SANFORD — The first day of school can be a child's best dream or his ultimate nightmare.

Full of uncertainties and looking forward to the challenges ahead, the youngsters spilled off buses or clung to mothers or aunts as they searched for their teachers this morning on the first day back after summer recess.

They compared lunchboxes and notebooks, showed off new outfits and modeled new hairstyles.

"I wanted to come to school to get to wear the new clothes I got this summer," said

Brittney Udell, a fourth grader at Midway Elementary School.

At Midway Elementary about a quarter of the youngsters arrived on the first day of classes sporting the olive jumpers, skirts and shorts and white collared shirts that make up the suggested uniform for the students.

"She loves it," said Aileen Lowery of her daughter, Tajerta's, view of the uniform. "We've got two and I'm hoping to go back and get a third."

Tajerta, a perky kindergartner, rushed to meet new friends who were also in uniform.

Udell said she "had her own style" and would only wear the uniform on field trips off

Upcoming concert benefits youth sports

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — In the old days, Sanfordites would gather for musical performances at the bandshell at the Lake Monroe waterfront. Mostly, it was for their own enjoyment.

On Monday, there will be another chance to gather in Sanford for a musical concert. This time the music will be at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

And, this time it will be for a good cause.

A concert, featuring Elvis performer Jack Elton, Beatles impersonators Let It Be and the performers from the Miriam and Valerie's School Of Dance Arts (SODA), is being hosted for the benefit of the American Legion Youth Athletic Programs.

Elton, a resident of Lake Mary, has been doing his impersonations of the King internationally for a couple of decades.

He is so good, in fact, that he was selected to perform at one of Bill Clinton's inaugural parties four years ago. The president, himself, requested Elton to perform.

He is presently preparing to go on a world tour as part of the "2001 World Star Tour," where he will perform with members of Elvis' entourage, including J.D. Sumner, who was the King's bass player, the Stamps Quartet, Barbara Lewis, Shawn Neilson and John Wilkinson.

Let It Be is comprised of four members of the touring casts of the

Crackdown on drugs continues

By NICK PFENPAUF

SANFORD — Despite a struggle with officers, two men were arrested Tuesday by members of the Sanford police department QUAD-Squad, in a continuing crackdown on drug activities near the Southwest Road area in Sanford and the county.

Tuesday's arrests in the 1100 block of W. 13th Street came just a few days after members of the Seminole County sheriff's department City/County Bureau of Investigation (CCIB) arrested a number of other persons in the same general area.

Citizens organized by area pastors in the area have been voicing complaints about ongoing drug activities, and law enforcement officials have vowed to continue the crackdown.

Arrested Tuesday were: Edward Moore, 41, of Sanford, and Tommy S. Hampton, 23, of 2251 Greenway Street.

Two members of the QUAD-Squad said they were patrolling in the area in a marked police vehicle, when they saw what appeared to be a drug transaction under way in front of a grocery store.

As they approached, they said one of the men, later identified as Hampton, fled from the area first on a bike, then on foot. He was subsequently

Sanford-area Rotary welcomes women, even if Maitland club members won't

By NICK PFENPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

MAITLAND — The Maitland Rotary Club won't be bullied into accepting women regardless of the fact that other Rotary Clubs in Central Florida have women members.

Maitland club President Jack Naglee said the club has voted 45 to 19 to preserve the local organization's all-male policy.

Other area clubs however, have been accepting female members for a number of years.

Rocky Ford, past president of the Rotary Club of Sanford said the club has been accepting women members since 1991, and although there have been five female members during the past five years, there is only one at the present time.

One past female member said she left the club because of work scheduling conflicts and that other male members continue to invite her to return.

"They are all great. I never felt unwelcome, and if time permits, I will certainly return," she said.

The Rotary Club of Sanford-Breakfast also has one female at the present. Past President Rick Mann said she joined in early 1995. "It was only recently that we had our first woman member," he said, "but our club has never excluded females."

In Lake Mary, the Rotary Club presently has a half dozen female members. Maureen Liberatore was the first to join. "I went into the club in either late 1987 or early 1988," she said. "It was difficult to be the first female in the club, but since that time, everything is going very well, although all the bylaws of Rotary still have references only to males."

Maitland's 75-member club has a reputation for its strong public service. But it also has a tradition that was recently challenged by sponsors for two women who wanted to join.

"The members were saying, 'You can't threaten us with lawsuits or anything else,'" Naglee said about Tuesday's vote.

Jail violence gang related

GAINESVILLE — A fight involving some 30 inmates at Baker Correctional Institution didn't develop because of any problem in prison operations, a top state official said.

"These places can go to hell in a handbasket in a minute," Harry Singletary, secretary of the Department of Corrections, said Wednesday.

Violence at the prison about 45 miles north of Gainesville broke out Monday evening in a dormitory and spread to the prison yard. Six guards were hurt, three badly enough to go to the hospital with broken ankles or noses.

"It appears that it may have been gang-related," Singletary said.

The fighting was controlled only after officers in a tower fired warning shots over the heads of rioters. Several inmates were hurt but none seriously.

Singletary called the fight a "mild disturbance" but said it had been a couple of years since a comparable incident in Florida.

Boy sentenced in deaths

TAMPA — A 17-year-old sobbed as a judge sentenced him to 35 years in jail for killing two people, foreign visitors, in a car crash.

Albert Leahawn Murphy pleaded guilty in May to two counts of third-degree murder in the deaths of Marius Rosaknecht and Heinz Bar when the car Murphy was driving slammed into their car on Dec. 10.

He also pleaded guilty to car theft, burglary of a car, possession of burglary tools, fleeing to elude police and leaving the scene of an accident.

"I have the victims' names in my Bible and I carry it around the jail in my pocket every day," Murphy said Tuesday as a video was shown of Rosaknecht's widow, Sandra Blackstadt, and Bar's fiancé, Rudi Consoni.

Circuit Judge Claudia Isom said she was suspending the sentence after 10 years because Murphy was young, had no prior felony record and had the potential to be rehabilitated.

He will be on probation for 25 years after he leaves prison.

Rosaknecht and Bar were German citizens who lived in the Canary Islands, where Bar operated a vacation resort club and Rosaknecht was a tennis pro.

Second case of malaria confirmed

WEST PALM BEACH — County health officials confirmed the second case of malaria in a week, and canvassed the neighborhood in suburban Atlantis for any more victims of the debilitating tropical disease.

A dozen Palm Beach County health workers were checking for anyone else exhibiting malaria's symptoms: fever, chills, body aches and sweating.

Gary Van Buren, who works outdoors as a house painter, has the second case of locally contracted malaria, the Palm Beach County Public Health Unit confirmed Tuesday.

Van Buren, 39, had all four malaria symptoms and was diagnosed after he went to JFK Medical Center in Atlantis. Hospital spokeswoman Christen Rennich said he was in good condition Wednesday after being admitted Tuesday night.

Van Buren lives less than two miles from where Robert Woods is believed to have contracted the first case. Woods, a homeless man, was hospitalized last week with the mosquito-borne parasite infection.

Woods was released Saturday from Columbia Hospital. Preliminary blood tests on other homeless people living in the area where Woods has been living have been negative so far.

While six other cases of malaria have been reported in Palm Beach County this year, all of those infected were people who had traveled to areas outside the country where malaria is common.

Restaurant owner sentenced

MIAMI — A restaurant owner in Miami's trendy Coconut Grove section was sentenced Wednesday to 10 years in prison after being found guilty of peddling cocaine along with his Italian cuisine.

U.S. District Judge Lenore Neabitt sentenced Giovanni Tummolillo for his conviction Oct. 12, 1986, on one count of conspiracy to possess cocaine with the intention to distribute, and five counts of distribution of cocaine from his Cafe Sci Sci.

According to Tummolillo defense attorney Richard Sharpstein, Tummolillo was one of several Miami-area restaurateurs set up by Vinicio Avegnano — a paid informant working for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Posing as an importer/exporter, Avegnano did the groundwork against Tummolillo. He also helped the DEA build cases against Key Biscayne's Stefano and Linda Brandino, owners of Stefano's, Sundays on the Bay and the Linda B Steak House, all popular restaurants.

Before working in South Florida, Avegnano helped DEA investigations in Europe and Haiti.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

State moves into new operations center for emergency management

By JACKIE HALLFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — State emergency workers have a bigger, better and stronger place to work when dealing with disasters.

"We think it's the finest facility in the entire nation for this kind of function," John Fleming, an administrator who oversees satellite and technical communications, told Gov. Lawton Chiles during a tour Wednesday.

In at least one aspect, Florida's new Emergency Operations Center has topped the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

The state facility was designed to withstand winds up to 200 mph. The hurricane center, which is just a year old, can only withstand winds up to 130 mph.

"We keep trying to make sure that we can handle it as fast and as best as we possibly can,"

Chiles said after walking through the $3.5 million storm center on the east side of Tallahassee.

The new center is ready to go. Staff moved in a week ago.

"Another week, week and a half in here and it will be just exactly what we wanted for the last three, four years," Fleming said.

A hurricane, or even a tropical storm, could have knocked the old center out of operation, said Joe Myers, director of the state's Division of Emergency Management.

For nearly nine years, Florida's emergency center had been located at a private office complex just a couple of miles from the new center.

Three years ago, the state spent $250,000 to renovate and enlarge the old center and upgrade communications systems, weather monitoring and forecasting equipment and mapping and data-analysis systems.

During Wednesday's tour, architect Kevin Sossong said that a heavy gauge metal roof and walls made of 8-inch reinforced concrete block help make the building strong enough to withstand a category 5 hurricane with winds up to 200 mph.

A special feature, however, is a new window glass designed after Hurricane Andrew hit southern Dade County in August 1992. It has a layer of ordinary glass a quarter-inch thick, a middle gel-like layer and then a thin microshell layer. The two additional layers are designed to prevent flying debris from shattering the windows.

But the new center has more than strength to brag about, Myers said. It's bigger and better designed to accommodate some 200 workers who gather during an emergency.

"The building fits the system," Myers said. "That's what's good."

That year, there was a boys' camp during June and July and a girls' camp for one week in August. The next year, the girls came for one week in August. The next year, the girls came for two weeks. Mr. Herman Morris, principal of Seminole High School, was owner/operator of the MQ Ranch along with his wife Gladys. He had operated the YMCA Camp Winona for many years previously. After operating the MQ Ranch as a camp and

Deadline is near on financial issues for highspeed train

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — A general financial agreement was expected Friday between the state and builders of a proposed $5 billion highspeed train between Miami, Orlando and Tampa.

The financial plan — outlining state subsidies, bond guarantees and construction costs — is the first major milestone in the lengthy approval process before work begins in 1999.

"No one has requested an extension, so we expect there to be an agreement by the deadline," said Joanna Wragg, a spokeswoman for FOX.

"We're still fleshing out the details," said Deputy Secretary Tom Barry of the Florida Department of Transportation. DOT is in charge of the project for the state.

The franchise for the 200 mph train was awarded earlier this year to Florida Overland Express (FOX), an Orlando-based consortium that plans to build a version of the TGV train now used in Europe.

Service between Miami and Orlando, which would begin in 2004, is to take 1 hour and 25 minutes at an average one-way fare of $54. Service between Orlando and Tampa would begin in 2006, with expected fares of $21 for a 48-minute trip.

Financial questions still being negotiated included how large an annual subsidy the state will pay and who will guarantee the bonds to be sold to finance the construction.

The Department of Transportation has pledged $70 million a year for 30 years. FOX's alternative plan called for $95 million in state subsidies and for state guarantees on the bonds.

State officials were opposed to DOT backing of the bonds because if the project failed, paying off the bonds would tie up much of the transportation money for years.

"That's obviously a major concern," Barry said last week. "The guarantee is still an issue." Barry also said state officials were willing to pledge $70 million.

Park 'hero' in limbo as bombing probe continues

By MITCHELL LANGBERG
AP National Writer

ATLANTA — For five hours, Richard Jewell sat glumly on the steps to his apartment, watching federal agents cart away his worldly goods. Eighty miles away, agents picked through his previous home, a secluded cabin and shed overlooking the Chattahoochee River.

By early today, authorities had not said whether they had found evidence indicating that the "hero" of Saturday's attack on Centennial Olympic Park could be the same person who left a timed pipe bomb in the midst of a festive crowd.

"We are continuing and we are going to find out who did this," FBI spokeswoman Joyce Dean said late Wednesday, after agents spent a day exploring the most minute physical details of Jewell's life.

Two federal officials in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, suggested that investigators' interest in Jewell was diminishing somewhat.

"We are somewhat less suspicious of him, in part because a couple of people have come forward and modified what they said about him before," one of the officials said.

But Dean said it was premature to conclude that the FBI was losing interest in Jewell, a 33-year-old security guard who pointed out a suspicious knapsack to police minutes before a bomb inside exploded.

Jewell's action gave officers time to move back some people who had been near the knapsack, likely lessening the number of victims. One woman died and 111 people were injured.

Jewell was lionized as a hero — a role he embraced enthusiastically, though with "aw, shucks" modesty. Since Tuesday, when it became apparent that he was a prime target of the FBI investigation, his life has turned upside down.

FBI officials here have maintained all along that Jewell was only one of many people being investigated. But a federal law enforcement source in Washington described him Tuesday as the "leading candidate" at that point in the investigation.

The scene Wednesday at his apartment, in a low-slung brick building on a busy four-lane road, was surreal.

As well over 100 reporters and photographers from around the world watched from the parking lot and Jewell watched from the steps, agents of the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms trooped in and out of his apartment.

They brought in police dogs. They brought out boxes, among them a military ammunition box. They also impounded a plastic bag filled with laundry.

At one point, they installed a white awning, about 8 feet square, outside the door, apparently to serve as a shield from rain.

Jewell eventually went into the apartment, and could be seen at one point wearing the same rubber gloves as the investigators.

Meanwhile, on a hill overlooking the Chattahoochee in northeastern Georgia, more agents and dogs pored over the property where Jewell had lived while working as a security guard at nearby Piedmont College.

The agents seemed primarily interested in a blue cement shed, about 6 feet by 10 feet, near a dilapidated wooden cabin. They also inspected a 55-gallon drum.

By late evening the agents had left, leaving only a van belonging to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. Two agents worked at the back of the van, apparently conducting chemical tests.

Former neighbors near the cabin said they found it hard to believe that he might have committed the crime.

"I just can't see him as capable of this," said Jeff Crane, who described himself as a friend of Jewell. He recalled that Jewell was known for directing traffic at Clarkeville Elementary School.

Crane's 15-year-old son, Joseph, said, "All the kids up here loved him because he wouldn't direct traffic like normal, he would dance."

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported today that authorities were still examining the remains of the pipe bomb, fragments of which were scattered over a wide area after the blast.

The newspaper said the device had actually consisted of three 10-inch-long steel pipe bombs, wrapped in duct tape. Between the duct tape and the pipes were layers of nails. The bomb was detonated by a wind-up clock timer.

Among the aspects of the case that officials are believed to be investigating is the timing of Jewell's movements, particularly in relation to the explosion and a 911 call warning that a bomb would go off. The phone call was made at 12:58 a.m.; the bomb went off at 1:25 a.m.

Educational TV programs

There are times when things which sound good in one situation, have tendencies to cause damage elsewhere. We believe such is the case with the concept of providing educational programs on commercial television.

Laying claim to another election-year prize, President Clinton announced an agreement with the television industry that requires three hours of educational shows a week for children.

Gathering 50 TV executives, children's advocates, program producers and actors in the East Room, the president declared Monday that the deal "says to America's parents: You are not alone."

Broadcasters who air three hours of regularly scheduled, 30-minute shows between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. specifically designed to educate would automatically comply and have their licenses renewed.

Stations that fall somewhat short of the three-hour standard could still meet the goal by airing public service announcements, specials and shows 15 minutes in length. The deal applies only to TV broadcasters, both commercial and public, not to cable TV which is not federally licensed.

In the first place, licensing TV stations should be based on what they do to entertain, inform and serve the public. It should not be automatic just because three hours of "educational" programs are offered per week.

If renewal is automatic, stations could virtually present anything they wanted in the other hours, including those programs disguised as situation comedies which spend the entire time degrading family values and showing everyone how crime does pay and violence is common.

Secondly, if producers are able to sell their "educational" programs to networks and individual stations, they will be able to ask higher prices. This then, could dramatically reduce the number, and possibly the quality of programming which could be obtained by educational networks and stations.

Depending on where one lives in this area of Central Florida, we have one, possibly two excellent educational channels, 15 and 24. They have been doing an outstanding job in providing educational and informational programming.

Is President Clinton telling us that the only way to make people watch educational programs is to put them on commercial stations?

Furthermore, we see this as probably another move to reduce the amount of federal or industrial funding made available to educational stations. This has already been reduced to the point where it hurts, but our stations are doing the best they can in overcoming this lack.

President Clinton has now decreed that the three hours of educational programming will be offered each week on commercial stations (not cable stations). Some 50 executives have agreed (what else could they do?).

But we, nonetheless, think this is not only a slap in the face for our present educational stations, but will never prove to be of any value whatsoever to our commercial stations.

Minority treatment

In reference to Sheriff Don Eslinger, I just wanted to write to the citizens of Seminole County to let them know how minorities are actually treated.

I am a woman owner of a business in Seminole County and also live in this county. When Sheriff Eslinger was elected at the previous election, I sent several letters requesting to be allowed to bid on the Sheriff Department vehicles. I have to this date never had a response from Mr. Eslinger or his undersheriff.

I feel that the county has a total misconception of what the Sheriff is actually doing to our county. The people need to take a long hard look at the actual figures issued by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

I have lived in this county for 33 years and in the past 8 years have seen progressively the downfall of law enforcement from the Sheriff's Department of Seminole County. It is a shame that people would put a person in office which is actually hurting and not helping what needs to be helped.

Walls are closing in on Hillary

Suddenly the walls are beginning to close in on Hillary Clinton.

Thus far, despite her huge profit in cattle futures, and the bizarre disappearance and reappearance of her law firm billing records, and the sworn testimony of a Secret Service agent that he saw her chief of staff taking files from Vince Foster's office hours after his suicide, there has been no "smoking gun."

But now a House committee headed by Rep. William F. Clinger Jr., R-Pa., trying to discover who in the White House hired Craig Livingstone, a Democratic dirty-tricks specialist, as chief of the White House security office, has come upon a case of what certainly looks like out-and-out perjury. If Bernard Nussbaum, the former White House counsel and Mrs. Clinton's close friend, lied to the House committee, her fate may depend on whether Mr. Nussbaum is ready to go to prison to protect her.

It was while Livingstone was head of the security office that it asked the FBI for, and received, the bureau's confidential files on hundreds of members of the former (Republican) Bush administration. There was absolutely no legitimate justification for this shocking request, and White House officials, all the way up to President Clinton, have tried to brush it off as a mere "bureaucratic snafu."

But the House committee understandably wanted to know more about Craig Livingstone. Among other things, it wanted to know exactly who had hired this trickster for such a sensitive job. But curiously, nobody stepped forward to claim the honor. Livingstone himself either didn't know or (more likely) wouldn't say. Rumors that Mrs. Clinton was his sponsor were flatly denied, both by the first lady herself and by the president.

And Mr. Nussbaum, on June 26, told the House committee that he didn't know who hired Livingstone and had never discussed the matter with Mrs. Clinton.

Her fate may depend on whether Mr. Nussbaum is ready to go to prison to protect her.

That was where matters stood in late July, when Chairman Clinger went over to the FBI to review Livingstone's own file there. In it, he later told the House, he found a typed memo of an interview with Bernard Nussbaum in March 1993, less than two months after the Clintons moved into the White House. The interview had been conducted by Dennis Sculmbrene, an FBI agent assigned to investigate Livingstone's own suitability for a security clearance. According to the memo, Mr. Nussbaum said that "Mr. Livingstone had come highly recommended to him by Hillary Clinton, who has known his mother."

The enormous importance of this memo is that it was written shortly after Nussbaum allegedly made the statement.

On June 26, Mr. Nussbaum didn't know about the Sculmbrene memo, and had no doubt long forgotten what he told Sculmbrene (as the agent admits he himself has - though he stands by his memo). But the memo is deadly in its precision, and it squarely contradicts Mr. Nussbaum's testimony, and Hillary's and the president's denials as well.

For the moment, Mr. Nussbaum is sticking to his story: "I am mystified and outraged that someone would attribute to me something I never said," he told reporters.

Growing black middle class

WASHINGTON--The scenario is familiar enough: Residents of a new middle-class suburb, trying hard to build a safe and comfortable neighborhood for their families, install a fine new basketball court--only to have it "invaded" by kids from elsewhere, including the high-crime District of Columbia. There are complaints of loud music, of kids sitting on residents' cars--even of a few break-ins and thefts.

The homeowners' association reluctantly hires off-duty police officers to patrol the neighborhood, check identifications and send the intruders away.

But one thing is different about this particular suburban development--Perrywood, where home prices run up to $300,000: All the players, except some of the off-duty cops, are black. The result is an incredible melange of guilt, grim necessity, feelings of betrayal along with a measure of who-do-you-think-you-are resentment.

Susan Saulny, my Washington Post colleague who reported on the Perrywood mini drama in a recent Page 1 story, also told of another mostly black section of Prince George's County, Md.--reportedly America's richest black-majority suburb--where permanent basketball backboards have been outlawed. They come down when it gets late so the outsiders will leave.

The tension and personal misgivings exemplified by Perrywood are almost certain to grow, as more and more blacks enter the middle and upper economic classes--and as the gap between them and low-income blacks widens. Three quotes from Saulny's account describe the emotional range.

"I have a major problem with this decision (to hire the off-duty police officers). When I found out, I was mad. I was angry. I don't think I'm better than other blacks." That's 29-year-old Perrywood resident Robert Lewis.

At the other end is 14-year-old Bryan Davis. "White neighborhood or black neighborhood--it doesn't matter. People start to act the same, whatever color they are. If they see somebody suspicious, it really doesn't matter where they are. They just want to protect what's theirs."

Greta Scott speaks from the angst-ridden center: "We started having problems with the young men, and unfortunately they are our people. It becomes pretty uncomfortable, because I resent the fact that black males are already singled out (and) here we are singling them out again. But what can you do?"

At one level, it's as simple as right is right and wrong is wrong. If the outsiders behave well and show proper respect, what's the problem with letting them play? And if they don't, what's the hesitancy about tossing them out?

The tension and misgivings are almost certain to grow.

The difficulty, of course, is in identifying and evicting the particularly bad actors. Eventually the outsiders become lumped together as "those people."

And that's part of the dilemma for successful blacks nearly all of whom have bitter memories of being treated as "those people"--not because of what they did but because of who they were. How can they now do unto others what they so deeply resent having been done to them? On the other hand, how can they stand mutely while their neighborhoods become less pleasant, less safe--and less valuable?

If it were only a matter of class--affluent neighborhoods being "invaded" by non-affluent outsiders--the solution would be easy: Keep 'em out. If it were only race, they might have to take a different tack, perhaps offering permission to use the courts in exchange for the visitors' acceptance of supervision and instruction in manners.

But Perrywood is both affluent and black, which is to say it involves both class and race. You can get a sense of what that means by watching black politics. Affluent blacks routinely vote against their own economic interests because they set themselves as the sole advocates and political protectors of low-income blacks.

As the tensions grow between the two classes of blacks, the sense of political guardianship is apt to diminish. What then?

My great fear is that we could wind up adopting--by default, at least--the recently discredited South African solution: dividing the country into whites at the top, blacks at the bottom, and the growing black middle class as a "colored" buffer in the middle.

It didn't work in South Africa, and there's no reason to believe it will work here.

What will?

FDIC chairman has agency in disarray

WASHINGTON -- When Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman Ricki Helfer gave a hero's send-off last year to Alan J. Whitney, the agency's retiring spokesman, she hailed his "calm and quiet" yet "open and innovative style of communication" for preventing a meltdown of public confidence when the banking system was on the brink.

Calm has been restored since the financial crises of the 1980s. But many officials fear that the FDIC is again on the brink. And according to agency officials, it's the fault of a volatile chairman who doesn't prize "calm" or "open" communication.

Under Helfer's nearly two-year-old tenure, the media are less the menace. Morale has hit rock-bottom, as stories abound about how Helfer flays staffers in front of colleagues.

"She gets right in staffers' faces and intimidates them," said one FDIC veteran. "She gets very explosive and will belittle you in front of other people."

Helfer's blood was apparently boiling after she revealed the findings of an agency report on bank compliance with mutual fund sales regulations. The American Banker quoted one FDIC staffer describing the fall-out: "All hell broke loose. People were called out of meetings, assembled, and yelled at."

Steve Katsanos, a $122,000 a year deputy director of the FDIC's office of corporate communications, continues to be the poster boy for Helfer's vengeance by being muzzled and relegated to menial work.

His sin? Katsanos told the truth about Whitewater before a Senate committee in 1994, putting the Treasury Department in a bad light. Katsanos was warned last year by Leslie Woolley, one of Helfer's top deputies, that he evoked bad memories for Helfer, whose nomination to the FDIC was held hostage to Whitewater politics for 11 months.

"It's going to be better for you if your name doesn't appear in the newspaper and if you lay low," she told Katsanos. "Every time (Helfer) sees your name, it reminds her that you were involved in the whole Whitewater matter. ... Stay out of sight, keep your head down and let her get used to you being around."

All the people who have been around Helfer agree that she's smart and a quick study. But Helfer's temperament is apparently taking its toll on the FDIC, which insures trillions of dollars in deposits.

Her raging against reporters, which has long-term implications for an agency whose credibility is essential in a crisis, is counterproductive. One official blames it on the time she spent as a lawyer at the Federal Reserve, an agency with a penchant for secrecy rivaled only by that of the CIA.

"She (gets) almost a psychosis about the press and their insistence on the questions they want to ask as opposed to the questions she thinks they should ask," said one insider. "(Helfer believes) the press should be more pliant, take what's given to them and be satisfied." Helfer refused our repeated requests for an interview.

This source cited seemingly innocuous items about Helfer's honeymoon, a newspaper picture she regarded as unflattering, and a reporter's question about FDIC salaries as provoking eruptions. "She wasn't real excited about seeing something about her marriage and personal life in the newspaper," said FDIC spokesman Robert Garson. Some senior advisers, concerned about the trend, recommended last year the hiring of private consultants to help Helfer cope with the press.

Calm has been restored since the financial crises of the 1980s.

Beatles impersonators Let It Be will perform Monday night, followed by Elvis performer Jack Elton.

But he then predicted that the club would add women members within a year.

Would-be member Susan Harwood, an attorney, said she's considering her options: challenging the decision in court or joining another club.

"I'm disappointed. I really did want to see something different," Ms. Harwood said. "No one can discredit the good the Maitland Rotary Club does, and I want to be a part of that."

Stephanie Hutchinson, the other woman, said she was upset but plans to join another club and transfer to the Maitland group if it ever welcomes women. She was a Rotarian when she lived in Fort Myers.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1987 that service groups cannot ban women. But a Florida law exempts organizations with fewer than 400 members from that ruling.

Rotary International encourages clubs to seek women members, but the decision is left to local groups and state laws. Most clubs in the area have female members.

Optometrist Bob Willson, Ms. Harwood's Rotary sponsor, said the vote surprised him.

"The club obviously voted to remain a male social club with the facade of being a Rotary club," Willson said. "At least 19 people have their heads screwed on right."

Orange County Commissioner Bill Donegan, who sponsored Ms. Hutchinson, said he voted to add women and might join another Rotary club because of the vote.

"This was a personal vote for me. It was not, as many people think, a political vote," said Donegan, who is running for tax collector on the November ballot.

"The club does a lot of good in the community. But I don't think I can continue in it knowing what I know now," Donegan added.

Robert Twigg, a district governor for Rotary International, said he knows of no other club in his area — which includes Orange, Seminole, Osceola, Lake and Sumter counties — that has a policy to exclude women.

located behind the store. A search reportedly uncovered $114 in cash in his pocket. He was charged with possession of cocaine with intent to sell, and resisting an officer without violence.

Moore, reportedly located in front of the store, is said to have struggled with the officers, attempting to take their firearms, and taking one officer's radio.

Although officers said they used mace and an expandable baton on Moore, they reported neither had any immediate effect on him. He reportedly struck one officer in the mouth. As a result of the altercation the officer received injuries to his face, both knees and his hands. He reportedly required treatment for his injuries. Another officer was reportedly struck in the left knee.

Eventually, officers said additional use of the expandable baton brought Moore under control at which time officers were able to make an arrest.

He was charged with two counts of resisting an officer with violence, corruption by threat against a public servant, and three charges of depriving officers with means of protection/communication. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility under $5,000 bond.

Economy shot up 4.2 percent annual rate in second quarter

By JOHN D. McCLAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy grew at a stinging 4.2 percent annual rate from April through June, the fastest pace in two years. "This is good news for America," President Clinton declared.

The Commerce Department said today second-quarter gross domestic product far outpaced the moderate 2 percent rate in the January-March period and the anemic 0.3 percent performance in the final three months of 1995.

It was the best showing since a 4.9 percent spurt during the second quarter of 1994.

"It was a very impressive report," remarked economist Stephen S. Roach of Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York. "It certainly showed a marked acceleration moving into mid-year."

"The big question is whether the economy is growing too fast to keep a lid on inflation and whether it forces the hand of the Federal Reserve. That question is still open to debate."

The acceleration was spread throughout much of the economy, including strong consumer spending and a surge in home building, inventory rebuilding and local government spending rebounded after declining in the first quarter.

The trade deficit, however, continued to curb growth. A day after announcing he would sign a welfare bill that opponents say will throw hundreds of thousands of people in poverty, Clinton hailed the latest economic figures.

"This robust growth ... is touching the lives of all our people with 10 million new jobs, low unemployment and inflation in check," Clinton said. "This is good news for America and more evidence that our economy continues to surge ahead and our economic strategy is working."

GDP, the total output of goods and services produced in the United States, is the nation's broadest measure of economic health. Many analysts had predicted a 3.9 percent growth rate.

The report reflected annual revisions in the nation's economic growth rate. For instance, the rate for the first quarter earlier had been reported to be 2.3 percent and for the fourth quarter 1995, 0.5 percent.

But many analysts believe the economy will slow during the second half of 1996. Indeed, a membership survey released today by the National Association of Purchasing Management indicated industrial activity moderated in July.

Its index, which many analysts had expected to rise, slipped to 50.3 from 54.3 in June, leading to a rally in the stock and bond markets.

And the Commerce Department said in a second report today that while construction spending rose 1.2 percent in June, the advance was limited to nonresidential activity.

Mack could help Dole win Florida

By ERNEST KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A true economic conservative, Republican Sen. Connie Mack preaches "less taxes, less spending, less government and more freedom."

For that, his Democratic critics have called him an "ideological wacko." And Bob Dole has called him a potential running mate, one who could help put Florida and its key 25 electoral votes into Dole's column.

No Democratic presidential candidate has won the state since Jimmy Carter of neighboring Georgia in 1976, and it could prove decisive for Dole, now in a virtual deadheat with President Clinton, according to state polls.

"I think Connie would be a plus all the way around," says Tommy Thomas, a former Florida GOP chairman and Dole supporter.

Besides his conservative economic credentials, the 55-year-old Mack also is attractive because he's a Roman Catholic, a group the Dole campaign is hoping to bring in as a swing voting bloc this election year.

A downside to putting Mack on the ticket is that he comes from the Senate — the same place Dole left to pursue the presidency full time. The voting public might not be ready for two Washington insiders on the same ticket.

Mack also has admitted to once smoking marijuana when he was younger, a negative amid recent attacks on the White House for setting up a drug-testing program to allow more than two dozen staffers to obtain security passes and keep their jobs if they remain drug free.

Mack's family also has a history of cancer. His brother died of the disease while in his 30s. Mack himself has already had a bout with skin cancer, although he's in good health today. But Dole, at age 73, has said he is looking for an unquestionably healthy running mate.

Still, Mack, who was named after his famous grandfather who owned and managed the Philadelphia A's for 50 years, is well-liked. His popularity was evidenced by his re-election romp over Clinton's brother-in-law, Hugh Rodham.

Once described as an "ideological wacko" by Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., Mack has won over voters for his work in the Senate since 1988. He won a second term in 1994, capturing nearly three of every four votes.

Graham has since conceded his 1988 statement in the heat of a campaign was "ill-considered" and the two lawmakers today work closely together.

When Mack first considered running for the Senate from a safe House seat, he was seen as little more than a token offering for Republicans desperate for a candidate to challenge three-term incumbent U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles.

But Chiles said he was tired of the gridlock in Washington and retired.

Mack defeated Robert Merkle in the GOP primary and edged Democrat Buddy MacKay, also serving in the U.S. House, in the general election.

In his 1988 campaign, Mack hung the slogan "Hey Buddy, You're a Liberal," on MacKay and won over Florida's conservative crowd. Mack had adopted the slogan, "Less taxes, less spending, less government and more freedom," which remains at the core of his political philosophy.

He shares the same economic ideals as House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, an unsuccessful GOP presidential nominee, and backed the 1988 presidential bid of Jack Kemp.

But Mack has also shown he is willing to stand up for some personal beliefs that don't fit his otherwise conservative profile.

He joined Democrats in criticizing the U.S. policy of repatriating Haitians. In 1990, he cited First Amendment protections when he disagreed with Florida GOP Gov. Bob Martinez's efforts to crack down on a Miami rap group, 2 Live Crew.

While Dole is a World War II veteran, Mack had a family deferment from military service during the Vietnam War. Now the father of two, he was classified 3-A after the birth of his first daughter in 1961.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Congress drives toward recess

WASHINGTON — Driving toward a summer recess, Congress is nearing completion of a pile of legislation, capped by a historic welfare overhaul and election-year bills to fight terrorism, increase the minimum wage and broaden access to health insurance for millions of people.

The spurt of legislative activity punctuated what had been a sharply partisan, generally unproductive session of Congress so far this year and should provide campaign fodder for both parties as they gear up for their national nominating conventions and head into the fall elections.

"I'm still somewhat numb from what all has happened in the last few hours," Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fla., one of the authors of the welfare bill, told reporters shortly after the House passed the measure Wednesday. "This plurality was tremendously important to show the resolve of the American people that we are going to change this welfare system."

Anti-terrorism measures

WASHINGTON — After wrangling with key Republican lawmakers, the White House has won agreement on a package of anti-terrorism measures that would expand wiretapping authority and tighten airport security.

But President Clinton's push to study the case for placing chemical markers in explosives was rejected.

The accord came Wednesday evening after two days of meetings between a bipartisan lawmakers' task force and administration officials, including White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta and Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick.

Panetta said the anti-terrorism measures, several of which were proposed by Clinton in response to the TWA Flight 800 explosion and the Olympics bombing, would give law enforcement new tools to confront "what is an increasing threat in our world today."

Telecommunications overhaul

WASHINGTON — Marking another major step in the telecommunications revolution, federal regulators are finalizing an overhaul of the local telephone business intended to give Americans more choices and lower prices.

The Federal Communications Commission was expected today to approve rule, opening the $100 billion local phone marketplace to long-distance and cable TV companies and other potential competitors.

Customers in New York, Texas and California could begin to see multiple choices for residential local phone service by the end of the year, state regulators and telephone companies say.

The FCC action implements the centerpiece of a law passed six months ago to overhaul telecommunications laws that have been in place for 63 years.

Dole's final touches on tax cuts

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — As Bob Dole puts the final touches on $500 billion to $600 billion in tax cuts — including a "very good" chop to the capital gains tax — he's bracing for flak from Democrats.

"As soon as we announce it, the cry is going to be, 'Oh, this is for the rich. This is for Wall Street,'" the Republican presidential candidate predicted Wednesday of the economic package he'll unveil next week.

As the self-imposed deadline neared, senior economic advisers were pushing Dole to make the centerpiece of his package a repeal of the 1990 and 1993 tax increases, rather than a 15 percent across-the-board tax cut, GOP and campaign officials said.

Boeing to buy defense holdings

NEW YORK — Boeing Co., the world's biggest maker of commercial jets, reached agreement today to buy Rockwell International Corp.'s aerospace and defense holdings in a $3 billion deal.

Boeing will acquire the company for $660 million in stock and also will assume almost $2.2 billion in Rockwell debt.

Rockwell produced and supports the Air Force's B-1 bomber fleet and has competed with Boeing for government contracts for laser and directed-energy weapons. It has moved aggressively in new directions lately, including factory automation systems, computer modems and semiconductors.

Going on trial

HAVANA — He has eluded American justice for a quarter-century. But Robert Lee Vesco is finally going on trial — albeit in a Cuban courtroom on charges of economic crimes against the communist government.

Vesco faces up to 20 years in a Cuban prison in connection with allegedly trying to develop and market a drug for cancer and arthritis without the government's knowledge.

He has been on the run since 1971, when he fled the United States to escape charges that he bilked mutual fund investors of $234 million. Cuban authorities allowed him to settle here in 1982 after stays in the Bahamas, Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

A 1989 U.S. indictment accuses Vesco of using Cuba as a base for drug trafficking. He also is wanted on charges of making an illegal $200,000 contribution to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

Personal School injury lawyers

By JOHN MARCUS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — It's just after 6:30 a.m. and a standing-room-only crowd of 250 wide-eyed trial lawyers listens to the latest topic for the morning: how to sue a police officer and a police department. A few minutes later, the subject switches to breast implant liability.

This is the 50th annual convention of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, the nation's largest organization of personal injury attorneys and other lawyers who represent plaintiffs in lawsuits.

And the agenda shows how dangerous a world this is.

There are seminars on how to sue for battery explosions, nail-gun and crane accidents, tap-water burns, faulty automatic doors, false diet products and allergic reactions to latex.

"There is a great deal of specialization demanded of trial lawyers," said Howard Twigg, a Raleigh, N.C., lawyer and newly elected president of the association. "What we try to do is put the plaintiff on equal footing with the insurance company."

Lawyers at the meeting shared information, documents and expertise from previous lawsuits, something they say saves their clients money and improves the quality of their services.

The reference material alone from the five-day conference, which ended Wednesday, filled 4,500 pages in two volumes, and also was made available on CD-ROM and audio cassette tapes.

The material is considered vital for a group that has to contend with the experience and research of specialized law firms hired by insurance companies.

Lawyers simply have to know more than their expert witnesses, said Charles Reese, an Alabama lawyer who takes on everything from medical work to corporate cases.

"What lawyers do is for very short periods of time we become the best experts in a very narrow field. Then we move on to another topic," Reese said. But lawyers said they have a growing image problem because they bring so many cases — the fault not of bad lawyers, they said, but of bad manufacturers, other businesses and doctors.

"It breaks my heart when I see the disrespect to which our enemies hold us up and which the public is induced sometimes to hold us up," said Leo Boyle, a Massachusetts lawyer.

campus when it was required.

While principal Ines Schmoock said she can not require the youngsters wear the uniform every day, she said many of the parents and students had already expressed pleasure with the outfits.

"Target (where the uniforms are available for purchase) called to say they ran out," she said.

Tramaine Lomax, a Midway second grader who gobbled up grits and buttered bread in the cafeteria before the start of classes, was not very vocal about his excitement on the first day.

"I'm excited," he said, stirring his grits. "I want to go meet my teachers."

Tameka Cain, a first grader at Hamilton Elementary, strayed to the back of the line of students waiting for instructions on the classroom to which they should report. Repeatedly, she allowed others to step in front of her. He said he wanted to meet some new friends.

"I don't wanna go to school," she said. "I want to play." "My momma said school is fun," he said. "I can't wait."

SANFORD — One of the top Elvis portrayers in the world, Lake Mary's own Jack Elton, will be on stage Monday, August 5th at Sanford Memorial Stadium to do his Elvis show along with "Let It Be", as nationally known group from Miami who portray the Beatles.

Elton, who portrayed Elvis in the 1993 Presidential Inauguration, will do a show based on Elvis Presley's 1970 Las Vegas performance. A 20-piece orchestra will also be on the stage.

The show will begin at 6 p.m. with dinner (a $5 donation). Music will start at 7 p.m.

A donation of $10 in advance and $15 at the door is being asked, with kids under 12 free.

The show is being presented by the City of Sanford and American Legion Youth Athletics with proceeds going to help get lights for Sanford Memorial Stadium and for the American Legion baseball teams.

Magic sign Gerald Wilkins

ORLANDO — 6-foot-6 veteran swingman Gerald Wilkins, 32, hampered by injuries the last two seasons, signed a one-year contract with the Orlando Magic worth $250,000.

In 10 seasons with New York, Cleveland and Toronto he averaged 14.1 points and 3.3 assists.

Jason Varitek went 2-for-5 for Port City.

AROUND THE STATE

NBA rejects Howard's deal

NEW YORK — The NBA rejected the $90 million, seven-year deal Juwan Howard signed with the Miami Heat, contending the contract exceeds the team's salary cap.

The league said the Heat "incorrectly calculated their available salary cap room" by excluding performance bonuses for Tim Hardaway and P.J. Brown.

Jeffrey Mahkin, the NBA's chief legal officer, said the Heat also reached an agreement with Alonzo Mourning before signing Howard, further reducing the amount available.

Ahanotu Suffers hand injury

TAMPA — Tampa Bay's defensive woes continued Wednesday as lineman Chidi Ahanotu broke a bone in his left hand, becoming the fourth key defenseman to suffer an injury during training camp.

Ahanotu broke his second metacarpal during pass rushing drills and could be sidelined up to three weeks. He is scheduled to undergo surgery Thursday for a pin insertion.

ELSEWHERE

Dodgers 3, Marlins 0

LOS ANGELES — Ramon Martinez allowed four hits in seven-plus innings and Eric Karros hit a two-run single in the first inning — after three straight walks by Pat Rapp — as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Florida Marlins 3-0.

Martinez (8-4) struck out four. Antonio Osuna struck the side in the eighth and Todd Worrell pitched a perfect ninth for his 27th save.

Raul Mondesi drove in the Dodgers' third run with a single two batters after Karros' hit.

The Tigers also sent center fielder Chad Curtis to Los Angeles for pitchers John Cummings and Joey Eischen, then swapped pitcher Greg Gohr to California for infielder Damon Easley.

Altamonte 10's get third in state

From Staff Reports

KEYSTONE HEIGHTS — The Altamonte Springs All-Stars ran their unbeaten winning streak to eight games and advanced to the finals of the Winner's Bracket before settling for third place in the Babe Ruth Baseball 10-and-Under State Tournament last week.

Winning pitcher Robbie Paulsen and relievers Bryson Byrd and Dane Moyer combined on a 10 strike out no-hitter as Altamonte Springs blanked host Keystone Heights 14-0 in four innings in their opening game.

Paulsen and Noah Smith led the way, both going 3-for-3. Also hitting were Casey French (3-for-4), Dane Moyer (2-for-4, double) and Blake Safford (2-for-4).

The locals kept the offense going in the next game as they blasted Chiefland 12-4. Byrd was the winning pitcher with help from Moyer and Paulsen. French (3-for-3), Smith (3-for-4), Moyer (2-for-4, double), Byrd (2-for-4) and Danny Buccellato (double) did the hitting.

But Jacksonville jumped on Altamonte Springs for three runs in the top of the first inning in the Winner's Bracket final and the locals were able to keep it close, but could never quite completely recover in dropping a 7-4 decision. Moyer was 2-for-3 for Altamonte.

The end of the All-Star season came for Altamonte Springs in the Loser's Bracket finals as Tampa scored two runs in the second inning and went on to win 3-1 and earn a spot opposite Jacksonville in the finals.

King outlasts LM field

By DAVE WESTERMAN
Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — In a race that resembled a demolition derby, Eddie King stayed out of trouble to earn his second straight win at Orlando SpeedWorld in Friday's 50-Lap feature for Late Models.

King was not a factor in the early going as Ronnie Roach outran fast qualifier Rusty Eberole at the start. Roach led until his engine exploded at the start/finish line on Lap 9.

Two wrecks took out Eberole and Ricky Wood, who were both leading at the time, and Kevin Lawrence took the lead on lap 23 with King finding himself in second place. Lawrence's car was sporting some damage from an earlier altercation and King swept past for a relatively easy run to the checkers.

Following King's Scotty's Home Center's T-Bird to the flag were Lawrence, Rinky Anderson, Billy Pratt and Nate Smith.

Mike Todd scored an easy win in his Dunkin Donuts Camaro in the Limited Late Model. Earl Beckner survived a wild last lap scramble to get second ahead of Paul Golgan, David Carlson and Chad Allman.

The best race of the night was in the Mini-Stocks as Brian Bellaw and Richard Newton ran side by side for 13 laps before Bellaw took control for his eighth win of the year. Jared Allison slipped past Newton on the last lap for second with Pedie Allison and Wayne Clark next.

Eddie Martin took the lead on Lap 11 and went on to the Modified win over Joe Middleton, Terry Rozier, Jared Allison and Larry Osteen.

The World Chevrolet Classic Race Cars event went to John Martin over John Sarpriacone. Third through fifth were Rich Tracey, Tim Hardage and Osteen's Bobby Sears.

Ted Head shook off some recent bad luck to claim victory in the Sportsman class. Rusty Edwards, Barbara Pierce, Tim Laurent and J. Allen Smith trailed.

Mike Peppler took the Bomber win over Fred Peters, Butch Pierce, Gary Cuddy and Gary Lehman, while Tim Walters and Paul Galm won their second straight features in the Run-A-Bout's and 4-cylinder Bombers, respectively.

Orlando SpeedWorld races Friday at 8 p.m. Mark your calendars for August 9 for the School Bus Figure-8 race. For info call (407) 568-1967 or (504) 487-4129.

Shaq for sale: Making cents of it

Hannah Stanley and Jeff Scott looked as though they had lost their best friend—and in a way they had.

Hannah and Jeff work at the Magic FanAttic in Altamonte Springs. Business, they say, has fallen off since Shaquille O'Neal went to LaLa Land.

Shaq's gone but it will take a ton of magic to sell the load of Shaq gear stockpiled in each of the four Magic FanAttic stores.

At the entrance to the Altamonte store, there's a seven-foot cardboard Shaq waiting to be bought for $10. A couple of weeks ago it was a big seller for $20. Soon it may not be worth the cardboard itself.

"We've got a 50 percent off Shaq sale," Scott said. "Shaq jerseys were $41.95. Now they're $20.97. We've also got T-shirts, hats, posters, pennants, basketballs, videos, books, magnets, school supplies."

Shaq collectibles and autographed Shaq merchandise at the FanAttic remain at full price, however.

A few miles down Route 436 at Big League Cards, there's a tombstone in the card window for Shaq with a sign that no Shaq items have been sold since the big fellow snubbed his nose at Orlando to sign with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Big League owner Alan Narz immediately contacted LA sports card and memorabilia dealers who were eager to buy all the Shaq merchandise available. What's a Shaq autograph worth in Orlando? Anyone bid a dollar?

The world's largest

On the subject of collectibles and autographs, there is a company in Minneapolis that fancies itself as the "World's Largest Supplier of Hollywood, Rock N' Roll and Sports Memorabilia. In its latest inventory of more than 10,000 "original" items, the company lists the following winners:

- An original tooth from Elvis Presley's mouth
- Concert worn bustier from Madonna
- Jack Nicholson's Joker cane
- Adam West's utility belt and buckle
- Leonard Nimoy's life mask
- Elvis Presley's childhood bed
- Original title from Elvis Presley's burial site

A magazine called Autograph Collector has a cover story about Baseball Hall of Famer Ted Williams. The Splendid Splinter's son, John Henry, claims 75 percent of the Ted Williams' autographs on the market are fake. The claim has autograph dealers very concerned. The magazine's editor writes that "Autograph collecting is a great hobby. However, in the last two or three years, we've noticed a growing cancer that has the potential to do enormous damage. It is without a doubt the single biggest threat to the hobby."

The editor is talking about forgery. Wow! Where have these guys been?

Sandy Koufax openly talks about how he and the late Don Drysdale used to sign each other's fan mail. And everyone in baseball knows that many names on team-autographed balls were signed by the clubhouse boys instead of all the players. Unless someone gets an autograph in person, who can tell?

Almost every Hollywood star has an autograph or fanatic fan story to tell. A woman once asked Judy Garland to sing "Over the Rainbow" in the women's room. A man once wrote to Jayne Mansfield for an autographed picture as soon as possible. And as naked as possible.

We leave with this free tip from an autograph expert named Tony Urban. Don't tell anyone, but Alex Trebek will sign for you if you write to him. Write to Witty, Intellectual Alex Trebek, 3405 Fryman Road, Studio City, Calif. 91604-4119. Stay tuned for Shaq's new California address.

Widow may be forced to forfeit pension

DEAR ABBY: My ladyfriend and I would like to get married (we are both 70 years old). However, as a widow she gets a pension from her deceased husband's former employer, which indicates her pension will stop if she remarries.

A friend of mine says that the U.S. Supreme Court ruled some years ago that this type of restriction is no longer valid. Is this correct? E.A.H. IN POMPANO BEACH, FLA.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR E.A.H.: I am not permitted to practice law in Florida — or any other state. However, I checked with my legal experts who informed me that most pension plans are covered by ERISA (the Employee Retirement Income Security Act). The pension administrator for the deceased husband's company can verify for your ladyfriend whether or not her pension is covered by ERISA. If it is, then that provision is not valid. If the pension is not covered, she should check with a Florida lawyer who is an expert in pension law.

DEAR ABBY: In my opinion, we need a national slogan that reminds us to care about everybody and everything. Of course, the Golden Rule represents this. It should be taught to children in the schools. At the beginning of the first class, its meaning could be explained. At the end of the day, teachers could remind the students, "Don't forget the Golden Rule."

What do you think, Abby? NANDOR LAZAR, NORFOLK, VA.

DEAR NANDOR LAZAR: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" is an excellent philosophy to live by. The message is simple and powerful. However, children learn by imitation. I feel that principles such as this are most effective when they are taught at home by parents who not only preach the rules but practice them as well.

DEAR ABBY: My problem involves my best girlfriend's brother and mother. Her brother — I'll call him Ben — and I have become very close. I love him a lot. The problem is his mom. She hasn't forbidden us to see each other (she probably knows we'd see each other anyway), but she won't let me come over if she's not there.

She never gives us any privacy or any time alone. She's overprotective and babies him a lot. If I say anything, she tells me it's none of my business. I should tell you that I'm 21 and Ben is 16. Is there any way to reassure her that we know what we're doing?

Please print this because I would like to show her your answer. KNOWS WHAT I'M DOING

DEAR KNOWS: You are an adult, but the boy is underage, so I implore you to back off. If you refuse to do so, his parents could take legal action against you.

The best way to reassure Ben's mother is to respect the rules of her household.

DEAR ABBY: Circumstances beyond our control prevent us, a single man and single woman, from marrying.

When one of us dies, in the obituary, along with the listing of family survivors, may the term "significant other" be used in listing the surviving partner? Or do you think just "dear friend" would be better? LONGTIME READER IN FLORIDA

DEAR LONGTIME READER: "Dear friend" would be my choice.

Buying luxury items when you're on a budget

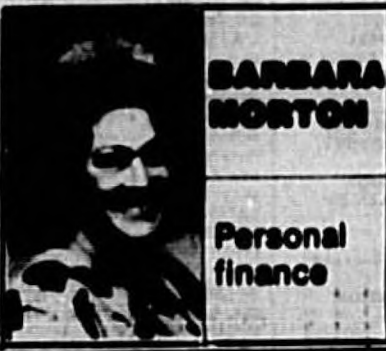

Even when you're on a budget, it's nice to indulge yourself now and then. Just remember that you don't have to be financially irresponsible when making a luxury purchase.

Finding bargains on high-ticket purchases means you have to pay close attention to inventories at all the right stores and be patient enough to wait until the price has come down. And one great way to accomplish this is to really get to know the shops in your area and the people who work there.

Visit a new store as soon as possible after it opens and get to know the owner. Early customers will be remembered and appreciated, so any leeway the owner has as far as bargains are concerned will more likely be exercised to your benefit. Also, new stores tend to have more competitive prices because they're trying to generate business quickly.

One of the areas where people like to splurge most often is on clothing. Finding a bargain on expensive clothes is where it really pays to be patient. Most clothing shops typically display their newest product lines in premium locations and mark them at premium prices.

If you see a new outfit on the rack that's a little out of your price range, that you've just got to have, try going back in a few weeks. Once the stores get the next new line in, and they feel this outfit has run its course at its highest price, they'll move it to the back of the store and mark it down with a discount of up to 50 percent, and that's the time to buy.

For really high-ticket items, such as evening gowns and furs, you have a couple of options. First, if it's something you'll probably wear only once, find a good rental shop; you'll pay a fraction of the cost to buy it. If it's something you want to own, check out a re-sale shop. These items, even when pre-owned, haven't been worn extensively, so you get almost all the value for half the price or less.

Quality is important also when buying expensive clothes, so you'll want to check the fabric and workmanship, including the strength of the seams and buttons, before you buy. You can also check the country of origin: clothes made in Italy, France, and the Scandinavian countries are usually well made.

For non-clothing luxuries, such as appliances, furniture and electronic goods, many of the same rules apply. For example, getting to know the shops and the owners is a good idea. And patience will help if you wait for items to be marked down after their initial pricing.

You can also save a little by offering to pay cash in exchange for a small discount. Because credit card companies charge the merchant up to four percent on the purchase price to accept their card, the store manager will sometimes accept such an offer.

Also, ask for a discount on the display model, especially if you find out that the item on the floor is the last one they have in their inventory. And if you bring a truck or van, and offer to cart the merchandise away immediately, the store saves money on delivery and may be swayed to cut the price down a little.

The most important thing to remember is to be a smart consumer by comparing prices before buying. This is important no matter what you're purchasing because, in the long run, you'll save a lot of money. And with high-ticket items, the savings are even that much higher.

Oxygen beats cluster headaches

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from cluster headaches. Five to 10 minutes of breathing oxygen at my local hospital will often stop the pain, but it's very hard to get a prescription. I wonder how many people are suffering needlessly because of doctors' and even public hospitals' lack of knowledge of this affliction?

DEAR READER: Cluster headaches, as the name implies, occur sporadically, last about an hour, disappear, and then recur. The cause is unknown, but some authorities believe that the clusters are related to cyclic dilation of blood vessels within the skull. The diagnosis depends on the pattern of the headaches.

One of the most successful therapies for cluster headaches is supplemental oxygen, breathed from a tank when the headaches appear. Because this is such standard treatment, I'm surprised that your doctor hasn't given you a prescription for the oxygen.

In my opinion, he should. I suggest that you discuss this issue with him. I'm certain he would welcome a source of home oxygen to save you from having to seek help at a hospital. There is no harm in periodically using oxygen for this purpose.

DEAR DR. GOTT: We have an adult son with mental illness living with us. He's under a doctor's care and takes daily medication. He's doing fairly well, yet there are unavoidable periods of stress in our home, in dealing with the illness. Can you recommend any specific vitamin or stress-relieving regimen to help my husband and me cope with what seems to be our permanent situation?

DEAR READER: There is no vitamin that will help you and your husband cope with what must be a difficult problem.

However, a support group could provide valuable assistance. By meeting regularly with other people in your situation, you will discover that you are not alone. You can share experiences and solutions; you can learn effective methods to deal with a troubled adult child.

With mental disorders — as well as with a host of other physical or emotional ailments — support groups often make the difference between success and failure.

Ask your son's doctor for more information or check the Yellow Pages for the help center nearest you.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I read in your column about blood pressure rising in a doctor's office. God forbid one of you guys would consider a home visit. Whatever happened to doctors making house calls, anyway?

DEAR READER: I dunno. I make house calls, as do most of the physicians in my community. I realize that house calls are not popular among doctors in certain areas — especially away from house calls may be reversing. This is good.

However, house calls should not be abused. For example, I wouldn't travel to a patient's house only to obtain a blood-pressure reading, unless there were extenuating circumstances.

"White-coat hypertension" (the increase in blood pressure that some people exhibit under the stress of seeing a doctor) can easily be detected with a do-it-yourself home blood-pressure kit. Most of these units are accurate and relatively inexpensive.

In my practice, I've found that such devices are invaluable; patients can monitor their own blood pressures without the nuisance and expense of an office call. You might consider this option, as you continue your search for a physician who is willing to provide home care when you need it.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Open the door

By Phillip Alder

"As the years go by, the numbers are falling. But we've still got to carry on, no matter who shows up." What was the speaker talking about?

Perhaps you think it was someone commenting on the number of bridge players in North America, but it was 72-year-old Sonny Carreras referring to war veterans last Memorial Day.

The American Contract Bridge League has tried — with limited success — to encourage more young players to take up the game. And today sees the start of the Summer Nationals in the Fontainebleau Hilton Hotel, Miami Beach. There are games for all levels of player, from novice up to expert. Twice daily there are lectures. And after play on many evenings there are social functions. Every bridge player should experience at least one Nationals.

This deal was declared by Lila Perlestein while winning the Women's Knockout Teams at last year's Summer Nationals in New Orleans. Sadly, Perlestein cannot defend her title as she died last April.

Both teams were in four hearts. At the other table, the declarer tried to ruff her club losers in the dummy. When East overruffed, she went down.

Perlestein won trick one with the spade ace and cashed the heart ace to get the bad news about the 4-0 trump break. She continued with a diamond to dummy's queen and East's ace. A spade to West's queen was followed by a club to dummy's king. Now came the diamond king, a diamond ruff in hand, the heart queen, a heart to dummy's king and a winning diamond, on which South threw a club loser. Perlestein had held her losers to one spade, one heart and one diamond.
