the experts believed the greater part of the additional 4,000,000,000 reichsmarks (approximately $1,000,000,000) granted to them as the increase in short-term debt since the Wiggins committee set in August, was offset by German assets abroad. Therefore the committee held that the Wiggins total of short-term indebtedness—7,000,000,000 reichsmarks (approximately $1,775,000,000)—was about exact.

every line of which brought forth heated debate, dealt with the causes of Germany's deficits. It satisfied the French by indicating that Germany will be able to renew payments as soon as the business trend starts upward, and it pointed out that the reich's revenues increase easily in times of prosperity.

It is difficult sometimes to understand why this country should be having hard times

There were one hundred and thirty-nine persons killed in accidents of one kind or another over the Christmas holiday

No optimist, H. G. Wells, views the future with much uncertainty. In the Pall Mall magazine he writes recently: "I cannot see whether factories will be growing busier in 1933 with scaffolding of great enterprises rising over the streets crowded with happy people"

Santa Claus with all his virtues has some faults. He has had some people, who perhaps have never quite grown up, believe that all they have to do is sit and wait and their losses of 1925 and '26 will be restored to them

Sanford should, we are advised, do as European nations are doing with regard to their debts, declare a moratorium

New Year Resolutions

As the last days of 1931 draw to a close, the time for making New Year resolutions has again arrived. Too often these resolutions, however good they may be, are cheerfully made and quite as cheerfully broken

If we could resolve in 1932 to support to the full extent of our ability every worthwhile community movement; To forget the world depression and believe that everything that happens is somehow for the best;

To pay our bills and pay them promptly without trying to gain a discount through unfair delay; To trade in Sanford, whenever possible, and, when not, to trade as close to home as we can;

To give the other fellow the benefit of the doubt and believe his motives are good at least until they are proved otherwise;

To take an active interest in politics, know the men who are running for office, and vote for the good of the whole and not because of some personal favor already granted or promised;

To be kind to animals, generous to the poor, and considerate toward all with whom we come in contact;

To say a good word, whenever possible, and, when not, to offer only constructive criticism, of all legal institutions, our churches, our schools, our chamber of commerce, our banks, our theaters, our newspapers.

To be unselfish in our dealings with our family and friends, and to think of the other fellow as often as we think of ourself;

To work a little harder than ever before, to watch the clock a little less, and to give a little more than a dollar's worth of labor for every dollar earned;

And to be honest, fair, and square in all our dealings with our fellow-men and to expect the same sort of treatment from them.

If we could make these resolutions and then live up to them throughout the whole year, and if everyone else made the same resolutions and also stuck to them, what a fine world this would be in which to live, and how simple our little problems would soon become!

The League In The Orient

The apparent failure of the League of Nations to accomplish anything of merit in the Sino-Japanese controversy, or conflict, as it might properly be called now, has led to a great deal of criticism of this organization and the rather general comment that whenever a major power is concerned the League is impotent to act effectively

"To say that the League of Nations has failed in Manchuria is easy," says the Christian Science Monitor. "It is too easy. The glib cynicism which rejoices in any setback for the forces of international cooperation has been very busy harping upon the 'impotence of Geneva' in this first test of the League involving a major power. The cry of failure was impatiently raised within two weeks of the initial outbreak of trouble at Mukden."

"The charge was, of course, obviously premature then, and it is premature now. It is altogether probable that when a settlement is made in Manchuria it will be made through the agency of the League. In so far as there has been any failure it is not the League which has failed, but the nations which have failed the League. There have been mistakes at Geneva and Paris, but the chief fault has been in the slowness of the peoples to understand a complicated situation and to support the peacemakers more vigorously and intelligently."

"Does this imply a breakdown in the world's new peace-making machinery? It might appear so, for so far the nations have not effectively applied the Kellogg pact or the Nine Power treaty, both more directly involved than is the League Covenant. During more than two months, hostilities have not been stopped, but, until the recent withdrawal from Chinchow, have been extended. Japan has seemed to be achieving her purpose by the use of force in frank violation of international obligations."

"But will Japan profit by her use of force? That is the question which will determine whether peaceful means have failed. Only if the nations fail to demonstrate that war does not profit a country will the peace machinery have failed. "Such an outcome is possible, but hardly probable. Japan already has felt the necessity to lay her case before the world. She has greatly injured herself in public esteem. Her trade has been hurt. She has made Chinese collaboration, which she greatly needs, more difficult to obtain. And before a settlement is reached, Japan is likely to have to do much more explaining than she wishes."

FLORIDA JUST A YOUNGSTER

TAMPA TRIBUNE

In a four page article with beautiful illustrations, Nature Magazine for January will tell us that while St. Augustine means age to a lot of people, Florida is just a youngster from the standpoint of the geologist. In this article Herman Gunter, State Geologist says: "The fact that the earliest permanent settlement in the United States was in Florida gives to the state historic age, but, geologically considered, it is among the youngest. Projecting as a peninsula from the southeastern portion of the United States, Florida really is a unique, not only in its location, its climate, its deposits of soils and vegetation but in its geology."

Florida, according to Mr. Gunter, is included entirely within the generally well-known province designated the Coastal Plain. Deposits or formations of the same age, and quite generally similar characteristics, can be mapped from Cape Cod, Massachusetts, to the Mexican border. The prevailing character of the formations of the state are limestones, sands, marls, clays, phosphates and recent deposits of varying character. Particularly, however, in the preponderance of limestone, and the variety and extent of limy sediments of present day formation along the coast, does Florida differ markedly from other portions of the Coastal Plain. The oldest exposed formation is a limestone to which the name Ocala has been given from its typical occurrence in and near the city of that name in central peninsular Florida. As now placed in the geological time scale, the Ocala is of latest Eocene age. Thus, all the formations of which surface outcrops are known in the state fall within the younger major geologic era, the Cenozoic, or the age of recent life. All of the epochs into which the Cenozoic is ordinarily subdivided are represented, namely, the Eocene, Oligocene, Miocene, Pliocene, Pleistocene and Recent. Mr. Gunter mentions a well drilled to the depth of 6180 feet in Marion county, central peninsular Florida, which encountered mica, shist, slate, and quartzite at a depth of something more than 4000 feet. "This," he says, "is the first and only well from which such positive data on the thickness of the sedimentary formations in Florida have been obtained. The age of these basements of metamorphic materials has not been determined, but crystalline rocks of Paleozoic age are known in Georgia and Alabama. Apparently therefore what we now know as Florida was aconas ago a part of the land mass of old Appalachina. Since the formation of these deposits now found at a depth of more than 4000 feet, the state has undergone many oscillations of level, remaining dry land for ages, then covered by the sea for other periods, finally through these various vicissitudes becoming the Florida of today."

CHINCHOW

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

The resolution adopted by the League of Nations Council on December 10 left the future of Chinchow unsolved. It held the Chinese and the Japanese to the September 30 promise not "to aggravate the situation." This may mean anything or nothing. To Secretary Henry L. Stimson it apparently means a good deal. For he immediately, explained the American view of the League resolution in an announcement that was freely interpreted as a warning to the dispirited in Manchuria against the renewal of military action.

On the whole, Secretary Stimson has navigated the Manchurian shoals with conspicuous care and impartiality. From the outset he realized Geneva's effort to tie down Japan to a time limit within which to return its troops to the South Manchuria Railway zone. He knew that the chaotic conditions north of the Great Wall made such a course inapplicable to a situation from which Chinese authority had fled. Nor has he ever accused either party of violating any treaty. He has realized more than world statesmen in general that Japan has at least a technical justification in moving its troops along railways in which it holds an equity even though these railways are situated outside the South Manchuria treaty zone.

But it should be recalled that in accepting the December 10 resolution the Japanese added a significant rider that they must have a free hand in the maintenance of order. Nothing would please them better than to settle the question of Chinchow without recourse to military action. One reason is that the town, which is 250 miles south of Mukden, happens to be located on the Peking-Mukden Railroad, in which the British hold an equity derived from a loan. Another is that no technical or treaty justification for a military advance could be adduced. But Chinchow is now held by Gen. Jung Chen, Chang Hsueh-Liang's chief lieutenant, who happens to be the genius of the anti-Japanese movement in Manchuria which General Honjo is determined to uproot. He, like Gen. Ma Chen-Shan at Tientsin, gains his chief support from the hope and expectation of a League-plus-American move against Japan. These facts add to the complications already involved in the Stimson's attitude. It is to be hoped that the Secretary of State will retain that impartiality, that hesitancy to condemn, that has so far distinguished his attitude. For weeks he was accused in Europe of not going far enough. But it is now evident that he is a long way ahead of the League. The statement of the Secretary of State was stiffer than the League's resolution that called it forth. He has followed it up in several communications designed to stave off the fall of Chinchow, while the League has apparently remained silent. But any further overtures to Japan that may be necessary in again calling attention to the world's interest in the Kellogg and Nine Power pact should be made by the powers in union. The cause of peace is not served by isolated action, particularly when there is grave doubt whether such action would gain the support either of American public opinion or of Congress, both of which have recently given evidence that they do not wish unduly to interfere in foreign concerns.

Economist Gives His Opinion Upon Needs For 1932

The program which I believe this country should adopt to accelerate business recovery in 1932 may be succinctly described as "industrial and credit expansion on a solid base." The more distant object is to keep the money market flat. The road is rough, the riding is painful, the progress slow. Under these circumstances, inflation of our tires, instead of more deflation, is the obvious remedy, if we wish to continue our journey without completely ruining our running gear. ...

Apart from the decision regarding "Swara", the meeting decided to remodel the League's executive bodies on lines of the National Congress and negotiate with all parties represented in the Moslem conference with a view to an amalgamation between the conference and the League. Resolutions were adopted opposing terrorism and the "Red Shirt" campaign. The government's new ordinances in the northwest frontier province to suppress such anti-British manifestations were criticized on the ground that they were inimical to the atmosphere of good will necessary for the successful working of any new constitution. The chief center of active unrest yesterday was Lahore, where four Hindus and four Moslems were injured so seriously it was taken to hospitals. Many others were treated for injuries by private physicians. Lahore was plunged into a state of alarm and a curfew order compelling all citizens to remain indoors between the hours of 8 P. M. and 7 A. M. was enforced. Eleven persons were reported to have been killed Saturday at Peshawar, where troops fired on a crowd of riotous anti-British "Red Shirts." The northwest frontier province was reported calm today, but the "Red Shirt" campaign, superimposed on the perpetual menace of frontier tribes, has brought about a situation which neither local nor central authorities view with any enthusiasm. The arrest of Jawaharlal Nehru, president of the All-India Congress, in the Bombay headquarters Saturday caused "hartal" (general strike and closing of shops), to be proclaimed in Bombay today as a protest. Since this will coincide with the arrival of Mahatma Gandhi, there were apprehensions of trouble developing. ...

MISS MARGARET ELIZABETH ZACHARY BECOMES BRIDE OF JAMES WRIGHT

Attracting the interest of a wide circle of friends here and in other parts of the state was the marriage of Miss Margaret Elizabeth Zachary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Darius Zachary, to James Anderson Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy R. Wright, Saturday evening at 8:00 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, 812 Magnolia Avenue. The Rev. E. D. Brownlee, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and intimate friends of the couple. In keeping with the Christmas season, the decorations about the Zachary home accentuated a color scheme of red and green. In the reception room baskets and vases of poinsettias, red roses, and ferns were arranged, while similar flowers were placed about the large living room where the guests were assembled. Forming a suitable background for the ceremony was the softly lighted library, the entrance to which was an arch formed of amaranth and fern. Marking each side of the archway were tall white wicker floor baskets filled with large red poinsettias and lacy ferns. Preceding the wedding Mrs. Fannie Stembler Munson, at the piano, rendered, "The Old refrain," and played Lohengrin's Wedding March as the bridegroom entered. During the ceremony she played, "Trauerlie." The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by her mother as matron of honor, while her cousin, Miss Maria Ann Powers, was maid of honor. Another cousin, little Cornelia St. Johns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kush St. Johns, of Lakeland, acted as flower girl and Billy Philyaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Philyaw, of Gainesville, also a cousin, was ringbearer. The bridegroom had as his best man, Arthur Darius Zachary, Jr., brother of the bride. The bride's gown was made of white moleskin satin molded along fitted lines. The skirt flared at the hem and fell in soft folds at the back to form a train, while the yoke and sleeves of the dress were made of Chantilly lace. The bridal veil, which was fastened with orange blossoms, was made of rose point lace and tulle. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and valley lilies. The ring used in the ceremony was that of the bride's mother. Mrs. Zachary, as matron of honor, wore for the occasion a French blue lace gown having a skirt of circular tiers and a fitted bodice. Her shoes and other accessories were in a harmonizing shade of blue and her bouquet was of pink radiance roses tied with a pink tulle bow. A cow! neckline, lined in blue, featured the back décolletage of the pink satin dress worn by Miss Powers, maid of honor. Forming a harmonizing contrast to the gown were her shoes and other blue accessories. She carried a bouquet of blue and pink sweet peas adorned with a blue tulle bow. Fresh colored net made with a high waist line, short sleeves and a ruffled skirt fastened the frock worn by little Miss Cornelia St. Johns, the flower girl. She carried a basket of rose petals which she scattered about the floor before the entrance of the bride. Billy Philyaw, as ring bearer carried the ring in a satin bag and wore white trousers and a gray blue coat. Mrs. Roy R. Wright, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a gown of brown crepe fashioned along simple lines. With this she wore a corsage of roses and valley lilies. An informal reception was held by the bride and groom immediately after the ceremony. The refreshment table was overlaid with a linen cloth and centered with a large three-tiered wedding cake. Candles in crystal candlesticks cast a soft glow about the table and at each side of the candlesticks were placed small silver baskets of valley lilies and fern. The guests were served by Mrs. W. M. Thigpen, Mrs. W. A. Pitts, Jr., Mrs. Earle E. Jones, of Jacksonville, and the Misses Margaret Cox, Margaret Wright, Perry Lee Bell, and Sara Warren Easterby. Mr. and Mrs. Wright left after the reception in their car for a short trip to Chattanooga, Tenn., Bristol, Va., and points in North Carolina. Upon their return they will be at home to their friends at 812 Magnolia Avenue. The bride wore, upon her departure, a red tulle veil the collar and cuffs of which were made of black astrakhan. With this she wore a beige blouse and black accessories. The bride has lived here the greater part of her life, and is the only daughter of her parents. She was graduated from Sanford High School and later attended Sullins College at Bristol, Va. After her graduation there she studied at Duke University at Durham, N. C., where she received an A. B. degree, and was a member of the Zeta-Tau Alpha sorority. For the past two years she has been teaching English at Seminole High School. She is treasurer of the N. D. C. and was a page several years ago at the national convention of the U. D. C. held in Charleston, S. C. She is also an active member of the Little Theatre Group. The bridegroom is the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy R. Wright. He was born and reared in Tennessee and came here from Chattanooga, Tenn., with his parents about six or seven years ago. He attended Rollins College at Winter Park and later was a student at the University of Florida where he was a member of the Phi Delta ...

Canon Charges Nye Committee With Unfairness

(Continued from Page One) no separately organized Virginia committee of the anti-Smith Democrats; that contributions by E. C. Jameson, New York Republican, "were being solicited for general use throughout the South;" that the total amount of funds contributed to the committee exceeded $100,000; that a large part of the funds contributed was handled by Bishop Cannon and that $18,300 of the contributions were placed to the credit of the bishop. The committee statement that there was no Virginia anti-Smith committee was said by the bishop to be due to failure of its investigators to make proper inquiry. "The highly paid investigators of the Nye committee," said Bishop Cannon, "could have easily discovered the fact of this organization had they expended one tenth the money and time they expended on my purely personal private affairs." "I was the treasurer of that state organization and was under no moral or legal obligation to make any public report of purely Virginia expenditures. Nor did the Democratic or Republican committees make any report to the clerk of the House or to any Virginia state official, nor have they been investigated for failure to do so. Furthermore the headquarters committee of the anti-Smith Democrats act was not a national committee in the sense of the corrupt practices act but was clearly recognized as being a sectional political committee operating exclusively in certain southern states." Cannon said that at the outset of the campaign he intended to see out of the Jameson contributions made in Virginia for the Virginia campaign in getting the Senate to pass the anti-Smith bill. He said it was necessary to do this because the contributions of the general headquarters organization had "that $17,000 was then properly reported by Miss Burroughs, the treasurer." ...
