DOHENY TRIAL BEGINS TODAY IN U. S. CAPITAL

Oil Magnate Charged With Giving Bribe To Fall In Endeavor To Get Elk Hills Lease

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13.—(AP)—After counsel had outlined prosecution and defense contentions in the bribery trial of Edward L. Doheny, wealthy oil magnate, today the government began the introduction of documentary evidence, showing it being the order of President Harding in 1921 placing jurisdiction of naval reserves under the navy and in other departments.

Doheny is charged with paying Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior in the Harding cabinet, a bribe of $100,000 to influence the award of the Elk Hills naval oil lease to Doheny's company.

In a brief outline today, Doheny's special counsel, presented to the jury the arguments that the government would make in its effort to prove that Doheny gave Fall the money on Feb. 1, 1921, according to Doheny and that he expected to make $100,000 out of the lease.

Hughes, who followed him, summed up the defense and said the Doheny might have expected to make $100,000,000 over a period of 20 to 30 years after the lease had been made.

He also indicated that it would be attempted to show that the oil was for the lease through "patented" motives.

Bodies Of Aviators Are Being Brought Back To U. S. Homes

BANKS, Me., Mar. 13.—(AP)—Relatives and aviators representing five nations were today here to meet their countrymen to be buried in the United States with the bodies of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl G. Burdick, American aviators who perished in Siberia last November.

The funeral party will move to Moscow by train and from there will go by a battle plane that will be piloted by Eielson's son and will be buried in the United States.

Feasibly, said final plans to the members of the committee to bury both Eielson and Burdick were well advanced today, leaving the funeral planes to be piloted by a number of aviators from the United States.

Strike In Argentina Takes Serious Turn

BUENOS AIRES, Mar. 13.—(AP)—The general strike of Argentine railroad workers which has been in progress since today took a violent turn today and several persons were shot and wounded. When a train stopped at Vallabro, a suburb of Buenos Aires a group of workers compelled the passengers to alight in the coaches, which were burned. Similar incidents occurred at other railway stations. The first step taken by the railway union was an hour's suspension of traffic on all lines yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13.—(AP)—Receivers for the Georgia and Florida Railway today asked sanction from the Interstate Commerce Commission to abandon 25 miles of the road's track in Georgia. The track which would be completely removed extends 14 miles from Millen to Garfield and 25 miles from Greyhound to Pendleton.

The Big Tree

A tourist dropped into our office the other day and wanted to know where to find the historical spots in and around Sanford. We offered him the Indian shell mound near the Osteen bridge, the Old Fort Mellon site, the Spanish mission on the New Smyrna road, and then we thought of the Big Tree, which, if it has not made history, has certainly seen it, and from the point of view of antiquity, at least, outtops them all.

A short ride on the old Orlando road, which is punctuated at the first railroad track by a sign reading, "This way to the Big Tree", and a bit of dirt road, bearing left, lead to the spot where this great giant of the wood, the oldest cypress in the United States, and possibly the oldest in the world, has stood for thirty-five hundred years, a mute witness to the ephemeral existence of man on earth. The tree is one hundred and twenty-five feet in height, seventeen and a half feet in diameter, and forty-seven feet in circumference at its base. It is called "the Senator" in honor of Senator M. O. Overstreet who gave it and the land surrounding it to Seminole County for a park.

A walk of palmetto logs leads through a beautiful bit of wood to the Big Tree. Ferns lace the edge of the walk, and purple and white wild violets grow about the bank of a brook and almost tumble into it, Narcissus like, trying to admire their own beauty. The huge trunk of a fallen cypress, a deposed monarch, one day perhaps a twin in size and strength to "The Senator", lies rotting by the path. We heard a visitor say that he saw this trunk lying there forty years ago and that it had shrunk about four and one half feet in diameter since that time.

As a background, the Big Tree has a group of brother cypresses, two of them so large that we feel that the Senator is not the only one of the family that merits distinction. One of these boasts a diameter of thirteen feet and the other ten, and we are sure that they swank about it to those poor relations whose way lines conform to the twentieth century eighteen day diet style. The young maple trees, dwarfed by comparison with the tall cypresses, spring up here and there with their reddish brown new spring leaves, and over everything hangs the deep woody smell of dried fern and decaying vegetation.

The spread of the Big Tree's branches is quite small in comparison with its trunk, and the first limb grows seventy-five feet from the ground. Almost daily there are fresh claw marks on the tree from roots to branches, and it is believed that a family of animals, probably raccoons, use the old cypress for sleeping quarters. Scientists say that the different water marks on the trunk are indicative of the tree's great age. Man has left his print on the bark, too, for innumerable carved hearts and twisted initials tell of forgotten lovers who vainly tried to make a gesture toward permanence for their fleeting romances.

Old roots of two hundred years past are around the tree's base, some of them rotting away, and one wonders how far the unseen ones go into the soil below and into Florida history. Long before Florida was admitted to the Union, before the United States was created, for that matter, before the Spaniard came, before the Indian lit his campfire on the banks of the Withlacoochee, before Christ was born, five hundred years before Homer wrote the Iliad, the Big Tree stood in this obscure piece of wood, a living link between the future and "old forgotten far off things and battles long ago."

Florida The Demi-Virgin

Florida is getting bits of bad advertising along with the good this year. We are in the peculiar position of not being able to have our cake and eat it too. Many of us feel that we must have an even flow of liquor, plenty of gambling, and sufficient night life, to attract tourists; we feel that these are the things which do attract tourists; and that tourists attracted by such things are desirable; and yet when anyone outside the state mentions moral conditions in Florida, we cringe. How do you like this about the fair state of Florida, in the Chicago Tribune, home town newspaper of Al Capone and "Bugs" Moran:

"Either the Wickersham law enforcement commission or any one of the proposed congressional prohibition investigating committees might do well to pay some attention to Florida as a model exhibit under Volstead. If the Washington police continue to arrest the senate bootlegger, the man in the green hat, on the senate steps, any committee could do some investigating by merely looking out of the window or by going into the offices, but that would inform the congressmen of nothing of which they are not already informed, whereas some of them may not know how the Florida interpretation of the eighteenth amendment works."

Interesting knowledge of it could be had from reading Westbrook Pegler, but that probably would only inspire a desire for research. Florida is the winter playground of the nation and it construes and accepts certain duties as of a moral nature. It is in the family to make people happy if they are solvent. It satisfies its fundamentalist belt by voting dry and then is free to be a sunny and liberal host, to ask what the boys in the back room will have, to polish up the mahogany and to keep the glasses glittering in front of the mirror when they are not full on top of the bar.

"Fat ladies in the modern equivalent of fig leaves charm the eyes as they brown in the sun. Gambling and horse racing add their attractions to second rate prize fighting and the first rate drinking. Florida is the happy state which has brought the noble experiment to a satisfactory answer combining high principles and sound money, half virgin, half champagne, a lily in its hand, and red roses in its hair, the happy state of the covenant and the carnival, all with benefit of clergy. The World's Window

By Pierre Van Paasoo

On the outskirts of Lier, a small town not far from Antwerp, lives a peasant named Juhl or Peyster. Juhl, who was questioned on the status of business the other day, remarked, among other things, that the times when the Germans occupied Flanders were not so bad as people generally believe. In explanation of this unpatriotic heresy, the peasant said that in the winter of 1917, which was a very cold winter, the Germans ran short of pork. Nobody in Lier was allowed to sell his pigs or kill them, awaiting an inventory to be made by the "Kommandantur." Juhl had only one pig, but it was a beauty. He said he hated to see the beast slaughtered and sent to Germany for sausage. A pal of the "Firma wehr," bearded Bavarian home guards, came around one day and wrote down everything in connection with Juhl's pig. Then they went away. Juhl thought that all there was to it, so he killed the pig and had a fine meal for many a day and a few cents in pocket. Some time later he saw the patrol coming in the direction of his farm. Juhl took flight. He ran to town by another road, went to the German command and reported that his pig was stolen. An investigation was ordered. The documents were found and, to be sure, they showed Juhl to have been the owner of a fine pig. The case dropped on Juhl had other things to think about. Then one day the patrol came back, opened more and the Sergeant handed Juhl a letter. He was frightened to death, ran to the tailor, the only man in Lier who knows German, and had the letter read. It said: "Whereas, the citizen, Juhl de Peyster, has a pig stolen by whom, that pig has been taken back through the care of the Kommandantur, the owner is hereby ordered to take same pig away from the communal pound at Lier, failing which, a 'Nazi' will have a pig for nothing. L. F. F." Juhl said: "Don't you call this good time?"

Forty million dead is the figure that Victor Merie, well known French writer, arrives at, in a book on the east that was which he imagines to be fought with chemicals and unborn of instruments of destruction. No power, mental, physical, moral, at all will be able to afford to do with all the means of its disposal in vain. Hence all will disappear, the latest and most infested inventions. What Merie imagines is something so horrible that it passes description. Yet it is not quite exaggeration. Merie seems to know of what he is talking. He quotes the prominent experts and the latest military textbooks. He has interviewed a number of scientists who know what is going on in the laboratories. If it ever comes to a crash again, half the human race will be wiped out or castrated. No hope to humanize war according to Merie. The only thing is to abolish it, because it is a certainty. He thinks that if the statesmen and bankers and armament manufacturers and war profiteers once get a notion of what would be in store also for them, they would be prepared to end the work for the outbreak of war. He thinks is a ray of hope after all in the dismal picture that the French master of the word has drawn.

The news that the first meeting of the movie makers in Paris this week a platoon of the Japanese Emperor passing in one of his crack regiments in uniform. There is no doubt but that the Emperor Majesty may be proud of his warriors. They certainly know how to march and manoeuvre. The Kaiser in the good old Prussian days had none better, though the Pomeranian might have been a bit bigger. At the close of the review the Chief of the General Staff was seen to walk up to the Emperor and to say something to him. The Emperor which little pig went to market and which little pig stayed home. People who live in gas houses should not hunt for leaks with a lighted match. Washington Monument is hollow.

HIS DAY OF TRIUMPH

UNCOMMON SENSE

BY JOHN BLAKE

Despite all the wars that have been fought and all the armies that have been created and all the soldiers that have been sent to the front, the world is still a very much the same as it was when the first man was born. The only difference is that the world is now a much more crowded place. The population of the world is now over two billion people. This is a very large number of people, and it is a very large number of people who are all trying to get on in the world. This is a very difficult task, and it is a very difficult task that is being faced by all of us. We are all trying to get on in the world, and we are all trying to do it in our own way. This is a very difficult task, and it is a very difficult task that is being faced by all of us.

lacked to the tails of great kites and who never soar at all unless they soar in love.

Go into the average town or city and you will soon learn who the "big men" are.

They may be political leaders or bosses, in or out of office—they may be bankers, lawyers or manufacturers.

But each of them has a number of people who are known as "his men," and the latter take from him ideas, their politics, and often their religion.

I believe that able, honest men are entitled to respect and admiration.

But I dislike the people who surround them merely for the sake of a backing of reflected glory.

Had a man wise and honest, good a man may be, others ought not to take all their ideas from him and be content to think a hink and vote a hink.

Yet the world is filled with "kite tails."

You meet them everywhere your travels.

Almost any conversation in Pullman smoking compartment reveals one or more of them—people who almost instantly tell you they are connected politically or in some other way with some man who has a great name.

It is the desired to be important which causes this pitiful fellow to hang on a kite tail, but for other a commentary on the man.

Yet it is found among the fairly important as well as among the unimportant.

Every national capital is filled with it, every big business organization and what is worse, every religious organization.

Better be what you are, though it is nothing to boast about, than a voluntary humbug of some body else, no matter how proud you may shine in the zenith of a party or politics.

You cannot expect complete independence, of course, but you ought to be something better than a kite tail.

First Returns From Poll Being Staged By Magazine Show Dry Law Unpopular

NEW YORK, Mar. 13.—The vote "for repeal of the Prohibition Amendment" outnumbered that for either modification or "strict enforcement" in the first scattering returns from ten states in The Literary Digest's current nationwide "straw" poll on Prohibition.

20,000,000 ballots are being distributed throughout the country to obtain a referendum on the three questions:

1. Do you favor the continuation and strict enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and Volstead Law?
2. Do you favor a modification of the Volstead Law to permit light wines and beer?
3. Do you favor a repeal of the Prohibition Amendment?

issues a warning of caution that these first returns are so small in comparison to the final vote anticipated that all now apparent tendencies may be completely reversed.

"These early figures," the magazine states, editorially, "interesting as they may be, are by no means to be regarded as a sure fire indication of the final results, even in the ten states involved in the tabulation."
