Dog days of summer spark rise in attacks

SANFORD — The number of incidents in which an animal bites a human have risen dramatically, a county animal control officer said.

Seminole County is averaging over 90 attacks per month, but that number soared in June. Sixty-three bite reports have been filed in the first 12 days of August.

"June was the worst month I've seen in this county," said Linda Cohen, Bite and Education coordinator for Seminole County Animal Control. "We had a total of 103 bites in June. Before that, March of this year had seen the highest number reported at 101."

Recently computerized statistics for May, 1993, found 72 bite cases, and 90 were recorded in July.

As of Thursday, 63 have been SANFORD — While the fear of Friday the 13th goes back to ancient times only a few people still take precautions to ward off evil as we approach the 21st century.

Marcella Binner of Sanford said she doesn't believe that the day holds any special perils, but that her brother will always stay at home on Friday the 13th, shunning not only work, but pleasant activities as well.

"It's not like it's an excuse for him to call in sick," she said. "He was one time invited to a real nice party by this woman he really liked and he wouldn't go because it was on Friday the 13th."

She said that they had a grandmother who was similarly afraid of the day so that is

LAKE MARY — Seminole County commissioner Bob Sturm has paid a $200 fine for campaign violations during his 1990 re-election campaign.

On July 23, the Florida Elections Commission issued a consent order finding Sturm paid two Lake Mary marketing firms for print materials, broadcast advertisements and other services actually performed by printers and broadcasters. Florida law requires candidates to pay vendors directly, not through agents.

Charges keep mounting against accused burglar

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Sanford police have submitted 11 more charges against accused "one man crime spree" Kevin Lee Smith.

Smith was served with charges in the Seminole County jail related to five Sanford burglaries committed in June and July. The 19-year-old man has been served with 31 charges in Seminole County for 16 structural burglaries and three vehicle burglaries. Sanford police Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire said Smith is a suspect in at least four more Sanford burglaries.

Elsewhere: •Volusia County deputies have issued warrants for Smith's arrest in the June 21 rape of a 65-year-old DelBary woman. Volusia County sheriff's spokesman Cheryl Downs said the warrants will be served after his Seminole County charges have been tried.

•Longwood police Sgt. Stephanie Ryan said charges are pending against Smith in one residential burglary where his fingerprints were discovered.

•Altamonte Springs police are also reviewing two business burglaries where human feces were found. Whitmire said Smith left similar "calling cards" at three burglarized Sanford businesses.

The latest Sanford charges Wednesday stem from the June 3 burglary of a pickup truck at 301 W. 26th St., the July 14 burglary of 919 1/2 Laurel Ave, the residence burglary and vehicular theft at 2012 Grand View Ave. July 15, the July 31 burglary and truck theft from 2621 El Portal Ave, which led to the SANFORD — A local man was arrested Wednesday on a charge of leasing a car by fraud, the same car he used to drive to the Seminole County jail in March to turn himself in for another charge. The car was discovered at the jail parking lot more than four months later.

Wednesday, Sanford police entered a charge of obtaining a vehicle with intent to defraud against the man, Johnny Dee Smith, 41, 404 1/2 E. 24th Place, Sanford.

According to arrest reports, Smith leased the car March 12 from Enterprise Rent-a-Car in Sanford, using the identification of "Mark Prendergrast." Leasing agents subsequently discovered the name was fraudulent and reported a car theft to Sanford police.

According to jail records, Smith turned himself in on March 22 for a probation violation charge stemming from a drunken driving conviction. He was sentenced to 179 days in jail on the charge and was due to be released Aug. 25.

Police found the car, a 1992 Ford Mustang, at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility parking lot

Woman shot for withdrawing only $15

MIAMI — Two teen-agers robbed a woman who'd just withdrawn $15 from a bank machine, then shot her because they got so little cash, police said.

"They were like animals. They were going to erase my life over $15," said Georgene Hibbert of the shooting Tuesday night outside a Nationsbank branch on Biscayne Boulevard.

Hibbert was in serious condition Thursday at Jackson Memorial Hospital, two days after being shot in the abdomen when the teen-age mugger wrestled the bills out of her hand and became enraged at the meager take.

Hibbert, 30, said the $15 she had withdrawn from the ATM was just enough to buy gas for her friend's car and milk and cereal for her five kids' breakfast.

But it wasn't enough for the robbers.

"He said, 'Shoot the b---,'" said Hibbert, a hair dresser in Miami's Liberty City section. "He ran up to me, and I felt the bullet."

Funeral services set for Pearson

TAVARES — Private funeral services have been set for Sgt. Keith Pearson of Tavares, one of four American soldiers killed Sunday in Somalia.

Services will be held at 11 a.m. EDT Saturday in the funeral parlor followed by burial with full military honors at the Tavares Cemetery, said Diane Mosley, general office manager for Hamlin and Hibbich Funeral Directors, on Thursday.

She said the family requested no media at either the funeral parlor or cemetery and that contributions be sent to the Keith Daniel Pearson Memorial Fund, care of the United Southern Bank of Tavares, in lieu of flowers.

Memorial services were held Wednesday at Fort Riley, Kan., where Pearson, 25, and two of the other slain soldiers were stationed.

Pearson, Sgt. Christopher K. Hilgert, 27; and Spc. Mark Gutting, 25, all of Fort Riley; and Sgt. Ronald N. Richerson, 24, of Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., died when a remote-control bomb ripped apart their vehicle as they returned from patrol in southern Mogadishu.

Teen run over by train

TAMPA — A 14-year-old boy lost his right arm, his lower left leg and three toes on his right foot when he was run over by a train.

Torey Armstrong was in critical condition today in Tampa General Hospital following the Wednesday night accident on railroad tracks in Ybor City.

No attempt was made to reattach the severed limbs, Tampa General Hospital authorities said.

Police said Armstrong told them he had been with three friends who had stolen a car earlier in the evening. After driving to the tracks, his friends threw him under the train, the teen told police.

A detective tried to interview the boy Thursday afternoon, but he was too heavily sedated to answer questions about the incident or identify his friends, said police spokesman Steve Cole.

probably why her brother is afraid.

"I just don't see that it is any different than any other day," she said. "If you're going to have bad luck, it'll come on Thursday the 12th or Saturday the 14th just as easily as Friday the 13th."

Most triakadekaphobics (those who fear the number 13) choose to remove themselves from the possibility of danger by staying at home. Others turn to remedies to "ward off" the evil they perceive in the air on that day.

Gene Marshall said he knew a woman who used to say a rosary 12 times before emerging from her home on such a day. He said there was another acquaintance who dressed in pure white in the hopes of frightening the devil away.

Some, it is said, people feel it is safe to go out only after they have had the chance to burn their dirty socks atop the tallest building in town.

Arlene Boyd, administrator of Bram Towers in Sanford, said they have had no such requests from fearful Sanfordites wanting to ignite their stockings.

"No, we haven't had anything like that," she said. "That sounds pretty weird to me."

Madame Katherine, a palmist and psychic based in Longwood, reported her schedule held about an average amount of people seeking mystical guidance and advice. At 9 a.m., she had not yet received any phone calls or visits from people seeking protection from the evils of the day.

A random survey of local businesses did not reveal an unusual number of absences.

All the administrators at Seminole High School, for example, were accounted for, the receptionist said.

"But they're all in a meeting and can't come to the phone," she noted.

Death row inmate can refuse state lawyers attempt to file appeals

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A man who killed five people has the right to refuse to let state lawyers file appeals seeking to keep him from going to Florida's electric chair later this month, the state Supreme Court said.

But the justices directed a trial court to evaluate whether Michael Durocher understands the consequences of what he's seeking.

Durocher, scheduled for execution Aug.

25, is sentenced to die for the murders of his 8-month-old son, Joshua; his girlfriend, Grace Reed; and her 5-year-old daughter, Candice. The family was killed in Green Cove Springs in 1983.

He's also under a death sentence for killing a man during a 1986 Jacksonville robbery and is serving a life sentence for fatally beating a roommate in Jacksonville two years later.

Durocher, 33, sent Gov. Lawton Chiles a thank-you note after the governor signed his death warrant in May.

Despite Durocher's efforts to bring about his execution, the state office that represents death row inmates filed an appeal on his behalf, arguing it had a duty to do so.

In a unanimous, unsigned opinion Thursday, the Supreme Court disagreed.

"Regardless of our feelings about what we might do in a similar situation, we cannot deny Durocher his right to control his destiny to whatever extent remains," the court said.

Miami man sentenced to life without parole

By Associated Press

ATLANTA — A federal judge sentenced a Miami man to life without parole and five other men to long prison terms for operating what police called a violent crack-cocaine distribution network that stretched from Miami to Atlanta.

"You deserve severe punishment," U.S. District Judge Robert L. Vining Jr. told Anthony Bernard Mobley, 28, of Miami. "The public needs to be protected."

Mobley, who was sentenced Thursday to life without parole, strangled Andre Brennan with a telephone wire because Brennan had stolen some crack cocaine from the drug ring, according to testimony at the trial in May. Brennan was found dead in July 1989 in Decatur.

Mobley's attorney, Alan J.

Haverman, had asked for a "stern but merciful sentence" and reminded Vining that Mobley was convicted in May of drug conspiracy, not murder.

Authorities contended the six were members of a gang led by George Travis Williams, who has been indicted on charges of heading a continuing criminal enterprise.

Also sentenced were Herbert Oneal Pitts Jr., 25, to 30 years in prison; Michael Chavis, 24, to 21 years and 10 months; Michael Lewis, 25, to 17 years and six months; Rory Raynard Newkirk, 27, to 15 years and eight months; and Ned Toney, 55, to 12 years and seven months.

Pitts previously pleaded guilty to the Colquitt County murder of Terrance Walker, who was shot while sitting in his car.

He is serving a state sentence of life in prison plus 20 years.

Man's arm ripped by barracuda in third attack

By Associated Press

CARRABELLE — A Tallahassee man was hospitalized today after his left arm was ripped open by a barracuda that wound up in his boat off the Florida Panhandle coast.

The attack took a chunk of flesh "about three-fourths the size of a cigarette pack" from the man's arm, said Marine Patrol Lt. Richard Miller in Carrabelle. "That fish was pretty angry."

The attack took place this morning about 15 miles off Carrabelle, in the Gulf of Mexico, Miller said. The victim was taken to Emerald Coast Hospital in Apalachicola, and his name was not immediately released.

It's the third barracuda attack off Florida's coast since July 8 when Bobby Martin of Jemison, Ala., was cut on his arm when a barracuda leaped out of the water near Bradenton.

Nadine Cloer, 46, of Tampa, was severely injured when a barracuda jumped into her houseboat near Islamorada the next day.

The latest victim was fishing with two of his friends today when the barracuda flew out of the water and grabbed the man's left arm.

Gallagher denies Prudential exemption

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Prudential's request for an exemption from the state-imposed ban on cancellation of insurance policies in Hurricane Andrew's aftermath has been rejected by Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher.

Prudential Property and Casualty Insurance Co., which is also challenging the moratorium in federal court, contended it needed the exemption to reduce potential losses from a major hurricane in the northern Dade and southern Broward counties. Cancellation of 12,693 policies in Dade County and 12,039 in Broward County would slash the company's hurricane risk from $1.5 billion to about $400 million. Statewide, Prudential wants to drop about 30,000 policies.

In all, insurance companies want to drop 844,000 policyholders in Florida following last year's storm.

A letter dated Tuesday to Prudential from Clyde Galloway, who oversees the financial condition of homeowners' insurers at the department, said the company had capital and surplus of $700 million as of June 30 and Prudential itself had reinsurance of about $300 million.

The summer homicide went public

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
AP National Writer

Three people are killed at McDonald's. A woman is shot and killed in a movie theater. Attackers stalk victims in courthouses, offices, hospitals.

This is the summer that murder went public.

The crimes are nothing new, of course — Abraham Lincoln was shot in a theater, and restaurants have long been favored for mob hits. What seems different this summer is the sheer number of attacks on innocent people in public settings, in the sorts of places where no one usually gives a second thought about safety.

"There are more and more killings in schools, restaurants, places of business," observed James Alan Fox, dean of the School of Criminal Justice at Northeastern University in Boston. "There are relatively few places that are immune."

It may be impossible to say why. It is, in fact, impossible to prove there's been any increase in these crimes at all. No reliable statistics exist concerning the settings in which crimes occur.

It seems possible there is no real trend — that the events this summer are part of a coincidental string of unrelated crimes, or a particularly bad phase in which one psychotic killer encourages another.

"These things seem to come in batches," said James O'Kane, a sociologist at Drew University in New Jersey who has studied patterns of urban crime. Anyway, he added, "I don't see any pronounced increase, to be perfectly honest. If you go back to the '40s, the '50s, the '60s, we've had spates of similar things."

But others do think there probably has been an increase in killings in such public venues, and that it may be a sign of some deeper problem in American society.

Murray Straus, a sociologist at the University of New Hampshire, suggests any such increase might be explained by something as simple as the proliferation of multiple-shot weapons. Or, he said, it may be something as complex as "social disorganization," a wholesale shredding of the societal fabric.

"Part of it may be that more people are in a situation of lacking ties to kin, family, neighborhood, and therefore more vulnerable to going off the deep end," Straus said. It's hard to find many common threads in the recent spate of killings except for people "going off the deep end." Consider these news stories from the last week:

— Aug. 5: In Topeka, Kan., a man scheduled to be sentenced for drug dealing storms a federal courthouse with guns and pipe bombs. He kills a security officer, then blows himself up.

— Aug. 6: In Fayetteville, N.C., a man carrying three guns and shouting about gays in the military opens fire in a restaurant, killing four people and wounding seven. The suspect is arrested after being shot in the leg and jaw.

— Aug. 6: In suburban Chicago, a plastic surgeon is shot to death in his office. The suspect, also under investigation for killing a hairdresser in San Francisco in 1987, tells a judge he was angry about people "diluting the Aryan beauty" by dyeing their hair blond and wearing blue contact lenses.

— Aug. 9: In Corona, Calif., a woman bursts into a hospital nursery and shoots a worker while shouting, "You took my husband! You took my kids!

Sex registry bill proposed; tagged 'pants on law'

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Men who have sex outside of marriage would have to register with the state to preserve their rights to children they father under a proposal being worked on by a South Florida adoption attorney.

But some key lawmakers have expressed concerns that a state registry is not the best way to address concerns raised by the case of Baby Jessica, the toddler in the middle of the widely-publicized custody battle.

"Lists can be dangerous," said Sen. John McKay, citing problems with confidentiality associated with an existing state registry of suspected child abusers.

McKay, a Bradenton Republican who chairs the Senate Committee on Health and Rehabilitative Services, said he applauds the goal and would let the idea be debated.

"I understand the problem he's getting at and all of us are concerned, because what occurred with Baby Jessica lacks a whole lot of common sense," McKay said.

Earlier this month, the Michigan couple who had raised 2½-year-old "Baby Jessica" from birth were forced to turn the child over to her biological parents, an Iowa couple.

"Every adoptive parent who has walked in my office in the last two weeks has been freaked," said Boca Raton attorney Charlotte Dancu, who is promoting the registry.

Rep. Robert Trammell, a Marianna Democrat who chairs the House Judiciary Committee, said his panel would hold a workshop on the whole topic of the rights of natural fathers in adoption cases since Florida law says little on the topic.

Like McKay, Trammell said he had doubts about whether a registry is the best way to handle the case.

Charlene Carres, a Tallahassee attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, said she had concerns about the protection of privacy for both the men registering and the women being named.

"The whole idea sits poorly with me basically because what it says about relationships between men and women," she said.

The idea, however, isn't a new one.

The National Committee For Adoption, a Washington group, endorsed the concept of a registry for fathers in a report in February 1991.

A registry would enable putative fathers — alleged or reputed fathers of illegitimate children — to be notified of adoption plans so the men can assert their parental rights before birth, the report said.

Dancu is representing a Plantation couple fighting to keep a toddler they adopted a year ago. The little girl's biological father has petitioned for custody.

"This is the only way to close the loophole," said Dancu, adding the bill would "be affectionately called the 'pants-on' law."

Dancu is working with Sen. Ronald Silver, D-North Miami Beach.

The legislation was still being worked on this week.

Prepare to die!" The victim survives. It is at least the fourth hospital shooting in Southern California in the last nine months.

— Aug. 10: In Kenosha, Wis., a 26-year-old man in jungle fatigues kills two people and then himself at a McDonald's restaurant. In the killer's car, police find a videotape in which he rants about exacting revenge for the wrongs done him by the world. He had just left his job and lost his girlfriend.

— Aug. 10: In Kansas City, a 15-year-old boy is arrested for allegedly shooting his mother to death in a dark movie theater just before the start of "Robin Hood: Men in Tights." He is quoted as saying, "I don't know why I did it."

— Aug. 11: In Sonora, Calif., a jury convicts a woman of manslaughter — rather than murder — four months after she walked across a courtroom and calmly shot the man accused of molesting her son. The shooting made her a folk hero.

Fox, the Northeastern criminologist, sees a deepening societal rage that is bursting out in more and more public ways.

"More and more people are angry, frustrated. Things aren't going their way ... and they want to get even," he said.

And violence can beget violence. Both Fox and O'Kane said highly publicized crimes can encourage other crimes.

"It kind of puts a bug in their bonnet," O'Kane said.

The videotape made by the McDonald's killer included remarks expressing admiration for serial killers Ted Bundy and Jeffrey Dahmer.

So what's a person to do? Stop eating Big Macs? Avoid movie theaters, courthouses, office buildings?

"We shouldn't start building walls or fortresses, or thinking that every time we walk into a fast-food restaurant we're going to be at risk of a shooting," Fox said. The odds of being the victim of such a shooting are "on the order of being killed by lightning," he said.

The difference, of course, is that clouds give notice of impending electrical storms. Human killers are rarely so polite.

Whom can we trust?

One concern voiced by government, business and even the clergy, is the diminishing trust people have for each other. It's little wonder, considering some of the recent news stories.

In Miami, an Associated Press report tells how Medicaid was billed by $14 million when a ring of doctors and health care companies recruited elderly people to submit phony billings for nutritional supplements and feeding tubes.

A Miami firm reported spending over $55,000 to support lobbyists who entertain and woo legislators.

Locally, school teachers are charged with crimes involving sex and drugs. Accusations are made for various reasons against government and business leaders.

People hesitate to walk down the streets of Sanford in the evening. With the number of robberies and other crimes constantly making news, they do not trust anyone.

News stories indicate we can not rely on many of our doctors, teachers, government leaders, or our own neighbors.

They may be relatively few in number, but they have a tendency to give others a bad reputation. Soon, we will not trust anyone.

People must begin to realize what is happening. The rotten few are ruining the entire population. It must stop.

Keep apprised of what goes on. If necessary, take notes. We have ways of combating the problems caused by the few: by intelligent voting at the polls; by communicating with government leaders; by supporting only trustworthy representatives.

Returning to a position where we can place faith in others again cannot be accomplished overnight. We must proceed cautiously, but continuously. With effort, the number of people we can trust will increase.

Convention center

We have a nice big ballpark going to waste, plenty of room, land paid for, plenty of parking, already zoned, everything ready except use for it.

What's stopping us using it for our own convention center? We could get the overflow from Orlando or maybe our own Golden Age Games and AARP and a few crafts shows, a medical convention. We have our own airport and if the convention center started, I'm sure a hotel would come this way, then a first-class restaurant with white tablecloths and white cloth napkins which we do not have around here. If we could only get our people to stop looking at shoestrings and look at what we could have here — all they want is to raise salaries, that's all they think about. Well, let's let our children see what we can do with all the jobs it would create in Seminole County. Bonds, state grants and federal grants, the waterfront would then have a meaning. Send someone to look at the convention hall in Orlando and the one in Anaheim, Calif. See how other cities started off. Atlanta, I do believe, has one.

Homeless animals

On Saturday, Aug. 21, 1993, hundreds of animal welfare organizations and animal control agencies throughout the U.S. will observe Homeless Animals' Day.

The day will be observed with candlelight vigils. The purpose is to shed light on the cause and effect of dog and cat overpopulation.

From 12 to 17 million healthy animals are killed each year in shelters and pounds because of overpopulation. The problem and the killing can be stopped when owners have their dogs and cats spayed and neutered to prevent reproduction.

The problem of overpopulation of dogs and cats takes a toll of animal lives. Moreover it calls for the astronomical expenditure of public tax money and private philanthropy to "process" (rescue, shelter, feed, water, kill and dispose of the bodies of) the animals.

It is encouraging that grave social injustices such as child abuse, homelessness, poverty, spousal battering and others are at last receiving national attention. The plight of animals needs attention too.

How party politics educate voters

In the harsh glare of turbulent mornings after, unexpected heroes emerge. This time, it wasn't the president.

A Washington Post headline anointed the paladin: "DeConcini Pledges Key Vote For Clinton's Economic Plan."

Without that critical vote from Sen. Dennis DeConcini, who previously was one of seven Democratic senatorial defectors, Clinton's budget plan would surely have died an early death. Regardless of Sen. Bob Kerrey's swing vote, the president would have suffered a major setback, a reprise of a verse recited by many schoolchildren: "For want of a nail the shoe is lost, for want of a shoe the horse is lost, for want of a horse the rider is lost."

Going into the eighth month of his presidency, we can feel some sense of relief that our presidential rider gained new life. Even Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole told a little white lie: "Like all Americans, I want President Clinton to succeed."

And he didn't even grin! If Clinton succeeds, Dole's chance to be president falls. When Dole proceeded to attack the president, his take-no-prisoners rebuttal to Clinton's message didn't sound as if the GOP's leader was trying to hitch a ride on Clinton's re-election bandwagon.

A rising tide of rhetoric has been flooding both sides. Even with the misrepresentations and the endless hyperbole, the American people still came out ahead. The extravagant claims from both parties have forced voters to make comparisons, read analyses and make truth-checks.

For years, politicians on both sides have lied, played games with the budget and refused to bite the fiduciary bullet. They even joined forces to pass the Gramm-Rudman law, which was as misguided as a "trickle-down" Reaganomics.

Still, these choreographed steps have ended up serving a purpose. For the first time in American history, the arcane world of the federal budget and the reasons for its deficit have become the star in the drama of electoral politics. Senators and congressmen must now pay closer attention to how the various budget components affect each of their constituencies, especially the ones with the most votes.

Samuel Johnson once wrote, "When a man knows he is about to be hanged in a fortnight, it concentrates his mind wonderfully."

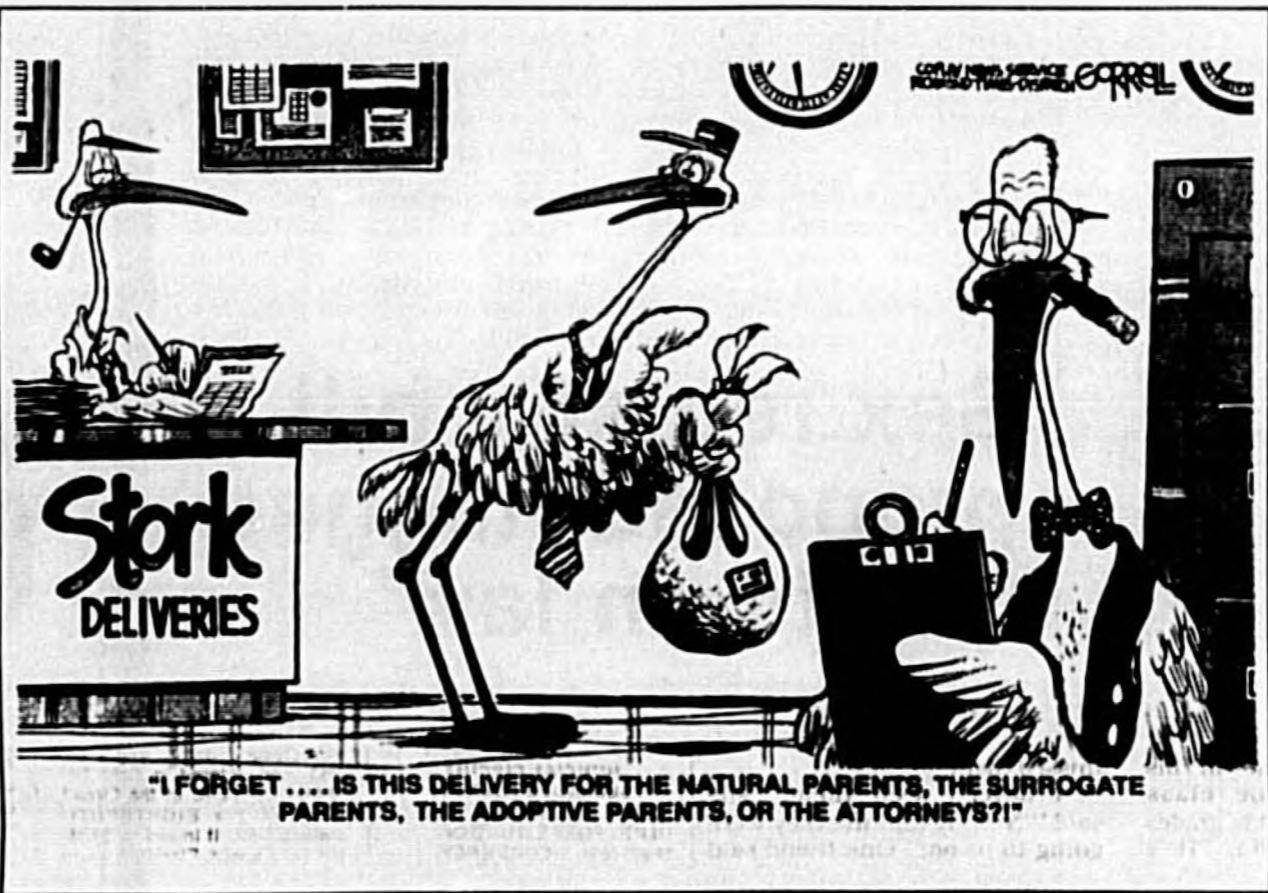

The minds of congressional incumbents up for re-election in 1994 are now concentrated wonderfully. We have come out of this budgetary turbulence as a more informed people. From exemptions to luxury taxes to Medicare, we are more financially enlightened, especially those of us earning $200,000 or more.

But even our enlightenment is based more on political faith than on economic fact. The six Democratic senatorial defectors, particularly Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn, have been governed as much by a Dickensian mean-spiritedness as their alleged concern for more deficit reduction through spending cuts — except in their political backyards.

In the end, last week's final negotiations represent a turning of the corner. They are the first step in the budgetary journey to replace Reaganomics with Clintonomics.

"We can feel some sense of relief that our presidential rider gained new life."

Health-care bill fractures GOP

WASHINGTON — The upcoming health-care battle may cause as much political bloodshed among Republicans in the Senate as it does between Republicans and Democrats. Already, the GOP is splintering into two camps: the Chafee Centrists vs. the McCain Mutineers.

Despite months-long attempts to speak with one voice, the Republicans are as fractured on health reform as they were unified on taxes during the budget debate. The mutineers — led by John McCain, Ariz.; Phil Gramm, Texas; Trent Lott, Miss.; and Dan Coats, Ind. — fear that centrists are getting too cozy with the Clinton administration.

After three years of working together on the Republican Task Force for Health Care, the split occurred with a bang during one of the weekly closed-door sessions. Chafee's allies argued that a pure free market was impractical for something as complicated as health care. They made the case for "cooperatives," an increasingly popular concept embracing a system of managed care, some version of which Clinton is expected to embrace.

McCain inflamed Chafee and his cohorts by quipping that North Korea and Cuba were the only places left on earth where cooperatives were still in vogue. Since then, he and other conservatives have essentially formed a splinter group to compete with Chafee's task force. They will release their own plan next month and have largely boycotted task-force meetings.

The big winner should be Clinton. Republicans acknowledge that, with their own ranks divided, it will be difficult for the party to offer a coherent alternative. That gives Clinton an opening with Chafee, the dean of Senate moderates, and could prevent the kind of Republican stonewall he faced during the budget.

"The best-case scenario is Clinton's plan comes out, it gets picked apart, and people simply don't buy it (and) it has employer taxes," said one Republican senator. "The worst-case scenario is that Clinton's people stand together, and he does a great P.R. blitz and the Republicans are fractured into two different camps and we're ineffective."

Though there are many areas of agreement, one of the sharper disputes involves cooperatives — "alliances" in Demospeak — which would become the new health-care purchasing agents for individuals and small businesses. "The thing that bothers us about the direction is not that the government runs the system, but that the government defines who can be on the playing field and who can't," one Republican strategist says. "Inasmuch as they define a restructured market, they're defining who can play in that market and who can't."

The centrists also advocate some form of universal coverage for the 37 million Americans currently without insurance, but are vague about the funding, though they've ruled out most tax increases. The mutineers want to accentuate the positive — the 83 percent of Americans who are happy with their current coverage — and reform the system using a private-sector approach. Their plan consists of medical savings accounts, malpractice reforms and tax credits to make medical care more accessible and affordable.

A recent fax distributed by Sen. Kit Bond, R-Mo., a Chafee ally, explains the negotiations that went into the project: "There were a number of changes made from the earlier version with input from many offices in the hope of accommodating everyone." The prospect of "accommodating everyone" looks increasingly dim.

"The Republicans are as fractured on health reform as they were unified on taxes."

High-tech female executives

WASHINGTON — A few years ago, a meeting of all female senior executives of technology and telecommunications companies would have fit comfortably in a small conference room. Nowdays, while women are still underrepresented in the top echelons of high-tech companies, their numbers are starting to grow.

Rebecca Bigley is one example. The California native and mother of two, with a third due, was well on her way to a prestigious career in corporate finance when she was called to help a struggling, small, long-distance company. Today — as executive vice president and CEO of the Garden Grove, Calif., head-quartered Thrifty Tel Inc. — Bigley is an acknowledged telecommunications innovator, and her company has become a trendsetter among smaller long-distance providers.

"When I started this I knew nothing about the telephone industry," Bigley admits. "But after I took the company public, I saw that there were new ways this company could do business and compete very effectively against the giants in our industry."

That was early in 1989, when Thrifty Tel had about 2,200 California subscribers, grossed $500,000 annually, and was in Chapter 11 reorganization. Today, after 14 straight quarters of profitability, it has increased its California customer base tenfold, is about to go nationwide, and will gross $24 million this year.

"We don't have any corporate jets, executives making seven-figure salaries or multimillion-dollar ad campaigns," says Bigley. "Our costs are low and we are able to pass along our savings to our customers. We can provide the same quality of service as the big three at a rate usually about 30 percent lower and still turn a healthy profit."

Where Bigley has become an industry innovator is in the areas of billing and fighting against the scourge of the long-distance industry: computer "hackers."

"I looked at the way most long-distance companies charge, and it was bewildering," says Bigley. "So much off for this, so much off for calling at certain times or to certain places. No wonder most businesses did not have any real idea what they were paying for long-distance service or why."

What Bigley instituted at Thrifty Tel was a flat-rate policy in which all calls within the United States, no matter the time of day or destination, are billed at the same per-minute rate — a rate lower than that charged by the competition.

Also, over the last several years Thrifty Tel has become an industry model by developing better electronic means of keeping hackers out of its computer system and off its long-distance lines. It has aggressively prosecuted hackers.

Another female technology innovator is Bernee D.L. Strom. Her entry into the high-tech world was the direct result of necessity becoming the mother-of-invention.

A former college math professor, Strom eventually became a financial consultant to start-up businesses. One day, while in Chicago on a consulting assignment, she and a colleague lamented the lack of a computer program that would allow them to easily keep track of, and transfer, files between their office desktop computers and the laptops they traveled with. They did the logical thing: They wrote such a program for themselves.

They knew they were onto something. So they founded MBS Technologies Inc., of which Strom is now president and CEO. The program she developed, called Filerunner, has already established itself as an industry standard, and is a major seller to the 25 million notebook-computer users looking for a better way to manage their office and road computers.

Strom says the file-transfer program is only a starting point for her new software company. "It's my view," says Strom, "that more and more regular computer users today are less and less sophisticated. Most software companies are always trying to push the envelope of technology, and their programs are becoming simply too complex for the average user."

"We want to reverse this cycle. We want to develop fully functional products that meet the needs of the average business user while keeping them simple enough so they can be understood. This is the niche we are going to service."

As for the future of women in technology, both Bigley and Strom are optimistic and enthusiastic.

"As in most industries, most executives in the computer industry are men," says Strom. "The barriers of entry are coming down, women are starting to make inroads, but it is slow."

"For women in the telecommunications industry it's much like it is at the executive suite level anywhere," says Bigley. "You have to work harder to prove you're equal. But that acceptance is coming, and I look for more women to be where I am in the future. There is still a crystal ceiling, but it is starting to show a few cracks."

"There is still a crystal ceiling, but it is starting to show a few cracks."

Bites

Cohen said raccoons, foxes and skunks were the most apt to have contracted rabies. "This is a serious problem," Cohen said, "and it's getting completely out of control. Although the law requires all animals should be registered, we have issued only 1,800 animal tags in the entire county. That's a far cry from the number of animals which should have tags."

Acting Animal Control Director Frank Kirk said some of the cases have been extremely severe. "We investigated one case where there were as many as 200 bite marks in the face and head of a young boy," he said. "Another one which occurred recently had 20 bites in just the face."

Cohen said not all of the bites she investigates involve dogs. "We also include cat bites, and especially scratches," she said. "Cats lick their claws, and saliva is a good transmitter for rabies, so we treat cat scratches as very serious matters."

With such a high number of bite cases, the number of animals put to sleep because of having been declared a danger, is relatively low. "During this past year," Kirk said, "we probably put away no more than six or seven dogs."

The process following a bite is lengthy. "First of all," Cohen explained, "any time a person goes to have medical treatment for an animal bite or scratch, the doctor is required by law to contact Animal Control."

She continued, "If the animal can be located, it is automatically placed under quarantine for a ten day period, either in a controlled shelter, or sometimes at home if certain criteria can be followed to keep the animal controlled."

"During that time," she said, "if the animal has rabies, it will show up, and we will treat the bite case in that manner. Mostly however, there is no rabies, and the dog can be returned to normal life after the quarantine, if it is not determined to be a threat."

"There are several situations where a bite can occur," Cohen commented. "It could be provoked, or unprovoked. But most of our cases are first-time bite cases."

"For severe cases," Kirk said, "if an animal control officer deems a dog is a severe biter, with the owner's approval, we would have the dog put to sleep."

He continued, "If the owner objects however, the matter could be appealed. It would then have to go before a hearing process by our board, made up of private citizens, and have a determination made."

Both Kirk and Cohen are concerned over the increase in the number of bite cases. "While much of it can be attributed to hot weather," Kirk said, "the numbers in Seminole County are reaching a serious level, and more concern over this problem should be given by people, especially the pet owners."

Cohen added, "Spaying and neutering is one of the best ways to reduce the animal population, which in turn, will reduce the number of bites."

Cohen makes herself available for lectures or instructional programs on animal control, and speaks before school, civic and other groups upon request.

"It's strictly a matter of interpretation," said Sturm. "I wanted the order to read that there was no willful intent on my part but I guess the commission was unwilling to go along with that. I just wanted to get the damn thing over with."

Sturm has indicated he will not seek re-election next year. He has been suffering from throat and intestinal ailments for more than a year and is often seen in a wheelchair.

Sheila Sawyer, a Lake Mary critic who first filed the complaint against Sturm in February 1991, said she was glad to see Sturm was reprimanded by the state for the violation.

"He has been re-elected several times," said Sawyer. "He should know the law. He knows the law. It's unfortunate that he's ill, but the thing is honesty in government is very, very important and we can't afford to have people in office that show that kind of arrogance."

The state finding was based on payments Sturm made to the firm Morris and Associates and the firm Image Engineering. Morris and Associates is an unregistered marketing consulting firm owned by former Lake Mary mayor Randy Morris. Image Engineering, a marketing company licensed in Seminole County, is owned by Morris's wife Laura Morris.

Randy and Laura Morris were not mentioned in the order.

According to Sturm's 1990 campaign finance reports, the two companies were paid a total of $87,651 throughout the campaign. Of that amount, $5,000 was paid for "consultant services" or "consultant retainer" according to the reports. The remainder of the money, $82,651, was paid to the two firms for various services, such as cablevision commercial production and direct mail preparation services and postage.

Morris, who is seeking the District 2 seat expected to be vacated by Sturm next year, said it is common practice for clients to buy TV time, printing materials and other materials through an advertising or marketing firm.

Last year, a state elections attorney admitted there may be some ambiguity in the law requiring vendors to be paid directly, not through an agent, in such instances as Sturm's.

The elections commission, however, found no ambiguity and found Sturm had violated the law and ordered the fine.

phony rehearsals and met with orchestra members.

The young musicians played a free concert Thursday afternoon at Stetson University. DeLand and another free concert at the Ormond Beach Performing Arts Center was scheduled late this morning.

Saturday at 11 a.m., the youths will share the stage of the Peabody Auditorium in Daytona Beach with the LSO.

Black is the only trombone player in the group of student musicians.

A select group of students who auditioned and were chosen to play in the All State Band were invited to apply for the music festival. The Florida Band Masters Association and the Florida Orchestra Association sponsor the All State Band which met in Tampa in January, according to SHS band director Jeff Jordan.

"He's having a wonderful time," Black's mother, Pat said, as she prepared to go to the Stetson University concert.

Black began playing the trombone in the sixth grade while the family lived in Georgia. After the family moved to Sanford five years ago, he attended Sanford Middle School and then began high school. He will be the Marching Seminoles drum major this year.

Ranked number one in his class, Black will be class valedictorian, "unless his grades drop," his mother said. "He's got another girl that's edging kind of close on him, but right now he's ahead."

He plans to study engineering and hopes to be accepted at MIT. He may minor in music, Mrs. Black said.

Black was also a delegate to Boys State earlier this summer. Along with his band work, Black is in Destiny, a jazz choral group.

"I'm so thrilled about this for Chris," Jordan said, about the festival. "Working with members of a world-class organization like this is a tremendous opportunity for him."

Black is the first chair trombonist in the SHS Symphonic Orchestra and is a member of the Seminole All County Honor Band and the Tri-State Honor Band.

Family friends told Mrs. Black they have seen local and national television reports on the 18 band students, but she has missed them.

"I haven't seen them," she said. "Nobody told me they were going to be on." One friend said the group was shown on the "Today" show.

During Saturday's concert, the students will play in their respective quartets and quintets then join the orchestra members in playing the last two concert selections, Jordan said.

Pat Black is a third grade teacher at Hamilton Elementary School and her husband, Tony is the preacher at the Sanford Church of Christ. Chris' older brother, David, will be a sophomore at Florida State University studying physics and music. David is a former SHS drum major.

Gene linked to form of Alzheimer's

By PAUL RECER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — A study that links a variant of a gene to the most common form of Alzheimer's disease may permit researchers to develop a diagnostic screening test for the mind-destroying disease.

In research published today in the journal Science, Duke University scientists said two copies of a gene mutant called apolipoprotein E, type 4, or APOE4 lead to a 90 percent chance of developing Alzheimer's by the age of 80 among families where a late-onset form of the disease is common.

Among members of the 42 families studied, copies of the APOE4 gene also was linked to developing Alzheimer's at an early age, said Dr. AD Roses of Duke.

What this shows is that APOE4 increases the risk and lowers the age at which you get the disease, said Roses. It looks like virtually all will develop if the disease by the age of 80 if they have two copies.

The research was based on sophisticated examination of blood and brain tissue samples, requiring the use of high-tech equipment. Currently, there is no simple diagnostic test.

The finding has created a great deal of excitement among Alzheimer's researchers, said Dr. Zaven Kachaturian, director of Alzheimer's Research at the National Institute of Aging, part of the National Institutes of Health.

By linking APOE4 with Alzheimer's, he said, it gives scientists a gene factor that can be measured to determine a patient's risk of having the disease.

It could become a very important diagnostic tool, said Kachaturian. We may be able to screen for this and be able to make judgments about whether a person's likelihood of getting the disease is high or low or early or late. It has that potential.

Alzheimer's is a disease that progressively destroys the mind and eventually kills. About 2.5 million Americans are thought to suffer from it. There is no known cure.

The Duke researchers cautioned that their conclusions now can be applied only to families where members have late-onset Alzheimer's, the most common form of the disease.

Studies that verify the findings are needed before the conclusions can be applied to the general population, said Kachaturian.

The apolipoprotein E gene, on chromosome 19, occurs in three forms or alleles. Since half of a pair of genes is inherited from each parent, a person can have either mixed APOE alleles, or two alleles of the same kind.

Gene testing was done on 244 members of 42 families that had at least one member with late-onset Alzheimer's. The disease was diagnosed in 95 of the families members and 139 were found to be unaffected.

Among family members with two copies of the APOE4 gene, 91 percent had Alzheimer's. With one APOE4 copy, 47 percent had the disease. Of those without the APOE4 allele, only 20 percent had Alzheimer's.

This means that people with both APOE4 alleles were eight times as likely to be affected with the disease, as people with none of the APOE4 copies. In order, one copy, Duke researchers found in inheritance.

The presence and number of the APOE4 alleles also determined the age at which the disease began, showing that there was a dose effect, from the gene variant, the study showed.

Patients with two APOE4 copies developed Alzheimer's at the average age of 68. With one copy, the average age was 75 and with no APOE4 copies, the average age for Alzheimer's diagnosis was 80.

Roses said that only about 1 percent of the general population have two copies of APOE4, and about 28 percent have one copy. But about 80 percent of the studied population with late-onset Alzheimer's had at least one copy of the APOE4 gene.

President, pope meet

By VICTOR SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX — Pope John Paul II urged Americans to guarantee the right to life, as he began his first visit to the United States along with President Clinton, an abortion rights advocate standing beside him.

A crowd gathered in a light rain at Stapleton International Airport Thursday. We love you, John Paul two, as the 73-year-old pope, smiling and slightly stooped, greeted Clinton, administration and Colorado dignitaries.

The pope, arriving from a historic visit to Mexico, was visiting Denver for the Roman Catholic Church's World Youth Day.

America, you are beautiful, you are the best in so many ways, the pontiff said in remarks at the airport. But your best beauty, your richest blessing is from the human person.

In each man, woman and child in every immigrant in every native-born son or daughter, the ultimate test of your greatness is the way you treat every human being, but especially the weakest and most defenseless ones.

The pope said that of all its great causes, possibly America's greatest is that you guarantee the right to life and protect the human person.

The pope and Clinton then headed to a private meeting at Regis University, a Jesuit college. Earlier, Joaquin Navarro, the pope's spokesman, declined to say whether John Paul would raise the issue of abortion during the talk.

The pope speaks out frequently against abortion, while the Democratic president has championed abortion rights.

Clinton didn't address the issue as he welcomed John Paul before the pontiff made his remarks.

All Americans, without regard to their religious affiliation, are grateful to the Catholics of this country for the standards they have set, Clinton said, and all Americans, without regard to their religious faith, are grateful to you, your holiness, for your moral leadership.

John Paul previously visited the United States in 1979, the year after he became pope, and in 1987, Clinton is the fourth president he has met.

He flew to Denver from Mexico, which he visited for the first time since that country restored diplomatic relations with the Vatican after a 130-year break.

On Wednesday, speaking atop the ruins of a Mayan pyramid in the Yucatan town of Izamal, the pope strongly defended the Jesuit aspirations of American Indians.

What may be a preview of some concerns he would relay to Clinton, the pope pledged the support of the Roman Catholic Church for indigenous peoples from Alaska to South America who have been "uprooted from their places of origin" and stripped of their land.

The pope's main event in Izamal, an ancient Mayan crossroads, was a delayed celebration of the 500th anniversary in 1492 of Roman Catholic missionaries to New World.

RAINES GAUGE

Tim Raines is a Sanford native and Seminole High School graduate now playing for the Chicago White Sox. His stats are for the 1993 season in the first column, personal-best season totals in the second column and current career totals (including 1993 games) in the third column.

Raines recorded the 2,000th hit of his career Thursday night when he led off the game with his 12th home run of the season. It was the fourth time this season he's led off a game with a home run. He later added a single but it couldn't keep the White Sox from losing to the Kansas City Royals, 4-2.

Building a home with used tires

Would you build a new house if someone gave you all the framing lumber you need free? If you had a job to pay for the rest, it probably would be tempting. OK then, would you build a new house if someone gave you all the free tires you could haul? What? Old tires?

One new 1,600 square-foot house being built in Idaho will not require much of a contribution from the local lumber yard. It's the Ken Olson and Scott Fenwick residence, christened Earthship and built atop Horseshoe Bend Hill in the Solar Summit subdivision. The walls are made of rammed earth and free used tires — 2,000 of them. It represents an experiment in the marriage of environmental responsibility, recycling, off-the-grid photovoltaics, earth berming, and solar heating.

It is not an original idea. The premier example of Earthship was built in Colorado by actor Dennis Weaver. It is a showpiece of great southwestern-style architectural beauty, while its energy efficiency is supposed to be impressive.

Experts at the Energy Division are skeptical about the energy efficiency claims, but interested enough in the novel local experiment to fund $2,500 for monitoring, data gathering and analysis. Idaho Power Company (IPCo) is even more interested; the utility will pay for the engineering, purchase installation, and also maintain the off-the-grid photovoltaic system for three years.

"The uncertainty of just how much energy the home will use is a major motivating factor for this demonstration. We just don't know, but we hope to find out," said Ken Eklund, energy resource specialist.

CONSUMER FOCUS

After Olson gets the free tires to the excavated, south-facing site atop Horseshoe Bend summit, far from the nearest power pole, he sorts them by size so that successive tire tiers go up as uniformly as possible. Tire house or not, walls must be plumb and level.

With minimal instruction required, unskilled laborers place the tires tread face to tread face and alternately fill with soil and pound to compact. It is very hard work. Each filled tire ends up weighing 300-350 pounds.

In spite of the great weight, laterally the walls are not perfectly stable until backfilled and connected with roof joists. The house has no conventional foundation. The first tier sets directly on the earth.

On interior walls, where the tires come together and form a vee, the indentation is filled with adobe-like earth mortar with scrap aluminum cans embedded as additional filler. The goal is to obtain a smooth surface which will be finished with stucco.

Olson figures his construction cost per square foot will be about $36, excluding the PV system which ranges from $19,000 to $25,000 and the lot. Comparable conventional houses are built for about $50 per square foot. Earthship will have no monthly utility bills, but the occupant's trade-off is that a PV system requires diligent, but no time-consuming, system monitoring and maintenance.

Idaho Power will operate and maintain the PV system, then turn it over to the owner. The utility will gain valuable knowledge about costs and operating characteristics of the PV system, IPCo's primary interest.

The Energy Division is interested in both the PV operation and the envelope thermal performance. Staff will collect data on electrical use for lighting, refrigeration, and miscellaneous appliances. They will also conduct tests for radon, indoor temperature, envelope air tightness, and supplemental space heating.

What will they think of next? (Barbara Hughes/Gregg is the Seminole County Extension Home Economist. Inquiries may be directed to her at the Cooperative Extension Service, 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford, FL 32773 or phone 323-2500, Ext. 5558.)

Personal experience exposes tragedy of drug addictions

DEAR MARY: I know every kid thinks they can handle a little dope or booze, but I want everybody to know what happened to me. If at least one person stops and thinks about what they're doing, it will make me feel better.

By the time I was 15, I was using all kinds of drugs. We live in a real nice neighborhood and both of my parents are professionals so no one ever thought I'd be the "type" to have this kind of problem.

I first used it because somebody told me it would help relieve PMS pain. I loved the way it made me feel so I kept using it whenever I could get it. It got to where I was planning my day around getting high. I lied all the time. Once when I burned a hole in the carpet when I was smoking cocaine. I told my parents it happened when the curling iron fell off the counter. I felt so smart when they believed me. After a while I just lied about everything, even when there was no reason.

By the time I was 17, I was using incredible amounts of anything I could get my hands on to get back "that feeling," but no matter how much I used, the highs I used to enjoy just weren't there anymore and I was feeling depressed and scared all the time. Finally, one day I had so much alcohol and pot and mescaline in me all at once that I started throwing up, but I kept dragging on a joint until it felt like my chest was ripping apart. I kept wretching and smoking until I passed out.

Well, as they say, the rest is history. I'm clean and sober now, but the thing I want every kid and parent to know is — IT CAN HAPPEN TO YOU AND IN YOUR FAMILY! The only way you can be sure is to never experiment with anything.

DEAR BEEN: Your letter says it all. Thanks for sharing your experience. If one person who reads this today chooses not to follow this path, your nightmare will not have been in vain.

Mother steamed by couple's concern for child in hot car

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday afternoon, my husband and I were shopping at a local shopping center. We went back to our car to drop off some packages when we noticed a child about 2 years old, alone in a locked car. We live in a desert town where the temperature sometimes climbs to 110. We stayed by the car and took down the number of the license plate, trying to decide what to do next. The child appeared to be sleeping rather restlessly, but was extremely red and perspiring profusely.

We waited by the car for about 10 minutes, afraid to leave, should something happen to this child. Finally, a young woman came out of a shop three doors down, and demanded to know why we had taken down her license plate number! She was extremely hostile.

My husband and I were completely taken off guard, and rather apologetically backed off when she said, "He was sound asleep and I didn't want to wake him."

Abby, please warn your readers that there is no excuse — including a sleeping child — to leave a child in a locked car for even five minutes.

People scream about locking pets in cars in the summer. Let's be aware that a child locked in a hot car is equally at risk, and in my opinion, that constitutes child abuse and neglect.

ADVICE

T.S., CLOVIS, CALIF.

P.S. Is there a better way I could have handled this?

DEAR T.C.: I think you handled it quite well, but you could have also reminded the mother that in the 10 minutes you waited by the car, someone could have easily broken into the car and kidnapped that child. It's a long shot — but stranger things have happened.

DEAR ABBY: I found this article, clipped from our local newspaper years ago. In some papers I was saying, I am sharing it with you because I hope you think it is intelligent and important enough today to at least relay the concept to your readers.

TACOMA — A man who tried to abduct a 9-year-old Tacoma area girl got nowhere this week when he could not supply the "password."

"The girl, a student in elementary school, said that the man told her that her mother said it was OK for her to go with him.

"The girl then asked the man for the password. When he couldn't tell her the word, the girl ran home.

"Deputies said other youngsters had reported seeing the man in the area recently."

SEATTLE READER DEAR READER: A simple idea — but brilliant. I suspect that many parents will sleep better after teaching their child a "password."

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who, when asked where he wants to go, what he wants to eat, what he wants to do — always answers, "Whatever you want."

If I didn't care what he wanted and was just concerned with what I wanted, I wouldn't ask! Maybe this is his way of being nice, but he's driving me nuts!

How do I break him of this annoying habit — or should I? By the way, he denies that he does this!

STILL WAITING FOR AN ANSWER IN PASADENA

DEAR STILL WAITING: The next time he tells you that he's willing to go along with "whatever you want," chime in that what you want is for him to make the decision, and try to say it with a smile.

Proper Maintenance

Have you ever driven along an old country road and out in a distant field noticed an old vintage automobile squatting in the tall grass? And as you passed by, its headlights, like eyes, seemed to follow you. Perhaps, for a moment it made you wonder what stories it could tell. Like ourselves, possibly accounts of happy times, distant trips and proud feelings we have experienced.

However, in final neglect, this once magnificent machine, now rusted out, no longer functioning properly, has been abandoned. It now lies in lonely and desolate surroundings, wasted and forgotten.

The hard miles and long endless roads we travel in life take its toll. Tired of it all we sometimes end up in disrepair and give up. If we don't want to end up like the car in the field, we must keep ourselves in good condition.

Your church or synagogue can offer you the best satisfied service guaranteed to keep you well tuned, shining and new.

Many stories, hoaxes behind the search for Noah's ark

It makes you wonder if other Noah's ark stories were hoaxes. According to Time magazine, a two-hour, prime-time special on CBS-TV, "The Incredible Discovery of Noah's Ark," was actually the work of a hoaxer.

The documentary-type show, which aired in February, was produced by Sun International Pictures, a Utah firm. It sold the program to CBS. On the program, George Jammal told the network audience of a 1984 visit to Mount Ararat in Turkey in search of Noah's ark. Jammal said he and his companion "Vladimir" came upon a large wooden structure buried in the ice. A big room aboard the supposed vessel was divided into "animal" pens. "We knew then we had found the ark," said Jammal on the program.

He added that while Vladimir was taking photos to show the world, he fell and an avalanche came cascading down. Vladimir and all the photos were lost. Jammal claimed to have returned with what he said was a piece of wood from Noah's ark. That was his story. But Time magazine reported in its article ("Phony Arkology," July 5) that Jammal was not an archeologist, but an actor. It said he had never been on Mount Ararat, the mountain on which the Bible says Noah's ark came to rest. Vladimir, said Time, was a "fictitious character." As for the piece of aged wood that Jammal claimed he brought back, the magazine said it was a hunk of California pine. It reported that Jammal had soaked the wood in juices and baked it in the oven of his Long Beach, Calif., house to give it that Bronze Age look.

For 2,500 years, off and on, people have told stories of seeing the ark on the 17,000-foot Mount Ararat. Marco Polo mentioned the existence of the ark in the 13th century. There are even stories (roughly similar to Jammal's tale) that a Russian search party found the ark in 1916 and went aboard, taking many pictures. Their report to the czar reportedly included descriptions of hundreds of small rooms and some large ones. Unfortunately -- so the story goes -- a few days after the report reached the czar, his government was overthrown and the records were subsequently lost. Other stories may be harder to dismiss as fiction. In 1976, eight members of a small fundamentalist religious settlement in Texas, known as the Holy Ground Mission, returned from Mount Ararat. They brought back a photo of what was said to be a huge boat resting on a ledge in a glacial mountain pass at an elevation of 10,000 feet. The picture was taken with a telephoto lens 1,600 feet from an object that looked like the prow of a ship. How would anything wooden get so high above the timber line? About 15 years earlier, a French industrialist named Fernand Navarra returned from Mount Ararat with a 5-foot piece of wood. He said he had cut it from a 150-foot beam jutting out from the frozen surface of a sub-glacial lake. The wood displayed evidence of having been hand-tooled and impregnated with bituminous pitch. Tests at Bordeaux University in France judged the age of the wood to be about 5,000 years. That would date it roughly in the time of Noah.

What regulates body thermostats?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I work in an office that employs five women, four of whom are over 40. Why is it that some of us are always hot, while others bundle up and cannot get warm?

DEAR READER: Some of us are more comfortable in cool environments than are others. This is related to age, body build, activity, general health, and -- in my case -- to being cheap. I keep my house at 60 degrees in the winter and most of my friends complain bitterly when visiting. But I'm comfortable because I bundle up. I keep the thermostat turned down because I fancy myself as being frugal; my friends think I'm merely a cheapskate.

Many people become acclimated to cooler temperatures, which -- after all -- are relative. Eskimos remove their shirts when the thermometer rises to near freezing; they find 32 degrees to be pleasantly warm. They'd love my house.

In general, thin people feel the cold more than the stout do, the elderly more than the young, the inactive more than the active, the unhealthy more than the robust. Women past menopause are often more bothered by cold than they were during their reproductive years. Also, people with anemia or hypothyroidism often are extremely sensitive to cold.

I suggest that those women who can't get warm invest in longjohns. This is an inexpensive and successful resolution to the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After many years of taking anti-depressants, I would like to know the difference between the new drugs offered (such as Prozac or Zoloft) as compared with older ones. Are the newer ones improved with less side effects?

DEAR READER: The newer anti-depressants are more effective, more expensive and, in general, have a lower side-effect profile. Nonetheless, the older medications are still preferred by some people; thus, new isn't necessarily better in all cases.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Mollere, in "Tartuffe," pointed out that "one is easily fooled by that which one loves." Too true. And as we all love bridge, sometimes we are fooled by it. Certainly South complained vociferously after going down on today's deal, but he had been fooled by the cards. Would you have seen the right play?

South's opening bid of two no-trump showed 20-22 points in the modern style. West naturally led the heart jack. Things looked easy to South. He won the first trick and immediately attacked diamonds. However, East, noting his partner's signal, held up the ace until the third round. Then East returned his last heart.

Now South had the problem of getting into the dummy. He led the spade queen, hoping someone would win with the ace. No tricks: two spades, three hearts, two diamonds and two clubs."

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 14, 1993

In the year ahead you're likely to handle yourself quite well in situations where you have a leadership role. In arrangements where you have to share your authority with another it could be a different story.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Persons who seldom, if ever, do anything for you are apt to be the ones you'll cater to today, while reliable pals upon whom you can always depend might be ignored. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Before jumping in and buying something impulsively today, take time to carefully analyze the situation to see if it's worth it, even if it is offered by a well-intentioned friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) An important objective you're desirous of attaining is definitely achievable, but you might have to work harder for it than you're presently prepared to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Franklin D. Roosevelt once said, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself." Don't let your doubts and apprehensions cause you to fail at something at which you could succeed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You won't be stingy today if you have to turn down a loan to a friend which you really can't afford in the first place. In this case follow your common sense, not your emotions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) No matter how hard you try it will be impossible to please everyone today. Do the best you can, but don't ruin all the arrangements by trying to do something you can't.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A thoughtful friend could be instrumental in opening an important door for you today. However, once you walk through it you had better be able to produce. The situation won't permit bluffing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

You'll mingle well today, even in unfamiliar venues with unfamiliar people. A word of warning: your judgment concerning strangers might not be very keen. Keep your guard up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Developments you'll deem special and exciting might transpire today. However, your spouse may not view these happenings in the same light. Compromise could be required.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Strive to be realistic today about something you want and feel you have a chance of getting. Unfortunately, you might rate your probabilities higher than they actually are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's a possibility someone might take advantage of your generous nature today. Interestingly, however, you might know you're being had, but you won't mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're not getting the type of results you desire today, chances are you designed a faulty game plan that is counterproductive. Go back to the drawing board and try to do better.
