Graham Vows To Veto Senate's State Budget Version

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Gov. Bob Graham said today the Senate's version of the state budget is unacceptable and he will veto the proposal if it becomes law and call a special session in June.

Graham blasted senators for not providing enough money for law enforcement and dipping into the working capital reserve fund to meet pressing transportation needs.

The Legislature must raise the gas tax to provide recurring revenues for roads problems, which will be around next year while the working capital fund won't be, he said. And "cannibalizing" law enforcement programs to get other money for transportation as the Senate proposes to do is unacceptable.

The House's spending plan is acceptable for the most part, he said, although he opposes the $130 million increase in required local property taxes mandated by the proposal.

His strongest criticism was for the plan put together a week ago by the Senate Appropriations Committee and headed for the Senate floor next week.

"I cannot allow the adoption of a budget that does not meet the most critical needs of the people we serve," the governor said at a news conference.

He demanded that legislators appropriate $4 million for 150 additional Florida Highway Patrol troopers; provide additional investigators and crime lab money for the Florida Department of Law Enforcement; provide additional staff for state's attorneys; earmark money to build and expand state prisons; and provide the additional judges requested by the Florida Supreme Court.

"The people of Florida demand action, and I will accept nothing less than their full and adequate protection," Graham said. "If the Legislature strays from its responsibility to the public, I will call it back into session to fulfill its proper duty."

Graham softened his position on the gasoline tax. He has been pressing for a boost in the eight-cent-a-gallon levy to provide additional money. He won't veto the budget if the Legislature refuses to raise this tax, however, he said today.

Other state needs, including law enforcement, education and economic development, can be met with existing revenues, the governor contended.

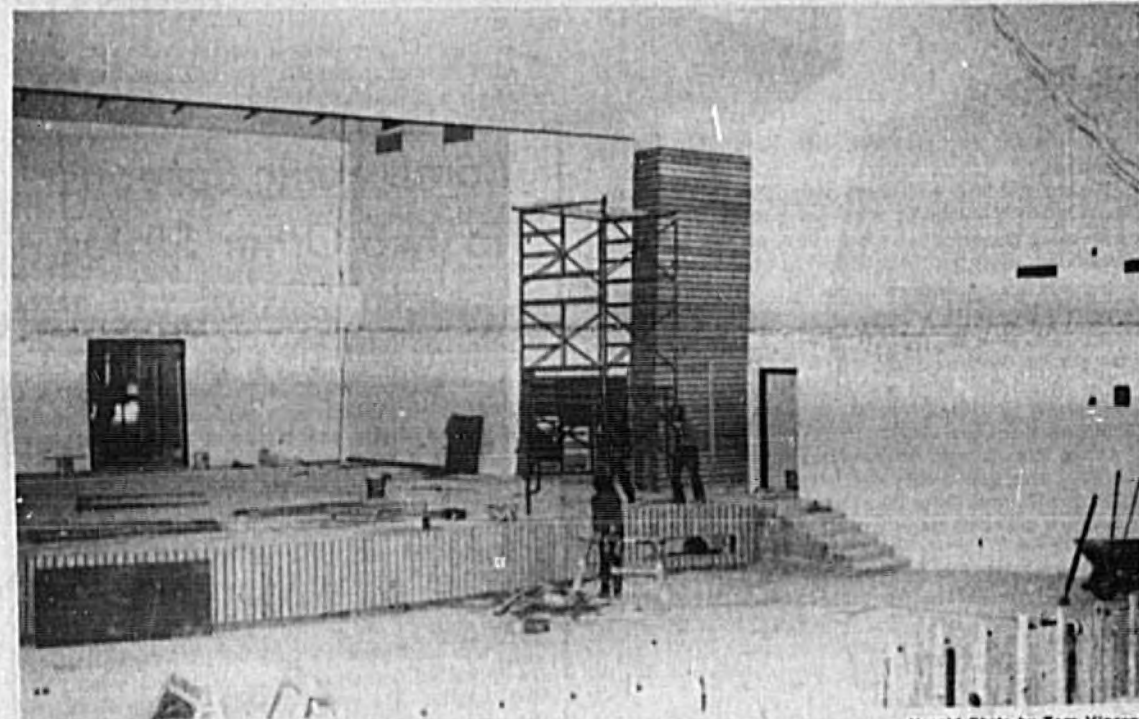

The House already has passed its budget. The Senate approved a plan three weeks ago, but recalled it after a conservative coalition charged it was designed to force a sales tax increase. Once senators vote out their second plan, a House

Senate conference committee will begin work on the final state spending proposal.

The Legislature is scheduled to adjourn June 3, but Graham said the chances of that happening are "slightly less than 50-50." Lawmakers likely will have gone home once Graham gets the budget. If he vetoed the proposal, he likely would call a special session before July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Graham said he would veto a plan given tentative approval by the Senate Thursday that cuts the Board of Regents from 10 to seven members and dilutes the panel's authority.

The Senate voted 31-4 for the plan, but the controversial proposal was left pending until next week on a motion for reconsideration.

ALMOST READY

Pointing out where bookshelves will be in the media center, Principal Don Reynolds (top photo) recently conducted a tour of the $14 million Lake Mary High School facilities now under construction on a 40-acre tract off Longwood-Lake Mary Road. The auditorium, (bottom photo) looked like this as construction crews worked to ready the school for its scheduled opening in August. It is expected to open with 950 students in 9th and 10th grade. Enrollment is expected to reach 2,200 when the 11th and 12th grades are added.

Prices Down, But So Are Earnings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A long-awaited decline in gasoline prices held the Consumer Price Index to an annual growth rate of 3.1 percent in April — one of the best readings in three years, the Labor Department reported today.

It was the second straight month of relief from double digit inflation. March's rate was 7.3 percent.

The figures appear to give new hope the overall cost of living may be leveling off for the first time in years.

The April reading was the second lowest rate since February of 1978, when the annual rate was 8.8 percent. The lowest was July's 1 percent rise, generally considered a statistical quirk caused by mortgage interest rate adjustment.

But at the same time, the government reported, real earnings of Americans declined for the fifth straight month.

The Labor Department's 3.1 percent annual rate, or 0.4 percent monthly rise, in the Consumer Price Index was seasonally adjusted.

Most striking in the figures was an actual decline in the average cost of a gallon of gasoline. It was a sign the gasoline glut has eliminated, at least for now, a long-time inflationary villain, oil prices.

The decrease was slight — less than a penny in the overall average price per gallon — but was a reverse from the year's trend so far. Gasoline prices declined through December, but rose again when President Reagan decontrolled the price of domestic crude.

The average price for all types of gasoline in April was $1.39 per gallon, down seventh-tenths of a cent. In March, the average went up by 3.3 cents. In February, the average rose by 11 cents.

Food and beverage costs — although lacking the dramatic turn-around of fuel prices — helped the overall index by not increasing. Prices for grocery store foods declined 0.3 percent, following a 0.4 percent increase in March. Beef, poultry and fish declined 1 percent, but egg prices went up sharply, by 4.2 percent.

Car prices went up 1.3 percent in April because of the end of most auto rebate promotions. But the entire transportation index declined for the first time in nine months, dropping 0.1 percent.

The Consumer Price Index reached 266.8 in April, which means it cost $266.80 to buy what cost $100 in 1967.

But in a separate report on Americans' real earnings, the Labor Department said the average weekly paycheck before taxes and inflation dipped by 36 cents to $248.54.

Moderating food and fuel prices have been the major good news, allowing other categories of spending, such as rent, home prices, interest rates and auto prices to become the inflationary villains, a role previously reserved for oil products.

But a gasoline glut, causing outright gasoline price declines in many areas, had a healthy influence on the April measurements, according to the Georgia State University forecasting project director, Donald Ratajeski.

Feds Stall On School Zoning OK

By SYBIL MITCHELL GANDY
Herald Staff Writer

Approval for the new Lake Mary High School zoning proposal which was submitted to federal attorneys in March is still pending, according to a letter received by School Board Attorney Ned Julian Jr.

U.S. Justice Department attorney Burtis Dougherty assured Seminole County School officials that the civil rights division continues to work diligently on the plan, but no decision has yet been made.

Schools Supt. Robert Hughes and other officials flew to Washington for a May 7 meeting with federal attorneys, hoping to further clarify the zoning proposal and secure federal approval.

Hughes felt the meeting was necessary after Julian received a letter from Dougherty expressing concern over the fact that the Lake Mary zoning proposal would produce a "virtually all-white" student body.

Although Dougherty said the meeting served simply as a platform for both sides to spell out their positions, he did admit that U.S. Justice officials felt the proposal would "further isolate the Crooms-Seminole school zone from the remainder of the county."

Although Hughes called the early May conference "very productive" with a "positive atmosphere" prevailing, U.S. attorneys were still "non-committal" in securing approval, Hughes stated.

The $14 million Lake Mary High School, scheduled to open next fall with approximately 950 9th and 10th grade students, will only have a 19.7 percent black population if zoning goes into effect.

Federal officials did indicate that such a small percentage may not fully comply with desegregation guidelines which provide that racial integration be implemented "as fully as possible" for any given school zone.

However, a number of factors, such as racial breakdown of the area, number of schools in the zone, and the burden of school transportation on any particular group, are taken into consideration, according to Dougherty.

In addition to the low percentage of blacks slated to attend the new school, some 30 percent of those black students are mentally handicapped, the zoning outline indicates.

Although officials declined to speculate further on the pending approval, they did admit that the high percentage of handicapped black students calculated in the total black population may be adding a new dimension to the zoning's problems.

More Join Starvation Assembly Line

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Two more Irish Republican hunger strikers died on the same day and were replaced today by two more fasters in the assembly-line starvations. Hundreds of Catholics went on rampages that left one civilian dead and six British soldiers wounded.

Britain, which governs Northern Ireland and has refused throughout to grant the fasters' demands for political status for IRA prisoners, announced Patrick O'Hara's death through its Northern Ireland office, in virtually the same terse statement made after the other deaths.

"Patrick O'Hara, a prisoner at HM Prison Maze, died Thursday at 11:20 p.m.," a government spokesman said. "He took his own life by refusing food and medical attention for 61 days." O'Hara, 24, died shortly before midnight Thursday in the 81st day of his fast — the fourth hunger striker to die in 18 days. Earlier Thursday, Raymond McCreesh, also 24, became the third IRA inmate to complete a promised "fast to the death."

Police in Londonderry, hometown of O'Hara, reported the city's worst violence since May 8 when Bobby Sands, the first of four convicts died.

Three civilians were injured in Londonderry rioting and one was transferred to a Belfast hospital, the spokesman said. Six soldiers suffered light wounds in a hail of 15 gasoline fragmentation bomb attacks, he said.

A Londonderry police spokesman said one civilian wounded in the rioting died in a hospital early Friday. No details of the victim's identity or injuries were available.

In Belfast and other cities across Ulster, police reported heavy petrol bombing, dozens of vehicle hijackings and rockthrowing as gangs of as many as 200 people swarmed through the streets.

At least 12 stores on the edge of the Catholic Bogside district were damaged by fires started by some of the 200 petrol bombs hurled at security forces, a police spokesman said. A boutique, a bar, a betting shop and a travel agency were destroyed.

Police reported eight to 10 shooting incidents in Belfast with the army returning fire on snipers. In one exchange at a housing development, soldiers reported one gunman hit.

Lake Mary's Water Problems On Hold

By BRITT SMITH
Herald Staff Writer

There's an emergency brewing in Lake Mary's water taps, according to City Manager Phil Kulbes, and he wants corrective action which could cost upwards of a half-million dollars. City councilmen, however, don't see the situation quite so gravely and have put Kulbes' plans on hold, at least for now.

At Thursday night's council meeting, Kulbes started out requesting only that he be authorized to purchase a new $2,368 meter to regulate water flow from Sanford which supplies the city's water. It seems the existing meter is inaccurate, resulting in the city receiving more water than is recorded on the meter. Sanford wants the meter repaired post haste, but Kulbes said the four-year-old device is no longer produced and spare parts are not available.

Councilmen denied Kulbes' purchase request, opting instead to demand the meter's manufacturer — the Neptune Co. of New York — either repair or replace the equipment.

As long as they were on the subject of water, Kulbes said he would like a second meter and hookup to Sanford's water main. "I'm really concerned about the safety of citizens in this city," he said. "If the water line breaks, the city would be without water until it's repaired because there is no second connection."

A second tap into the Sanford lines would cost from $87,000 to $115,000, according to city engineer Paul Porter. And a quarter-million gallon storage tank, which could hold a three-day supply of water, would cost an additional $420,000.

After hearing the pricetag for the project, Mayor Walter Sorenson said, "I'm not so sure this is as much of an emergency as you've said, Phil. There are people who have lived in this town for 60 years who have never had a second connection or a water tank. We can do without it for a while longer." The rest of the council agreed.

In other action, the council authorized City Attorney Gary Massey to represent Kulbes and councilman Ray Fox in a $1.3 million defamation suit filed earlier this month by the developers of the proposed $17 million Sunshine Park horse racing track. The developers — Harness Racing Inc. and Mid-State Development Co. — were rebuffed by Lake Mary voters in their efforts to build the track off Lake Emma Road last December. The firms then took their plans to Polk County, but were denied racing permits by the state.

Harness Racing and Mid-State Development filed suit against Fox and Kulbes, claiming the two had made accusations that the companies and its principals, one of which is Longwood entrepreneur Marc Robinson, were engaged in criminal activity.

Councilmen said Fox and Kulbes should be supported because whatever statements they may have made were done in the city's best interest.

Gamesters Sue New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — The inventors of a game called "Public Assistance, Why Bother Working for a Living," are suing New York City for allegedly blocking the game's sale in city department stores.

Robert Johnson and Ronald Pramschafer of Annapolis, Md. alleged in their court complaint city officials asked such stores as Macy's and Gimbel's not to stock the game "because it painted welfare recipients in a bad light."

The complaint filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan seeks $500,000 in damages for the alleged loss of business since the board game, played like Monopoly, was to be introduced to New York last November. It asked for $5 million more to punish the city for its alleged unconstitutional interference.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Begin Toughens Demands Complicating Peace Efforts

By United Press International
JERUSALEM, Israel — Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a television interview for NBC's "Today" Thursday, toughened his demands on Syria, complicating delicate diplomatic efforts now under way to resolve the crisis.
 Begin demanded Syria's recently deployed anti-aircraft missiles must be removed not only from Lebanon but also from territory inside Syria near the Lebanese border. He also said Syria must promise not to fire missiles from its own territory at Israeli planes flying over Lebanon.
 The remarks came during a lull in the United States' special envoy Philip Habib's peacekeeping mission. While Habib passed the night in Jerusalem before flying to Beirut, the Lebanese capitol erupted in all-night violence. Residents hid in bomb shelters as Syrian and Lebanese Christians troops exchanged rocket and artillery fire.
 One shell hit the presidential palace, smashing the office of President Elias Sarkis, and another 155 mm shell hit the garden of U.S. Ambassador John Gunther Dean's residence. Neither man has hurt.

U.S. On Formula Code: 'No'

GENEVA, Switzerland — For the second time in two days, the United States stood alone in voting against an international code designed to regulate marketing of infant formula.
 The final vote at the World Health Organization's annual assembly was 118-1, with Japan, South Korea and Argentina abstaining.
 A similar vote of 95-1 with rare abstentions Wednesday in Committee brought an outcry of protest in Washington. Several congressmen and health officials called the U.S. vote "stupid," "absurd" and "phony."
 Dr. Stephen Joseph, chief health official for the Agency for International Development (AID) and Eugene Babb, AID's top agriculture and rural development official, resigned in protest over the vote.

Ripper Found Guilty

LONDON (UPI) — A six-man, six-woman jury today found the confessed "Yorkshire Ripper," guilty of murder on all 13 charges against him.
 By a majority vote of 10 to 2 the jury rejected Peter Sutcliffe's plea of guilty to a lesser charge of manslaughter while insane.
 The jury had reported earlier it had failed to reach a unanimous verdict on the sanity of the confessed killer and the judge said he would accept a majority decision.
 Sutcliffe was sentenced to life in prison and Judge Lesley Boreham said the 34-year-old truck driver must serve a minimum of 30 years.

Surprise, South Indiana Has More Sink Holes

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — Southern Indiana has more sinkholes than any other area in the world, but suffers less from them than Winter Park, Fla., did last week, an Indiana State University geologist reports.
 According to Dr. Donald Ash, a professor of geology at ISU, a topographical map of southern Indiana "looks like a moon-cape," because of the huge number of sinkholes.
 "There are thousands and thousands of sinkholes in southern Indiana," Ash said. "There is one square mile near Orleans, Ind., where a man counted 1,023 sinkholes."
 A sinkhole appears when water dissolves the supporting rock underground, and in the cases of Winter Park and southern Indiana that rock is limestone. As it dissolves, large cavities are created under the surface into which the earth collapses.
 Despite the fact that southern Indiana has the largest number of sinkholes per acre, it is still a safer place to build than the Winter Park area, according to Ash. The limestone in Florida is relatively young and therefore still unstable. "Every year sinkholes crop up somewhere in Florida and you hear of a car or house falling into one of them," Ash said.
 The problem is further complicated by the fact that ground elevation in Florida is so near the water table and when the surface collapses sinkholes fill with water.
 Southern Indiana, on the other hand, has an underlayer of very old limestone and the water has mostly subsided, making it relatively stable. The ground elevation is also considerably higher than the water table so most small sinkholes do not fill with water, he said.
 Indiana residents in the area have learned to live with the problem, Ash said.
 "Some farmers will fence off sinkholes and allow livestock to run in them, creating useful farm ponds," Ash said. "Others simply shovel a pickup truck load of gravel into the smaller ones and pretend they were never there."
 Ash said watching a sinkhole develop is not very exciting or frightening. "The earth begins to crack and then slowly subsides, giving anyone nearby adequate opportunity to escape."
 Ash added that sinkholes are impossible to predict and will continue to occur with regularity.

Two Men Hospitalized After Shooting

By BRITT SMITH
 Herald Staff Writer
 Two Sanford men were in satisfactory condition at Seminole Memorial Hospital today recovering from gunshot wounds suffered in an early morning gun battle at one of the victims' home.
 Wounded in the shootout was Doc Lee Roland, 45, of 514 Cypress Ave. and Ernest Harris, age and address unknown.
 According to the city police report, Roland and Harris shot each other with the same gun. The pair were at Roland's home about 2:30 a.m. when they got into an argument of an unknown nature. Harris reportedly pulled a .32-caliber revolver and shot Roland twice, in the stomach and in the left leg above the knee.
 Roland then wrestled the gun away from Harris and shot him in the back of the head and upper left arm, police said. Following the shooting, Roland went into his yard and began firing into the air until he was calmed by a neighbor, according to police. Criminal charges are pending.
TEENS NABBED FOR AUTO THEFT
 Two Pennsylvania teen-agers were being held in the Volusia County Detention facility today after leading police from three agencies on a three-hour chase through a stand of woods along Interstate 4.
 The episode began about 10 a.m. Thursday when Florida

Highway Patrolman R.M. McLendon spotted two boys loitering around a black 1966 Mustang parked near the intersection of I-4 and State Road 44 near the Executive Inn in DeLand. The car was later discovered to have been stolen in Pennsylvania on Monday.
 As McLendon approached, the youths ran. One of the boys, 14, was captured within an hour, but his 17-year-old companion proved more elusive. Joining in the chase were officers from the Volusia County sheriff's office, the Highway Patrol, and DeLand police department. A helicopter and bloodhounds were also used to track the fugitive.
 He was finally apprehended about 2 p.m. in a section of woodlands not far from where the boys were originally spotted.
 The identities of the youths were being withheld because of their age. They will be returned to Pennsylvania for possible prosecution, authorities said.

INSURANCE SCAM UNCOVERED
 A former DeLand couple, charged with faking a death in order to collect on a life insurance policy, are being sued by the insurance carrier they allegedly sought to defraud.
 The Connecticut Life Insurance Co. filed suit in federal court in Augusta, Ga. Wednesday against John Henry Owens and his wife Nellie Pearl Owens asking for the return of $104,000 paid to Mrs. Owens upon the supposed death of her husband in 1972.
 A third person, Robert McMahon, a former Ft. Gordon, Ga. soldier, was also named in the suit.
 Mrs. Owens was awarded the money in 1973 as a result of a superior court suit she filed seeking additional money from the insurance company. She was originally awarded $4,000 from the firm.
 But last March, the Owens were found living in DeLand and their scheme was uncovered.
 The body buried as Owens was exhumed and further medical examination was made to determine the exact cause of death. The three have been in custody in the Richmond County jail since March, charged with murder and insurance fraud.
 After conducting its own investigation, Connecticut Life filed suit, charging the three "conspired to and defrauded the company of $104,000 — money wrongly paid to Nellie Owens."

Picasso Portrait Sells For $5.3 Million

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
 UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — A self-portrait that Pablo Picasso painted in 1901 has been sold for $5.3 million — the highest price ever paid at auction for a Picasso or for a 20th Century work of art.
 It was also the fourth highest price at a public sale for any work of art.
 The three paintings that have exceeded the price are Turner's

"Juliet and Her Nurse," which sold for $6.4 million; Velazquez's "Juan de Pareja," which brought $5.5 million, and Rubens' "Samson and Delilah," which sold for $5.4 million.
 The consignor paid only $630,000 for the painting, "Self-Portrait: No. 1" at an auction six years ago.
 The portrait of the wide-eyed young artist in a white blouse and a red scarf, painted shortly after Picasso arrived in Paris from his native Spain, was sold Thursday night to an anonymous American private collector at the Sotheby Galleries.
 It was part of a sale of 82 Impressionist and modern paintings and sculptures sold for a total of $24 million.
 Nineteen items in the sale were not sold because bids did not meet the minimum reserve price set by the sellers.

However, the sale was hailed as a success by Sotheby executives since the total sales met pre-auction estimates.
 Record auction prices were set for works by painter Alfred Sisley — $450,000 — and Rene Magritte ($380,000), and sculptor Aristide Maillol ($230,000).
 The second highest price fetched in the sale was $2 million for Pierre-Auguste Renoir's "Two Young Girls Reading," bought by a European private collector.
 Another Picasso, "Still Life with Jonquils and Irises," was won by a $700,000 bid from an anonymous European collector.
 The record auction price for a Sisley landscape painted in 1888 was paid by a German dealer, the record for Magritte, by an Illinois private collector, and a record for Maillol by a New York private collector.

Supreme Court Allows Commitment Of Retarded

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — The Florida Supreme Court upheld Thursday a law allowing a mentally retarded person to be committed to a hospital or other treatment facility.
 The justices also ordered a new trial for Raymond Drake, sentenced to death for the murder of a Pinellas Park woman in 1977.
 The court, in a 5-2 decision, reversed the 2nd District Court of Appeal and upheld the law allowing the involuntary commitment of a person who is mentally retarded or has other developmental disabilities.
 The ruling is considered a major one, comparable to the 1977 ruling in which the justices upheld Florida's Baker Act, which allows for the commitment of persons who are mentally ill.
 (The retarded are persons whose mental abilities are hampered by birth defects and other physical problems. Mentally ill are individuals with normal intelligence and abilities, but whose behavior is affected by emotional imbalance and other mental problems.)
 The case involved Billy Lee Kinner, charged with the lewd assault of a child in 1973. Kinner was found innocent by reason of insanity and placed in Florida State Hospital at Chattahoochee.
 He didn't object to his commitment at first, but did later and was discharged from the facility in April, 1978. The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services began proceedings to recommit him under the mental retardation act and won an order from a judge. Kinner appealed to the 2nd DCA, which found the commitment statute unconstitutional.
 The appeals court found that the statute wasn't specific enough to ensure that it affects only "those unable to weigh the risks of freedom and benefits of hospitalization and to those dangerous to themselves and dangerous to others."

 The Supreme Court disagreed, accepting arguments by HRS that the law contains safeguards similar to those in the Baker Act covering the mentally ill.
 Both statutes say, basically, that a person may be involuntarily hospitalized because of mental deficiencies of illness if he is likely to injure himself or others if allowed to remain at liberty. This language is specific enough, the majority of the Supreme Court said.
 Chief Justice Alan Sundberg and Justice Art England disagreed.
 The procedures for involuntary commitment of the retarded and mentally ill are similar. A hearing is held before a circuit judge that includes testimony from three persons, including a licensed physician, on the need for the commitment.
 If the testimony is sufficient, the judge appoints a panel of experts to investigate the person whose mental competency is being questioned. The panel reports back to the judge, who then decides whether to sign the commitment papers.
 The patient must be present at all of the proceedings and represented by counsel, who has the right to cross-examine witnesses and submit defense evidence.
 Drake was convicted of murdering Odette Reeder, whose partially decomposed body was found in a wooded area in Oldsmar. The prosecution theorized that Ms. Reeder had been raped, but this could not be confirmed by doctors because of the decomposition of the lower part of the body.
 Part of the state's evidence was that on two prior occasions, Drake had sexually assaulted other women and bound the victims hands behind their backs as Ms. Reeder's hands had been found bound.

 The connection between these incidents and the killing was not strong enough to allow the submission of testimony on them as evidence, the Supreme Court concluded in a 6-1 opinion.
 There may still be evidence to support Drake's conviction, the court said, so it ordered a new trial, rejecting Drake's motion for a dismissal of the charge.

Bomb Panic Spreads To Two Other States

United Press International
 A weeklong wave of attempted bombings that has frightened some edgy New Yorkers into buying bullet-proof vests has spread to Connecticut and Boston.
 All of the explosives found Thursday — at the U.N. garage in New York City, in a men's room at a crowded Boston bus station and outside a Hamden, Conn., department store — were removed safely. Police in Watertown, Conn., said they found what were believed to be ingredients for three pipe bombs in a restaurant when the owner arrived at work.
 A suspect, Michael G. Charland, 23, of Watertown was arrested and charged with bomb manufacture and disorderly conduct. He was jailed in lieu of $10,000 bond and an arraignment was set for today, police said.
 The pipe bomb found in a sanitation truck parked inside the United Nations garage was the sixth bomb planted in New York City in a week. Police say they do not believe the same people were responsible for all six.
 As the week wore on security devices were being snapped up in record numbers.
 Although the price of a bulletproof vest ranges from $195 to $400, armor plating for a car starts at $40,000 and a "blonic" briefcase that can be used as a shield against bullets costs $700, nervous diplomats and executives are scrambling for the safety precautions.
 "Everyone is getting paranoid," said a bomb-squad detective who regularly holds security seminars for businesses. "It always happens after a bombing or two. Now it's happening with a lot more frequency and urgency."
 In New York, a Puerto Rican group has claimed responsibility for three of the bombs, including one that exploded Saturday at Kennedy Airport killing a 19-year-old news vendor.
 Anonymous callers also led police to a hand grenade at the Trailways bus terminal in Boston and two bombs outside a Hamden, Conn., department store. In each case, the callers gave no reason for the bombs and no groups claimed responsibility.

'People May Say We Are Selling Kids Like A Tin Of Baked Beans...'

LONDON (UPI) — Sandwiched between the dryer cleaner and the carpet store just off the main street is a shop that offers children.
 The Family Finding Shop is an adoption service with a difference. An arm of local government in the London suburb of Greenwich, it uses a bright, open storefront and marketing techniques more familiar to business to encourage people to adopt children.
 The window is crammed with information about children available for adoption or "fostering." Inside, in a decidedly un-bureaucratic atmosphere, a social worker is ready to talk about the problems and rewards of adopting a child. Interested parents can even take home a package of information about the children.
 "We are trying to establish a contact point with the community," explained Murray Marks, director of the service. "My goal is to bring adoption and fostering out into the open."
 "People may say we are selling kids like a tin of baked beans. If so, it is the most tasteful marketing of baked beans ever. And by having this shop, some children who would have grown up in an institution will have families."

 His social worker staff currently is trying to place about 35 children, aged 5 to 15. Most are from broken or troubled homes. Many have physical or mental handicaps.
 Its average "stock" is a 7-year-old youngster who has been in the state's care for three to four years. He sees his mother or father about three times a year.
 "My dad went away when I was very little," reads a note by Sophie in the store window. "When I first came in, my mum used to come see me a lot."
 "She had a green coat, but now she has moved a long way and she has a new baby," said the message in the handwriting of a 7-year-old. "I live in a children's home with a lot of other people."
 Three months ago Marks moved from the bureaucratic maze of county hall and filled the shop's windows with pictures, descriptions, even toys and clothing of children who need families.
 "We moved here to be accessible," he said in his office above the shop. "It is important that we be available to families who might be interested in adopting or fostering a child."
 "Too often a service like this is faceless. We are trying to put a public face on it. It is a fundamentally different concept."
 "I see my job essentially as one of marketing," he said. "We have a problem: there are children who don't have parents to live with. I have to get this message across to people. The child really is his own best advertiser."
 Marks estimates an extra six placements in three months have come just from having the storefront.
 Does such an approach hurt the children?
 "This could be a problem. It is certainly a very sensitive area of our work," Marks said. "There is always the possibility of further rejection of an already emotionally battered child."
 Each child agrees to have his name and profile included in the store's "catalogue," and the social-worker staff is careful to put no pressure on shoppers who wander in.

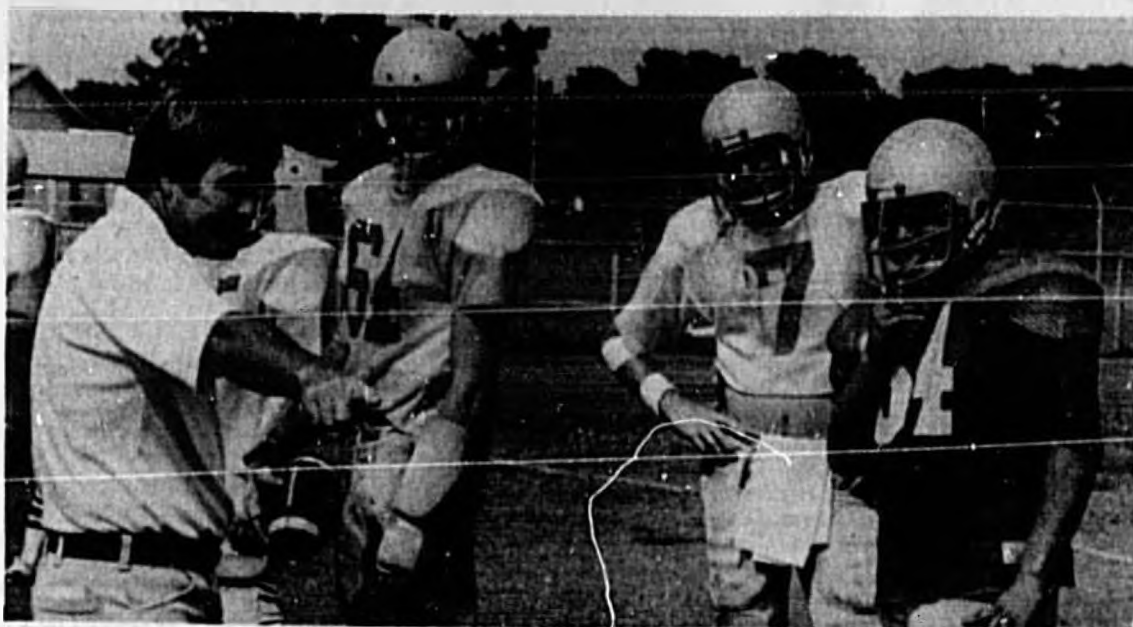

Federal Grant To Provide 15 New OSOTA Buses

U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Altamonte Springs, announced Thursday a $2 million federal grant has been awarded to the Orange-Seminole-Osceola Transit Authority to purchase 15 advanced-design buses.
 The new vehicles will supplement OSOTA's 47-bus fleet already in operation in the three-county area. The new buses will each be equipped with lifts for non-ambulatory persons, McCollum said, adding only three of the fleet's current buses are presently so equipped.
 The total grant from the U.S. Urban Mass Transportation Administration is $2,084,234. Part of the money is to be used to purchase fare boxes and radios with the remainder used to buy the new buses.
 "What this means is that Orange-Seminole-Osceola counties are going to have a significant increase in bus service. On a broader scale the new buses will provide the added potential for saving gasoline and decreasing traffic congestion," McCollum said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Reagan Asks Bi-Partisan Approach On SS Program

By United Press International
Washington — President Reagan, under attack from congressmen and senators of both political parties for his plan to cut early retirement and other Social Security benefits, is calling on leading lawmakers to compromise. Saying the Social Security system is "teetering on the verge of bankruptcy", Reagan appealed to congressional leaders to approach the issue in a bipartisan manner. He said he is not "wedded to any single solution" and is open to compromise. He sent a conciliatory letter to House Speaker Tip O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker warning the deficit in the system will reach $111 billion in the next five years.

No Fed Money For Abortion?

Washington — A ban on the use of federal funds for abortions except when the life of the mother is threatened is virtually assured of becoming law. The Senate Thursday lined up with the House in approving the most far-reaching ban on federal funds for abortions ever enacted by the Congress. With both of Florida's senators — Lawton Chiles, D-Lakeland, and Paula Hawkins, R-Winter Park — voting with the majority, the Senate refused, however, to go along entirely with a House provision. The House's provision forbade the use of federal funds for any abortion. Thursday's Senate vote eliminated rape and incest as exceptions. Opponents of the proposed law said it would deny benefits to 8,000-to-10,000 women whose pregnancies result from rape.

Ohioan Is Miss USA

Biloxi, Miss.—A brown-eyed blonde from Germantown, Ohio, Kim Sealbrede, won the Miss USA Pageant Thursday night. The 20-year-old beauty, daughter of Herbert and June Sealbrede, received the crown as Miss New York, Deborah Ann Fountain, ousted from the contest earlier in the week for padding her bra, watched from the audience. Miss Fountain's attempts at court action to force pageant officials to let her rejoin the contest proved unsuccessful. The new Miss USA stands 5-foot-4 and weighs 114. She will represent the United States in the Miss Universe contest to be held in New York on July 20. First runner-up in Thursday night's pageant was Miss Indiana, Holli Dennis, 21, of Fort Wayne.

'Person' Sought In Killings

Atlanta — Investigators are hunting for a "person" who may be able to provide information on the death of one of 27 young blacks murdered here. A composite sketch of that person may be released soon if investigators cannot find the individual. Douglas County Sheriff Earl Lee, a suburban sheriff, said the person may be able to shed light in the case of Eddie Duncan, 31, whose body was found on March 31 in the Chattahoochee River in Douglas County. While Lee could not say whether the individual definitely could provide help in the case, he added, "We just want to talk to that person."

Williams Indictment Eyed

Washington — Department of Justice lawyers are preparing to ask a federal grand jury in Chicago to indict Roy L. Williams, interim president of the Teamsters Union, and others in a labor corruption scheme. A Senate subcommittee, meanwhile, is pressing the Labor Department to oust Williams as Teamster Union president unless he answers questions about his alleged ties to organized crime. The report from the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, approved with dissent from some members, said that Raymond J. Donovan, Labor Secretary, as a first step should formally summon Williams for questioning. Williams has refused to comment on the Senate subcommittee action.

Hinckley Guilty Plea Tried?

Charlotte, N.C. — Lawyers for the man accused in the March 30 assassination attempt on President Reagan have unsuccessfully tried to negotiate a guilty plea for their client, The Charlotte Observer reported today. The newspaper, quoting unnamed sources, said attorneys for John Hinckley Jr. have sought the plea bargaining under the Federal Youth Corrections Act. The newspaper said Hinckley will turn 26 years old next Friday and will no longer qualify for the law's provisions. The Youth Corrections Act gives judges broad discretion in sentencing offenders convicted before their 26th birthday. The intent of the law is to substitute rehabilitation for punishment.

Flood Watches In Montana

United Press International
Torrential rains dumped up to 3 inches of rain in the northern Rockies and raised rivers to flood stage, prompting a flash flood watch today in northwestern and central Montana. Heavy rains and record cold lashed the South and stretched into southern Florida, bringing at least some temporary relief to the drought-stricken region. Fierce thunderstorms pushed into the northern Plains region, with winds clocked at 60 mph in Lexington, Neb.

UMW Reverses Position In Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers union has revised its contract demand involving job security — a key area of dispute in its two-month-old strike against the soft coal industry. The amended demand was to be placed on the bargaining table during today's resumption of talks with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association that had been recessed for three days so the UMW could reexamine its overall package. UMW President Sam Church Jr. announced the resumption of talks Thursday after the union's 39-member bargaining council revised the job security demand, the stickiest of seven unresolved contract issues. Although Church would not disclose specifics, it deals with the union's demand that UMW-covered companies only subcontract work to firms that pay UMW-scale wages and benefits. Without this provision, the union fears UMW miners would lose jobs. Church told reporters the strike by 160,000 miners "could be settled pretty quickly" if there is progress at the bargaining table. The strike, now in day 37, has been marred by scattered violence in the coal fields, much of it directed at non-union mines that have continued to dig and move coal. Church Thursday vented some of his anger with a verbal assault on Bobby R. Brown, the industry's chief contract negotiator. He called Brown "a puppet for his bosses in the oil industry," which financially backs many coal operations. Bargaining council members had little to say Thursday as they left UMW headquarters. "I think we're making some progress," said Paul Blitcho, International Executive Board representative from Pittsburgh's District 2. "We just talked among ourselves today, that's all," said Joe Davidson of Beckley, W.Va., IEB representative from District 29. Church said he intends to keep the bargaining council in Washington over the Memorial Day weekend.

History Comes To Life

The wonderful world of history and invention comes to light when 5th grade youngsters at Idylwild Elementary present "The Electric Sunshine Man," on Friday, May 22th at 7:30 p.m. In a delightfully fast-moving musical drama on the life and times of famous American inventor, Thomas Edison, the Idylwild players present their very own version of what Edison must have felt as an inventor in early America.

Mark Woiniak, plays the brilliant Edison as he makes the first phonograph, the first electric light, and the first moving picture. The original play has been coordinated by Mrs. Barbara Brorup, a 5th-grade teacher at the school. Two performances are scheduled for Friday morning at 9:00 a.m. and 10:15 a.m. for Idylwild students. But the public is cordially invited to the 7:30 performance that evening.

Socialist Win Panics France

The panic on the Paris stock exchange said a lot about the likely economic consequences of Socialist Francois Mitterrand's victory in the French presidential elections.

At best, Mr. Mitterrand's election to a seven-year term as president spells serious trouble for a French economy that, despite its current slump, had held reasonably strong throughout the tumultuous energy and monetary shocks of the 1970s.

At worst, a Mitterrand presidency may also be bad news for a Western alliance within which France had recently emerged, however paradoxically, as something resembling a relative pillar of strength.

The Mitterrand prescription for curing the unemployment and inflation that helped to deny incumbent President Valery Giscard d'Estaing a second term is uniformly the wrong medicine for the ills of the French economy.

The Socialist party platform calls for a substantial boost in France's minimum wage, make-work government jobs for the unemployed, an increase in the money supply of up to 17 percent per year, and an ambitious program of industrial nationalization.

Should these programs be put into effect, the predictable consequences would include much more inflation, higher government spending, a dramatic decline in investment, and falling exports as France becomes progressively less competitive on world markets.

All of this undoubtedly would create unemployment faster than Mr. Mitterrand's government could "solve" it by getting people to work at the French equivalent of leaf-raking.

No wonder, then, that the franc plunged on world money markets and the Paris exchange had to be closed abruptly to halt the worst financial hemorrhage in decades.

How much of the Socialists' economic program is implemented depends largely on the outcome of parliamentary elections Mr. Mitterrand plans to call in June. At present, the center-right parties that supported Giscard d'Estaing hold a 100-seat majority in the National Assembly, a margin large enough to block most of Mr. Mitterrand's ill-advised schemes.

Thus, the president-elect must hope for a Socialist majority in the new assembly to be elected next month. If the Socialists fall short, as they probably will, they must look for parliamentary allies on the left, which means a Socialist-Communist coalition.

The Communists, undaunted by their drubbing in the first round of France's two-stage presidential election, will want to pull a Mitterrand government further left as the price of their support.

That would spell even worse news for the French economy.

But the most serious consequences of a Socialist-Communist coalition would be felt in foreign policy. Under Giscard d'Estaing, France had begun in recent years to lend welcome support to the Western alliance.

Although the French remained outside of NATO's formal military structure, Giscard d'Estaing repeatedly sent troops to bolster African states threatened by Cubans or Libyans, deployed a sizable naval squadron to the Indian Ocean, and steadily strengthened French forces that would almost certainly fight on NATO's side in any showdown in Europe.

A Socialist-Communist coalition would no doubt turn away from similar initiatives in the future. Most unfortunately, the election of Francois Mitterrand is likely to be regretted by the West no less than, in time, by the French themselves.

U.S. Firms Seek AID

WASHINGTON — I've already reported that Egyptian millionaires and corrupt bureaucrats are growing fat on U.S. economic aid, while the impoverished fellahs wait for some of Uncle Sam's billions to trickle down to them.

There is another group that is benefiting from the Agency for International Development money being lavished on Egypt as part of the U.S. government's "reward" to Anwar Sadat for signing peace accords with Israel. That group is American corporations. And like the Egyptian beneficiaries, they are getting fat at the U.S. taxpayers' expense.

The law requires that recipients of AID loans "buy American." It's a logical requirement. There's no reason American taxpayers should lend money at giveaway rates to businessmen or nations so they can hire German or Japanese companies to build their dams or factories. And indeed, many AID borrowers acknowledge that without the inducement of AID funds they probably would have thrown their business elsewhere.

The result is that scores of American firms have set up branch offices in Cairo to wangle their share of the AID pie. And they have taken to lobbying the agency for help in competing with European companies for lucrative Egyptian development contracts.

For example, AID is currently participating with the World Bank and some European countries to install a new telephone system in Cairo. Now American business representatives are pressuring AID to take the lead on the follow-up project — switching stations for long-distance calls.

"We want AID to give more funding, so U.S. manufacturers will get the market for the switches," said one American telecommunications consultant, adding: "Other governments help their industries. It's time we started helping ours."

But in their scramble for profits, American corporations often take advantage of the "edge" that AID gives them. Several Egyptian businessmen complained that U.S. exporters often jack their prices up when AID money is involved, knowing that the Egyptians are required to buy American.

Adel Rezika, the owner of a candy factory in Cairo, told my roving correspondent Peter Grant that the price of a sugar pulverizing machine he bought from a New Jersey company had gone from $7,800 to $11,000 in just two years — a 41 percent increase. "It is against the reason of the AID program," he complained.

Sometimes, in fact, it appears that steering contracts to American firms is the primary goal of the AID program.

For example, Adel Gabr, the Egyptian representative of the Multi-Electric Co. of Chicago, had been trying to win a government contract to put in a lighting system at Arwan airport. Gabr said the business was about to go to a Dutch firm. But at the last minute, AID came through with a $980,000 loan, enabling Multi-Electric to get the contract.

Opportunities Abound In Business

By JAMES V. HIGGINS

UPI Auto Writer
DETROIT (UPI) — Take heart, liberal arts majors — General Motors Corp. wants you.

True, the No. 1 automaker's hiring has been severely restricted by the auto industry's two-year slump, dimming short-term prospects.

It's also true that the company is highly oriented toward the technical and scientific.

But that doesn't diminish GM's ultimate interest in attracting sizable numbers of college graduates whose analytical and language skills have been honed in a liberal arts program, said the company's director of worldwide salaried personnel.

Participating in a recent panel discussion on non-academic careers for history majors, GM's William P. MacKinnon said "real opportunities" exist for non-technical graduates in mainstream areas of the corporation.

GM, MacKinnon said, is "seeking out the

DON GRAFF

Rome And Beyond

The shooting of Pope John Paul II demonstrates a grim truth about violence directed at public personalities: The problem is worldwide; it is by no means an American speciality.

It also makes several points about the difficulties in dealing with the problem, beyond the obvious one of providing some reasonable degree of security for the powerful and celebrated without isolating them from the public entirely.

The pope was scarcely out of surgery before several governments with good reasons for taking special interest were at discreet odds over aspects of the situation other than the victim's condition.

The would-be assassin is a Turkish national, wanted for murder at home, who spent the last year and a half underground in Western Europe. Turkey, making the point that it actively sought his apprehension, seems to think the Europeans were less active in assisting. In particular West Germany, where he was known to be at one time but which was unable to locate him despite repeated tips from the Turks.

For their part, the Germans say they tried. But the fugitive, using false names and forged identity documents, had the advantage of the protective cover provided by the more than a million Turks in Germany's foreign labor force. Under the circumstances, anyone with any skill at all in leading a clandestine existence could be expected to elude detection in an open society.

A point supported by other interested parties, including U.S. State Department officials charged with monitoring terrorist activities and Interpol, the international police organization that is primarily an information-exchange operation. The latter notes that the sheer volume of travelers within and between countries, with few border formalities anymore, enables wanted individuals to move about with virtual impunity. It is a point that does not impress the Turks, quite likely in part because theirs is not an open society these days.

Turkey has been under a military government since last September when the generals stepped in — for the third time since World War II — to halt the civilian government's descent from democracy into anarchy. Assassination of public figures and political foes had become epidemic. Strife between religious groups — the dwindling Christian minority, Muslims and sects within the majority Moslem community — was approaching civil war. Beset by inflation and an immense and unrepayable foreign debt, the economy was approaching collapse.

To give them their due, the generals have slowed inflation and curbed internal terrorism. But at a price. Political prisoners number in the tens of thousands and there have been substantiated reports of torture.

And there is no indication that they have made any lasting progress toward solving Turkey's real problem — the country's ability to complete the revolution begun by Kemal Ataturk more than half a century ago with the goal of transforming Turkey into a Western-style secular democracy. Periodically under the pressures of religious fanaticism and political extremism, the rule of law breaks down and gives way to the rule of force.

The pope's assailant is very much a product of his troubled country, a religious and political extremist releasing the hatreds arising from Turkey's national contradictions and conflicts in violence upon a world figure.

So long as there are open societies in which public personalities make themselves available to the public, and so long as there are troubled societies and social situations producing troubled personalities, there can be no guaranteeing the security of president or pope.

ROBERT WALTERS

Formula For A Tragedy

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A small group of President Reagan's most senior advisers has taken an action on an increasingly important global issue that almost certainly will isolate this country from virtually every other nation in the world.

Ignoring humanitarian pleas and rejecting the advice of highly qualified professionals, the president's aides have decided to commit the United States to opposing a proposed code governing the advertising, promoting and marketing of infant formula.

Efforts to secure an international consensus on the issue were launched two years ago by a pair of United Nations agencies, UNICEF and the World Health Organization. A final vote is expected at the annual meeting of the World Health Assembly, being held this month in Geneva, Switzerland.

Senior Officials in the State Department and the Department of Health and Human Services — most of them Reagan's own appointees — had reservations about the proposed code but were equally concerned about the ramifications of a negative vote by this country's delegation on a proposal supported by more than 150 other nations.

They advanced two alternative strategies: negotiate to secure modifications that would meet the Reagan administration's objections by weakening the code or, if the effort failed, abstain during the voting.

Elliot Abrams, assistant secretary of state for international organization affairs, was dispatched to Geneva earlier this year to gain commitments for those concessions and returned believing that he had been successful.

Abrams' mission was specifically approved by Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark, a longtime personal friend and political ally of the president.

But Clark's plan to defuse the potentially explosive situation through a carefully crafted compromise reportedly angered Edwin Meese III, the president's counselor and most senior adviser on policy matters.

On a Friday evening in early May, Meese convened a White House meeting at which he resolved the issue with Lyn Neffizer, assistant to the president for political affairs; Martin Anderson, assistant to the president for policy development; and Richard V. Allen, assistant to the president for national security affairs.

In a decision that was both inhumane and unjustifiable, that select group agreed to place this country on record in opposition to a program that could protect the health and save the lives of thousands of children every year.

The draft code has been vigorously opposed by a trio of domestic corporations that share in the industry's estimated $2 billion worth of international sales annually.

They are Abbot Laboratories, whose Ross Laboratories subsidiary makes Isomil and Similac; Bristol-Myers Co., whose Mead Johnson subsidiary produces Enfamil.

Moss Sign Of Southern Heritage

As we come to the end of May there is still a lot to do around the home. Let's look at some questions and answers that may interest you:

Q: I have Spanish moss in my trees. Should this be removed? Also is there any useful purpose for Spanish moss?

A: Spanish moss is a lichen-like plant which belongs to the family Bromeliaceae. It is not a true moss since it produces tiny, inconspicuous, yellowish-green flowers. The stems and leaves are gray, thread-like appendages usually found draping from trees, especially live oaks and cypresses.

It is an epiphyte that grows on other plants without taking water and nutrition from the plants on which it grows. The moss obtains moisture from the air by means of the scale-hairs that give the moss its gray coloring.

In many southern states Spanish moss is used as a packing material. At one time it was commonly used as a mattress material, and in upholstery work. The moss was collected from trees and placed on racks in the sun to dry. Upon drying the moss becomes very thread-like and changes in color from gray to black.

Today, Spanish moss is commonplace in many southern gardens. It sets a tropical atmosphere to the garden, adding charm and grace, and is a reminder of the heritage of the south.

Spanish moss usually has little or not detrimental effect on a host tree. However, the abundance of Spanish moss has been damaging to some southern commercial crops, particularly pecans.

The moss shades the trees and retards growth, preventing storage of the necessary carbohydrates for pecan production. Spanish moss can be killed by spraying trees with a copper fungicide before growth begins in the spring.

Every year my poinsettia plants grow up very tall with few flowers. How can I get them to branch out more?

A: A compact plant may be obtained at flowering time, rather than one with a few long, unbranched canes, if the plants are pruned several times during the growing season.

The new growth, after it is 12 inches long, should be cut back, leaving 4 leaves on shoot. This operation should be repeated every time the new growth develops until about September 10.

Pruning in this manner will produce a nice compact plant with many flowers. Pruning after September 10 may interfere with flowering, as these plants set their buds soon after October 10.

Q: I've heard that one should use insecticide sprays to control lawn caterpillars. What kind of caterpillars would attack a lawn?

A: Various lawn caterpillars, primarily the tropical sod webworm and fall armyworm, are important pests of lawns in Florida.

Webworm and armyworm larvae feed on almost all of the commonly grown grasses in Florida. The newly hatched larvae are unable to bite out pieces of grass, but only scrape away grass cells from one side of the grass blade and cause little visible damage to the grass.

When they approach maturity however, damage appears to show up almost overnight with notches chewed out along the sides of the blades and the grass has a ragged appearance. Damaged areas are often first noticed along hedges and flower beds.

Injury begins in a few spots with the injured areas being only 2 or 3 feet across. These spots enlarge, fuse and encompass large areas of lawns in heavy infestation. When the grass is severely damaged during hot, dry weather, it may be killed.

However, if the infested grass is kept well watered, it can recover from a large amount of webworm feeding.

Armyworm is similar to that of webworms. When the larvae are small, they scrape away tissues from the surface of the blades leaving a colorless, membranous area at the tip of the grass blade.

When it is established that sod webworms or other lawn caterpillars are the problem, start the control measures promptly. Sod webworms, in particular, complete their development very quickly after they reach a size where they cause noticeable damage. Recommended materials are duraban, sevin, or diazinon sprays.

Q: Last spring my bean plants got a lot of small brown spots on the leaves. What can I do to prevent this?

A: This is a fungus disease called bean rust. It occurs on the leaves and sometimes the pods in Florida. The first evidence of the disease is the presence of small pale yellow spots on the upper side of the affected leaves.

Usually, two to three days later, cinnamon-brown pustules about one-sixteenth inch in diameter appear in the yellow spots and break open, exposing the spores.

Use a fungicide such as maneb at 7-day intervals until a few days before harvest. Also avoid using sprinklers for irrigation, since this will tend to aggravate the situation. It is best to plant rust resistant or tolerant varieties to help avoid this problem. Harvester (snap bean), Dade or McCaslan (pole bean) are good ones.

Q: The squash on my plants aren't developing. They grow a little and then fall off. Is a disease causing this?

A: This problem isn't caused by disease but is most likely due to lack of pollination of the squash. Squash has both male and female flower on each plant. Each female flower has what looks like a tiny squash attached to the petals. The male flowers do not have this.

The squash will develop only if pollination and fertilization have taken place. This is usually done by insects, particularly bees. If these are not active in your garden area, however, you may accomplish pollination by touching from the male flower to the female flower with your finger or an artist's brush. The squash should then develop normally.

Greatest 'Treasures' Are Loved Ones

DEAR ABBY: Two men who claim to be father and adopted son just bought an old mansion across the street and fixed it up. We notice a very suspicious mixture of company coming and going at all hours — blacks, whites, Orientals, women who look like men and men who look like women. We even saw a nun and a priest go inside.

People come in everything from motorcycles to Cadillacs.

This has always been considered one of the finest sections of San Francisco, and these weirdos are giving it a bad name. How can we improve the neighborhood?

NOB HILL RESIDENTS

DEAR RESIDENTS: You could move.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is having a nervous breakdown. Her home was robbed last week and she lost all her jewelry and silver. (No insurance.)

You had a letter in your column some time ago from a woman who had lost all her treasures in a flash flood. Your reply was brilliant. Now I'm sorry I didn't clip it out and save it so I could show it to my mother. It might put material things in their proper perspective. Please try to find that column and run it again. Thank you.

PALM SPRINGS

DEAR PALM SPRINGS: I found it. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: About a month ago we had a flash flood, and I lost nearly all the treasures I had saved for 45 years. Albums filled with pictures and snapshots, letters, clippings — none of which can be replaced. I had them stored in plastic con-

Dear Abby

And if you have, how did you get over it?

DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: Yes, dear. I lost my beautiful mother in 1945. (She was only 57.) And a few years later, I lost a wonderful father. (He was 62.) And not a day passes but I don't thank God for letting me have my parents for as long as I did. I know many who were not nearly as blessed as I, and I think of those who have survived a far greater tragedy — losing their children.

Now, what were you saying about clippings and pictures and other "treasures?"

DEAR ABBY: I own my own business and I hire many high school students for part-time work. Abby, you cannot imagine how many parents call me and ask if I have a job for Ann or Tom!

If Ann and Tom want to work, I think they should do the asking. Having Mama or Dad ask for them doesn't say much for the child's initiative. I feel it is important for young people to work and I give as many of them a break as I can, but I have made it a policy never to hire anyone whose mother or father calls and asks me to give the child a job. If a boy or girl is old enough to draw a salary, he or she is old enough to ask for a job.

I am sure other employers share my viewpoint. And if this letter helps to wake up just one teen-ager, it will have been worth the time I took to write it.

E. IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR E: I'm glad you wrote. I'm sure you woke up more than just one teen-ager. (And a few parents, too.)

Clem Leonard Shell Falls Off Roofing

First Federal was out-hit seven to five Thursday but still managed to beat Sunniland Corporation 7-4 to push its Sanford Little National League record to 13-1.

In other games, Clem Leonard Shell rallied to beat the Railroaders 13-12, while second place Poppa Jay's bombed Sanford D.A.V. 30-2.

In today's action in the Sanford Junior League, Moons plays Kiwanis at 8 p.m. at Chase Park, while Rotary battles Elks at 7 p.m.

Sunniland Corporation scored a single run in the top of the first, but First Federal surged ahead 3-1 on consecutive two-out singles by Andy Griffin, Craig Dixon and Kalvin Davis.

Sunniland tied the game with a single run in the top of the third, but First Federal regained the lead with three runs in the bottom of the third. Rickey Crisp opened the inning with a walk, Dixon walked with two outs and Kalvin Davis belted a three-run homer.

Sunniland picked up a single run in the top of the fourth, but Dixon padded the margin with a two-run homer in the bottom of the fifth.

Dixon and Davis each had a single and homer for First Federal. Dwight Brinson had a triple and single for Sunniland Corporation, while Oscar Merthie slammed a double and single and Tim Graham rapped two singles.

The Railroaders scored 10 runs in the top of the first inning and led 12-1 after two and a half innings. But Clem Leonard Shell scored four runs in the third and eight in the fourth to take a 13-12 lead while starting pitcher David Goldstick blanked the Railroaders in the fourth and fifth frames and relief pitcher Mike Grom came on to strike out the side in the sixth.

Goldstick, the winning pitcher, had half of his team's six hits.

Terrance Carr had a double and single for the Railroaders, while J.D. Paul added two singles.

Poppa Jay's got off to a slow start, leading only 1-0 after two innings. But a 12-run third inning put Poppa Jay's on the easy street.

Ronald Blake had two singles and a home run and drove in six runs for the winner Blake and Stewart Gordon both blasted three-run homers during a seven-run fourth inning.

Jeff Blake had three singles for the winners, while Willie McCloud and Lawrence Ayers had two singles each. Reginald Lawrence and Ira Hall Jr. had the only hits for the losers.

Adcock Roofing scored a pair of last inning runs and nipped previously unbeaten Clem Leonard Shell 11-10 as the second half of the Sanford Pee Wee League season opened Thursday.

Rinker Materials edged Butch's Chevron 12-11 in Thursday's other game. Ken Kern's Garage plays Seminole Sporting Goods at 5 p.m. today at Fort Mellon Park.

Clem Leonard Shell was 3-0 and had already clinched the first half championship going into Thursday's game. Adcock notched its fifth consecutive win after dropping the season opener to Clem Leonard Shell.

Anton Reid was the star for Adcock Roofing, two-time defending Pee Wee League champ. He had a triple, double and single in three trips to the plate and drove in a winning run.

Reid was also the winning pitcher, working in relief of starter John Bryant.

Each team scored three runs in the first inning. Clem Leonard Shell pushed a single run across the plate in the top of the second, but Adcock Roofing scored a pair of runs in the bottom of the second to take the lead for the first time.

Clem Leonard picked up an unearned run in the third and Adcock Roofing padded its lead with four runs in the bottom of the third. Clem Leonard Shell relief pitcher Bill Shaw, the eventual loser, was greeted by Jim Kitchenska with a three-run homer that capped the four-run effort.

The Shell nine didn't give up, though, and scored five runs in the top of the fourth to regain the lead. The big hit of the inning was a bases-loaded single by Michael Hartman that scored all three runs and tied the game. Hartman scored the go-ahead run on a pinch-hit single by Al Perkins.

John Bryant and Brian Howard drew walks to open the fourth inning for Adcock Roofing and Reid smashed a triple to score them both and win the game.

Hartman had two hits to lead the losers at the plate.

Rinker Materials scored nine runs on just two hits in the bottom of the first inning, taking a 9-3 lead. Butch's Chevron out-scored Rinker four to two in the second frame and then pushed four more runs across the plate in the top of the third to tie the score at 11-11.

Rinker used a leadoff walk to score the winning run in the bottom of the third. Eric Small had the only hit of the inning, a single.

Steve Johnson had one of just three hits for Rinker Materials, a three-run homer in the first inning.

Wayne Palmer had a pair of doubles for Butch's Chevron.

Dan Ford home run beats Orioles.

Ford Flattens Birds; A's Drop 8th Straight

It was a tale of two streaks in baseball Thursday night.

Dan Ford, who clubbed Oriole pitching at a 10-for-21 pace last season, drilled a home run in the fourth inning against veteran Jim Palmer, who had beaten California five straight times.

Retread Doug Rau and reliever Don Aase combined on a seven-hitter for a 2-0 victory to halt red-hot Baltimore's eight-game winning streak.

Ed Ott chased home Don Baylor with an insurance run in the seventh inning, before the crafty Palmer fanned Rod Carew to escape the jam.

Rau, who was cut loose by Los Angeles after a rotator cuff injury deemed him "unusable merchandise," hurried five innings, giving up five hits and striking out one.

The veteran left-hander was hit hard in the early innings, but a fine play by Fred Lynn kept the Orioles off the scoreboard. With Rich Dauer on first, Eddie Murray lined a hit into right center field in the fourth inning.

Lynn, ranging far to his left, cut off the ball holding Dauer at third and then threw a strike to second base to nail a surprised Murray for the second out. Rau then retired Benny Ayala for the final out.

Aase took over in the sixth inning and shutdown the Birds on two hits the rest of the way for his fourth save. Rau is 1-1. Palmer is 2-2.

While Baltimore had its eight-game winning skein terminated, Oakland continued to have its problems, dropping its eighth straight 3-0 to Boston.

Jim Rice crashed a three-run line drive home run with nobody out in the ninth inning off Brian Kingman to provide the difference.

Dennis Echersley, who fanned 12 A's batters, spun a nifty two-hitter for his fourth win. He has lost three. Kingman, who was touched for just five hits, watched his record drop to 2-3.

Rice's blast into the left-field screen followed singles by Dwight Evans and Carl Yastrzemski.

Elsewhere in the AL, Seattle rode three runs batted in by catcher Jerry Narron to a 6-3 victory over Cleveland.

Glenn Abbott picked up his first win of the season by going seven innings and scattering seven hits. Jerry Don Gleaton and Larry Andersen finished the final two innings with Andersen picking up his first save. Abbott has lost four.

In Milwaukee, Gorman Thomas crunched two homers and drove in five runs as the Brewers bombed hapless

For the Twins, it marked the eighth loss in a row. John Vukovich went eight innings for his fourth victory in six outings. Jamie Easterly pitched the ninth.

Pete Redfern, 3-4, failed to survive the third inning when the Brewers bunched five runs. Thomas, who led the AL in home runs, two years ago, ran his total to 11.

In Chicago, the Cubs snapped an eight-game talisman by dropping Cincinnati 5-1 behind four hits by Leon "Bull"

Durham and the clutch pitching of Randy Martz

Martz, 2-2, stifled the Reds on seven hits as he pitched Chicago's first complete game of the season. The young right hander struck out one.

Durham slugged a three-run homer in the sixth to give the Cubbies a 4-0 edge. Durham also had a double and two singles. The round-tripper was his third.

In the only other National League game, rookie John Martin stopped Houston on four hits as St. Louis used two Astro miscues for a 3-1 victory.

Tim Looks To Slumping Chicago To Wash Away Raines' Drought

The last thing Tim Raines wanted to hear on a cold and windy Chicago morning was, "What are you doing going 0-for-12?"

But, that was my first question to Sanford's young, Montreal phenom, who is currently impressing baseball flocks from coast-to-coast with his exciting style of play.

Lately (the last three games), however, Raines has been in a drought similar to the one Floridians have experienced the past month or so.

The last time Raines punched a hit was Sunday, Monday against San Diego he went hitless in three at bats. Tuesday, he was 0-for-4 and Wednesday 0-for-5.

So, Tim what are you doing going 0-for-12?

"I hurt my hand, man. I just can't swing like I was," was Raines sleepy-voiced reply. "What time is it anyway?"

What are you doing calling so early?"

Well, it was 11 a.m. Chicago time, but unfortunately for Raines, the Expos had just gotten in from their three-game set in San Diego.

Raines current drought has dropped his batting average 34 points to .333. He was at .367 Monday morning, which was second in the league.

"I still think I can hit .300," predicted Tim. "I've been hitting the ball hard even though they've been catching it."

"Out of those 12 at bats, I hit the ball on the nose five times. It just went right at somebody," moaned the budding young superstar.

While the average may have plummeted some, the thievery is still apparent. Raines has stolen 34 bases in 35 attempts.

"Yeah, I've been stealing pretty easy, but I've been picked off five or six times. I gotta be more careful. I've just been too aggressive," confided Raines.

Despite Raines hot start and Andre Dawson's awesome showing of late, Montreal has slumped horribly the past two weeks.

Before Wednesday night's victory over the Padres, which featured two Dawson homers, the Expos had dropped 12-of-14 games to fall out of first place three games behind the Cardinals.

One of those 12 defeats came at the hands of Fernando Valenzuela in a game where Raines didn't start because of his dislocated little finger on his right hand.

In a previous meeting between the two "Rookie of the Year" rivals, Raines stroked a single in his first at bat against "El Toro."

"It was an infield hit though," Tim laughed. "He's the toughest guy I've faced this year. He keeps his cool on the mound."

"He spots the ball real well and he has a pretty good fastball which makes his screwball that much better. He can change speeds on his screwball real good," said Raines about the fellow with whom he adorned the cover of The Sporting News.

Along with facing Valenzuela, Raines said teammate Charlie Lea's no-hitter was quite a thrill. "It was really exciting in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings," recalled Tim.

"Everybody was just waiting to make a great play to save the no-hitter."

After an off-day Thursday, the Expos take on the flubbing Cubs, who have managed to lose 27 of their first 33 ball games.

And you thought I was kidding when I picked them to finish behind the Miami Hurricanes and Lake Howell? The Clem Leonard Shell Pee Wees could beat them.

"Yeah, I'm looking forward to Friday," chortled Raines about his Wrigley Field appearance.

The Cubs would be good medicine for anybody's slump. Even if it's a sore-fingered rookie who is still hitting line drives.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 23, 1981
During the year following your birthday you could make several exciting new pals. Each night introduces you into new fun groups, thereby giving you the opportunity to expand your circle of friends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
You have the ability today to build a better mousetrap than others construct. You may have two occasions to utilize your talents. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N. Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birthdate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Don't settle for the first price today if you are bargaining on a matter of importance. Continue to negotiate. Things will eventually swing your way.

LE (July 23-Aug. 22)
This is a good day to correct a misunderstanding with one whose relationship is important to you. Be the first to say you were wrong, even if you weren't.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Instead of doing things today which could deplete your resources, try to work on that which will add to them. You'll come up with something clever.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
You will have more fun today if you break away from your usual routines and try to do something different, even if it's just dining at a new restaurant with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Extra push will be required today in order to be successful in your endeavors. This shouldn't disturb you. You're a strong finisher.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
You're likely to be more fortunate today working on new projects than in pursuing old ones. Spend your time productively on your freshest interest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
You're apt to find more opportunities than usual today in two areas. One is that which affects your career. The other has to do with your income.

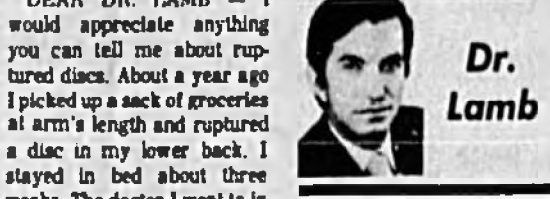

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Even though you may not have the desire to exercise a leadership role today, circumstances may foist the mantle upon you. You'll perform well.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Explore in depth today any tips you get from "insiders" pertaining to business deals or investments. Your diggings may reveal something lucky.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Don't let worldly affairs occupy all your hours today. You need to spend some time with persons who are involved only with fun pursuits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Early in the day you may experience difficulties in achieving what you set out to do. Don't give up--afternoon and evening hours will treat you more kindly.

Ruptured Disc? Exercise Helps

DEAR DR. LAMB - I would appreciate anything you can tell me about ruptured discs. About a year ago I picked up a sack of groceries at arm's length and ruptured a disc in my lower back. I stayed in bed about three weeks. The doctor I went to in orthopedics X-rayed and told me what it was, but when I asked him about recovery, he really didn't commit himself. It is still touchy and makes me tired after any strenuous activity. I am so afraid of a recurrence I'm not as active as I would otherwise be. Are there any exercises that would strengthen it? I am about 20 pounds overweight and would welcome exercises. I'm 44 years old.

DEAR READER - Your doctor probably didn't want to commit himself because people who have back trouble tend to have a recurrence of the problem. Whether a person has a recurrence or not often depends upon what he does in his life style.

I am surprised that your doctor didn't give you some exercises to strengthen your abdominal and back muscles, as part of a program to minimize chances of a recurrence. A person with an acute ruptured disc SHOULD NOT exercise but should be off his feet, which usually means in bed. That phase usually lasts a few days to two weeks. After recovery you should do sit-ups and modified leg-lifts that don't strain the back muscles, and exercises that strengthen the seat muscles and spinal muscles.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 13-10, Backache and What to Do about It, to give you information on the types of exercises you should be doing. Check them out with your doctor to be sure they are all right for you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Incidentally, these exercises also help people tone up their abdomen in case they have a little girth control problem.

Strong abdominal muscles help to splint the back and protect it from sudden strain that leads to a ruptured disc and muscle spasm problems. Your continued sedentary habits may make matters worse for you. The greatest cause of backache in our society is inactivity. You also need to learn how to lift without straining your back.

DEAR DR. LAMB - A year ago I had my uterus and ovaries removed and my bladder replaced. The doctor prescribed estrogens but I never took them. Two weeks ago I had a checkup and the doctor was upset because I had not.

I have read several articles stating that if one doesn't need estrogens it is best not to take them. I am 54 years old and have no symptoms other than a few hot flashes. Now he has given me another prescription and I don't know what to do. Is there some other reason why he wants me to take estrogens?

DEAR READER - Too little estrogen causes an involution of the sex characteristics that were originally induced at puberty when estrogen increased. That includes drying of the vagina.

A moderate amount of estrogen helps to prevent bone loss, which if unchecked would result in a buffalo hump and increased risk of fractures, such as breaking a hip.

Breast lumps and the danger of cancer of the lining of the uterus are the two main dangers in taking small amounts of estrogen. Considering the pros and cons it is wise for a woman to depend upon her individual doctor to advise what is best in her individual case.

played a couple of rounds of trump just in case there might be lurkers.

By this time the student had left his place as dummy to watch the Prof in action. He was shocked when the Prof's next plays were the ace of hearts followed by the ace and a small club.

The defenders cashed two good clubs with West winning the last one. Then West was forced to lead a black card. The Prof ruffed in dummy and discarded a low heart to score the game.

The student asked, "Why did you play the hand that way? Wouldn't it have been better technique to play the hearts right away? You would make the hand if they were split 3-3. If fact you would make six if West held queen and two small."

"There was practically no chance for hearts to divide that way," was the reply. "My play was sure to work if West held the heart queen. In fact any play would work in that case. No play was going to work if East held four of the queen. My play gave me the extra chance of a 5-1 split which just happened to be the case."

Artist Day At The Zoo

By SYBIL MITCHELL GANDY
Herald Staff Writer

Lions and tigers and bears were captured in Sanford Saturday — on paper that is — during Central Florida's 3rd Annual "Artist Day At The Zoo." Youngsters crayoned and penciled and chalked the critters for prizes.

More than 80 Seminole and Orange County children competed for cash prizes in age categories pre-school through 12th grade.

Sponsored by the Central Florida Zoo, Burger King and the Central Florida Council of Arts and Sciences, the creative confab invited area students of all ages to come and capture the animal of their choice in any media they chose.

Children were briefed on contest rules when they registered for the event.

"We simply told them they could accept no help from parents but they were free to wander around the park as they pleased and draw any animal that they wished," said Beth Brinson spokesman for the zoo.

"By the 3:00 p.m. deadline, we had 82 drawings and sketches. We informed the children that winners would be notified on Monday," she added.

Bob and Patsy Nüniger, owners of a Winter Park commercial artist business, chose 3 winners in each category and 2 honorable mentions, entitling recipients to trophies, cash prizes, theatre passes, electronic games and lots to eat at the Burger King Awards Banquet Wednesday night.

Kathy Kimball of the Central Florida Council of Arts and Sciences said the event was designed not only to promote more interest in animal life at the zoo, but also to give kids a chance to develop their own style of capturing an image in free-hand.

"We were very pleased and proud of the artistic quality shown in the drawings. Although our entries were down from last year, we couldn't have been happier with the response," Ms. Kimball said.

The contest was staged as on in a continuing series of children's events sponsored by the zoo.

Walking off with the prizes: In the pre-school category, 1st place, Carrie Johannesmeyer, Maitland; 2nd place, Mason Wheeler, Longwood; and 3rd place, Glenn Cobb, Longwood.

Grades K-2, 1st place, Rachel Keeler, Winter Springs; 2nd place, Rebecca Waters, Altamonte Springs; and 3rd place Allison Jett, Maitland. Receiving an Honorable Mention was Hank Daviero of Sanford.

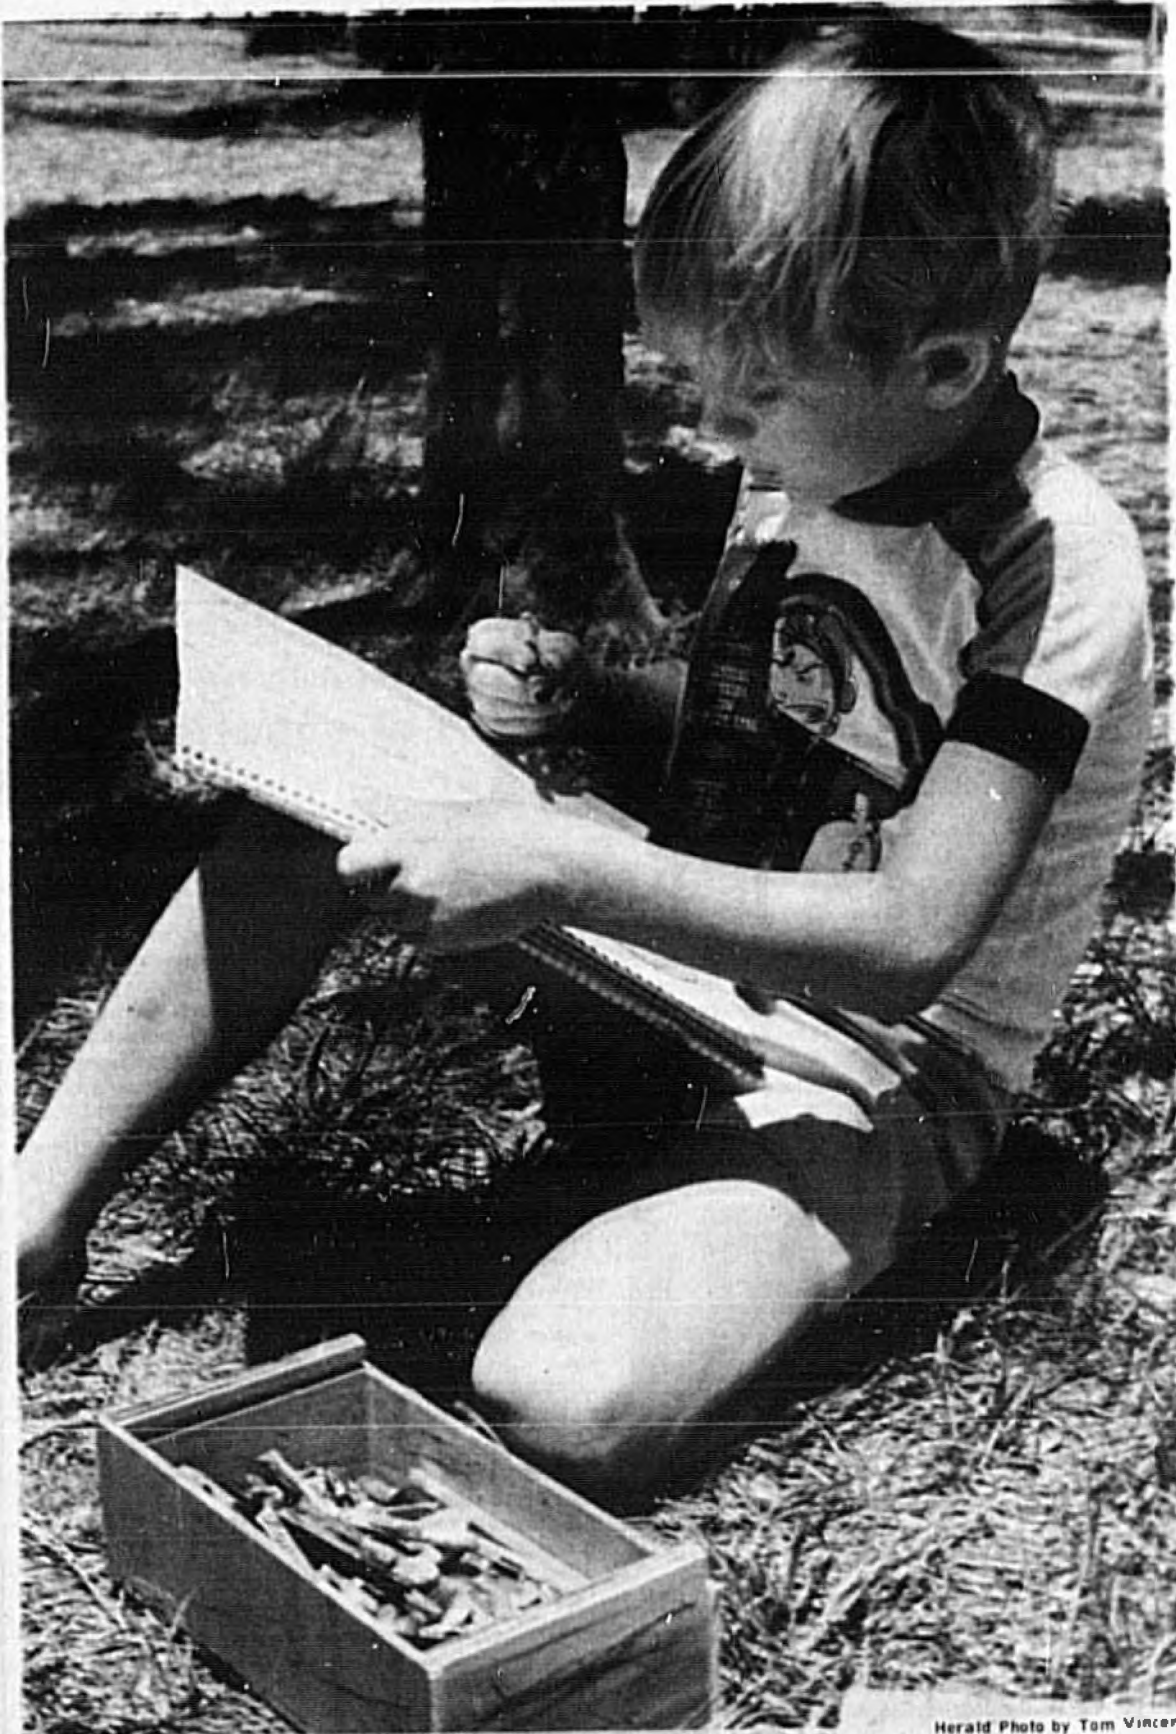

Grades 3-5, 1st place, Joseph Adkins, Orlando; 2nd place, Jeff Whitney, Longwood; and 3rd place, Kimberly Kettles, Casselberry. Awarded an Honorable Mention was Tania Hussakov, Altamonte Springs.

Grades 6-8: 1st place, Chris Stickney, Sanford; 2nd place, Phillip Zabukovec, Fern Park; and 3rd place, Melaney MacInnis, Altamonte Springs.

Grades 9-12, 1st place, John Ripley, Orlando; 2nd place, Lynn Trombino, Deltona; and 3rd place, Eric Nyros, Sanford.

All first place entries will be matted for display in the Central Florida Zoological Park conference room, Ms. Brinson said.

Bill Moyers Is Back At CBS

NEW YORK (UPI) — After three years of lobbying on the part of CBS News President Bill Leonard, it's finally official — Bill Moyers is back on the team and for the first time since the departure of Eric Sevareid, the "Evening News" will have an ace analyst.

Leonard and Moyers called a news conference Wednesday to tell everyone what they already knew — that Moyers, who quit "CBS Reports" a few years ago to return to his multi-award-winning "Bill Moyers' Journal" on PBS, was coming home.

Moyers already had pronounced the "Journal" terminal. Not only has federally underwritten public broadcasting fallen upon hard times under the Reagan administration's budget ax, but after eight years, Moyers was tired of it and ready to move on.

"I've carried the Journal as far as I can," he said. "The beauty of television is it's a constantly changing challenge."

Moyers said Leonard, who returned to CBS News three years ago just as Moyers was leaving it, has been campaigning him ever since, and that even serious negotiations a year ago with ABC's Roone Arledge never really threatened CBS' inside track for his services.

"The timing was not right

and old loyalties die very hard," he said.

The only questions remaining, then, were when, in what capacity, for how long and for how much?

The first three were answered Wednesday: (1) on Nov. 1, (2) as something approaching a one-man battalion, and (3) for the next five years.

The only buck discussed was the one that got passed back and forth.

Asked about salary under the new pact, Leonard said, "If Bill wants to answer that, it's all right with me."

Echoed Moyers, "If Bill wants to answer that, it's all right with me."

Neither wanted to answer that.

"I consider it a private matter between CBS and me," said Moyers. "It's enough."

It had better be. From a rundown of duties spelled out for Moyers by Leonard, he'll earn every penny of it, even if, as industry sources claim, it comes to "a multi-million-dollar pact" over the five years of the contract.

"Whether you look at hard news broadcasts, specials, documentaries — wherever you look, you will have no difficulty at all in soon realizing Bill Moyers is an integral part of the CBS News organization," Leonard said.

He said Moyers' duties will include senior news analyst, reporter on major news events, such special events as political conventions and elections and "as many CBS documentaries as he has shoes to wear out."

He said Moyers' duties as news analyst for the "Evening News" will be similar to those once served by Sevareid, but that they will "go much deeper."

Moyers said he was offered Sevareid's spot at the analysis desk when Sevareid, bowing to CBS's mandatory retirement-at-65 policy, stepped down, but he refused it then.

"It's a very difficult role to fill," he said. "First, I didn't want to immediately follow Eric Sevareid because nobody in his right mind would do that. And second, I wasn't ready."

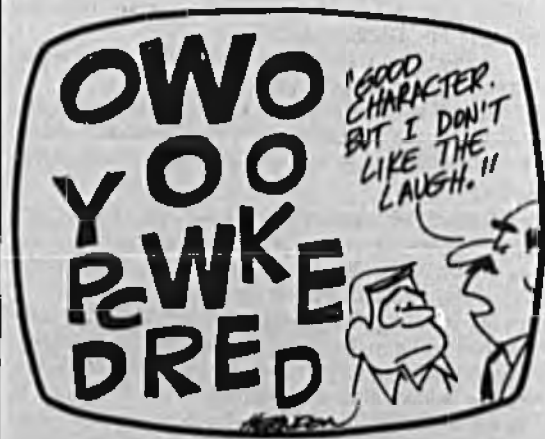

Is he ready now?

"In the last three years," he said, "I've done 68 hours of original broadcasting."

In the forge fires of television, that's not just enough to make ready. That's enough to make steel.

Balanchine Offers 'Spellbound Child'

Since its debut at the Theater de Monte Carlo in 1925, "The Spellbound Child-L'Enfant et les Sorcieres" has been linked to George Balanchine. At that time he was just 21 years old, collaborating with the formidable talents of composer Maurice Ravel and poet-novelist-librettist Colette. Twenty-one years later, Balanchine brought the production to America, and in 1975 he revived it for the New York City Ballet's Ravel festival. But Balanchine was never completely satisfied with any of the productions: He thought the theater was too real for this lyrical fantasy.

BALANCHINE

In a new undertaking, Balanchine and collaborator Kermit Love have reconceived "The Spellbound Child," this time for television. It will air on the Great Performances "Dance in America" series on Monday, May 25 on PBS (local times may vary; check listings).

"The Spellbound Child" is the story of a young boy's journey into an uncontrollable fantasy world. As played by newcomer Christopher Byars, the child resents his mother's directive to do homework. In defiance, he sticks his tongue out — and is promptly ordered to his room.

Frustrated and enraged, the boy destroys everything within reach. Magically, the spirit of his tantrum infuses the mangled remains of his belongings. The armchair (Bryant Young) comes to life, threatening to swallow him up; the teapot and teacup (Mel Tomlinson and Susan Freedman) rise up and dance their own dance; the fire (Karin von Aroldingen) plays dangerous tricks; and his favorite storybook princess (Karen Hunt) scolds him for tearing her from the only world she knew.

A black singing cat leads the boy into an eerily beautiful garden inhabited by giant insects and oversized frogs, none too happy with their human visitor. The boy encounters many creatures — the dragonfly whose mate the boy has pinned to the wall, the tree suffering wounds the boy has carved in it, the squirrel the boy has caged, and more. These are quarrelsome animals, eager to fight the boy and each other. Suddenly, a small squirrel injured in the fray cries out in pain. The boy bandages the wound and his compassion startles the other creatures who, in an effort to make amends, carry the boy back to his "nest"...and to his mother.

Balanchine spent a decade in Europe as an acclaimed choreographer before moving to America in 1933. Together with Lincoln Kirstein, he founded the School of American Ballet, a company dedicated to a classical approach to dance and an all-American troupe.

As artistic director for the New York City Ballet for more than three decades, Balanchine is generally regarded as the foremost living choreographer in use world of ballet. In 1975, he was proclaimed a member of the Legion of Honor by the French government and was also inducted into the Entertainment Hall of Fame, the first choreographer to be so honored.

The ballet-opera score is performed by the New York City Ballet Orchestra, accompanied by a 24-member chorus and nine soloists. "The Spellbound Child-L'Enfant et les Sorcieres" is produced for WNET-Thirteen, New York by Emile Ardolino and Judy Kinberg, with Ardolino directing.

Young Christopher Byars stars as a naughty boy who throws a temper tantrum and learns some lessons after a trip into an uncontrollable fantasy world in "The Spellbound Child" a lyrical fantasy ballet airing Monday on PBS.

An Opportunity To Help Create TV Show

NEW YORK (UPI) — Walter Mitty crouched in the canvas chair like a great wolf about to spring — muscles clean and sinuous as piano wire, eyes blazing orbs of genius behind the dark glasses.

"Take one," he rasped. "Roll 'em!" "Tapoketa, tapoketa, tapoketa," said the camera....

James Thurber isn't around to promote the latest incarnation of the old video show "You Asked For It," but if he were, his immortal daydreamer would be just the man for the job. The Walter Mitty who dwells in all who breathe is about to come into his own as a television producer, director and, where possible star.

Sandy Frank Film Syndication Inc. has purchased rights to the old program which was hosted in the 1950s by Art Baker and, a decade later, by Jack Smith. The 1980s will see Rich Little at the helm, with the first show slated to hit the air this fall in more than 100 major markets and 16 foreign nations.

Under the original format, material produced came as a result of letters from viewers asking that a given subject, or idea, be explored. Hence, the title. The new one will follow the same line, but with a difference.

As with the original, stories filmed will be suggested by viewers who "ask for it," but this time, those whose suggestions are accepted will be paid $50 and if possible, they will be put on the show.

"We'll be making 150 half-hour shows over the next nine months," said Mendelson. "We have 15 film crews worldwide to handle it. People often complain about television. Well, we're going to give the public an opportunity to say, 'This is what I'd do if I were a producer' ... It's the first opportunity ever for people to create their own TV show." Mendelson, who also produces "Charlie Brown" and the "Peanuts" gang for television, said an initial advertising campaign already has harvested 10,000 letters suggesting everything from visits to the health spas of stars and the pyramids of Egypt to probes of life-after-death experiences and the famed ghost of Warwick Castle in London.

But 10,000 is just a drop in the film can.

"Every show will contain five stories and we need 50,000 letters to do 1,000 stories," Mendelson said. "And 1,000 is what we're going for."

"All you need to do is think of something, some place, or some person that is interesting, exotic or unknown, anywhere in the world," it said.

Walter Mittys can send their production ideas to "You Asked for It," P.O. Box 710, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Bacall's 'By Myself' One Of Best Celebrity Books

By RUTH THOMPSON
 Trying to tally up the books written by celebrities (whether by themselves, co-authored or ghost written) is a hopeless task. The list multiplies in size faster than a snowball rolling down a well-powdered Swiss Alp. It's easier to sort the most visible of them into categories. The largest category, of course, is the autobiographies... and that subdivides into the dull, the trash and the treasures. Let's forget the dull ones. Forget, too, the trashy recollections designed to sell on the basis of the author's alliances with bigger names. Let the focus be on books that have something positive to pass along as inspiration. Of this genre, one of the best is still "By Myself" by Lauren Bacall. She has been famous since she was 19. And she doesn't thumb faded scrapbooks of earlier triumphs either; she keeps setting new goals. Right now she's the toast of Broadway in a high-energy musical, "Woman of the Year."

 Though she doesn't put it in those terms herself, the lady is a positive thinker. If you get something from her example, or from her entertaining, fine. But if you want a rule-book guru, look elsewhere.

LAUREN BACALL

The offering specific guidelines for personal betterment are rare among celebrities' writings, but the books of Richard Simmons and Art Linkletter are different. These two are the most visible television personalities now in demand on the interview circuit as authors of how-to-systems. Art Linkletter, long known as a talk show and game show host, is also a successful international businessman — and many times a millionaire. He can't remember if his newest book, "Public Speaking for Private People," is his 15th or 16th, but says that it is something different for him. "I had to be urged by the publisher, Bobbs-Merrill, but it has more meaning for me than the earlier books. I see it as a reference book that has lasting library shelf value, as something that could outlive me.

"A book like this, that people can consult over and over, confers a kind of immortality. I guess we all want that."

He continues, "I didn't write it for the natural extroverts like myself but for the scaredy-cats who need to make speeches and can train themselves to overcome their fears and avoid the common mistakes." Linkletter currently does about 110 speeches a year for fees that he characterizes as, "either nothing (to benefit good causes) or $10,000 and up. People don't respect you unless you charge."

Until a year ago, Richard Simmons was a big name only to viewers of ABC's soap opera "General Hospital" where he plays himself, nagging people into better nutrition patterns and daily exercise. But last fall he launched his own syndicated daily program and, a little more than three months ago, he published his "Never Say Diet" book, which has remained No. 1 on the bestseller list for weeks. Now we hear he's preparing a cookbook sequel.

The Egyptian sphinx, with the body of a lion and the head of a man (sometimes the ruler), symbolized royal majesty. When the Greeks used the symbol, they gave it the body of a lioness and the head of a woman.

From Rod Stelger: "Trouble with a marriage license is it doesn't expire every year as other licenses do" ... From Michael Brandon: "Education is something a guy spends years getting only so he can work for somebody who hasn't any at all." From Dave Winfield, who earns $116,000 each month: "I had my minks before. Plus my Mercedes, raccoon, coyotes and my diamonds."

Composer Sammy Cahn went to a busy eyeglass boutique on Lexington Avenue to test his vision. Women Artists, Cuban Refugees, Vanishing Nurses

Tracing the achievements of women artists from the late Renaissance to the 20th century, "The Artist Was a Woman" will air on PBS Monday, May 25. (Local times may vary; check listings.)

Jane Alexander narrates the program. The artists to be examined include such women as the little-known Sofianaba Anguissola from the Renaissance to the well-known Georgia O'Keeffe from the 20th century.

The hour-long documentary will focus on the artists' works with still photos of places they studied and painted. The special will blend quotations from the actual writings of the women with comments from contemporary critics and admirers. The music on the program will reflect the style of each period and, like the art, is composed by women.

Cuban Crisis

Fleeing their homeland, 125,000 Cuban refugees embarked on a year-long journey that took them to Florida and throughout the United States.

This exodus is the focus of a PBS "World" special, "Against Wind and Tide: A Cuban Odyssey," airing Wednesday, May 27. (Local times may vary; check listings.)

The documentary, through the efforts of a group of independent filmmakers who followed the drama from the beginning, portrays individuals and their families from their departure to the current situation a year later. The program shows what went wrong with the official handling of the refugee situation in an attempt to provide insight into the problems of the country's immigration policy.

Disappearing Nurses
American hospitals are experiencing a life-or-death crisis that can't be remedied by new technology and medical breakthroughs. A shortage of nurses in this country's hospitals is causing this dangerous situation, according to a CBS News special report "Nurse, Where Are You?" to air May 28.

"It is the nurse, not the doctor, who is our first line of defense against the illness we are fighting," says CBS News correspondent Marieme Sanders, who anchors the program. Yet, "ninety percent of American hospitals are reporting a serious shortage of nurses."

The report reveals that less than half of the nation's 1.4 million nurses stay in hospitals for the length of their career, and fewer people are entering the nursing profession.

SUNDAY

Gene Wilder (left) and Richard Pryor team up to elude the law, catch up with a train and prevent a murder on "Silver Streak," a special movie presentation, also starring Patrick McGeehan, to be rebroadcast Sunday on CBS.

CUBAN REFUGEE

Yes, America, Eddie Rabbitt's A 'Trekkie'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Eddie Rabbitt was back off the road a few days to "put in the oohs and ahhs" on his new album.

Rabbitt, looking a little bigger in person, strode into his Music Row studio (shirt open down to here) and greeted the staff he hadn't seen since the first of the month.

A kiss on the lips for office manager Kent, breeze on the cheek for receptionist Debbie, a bear hug for producer David Malloy and handshakes for two of his writers.

"It's good to see you guys, good to be back," he said, and you could tell he meant it.

Rabbitt, whose beer commercial has other top acts asking how he got it, settled into a nearby sofa and talked about being one of the hottest male singers in music.

"I'm just trying to figure out what my star's going to be, man. Like this new album — it goes for the throat. I took five months off the road to work on it and it has the 10 best things we could do," he said.

The Brooklyn native, who made it "overnight" after 20 years in the business, said the album may be out by late June or early July — "As soon as I can put the finishing touches, the oohs and ahhs on it."

It follows on the heels of 1979's gold one ("The Best of Eddie Rabbitt") and 1980's platinum "Horizon."

"I really don't like any slack in an album. Every one (song) has to be a killer. I mean there's no use in putting two or three good, commercial songs on an album and then filling in with lesser stuff," Rabbitt said.

It pays off — Rabbitt had two enormous hits ("Drivin' My Life Away" and "I Love A Rainy Night") off the last effort.

He writes most of the material, with help from partners Even Stevens and David Malloy, but also keeps a mini-stable (three) of writers at his Briarpatch Studios.

"It was fun just now, tellin' one of the guys he has a song — a good song — on the new album," Rabbitt said.

EDDIE RABBITT

He knows what it means when a music star records someone else's song: Elvis Presley recorded Rabbitt's "Kentucky Rain" in 1970 for his 50th million seller and that got Rabbitt's career off the ground.

It was a long way from scoping ice cream in that Howard Johnson's in East Orange, N.J., 13 years ago. He saved enough money to come to Nashville on a bus.

Nowadays, Rabbitt travels in his own bus — whiling away the endless hours listening to his early music or watching some of the umpteen video tapes of "Star Trek."

Yes, America, Eddie Rabbitt's a 'Trekkie': "I love it. Sometimes, just the sound's enough to keep me company in a motel room somewhere."

He jogs in his motel room, likes zoos ("I have a great diagrae") and, generally, tries keeping his 6-3, 216-pound frame in shape.

"I have to. Look, sometimes I lose a pound of sweat during a show. It's hard work out there, but I love it."

Rabbitt isn't looking to movies or television — he turned down a series last year because he doesn't want to lose any mystique his heroes had when he was growing up.

"I like that little mystique. I don't want people to ask, 'oh, did Eddie Rabbitt sing 'I Love A Rainy Night'?' I want them to say, 'Yeh, Eddie Rabbitt. He did 'I Love A Rainy Night.' You know?'"

Unfolding tight jeaned legs and navy cowboy boots, Rabbitt smiled.

"It's good to meet you, man, but now it's time for some oohs and ahhs."

They Keep Getting Letters

ABC Missed The Boat In Sinking 'Phoenix'

NEW YORK (UPI) — There just has to be a sinking feeling in the ABC Entertainment board room — the sort that comes of recurrent dreams involving missed boats, fumbled balls and brass rings unseized.

The fall lineup is set. Lorne Green in a fireman's hat, Mike Connors with a badge, Robert Stack with a SWAT team and Erma Bombeck with a "Maggie" all are girded to go forth and conquer the Nielsens.

But "The Phoenix" is missing, and ABC keeps getting letters about it.

"The Phoenix" — a godlike "ancient astronaut" bearing the name of Bennu — cropped up in a one-shot late-season pilot in the persona of an ethereal young actor named Judson Scott.

Bennu wasn't the usual sort of television cliché hero. His powers were, for a change, spiritual. He wore a golden pendant. He read minds. He fought with love, not muscle, and instead of blowing people away, he healed them.

The show — with several scripts already written against the onslaught of the writers' strike — seemed like a natural for independent producer Mark Carliner. It scored a 30 share in the ratings, but ABC passed it by. The viewers apparently did not.

Scott, who ironically cast now as a psychopathic killer in the old Mickey Spillane chestnut "I the Jury" is shooting on location in New York and though he's relatively unknown, he was recognized again and again, after "The Phoenix" aired.

"My God, it was unbelievable," he said. "The first thing I noticed was they wanted to make physical contact with me. I've never seen people react this way ..."

Carliner said since the airing, his Los Angeles office has been besieged with calls from people wanting to know where they could buy the musical sound track from the pilot or replicas of Bennu's pendant. Neither is for sale, but they led Carliner to believe, once again, "The Phoenix" might be.

"I even got calls from three bishops," he said. "It's a grassroots phenomenon. The people out there really can affect what choice the network makes. All they have to do is write letters."

In the two weeks following the airing of the pilot, the network received 98 letters — 93 of them praising it.

"That," said a network spokesman, "is respectable attention. People usually write to criticize. They don't run to the typewriter to say they like something. They only write when they're sore."

Since 93 of the "Phoenix" writers were not sore, does that mean the show yet may rise, Phoenixlike, from its own ashes?

"There's no indication of its being held in reserve," said the spokesman. "It's just a pilot that was not acted upon."

Hence that business of boats, balls and brass rings.

Sometimes not acting can be measured in ratings points too.

Life With Leo

Biography Depicts Tolstoys' Home Life

By BILL OTT
American Library Assn.

It wasn't easy having Leo Tolstoy around the house. While most biographers of the revered Russian novelist have argued that it was his wife, Sonya Andreyevna, who was largely to blame for the tempestuous nature of the Tolstoys' marriage, "Sonya: the Life of Countess Tolstoy" (Simon & Schuster, $15.95), a revisionist version of the couple's story, paints a radically different picture.

Anne Edwards, author of the bestselling "Vivian Leigh," sees Sonya as a loyal, loving and devoted wife, but also as an intelligent and strong-willed woman. Literary genius though he was, the Tolstoy that emerges here — seen from Sonya's point of view — is something less than a model husband.

Edwards and the other Tolstoy biographers agree on one point: the marriage was a stormy one. Sonya was the teen-age daughter of a Kremlin doctor when Lev Lvovich Tolstoy, a count who had made a reputation as both soldier and writer, swept into her life in the late 1850s. She was 18 when they were married in 1862, and her expectations of the life that awaited her proved as naive as work in progress and even doing some astute if timid editing.

Eventually, however, Tolstoy all but abandoned novel writing and became the leader of a messianic cult whose followers saw him as a saint and Sonya as a decadent remnant of an immoral society. Part socialist, part religious fanatic, part ascetic, the new Tolstoy was obsessed with ridding himself of all the symptoms of moral decay — mainly money and sexuality.

Domestic tranquility, obviously, was not much in evidence at the Tolstoys'. Instead of the sense of accomplishment that came with assisting her husband the novelist, Sonya faced the ignominy of having to stand by as her husband the would-be saint came more and more under the influence of his disciples, particularly a Rasputin-like figure called Chertkov. Shut off from her husband, Sonya was left to find some sort of life for herself that would not offend Tolstoy's finely tuned sense of morality: "I have the feeling of being locked up, held back," she wrote in a letter to her sister, "and I want to push through and run away as quickly as possible."

Sonya's story is not "A Doll's House," however, and she is not Nora Helmer. Fundamental to Edwards' portrait is Sonya's absolute devotion to her husband. Even when the dying Tolstoy abandoned his wife, preferring his death to come in the company of his followers, Sonya refused to give up, following him to an abandoned railway station where she watched through a window as her husband of 48 years prepared to die. In a bitter irony, this gruesome death scene became a Russian "media event," with the press characterizing Sonya as a shrew who would not let a tortured genius die in peace.

Leaving for others — probably psychoanalytic historians — the Herculean task of determining if Tolstoy's philosophy was a product of his neuroses, or vice versa, Edwards focuses instead on the effects of that philosophy, and those neuroses, on Sonya and the Tolstoy children.

The life of Sonya Andreyevna makes a touching story, and Edwards is extremely sensitive to its contemporary resonance. Her melodramatic prose is occasionally cloying, and her insistence on making Sonya into a feminist mouthpiece a bit heavy-handed, but she tells a dramatic story of distorted ideals raising havoc with real life.

Anne Edwards, author of "Sonya: the Life of Countess Tolstoy," sees Sonya as a loyal, loving and devoted wife.

her notion that Tolstoy was a schoolgirl's romantic dream.

A rake as a bachelor, Tolstoy loved and left a string of peasant women across the Russian countryside. Yet when it came to marriage, he shared the double standard typical of the age, expecting drastically different deportment from a woman in the master bedroom than he did in the servants' quarters.

When Sonya proved to be a passionate woman, eager to love and be loved, Tolstoy reacted with horror, ultimately avowing a belief in "marital chastity" and characterizing marriage as "domesticated prostitution." That Sonya remained responsive whenever her husband's instincts got the better of his beliefs, he saw as proof that she was a temptress, scheming to thwart his struggle to attain a philosophic ideal of purity.

As Edwards tells it, the Tolstoyan philosophy was even more difficult to live with than Tolstoy himself. For the first years of their marriage — while Tolstoy was writing "War and Peace" — Sonya served ably and contentedly as his literary secretary, copying manuscript, discussing

'The Little Foxes' Big Event Of Season

Liz Is A Superstar On Broadway, Too

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's just never been in Elizabeth Taylor's nature to go about anything in the small or quiet way. She's a true superstar, the drama of her own life and loves often eclipsing her performances.

So it's no surprise that her recent Broadway debut in a revival of Lillian Hellman's 1939 drama, "The Little Foxes," was the big event of the season here.

No surprise, somehow, that she was suddenly felled by a throat infection a scant two days before the opening. Would the show go on? Hoarse and gasping for breath, she vowed to her public that it would. And it did.

No surprise that the advance reports about her weight were true. She has lost 40 pounds. She does look fantastic — trim, regal, lovely. True, the stage is much kinder to a 49-year-old actress than a camera. But even so you have to pinch yourself. You'd swear it's still 1960.

And it's no surprise that she pulls off her Broadway debut in smashing style. Poised, assured, in command. After 54 films — and Oscars for "Butterfield 8" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" — Elizabeth Taylor knows what she's doing. The lady can act. Don't ever doubt that.

What is surprising is how unkind the years have been to Miss Hellman's play. "The Little Foxes" is a dated, heavy-handed melodrama about a greedy, conniving Southern family at the turn of the century. It creaks and groans its way through three unendurable acts, making you fidget and squirm like a 12-year-old kid dragged to his first opera. Picture "Dallas" taking itself seriously and you have some idea of what you're up against.

The production is mighty plush. The Victorian set is opulent, Miss Taylor's flowing full-length gowns of maroon and lavender a feast for the eyes. But appearances are all it has going for it. Director Austin Pendleton has treated his cast like the inhabitants of a wax museum. It's a stiff, solemn outing. If anything was to be gained by reviving "The Little Foxes" — if a freshness could be found — we'll never know. Nobody has bothered to find out.

Hence, Miss Taylor commands our attention throughout. She is completely at home in the role of Regina Giddens, the classy Southern lady who bumps off her ailing husband and squeezes her two brothers out of the family fortune. The role was originally played — by Tallulah Bankhead on stage and Bette Davis in the 1941 film — with haughty nastiness. Miss Taylor plays Regina much the way Vivien Leigh played Scarlett O'Hara. Sweet and flirtatious on the outside, cold steel on the inside. It works for her quite well.

The Giddens are presiding over the destruction of the old South. Regina's brothers, Ben (Anthony Zerbe) and Oscar (Joe Ponsatecki), are about to partner with a Yankee businessman to open a cotton mill in their town. They will become millionaires.

Yes, the old South is on its last legs. Muses Oscar's wife Birdie (Maureen Stapleton) about the good old days: "My momma gave me elderberry wine for the hiccoughs when I was a little girl. I don't think people get the hiccoughs anymore." Later, Birdie runs through the town square without realizing she's still wearing her bathrobe.

Regina's shriveled husband, Horace (Tom Aldredge), who is consumed by heart disease and self-hatred, refuses to kick in his one-third of the bankroll needed to complete the business deal. This deal will never come off, he vows, as long as he is alive. "I hope you die soon," hisses Regina. "I'll be waiting for you to die."

She kind of helps him along, as it turns out. The brothers aren't to be denied this deal, so they steal $185,000 of bonds from Horace's safety deposit box with the help of Oscar's simpering son Leo (Dennis Christopher), who works in Horace's bank. They figure Horace's won't notice the bonds are gone.

They're wrong. He finds out. His response: He won't prosecute them but he will cut their sister, Regina, out of his will. Her response: She refuses to fetch his medicine for him when he has an attack. Instead she sits calmly in an armchair while he slithers up the stairs for it, choking, gagging and finally collapsing with a loud thud on the upstairs landing.

Regina's not through yet. She then demands a 75 percent share of the new venture in return for not turning her own brothers in to the law. And gets it. Triumphant, she heads upstairs to pack her bags. "Somewhere there has to be what I want," she cries.

Miss Taylor fares much better than the rest of the cast. Though many of them are able performers, they sink into this antiquated showpiece and barely survive. No matter. The 10-week run of "The Little Foxes" is already just about sold out.

Miss Taylor, like Regina Giddens, emerges on top. What a shame that the play she's chosen for her first trip to Broadway hasn't aged as gracefully and beautifully as she has.

Does Best Actor Award Always Go To Professional?

DEAR DICK: Does the award for best actor always go to professional actors? I saw the movie "Joni," and the star was a handicapped woman who played herself. I thought she was great. ANDY COLLINS, Ventura, Calif.

I assume you mean the Oscar and, no, there is no rule that it must go to a professional. Any studio can push the candidacy of any performer in any eligible film. But, of course, professionals do 99.9 percent of the acting, so they get 99.9 percent of the Oscars. Harold Russell won an Oscar in '46 for his supporting performance in "The Best Years of Our Lives." He was a soldier who had lost both hands during the war, and he wasn't a pro.

DEAR DICK: Please settle an argument between a twin brother and sister. I say that Daniel Travanti is my cousin who left many years ago to become an actor. He lived in Kenosha, Wis. He stars on "Hill Street Blues" now. Please advise if he is the same Kenoshan. LESLIE, Racine, Wis.

Travanti is from Kenosha, but he says he recalls no cousin named Leslie. If you had given me your last name it might have helped.

DEAR DICK: Is this true? Maureen Stapleton, Jean Stapleton, and Ruth Carter Stapleton are all related in some way. Please settle an argument. H.A.D., Trenton, N.J.

The answer is no. Maureen, Jean and Ruth are unrelated.

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me what happened to Lash LaRue, the cowboy who was most famous for his skill with the bullwhip. If he is still alive, what is he doing now? WILLIAM SHIELDS, Kalamazoo, Mich.

LaRue, who is 60, has had a hard time since he quit films, or since films quit him. He's done a lot of carnival work and some bits in pornographic movies. He even tried his hand at evangelism. All this — and 10 marriages, too.

DEAR DICK: When I lived in Watertown, N.Y., years ago, I recall a Gordon Jump. He was active in radio and little theater work. Could this be the Gordon Jump of "WKRP in Cincinnati"? They would be about the same age. H.M. O'DELL, Columbus, Ohio

No, it's a different Jump. Our Gordon Jump did do a lot of radio work in his early years, but he says Watertown was not one of his stops. He worked in Dayton and Topeka, mostly.

DEAR DICK: Please settle an argument between a schoolmate and me. I say the Munsters and the Addams families had the same father, mother, grandfather and son. Pat says they only had the same mother. I also say that the Munsters had a niece, Marilyn, and the Addams family had a daughter. Pat says the Addams family also had a grandmother. Who's right? J. HYER, Michigan City, Ind.

You're both wrong. No one actor appeared on both those shows. Here were the families: the Munsters — Lily, the mother; Herman, the father; Eddle, the son; Grandpa; and niece, normal niece Marilyn; and the Addamses — Morticia, the mother; Gomez, the father; Pugsly, the son; daughter Wednesday; Lurch, the butler; Grandmama; Cousin Itt; and good old Uncle Fester.

DEAR DICK: A couple of years ago, Lauren Bacall and Carol Burnett made a movie in St. Petersburg, Fla., at the Don Caesar Hotel. It was called "Health." Was it ever shown at theaters? Will it ever be on TV? MRS. J.

LUPARIELLO, Trenton, N.J.

Yes, "Health" was released. But it did very poorly both with the critics and at the box office, so it had an unhealthy run. It was recently sold to a cable network.

DEAR DICK: I hope you can settle a question for our family. My Mom and Dad say Ron Ely didn't star in a "Tarzan" series. My sister and I say he did. Please settle this for us. DONNA TAYLOR, Ashland, Ohio Sore one for younger generation. Ely certainly did play Tarzan in a TV series, which ran from '66 to '68.

DEAR DICK: I enjoy watching "CHiPs" but why, on every show, is there some kind of traffic pileup on the freeway? I think it's a little ridiculous. REGINA CRAMER, Allentown, N.J.

How many weeks would you watch a show that featured a couple of highway patrolmen watching the traffic glide smoothly by?

DEAR DICK: I say Jackie Gleason, Dean Martin, etc., get royalties from the Tobacco Institute for smoking cigarettes on their programs. My friend says no. Who is right? KEN MUNZ, Tucson, Ariz.

They do not get royalties. All they get is a good chance of lung cancer and heart disease.

DEAR DICK: I'm writing on behalf of my husband, who feels you can help him find the book "The Outlaw". He doesn't remember the author. The book was made into a movie by Howard Hughes and starred Jane Russell. We have gone to libraries and bookstores and written to publishers, but no luck. And all the time my husband says I'll bet Dick Kleiner could help. Can you? JOSEPHINE BRUBAKER, Creeksdale, Pa.

There may very well have been a book called "The Outlaw." But the credits for the movie say that it was an original screenplay by Jules Furthman. There is no reference to it being adapted from a book.

Backstage Talent Get Showcase

Movie stars aren't the only ones who get to act at NBC.

Even the unsung, behind-the-scenes heroes will get a chance to show their talent in front of the camera as NBC presents "The Second Annual NBC and Only NBC Talent Showcase" on "Tomorrow Coast-to-Coast," starring Tom Snyder and Rona Barrett.

The NBC employees who can sing, dance, yodel, play piano, run a flea circus, do stand-up comedy, spin dishes or fall over creatively will have a shot at appearing on the program, to air immediately following the Tuesday, May 26 edition of "The Tonight Show."
