A Helpful Loudspeaker

While many a young husband was apt to grin roundly as he read for the first time a few weeks ago that Mrs. Lindbergh would operate the "broadcasting station" of the new "We" expedition to the Orient, and many a wife countered with the amazing suggestion that Anne's radio proclivities might prove the salvation of the couple in the event her husband's unfailing motors failed somewhere out in the Bering Sea, it is becoming increasingly apparent that Lindy and his wife are furnishing a splendid illustration of how to be happy though married.

No back seat driver is Anne Lindbergh on this dangerous flight across the wilds of Canada and the northern limits of the Pacific. No cries of protest reach her husband's ears as he eases the plane's speed up to two or three miles a minute. No shouts of anger seek to direct his flight or flay his spirit if he banks his plane at too sharp an angle. Anne has supreme confidence in her husband's ability to fly their plane, and she is perfectly willing to go to the ends of the world with him entrusting her safety completely to his hands.

Withal, she is no dumb bunny. She is no clinging vine who handicaps her husband with extra poundage which serves no worthy purpose. In order to fill a very comfortable niche in the cockpit of the plane, she has studied, diligently and persistently, radio, Morse codes and what not, until she is an expert operator. She does not limit her "broadcasting" to idle prattle, but transmits on little wave lengths which carry from the farthest corners of the earth back to civilization vivid accounts of their progress so that an interested world may know what luck they have, and she picks up information in the same way foretelling weather conditions, and aiding navigation.

In her position in the home, whoever may be the "head" of the family, she is "the little blue goose," as the Esquimaux call her, and takes her orders from "Charles" never questioning anything he says. She doesn't talk back and doesn't supply a second look when instructions call for some particular "broadcasting". She is, in short, his first assistant, a help-mate, to borrow an expression from the last century, and seems to like her job. She is a girl of the 1850's in goggles and helmet.

Because she is, will probably save them from cracking up, as many aviators, and many modern couples, do.

No Petting At Home

It might have happened to any one of thousands of young couples who each night park in automobiles on lonely roads. It did happen to two young couples, about sixteen years of age, in a country lane just out of Ypsilanti, Michigan. Engaging in a more or less harmless pastime of petting, they were attacked by three men, and all four killed. They might have been living today had their petting parties found a more cordial welcome at home.

To the many memories, through the day's news, year after year, of ghastly murders and other crimes—memories which no adult can avoid—is added the love of the parent for the child," says the Chicago Times. "Come home early, Johnny," the fond, fearful mother says. Johnny may say, "All right, ma," but 10 to one he mutters, "Crimes, you'd think I was a baby. Just because they hauled in the streets at 9 P. M. when ma was a girl, she thinks it's the same now."

"In the case of the girls, the situation is even worse, for they run more risk. A boy can take care of himself—sometimes; but girls are almost always at the mercy of their surroundings and companions. Mother says to her daughter, 'Dear, why not just go to a movie and come home early before you can get into any mischief, and I am always glad to have them.' But daughter pouts. She doesn't know, likely enough, what mother and dad know about bestial and abnormal human beings, about that menacing fringe of society, defectives, tramps, what not, from which her parents would guard her.

"What if such ghastly murders as those of 'lover's lane' happen only once out of millions of private little trips to secluded nooks that youngsters may make? Are the crimes any less tragic for all that? When parents advise their children to stay near, to get in early, and so on, the parents have this case in mind—the one out of the millions. The children don't. The reader will recall that the negro, Blackstone, in his confession, said, talking of himself and his partners in crime, 'So we said we would go down 'lovers' lane' and knock off some of these here petters. They always is easy.' The local petting places of young people are common knowledge to such men. The petting places of any locality are known to the marauders, the conscienceless of that section. Young man, young woman, should you take the chance? Imagine yourself a parent, and then answer:

"There is a moral, too, for the parents. It is up to them to see to it that their children have places in which to enjoy themselves. Older people must realize also, like it or not, that their children's ideas of amusement may be at the same time modern and decent. A compromise must be struck between the old and the new generations. But it's worth the effort. A civilization—especially when you're a parent—can't be judged by its highest peak or its best people. It is still dangerous to live in society. But that danger can be lessened, in both parents and children, by understanding—at least trying hard to understand."

GAS LAW ATTACKED
 PALATKA DAILY NEWS

It was inevitable that the gas tax law enacted by the recent Legislature should be given the acid test in the courts. And it was taken for granted that John E. Mathews, of Jacksonville, who knocked the Brown-Crummer bill into a cocked hat, would be the individual who would file the test suit.

It is not surprising, therefore, that Mr. Mathews has announced that he will bring suit today in Leon county in the hope of setting the bill aside. In this enterprise he will be associated with several members of the House who are identified with the "big county bloc." There is good reason to believe that this legal action may prove effective, as the distribution of at least two of the six cents has already been questioned by good lawyers.

The one cent tax that is to be distributed according to area will hardly survive the courts, since it accords to the vast expanses of Lake Okechobee the same taxation returns as it does to the most densely settled portion of the city of Jacksonville. Naturally the beneficiaries of the law will be the distribution according to population likely to be upheld. These statements are based upon the opinions of disinterested attorneys, and not upon any intimate personal knowledge of constitutional law. Common sense also points to the fact that such a distribution is hardly within the confines of fairness or justice.

Should the law be declared invalid in some of its provisions, it is so constructed that the revenue obtained through the impact will go into the general fund. Presumably only the Legislature could get it out, which in itself couples another extra session with an adverse ruling by the state supreme court. The extra session, at least, is very much to be dreaded.

The task of county commissioners in making up the next budget is made difficult by the uncertainty which attends the legality of the gasoline tax. If they proceed to reduce the millage on the presumption that the law is constitutional, they may find themselves far short of the expected revenue. On the other hand, if they levy a millage based upon the belief that the law is invalid, and the courts rule otherwise, ected early yesterday morning, and the driving of rebels from houses begun. The Patria, destroyed the headquarters of the rural guard, which had been seized by the insurgent.

Small groups sought refuge in the tunnel, the communique said, and their immediate capture was looked for.

Among much war material seized were 57 machine guns, 1,000,000 rounds of ammunition and a large number of rifles, it was reported.

Dispatches reaching Havana from Gibara late yesterday afternoon said Sergio Carbo, director of the weekly, La Semana, was believed to be among the rebels killed.

Insurrectionists have been reported in force throughout the province during recent days of they will have failed to accomplish their tax revolt.

The smaller counties, of which Pinar is one, would no doubt be glad to have the law stand. It would mean tax relief on a big scale for them. Their larger centers, however, can hardly be censured for seeking to obtain what they believe is their just due. Certainly were the shoe on the other foot, the little counties could be depended upon to go to rout.

President Machado remained in Santa Clara, presumably continuing direction of the armed forces which have concentrated in that strife-torn province. Trainloads of troops have left Havana day and night during the past week for eastern provinces.

Conflicting reports reached Havana through the censorship maintained within the island.

Capt. Jose Mendez, of the steamship Baraca which arrived yesterday morning from Santiago, said he entered no ports on his trip because they were reported in rebel hands. The official statement, however, said revolutionaries that remained were in small groups, without leadership.

It was also reported an uprising is likely at Manzanillo, a town of 10,000 of the south coast of Oriente, and that army forces are expected immediately to move against Bayamo, nearby, where insurgents have been reported strong. Holguin has been reported at various times in rebel hands.

One report from Gibara said an aviator, said to be Lieutenant Martiano, was shot down while on an observation flight over the city.

Although circulars purporting to come from insurgent headquarters were circulated in Havana Monday night warning women to stay at home, the city streets after dark, the city re-

Government civilians were said to be concerned over the situation here, however. It is believed Miguel Mariano Gomez, former Havana mayor, and one of the two most important revolutionary leaders still at large, is in hiding in the city.

Few troops remain here and public works department employees were armed today to reinforce police.

Although army headquarters advised newspapers all communication facilities were open, telephone lines to Gibara were reported down and efforts to call that city failed.

One report that reached Havana yesterday evening said another expedition had landed at Sagua la Chica.

creation of state and private capital in the interest of workers involved in economic stress "in normal times and to make relief more attractive in times of depression."

Roosevelt said: "We are about to enter on the third winter of industrial depression. All classes of the population are affected. The situation is serious with the greatest unemployment and concern by all susceptible people. We must have the way of millions who cannot get their families back for a chance to work."

The plan he proposed, he said, would transfer the work to rural surroundings, from which he would commission the factory or office. He suggested that those unemployed during the past week would be chosen and more readily obtainable.

In his outline of the general plan, Roosevelt said that the government would be authorized to purchase the work, to be done in the future, at least in the "idle" periods.

Coverage of the plan is the subject of a bill which has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Clegg of Ohio. The bill would authorize the government to purchase the work, to be done in the future, at least in the "idle" periods.

Revision Of Debt Is Being Awaited

After an examination of Germany's financial situation, the bankers put the question up to the governments and called on them for action. Only action by the powers along these lines can restore economic prosperity to the troubled world, the financial expert stated.

Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the board of the Chase National bank, New York, and head of the bankers' committee, remained in Basel last night, before going to a French resort for a rest today.

The American banker and his colleagues were understood to feel they had accomplished the task entrusted to them by the London seven-power conference a month ago.

Two immediate possibilities loom up. Will the governments, taking up the bankers' challenge, immediately summon a diplomatic conference to discuss the problems? Or will they call on a banking commission — Wiggin's or a new one — to advise them as to the next practical step?

The observers here are watching Washington and Paris to discover the diplomatic reaction to the bankers' proposal.

Participation by both these governments in any movement for revision is clearly indispensable, it is pointed out, since America is the receiver of debt payments and France the chief goal of reparations.

The league assembly, convening Sept. 7, will bring together the spokesmen of half a hundred nations, all of which have an interest in the world economic crisis.

Among the other Longwood civic leaders who sense the economic need of the racing season is Wade S. Entaminger, prominent land owner, who said that "while I am not a racing enthusiast, our situation here this year leads me to believe that we need the season here. As far as the bad effects of gambling are concerned locally, I don't think that our residents will suffer."
