NASA extends Atlantis' flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Atlantis' astronauts today grappled with a conked-out telescope and described life and work in space for TV cameras after NASA added an extra day to the shuttle flight.

The first shuttle mission devoted to studying the atmosphere was extended Sunday from eight to nine days at the request of scientists overseeing its experiments. The shuttle will land Thursday at Cape Canaveral.

A sensitive ultraviolet telescope quit working early today when it lost power, officials at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. said. No immediate explanation for the failure was given.

Astronauts have used the telescope, the only astronomical instrument aboard, to observe faint ultraviolet light from stars and galaxies. The light cannot be seen from the ground because it cannot penetrate Earth's atmosphere.

Gun used to kill Oswald seized

WASHINGTON — The gun Jack Ruby used to kill Lee Harvey Oswald, sold at auction last year by Ruby's brother, now sits in a police evidence locker after a man was arrested over the weekend for carrying it onto the grounds of the Capitol.

Capitol Police confirmed Sunday night the arrest of Robert Luongo, whom The Washington Post described as a representative of the $220,000 gun's owner. Luongo was quoted as saying he feared the .38-caliber Colt Cobra would wind up being destroyed — the common fate of all firearms seized in the District of Columbia.

Luongo, 37, of Ocean Ridge, was held in jail overnight after his arrest on Saturday, police said. He was released after posting bond Sunday.

Would-be burglar found in box

NEW PORT RICHEY — A flea market owner foiled a "Trojan Horse" burglary attempt when he cracked open a suspicious plywood box and found a man crouched inside, authorities said.

Robert Raymond Gehm, 37, had planned to crawl out after everyone left and rob the flea market, authorities said. He was arrested on burglary charges Thursday and freed on $1,000 bail.

Indoor Fleas co-owner Tom Wellman called police after discovering Gehm, and pointed a gun at the box, telling the man, "I sure hope you're not armed. I've got a pistol aimed at the box."

"I'm not moving," the man said. "Everything's cool. Everything's cool."

Lotto rolls over to $15 million

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's Lotto jackpot rolled over to an estimated $15 million as no one matched all six winning numbers, Lotto officials said Sunday.

The winning numbers drawn Saturday night were 2-29-30-38-42-44.

Although no one matched all six numbers, Lotto players won a total of $3,983,289, Lottery Secretary Marcia Mann said.

Matching five-of-six numbers, 185 ticket holders won $5,533 each. Another 11,536 ticket holders will get $129.50 for having four correct numbers and 240,962 ticket holders will receive $6 for picking half the numbers correctly.

County OKs $2 million to entice VA hospital

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners voted unanimously this morning to set aside $2 million during the next three to five years to entice the Veterans Administration to build a hospital on a 180-acre site straddling the Seminole-Orange County line near University of Central Florida.

"I think it's a very good investment," said Commission Chairman Bob Sturm. "I estimate we'll get the money back in about four years."

Commissioners also voted unanimously to urge U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Longwood, to lobby VA officials to select the so-called "University" site on McCulloch Road. McCollum has supported Orange County over Brevard and Volusia sites, but prefers a location at the Orlando Naval Training Center.

John Ariale, McCollum's central Florida representative, said McCollum supports any Orange County site over other sites in Brevard and Volusia Counties.

McCollum has always supported Orange over Brevard," said Ariale.

A VA site search team visited the site last week and is expected to announce their site preference sometime this week. Brevard and Volusia Counties are also vying for the selection for the 470-bed hospital. Eloise Rybolt and the Clayton family have offered to donate 90 acres of their property on McCulloch Road east of Aloma Avenue which adjacent to 90 acres in Orange County.

Group of Good Samaritans helps raise money for home

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Good Samaritan Home has been a labor of love for three generations of the Wilson family and now it has become the sole focus of a Seminole County philanthropic organization.

"The Committee," a loosely organized group of community leaders that has held fundraising "roasts" and recognition banquets every other year since 1980 will now devote annual fundraising efforts to Sanford's Good Samaritan Home, 1704 W. Ninth St.

The group will hold its first fundraiser for the assisted-care home April 24 with a roast for Seminole County Commissioner Fred Streetman, who will step down from the commission in November after eight years. All proceeds of the $100 per plate roast will be contributed to the home after expenses are paid.

County commissioner Bob Sturm, a founding member of The Committee, said the decision to concentrate their efforts on the home after seeing the needs of the center.

"Their needs are so great," said Sturm, "not only for operations, but for capital improvements. We felt we could have a greater impact by concentrating our efforts."

Lake Mary Mayor Randy Morris, another committee member, said the group will also seek to secure on-going corporate gift commitments to provide the Good Samaritan Home with a steady new income.

Historic District planner due back

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Duany Project meeting is scheduled for Wednesday night. The meeting may culminate two years of planning work on a downtown and residential area revitalization project.

Even though plans might be approved, the City is expected to require time in which to study and give consideration to the various aspects of the plan.

Andreas Duany will be returning to Sanford this Wednesday, to reveal the final master plans he has compiled, for the revitalization of a large portion of Sanford. His plans and designs are the result of extensive work for the Sanford Historic Trust Duany Project Committee.

During past meetings with the Trust and the Committee, as well as contact with many interested citizens in the area, Duany has completed a final plan for presentation.

According to Sue Olinger, committee chairman, "Mr. Duany believes he has been able to come up with solutions to the city's needs, and will be offering it for any last minute suggestions and final committee consideration this Wednesday evening."

Olinger explained, "The area is more than just the downtown historical area. It covers a large portion of the city, south almost to 24th Street and east of Highway 17-92."

She added, "With the large area involved, we hope that people from throughout the city will turn out for this presentation, in addition to the downtown merchants."

The work done by Duany so far has been financed by the Historic Trust, City of Sanford, and a number of donations. "We are also planning to apply for some grants," Olinger added.

The meeting will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Sanford City Hall.

Legislature, court compete

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The Legislature today begins the second week of a special session trying to sort out the impact of a federal court takeover of the process of redrawing congressional and legislative districts.

Democratic leaders say they hope to produce a plan by Friday for the 23 U.S. House of Representatives districts even though a panel of three federal judges has decided to create its own map.

"I believe all of us in the Legislature think we have a responsibility to keep working," said House Reapportionment Committee Chairman Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg. "We're going to try to develop it as best we can."

The two-week special session also included several other issues, such as bingo regulation, workers' compensation, banking and insurance laws, hospital licensing and merit retention elections for trial judges.

It's unlikely much will be done on anything other than congressional redistricting, with the possible exceptions of bingo and bills increasing state oversight of federal and allowing Florida to continue its review of federal coastal issues such as offshore oil drilling.

Sen. W.D. Childers, D-Pensacola, who chairs the Senate Commerce Committee, said many of the other issues can wait until the Legislature convenes for a budget special session in May. The merit retention bill has already died in the Senate.

"If push comes to shove and we had to wait until May, we could do that," Childers said. "None of this stuff is going to go down."

Another $40,000-a-day special session to redraw the 160 legislative boundaries is set for April 8.

The debate over redistricting was thrown into turmoil last Friday when three federal judges ruled they would adopt both congressional and legislative plans by May 29. That doesn't prevent the Legislature from continuing its efforts, but it does mean the court has final word and will begin its own mapmaking.

"It means our lawsuit will drive the process," said Republican Rep. Miguel De Grandy of Miami, the lead plaintiff in a GOP lawsuit claiming the Democratic-controlled Legislature is incapable of reaching com-

Airport to try urinals for women

PENSACOLA — The Pensacola Regional Airport will soon give women a new option.

Four patented "She-Inals" will be installed in the women's restroom at the airport next month, and some Pensacola restaurants also plan to buy the female urinals.

Kathie Jones developed the female urinal after becoming upset over having to use often-dirty public restrooms while traveling as a hospital supplies saleswoman.

"I thought what was needed was a contact-free fixture for women so that no matter how bad management was, the fixtures could still be clean," she said. "No more hovering over a toilet seat. That's demeaning. We shouldn't have to do it."

Here's how it works: the woman stands in front of the fixture, which resembles the urinals in men's restrooms. She lifts a funnel from a hanger and places a sanitary paper guard on top. When done, the woman replaces the funnel, and the cup is automatically flushed.

The She-Inals use only one-fifth the water as a typical toilet, although they cost double — $895 — usual toilet prices, Ms. Jones said.

But she said the cost will be recouped because the female urinals use less space and women don't use excess toilet paper covering toilet seats.

The bargain sales will last until 2 p.m. to prepare for the battle for bargains in the school's auditorium.

At 3 p.m., the auctioneers from the Central Florida Auction in Sanford will begin selling off items and services donated by individuals and local businesses. The things being sold off range from new and used furniture to dinners to haircuts, organizers said.

Money raised at the auction will be divided equally among the participating groups.

Throughout the day, barbecue chicken dinners will be available to eat on the school grounds or to take home to enjoy there. Meal tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12-years-old.

The school is still accepting donations of items for the auction. For more information about how to make a donation, call Bobby Lundquist, Gene Williams or Jerry Posey at the school, 322-4352, or Jeanette or George Stiffey at 322-8234.

sale in the school's front parking lot and courtyard. In the back of the school, near the cafeteria, there will be a car wash for $1.50 per vehicle.

Hardy said the carnival is designed to raise money to buy supplies for the school and assist in paying for class field trips as well as to build up reserves in the PTAs account from which grants are given to teachers who are implementing special learning programs for the students.

"We want to be ready for those things that the teachers maybe hadn't planned for at the beginning of the year and that weren't budgeted for," she said.

Hardy said that the school is the focal point of much of the community and that the whole community is participating in the carnival in one way or another. From donating items for sale to preparing food, there are people from all over Midway who will be helping the school out on Saturday.

"We'll be having lots of people from the community cooking our barbecue," said Hardy. "In addition to chicken, we'll also have burgers, hot dogs and corn dogs for sale."

Carnival goers can get their food to go or they can enjoy their meal in the picnic area that is being prepared on the school grounds.

Entertainment will be provided by a number of school and community children's groups, including the Tajiri Arts theater group. Tajiri Arts is headed by Pat Hitchmon, the Seminole County Teacher of the Year who teaches at Midway.

Longwood

David Scott, principal at Longwood, said he believes that the whole family can have a fun time at the event. He promises a little something for everyone who comes out.

"We'll have food, door prizes, performances and games for the kids," he said.

In addition, organizers said there will be a huge rummage sale with new and used items donated by various sources throughout the community. They also said there would be pony rides, face painting and other activities aimed at the little ones.

Some of the featured entertainment will include the award-winning S.O.D.A. Pop Dancers from Miriam and Valerie's School of Dance Arts, the Sunshine Generation Children's Performing Group and the Showtime Dance Co.

Scott said the festival will be postponed a day if there is rain on Saturday. In case of inclement weather, the festival will take place on Sunday from noon to 4 p.m.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Tragedy haunting Gainesville

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — The latest murder here has students, police and psychological experts trying to figure why this campus town has become a magnet for violent tragedy.

The discovery last week of the body of Elizabeth Foster, a missing Santa Fe Community College student found in a shallow grave, follows a double slaying of two female students last summer, the shocking slaying of five student murders in August 1990 and the unsolved 1989 disappearance of student Tiffany Sessions.

"There is not a particular pattern or trend in these homicides," Sheriff's spokesman Spencer Mann said.

Theories about the series of murders and disappearances range from the transient nature of a college town and carelessness of students to Gainesville's proximity to state prisons. Some experts say that Gainesville statistically isn't unusually crime-ridden, but that publicity and reaction is strong because students are the victims.

"Violent crimes happen in major cities like Miami, and no one blinks an eye," said Richard Hollinger, a University of Florida sociology professor. "But when they happen in a college town, its status becomes more prominent."

Parents everywhere who have sent children off to school can relate to campus tragedies, he said.

Florida Department of Law Enforcement statistics indicate that the Gainesville area is relatively safe for Florida cities. They recorded 101 crimes per thousand residents last year, compared to 129 per thousand in Miami's Dade County.

Alachua County had 17 murders in 1991, compared to 381 in Dade.

Leon County, which hosts the Florida State University and Florida A&M campuses, had crime statistics last year that were similar to Gainesville's.

Gainesville police chief Waylon Clifton has complained that the number of prisons in North Florida worsens problems because some inmates stay in the area after being released.

Others point out that Gainesville is near a major interstate, I-95.

Legislature seen as anti conservation

Associated Press

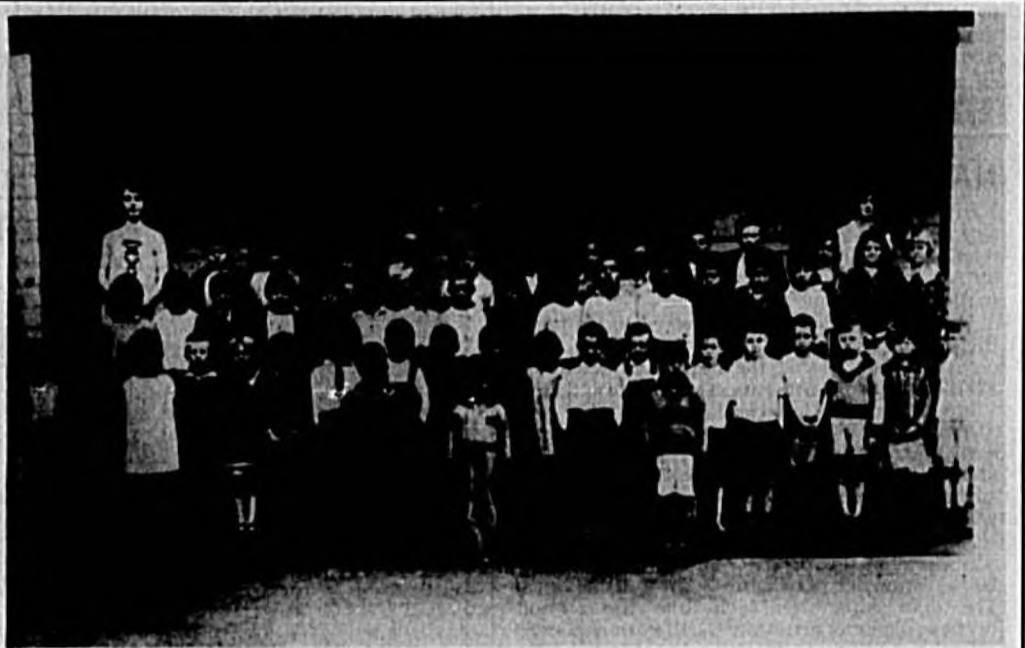

TALLAHASSEE — Leading environmentalists say the just-finished regular legislative session was one of the worst in recent memory for land, water and air conservation issues.

"To the extent we were able to kill the really bad stuff, yes, it wasn't as bad as it could have been," said Charles Lee of the Florida Audubon Society. "Still, in terms of progressive environmental legislation, this was the worst session I can recall in at least a decade."

For example, lawmakers:

- Passed a law making it easier for mining firms to dig in wetlands.
- Threatened the state's ability to review federal coastal activities by linking it with language to weaken growth management laws.
- Passed a bill that would dissolve all 11 regional planning councils unless the Legislature decides otherwise next year.
- Reduced money for the Department of Community Affairs' review of local growth management plans.
- Eliminated a wastewater treatment program that attracts five federal dollars for every state dollar.
- Did not rewrite solid waste laws aimed at increasing recycling.
- In addition, lawmakers still haven't made a commitment to continue funding for the Preservation 2000 program aimed at buying and setting aside environmentally sensitive land over the next 10 years. That issue will be debated again in a May special session.
- "This year, every good environmental bill died," said David Gluckman, who represents the Florida Audubon Society.

Baby Theresa off life support

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — A nine-day-old infant born without a fully formed brain struggled to live early today after being removed from life support, but an attorney said her parents' legal fight will continue.

The battle to save the organs of the child called Baby Theresa for donation may be over because of her deteriorating condition. But attorneys planned to battle on in the Florida Supreme Court today on the principles.

The child, born March 21, suffers from a condition called anencephaly; she has a brain stem, but no cerebrum; her open skull is covered by bandages. The brain stem controls automatic reflexes such as breathing and heartbeat, but babies with the condition are doomed.

The lawyers for the parents, waitress Laura Campo and cement worker Justin Pearson of Coral Springs, worked into the morning hours on an appeal. The parents are fighting a judge's decision late last week that blocked efforts to have the child declared brain-dead so her organs could be donated and save others.

"The child is in critical condition, the condition is deteriorating," said attorney Scott Mager, who is assisting with the appeal.

"Even if the child passes, I'm going to Tallahassee ... (the situation) is capable of repetition, yet evading review. So we have to do something now for future relief," said Mager, who said he would ask to argue the case immediately after filing.

Professionals say DPR costs too much for too little

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Some professionals say they could do better without the state Department of Professional Regulation and the $50 million in annual license fees it takes in.

Since the agency was reorganized by the Legislature in 1979, the number of professions and licensees regulated by DPR has grown from 26 to 46 and the number of employees from 400 to 855.

The larger professional boards — accountants, dentists, real estate agents and construction contractors — are unhappy that their ever-increasing fees are shifted to cover deficits in the smaller ones, ranging from talent agents to auctioneers.

DPR recently estimated that nearly half of its 46 professional regulation operations are in the red. The boards will have to cut costs or increase licensing fees to absorb the deficits because state law requires them to support themselves financially.

"There is a feeling among the big ones (professionals) that the little ones don't carry their own weight," said Frank Kowalski, a member of the Florida Real Estate Commission, which has about 322,000 licensees and faces a deficit in excess of $1 million.

"It would be easy to see that if this were a business entity, it would be heading rapidly toward bankruptcy," Construction Industry Licensing Board member David Crawford wrote recently in a letter to the agency.

Richard Chichetti, chairman of the Board of Dentistry, estimated that his profession could save about $1 million.

"We think we could do a lot better service to the public and do it a lot cheaper if we were autonomous from the department," he said.

Robbery attempt at gas station

SANFORD — A Sanford service station attendant was injured in a robbery attempt Sunday night. The incident occurred at approximately 8:20 p.m., at Highway Oil, 2425 S. French Avenue.

Sanford Police report four men approached the attendant, Clayton John Sperry, 38, and attempted to rob him. While no weapons were identified, police believe the men may have been carrying an unidentified shotgun and a pistol. Sperry was injured during the robbery attempt.

Sperry was taken to the Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford for treatment of his injuries where, according to a hospital spokesperson, he was treated and released.

According to information obtained by the officers investigating the incident, the four men were believed to be driving a blue Chevrolet.

Longwood crystal ball shows no new city hall for a while

By NICK PFEIPAUP
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — It will possibly be months if not years before Longwood gets a new City Hall. Efforts to obtain the Longwood Village Inn for the city's municipal headquarters have come to a halt.

Although there have been many meetings and discussions held in the past eight months, agreement could not be reached regarding the purchase price of the Inn. CNL Properties, owners of the former hotel, had asked $980,000 which included the purchase price and the cost of refurbishing the facility to be used as a City Hall.

The referendum was on last November's ballot. It would have allowed the citizens to decide whether or not they wanted the City to continue work toward the purchase.

Just days before the vote, the City undertook another survey and determined the building had a value of only $680,000. The referendum was pulled off the ballot at the last minute and a vote on how the citizens might feel about the purchase was never learned.

Most of the efforts toward reaching a settlement on the price have been undertaken by a Village Inn Acquisition Committee, chaired by City Commissioner Clance Keith.

Keith explained, "With all of our efforts at a standstill, we have disbanded the Committee." She added, "This doesn't mean the idea is completely dead, but there is no need for us to meet any more under the present circumstances."

The Commissioner observed, "These are tight money times, and we will have to work out the best way to pay for this if it is to become a reality, but we just can't afford it right now."

She predicted, "Maybe later this year or at some time in the future, some City Commission may bring it back up for further discussion."

Ridge hosts Endangered wildflower

Associated Press

CLERMONT — A delicate wildflower growing on Central Florida's ridge area is one of the oldest and rarest plants on Earth. And now, one of its most endangered.

The clasping Warea has grown on the high sandy hills of this area for more than 5 million years, botanists say. But today it clings to existence on a few isolated pockets of virgin pine forest on a strip of uplands running from Orlando to Lake Wales.

The Warea survived the last Ice Age and a rising ocean that swallowed up most of the state.

South Africa

South Africa now basks in the afterglow of the whites-only referendum, in which an overwhelming majority repudiated apartheid in favor of multiracial democracy. Nonetheless, there remains a host of unresolved problems that impede the march toward racial equality.

It is ironic that, on the very day white South Africans voted to cede peacefully their political domination, black-on-black violence left 14 dead. Moreover, in the month leading up to the referendum, factional fighting claimed nearly 300 lives in South Africa's black townships.

This problem will not suddenly disappear because of the referendum. In fact, it could get worse as South Africa edges closer to black majority rule and the African National Congress, Inkatha and the Pan African Congress wrestle for power. The prospects of a civil war in which these rival factions are pitted against each other cannot be discounted.

South Africa's black leaders play down violence in the townships. They prefer instead to focus on issues that put Pretoria on the defensive. This explains ANC leader Nelson Mandela's threat recently to "destory the economy" if the government follows through with plans to replace a general sales tax with a value-added tax.

In the meantime, several key issues stand in the way of successful completion of the so-called Convention for a Democratic South Africa — the negotiations to prepare the way for a new constitution and majority rule. The 19 groups participating in CODESA have yet to decide which parties actually should frame the new constitution and whether an interim government should be established.

Minority rights also are a difficult matter. President F.W. de Klerk seeks protections for South Africa's whites to ensure that they are not entirely disenfranchised under black majority rule. The ANC, on the other hand, would extend no special protections.

Then there is the question of whether the two major factions that previously opposed CODESA — the white, right-wing Conservative Party and the black, left-wing Pan African Congress — can be persuaded to join the discussions. If they participate in CODESA, they would be less inclined to undermine whatever agreements may emerge.

The outcome of the referendum was encouraging: It holds out hope of a peaceful transition of power from whites to blacks. But it would be premature to celebrate at this point. There is still a long way to go before South Africa becomes a true multiracial democracy.

Remedial finance classes in D.C.?

Angry taxpayers all over the country are ready to call home members of the U.S. House of Representatives who can't keep their checkbooks. I personally would favor a year's indentured servitude as husbands and bugirls at any of the 11 House restaurants where members racked up $700,000 of unpaid tabs.

The exception is Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., who told constituents that he bounced one of his checks to construct a shrine to the Blessed Virgin Mary in his yard. Him I would sentence to a year pouring concrete into molds at the yard-statue factory.

But they tell me indentured servitude isn't legal and it is not likely to become so, at least not while this particular House is in session.

My next choice would be a semester of remedial finance classes between each congressional session for as long as the offenders remain in office. Attendance shall be mandatory, with daily pop quizzes, essay exams each Wednesday and research papers due each Friday.

The first required class would be basic fourth-grade addition and subtraction, taught by an 80-year-old Catholic teaching sister who cut her teeth in the era when nuns wore habits and smote little knuckles with rulers. Those receiving a passing grade would advance to Accounting I, and those failing would be sent to remedial math, taught by The Masked Assassin and Jake "The Snake" Roberts.

In Accounting I, students would learn the terms "debit" and "credit" and practice entering them on the proper side of their Big Chief Tablets with their crayons. Those earning passing marks would be issued smocks and allowed to finger-paint in the rotunda on Friday afternoons.

After successfully completing both Basic Ciphering I and Accounting I, students would then serve internships in the houses of struggling middle-class families under a program called "Real Life 101." Pupils would attend work every day in the place of one of the wage earners, who would take the Congress member's place on Capitol Hill.

The intern would pick up the host family's paycheck and sit at the kitchen table with the stack of monthly bills on one side and the Big Chief tablet on the other until he or she has figured out how to pay them.

When the intern succumbed to the temptation to take a chance on sending out a few checks there isn't enough money for and hoping that at least one of them got to the bank late, he or she would go to the host family's mailbox and find the pink slip flaring through the envelope window. The intern would observe the time-honored middle-class tradition of walking back into the house to open it, heart pounding, hope-against-hope that it was just a recruitment ad for the bank's new NOW! account.

After discovering the $20 bank charge and $15 store charge for the bounced check, the student would then call his or her academic supervisor. That person who would give instructions on options to try when the overdraft charges drag the account below its ability to clear any of the outstanding checks.

The final grade would be determined by how the student reacts to the pink slips that would soon begin to outnumber the junk mail.

Speech freedom global issue

For three days recently, several score journalists from all over the world gathered in Washington to discuss their common concerns in a world that is both closer together and more volatile than anyone could have imagined a decade ago.

What emerged was a clear understanding that the longing for freedom of speech, and therefore of the press is global. What was underscored with equal clarity is that there is a similarly global tendency to suppress that freedom in the name of national security, political control, societal peace, religious belief or racial and ethnic supremacy. It is the absolute responsibility of a free press and democratic governments everywhere to support the longing and oppose the tendency, without regard to the identity or ideology of any of the parties involved.

It was an eventful three days. John Frohnmayer, the deposed chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, finally went public and blasted those who stood by in silence as the know-nothing right claimed his scalp. If the NEA's artistic freedom is sacrificed today, he warned, public broadcasting, federally funded universities and free research inquiry itself will come next. As with the Nazi takeover of Europe in the 1930s, "It's the Sudetenland now, Czechoslovakia next week, and after that Poland."

Interestingly enough, Frohnmayer was preceded on the conference program by Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, who spoke movingly of his nation's difficult transition to freedom. A former journalist, the foreign minister knows firsthand the difference between a kept press and a free one.

Garry Trudeau, the cartoonist and social satirist, reminded his enthusiastic audience of the recurrent tendency of the press in this country to blur the distinction. His recent "Doonesbury" panels about accusations by a convicted felon that Vice President Quayle was once a customer for his drugs were almost uniformly attacked by the capital's political reporters. Their attacks were almost uniformly wrong. Most reporters had the wrong convict but missed the real point: that the convict's story was being suppressed for political reasons. The late, great essayist and journalist Walter Lippman once warned journalists against "social climbing on the pyramids of power." As Trudeau demonstrated, it is a tendency alive and well in Washington today.

Last, but certainly not least, Salman Rushdie came out of hiding in England for a dramatic appearance on the conference's last night. His story is hair-raisingly simple. Born in India into a Muslim family, he is now an English citizen and distinguished novelist. He is also a man with a price on his head, the object of an Iranian edict that calls upon the Muslim faithful to seek out and murder him for alleged blasphemy in his novel "Satanic Verses." In short, he is the victim of both state and religious terror.

Rushdie is a prickly individual. "Satanic Verses," which was meant as social satire and comedy, is not every reader's or critic's cup of literary tea. But neither his character nor the novel's quality are relevant. What is at issue is freedom of expression on the one hand and murder on the other. Salman Rushdie is quite literally representative of the sanctity of that freedom around the world. If he is assassinated, a piece of freedom will die with him.

It is imperative that no one forget that Rushdie is not unique. Mass graves are filled with Soviet Rushdies. Only recently, a courageous Spanish language journalist in New York City was murdered, and the police were having a difficult time determining which set of powerful enemies was responsible. China is a wasteland of journalistic repression. In Central America, a free press is barely beginning to re-emerge after the long civil wars there.

The stories that we comfortable Americans in the audience heard were alternately hair-raising, depressing, enraging and inspiring. The situations recounted were quite different in their particulars. South Africa is not Cuba. Chile is not China. Zambia and Burma share little in heritage or contemporary circumstance. It is pretentious for an American reporter facing the mock theater of congressional contempt hearings to equate himself with the situation of a Rushdie.

But there were unifying threads nonetheless, the most important being the most cliched. We really are all in this together. What affects freedom of speech or the press in what was once Yugoslavia affects freedom of speech everywhere. When the British government is able to muzzle reporters covering the Falklands war, it encourages Washington to muzzle reporters covering Grenada, Panama and the Gulf War.

The convict's story was being suppressed for political reasons.

Skinner and Teeter spin out of control

WASHINGTON — Two of George Bush's most critical spin doctors are working overtime to put a happy face on their own troubles. White House Chief of Staff Samuel Skinner and campaign manager Robert Teeter have been bracing for stories that Skinner is "in over his head," and that Teeter is juggling both the campaign and the White House.

The two men are trying their best to give the outward appearance that they are working like the precision drill team the president needs to look presidential. But behind Skinner's back, some Bush advisers have caustily whispered: "Al Haig, phone home." "I am in control here in the White House," is the phrase that got Haig in trouble the day Ronald Reagan was shot in 1981. The same claim would do Skinner a world of good today if he could make it stick.

Skinner admits that there have been "arrows flying" at his back. But he blames them on "sour grapes" by GOP insiders. And, he told our associate Alicia Mundy, that things are improving daily. As proof, he claimed credit for shaping Bush's March 20 speech chiding Congress for not accepting his economic package on the deadline he had set. "We did all the planning for that right there," Skinner said, pointing to his conference table. He called the speech a turning point for the campaign. Of course, he said the same thing about Bush's State of the Union address too, and the earth didn't move then either.

Skinner rode in on a wave of good will and a slogan: "I'm not Sununu." The personality differences alone should have endeared Skinner to Bush's inner circle. But Skinner only knew how to get the job. He didn't know what to do with it. "He wanted it badly, and badly is how he's performing," says a Bush campaign adviser.

Teeter told us everything is lollipops and roses between him and Skinner, but staffers continue to report that Teeter is managing the White House. And that's no way to do business, said a staffer, because "Teeter hates to make decisions."

High-ranking campaign staffers are skeptical of Skinner's and Teeter's efforts to put the best spin on the chaos. Proof that the White House is floundering is the constant flow of former high-ranking White House officials who have been imported to explain the job to Skinner. A staffer acknowledged that a former chief of staff was among the briefers.

Skinner even hired one of those ubiquitous management consultants, and when the consultant began asking staffers for flow charts, they revolted. The consultant was quietly packed off.

"The chief of staff role is political," a GOP adviser says. "You have to know all the currents in Washington and how to protect the president from them, or help him use them. You have to have your finger on everything, and be able to pick up a phone and find out exactly what Congress is up to. Skinner's congressional contacts don't exist."

Skinner's flaw is that he is trying to be the president's best friend and chief of staff, and he can't do both. He may not be suited to do either. "Both Skinner and Bush are hyperkinetic and they stir each other up. You need a more phlegmatic personality to keep Bush on an even keel," said one outside adviser.

The frenzy has gotten to Skinner. Two weeks ago, he blew up at his assistant Henson Moore in front of several Republican National Committee people and campaign advisers. "It was embarrassing for Skinner to lose it in front of the campaign," said a campaign staffer.

Skinner admits that there have been 'arrows flying.'

Harry Hagle, Seminole County commission chairman Bob Sturm, and Lake Mary Mayor Randy Morris (rear) take a stroll through the Good Samaritan Home Friday as home resident Henry Newsom stands nearby. The three are part of a civic group raising money for the home.

Home

Home administrator Thelma Wilson Mike, daughter of founder Mother Ruby Lee and Timothy "Pappy" Wilson, said the home is primarily supported by the government assistance received by clients, such as monthly Social Security payments. The home also receives United Way grants. The remainder of the expenses are paid by donations.

Ruby Blake, Mike's daughter and the third generation in the chain, said the home costs about $25,000 per month to operate. Clients receive room and board, which includes three balanced meals per day and an evening snack. Black is business administrator of the home. The home has a capacity of 50 persons. Although mainly populated by the elderly, the home also houses some younger disabled adults.

The Good Samaritan Home has emerged from a tax crisis that nearly closed the home two years ago, but now has numerous pressing needs, said Blake. The roof of the 21-year-old building has begun to leak and needs replacing. The home doesn't actually own the 49 beds that fill the 15 bedrooms.

Tickets to the roast can be ordered by calling 882-8310, 830-1701 or 322-3321. Contributions of cash or clothing can be made to the home by calling 322-3221 or 322-3324.

Hospital

Genean McKinnon, an attorney representing the property owners, said she has heard the VA site selection team has narrowed their choices to either the university site or an east-Orange County site near Orlando International Airport.

"This decision was critical," said McKinnon. "It's down to two sites with preference being given to the east Orange site. This site makes better sense. McCollock Road leads directly to it as opposed to the airport site which is internal. Also, Brevard veterans would have to take the East-West to get to the east Orange site. They would have to pay a toll."

The $2 million will be used to pay for road and drainage improvements and installation of water and sewer lines to serve the facility. The pledge will match a similar $3 million Orange County commission offer.

The competition is keen for the facility because it is expected to provide numerous jobs and pump millions of dollars into the local economy. Construction of the $200 million is expected to provide 2,000 workers with jobs. Another 1,400 people will receive paychecks after the facility is completed. In all, the hospital is expected to place $55 million into the local economy each year.

Up to 126,000 out-patients are expected to visit the hospital in addition to overnight patients.

County Manager Ron Rabun said the $2 million should not affect taxpayers. He said the money could be accumulated by fiscal constraint or by restructuring sales or gas tax bonds.

promise. "Now they have someone telling them what to do." Democrats still hope to finish the congressional plan by Friday, Wallace said. If that happened and Gov. Lawton Chiles signed it, the map would go to the U.S. Justice Department for clearance under the minority representation guidelines of the Voting Rights Act. The agency has 60 days to act.

"I think if the House and Senate come out with a plan, there's a possibility that will prevail," said Senate President Owen Margolis, D-North Miami Beach.

The House has passed its congressional plan, but the Senate failed on two chaotic 20-20 votes to approve its version. The 18 Senate Republicans and their two Democratic allies, therefore, control what happens next — and they want to link the congressional plans to GOP improvements in the Senate legislative map.

"They're holding it hostage," said Sen. Ken Jenne, D-Fort Lauderdale.

Republicans, Hispanics and many blacks say the congressional proposals developed so far will not pass muster with the Justice Department because Democrats have refused to draw the maximum number of minority districts, opting instead to boost careers and protect white incumbents.

"I think the courts will certainly do a better job than this Democratic plan," said Senate Minority Leader Ander Crenshaw, R-Jacksonville.

The Democrats, meanwhile, accuse the GOP of playing to the hopes of minorities in order to isolate them in certain districts so Republican candidates can win adjacent seats.

"You're selling the blacks a bill of goods," Margolis told GOP lawmakers last week.

Democrats and Republicans alike were surprised when U.S. Circuit Judge Joseph Hatchett and U.S. district judges William Stafford and Roger Vinson extended their jurisdiction to the legislative maps as well.

Legislative leaders are more optimistic they can pass an acceptable plan for the state House and Senate next month, particularly since it must be approved by the Florida Supreme Court.

"I don't think the court is going to refuse to take a legislative map if we can adopt one," Wallace said.

ford Chamber of Commerce, a block away. He noted that no one seemed to mind the wait, which was as long as 45 minutes to an hour.

"The weather was nice and cool," he said. "It was a pleasant day for being outside."

He said that the long line boosted sales at the produce sale which was taking place outside the entrance to the civic center. While he did not have the final figures on the sales from the produce vendors, he said they reported that people standing in line would step out to buy fruits and vegetables while they were waiting to get in for their meal.

The Kiwanis Pancake Day is designed to raise money for the club's work with underprivileged children in the Sanford area. Smith said that he believes that the club raised more money this year than last.

Smith said that he went to many businesses and industrial areas around Sanford to be sure that as many people as possible knew about the event.

"I did everything I could to get people out here and to get the community involved in the event," Smith said.

He said that once the problems the club had with overloading the civic center's circuitry by trying to make too many pots of coffee at the same time, the day proceeded without a hitch.

"The pancakes were perfect," he said proudly. "The griddles were just right and with the volume of people we were moving through there the cakes came out great."

He said that one gentleman came through the line three times to get more pancakes because, he said, he'd never had such good pancakes.

Smith said the club plans a few changes in the event next year such as keeping the entertainment segments to 20 minutes in length and making sure they are conducive to having conversations over a meal.

"The kids were great this year and we'll invite them back next year," he said. "We'll just change the program a bit."

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Clinton admits to drug use

Democratic front-runner Bill Clinton acknowledged that he tried marijuana while at Oxford University, but it caused little furor on the campaign trail. Rival Jerry Brown steered clear of the latest personal news about Clinton and focused on the environment in Vermont and Wisconsin.

GOP challenger Patrick Buchanan scheduled a speech outside the Capitol today to outline a plan to overhaul Congress. He then planned to fly to Wisconsin and Minnesota for a full day of campaigning Tuesday.

Clinton made his admission about marijuana during a televised debate Sunday with Brown, who appeared on the New York show from Wisconsin.

A questioner noted that Clinton had always answered questions about drug use by saying he had never broken state or federal law. Asked if he had broken any international drug laws, Clinton said:

'Uncle Ed' arrested

PHILADELPHIA — The alleged fetishes and sexual desires of "Uncle Ed" were common knowledge on the street long before police accused the AIDS-infected man of paying for sex with boys and young men, AIDS counselors say.

Edward Savitz was also known as "Fast Eddie," or "Dr. Feel Good," according to counselors who canvassed neighborhoods after his arrest.

Police believe the 50-year-old businessmen paid hundreds of boys and young men for sex, underwear and feces over the past decade. District Attorney Lynne Abraham said he used a pay scale for sex acts and paid for referrals.

Police found 5,000 photographs of boys in his downtown apartment. More than 500 calls flooded local AIDS hot lines after his mug shot was released Friday.

Are we ready for take off?

NEW YORK — Snow is falling, and a ground crew is de-icing the wings. Your seat belt is fastened, the runway is clear — and you want off the plane.

Can you get off? It depends, say those in the airline industry. "There is no set moment at which we say, 'No, you're never going to get off,' or, 'Yes, you can get off.' In terms of reality, it's unlikely we'd return to the gate if we were second in line for takeoff," said Tim Smith, an American Airlines spokesman.

Some are asking themselves the question after the March 22 crash of a USAir jet at La Guardia Airport during a snowstorm. Flight 405 skidded off a runway on takeoff March 22, killing 27 people. Investigators are looking into whether the plane had ice on its wings.

Women take the reins of new program

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A group of women is challenging male-dominated public affairs television with a new talk show aimed at bringing a feminine perspective to the economy, health care, politics and other topics.

"To the Contrary" premieres Friday on public television with an all-female team.

"We will differ from other talk shows in a number of ways — and not just the fact that we are all women," said Bonnie Erbe, the Washington journalist who had the idea for the program and will moderate it.

"You are never going to see people sitting around talking about whether Sam Skinner is doing a great job as White House chief of staff," Erbe said. "We want to talk about issues that people care about."

Nancy DeStefanis, founder of Women are Good News, a San Francisco organization that monitors the status of women in the news media, applauds the concept. "Women have been almost invisible on public television public affairs shows for the past 20 years," she said.

Although most such discussion programs are dominated by men, CNN recently marked the first anniversary of Catherine Crier's Crier & Co., a half-hour talk show featuring a panel of female policy experts.

DeStefanis' group, in a survey last year, found that 15 percent of the guests appearing on "Inside Washington," "McLaughlin Group," "McLaughlin One on One," "Washington Week in Review" and the "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" were women.

"Even when you do have one woman sitting around the table with the guys, she may not be able to express her views as fully as she might like," said Julianne Malveaux, a University of California economist who'll be a panelist on "To the Contrary."

Leader of black college group defends himself

By TAMARA HENRY
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — A representative of the nation's 117 historically black colleges and universities is winning praise for the same character trait that has so often gotten him in trouble — outspokenness.

At a meeting this month of the National Association for Equal Opportunity in Higher Education, Samuel L. Myers confronted Ronald W. Roskens of the Agency for International Development. His challenge: restore $12 million in funds for black colleges that had been targeted for cuts by AID.

Roskens promised to look into the matter.

Many college presidents later praised Myers for his actions during the session, as well as a letter he had written to the federal agency seeking restoration of the cuts.

"We are strong supporters of NAFEO and Myers," said Ernest L. Holloway, president of Langston University. "He does good work. It's just phenomenal. I don't see how he does what he does. I'm very impressed with his efforts."

The conference concluded with members passing a resolution commending Myers for being "aggressive in the pursuit of resources" for the association, the umbrella group for the black colleges and universities. It also praised Myers for keeping the association "growing in the good times and growing in the lean times."

Myers explains his actions this way:

"I could not have that administrator get up and talk, knowing that our funding is going down, and say nothing about it," he said.

Seniors learn an age-old craft

LAKE MARY — Some Lake Mary Seniors whittle while they work.

Hilda Davis, a retired teacher, puts interested seniors to work learning an age-old craft, whittling.

"Her birds are lovely and are objects of fine art," senior center director, Paulce Stevens, says.

Stevens says it was once traditional for boys to carve or whittle slingshots for themselves.

"Through the years the art of whittling became a fine craft, wood carving," she says. "Many members have been at their craft since childhood."

Members with more practiced hands help new whittlers at the senior center. Ideas, patterns and techniques are pooled and shared.

Whittling is just one of the group activities held at the center. Whittlers meet Mondays, 10 a.m. at Old City Hall.

"Monday doesn't mean wash day for some Lake Mary seniors. City Hall is where the action is. Lookers, buyers and new members are welcome. Come and join the fun," Stevens says.

Cincy, Michigan in Final four

Cincinnati swept Memphis State, and Michigan avoided a sweep against Ohio State.

Herb Jones and Nick Van Exel helped Cincinnati beat Memphis State for the fourth time this season, 88-57 in the Midwest Regional.

Cincinnati's semifinal opponent next Saturday in Minneapolis will be Michigan, which averaged two losses to Ohio State with a 75-71 overtime victory in the Southeast Regional.

Chris Webber had 23 points and 11 rebounds to lead Michigan's "Fab Five" freshmen.

Elliott still hot

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Bill Elliott took control in the late stages to win his fourth straight NASCAR race and set a Darlington International Raceway record Sunday in the TransSouth 500.

Elliott, the 1988 Winston Cup champion, gave Ford its fifth victory of the season and ninth straight triumph, dating to October of 1991.

Harry Gant appeared to have the fastest car — an Oldsmobile Cutlass — but he also was making the earliest pit stops of the leaders throughout the race because of worn tires.

Mark Martin finished third in a Ford. A lap down was Davey Allison in a Ford, followed by defending champion Ricky Rudd in a Chevrolet.

Locals do well at Relays

Oviedo's Gaines, Lake Howell's Kobia post wins

From Staff Reports

GAINESVILLE — Each of Seminole County's five Class 1A schools had at least one outstanding performance at the 1992 Florida Coca-Cola Classic Relays on Saturday at the University of Florida's Peary M. Beard track.

The only victories registered by county athletes came from Oviedo's Raymond Gaines and Lake Howell's Kelly Kobia. Gaines won the boys' triple jump with a leap of 22 feet, 2 1/4 inches while Kobia finished first in the girls' discus with her throw of 134 feet, 4 inches.

Kobia also finished fifth in the shot put, throwing the shot 36 feet, 9 inches.

Lyman High School could claim a victory of sorts in the girls' distance medley relay. The Greyhound quartet of Melissa Lewis, Rita Greenberg, Krystal Bresnick and Janet Greenberg combined to post a time of 12:35.45, good for third overall behind a pair of Georgia schools.

Lewis opened the event by running the 400-meter leg in 1:02. Rita Greenberg followed that with a 2:22 in the 800-meter portion. After Bresnick clocked a 3:54 over 1,200 meters, Janet Greenberg ran the closing leg of 1,600 meters in 5:18.

Lake Mary's Shannon Cook was the only other local competitor besides Kobia to place in two events, finishing third in the shot put with an effort of 37 feet, 5 1/2 inches, and fifth in the long jump, clearing 17 feet, 3/4 inches. Cook also threw the discus 100 feet, 6 inches but did not place in the top eight.

Also for the Lake Mary girls, Tami McGinnis placed fifth in the 300-meter low hurdles (49.59) while the Ram four-mile relay came in sixth (23:53.51) and the two-mile relay placed 10th (11:27.79). Running both relays for Lake Mary were Christina Olson, Heather Bonik, Renee Frank and Christina Louy.

Lyman was second in the two-mile (4 x 800-meter) relay with a time of 10:22.35. The Lake Brantley girls came in fourth among Class 1A schools in the four-mile relay (23:33.15) and placed eighth in the two-mile relay (11:27.09).

Oviedo's Wendell Peters and Latonya Thomas both competed in two events, placing in one. Peters came in third in the high jump, clearing 5 feet, 2 inches, and took part in the long jump.

Babe Ruth League opens to empty seats . . . why?

What if they held opening day and nobody came?

Unfortunately, the Sanford Recreation Department and a bunch of 13, 14 and 15-year-old boys found out Saturday morning at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

Nine days ago the Sanford Recreation Department conducted opening day ceremonies for its Little Major League League (ages 10 through 12) at Fort Mellon Park's Roy Hoffer Field. A large crowd hemmed the field around home plate and down the foul lines to watch.

On Saturday, it was the older boys' turn. Even though the league is made up of eight teams consisting of 15 players each, less than 30 relatives and friends found it worth their time to come be a part of the ceremonies.

Sad. It strikes me particularly this week because my parents are visiting from Massachusetts. Two hours after the Babe Ruth League ceremonies, I was at Chase Park, not 100 yards from the stadium, playing in the Sanford Church Softball League with my mom, dad, wife and daughter watching in the stands. As much as that meant to me, I can only guess how much it would mean to a teenage youth to have his or her parents show enough interest to participate in their lives.

SPORTS

And it's not just Sanford. Coaches and administrators at the local high schools will tell you that parental involvement in their athletic and other extracurricular activities is not what they'd like it to be.

There seems to be this mentality that once children break into the teenage years, that parents — and this is generalizing grossly — either no longer feel it's necessary to be active participants in their children's lives or they feel that their children don't want them to be involved in their lives any longer.

These are the same people who demand that somebody do something when teenagers run afoul of society. Without proper guidance, a significant number turn to drugs, crime and violence with the mistaken notion that this is what being an adult is all about.

How many do we have to put in jail? How many do we have to hospitalize? How many do we have to bury? What does it take to get our attention?

For myself and many of my friends, the teenage years was where we made the admittedly difficult but welcome transition from being wards of our parents to being their friends and peers. Instead of our parents cheering because we knew which end of the bat to hold, we'd discuss strategy and technique, sharing an adult appreciation of the sport.

It's a shame. The recreation department and Wes Rinker have worked it out so that the Babe Ruth League will play its schedule in Sanford Memorial Stadium (which is still a great place to watch a game) this year. Yet, if Saturday is any indication, they'll play to empty seats.

What kind of message will that send to the kids?

I know there are many parents who work long and hard during the week. The weekends are often their only time for themselves, the only opportunity to catch their breath. Given these difficult financial times, many parents have to work more than one job, making free time even more precious.

For many of us, the reason we push ourselves in such a fashion is to provide a comfortable life for our families. But in doing so, we run the risk of removing ourselves from the family. We become strangers in our own homes, to our own children.

The Sanford Recreation Department and other such organizations around the county do their part to provide safe, healthy, creative outlets for our children. But their efforts are pointless without the positive reinforcement that your presence provides.

So, you at the ballpark.

Church leagues still close

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Balanced.

That word as good as any describes the Sanford Church Softball League's Spring Season as the league nears the mid point.

None of the leaders of the three divisions has more than a one game lead after four full weeks of the season. Saturday's games were the first to be played at Chase Park and would have been the end of the first half if not for the rain outs on March 7.

In the morning games Saturday, Sanford Christian "Blues" crushed Sanford First Baptist 23-3, Geneva First Baptist outscored Lake Mary Nativity "Disciples" 17-14, Lake Mary Holy Cross Lutheran overcame Lake Mary Grace Methodist 14-8 and First United Methodist of Sanford defeated Sanford Central Baptist 9-5.

In the afternoon, Sanford All Souls Catholic tipped Sanford Church of God 13-3, Sanford Church of God of Prophecy dropped Winter Springs St. Stephen Catholic 13-7, Markham Woods Presbyterian forfeited to Lake Mary Nativity "Disciples", Sanford Grace Christian edged Markham Woods Baptist 7-6 in 10 innings and Sanford First Nazarene blasted Sanford Christian "Red" 16-4.

Prophecy and All Souls lead the Competitive Division with 3-1 records. The duo are trailed by First Methodist and Church of God (both 2-2) and Central Baptist and St. Stephen (both 1-3).

In the Fellowship Division, Nazarene is the only team to have won four games so far and are 4-1.

Plan landscape with scents

One factor gardeners often fail to consider when planning their home landscape is the introduction of plantings that will appeal to their sense of smell. Usually a great deal of thought goes into selecting plants with special flowering abilities or color ranges and very little thought is applied to the scent giving plants. If you are fortunate enough to have a citrus tree in your home garden or nearby, you may already appreciate what pleasure scented plants can give you when you are enjoying the great outdoors.

Several years ago I was introduced to scented shrubs while visiting Crystal Lake Nursery. If you have not yet visited this nursery you are in for a special treat. The nursery is nestled among towering oak trees on the shore of Crystal Lake on Lakeview Avenue in Lake Mary and while it is not easy to locate, it is well worth the effort. Shirley and Don Smith are second generation owners and operators and during your visit you can often glimpse special plants and trees they have nurtured through the years thriving in and among the three-acre nursery and their adjacent homestead. On one of my visits Shirley gave me a tour of the grounds and we discussed in length some of the specialty plants and trees which they make available for purchase along with a variety of nursery stock items. It was during one of my earlier visits with Shirley that I was introduced to four of my now favorite scent-giving plants.

GARDENING

Osmanthus fragrans known as Tea Olive is a large evergreen shrub popular for the special fragrance of the small, white flowers, borne in clusters from late fall to early spring. It is cold hardy in Central Florida and is easy to grow requiring little attention and having few pest problems. This plant will be with me wherever I have a garden and even if I only have room for a container garden on a sunny path in my later years.

At my previous residence I planted a tea olive by every entrance and in my new home one of the first changes I made in the garden was to introduce a tea olive to my front door entrance to welcome guests with its heavenly scent. When it is in bloom not a guest can pass by without inquiring about the plant and taking a moment to breathe in its fragrance.

Michelia luscata known as Banana Shrub is a relative of the magnolias and has attractive evergreen foliage bearing brownish-yellow flowers in the spring with the odor of ripe bananas. It is completely hardy to cold in Florida and serves well as a large accent plant where a dense mass of green is desired. My mother grew this plant in her garden when I was a child and when I began gardening I planted a banana shrub under my young son's window for him to enjoy on cool spring days when the windows were open.

Brumelia calycina known as Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow is a large shrub which gives forth a sweet fragrance from blooms that are purple and fade gradually to white, borne chiefly during the winter and spring. It enjoys half shade and fairly heavy soil free from root-knot nematodes and would not do well near plants which are known attractors of the nematodes such as ligustrum. Brumelia americana or Lady of the night is notable for its fragrance at night, bearing long slender, trumpet-shaped flowers that are white. It is adapted to a climate more southern than ours but might do well in a protected area of Central Florida with a great deal of pampering.

Jasmines are known in our area for their fragrance and two of the most widely used are the Confederate jasmine and the Carolina jasmine, a Florida native. These are vining plants which are fairly cold resistant and easy to grow. Also popular are the star jasmine and another one of my favorites, the night blooming jasmine. The night blooming jasmine grows in Central Florida in protected areas usually getting killed to the ground during very cold winters with growth often reappearing from the roots in the spring. Its blooms begin to open at dusk and its fragrance usually becomes very strong as the night grows longer. It is my suggestion that when planting a night blooming jasmine locate the plant far away from your home to enjoy the scent without being overpowered by it.

Western gardeners, magnolias and roses are some other scented plants you can add to your home garden. Recently the popularity of the old-fashioned roses has reappeared in home gardens due in part to their strong fragrance missing from the hybrid roses of today. In searching for these roses you might want to look a little closer to home for two old-fashioned varieties that grow well in our climate, the Florida Cracker Rose (pink and fragrant) and the Georgia Cracker Rose (red with a slight fragrance).

For more gardening information contact a Master Gardener, through the Cooperative Extension Service, phone 323-2500, ext. 5550. Bette Cannavino, Seminole County Master Gardener.

Garden of the Month

Red and white blooming petunias around the flag pole is the point of interest in the yard of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Lauch, 109 Clear Lake Circle, Sanford. Magnolia and oak trees are spaced in the side yard. A hedge of heather is backed by a hedge of pittosporum. Colorful beds of azaleas enhance the front of the home. This Garden of the Month was selected by Mrs. William Gressell of the Hibiscus Circle for the Garden Club of Sanford.

'Homefront' fans are happily hooked to TV on Wednesdays

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for plugging "Homefront" on ABC-TV. I, too, am hooked on it, but we might not be seeing it much longer.

In Chicago, it was on only twice last month. Once, its time slot was filled with "Mobs and Mobsters." (What can ABC be thinking?) It's hard enough for a new show to make it these days without bouncing it all over the schedule.

Anyway, here's hoping we can watch "Homefront" for many years to come.

SHARON R. PORTERFIELD, PARK RIDGE, ILL.

DEAR SHARON: You and I aren't the only ones who are hooked on "Homefront." Read on.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are also avid "Homefront" fans. We love it! The characters and story line are wonderful. We panic when it's preempted or moved around. We hope this terrific show stays on for a long, long time.

FAY AND MARK GRANTHAM, HARTOW, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: My family and I — especially our 14-year-old daughter Amber — are also hooked on "Homefront." This is the "quality television" for which people have been asking the networks for years.

M.J. NARKAWICZ, ST. PETERS, MO.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been reading your column in the Desert Sun ever since you started more than 30 years ago, so when you recommended "Homefront" on television we took your word for it and tuned in to find out what kind of show Abby could get hooked on.

Our married daughter and her husband were over for dinner that evening and they stayed to watch it with us. Now there are two more couples who are hooked on "Homefront."

LONGTIME ABBY FANS IN PALMSPRINGS

DEAR ABBY: I read in the San Francisco Chronicle that you are hooked on "Homefront." So am I. However,

I heard a soap expert on a radio talk show say that if people care about "Homefront" they'd better write to ABC because its contract has not been renewed yet, and it may not be.

I'm sure your plug helped, but another boost couldn't hurt.

LORETTA GOULD, SAN RAFAEL, CALIF.

DEAR LORETTA: Thanks for alerting me. I was not aware that the situation was so critical. Readers, if you're as hooked on "Homefront" as I am, please write to Robert Iger, President ABC Entertainment, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Century City, Calif. 90067, and make your feelings known. The voice of the people is tremendously powerful.

And if you're not hooked yet, watch ABC-TV, Wednesday night and you will be. Trust me, 10 p.m. Eastern and Pacific

Try medicine for an irregular heartbeat

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been going to a general practitioner and cardiologist for atrial fibrillation. Despite the insertion of a pacemaker and the consumption of pills galore, I have been unable to get my heart back to a good regular rhythm. I've been subjected to cardioversion twice without permanent success. Somehow I feel like a victim of experimentation and lack of scientific knowledge. What are the consequences of letting my condition go on as it is?

DEAR READER: The normal heartbeat is triggered by a wave of electricity that, for practical purposes, begins at the top of the heart and sweeps downward, causing cardiac muscle to contract in a synchronized, predictable manner. As with any electrical system, glitches can disrupt this organized activity. Atrial fibrillation is such a glitch, leading to an irregular, disorganized heartbeat.

By itself, atrial fibrillation is not dangerous; many people with it live normal lives for years. However, fibrillation is less efficient than the normal cardiac rhythm and, as people age, this can cause the heart to lose its "atrial kick," meaning that the force of cardiac contraction is somewhat diminished; this can result in less exercise ability and a tendency for fluid to pool in the lungs. Also, patients with atrial fibrillation are more likely to form blood clots inside the heart chamber, which can cause stroke.

To a large degree, both these consequences can be lessened with medicine: digitalis to strengthen the heart muscle, a diuretic to rid the lungs of excess fluid and drugs, such as aspirin, to retard clotting.

Your doctors appear to have made valiant attempts to correct your atrial fibrillation. Frankly, I'd back off at this point, forget about your fibrillation and use medicine only to treat problems that might arise in the future. It seems to me that the risks of further attempts to improve your heart function exceed the risks of the fibrillation itself; ask your doctor about this.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Even though you don't need to be a mathematician to play good bridge, it helps to know some percentages. When there are two lines of play available, it is useful to be able to calculate the approximate probabilities of success so that you can decide which line is better.

Cover the East-West cards in the diagram and plan the play in three no-trump. West leads the spade king and has no intention of switching suits.

When playing in no-trump, always start by counting your top tricks. Here there are eight: one spade, two hearts, two diamonds and three clubs. Where will the extra trick come from?

Clearly the heart suit can produce a third trick, but if you have to lose a trick in the process, the defenders will surely cash a fatal number of spades. You must get the ninth trick without losing the lead.

If either opponent has the singleton heart queen or the heart finesse works, you will get a third heart trick. Chance of success: a little over 50 percent.

The other possibility is a 3-3 club break: a 35.5 percent shot.

This suggests that taking the heart finesse is right. But on this hand it is possible to try both suits. After winning trick one or two with the spade ace, lead a heart to your ace and cash the club queen. Finally, play off dummy's A-K of clubs. Has the suit broken 3-3? If so, cross to hand in a red suit and cash the club seven for your contract. If not, try the heart finesse.

Combine your chances whenever you can.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osoi
YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 31, 1992

You might become deeply involved in two very unique enterprises in the year ahead. They will deal with items with which you'll initially be unfamiliar.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could be exposed to a career opportunity of a fleeting nature today. A rapid response on your behalf will be required, because the opportunity will exit the scene as quickly as it entered. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A friend who is separated from you in miles, but not in spirit, is eager to get in touch with you at this time. This individual could have some very interesting information for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

This could be a very promising day for joint ventures. Something extraordinary might develop that will have advantages for both you and the other party involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There are indications you might enter into a partnership today with another for a unique and mysterious purpose. Your ally will be someone in whom you place considerable trust.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you use your resourcefulness and ingenuity today, there is a strong possibility you could generate income from a source other than your usual one. Once you get a good idea, act on it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This could be an exciting day for you romantically - if you are an unattached Virgo. You might be finally introduced to someone you've been eager to meet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Tasks you've been unable to complete could be finalized to your satisfaction today - if you make them priority projects.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your first ideas are likely to be your best ones today, especially where your social interests are concerned. If you follow initial inclinations, a good time is almost guaranteed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You are likely to have more luck today in endeavors that allow you flexibility than those which are tightly structured, especially if they are of a financial nature.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you come up with better concepts today, don't be reluctant to discard old, unproductive ideas. What you conceive could be quite ingenious, or, at the least, a big improvement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It looks like you will generate the types of returns you've been anticipating, but they might not come to you along the routes you envisioned. Who cares, as long as they arrive?

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone you've recently met appears destined to become a close friend. Each day, you'll find you two have more and more common interests.
