Longwood seeks administrator

LONGWOOD — A selection committee will begin narrowing the field of 108 applicants for the job of Longwood city administrator next week.

The three-member committee will select 10 candidates from whom the city commissioners will select a new administrator replacing James McFellin who resigned in November. Gerald Korman is serving as acting city administrator.

In all, 111 applications were received for the $54,000 a year job but one person withdrew and two applications were received after the Jan. 24 deadline.

A total of 69 applications were received from out-of-state and 39 came from Florida.

The selection committee is comprised of: Anthony W. Barrett, Winter Park; Warren E. (Pete) Knowles, Englewood, who is a former Sanford city manager; and Dick Simmons, Kissimmee.

The committee is expected to take a week to 10 days to make the selection of the final 10 candidates.

Cat sealed in bathtub enclosure for 45 days survives

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — "Wally" was a little cat who lived behind the wall and every time that Winnie walked the cat would surely call.

That's the short version of how Wally, who survived 45 days behind the wall of a tub enclosure, was discovered by Winnie Wagner earlier this week.

Every time she entered her bathroom, she heard a cat meowing. At first, she assumed it was outside a bathroom window. When she couldn't find a cat outside, she began to think it must be one of two things — there was a cat inside the wall or she was going crazy.

"I thought he's either there or I've lost my mind," she said Friday.

Earlier this week, she called the builder who installed the marble tub enclosure on Dec. 13. He came and opened it up.

They spotted the black cat, but couldn't catch the terrified animal.

Wagner borrowed a humane trap from Dr. Susan Ridinger at Briarcliff Animal Clinic and finally caught the cat Wednesday.

Dr. Ridinger said Friday that the year-old male cat, which now weighs about 3½ pounds, should weigh about 10 pounds. He is eating and drinking and has regained a half pound.

The veterinarian determined the cat was slightly dehydrated and malnourished. He also tested negative for feline leukemia and feline AIDS.

Wagner assumes the long-haired cat was able to get water from the condensation off of pipes under the tub. He also had pulled down some insulation and made himself a bed.

Wagner and the builder figure the cat wandered into the house while it was under construction, found a cozy place and ended up getting sealed in.

The cat remains very timid, hiding under his blanket, probably from the stress of its ordeal, Dr. Ridinger said.

"He was very, very scared. He was absolutely petrified," she said.

Animal clinic receptionist Penny Martin dubbed him "Wally," because of where he was found.

The animal hospital has received about 150 calls from people wanting to adopt the cat or help pay for his care, Dr. Ridinger said.

"He's really a little survivor," Wagner said.

New school dress code?

State official will suggest modifications

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — If Education Commissioner Doug Jamerson has his way, Seminole County students, along with students all over the state, may see some changes in what they're allowed to wear to school.

Jamerson says school dress codes increase achievement levels, camaraderie and safety. Besides, he doesn't want to buy his son $150 tennis shoes to comply with the dictates of sixth-grade fashion.

Jamerson said Friday he's not calling for a statewide dress code — and couldn't under reforms passed three years ago transferring power over classroom operations from the state to the local level.

But Jamerson said he would meet with school advisory councils all around the state and "suggest to them the idea of a modified dress code."

What Seminole County students should or should not be allowed to wear for years has been decided at the school level, except for some basic guidelines that are outlined in the code of student conduct.

SANFORD — Parents will be the compelling factor in getting area students who are opposed to a modified dress code to abide by new regulations if a proposal by Florida Education Commissioner Doug Jamerson is realized.

Area students agreed they would follow new dress requirements, but only if their parents made them.

Hannah Culp, a student at Sanford Middle School, said she would have no choice in the matter, even though she disagrees with stricter dress codes.

Prostitution sting nets 10 'johns'

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford police busted 10 more men Friday night, the second night of a sting targeting 'johns' who solicit sex from prostitutes. Nine men were arrested Thursday night.

The reverse sting operation was held near the corner of 5th Street and Sanford Avenue in the city's historic district.

In an effort to remove the prostitution trade from the streets of Sanford, the Sanford Police Department has been periodically targeting the customers who seek the services of prostitutes.

For the operation, undercover female police officers pose as prostitutes who work on the streets.

Police explained that when undercover officers are approached by potential customers, they wait until the men engage them in sexual conversation and offer them money or something else of value in exchange for sexual services.

As soon as such an offer is made, the undercover officers give a signal to their fellow officers and the man is arrested.

Sometimes, the men are charged with other crimes, such as possession of drugs. Occasionally, they will be charged with battery on a law enforcement officer if they touch the undercover officer

Student athletes competed against one another in a variety of events, vying for medals and accolades.

Some gold scales, told tales, crossed trails and bold hails

Morning! You old timers couldn't guess what I saw the other day. In fact I saw two of them. Remember the big gold colored scales that for umpteen years adorned the entrance of Roumillat & Anderson's drugstore on Birdog Corner (that's "farmer" talk for First and Park). That's right. I know exactly where the scales are. And, I'll go you one more. Remember the white porcelain scales that stood at the main entrance of the H.B. Pope Company auto parts and service station at Second and Park? I saw them too. I also know exactly where they are, too.

I told the gent who now owns both, that the drugstore scales were painted gold. He said they were white. So he cautiously made a small chip and, sure enough, under the white coating was the old gold paint.

I'm not telling where these two scales are right now because I am trying to think of a way for the General Sanford Museum to acquire them. As long as these two places of

Dog exiled that was sentenced to die

NEWARK, N.J. — A 110-pound dog sentenced to death three years ago for injuring a 10-year-old girl was given a reprieve but must leave New Jersey.

Gov. Christie Whitman on Friday gave owners Lonnie and Sandy Lehrer of Haworth 30 days to find new owners in another state for Taro, a 5-year-old Akita. Whitman has four dogs of her own.

"I am delighted that we have saved Taro's life," Lonnie Lehrer said in a statement released by the Animal Rights Law Center of Rutgers Law School.

Taro has been on death row at the Bergen County Jail since February 1991. Haworth officials ordered him destroyed after he injured Brie Halfond on Christmas Day 1990. The dog's case attracted international attention, including appeals for leniency from Brigitte Bardot.

Menendezes to face trial again

LOS ANGELES — Erik and Lyle Menendez will face trial again for the shotgun killings of their wealthy parents, whatever the price, prosecutors say. But after two juries deadlocked, the defense said convictions will be impossible.

"Be damned with how much money it's going to cost," Los Angeles County District Attorney Gil Garcetti said Friday after a mistrial was declared for Lyle. Erik's case ended Jan. 13, also with a hung jury.

The panels could not agree on whether the brothers shot their parents in cold blood for the family fortune or out of fear that Jose and Kitty Menendez were about to kill their sons to cover up years of sexual and psychological abuse.

The brothers, charged with first-degree murder, had been tried simultaneously before separate juries for six months.

U.S. may limit peacekeeping operations

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration will go to Congress next week with proposed guidelines restricting U.S. involvement in international peacekeeping operations, an administration official says.

The move follows a review over the past several months during which President Clinton and his senior officials enunciated progressively tougher limits. They include a requirement to show specific security risk and assurances that American forces would be part of a multinational mission.

Congress has "an important role to play in the consultations" and "we expect to finalize" a position shortly, an official said Friday night, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Governors want to fix health care system

WASHINGTON — When it comes to the health care system, the nation's governors agree on two things: It's a fiscal disaster and they want to fix it. Their way.

"We're afraid very much of having anything prescribed for us out of Washington. Everybody wants state flexibility," said South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, chairman of the National Governors Association, which is opening its four-day winter meeting here today.

"What I'm looking for, and what most governors are looking for, is the best solution that doesn't wreck the system," added Campbell, a Republican who may run for president in 1996.

Back in August, the bipartisan NOA adopted a resolution that began: "The American health care system is in crisis. Costs are increasing by about 10 percent each year. ... This condition is untenable, and a national solution to this crisis must be found."

think there should be stricter laws. I don't think the stricter laws will keep the guns out of criminal's hands. It begins with educating the kids before they get the guns. I agree with the $600 fee for keeping a gun. Guns belong with gun dealers, not in a pawn shop."

Darlene Witt said, "Florida right now has a waiting period. If criminals want guns, they're going to find a way to get them without buying them from a dealer."

Janette Coe said, "I do think stricter laws will help. I agree with the waiting period. There's too many people out here shooting everybody. Guns are too easy to get." Martha Norton said, "Waiting periods would help if someone was angry. Criminals will still get them."

Armilda Covington said, "Regulations and waiting periods are good. The statistics show that those that have guns are more likely to be hurt themselves by them. If someone breaks into your home sometimes you suffer because you may be charged for injuring them, that is, unless they hurt you first. I've heard that you must keep ammunition and gun separate, so by the time you put them together, it may not be of much use to keep an intruder away."

Don Stone said, "Regulations aren't going to help. They're going to get them (guns) anyway."

Scott Willard concluded by saying, "I think it's bull! I think every man should have the right to defend or protect their property. I agree with waiting periods because it protects the good guys. But...control itself won't help the problem." Many sport the bumper sticker "If Guns Were Outlawed, Only Outlaws Would Have Guns." It's hard to find a meeting ground for this subject. What's your opinion?

Friday afternoon to discuss Malloy's meeting with senior county officials Thursday. Vierra is the development arm of landowners A. Duda and Sons.

Willford said Malloy did not indicate Friday a decision whether the company will seek annexation of the 500-acre development which may soon include a Seminole Towne Center-sized mall.

"Basically, he wanted to fill me in about the meeting with the county Thursday," said Willford. "He did not indicate a decision had been reached. Yes, absolutely we're hopeful. We're ready to do anything we can for the Dudas."

Malloy could not be reached Friday, but Tom Morgan, representative of the Duda family, said while no decision had been reached, "It's logical right now that we stay in the county. They have the people and the ability to work with us. Whichever political entity we decide to go with, we hope they can expedite this process as quickly as they can."

Thursday's meeting with county officials included Malloy and other Vierra executives and legal consultants along with representatives and legal staff from the Rouse Co., a Maryland mall developer. Rouse is in close negotiations with Duda over plans to build a mall at Oviedo Crossings.

County commission chairman Dick Van Der Weide said the meeting was cordial. Van Der Weide said senior staffers stand ready to personally oversee and speed approvals needed for what is believed to be a one million square foot mall.

The developers are scheduled to meet with County Engineer Jerry McCollum and other technical staff Wednesday to discuss other aspects of the approval process.

Both McCollum and expressway director Gerald Brinton said they have received calls from engineers recently inquiring about widening State Road 426 and changing access points to Oviedo Crossings. No development details were discussed, they said.

SEMINOLE COUNTY CHARTER REVIEW COMMISSION NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING RE: POSSIBLE CHARTER AMENDMENTS

The Charter Review Commission will be conducting a Public Hearing for the purpose of taking public input and comments regarding possible amendment to the Seminole County Home Rule Charter at 7:00 P.M., or as soon thereafter as possible, on Wednesday, the 9th day of February, 1994, in the City Commission Chambers, Lake Mary City Hall, 100 North Country Club Road, Lake Mary, Florida on the following subjects:

- (1) Should the Seminole County Charter contain a provision that limits the terms of County Constitutional Officers (County Commissioners, Tax Collector, Property Appraiser, Sheriff, Supervisor of Elections and Clerk of Circuit Court)? If so, what should be the maximum length of term? Currently, neither State law nor the Seminole County Charter limits the number of terms a County Constitutional Officer can serve.
- (2) Should the Seminole County Charter provide for single-member representation for some or all County Commission seats, i.e., a commissioner would be elected by only the voters in the district the commissioner represents? Currently, County Commissioners are elected at large, i.e., Commissioners are elected by all the voters of the County, but must reside in the district they represent during their term of office.
- (3) Should the Seminole County Charter contain a provision that establishes a process that permits each County Commissioner to provide written comments to the County Manager regarding the performance of County Department Heads prior to the County Manager's evaluation of those Department Heads? Currently, the Seminole County Charter does not contain any formal process for County Commissioner input to the County Manager regarding the performance of Department Heads.
- (4) Should the Seminole County Charter be changed to provide that the County Attorney be appointed by, be responsible to and be terminated by the Board of County Commissioners? Currently, the County Attorney is appointed by the County Manager subject to the confirmation of the Board of County Commissioners, is responsible to the County Manager and is terminated by the County Manager.

At the close of public input and discussion by the Charter Review Commission relating to the above listed items, the Charter Review Commission will solicit additional public suggestions and comments regarding other possible amendments to be scheduled for a future hearing.

Citizens are encouraged to provide written suggestions and comments to the Charter Review Commission either prior to or at the Public Hearing. Written materials may be mailed to Charter Review Commission, c/o Mary Manizaris, Administrative Aide, County Services Building, Room 3020, 1101 East First Street, Sanford, Florida 32771. Citizens having questions regarding this public hearing may telephone Mary Manizaris at (407) 321-1130 ext. 7211.

Persons are advised that, if they decide to appeal any decision made at this public hearing, they will need a record of the proceedings, and, for such purpose, they may need to insure that a verbatim record of the proceedings is made, which record includes the testimony and evidence upon which the appeal is to be based.

Persons with disabilities needing assistance to participate in any of these proceedings should contact the Employee Relations Department ADA Coordinator 48 hours in advance of the meeting at 321-1130, extension 7941.

hours later as he "wheeled" me back to my wife's car he said, "You probably don't know me but I'm Frank Scott. It still didn't ring a bell even when he said he once lived on Scott Avenue in Sanford. "By any chance did you know my father?"

"Who was he?" I asked. "F.D. Scott," he replied. "My Lord, I informed him, "your dad and I used to go to Georgia-Florida football games together. He never missed an Alabama-Tennessee game." Young Scott explained, "That's because he graduated from Alabama."

Then came the bombshell. Folks, there was once a time when there was no PAC-10 agreement with the Big Ten to provide the Rose Bowl teams. In the early days the two best teams in the country played at Pasadena. One year, young Scott told me, his dad drove from Sanford to Pasadena to watch Alabama play Stanford in the Rose Bowl and then drove home again. That was when All-American Don Hutson played for the Tide.

I couldn't help but ask Frank if he was the son of F.D.'s first wife who passed away. He said he was. F.D.'s second wife was Muriel Knox, daughter of Knox Sanford physician A.W. Knox.

At one time Dr. Knox was a Lieutenant Colonel in the Florida National Guard's 124th Infantry. He was the regimental surgeon. When the Guard was activated in November 1940, Colonel Knox was a mite too old to go to war. He resigned his commission and was replaced by Sanford physician Douglas G. Scott, a major.

So, this proves you never know where you'll run into some Sanford history. This area is loaded with it!

Last Thanksgiving we thought we'd try something. We called 30 folks at random and asked a simple question: "Do you know the difference between a Puritan and a Pilgrim? You know both are closely associated with the early settlers in this country and with Thanksgiving."

Only two people knew and even they were a bit "fuzzy" about it.

In the 1600s the people in the United Kingdom were fairly upset with the Church of England and out of it two factions arose. There were the Puritans who wanted to remain in the church and "purify" it from within. Then there were the Pilgrims who said "forget it" and decided to go somewhere else and start their own church. Eventually both migrated to the new world and that's why we have Episcopalians as well as many other denominations in America today.

A lot of folks looked down on them, but they gave us both public education and many of the great universities that dot the land today.

Found out something we didn't know until the other day. Back in the 1920s two Sanford High School football greats, fullback Jim Stoinoff and halfback Dick Maxwell, both attended and played for the University of Georgia Bulldogs. I had always thought Stoinoff had gone to North Carolina. But that's where his brothers George and Robert Stoinoff went to college. Wonder if Howard Whelchel Sr., a former All-Southern guard at Georgia and who coached Sanford High a couple years, had anything to do with Jim and Dick going to Athens.

Crossed paths 'tother day with Circuit Court Judge Vernon Mize. Naw, I wasn't in his court on any charges. "Read your column each week," he allowed. "I've now been in Sanford 35 years and feel like I'm a local old timer." We can't imagine Vernon coming here 35 years ago and joining Mack Cleveland's law firm. He was city attorney most of the 10 years I served on that body. Then he became a county judge and later

"Dress codes are already bad enough. We should be able to wear what we want," Culp said. "A stricter dress code would not work at our school, but I would have to follow the rules because my parents would make me."

Culp said she does not see a need for stricter dress code requirements because "nothing would change."

Marie Swift said she would continue to wear what she thought was acceptable to her classes at Seminole High School, even if a stricter dress code were implemented.

"I would not follow it. I hate pants and dresses," she said. "I don't like the idea of a stricter dress code, it's not right. We are only there for eight hours. We should be allowed to be comfortable."

Swift's father backed her up and said that as long as she is not dressing "like down on the corner," he would stand up for his daughter, even if she was sent home from school for inappropriate dress.

"Everybody dresses differently. A dress code may just add to the problems in schools," he said.

Seminole High School student Madeline Brown said that dress code requirements should be left alone.

"I think its fine the way it is," she said.

Brown said that even though she does not like the idea of stricter requirements, her parents would "help" her to follow new rules.

"I guess I would have to follow the rules," she said. "Anyway, if you want an education, you have to follow the rules."

But not all students agree that a dress code is a bad idea.

"I guess it would be alright as long as we can wear shorts," Lyman High School student Christopher Brad Bryant said. "Some of the ways people are dressed is outrageous."

Bryant suggested that rules regarding dress codes incorporate make-up, jewelry, cross-dressing and other "unacceptable" attire, but wants hats removed from the list.

"We should be able to wear hats, they are not hurting anyone and they do not interfere with school," he said.

April Spotts, a student at Lakeview Middle School, thinks that stricter dress codes would improve students attention to classwork.

"It sounds right," she said. "I don't like mini-skirts and halter tops being worn in school. It's not appropriate."

At least one student, Lashon Darden, thinks that a stricter dress code would solve some of the problems facing students and schools today.

"I'd dress like the rule says," Darden said. "It (stricter dress requirements) would change most of the fights at school."

According to Darden, students at Sanford Middle School routinely get in fights over clothing.

"Some people take jewelry, clothing and shoes at school," Darden said. "It happens just about every day."

Darden's friends, Dwayne Walker and Henry Perkin, said they'd follow the rules as long as there are "no uniforms."

Seminole High School student Olivia Myers cautioned school officials to think stricter regulations over very carefully before implementing them.

"I don't think it will work," she said. "Everyone is already too strict on teenagers. It may cause a lot of students to drop out. Most students drop out because the rules are too strict anyway."

The code states that Seminole County students have the "right to be able to learn without being offended or distracted by the clothing or appearance of others" and that school administrators have the "right to appraise any current fashion or fad and determine whether it is appropriate for school wear."

The schools determine what is appropriate for their particular student population. What may be acceptable at one school may be taboo at another, though most schools try to conform to a similar code.

Students at all Seminole County schools must clothing and hair styles that are "not harmful, disruptive or hazardous to health or safety"; they must wear shoes at all times and they must be able to wear shorts or skirts that are "appropriate for school in the opinion of the principal."

They may not wear "anything suggestive, such as see-through clothing; halters, backless dresses or tops, tube tops, tank tops, muscle shirts or any clothing which may be distracting unless it is covered; shirts or blouses tied at the midriff; caps or hats; curlers or other hair grooming aides; sunglasses inside the building or clogs or flip-flops."

Jamerson said his idea of an appropriate code was dark pants with blue or black knit shirts for the boys and slacks and skirts for the girls.

Other public schools in Florida have already experimented with dress codes, Jamerson said.

"They have found out that the achievement levels have increased and the ability to have camaraderie is increased," he said.

The Seminole County school board has generally opposed a strict dress code or a uniform for the students in the past.

The new commissioner told reporters Friday a dress code would make school a safer place to be because teachers and principals could more easily pick out youngsters who don't belong at the school.

"A lot of the problems come from outsiders who come there to prey on kids," he said.

Jamerson said he wasn't trying to make children conformists.

"My idea is not to stifle their individuality," he said.

The Education Commissioner said improvements to security would not be the only benefits of a dress code. Parents' wallets may also be safer, he said.

Jamerson, appointed last month to replace Betty Castor after she left the position to become president of the University of South Florida, cited a dispute he has had with his own sixth-grader.

"He's been trying to get me to buy a pair of these $150 tennis shoes, which I refuse to buy," Jamerson said. "But a lot of parents are buying those things."

However, attempts to be in vogue may backfire and identify children as potential victims, he said.

"Those kids who want to be in the in-crowd but don't have those kinds of things will victimize children who do," he said.

Job search made easier

Students who needed a chance at a part-time job or even a career later on in life, got plenty of ideas where to start at Wednesday's career fair at Seminole High School.

Each year the fair is held to aid students in choosing a direction and colleges come to help with steps to make it there.

Representatives from job fields ranging from Disney to the armed forces were on hand to answer all questions and hand out plenty of information.

Sea World of Florida was on stand-by to recruit new employees for their Spring Break program.

Every year, if students are looking for a way to make some extra money over their vacation, Sea World gives select kids the opportunity to be employed at one of the biggest tourist attractions in Florida.

Jaime Dillman

Jobs range from merchandising to food service and if the student has a good report at the end of the week they get a chance to go back and work for "the whale" again.

Most of all who participated last year enjoyed the experience and didn't mind the 30 minute bus ride to and from work (Sea World provided transportation).

And free tickets after a job well-done wasn't anything to scoff at either.

If anyone had ever been interested in the armed forces they had the best chance to get information.

Representatives were there from the Army, Marines, and the Air Force.

Officers from all three branches were present to dispell any horror stories or myths about their specific programs.

Recruiters were also on standby to make appointments with possible cadets, or privates.

Thanks goes out to the administration and faculty of Seminole for giving us these sources of information.

Your help has guided us to where we want to go.

Would you buy something from these guys on MTV?

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Would you buy anything from Beavis and Butt-head? MTV apparently thinks so.

MTV Networks said Wednesday it is launching a home shopping test on its MTV, VH-1 and Nick at Nite cable television channels. If the four- to six-month test is successful, MTV Networks will consider launching a stand-alone shopping channel, company chairman and chief executive officer Tom Freston said from New York.

"We've been working on this for well over a year," Freston said. "But we said, 'Hey, before we move forward (with a shopping channel), we have the luxury of testing it on our own networks.'"

Beginning in April, four hours of home shopping per week will be shown on the three channels — but don't look for the standard merchandise.

"This will be the zircumless effort," Freston said, in reference to the ubiquitous jewelry sold on many home shopping channels. "It will have a look and feel very different from what you're used to seeing."

MTV Networks' home shopping shows will mostly offer compact discs, cassettes, music videos, concert tickets and merchandise and "lifestyle-related clothing," such as trendy footwear, Freston said.

Students in Adrienne Medlock's class at Lyman High School have some incentive to improve their behavior in school. With the cooperation of area businesses, she offers the students rewards such as t-shirts, hats, cups, pizzas and attractions tickets. She believes that academic performance can't improve until behavior is improved. Some of the businesses that have taken part in the effort are: Pizza Hut, Chic-Fil-A, Burger King, Popeyes, radio station XL106.7, WOFL-TV, Olive Garden, radio station WDBO, Red Lobster and WCPX-TV. She encourages other teachers to contact area businesses to use such a program with special needs students. She said the businesses she contact were very willing to help. Here, students Scotty Karanicas, DeShon Cuyler and Jerry Cook join Medlock in showing off some of the items they could earn for good behavior.

Local researchers study treatment

Researchers at Winter Park Memorial Hospital's Cancer Care Center are participating in a national study to determine if a popular acne-fighting drug can help prevent a second primary tumor from developing in patients who have had squamous-cell cancer of the pharynx, larynx or oral cavity.

According to Steven G. Lester, M.D., a radiation oncologist on the staff at the Cancer Care Center, patients with cancer of the oral cavity, larynx and pharynx frequently develop a second primary tumor after they have received treatment with surgery and/or radiation therapy for their initial tumor.

In the local study, half the patients involved are receiving 30 mg a day of 13-cis Retinoic Acid (Accutane) and half are getting a placebo.

They are given the drug or the placebo for three years and followed for another four years.

They are looking for patients who have undergone surgery or radiation therapy for stage I or stage II of the disease. They must be free of the disease and at a point in follow up at least 16 weeks, but no longer than three years following the initial treatment.

If you would like more information about the study or other clinical trials available through the Cancer Care Center, call 646-7777.

Hop for those who can't

More than 100 child care centers throughout central Florida will be participating in the 1994 Muscular Dystrophy Association's (MDA) Dino-Mite Hop-A-Thon the week of Jan. 31 through Feb. 4.

Pre-school and after-school care children will hop for two minutes to raise funds donated by family and friends to support MDA research and patient support programs.

Prior to the Hop, each center will present a disability awareness program designed around the theme "Everybody's Different. Nobody's Perfect."

For more information call MDA at 677-6665.

Prostate cancer

Avoiding treatment often best option for prostate cancer

By DANIEL O. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — When it comes to treating prostate cancer, less is often more.

Researchers reported today that many men with early prostate cancer have such slow-growing tumors that "watchful waiting" — what doctors call doing nothing — can be a sensible alternative to the usual approach of radiation or surgery.

Prostate cancer is the most common tumor among men and their second leading cancer killer after lung cancer. How to treat it is often a dilemma, because radiation and surgery can carry side effects, such as impotence and incontinence.

The new study found that men with early-stage prostate cancer who receive no treatment have an excellent chance of still being alive after 10 years — almost as good as those who undergo aggressive treatment.

"The message is not to abandon treatment," said the study's author, Dr. Gerald Chodak. "But there are too many patients who are not being counseled about their options. This shows that watchful waiting is a reasonable option."

However, Dr. John Long of New England Medical Center cautioned that the best approach for individual patients is often unclear.

Early detection addressed during Men's Health Forum

SANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital and Central Florida Urology Associates are presenting Men's Health Forum, a free series devoted to answering questions about men's health issues. The first class will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 8, from 7-8:30 p.m. in the hospital's classroom.

Urologists Michael Friedman, M.D., and Charles Witten, M.D., will discuss "Early Detection of Prostate Cancer." Included will be information on prostate cancer, benign prostatic hypertrophy (BPH) and methods for detection, including PSA tests.

Prostate cancer is the most common cancer of men and the second leading cause of cancer death among men over the age of 55. However, prostate cancer can be successfully treated if caught early, and can be treated even in its advanced stages. Because prostate cancer can develop and spread with no warning signs, early detection is critical to successful treatment.

The class is free and no reservations are required. Refreshments will be served.

"There clearly is a role for doing nothing," he said. "But for whom is one to recommend: Let's do nothing? This paper does not do much to help us answer that question."

Dr. John Libertino of the Lahey Clinic said he opposes watchful waiting for men in their 40s, 50s and 60s because of their relatively long life expectancies.

"If I had prostate cancer now, I'd want it out," said Libertino.

cancer involving 828 men. The results were published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Among the findings of the study:

- 87 percent of men with low-grade tumors, those that look least ominous microscopically, are still alive after 10 years, and 81 percent are free of spreading cancer.

- Among those with intermediate-grade tumors, 87 percent are also alive after 10 years, but only 58 percent have escaped spreading cancer.

- The prospects are much worse for men with high-grade tumors: 34 percent are still alive after 10 years, and 26 percent have avoided spreading cancer.

The study did not directly compare watchful waiting with more aggressive treatment. However, other research finds that among men with low-grade tumors getting surgery or radiation, about 93 percent are still alive after 10 years — only a slight advantage over watchful waiting.

"If you live long enough, you are likely to get into trouble from the cancer if you don't do something about it," Chodak said. "But it may take a long time."

Among those receiving aggressive treatment, he noted, "any side effect will occur now. Any benefit won't occur for many years."

Safe from the elements

The Central Florida Regional Hospital Auxiliary donated a bird house handcrafted by Howard Bean, left. Bean's creation, which took about 40 hours to build, will house 18 Purple Martin families. Accepting the donation is Roy Vinson, chief executive officer. Present is Jane Back, president of the auxiliary.

Fitness Factor

Here are some tips to make exercising easier

By IRA DREYFUS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Want to start exercising again?

Making a resolution is easier than making a habit, as some New Year's exercisers already are finding out.

Surveys indicate that half of American adults are fit-and-starters exercisers, according to researcher Rod K. Dishman. About another third are never-starters, and the rest are active enough to get some health benefits, he said.

"About two in four people start an exercise program during any year, and one of those two will stop in six months or less,"

said Dishman, an exercise physiologist at the University of Georgia.

The American Heart Association recognizes physical inactivity as one of the top risk factors for heart disease. But Dishman goes further: "A good scientific argument can be made that physical inactivity is the No. 1 health problem facing the United States."

Compared with people who work out at least 20 minutes three times a week, inactive people have twice the likelihood of heart disease, Dishman said.

That's better than the 2.5 times higher risk that smokers have over nonsmokers, Dishman said. But there are almost three times as many sedentary Americans as there are smokers, so the overall impact of inactivity is greater, he said.

Researchers like Dishman know of ways to help you get restarted after your initial attempt at exercising fails. Dishman spoke about the methods recently in Clearwater, at the AHA's meeting for science writers.

Dishman considers it important to recognize that exercise is not just an act, but a group of acts. You have to decide to exercise, choose a particular form of exercise, plan how, start, make it a habit and recommit after any backsliding.

Dishman considers inactivity more than a failure of willpower. His research found many reasons for failure, including wrong ideas about how exercise works and how quickly it can get results. But he also has found causes of success.

"Confidence is best increased by a successful exercise history — the Catch-22 of exercise adherence," Dishman said. So the trick is to get someone on the right track is to help him believe in his own success.

Beginning exercisers should disabuse themselves of hope for a quick fix, because it makes them likely to give up when they don't find one, Dishman said. "Many measurable or noticeable fitness gains can require 10 to 20 weeks of sustained effort," he said.

While general long-range goals are good, Dishman recommends specific short-term goals to give you a feeling of success when you attain them. He'd also have you be loose in your short-term planning, so you don't quit in frustration when things don't go right once in a while. And he believes in rewards — planning something nice for yourself that you won't get if you don't exercise.

Dishman suggests building exercise into your schedule, and giving it priority, so you don't drop it in favor of something else for that time period. To make it harder to talk yourself out of exercising, make sure you already have whatever equipment you need where you need it to exercise.

Do things you like, at least to start, Dishman said — you can go to other forms of exercise, which may be more healthful, later. And choose an intensity that lets you feel at least as good when you end as you did when you started, he said — you don't have to burn yourself up to get a healthful workout.

For that matter, you needn't even become fit to get some value from exercise, Dishman said. Studies indicate that moderate activity such as walking confers a large proportion of the health benefits gained by people who do fitness activities such as jogging.

"Your exercise program should make you feel better," Dishman said. "If it doesn't, change it until it does."

Her head then crashed into a timing post, she lost her helmet, tumbled over several times and appeared to have been hit by one of her skis that snapped free.

Maier, 26, was flown by helicopter to an emergency accident hospital at Murau, 15 miles east of this Bavarian resort, but a team of surgeons was unable to save her life.

Greyhounds advance in chase for 4th state crown

By RYAN ANDERSON
 Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — Lyman High School's quest for its fourth state championship in girls soccer advanced a step Friday night, when the Greyhounds pounded the Lake Brantley Patriots 5-1 in the 5-A District 3 championship game.

State champs in 1985, 1991, and 1992, the Greyhounds (24-1) are gunning for their third crown in four years. Lyman's attempt at three in a row was ruined in the semifinals of last year's district tournament by the Lake Howell Silver Hawks, a game that is still on the Greyhounds minds.

"We remember what happened last year in the district tournament," Lyman coach Gary Barnett said. "They don't even want me to talk about it because it is something we are trying hard not to repeat."

For the first 18 minutes of Friday night's game, it looked as though the Patriots (16-9) had found a way to slow the potent Greyhounds offense by keeping Lyman on the defensive.

Sara Kane broke the scoreless tie and ignited the Greyhounds with a crossing shot past Patriot keeper Alyssa O'Brien with 22:07 left in the first half. Deborah Larsen converted a Danya Harris corner kick with 10:06 left in the first half giving the Greyhounds a 2-0 halftime lead.

"They were ready to play tonight," said Barnett. "I didn't have to do a whole lot to prepare them. I'm very pleased with the way we have been playing."

"We are finishing very well and we are scoring goals. You don't win games unless you score goals. We scored a couple of goals in the first half and then we pretty much sealed the game in the second half."

Lyman came out strong in the second half, scoring with 36:04 and 34:19 left in the game, Danielle Garrett setting up Kane for Lyman's third goal and assisting Harris on the fourth goal.

The Patriots' lone score came on a header by Katie Tullis off of a cross by Kim Shrum with 28:32 left in the game.

Harris finished the scoring for Lyman with a direct kick over O'Brien's head with 4:17 left in the game.

"Despite the score, that was probably one of the toughest games we have played all year," Barnett said. "Lake Brantley really played us hard. They came out and pressured us and held us in check."

Lyman outshot Lake Brantley 27-11. O'Brien finished with 15 saves and Lyman keeper Cheryl Roberts had six.

The Greyhounds advances to the 5A-Region II championship on Tuesday night against District 3 champion Jacksonville-Mandarin. According to the Florida High School Activities Association, the game will be played at 6 p.m. at Lyman High School Stadium.

"I think everybody realizes that we are in a 'one game at a time' deal and there are possibly four games left in our season," Barnett said. "We know that if we don't play just right on Tuesday, we won't be playing on Friday."

"As tough as we played tonight we know that we can't just go out and waltz through things from here."

Junior point guard Eric Roberts (No. 14) did a little bit of everything for Seminole Friday night, collecting 15 points, five rebounds, six steals and 10 assists to lead Arrow Force II to a 77-59 over neighborhood rival Lake Mary. The win was the seventh in a row for Seminole.

Arrow Force II rips Lake Mary

SANFORD — So much for fatigue.

After Thursday night's win over Wymore Tech, Seminole High School basketball coach Bob Traina hoped his team wouldn't be too physically or mentally tired for Friday night's Seminole Athletic Conference battle with backyard neighbor Lake Mary.

He need not have worried as Arrow Force II got off to another blazing start and went on to best the Rams 77-59 before a near-capacity crowd at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

"It was a good effort, but I think we were tired," said Traina. "After the quick start, we had too many turnovers and made a lot of mistakes that we did not make against Wymore Tech. We didn't seem quite as focused either, maybe that was because we were overly excited because we were playing Lake Mary."

The varsity game capped off a big night that saw the Lake Mary freshman edge Seminole, 69-68, and the Ram junior varsity come from behind to nip the Tribe, 75-73.

After Lake Mary took a 4-2 lead on a pair of layups by Kent Pritchard, the Arrow Force II defense took over, forcing 10 turnovers and

Smoking airline

COCOA BEACH — Raleigh-Durham International Airport could become the home base for an airline for smokers, a Florida businessman says.

"Our original plan was to base our operations at an airport in central Florida, but that fell through," Mickey Richardson said from his home in Cocoa Beach, Fla. "Now we're looking at either RDU or Lexington, Kentucky."

A Boeing 727 Smokers Express was supposed to leave Raleigh today, filled with tobacco enthusiasts going to Washington to lobby Congress against tax increases on cigarettes. But there wasn't enough demand for the $345 round-trip tickets.

Nonetheless, Richardson, a former Walt Disney executive, said he will go ahead with plans to create the airline.

An airport spokesman said he was unaware of any discussions with Richardson.

"Maybe he has talked to someone with the state government, but we haven't heard anything about it," said Dan Bruneau, the spokesman.

Graham's work lauded

NICK PFREIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — During December, Senator Bob Graham spent one of his workdays at Recoton, on Lake Emma Road in Lake Mary. It was Graham's 281st such workday.

Several years ago, Graham promised to spend time out in the workday world, not only meeting business leaders, but rubbing elbows with laborers on the job.

His recent visit to Recoton has been highlighted in Florida Business, a monthly publication distributed statewide by the Florida Chamber of Commerce. Graham was assigned to assemble a video transfer system and stereo headphones, during the 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. shift. He also had lunch with a number of workers.

Following his job, Graham met with Recoton management officials, and discussed various aspects of government work, primarily as it pertains to private industry.

According to the publication, Recoton President Robert L. Borchardt told Graham, "Consumer market growth in Mexico and Canada will benefit our industry, but most importantly it will benefit our employees here in the U.S."

Borchardt said the company anticipates continued growth under NAFTA, with an expected increase in exports to both Canada and Mexico.

The Recoton plant, on Lake Emma Road, has been highly commended for not only helping supply employment in the area, but for a recent modernization of the plant and offices, which add a modern touch to the physical appearance of the community.

Reorganization puts more pop in RC

MIAMI — A reorganized Royal Crown Cola Co. has put more fizz in its sales.

A management shakeup and a renewed emphasis on bottlers helped produce the soft-drink maker's first increase in case sales in three years, the company said Thursday.

"We're basically relaunching the business, in a way to look at it," said John Carson, who took over as president in May. "Although the business has continued to hold up remarkably well, it needs rebirth and reinvigoration."

Royal Crown was bought from DWG Inc. last year by investors Nelson Peltz and Victor May when Victor Papper gave up control while under scrutiny by a federal judge and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Carson's mission is to erase years of corporate neglect, starting with its 100 franchise distributors.

"They have to be in sync with us in terms of our goals and objectives and the way we're going to develop the business," Carson said. "That dialogue had been absent for the last five or six years."

The fifth-largest U.S. soft-drink company, one of four companies kept by the new Triarc Cos., has been making big changes since Carson came from Cadbury Beverages.

He brought in four soft-drink industry veterans and kept one DWG executive while pushing for fresh marketing and stronger relationships with bottlers to make Royal Crown more competitive in a market dominated by Coca-Cola and Pepsi.

Supermarkets rang up $9.7 billion in carbonated beverage sales last year, and Royal Crown's RC, Diet Rite, Neht and Kick brands held a 3.5 percent share in the year ended last May, according to Information Resources Inc., a market research firm.

Open house today

Come join Eunice Martin at open house on her 93rd birthday today, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., at her home, 2614 Country Club

Road. All are invited to the party which is hosted by her nieces.

At her 90th birthday open house which attracted about 100 guests, Eunice said, "I thoroughly enjoyed every minute of it. It was wonderful. It was the biggest day of my life."

Eunice has a lot of stories to tell. She fondly recalls life from the horse and buggy days on through to the space age. She remembers playing where the Idyllwild school is located today. Eunice was born in that area, known as Upsala, Jan. 27, 1901, to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Olin Tyner and is believed to be the only second generation Swede left in Sanford brought here by Gen. Henry Shelton Sanford. She was one of 10 children but never had children of her own.

Artist finds inspiration in painting God's creatures

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — An ongoing love affair with the great outdoors has been the driving force behind Siler and her hobbies. She has many of her beautiful works of art displayed in her comfortable Sanford home, ranging from paintings on the walls, paintings on wood, rock and shells, and numerous craft projects. Upon entering her house one may almost stumble on a cozy blue and white cat which is another of Siler's creations. The cat was a large rock that she found and painted to resemble a cat curled up and napping.

"God's creatures never cease to amaze me," she said. "I think when you take the time to really look at nature it helps you to really understand why we need to protect the environment for future generations. Then they will be able to enjoy the wonders of wildlife." Siler told of times that she could be totally enthralled with a bird or with another animal outside her window. She could sit for hours watching them nest or play.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio, Siler has been in Sanford now for 40 years and married for 33 years to her husband, Don. Her dogs, Toby, a poodle, and Jake, a retriever, are also another source of inspiration to her. She joked that her pets go "from one extreme to the other."

Recalling her first involvement with the art work and the person who contributed to her interest, she said, "My fifth grade art teacher attracted me to art. We worked in clay and paints, and finger painting. It just stayed with me."

Watercolors are her favorite mediums to work with, and in her opinion, the most See Artist, Page 7B

Being a young woman with a family to raise, and truly loving people and wanting to help them, Mosley accepted the challenge of raising her small children. She also wished to give of herself as an angel of mercy so in 1989 she began working for the Seminole County Health Department's migrant project. While working there she attended School of Nurse Practitioners, University Hospital, Jacksonville. In 1977 she graduated with honors and she then began working as a nurse practitioner for Seminole County Health Department.

On Thursday, Jan. 6, Mosley was honored at a retirement celebration. The celebration was held in the education room of the health department. Dr. Jorge DeJu, director of the department, presented Mosley with a plaque from the state for her 24 years of dedicated service at the health department and for 32 years of service with the state of Florida.

Hot rodder

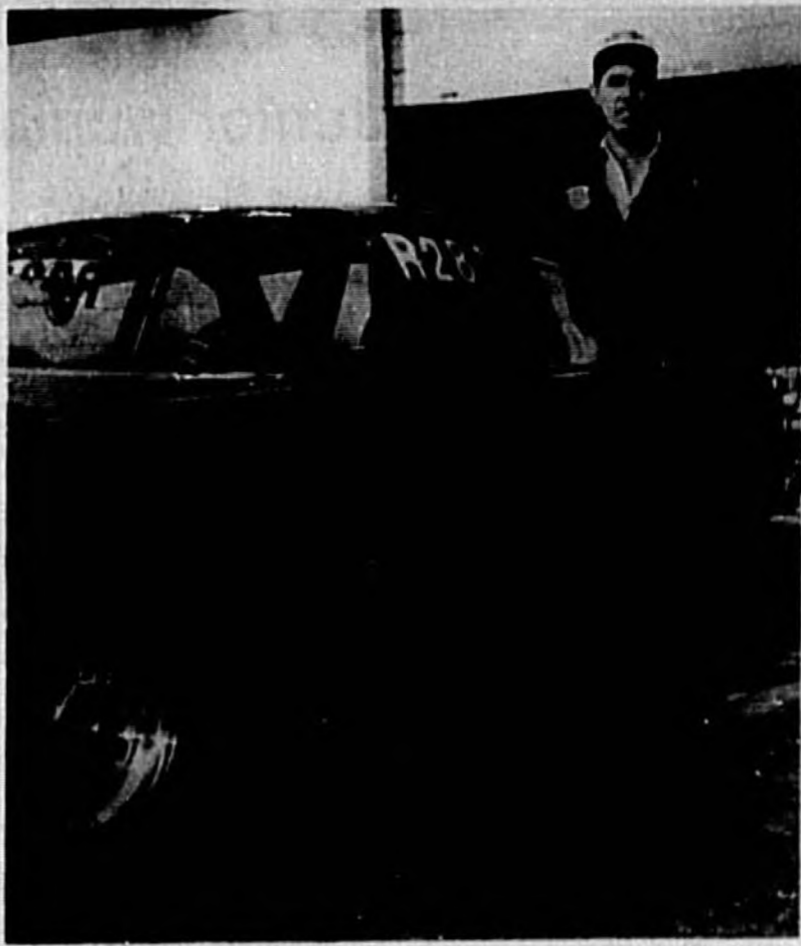

After 8 years away, racing is still in his blood

By ED KORGAN
Herald Correspondent

Racing hot cars is in his blood. Danny Robertson, a 1974 graduate of Seminole High School, has the racing fever. It started while he was still a student in school when he owned a hot rod and has continued through the years and many cars he has built and owned.

He races at Orlando Speed World in Bithlo, twice a year in Bradenton and Gainesville and a trip or two to West Palm Beach each year. He said, "What we do is bracket racing. It's a cheap man's version of drag racing. It doesn't cost as much to build what you have got. You race against other racers who have got pretty close to what you have got. It works somewhat like this. You take the combination time of three or four trial runs and that is what you try to run at to beat the other racer. It pits driver against driver and we are running in times between 11 and 12.99 seconds to cover the quarter mile track. It now gets tricky because we try to run as fast as we can to win but we cannot go over the averaged time of the four trial runs or we will be disqualified."

There is money involved in these races. Last weekend he raced in Bithlo and there was $1,000 put up as prize money. Some tracks pay up to $5,000, but the payoff goes farther back in the standings (from the first to the eighth place finishers). This type of payoff helps many drivers pay back the debts they have made building their cars. Occasionally there are payoffs of up to $10,000 and that would be at tracks like Gainesville or West Palm Beach. On many occasions Danny placed in the top 10 of his class.

Robertson quit the racing circuit when he got married 12 years ago. He stayed away for eight years. About the same time most all of his buddies that he had been meeting at the track and the Steak and Shake sold their cars. "I guess we were all tired and thought we had outgrown the sport," he claimed. "I didn't go to a race track for almost eight years. I was having a family. We had a baby, bought a home and furniture and just didn't seem to have the money for the sport that I liked so much."

He continued, "Then one day a friend said, 'Let's go to the track.' Well, I had postponed that for a long time because I knew what would happen. I said, well, okay, and we went down there. It wasn't but a few weeks and we had a car. This was about four years ago. After two cars which I rebuilt I finally came upon the car I run now. It is a 1978 Chevrolet Malibu. I am really into it now. I just can't seem to stay away from it. I can't even sit and watch without looking for a car to drive."

Robertson explained that drag racing is really a clean sport. There are no fights, no drugs and absolutely no drinking in the pit area. When you are caught with a can of beer in your hand, in the pit area, you are run off. The officials do not tolerate anything that is close to that.

Many people think that racing is a dangerous sport. In many ways it is, but it is a sport that just beckons Danny on. He explained, "There are only two cars going at one time. We average 115 to 124 mph and are heavily roll-barred, (have) seat belts, restraints and padding. Our clothing is fireproofed, but we only have to wear a jacket. The professional racers wear the complete coveralls. You've more potential of getting killed by a drunk driver on a public highway than on the drag strip. You go 11 seconds racing and you are through. You idle back and get back into line and run again. This happens as many as eight to 10 times a meet."

Danny does realize that there will be one day that he will consider retiring, but until that day comes he plans to go full bore and enjoy the adventure that he gains from drag racing.

Simple words of comfort help to cope with loss

DEAR ABBY: My brother recently died from an intentional overdose of prescription drugs. He was 31.

Although it was a shock at the time, it was a suicide waiting to happen. Bill (his real name) was manic-depressive, and we (his family) had bailed him out of some serious situations. I know in my heart that I did everything I could, but it finally reached the point when I realized it was useless — consequently, I had no contact with Bill for the last few years.

We learned from the corner that Bill was unemployed, homeless and HIV-positive. He died alone on a beach in Honolulu. We decided to have him buried in Honolulu, because we knew he loved it there.

We had an evening memorial service locally for friends and family. A few of my co-workers came. Several with whom I socialized outside of work did not attend. Neither did my boss. They never said a word to me about my brother's death. Words cannot express the hurt I felt.

Death is an uncomfortable topic. Suicide is even more uncomfortable. Regardless of the circumstances, a loss through death is painful. It is the support of those around us that helps us get through it.

I hope you print this. Perhaps others will learn from it. It's important to know that even the simplest acknowledgment of a person's loss is no small thing. You may use my name.

LORI HAZEN, SALINE, MICH.
DEAR LORI: My heart goes out to you. There's an important message in your letter.

I've had many letters from readers who have lost a loved one through suicide, and because many mistakenly assumed it might embarrass the family to be reminded of the tragedy, they simply acted as though it never happened. A loss is a loss — regardless of the circumstances.

Readers, a few words acknowledging that loss will be greatly appreciated. A card, a note, even a telephone call saying, "I'm sorry about your loss," would be comforting.

DEAR ABBY: I had to laugh when I read the letter from Nancy Fox, who warned her 44-year-old son to be careful as he left the house go go on a bike ride.

My 82-year-old mother once told my brother — a 50-year-old man — that he had better not drink coffee so late in the day or he might not be able to sleep.

I pounced on her, saying, "For heaven's sake, Mom, he's old enough to decide for himself whether he can have coffee or not so late in the day!"

The guilt set in when I remembered doing the same thing not long ago when I said to my married daughter, "Dear, aren't you too hot in that sweater?"

She kindly replied, "If I get too hot, I'll take it off, Mom."

No matter how old your children are, it's hard to get out of the habit of mothering them. My New Year's resolution is to kick that "mothering habit."

From now on, I'll mother my grandchildren.

challenging. She also favors the unusual natural rocks which she forms into realistic looking animals. Her vacations in North Carolina and Tennessee have provided treasure hunts in looking for special rocks. It's not rare that others will phone Siler to ask for her touch of genius in painting their very own pet on a special rock. Her inspiration for her rock art actually came from Branson, Mo. "I saw some boulders painted into wild animals like deer, big racoons and buffalo," she said. "They were just beautiful but it would take a tractor to move them." Siler decided a small version would be much easier to carry to art festivals. "So that's where I got my idea," she said. "I just converted buffaloes into dogs and cats."

She explained that the large rocks in Missouri sold from $35 up to hundreds of dollars.

Although many award ribbons have been received through her art work, Siler said "It's the smile and compliment of a child that really makes my day. If you take your work too seriously you lose the fun of it. Children have a way of keeping it fun." She views children as her biggest fans. "They will drag their parents to my booth at outdoor festivals to look at the wildlife," she said.

Siler tries not to enter too many festivals and craft shows because she and her husband must do a lot to set up the booth and in the preparation of her display. This tends to be a lot of hard work so she is somewhat choosy about her participation. Her hobby was cited as one of her outlets for relaxing so too many shows could actually defeat that purpose. "The key to having a good hobby is making time for it," she said. "It's a great stress reliever."

Siler has taken several courses in art at Seminole Community College. "I loved them (the courses)," she said. "You never stop learning and someone always has a trick or two to show you." She advises the person intrigued by art or drawing, "Just get a drawing pad and pencil and practice, practice, practice."

Being an active member in the Woman's Club of Sanford has given her many sources of interest. "I enjoy meeting new people and the monthly meetings are always so interesting," she said. "We have guest speakers and the Sanford club is very active in their arts department. Members have won many awards in district and state levels. All the women have something to add that makes for an interesting group." Sewing, photography, crafts and painting are some of the many areas Siler mentioned that the club is involved in.

Siler is a member of the Congregational Christian Church in Sanford. She volunteers many hours in the children's church program. Displayed in her art room of her home is one of the many craft projects she has created with the children there. "At Christmas I helped the children make a Happy Birthday, Jesus wreath," she said.

Whether busy at home, at club meetings and activities, or at church, Siler always takes time to smell the roses. Her preferred pastime would actually resemble one in finding the beauty the Creator has produced and then capturing it in her own mediums, the very rocks and wood that were left by Him for us to enjoy.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Jan. 30, 1994

A revived relationship could turn out to be of immense importance to you in the year ahead. It's with an individual who has what you lack and visa versa.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It might take a little extra probing today to figure out a solution to a problem. If you stick with it, however, and get it resolved, it'll enhance your self-esteem. Aquarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be extremely careful today you do not prematurely rush to judgment. Take ample time to weigh every aspect if you have to make a critical decision.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today it might be wiser to listen to your sentiments and compassions rather than your logic when dealing with co-workers. Your heart could be smarter than your head.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Sometimes when we try very hard not to make mistakes, it can be the very time we make foolish errors. You'll be okay if you relax and just do the best you can.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to effectively complete something you start out to do today it will take commitment on your behalf. You can't let outside influences get you off course.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Think for yourself today or else you might be caught up in a situation where someone with whom you've closely involved will make unproductive decisions for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There are certain things you can do for yourself today which do not have to be done by expensive experts. However, know your limitations and don't attempt the impossible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today if you're involved in some type of activity that induces friendly competition, don't make winning or being first unduly important.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Instead of moaning about the bad hand you've been dealt today, take your mind off yourself and try doing things for others. It will cure what ails you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't confuse self-doubts with an inquiring mind today. The latter represents constructive thinking, the former invites failure.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A relationship you recently established with someone in your field of endeavor might be able to help you today where your career is concerned. He/she will be delighted to assist.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might be a bit more popular today than other members of your peer group. Something unique may transpire which will show you the value of being right.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Just because something isn't working out the way you anticipated is no reason to stand there and take it. Your fate is in your own hands. Make the necessary changes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you've been hoping to achieve that can not be done without support from others might take a turn for the better today. Move on it while the opportunity is evident.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Personal profit is a strong probability today, but you must do things in ways that will make the right things happen. Don't leave it all up to Lady Luck.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to be a good leader today, a couple of things might be required of you. One, is to set a good example and, two, is to be a bit of a risk taker.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're a good achiever today and what you attempt to do you're likely to do quite well. Others won't be envious of your accomplishments, because you'll know how to involve them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Friends mean a lot to you, as you do to them. Loyalty is the major reason why you have so many and this attribute might be demonstrated again today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Important things you do today might produce a companion effect. For example, things look good for you both financially and where your status are factors.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Do you know someone who is perfect? Of course not. Do you know someone who thinks he is perfect? Probably. And George Bernard Shaw was in characteristic vein when he said, "The longer I live the more I see that I am never wrong about anything, and that all the pains I have so humbly taken to verify my notions have only wasted my time."

At bridge, it is sometimes possible to play perfectly: to find the line that works whatever the distribution. South had the chance in today's deal, but when his ship came in, he was standing at the train station.

West led the spade 10. Since the contract was in danger only if East won a trick and switched to a diamond through the king, declarer called for dummy's spade king and immediately finessed the club queen. West played perfectly, ducking his king smoothly. Now, of course, if South leads a heart to his 10, nine tricks are ensured. But South had been fooled. He led a club to his 10.

West grabbed the trick with the king and exited with a club. Now South's goose had been cooked. He cashed the A-K of hearts, hoping to drop the queen. Then he cashed his three spade tricks, the dummy and East both discarding diamonds.

Finally, declarer led a third heart, hoping West had the queen. If so, West must either lead a heart to South's 10 or lead a diamond, allowing South to win a trick with his king. But East won with the queen and switched to the diamond 10. The defenders took the last three tricks in diamonds to defeat the contract.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder. In care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.
