

Schmeling Thinks Paulino With Covering-Up Style Of Boxing Is In For Trouble

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Service Sports Editor.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., June 17.—"In order to fly, the house fly must open his wings. In order to hit, Paulino must open his arms. If he doesn't he will lose, for a man can't win a fight without hitting. If he does open his arms, he will lose, any how, for then I will hit him."

Simple, isn't it? The Herr Schmeling thinks it is very simple. He is a German, and he is a boxer. He is a German, and he is a boxer. He is a German, and he is a boxer.

It takes straight thinking for a German to taboo beer. He says he doesn't know what it tastes like. He served wine to his guests at the table today but poured none for himself. He never drinks, in training or out. He is a German, and he is a boxer.

wait until next year for his championship shot. He didn't say that Schmeling will "keep" indefinitely. It doesn't mean Paulino. Mr. Jacobs isn't paid to think those kind of thoughts.

As a matter of fact, I suspect that the Herr Schmeling manages to do a lot of thinking on his own twelfth. He made a hole-in-one when he took the matter of Paulino's cross-arm defense. This is the rock on which expert opinion "fell" split, it being the contention of many that Schmeling will be baffled or something when he is presented with the spectacle of a couple of malignant eyebrows glaring out at him from behind a cascade of elbows. Instead, it seems that he has seen a match at Paulino as has the average American writer and, in point of fact, has made a close study of his style.

"I saw him fight in Germany and again at Madison Square Garden with Von Parat," the German explained. "I have fought on the same bill with him abroad and I don't see what all the mystery is about. Paulino is a brave man but not a versatile one. I consider him a smart fighter; he can do more with his left hand. Paulino, he swings but he does nothing else."

He went on to say that he had met a similar fighter in Berlin and, finding nothing else to hit, he concentrated on the obvious target. "I hit his eyes," he said with the gusto of one who remembers the incident with satisfaction. "After seven rounds, they close. Then, I knock him out."

The law, he finds, is Paulino's weakness, this being the reason for the Inquest's solicitude for that member. That, anyhow, is the Herr Schmeling's reasoning and, as I say, he seems to reason along the straight line that runs between two given points. New papersmen in the camp are almost 100 percent behind him as the winner of this fight but

GRAND JURY CONVENES

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn., June 17. (INS)—The grand jury convened here today to investigate the case of J. A. Rice, held in jail charged with aiding in the destruction of the home of Mack Elliott on Stoney Creek during recent testis disturbances. Burger, according to assistant state attorney Marshall Rice, implicated three others in the explosion.

DEADLOCK GUMS NATIONAL GROUP TEAM STANDING

Giants, In 4th Place, Only 1 Game Behind 3 Leading Outfits

NEW YORK, June 17.—St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Chicago are practically deadlocked for the lead in the National League race for the pennant, and the fourth-place Giants are charged with only one more defeat than the pace-setting Cardinals, you could not get a much more exciting scramble by dropping a two-hit piece on the Bowery.

The Giants, who usually have to play a lone hand in inter-sectional battles, received unexpected help from the three weaker eastern outfits—Brooklyn—Philadelphia and Boston—on the western trip just concluded. Sporadic outbursts on the part of the latter trio halted the march of the three leaders, for example, when the lowly Braves knocked off the Cardinals twice, 9 to 8 and 6 to 5, and the Phillies handed the Cubs a 7 to 2 shellacking. The Cardinals rallied desperately in the ninth inning of each encounter, but the Braves just managed to check each uprising in time.

Ray Benge of the Phillies struck out 13 batters and pitched only five hits in leading the Cubs. Burleigh Grimes, mountaineer of the Pirates, was beaten by the former Cincinnati team, 8 to 15, after the Braves had won the first game of the double bill by an 8 to 3 count. Games had won 10 games without a loss, but was no match for Pete Donohue yesterday.

The Giants kept up their terrific slugging, manhandling the Brooklyn Robins, 11 to 4. Lindstrom had a perfect day at bat with two homers and a pair of singles, and Mel Ott smacked his 14th homer.

The Athletics' winging streak of six straight victories was shattered when they lost a ding-dong slugfest to Cleveland, 10 to 9. Charlie Jameson saved the game with a diving catch of Bishop's liner in the ninth.

Celebrating his return to the line-up with a home run and a single, Bob Meusel helped the Yankees tame the Tigers, 11 to 7. Detroit knocked Pennock and McCreary out of the box. New York and the Phillies hand-

Blind Man Is Given Life Sentence For Slaying His Bride

AMERICUS, Ga., June 17. (INS)—To the black shroud of blindness which envelops his world another doom has been added for John Deloach. A jury has decreed that he must spend his life in prison for the murder of his bride of a few months, Mar. 14.

After 18 hours' deliberation, the jury returned a verdict of guilty, with recommendation of mercy, carrying automatically a sentence of life imprisonment.

According to evidence in the brief trial, Deloach shot his wife while he was in a frenzy from poisoned whiskey, which caused blindness afterward. This affliction developed as he lay in the hospital, near death from two bullets which he sent into his body after shooting his wife. Stumbling to the stand with four hits by Heinie Manush and the pitching of Kinsey, a rookie, features the Browns' 5 to 2 win over the Red Sox.

Pirpo Marberry won another game for Washington, beating Ted Lyons of the White Sox by a 5 to 3 score.

"In Old Arizona" Makes Hit Here In 1st Presentation

The long awaited Fox Movietone "In Old Arizona" had its premiere at the Milane Theatre Sunday. It will show again today and tomorrow.

"In Old Arizona" has aroused the keenest interest and its showing here is epochal, for it is the first feature length all-talking film drama to be made by the Fox Movietone studios, the organization which pioneered in talking pictures.

The past of more than a score of the leading players in filmland which presents this romantic story of the old southwest is headed by Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Burgess and Warner Baxter, each long accredited stars, and the supporting cast also includes, in every instance stars or featured players of world-wide fame.

Every person in the large cast seen and heard in the evolution of this tremendous drama of "The Lone Kid," notorious bandit who named the southwest, a killer of men and a breaker of hearts of women. In the progress of the story a young Irish sergeant, ordered to capture the bandit, falls in love with the bandit's sweetheart, plots with the girl to capture the Claco Kid and is overpowered by the object of his search. What happens will thrill the most ardent picture lover.

BAN IS PLACED ON ARMAMENT OF DRY AGENTS

It is being shot at, because he doesn't want to face a charge of murder under any circumstances. Dry agents certainly would prefer to the gun.

Rep. Clancy (R) of Michigan declared that Lowman's new anti-gun order "looks like we've got them confessing."

"It is a step in the right direction," said Rep. Fiesinger (R) of Minnesota, in whose district Henry Vorhies was killed by a customs officer. "The people along the border will feel a little safer at any rate, as a result of the new order."

"If Secretary Lowman will only follow up this admission of murderous use of guns by dry agents and insist upon some of the dry agents who have murdered innocent people being tried for murder, maybe the agents will come to believe that his anti-shooting order is worth the paper it is written on," said Rep. Schaefer (D) of Wisconsin.

DREAM OF MODEL VENICE IN WEST HASNT SUCCESS

Canals Of California City Will Be Filled By Order Of Court

VENICE, Cal., June 18.—The dream of a Romanticist to create a Venice in America has come to naught. The muddy and crumbling canals of this city will be filled at once, it was announced today.

The romanticist was the late Albert Kinney. He made a million dollars many years ago when he sold all rights to the "Sweet Oriental" cigarette to a big tobacco company. Even the name of the cigarette is unflattering to cigarette smokers of this age.

With his million dollars, Kinney came to California from the south and on the spot that is now Venice, Calif., he visualized a fantastic city of recreation, canals, gondolas and Venetian architecture.

Today Venice is a modern home city, with a population of many thousands and a Coney Island atmosphere. Here and there still can be seen traces of the Venetian architecture created by Kinney.

A little of years duration between the modernists and sentimentalists of Venice over the filling of the canals and turning them into modern highways has come to a close by an order handed down by the state supreme court in the form of a writ of mandate.

It calls upon the board of public works of the City of Los Angeles to execute a contract for the filling of the waterways.

Kinney, during his lifetime spent millions of dollars in carrying out that dream and make his city of waterways as famous and even more beautiful than the original Venice in Italy.

Upon completion of the canals he imported gondolas and gondoliers from Italy to lend the proper atmosphere and at night he sat on his front porch listening to the golden notes of the boatmen coming across the water. Being a lover of music Kinney built a beautiful bandstand in the center of the lagoon and old timers in the beach city used to gather on its banks to listen to the music.

ORDER FROM COURT
The order from the superior court will not only affect the remaining members of the Kinney family who have tried to maintain the canals as a permanent memorial to their father, but many residents of Venice, who treasure the canals from a standpoint of beauty and ambition.

—It was Kinney's ambition that these canals be preserved as waterways for all time and stated in his deed to the original city of Venice that they be maintained as permanent "means of ingress and egress."

When the canals are filled and turned into modern highways they will still be a means of ingress and egress, according to the opinion of the supreme court.

Bruton Is Found Guilty Here On Bigamy Charges

riage took place. Bruton had previously denied talking with Wilkinson about the divorce.

The state also placed Clara May Bruton, the defendant's sister in-law, on the stand to refute other testimony. She told of Bruton receiving a letter from his second wife and of his throwing it into the fire. Bruton had previously stated that he had received no letters from his second wife and that he did not know whether she was living.

The defendant was the only witness in his own behalf. His story was that when he returned from an army camp in 1919 his first wife had disappeared. His mother-in-law, he said, told him that the woman had gone to California and was living in Los Angeles. He denied ever receiving any message from her. He said he sought a divorce two years later and testified that he sent money to a sister in Jacksonville to pay for the divorce. Until the bigamy charges were raised against him, he said he thought he had obtained a divorce in Jacksonville.

The trial required all day, the jury retiring in its verdict shortly after 6:30 o'clock last night. H. S. and W. E. White conducted the case in behalf of the defense. Jurors in the case included W. E. Lindsey, O. H. Strout, J. W. Tarrill, R. B. Monroe, Floyd and C. D. Johnson.

Huggins Will Reorganize Yanks Next Year Despite Outcome Of This Year

By Davis J. Walsh
Copyrighted 1929 by International News Service Inc.
NEW YORK, June 18.—Win or three-time champions and one of loss, the New York Yankees, the ranking ball club of all time, will be dismantled at the end of the 1929 season.

Miller Huggins, their manager, made this statement to the writer yesterday morning, four days before the all-decisive series with the Athletics a series causing for five games within a period of 72 hours. The fate of the 1929-27-28 champions will be determined by these games but, rise or fall, the Yankees, as we have known them, never will be the same again once the current season is ended. That much is certain.

"Absolutely," said Huggins with great emphasis, "I'll have a different club on the field next year, regardless of whether they are champions at the time or just a ball club that used to be champions. They have gone far for me but there must be an end to everything and this is a sure thing."

His only hope for the present, he admitted, was to win four out of five from the Athletics in the impending series but I gathered that this was not so much a hope as a despairing thought. The inference gained was that, even if he did win the series, the gesture might be too late for all practical purposes. Huggins is a confirmed pessimist.

He comes by the characteristic honestly this time, with the rival club racing out in front by eight games.

"Being" isn't exactly the term, either, since this implies a content of some kind. So far, there has been almost none. The Yankees have won 11 of their last 15 games and may consider themselves fortunate that they did; otherwise there would be no race at all today. They lost ground even while they were winning.

"I wouldn't mind so much if Detroit or St. Louis was out that far in front," Huggins added. "I'd figure then that I had the better club and that ultimately class would tell. But the Athletics are a good club with hitting and pitching and youth and all the other things that make a good club good. You don't stake that kind of eight games start and catch them every time you set out to try. And, of course, if they beat us in this series, they will add to the confidence they are getting in themselves every day and then you wouldn't be able to catch them with a piece."

Huggins, of course, wouldn't care particularly about being beaten out of his fourth straight pennant and the league record; yet it might be that he would accept the inevitable with a certain degree of resignation. It would make his off-season task that much easier, for then he could tear into things, fancy free and with an open mind. He wanted to make changes this year but let against this judgment with the Yankees failed to win the World Series in four straight years. This time, nothing will interfere.

"I'm not blaming anybody," he hastened to say. "It's human nature to get into a rut from continued success. Some of the men I'm thinking of will do well on other clubs. But I can't expect any more from them in New York. We have been together too long. New faces, new scenes will help all concerned. Connie Mack knows what I'm up against. He asked me about my club on opening day and I told him what I'm telling you. And you can go and try on it that he's judging that way into his players' heads all the time."

ATHLETICS DROP THEIR SECOND TO CHICAGO OUTFIT

Cardinals Retain First Place In Nationals By Beating Lowly Cubs

NEW YORK, June 18.—Within a few years spitball pitchers will be but a memory, but in the meantime they continue to puzzle opposing batsmen with their freak delivery. Three of the handful of salivary slingers now performing in the Major Leagues pitched yesterday, Clarence Mitchell and Urban Faber winning their games and John Piesu Quinn losing to Faber.

Faber, who has won more victories for the lowly White Sox than Quinn has turned in for the league-leading Athletics, blanked the Mackmen for eight innings and won, 6 to 4, despite a last-inning splurge by the A's.

Philadelphia had gone clear up to June 17 without losing two games in succession—two months without a sign of a slump—if that isn't a record, it ought to be.

Mitchell, the only left-handed spitballer in the racket, kept the Cardinals in first place in the National League scramble by subduing the Cubs 13 to 3. In a wild sixth-inning rally, in which the Card scored eight runs, Chick Hafey made two hits, including a homer. Hafey and Buster Gehrig are now tied for the lead in the home-run marathon with 17 apiece.

Ray Kremer of the Pirates won a 2 to 1 due from Jackie May of Cincinnati, the Bucs staying errorless by Critz and Walker let in Pittsburgh's runs.

George Uhl hung up his tenth win of the season in beating the Red Sox, 8 to 3, after the Back Bay crew had annexed the opening game of a double bill by a 6 to 5 count.

Ty Cobb With Nothing To Do For First Time In 25 Years To Get Vacation In France

New York, June 15.—The old fire horse sniffs eagerly at the first wisp of smoke; the bus driver of course, always enjoys his day off by riding over the route with his substitute. But Ty Cobb never was added to custom in habituating himself to anything, so today he finds himself with nothing to do for the first time in 25 years and is glad of it.

The street, almost intolerable at times, of carrying forward the pace that made him the greatest ball player in history simply is more. The constant violence over diet and health no longer is necessary. He is Ty Cobb, gentleman of leisure now, and, although he didn't say so, I gained the impression that he really is happy for the first time since I am flattered him as his own.

"Maybe if I had been a medical city, I would have had a lot of fun out of the game," he said, positively. "But baseball to me, was just a wonderful fight first, in part to the top, and after that to stay here. I was like an actor who wasn't allowed to go to the wings but he to stay out there under fire all the time. There's no rest at that; only work, terrible, nerve-racking work."

The writer saw Cobb in his hotel before he was to board ship with his family for a summer's vacation in France.

He arranged the trip last winter when, no longer identified with baseball after 25 years, he feared he couldn't stand inactivity during the long season.

"I figured I would need a safety valve," he explained. "Instead, I find myself mellowed and content without the slightest desire to return. That's a misunderstanding. Baseball has given me everything and probably far more than I deserve. But I'd hate to live all over again some of the anguish I experienced during my 25 years in the majors."

In other words, he loves baseball. He believes he is through with it forever. Even if he could, he wouldn't come back as an active player and there are few owners and managements he would find appealing. Cobb is reputed to be worth a million in his own right and can afford to be discriminate.

He says his sons won't be baseball players either. This attitude, by the way, is not supercilious; Cobb doesn't feel that his family is too good for the game that that brought him riches and fame. He simply figures that the odds run too strongly against success.

"Nobody is too good for baseball," he adds, "is the greatest game of them all. But, for the majority, it is only a game, after all, and not a career. We have a nation of 123,000,000. The stars of the game number not more than 80. The odds, therefore, are all against you, for only the stars really get all there is to be gotten out of the game and even some of those don't last long enough to make it worth their while. I want my boys in a more permanent profession where the opportunities are not limited."

Germany To Ratify Reparations Plan Despite Objections

BERLIN, June 18.—(1929)—While the German government is certain it has a majority to ratify the Young (reparation) plan, nationalist party leaders decided today to demand that the effectiveness of the plan be postponed two months after publication to two national-wide referendums. Nationalist leaders profess belief that a referendum would be against the plan.

The referendums propose, if the Young plan referendum fails, that another be held "aginst the war guilt law." Only one-third of the franchising deputies are needed to obtain a postponement, and the nationalists are counting upon support from the fascists.

A nationalist resolution charges that "the government's destructive influence upon the delegation was one of the most fateful events in German history, delivering the children and grandchildren of the land and slavery for a mass of poll-tax."

BACKS DEBT PLAN

PARIS, June 18.—(1929)—Full agreement with the terms of the reparations agreement and a decision to push speedy ratification of the Young plan were reached at a meeting of the council of ministers here today.

Monte Carlo Presents Another Dilemma

The question now confronting the world is "Who owns Monte Carlo?" That is to say, is Monte Carlo—or Monaco—still an independent principality or is it a domain of the French Republic? All questions will be settled in due course, and, pending their solution, a committee of six, three of France and three of Monaco, will govern the country to insure tranquility until the end of the current Riviera season.

An unusually striking view from the air of the tiny peninsula in the Mediterranean, that is Monaco, one of the world's tiniest principalities and the gambling centre of the world.

YIELD ON INCOME TAXES WILL SET ALL-TIME RECORD

Year Ending For June Of '29 Will Be Most Expensive In History

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Millions of dollars passed through collectors of internal revenue for the second installment of income and corporation taxes for 1929. The public stepped up to the cash counter with from $530,000,000 to $539,000,000, according to estimates although exact figures will not be available until the end of the month.

Despite the reduction of the corporation tax from 12 1/2 to 12 percent, the government will pile up a record income tax yield of probably over $2,320,000,000 making possible a reduction of the public debt from $783,000,000 to $882,000,000, depending upon the year.

The year ending June 30 will be the most expensive in the peacetime history of the government, barring the war and immediate post-war period.

Expenses are expected to exceed $3,800,000. Up to June 11, expenditures exceeded those of last year by $181,000,000. The heaviest increase in cost occurred as the result of pay increases to government employees. General expansion by reason of national growth, and unusual refunds of income and corporation taxes.

Stock speculation drove the cost of government money to 5-1 1/8 percent at the close of the fiscal year, the highest rate since 1921. While from 1922 to 1927 there was a steady decline in the borrowing rate for the government.

There seemed to be no immediate indication of an easing of the money situation, although a relaxation was generally anticipated by officials in the early autumn.

The day's receipts were further swelled by the payment of some $80,109,285 by foreign governments on their war indebtedness. Of this amount only about $1,500,000, was in cash, the rest being treasury certificates bought up by debtor nations.

Great Britain paid approximately $60,000,000 with Italy, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Estonia, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia contributing smaller payments to make up the total.

PARIS COIFFEUR EXPERTS INSIST UPON SHORT HAIR

Barbers Will Do Anything To Keep Present Style In Vogue

By RUTH JANE WILLIAMS

PARIS, June 18.—Paris barbers will do anything in their power to keep short hair.

In a tour of the coiffeur shops of this city to discover whether or not long hair were on its wayward way back, this was the conclusion arrived at.

Emile, Jean and Robert (pronounced Robair) were all equally united on this absorbing problem.

The barbers, by the way, were of growing hair as anything but a permanent wave and snapped their fingers in scorn at the idea that women should succeed in recalling the hairpin-filled buns and braids of yesterday.

They may try to lengthen their hair, said Emile. "They may have ennuui with always the same short hair. But we coiffeurs, we shall not permit such a thing. Not for us it would be dreadful should the ladies no longer require every week a cut of the hair. But we can prevent such a thing. We can dissuade madame from such false ideas. We tell her short hair is the more youthful and the most becoming. The long hair we frown upon is sufficient. Madame will never grow long hair."

Other hairdressers were in emphatic agreement with Emile in spite of the fact that feminine Paris is displaying more of her tresses under her hat brim every day. They admit this obvious fact but declare in unison that the fad will not last because short hair is far too good to look upon and too convenient to disappear so summarily.

And moreover, they add slyly, the barbers profit too much by bobbed hair to ever let it slip out of fashion.

Today's man is the most popular one among women this year, according to a questionnaire answered by a number of French women who show they prefer the modern, sportive type of masculine adoration to the sentimental romanticism of former times.

"Old-fashioned lover?" queries Violette Moriss, well-known French sportswoman, "time wasted with pretty sayings which mean nothing. Modern man, not too bad, but all of the same style. Loves no time, sportive, knows what he wants and gets it."

"But, to tell you the whole truth, I much prefer my little auto. A little oil, a little water and it does just what I want it to, no trouble, no bother. One can't compare one with the other!"

Mademoiselle Marival, French painter, declares that either one or the other will do, provided he has no beard. But of course since the modern Frenchman has discarded the terrible "barbe," she prefers him.

Lucie Delarue-Mardrus, much-talked-of writer, finds that the so-called younger generation is not so rude and brutal as one makes out. And that after all, any man will do, provided he carries her bundles, opens the doors of taxis, run errands and makes himself useful about the house. That is what they were intended for.

Stop and go signals for the members of the French Chamber of Deputies have just been initiated.

French loquacity forced the government to adopt some method by which to control the length of time during which its statesmen might indulge in oratory.

This necessity has resulted in an ingenious device resembling a traffic signal which is placed before the speaker's stand.

When all is clear ahead the speaker may talk, so long as he keeps to the track. When almost time for him to come to a halt, the disconcerting words Five Minutes appear in bright electric letters on the disc.

FEELS STRENGTH INSTEAD OF PAIN

Lady Says She Was Aching In Back and Sides, Before She Took Cardui.

Hones Path, S. C.—"I suffered a long time with my back and sides, before I knew about Cardui," says Mrs. J. B. Dwyer, of Harper Street, this city. "I was thin, and my color was a pale yellow. I was in a very bad shape."

"I tried several things but nothing seemed to help me much. About five years ago, I just happened to be reading a paper which had an account in it of a lady who had been benefited by taking Cardui, so I sent for a bottle."

"I was greatly surprised to find myself much better after I had taken it. In some way I had strained my side by heavy lifting, and I had let it run on too long."

"Gradually I grew stronger; the periodic pains in my back and sides disappeared, and my color got over so much better."

"I am delighted with Cardui and can heartily recommend it. I have taken it several times since my first experience with it, and it has always helped me. I wish I could tell all suffering women to try it."
