After having flown 2000 miles or more, an attacking plane would not have much time left for reconnoitering to find its target. But if our coastal cities were all lighted up they would make perfect beacon lights?

Some persons may get the idea that only the bigger cities need to worry about blackouts, but such is not the case. Every little town and hamlet must be prepared to conceal all lights when there is danger of enemy planes approaching our shores. If Sanford were the only town in the state that left its lights ablaze, planes could easily locate such important air fields as Jacksonville, Oriando, Tampa, and Miami, using this point as the basis for figuring their calculations.

New Tags Will Protect Buyers Of Woolen Goods

By AMY PORTER

Warm in winter, coof in summer, thick, thin, open 'to the breezes, or closed against snow and rain—wool is all things to all men, and all women.

But for shoppers the big question up to now has been "is it really all wool and a yard wide?"

The new Wool Products I abole

wide?"

The new Wool Products Labeling Act, affective this month, will answer this and many other questions about wool.

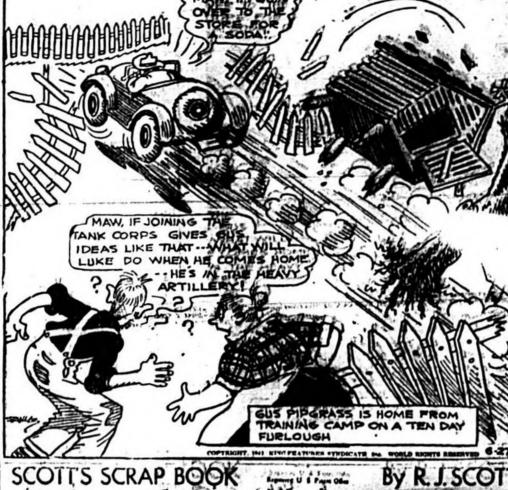

The label required by the federal law on everything containing wool will state just what sort of wool is used, and whether it is combined with some other fiber. Wool content will be identified as wool, processed wool or reused wool. If more than five percent of any fibre other than wool goes into the fabric, the label must identify it and show the percentage. Master all this and you'll be a better shopper when it's time to buy Fall woolens.

The term wool, according to the new law, means a fabric made entirely of virgin, unused wool. Reprocessed wool identifies wool which has been woven into a piece of fabric, then broken down into a fibrous state again, without ever having been worn. Reused wool means a fabric which has been worn, then sold to the ragman, to be reduced to fibers and woven again into another fabric.

The National Wool Growers' Association, sponsor of the bill, hopes women will learn to inter-The term wool, according to percent wirgin wool, but good fabries also are made of combinations of all three types, and of wool combined with rayon, silk and cotton. Army overcoats, for instance, are made of 65 percent virgin wool, 35 percent reprocessed or reused wool.

Manufacturers and stores are making a big effort to educate talespeople on wool, so if you are interested you can discover a number of more or less amasing facts about the little wool dress you are buying.

"Warm in winter, cool in summer," is literally true about weol, particularly virgin wool, The fibers are interfaced so as to form air pockets, providing insulation against heat and cold. Tor centuries Araba have worn garments of soft sheer wool to protect them from intense heat

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

The News Behind the News

What do you find in the newspaper you are holding in your hands?

On the front page, headlines; history bursting into shape before your eyes . . .

Then, on the inner pages, news you might not at first recognize as such . . . pages of advertising from your local stores. Pages of merchandise . . . an assortment of wares so varied and so complete it would take you weeks to inspect it in person!

News? Yes! Not to shake the world, perhaps, but important to matters you care about. The new dress Mary wants for the Prom (here is one illustrated — and you had no idea it would cost so little). Or Junior's new bicycle (you could not very well have guessed that the sporting-goods store was having a sale!)
