Explosion Causes Enormous Damage

LONG BEACH, Cal., Feb. 10-(INS)-One man was perhaps fatally injured and damage of almost $1,000,000 resulted at Long Beach early today when the Signal Gasoline comphny's refining plant exploded with a terrific roar which rocked the surrounding county for miles around. Roy Thompson, 22, of Bellflower, an engineer in the refining plant is expected to die as the result of burns and injuries received when he was hurled through the building. Four oli wells valued at more than $100,000 were destroyed and five others were damaged by the fire which followed the explosion.

W. Haar, Who Next To Remus Was Biggest Bootlegger In United States NowRunning Resort Near Savannah, Ga.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staf.
Correspondent
NEW YORK. Jan. 31-Willies
Haar, former millionaire "admirals of the bootlengers," who, next to George Remus, was the biggest bestlenger the United States ever bootlegger the United States ever knew is "through" bucking the Vol-

a thousand dollars," said Haar, a tall, slender, blue-eyed, blonde man of about thirty-five who talks with a Southern drawl, "I served my time for breaking the prohibition law and it isn't worth the Haar lives in Savannah, Ga., his home all his life. He is said to be wealthy. How wealthy, he won't say, but friends of his claim he is worth $5,000,000.

"Any bank in Savannah is my the amusement resort business. I manage the resort known as Tybrisa, at Tybee, Ga., on Tybee island, eighteen miles south of Savannah, on the Atlantic seaboard, There, in the cool of the evening under the crystal balls, and in the moonlight, the young folks and old folks trip the light fantastic and enjoy themselves, and Willie sees that they have a good time."

a large part of America with tremendous shipments of booze from Nessau, in the Bahama Islands. He was the "admiral" of a fleet of boats that Bucked the waves from the Bahamas to the coast or Georgia with huge cargoes of liquor.

Mile I Bear

He bought the liquor for as low as $12 a case in the Bahama Island, sold it for $90 a case in Sav-annah and shipped it elsewhere for much higher prices— at one time getting from $110 to $130 a case in Now. York City. He used to re-ship the booze from Savannah to New York City as oil, loaded into large tanks. He also shipped the liquor as furniture and carted thousands of cases into the interior of the country in specialconstructed Packard roadsters. He had a big distributing depot at Columbus, Ga., His Packard roadsters were one of the innuvations of the rumrunning business. Each automobile, was equipped to carry sixty cases of liquor. The trucks he used had specially-built springs that averted suspicion when they were passing through towns from Savannah enroute to Washington, Cincinnati, Detroit, New York City and other points where the demand was hea-

/ Haar's trucks were also equip-ped with auxiliary gas tanks so that they could travel long distances without a stop. His Packard roadsters usually carried a small boy or girl'to alleviate suspicion. He personally supervised the operation of this far-flung business, making trips on the trucks and also making quick dashes to the Bahamas in his speed boats.

Willie grew up in the liquor business. His father was a wholesale liquor dealer in Savannah in pre-prohibition days. He has an honest looking face, charming smile and a winning personality. He has made a leigon of friends. He resembles a young football coach more than he does a boot-legger.

"I'm through with that business, however," Willie reiterates. "I was finally sent to Atlanta Penitentiary for three years but was released because of good behavior after serving eighteen months. It was in Atlanta that I met George Remus. He was a character!

"I want to say one thing-in all the time I was bootlegging I never carried a gun. The only laws I ever broke vere the Volstead Act and the law that forbids bribing prison officials for special privilege. But all that is back of me.

I am looking to the future now—and to the continued success of Tybrisa."
