LONGWOOD — It is back to the drawing board for Rangeline Road after the city commissioners discovered the city would have to come up with almost $500,000 of its own money to complete the proposed project as it now stands.

The commissioners are looking for ways to reduce the shortfall and still make drainage improvements and resurface the busy mile-long corridor connecting E.E. Williams/Longwood Hills roads to State Road 434. The commissioners are requesting a workable design within their budget from their consulting engineering firm. Professional Engineering Consultants (PEC). The preliminary engineering bill of $39,892 was paid to PEC from the money allocated by the county from sales tax set aside for transportation. The consulting firm said a study of the suggested dual drainage system would cost an additional $24,000 and would be paid by the city. The dual

Custody hearing pending for beby

DELRAY BEACH - Five-month-old Baby Michael remains with his adoptive parents pending a hearing before a judge Wednesday to determine custody.

The adoptive parents, Dennis and Kim Sowers of Deerfield

Beach, had agreed to give up the child they adopted at birth after the child's biological father demanded custody.

The baby's birth mother, Sheila Sheil, 40, named a birth father early in the adoption process. The Sowers paid Sheil more than $7,000 to cover housing, food and phone bills during her pregnancy.

Soon after she signed the adoption consent form and received payment. Shell said she had been mistaken about who was the baby's father. She named the real birth father, Franklin Velasquez, 34, of Bota Raton, who is seeking custody and has become engaged to Sheil.

During a hearing Monday before Circuit Court Judge Lucy Brown, the Sowers' attorney, Charlotte Danciu of Boca Raton, asked the court not to return the child to Sheil.

The Sowers had agreed to give the baby to his biological father "only because we felt the case against the father was next to impossible to win." Danciu said.

PENSACOLA — The Escamble County Sheriff's Department has a special name for people like Tony Picheo.

Law enforcement officers, fire departments and animal control officers routinely call the roofing company owner and amateur herpetologist to remove unwanted snakes. Free, Although rattlesnakes and other native species are the usual finds, about a month ago Picheo got the call when a 4 1/2-foot-long ball python was spotted outside a Pensacola home.

Picheo walked over to the snake, picked it up in the middle of its body and the snake turned and looked him "dead in the eyes," recalled Sheriff's Deputy Bain Matthews.

Picheo returns most of the snakes he captures to the wild because they benefit the environment. But he also keeps about 30 in squariums and holding pens at his Pensacola home.

Archaeologists find important campelte

JUPITER - Archaeologists have discovered artifacts confirming what local historians have long suspected — that Seminole Indians returned and flourished here well after the Seminole Wars.

No more than 300 Seminoles were thought to have remained in the state following the end of the third and final Seminole War in 1858.

But a "virtually undisturbed" camp with jars, bottles and pendants, hidden in a small hammock near the Loxahatchee River is the first physical evidence that Seminole Indians lived in the Jupiter area well into the 1870s, experts say.

WASHINGTON - Michael Carne, a retired four-star Air Force general, is President Clinton's choice to replace James Woolsey as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, an administration official said to-

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the selection would be announced this week. The only thing holding it up "was a scheduling matter." Carns has been in California this week, the administration official said.

White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta, interviewed this morning on Fox TV. said Carns had met with President Clinton about the CIA job. "He's cer-tainly near the top of the list, but that decision is for the president." Panetta said.

Officials inside and outside the administration familiar with the process said at least two other candidates had made Clinton's final list: Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick and CIA inspector general Fred Hits.

Belecting Carns, a respected military leader, would not assuage some of the agency's harshest critics who want a massive overall at the CIA. Carns would not be expected to oversee a major housecleaning, said a congressional official familiar with the selection process. Before becoming the Air Forces' No. 2 military official. Carns was staff director for the Joint Chiefs of Staff under Colin Gorelick, who would have been the first female CIA director, was deemed too valuable at the Justice Department.

Hits has been on the White House list almost from the beginning. Among members of Congress, he is widely credited for the investigation and report he put together on lapses in the CIA that allowed Aldrich Ames to serve as a Soviet mole inside the agency for years.

drainage system would channel stormwater in two directions and enable some of the existing road surface to be saved.

The plans on the table for Rangeline Road now call for a deep drainage system and the existing road bed to be rebuilt. The $1.12 million price tag for the project would be funded by $600,000 the county set saide from the penny sales tax, leaving about a $494,000 deficit for the city to fund.

The road design includes medians and turn lanes for the numerous subdivisions along the route. City engineer Fernand Tiblier drew up estimates giving options for reducing the cost.

Tiblier noted the commission stipulated to the engineers that the project be constructable with the county money and should receive assurance the road can be built within the city's means.

"They owe us a good design and we shouldn't have to pay another $24,000," Tiblier added. In defense of the engineering firm, however, Tiblier said it was the former city commission which requested medians on the Commissioner Bill Winston, who became a commissioner in November, questioned how an $800,000 project ballooned to $1.12 million but city officials had not made any recommenda-tions of how the city portion would be paid.

In other business, the commissioners revisited the issue of appointments to city boards and commissions. Benson and Winston repeated their objection to a proposed charter change making mandatory, not just a suggestion, that commissioners must nominate individuals from within their own districts for appointment by the commis-

The charter states when possible, individuals from within a commissioner's own district should be picked for positions on city boards. However, if a more qualified individual for the post lives outside that commissioner's district, he or she may be tapped for the job.

Commissioners Jim Carrico. Ron Sargent. Annamarie Vacca and Winston voted to defer a nomination by Benson to the Parks and Recreation Board when the item was not on the agenda and an information sheet was not in the commissioners packets as required. Vacca also questioned whether the nominee lived in Benson's district.

"I wanted to get something passed where casino gambling could never happen in Florida." he said. "I was trying to come up with something to lick it forever. The sheriffs asked lawmakers to pass a ballot resolution that would require a two-thirds vote to pass any constitutional amendment authorizing casino gambling.

Chiles, who is opposed to casino gambling, said Monday he hadn't seen the sheriffs' request and couldn't speculate on its chances this year. "I don't know. But it doesn't greatly upset my sense of values," he said.

Wallace, who also opposes casino gambling, said he was concerned about tinkering with the vote required for constitutional initiatives.

"I'm afraid that if we start to single out

"I'm afraid that if we start to single out particular issues for an extraordinary constitutional vote, the list will be endless," he said.

The castno initiative known as Proposition for Limited Casines was the only one of several castno proposals that gathered enough signatures to make it onto last year's ballot.

At least two other initiatives are considering a run at 1998, including one backed by Bally Manufacturing Corp.

recalled he was standing behind the "Cops and Robbers" section with a small, stainless steel handgun, ordering them to hand over money in the cash drawer.

The subject was described as a black male between 16 to 25 years old. 5-foot 10-inches to 8-feet tall with a thin build. He was wearing dark pants and a blue sweatshirt with a black ski mask.

The gunman fled through the money in a Blockbuster bag when a customer came in.

Two female employees were working in the store at the time of the holdup. They told police their telephone was not working about one half hour before the incident. Investigators found the store phone line had been cut. Whitmire said a citizen outside the store saw the masked man in the video store and went to a nearby gas station and telephoned police.

A Sanford policeman in the area was dispatched at 8:16 p.m., and arrived at 8:16 p.m., Whitmire said.

He also wants to build a wooden boardwalk and install signs identifying all the flora and fauna in the area. Ellis told Moore he believes he will need more than $1,000 to complete the project.

He is saking people in the community to donate $30 each toward the completion of the project. Each $30 supporter will have the opportunity to have his or her name inscribed on one of the wood planks that will form the boardwalk. "I think the students (at Sanford Middle) will benefit from this young man's project."

Moore said. "This is a great opportunity for the students to use that outdoor classroom." As part of the Eagle Scout requirements, Ellis will be recruiting other students to help him put the project together.

Moore is pleased about that.

think he has to get the other kids involved (in the project)."

Some kids do great things

Prediction: Harry Ellis III, presently a freshman at Seminole High School, will go places in this world. Hope: That there might be more youngsters like him. Possibility: There may be, if we give them a chance.

Ellis, a member of Boy Scout Troop 507, is seeking to earn an Eagle Scout badge. As his project, he plans to lead a fund-raising drive and work on refurbishing the old environ-mental classroom at Sanford Middle School.

Hurray for scouting. An organization which is capable of instilling such a desire among its members deserves the highest of praise. We have heard many outstanding achievements by young persons seeking this highest scouting honor. Ellis must be considered at the top of the list.

in order to finance the work, young Ellis will be contacting people, seeking $30 donations for the project. In return, he is promising each name will be inscribed on one of the wooden planks in a boardwalk which is part of his plans.

We have little doubt that had he not been in scouting, by his very nature, he would have some day dived into some similar project. He is showing his true self and has found a way to do good for people.

For others, unfortunately, even organizations such as the scouts, Boys & Girls clubs, YMCA, or others, try as they may, can't instill similar desires on some of today's younger generation.

This is unfortunate. It is not only their loss, but the loss of everyone. In order to continue having a progressive and safe society, it takes everyone, and people of every age to become involved.

This is not to say that these other organizations can't produce outstanding citizens. It is just to point out that some youngsters refuse to be helped, no matter what their leaders try doing.

We urge people to support Harry Ellis III. As Sanford Middle School Principal Bill Moore said, "It's a big undertaking."

Let's give Harry a round of applause, then hold those same hands out to those others who are capable of accomplishing great things if they will only allow leadership to prevail.

Save Meals on Wheels

I received some disturbing news that will affect thousands of our senior citizens who receive hot meals everyday for five days a week and have no other way to get this precious gift of life.
It seems that the "little" boys in Washington want to ruin the way it has worked for years, I believe someone said in the 1970s.

I know of four different elderly people who would not be alive without the help of our Better Living For Seniors. If the elderly were not able to prepare their meals and have no one to help them, where would they turn?

I'm sure you dear people also know someone in your own family or someone in the neighborhood who must rely on these wonderful people for their existence. Not only do these "angels" provide meals, they also have volunteers who fix leaky roofs. fix windows to keep the cold out, and even paint the house if it's below code.

With County Commissioner Pat Warren we have worked very closely and it's very close to our heart and must not be ruined when they (Washington) have no idea how it's working.

Washington wants to put it in the same bag as welfare, well this ian't welfare. These are human beings who are trying to live out the rest of their lives with dignity, who have learned not to be grouped with food stamps. SSI (Supplemental Security Income) or AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children), or mothers with small children. These people worked and raised their children without any help and paid taxes and asked not a thing in return. Most of these people did volunteer work in some place that needed them very badly. One lady I know hasn't missed a day in one of our hospitals in five years.

We must reach our senators and congressmen by phone, mail, or fax our letters to stop this mess once and for all. The president can give away our money to Cuba, Haiti, and all this money to Russia and send our boys over to be killed to fight other people's civil wars, that's none of our business, but they want to deprive the mothers and fathers of these men their right to be left alone.

The churches must get behind this also to let Washington know we will not allow them to take the last shred of dignity away from our olderly

I'm proud of you people for when I ask you for help you have always come forward, now let's pile up the mail and phone calls to Washington.

Where public beats private

It is a rule of thumb for every revolutionary movement: When the putsch is launched, selse the television stations.

Hence, the right-wing crusade to kill public broadcasting. It has to do with ideology, nothing more, nothing less.

Oh, I know that is not what they say. America's new prime minister. Newt Gingrich, says public broadcasting is an "elitist" toy. The truth is, the public television audience is mostly middle class.

The new chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, Larry Pressler of South Dakota, says he wants to "privatise" public broadcasting only to save tax money. The fact is, the federal contribution to public broadcasting this year is $255.5 million. Eliminating it from the budget would pay the interest on the national debt for less than three hours. But savings I are less than three hours. Big savings, Lar.

Newt says he is "frankly offended" that the Public Broadcasting Service would spend the taxpayers' money to fund a poll to assess its own popularity. Well, the Pentagon spends untold millions on public relations efforts designed to sell taself to the nation. What does Newt nave to see about the? eay about that?

The conservative Washington Times says it's just a crying shame to spend public funds to televise "bloated, bombastic superstars belting out show tunes." I thought for a minute there they were com-plaining about Rush Limbaugh, but it turned out to be the three tenors .. Carreras, Domingo and Pavafotti .. who performed in Los Angeles during last year's World Cup final.

It is all a lot of right-wing flapdoodie. What really bothers Newt and Larry and the Times' editors is the perception that public broadcasting tilts to the left. It does not, at least not to any great degree. But ideologues have this rule, you see. If you

When the putsch is launched, seize the television stations. don't spout the doctrine, you must be the enemy.
If there were a show on PBS or National Public Radio featuring old Huff 'n' Puff Rush, or a weekly show called "Newt's World," or something called "How to Assemble and Maintain Your Backyard Missile Silo," underwritten by the National Rifle Association, you wouldn't be hearing a peep from these creeps.

But, thank the Lord, the public broadcasting system has been structured to protect it from politics. Funds are appropriated to the independent Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and the CPB distributes the federal revenues and the money it raises from private and corporate contributors to the nation's 1,000 public television and radio stations.

Thanks to the CPB buffer, viewers get quality children's programe, superb drama, excellent science, very little O.J. Simpson, and the best damn news programs on the continent. Find me something on commercial television that com-pares to the MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour. Find me something on commercial radio that is remotely se thorough and informative and interesting as MPR's "Morning Edition" and "All Things Considered."

Not tragic or unfair, it just is

BOSTON - Our conversation begins as it always does. I come for a visit and find her sitting in her chair, looking out the window. I pick up the small microphone that dangles from the newest of her hearing aide and begin the ritual.

'How are you Auntie?" I ask, as always.

"Oh, I'm a hundred percent," she answers, as always. There is a pause while we share the echo of the ironic humor she has carried with her through life.

She says, as always, "Don't be in a rush to be 97." And I say, as always, "Well, all right, Auntie. I was going to rush, but I won't,"

I sit down on the edge of the bed and take photographs out of my pocketbook. I show them to her one by one, a rogues' gallery of the nieces and nephews that she calls, happily, her "uglies." She smiles at each picture as if this were the first time she'd seen it, though in fact have brought this stack to her many times

Then she says in her precise diction, "Tell me what is going on in your world?" I lean into the microphone as if it were a radio interview and tell my audience-of-one some stories. Where we've been. Where we're going. What we're doing. Stories that I have told her before. Sometimes she will tell me, if I sak, tales I have heard before. Tales about a childhood in England, school in America, the longing for college, about her parents, her husband, a whole world that is now in the past. On a good day she says, again, "I am just waiting to leave this planet. I say that philosophically, not eadly. "On a bad day she says, again, "I am just waiting to leave this planet. I say that philosophically, not sadly."

On a bad day she sake, again, "You cannot help me exit, can you?" We became family. Auntie and I, when she was much younger, which is to say in her 80s. I married the nephew who is more than a nephew to her — her prize, her lifeline — and began learning.

One day coming back from a family gathering, displaying my careful new in-law manners, I said how pleasant lunch had been. She looked up and said — not unkindly, not sharply, but directly — "I thought it was boring." Laughing, I said to myself, "No shucking, Auntie. We will be friends."

Now, we're losing her. Or rather, she is disappearing.

What she calls in her own crudits language "the diminution of my faculties" has con-tinued in countless increments. Ears, eyes, legs. Hearing, sight, mobility. The flerce independence that characterized her life, the long walks, the daily bus trip to Burger King until she was 94. Gone, one by one, like chita she must turn in before being allowed through the door.

Her daily newspaper has given way to a large type weekly. The names of relatives have dropped off her screen, like atrophied limbs. And then there is the rest of her the memory. She lives in a narrowing time frame, a day that is repeated over again without a sense of yesterday or maybe this morning.

My husband who shares her honesty and her humor calls her life "Groundhog Day" after the movie about a man destined to endlessly repeat one day. Yet we are still her students. In her presence, we learn about time, about age, about letting things be what they

My husband will visit Auntie tomorrow though she probably will not remember the next day that he was there. He doesn't go to chalk up a credit, just to be there.

Oldest warrior springs into action

WASHINGTON - Until recently, Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., was often greeted with dericive anichers from some colleagues when he would launch into a speech at Democratic strategy sessions. Now when the former majority leader and Appropriations Committee chairman rises to speak at a Democratic Caucus luncheon, "it's pin-drop time."

"Nobody laughs anymore at the historical references," says Ben. John D. "Jay" Rockefeller, D-W.Va., Byrd's home-state colleague. "And there was a time when people would do that."

Pamous for long orations sprinkled with obscure historical references, Byrd was viewed by many a s a q u a i n t throwback, a man from another time whose formality seemed out of place in the modern political era. With Democrate searching for new answers after the Republican Having already blowout, they are banking on a former butcher and grocery-store owner now in his 49th year of public service.

The 77-year-old

Byrd is sounding the charge by preaching some old-fashioned values: Fealty to the every Senate leadership position, he may be on the verge of his greatest legislative victory.

Constitution and the institution of the Senate. Having already served in nearly every Senate leadership position, he may be on the verge of his greatest legislative victory if he can unite a shell-shocked party that looks scared and confused.

Bitting in the nearly vacant offices of the president pro tempore. Byrd aat down with us one recent afternoon to reflect on the changes of recent months — both personal and political. All around him lay the signs of turnover — half-packed boxes of pictures and paperwork. On the wall behind him hung the pictures of all his predecessors as president pro tempore, some of them legends and others long-forgotten.

"My party is depressed," Byrd said. "I am depressed. Who wouldn't be in my shoes.... I've been here before when we were in the minority. But this time, we've got a big minority, a larger minority than the Republicans had in the last Congress. So we can be an effective minority."

With an office full of political memorabilia. Byrd chooses to show off a framed picture of old grocery-store receipts. "Four cans of milk for a quarter. Two cans of cherries, 20 cents. This was 1938."

The Senate was debating the "Contract With America," but Byrd had another contract on his mind. "I signed a contract for a bedroom suite — $189.50.1 was to pay $5 down, by cash or script, taken from my payroll, and $7.50 every two weeks for a period of something like 13 months until 1 paid it off. So much for those who say that the American family balances their budgets."

Byrd was referring to the balanced budget amendment, which is popular with the voters yet something he abhors and has vowed to light until the bitter end.

His efforts have struck a chord among Senate Republicans, who paid Byrd a backhanded compliment last week when they formed a nine-member "rapid-response" team to fight for passage of the amendment. Even with nine senators against one, this fight is a mismatch.

Some may find it ironic that the Democrata are looking to their oldest warrior for new life. Yet those who dismiss Byrd as a parochial pork-peddler are making a grave mistake. In an age when stamps-for-cash, sexual harasament, and savings-and-loan scundals have tarnished and toppled so many lawmakers, the worst thing anybody can say about Byrd after nearly half a century in public life is that his only special interest was his hardecrabble constituency.

LOS ANGELES — Hours before his ex-wife and her friend were murdered, O.J. Simpson was "simmering" and "spooky" at his daughter's dance recital, witnesses say.

But after the recital, a home video shot outside the auditorium by another parent shows Simpson laughing, kissing his former in-laws, scooping his son into his arms and joking around with a friend.

Monday was a day of contrasting images for jurors in Simpson's murder trial.

Candace Garvey said the angry-looking man who showed up at the June 12 recital "was just not the same person I was used to seeing."

"It was almost like he was simmering." said Garvey, the wife of former baseball star Steve Garvey and a friend of Nicole Brown Simpson's. "When he stared at me I felt like he was looking right through me and it scared me a little bit."

Former president honored

WASHINGTON — Calling Ronald Reagan their philosophical leader, an all-star cast of Reagan administration alumni, Republican party leaders and GOP presidential hopefuls honored the former president on his 84th birthday.

The Monday evening bash was dubbed "Reagan Country" and talk among the buoyant dinner crowd of almost 900 was of revolution and reverence.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, still flush from the victory of the line-item veto in the House hours earlier, called the 293-134 vote a "sign of love" for Reagan, who unsuccessfully sought line-item veto power during his eight years in the White House.

The gathering credited Reagan for the GOP's newly won control of both chambers of Congress and 30 statehouses.

Heading off trade war

WASHINGTON — The United States and China are trying to head off a trade war, but the staging of peace talks next week on intellectual property piracy is a only small step toward righting a troubled relationship.

Indicating ground that still needs to be covered. Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Monday: "Our relationship will never reach the highest level of fulfilment until there is improvement by the Chinese on some issues which are so fundamental to the United States."

He ticked off human rights. Tibet and the global spread of weapons technology, calling them issues that "represent the highest values to the United States."

Trujillo massacres

BOGOTA, Colombia — In April 1990, a man traveled from his village to the capital to tell officials an incredible tale: Soldiers and their paramilitary allies were torturing peasants and killing them with chainsaws.

Authorities sent the man — Daniel Arcila, a fruitpicker from Trujillo — to a psychiatrist. He was judged a paranoid psychopath and his claims were dismissed. A year later, Arcila was arrested by security forces and hean't been heard.

Almost four years and over 100 mutilated bodies later, the account by Arcila — now believed to be a victim of the soldiers he denounced — has gained credibility.

The Organization of American States will hold a hearing in Washington today on what has become known as the "Trujillo

Proud female soldiers

TEL AVIV, Israel — Along with the kibbutz and the Jaffa orange, the proud female soldier has long stood as a symbol for Israel. In reality, however, women have been relegated to less than heroic military roles — making coffee and filling out forms.

Now female members of parliament are fighting for passage of a law allowing women to serve in combat units.

"The era when people decided what is good and bad for women is over," Naomi Hazan, who drafted the legislation more than a year ago, said Monday.

GOP vows budget leadership

AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Republicans are vowing to demonstrate the leadership they say President Clinton abdicated when he submitted to Congress what they believe is a spineless budget that sidesteps the tough choices needed to balance the budget.

The administration had hoped Clinton's $1.61 trillion spending plan for 1998 with its middle class tax relief and avoidance of unpopular cuts in government benefit programs would be a political crowd pleaser.

But instead of widespread praise, Clinton's budget was drawing heavy criticism, not only from Republicans but from many Democrats as well.

Critics complained that the president should have gone after fast-growing benefit programs that account for almost half of federal spending. His failure to do that, they said, was the main reason that the deficits in his budget hover near $200 billion a year for the rest of the decade.

Clinton's budget proposed cutting government programs by $144 billion over the next five years, mainly through restructuring several big departments and eliminating or reducing the size of 400 smaller programs. Of the savings, $63 billion would be used for middle class tax relief and $61 billion for deficit reductions.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, White House budget director Alice Rivlin and presidential economist Laura Tyson were heading to Capitol Hill today to defend the president's budget before a skeptical Con-

"We're going to try to work with him but essentially this budget, while it's not dead on arrival, is on life support," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M.

But White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta said on Fox TV this morning, "It's easy to throw stones from the sidelines. They have responsibility now to try to come up with specifics ... We've proposed our budget. Let's see what they do."

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said on CBS that if Republicans "want credibility on this, they've got to engage in more than platitudes and rhetoric."

House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, charged that Clinton's budget represented "an abdication of leadership. It's a political document meant to try to trap people who are serious about reducing the deficit."

But the administration, which pushed a $500 billion deficit-cutting program through Congress two years ago without any Republican support, seemed more than content to sit back and watch the GOP, which now controls Congress, take the lead in deficit reduction this year.

Clinton challenged Republicans, who are pushing for a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget by 2002, to let Americans know where they will find the estimated $1.2 trillion in cuts that would be needed to accomplish that feat.

"My budget cuts spending, cuts taxes and cuts the deficit and does not cut education or Social Security or Medicare. That is a good budget," Clinton said of the spending plan for the flacal year starting Oct. 1.

While both parties are vowing to leave Social Security untouched, the battle lines appeared to be shaping up over Medicare, which provides health insurance for the elderly, and Medicaid, which insures poor people.

Clinton's budget leaves both programs virtually untouched.

even though a year ago he proposed $118 billion in Medicare savings to help finance his health reform program.

Both Domenici and Kasich said the budgets they hope to produce later this spring will have significant savings in health care as well as other entitlement programs.

Clinton's budget proposed making NASA rely on private companies to communicate with satellites, cutting aid to Amtrak and imposing new fees for federal small business loans and bank examinations. But even many Democrats were not impressed.

Democrats were not impressed.
"The president's budget falls short, way short, of the deficit reduction we need," said Sen.
James Exon of Nebrasks, ranking Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee.

Everyone has some psychic ability

know if I am psychic as I seem to have feelings about things before they happen and sometimes know about some things that have happened in the past as well; things that I have no way of having had prior knowledge about it sense as sensetimes and I don't know what to do about it. Do you have any suggestions?

KAY DEAD KAY: It is my feeling that all of us have an extended sensitivity beyond our normal five senses; in other words, all of us have some psychic ability. As natural as it is among all forms of life, you will find that it applies to people, animals, and plants as well. Intuition, gut reaction, dog sense, whatever you wish to call it, it is that area of communication that occurs from our minds, perhaps the same way that a radio signal goes through the air. Nothing, no computer, is more complex than the "human brain" and its potential for things that are yet to be discovered about it.

As for your feelings, I share with you the same experiences and have found these abilities to be valuable, only I have not been able to use them for myself gainfully. That leads me to believe that there must be a spiritual side to this, if you believe in the creator as I do, and those things that I am able to perceive of for myself are merely those things that I have learned, prepared for, or used good old 'common sense'' to get at. I would enjoy meeting you one day if the situation arises and perhaps I might learn something from you too.

Please write to me again and don't be afraid of something that is very natural and a part of life

DEAR JERRY: It's nice to finally read a column about a subject that is about something that I am very interested in that doesn't "reek" of selling something like those 900 phone numbers and the like. Welcome to our area and I would like to right now will be the one that I am supposed to marry? It would be my lifth marriage!

MAITLAND

DEAR D.R.: First, thank you for the compliment! Secondly, you must be a "glutton for punishment," but also and alack, I do have to say, yes, you will marry this man and finally find what you have been seeking tot so long your life with and not be abused as you have been in the past. Of course, you did not include that in your letter, but I could feel it in your handwriting, as well as the situation with the sale of the real estate that has been bothering you for some time now; as that problem should be resolved to your satisfaction by the end of March. By the way, just to be safe, and before you marry this man, would you please have an attorney prepare for you a marital agreement, as your assets are far greater than his, and while you have a big heart and a lot of love to give, you have worked very hard over the years to acquire what you risk it. Am I psychic or is this additional common sense in your situation? Let me know if you will please ...

I never want to lose contact with my readers or anyone for that matter because someone sate, me on some kind of "psychic pedestal." I still like my greasy burgers, anti-cones, and wearing dirty jeans if I want to. I know there are readers out there reading this column and wondering why I am saying so much about a field, my avocation, that many would try to concesi from the public as to its functional use. Why turn something so natural, so beautiful, into something spooky, secret, or try to unduly influence people's minds with self-fulfilling thoughts, I guess I just have to tell it like it is; in other words. "What you see is what you get!" No hidden agendas.

What is welfare? Meaning broadens as reform looms

By CONNE CASE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Five-year-old Joey Accuedo is learning to write his first words at a Head Start preschool center. Neilie C. Russell, 82, eats a lunch of meatloaf and mashed potatoes delivered to her home for free. Which of them gets welfare?

Both. Or neither, depending on whom you ask. The definition of "welfare" is expanding as the new Republican majority in Congress sifts through a diverse array of federal spending in the name of welfare reform.

"The last few months, I've stayed away from using that word because it's become confusing to people." said Sharon Parrott, a researcher for the liberal Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

Until recently, the welfare reform debate was mostly about how to put the idle to work and discourage unmarried teen-agers from getting pregnant.

"Welfare" was often used as shorthand for a few large, well-known programs, especially cash benefits from Aid to Families with Dependent Children — what most people call welfare checks — and sometimes food stamps and rent assist-

But conservatives see those as merely stubborn roots in a costly thicket of welfare programs that must be pruned to help balance the federal costing a total of $126 billion per year, that House Republicans have labeled welfare. Essentially, the list includes programs that dispense aid based on need (although some are not limited to lowincome or poor people).

Among them are grants and guaranteed loans for college students, help for runaway teen-agers, aid for the homeless, care for abandoned babies, the foster grandparents program, literacy programs, the Job Corps, childhood immunizations, health care for American Indiana, aid to blighted communities, the national service program AmeriCorps, and others.

In addition to the list, Republicans want to whittle down two other big programs — $67 billion in Medicaid coverage for the poor and $28 billion in Supplemental Security Income for the disabled.

Many of these programs, large and small, reach beyond the impoverished and jobless who are typically associated with welfare.

'I'm sure all the voters think we can erase the deficit without cutting anything that affects them," said Rep. Jim Greenwood, R-Pa., whose wife is a meals on wheels volunteer. "That's not true, be if college programs, sertior programs," by programs that affect kids."

While Joey is in Head Start, his mother, Fontella Acevedo, 29, works as a medical assistant in Alexandria, Va. She is separated from her husband and raising their two children and we nieces in her custody.

Short of both time and money, Acevedo is grateful for Head Start: It's preparing Joey for first grade and replaces $100-per-week day care. helping her keep her job.

"I don't think it should be estemprised as a welfare program because there are a lot of us in it that are working," Acevedo said. "Not everybody wants to be on AFDC."

"There are many lacets of welfare and kinds of welfare....
Pand stamps are clearly welfare. Medicaid is a form of welfare. It goes from the delivery of services to the delivery of cash."—
Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fia., who lists 336 different welfare programs.

"My definition of welfare is someone who has been caught up in a recession, a husband and wife or a single mother, out of a job or fecoal with diverce, with no job apportunity. ... They find themselves on public assistance for a transitional period; it's ceah benefits and either benefits for them to survive during that paried of time." — Rep. Russell depends on the hot meals delivered to her Central Square, N.Y., home by a county program that gets federal funds. She donates $1 a day for the food when she can spare it. And she doesn't call it welfare.

"I don't get no help from welfare. I never did," Russell said. "I worked all my life, and now !

Congress is considering proposals to eliminate all 336 federal programs on the welfare list. Most of the money would be turned over to the states - with limits on future increases - to be spent on broadly defined needs, such as nutrition or housing. States could take over the federal programs or create their own.

"We hope to be able to combine and simplify as much as possible." Shaw said. But he predicted that a few welfare programs, probably including Head Start, would have enough support to survive at the federal level.

Critics say it's misleading to dismantle such a wide range of federal programs under the guise of reforming welfare.

"That's absolutely too broad," said Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn. "We have to narrow it down to AFDC. That's the one we're besically talking awayear limit on benefits, addressing the problem of out-of-wedlock births."

But there is no official definition of welfare. It has always been a flexible term, often connoting

Some people, said Columbia University economics professor Harold Watte, have a simple definition: "It's anything they don't like, or anything they're not getting."

DEAR DR. GOTT: My bladder doesn't empty completely and I suffer from frequent infections. Blood tests indicate I have a high level of potassium in my blood. I drink 80 ounces or more of water each day. Is there a special diet I should follow for better control?

DEAR READER: The bladder normally contracts forcefully when we urinate. However, a variety of conditions " ranging from nerve damage affecting the bladder muscle to an enlarged prostate gland -- may prevent the bladder from emptying com-pletely. The remaining urine often provides a source of infec-

Therefore, before advising you about how to overcome your problem, I'd have to know the reason that your bladder fails to empty. For example, if nerve damage is present (from surgery or an accident), you might be better able to empty your bladder if your better able to empty your bladder if you were taught special exercises by a urologist; if an enlarged prostate is the cause, you could be helped by surgery or medicine, such as Proscar, to shrink the gland.

In any case, you should be examined by a urologist, who will probably perform cystoscopy and cystometrics, techniques to examine the techniques to examine the bladder and test its evacuating efficiency.

The high level of blood-potassium suggests that your kidneys may not be up to par. This, too, should be investigated by the urologist, with a urinalysis, blood tests and Xravs.

Eighty ounces of water a day is excessive. Unless this figure is a misprint in your question, I advise you to reduce your consumption to less than half that amount: your kidneys are prob-ably unduly stressed by this tremendous water load and may be malfunctioning because of it.

Rather than trying dietary manipulation, you should ask your physician to refer you to a specialist.

Last November, for reasons best known to my psychiatrist, I took part in the New York City Marathon. I also competed in last year's bridge marathon: the world championships in Albuserque. Toward the end of the querque. Toward the end of the 15 days no one was playing at his or her best, as evidenced by today's deal. Following his partner's redouble. South's two-heart rebid showed a minimum or sub-minimum opening. With full values, South would have made a forcing pass.

Declarer won the club lead in the dummy and played a trump to his nine. (If he played a heart to the ace, West could unblock the king, judging that South would take the finesse if holding the queen.) West won with the king and continued with a second club. Declarer won in the dummy, discarding a diamond from hand, and drew the remaining trumps.

Now the contract is ensured. As West is marked with the spade ace from the bidding, a low spade toward dummy's king skewers. West on the tines of Morton's Fork. If he ducks his ace, declarer wine with dummy's king, discards his spade queen on dummy's third club honor and concedes two diamond tricks. Whereas if West wins with the spade ace, declarer has 10 tricks by way of two spades, five hearts and three clubs.

But South, stifling a yawn, led the spade queen instead of a low one. Gratefully, West won with the ace and returned a spade, holding South to nine tricks when the clubs didn't break.

Perhaps it is time for the World Bridge Federation to make stamina less important than skill.
