County jails may house state prisoners

TALLAHASSEE - Legislators trying to avoid a mass release of prisoners may use county jalls to house thousands of state inmates and make more non-violent offenders eligible for supervised release.

A bill is moving through both the House and Senate to allow the Control Release Authority for the first time to consider That half feletty offenders and certain drug the recent carry release to case overcrowding.

Such a move would make about 5,800 more prisoners eligible for supervised release, said Gene Hodges, chairman of the Control Release Authority.

The change is necessary, he said, because the number of inmates eligible for the program will dwindle to zero by October - meaning the Department of Corrections would be forced to randomly release more serious offenders to meet federal court overcrowding standards.

"You have to come up with something." Hodges told the Senute Corrections, Probation and Parole Committee on Wednesday, "I don't see where we really have a choice."

New child abuse laws discussed

TALLAHASSEE - The state needs alternatives to criminal charges in less serious child abuse cases, a House panel said Wednesday in approving a bill allowing a more flexible

Under the proposal, the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services would still be able to investigate reports of child abuse as it does now.

That includes advising police and prosecutors when the evidence indicates criminal charges might be warranted and listing the names of confirmed abusers in a state databank.

But, under the legislation, HRS would also have the option of handling less serious cases differently. The "family-service response system" calls for a less adversarial attitude where families are provided with services and counseling, instead of labeling some members as child abusers on the state registry.

"I think that HRS wants to use the least intrusive means possible," said Rep. Ron Glickman, a Tampa Democrat who chairs the Social, Economic & Developmental Services

Escaped murderer recaptured

LOWELL - A convicted murderer and an armed robber were captured near a Wildwood truckstop off of Interstate 75 after escaping last weekend from the women's prison here.

The two were arrested Wednesday after a two-day ride through Central Florida with an Arkansas truck driver, said Florida Correctional Institution Superintendent Eugene Poole. The driver learned they were fugitives after stopping for breakfast.

The driver managed to call the Sumter County Sheriff's Office at a truck stop near Wildwood, Poole said. The two women, who scaled a 12-foot fence and cleared coils of razor wire to escape Sunday night from FCI, ran into the woods when police arrived but were caught, he said.

Debra Joyce Gaster, 27, and Robin Jean Lunceford, 30, were being held Wednesday night at the Sumter County jail.

Howington was also sentenced to five years probation by Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey for a number of forgery, theft, bur-glary and bad check charges.

Former policeman imprisoned

SANFORD - A former Longwood policeman received a 22-month prison sentence Tuesday after pleading guilty to two counts of burglary, atcmpted burglary and possesion of burglary tools.

Carl J. Turner, 36, told the court the cocaine addiction which led to the bugiaries is under control. Turner served as a Longwood police officer for about two years before resigning in March, 1992. The criminal charges against him stemmed from burgiaries in May.

Turner will serve the nearly two year prison sentence consecutively with a three and a half year sentence he received on criminal charges in Orange County, according to assistant state attorney Alan Campbell.

eral report calls for a stronger building code, tougher enforcement and smoother evacuations, warning that other communities must heed the lessons the hurricane taught Dade County.

The study sponsored by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and released Wednesday was prepared by a 100-member team representing 63 public and private agencies.

The report recommends that communities around Florida, regardless of how far they are from the coast, adopt state-of-the-art wind engineering designs that account for gusts as well as sustained winds.

"The best lessons to be learned are in those counties with the least damage," said Mary Hudak, who supervised the Hazard Mitigation Team Report for FEMA. "They have an opportunity to prevent the losses that Dade County suffered."

Many of the 115 recommendations have been included in reports by a Dade County grand jury, the Miami chapter of the American Institute of Architects and a task force studying the South Florida Building Code. But the FEMA report comes with a catch. It will be used by the state to develop its plan for communities in South Florida. If the suggestions are ignored and the same problems surface in future storms, the communities could risk losing millions in disaster funds from the federal

The report says communities should toughen their building codes. They should step up training programs, share code violation information with other cities, and amend their codes to require inspections during key phases of construction.

The report also says cities and inspectors should pay closer attention to construction problem areas: hurricane straps and roof trusses, end walls, garage doors and entry ways.

Mobile home standards should be toughened, and cities should amend their codes to develop new standards for windows, the report says. Buildings that were substantially damaged by the storm should be brought, up to current codes, regardless of when they were originally built.

Tougher construction codes should be adopted along the coast, discouraging development in flood zones, and maps of flood zones should be included in all Florida phone books, the report

The report also says the state should identify more emergency shelters in South Florida and provide tax incentives to the private sector, encouraging companies to put up buildings that could also be used as temporary shelters. .

To speed up evacuations, the federal and local plans should be better coordinated and workers should be better trained for emergencies, the report re-

Why 'Air Show Orlando?'

The Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce is holding a party tonight. It is to be the kick off for a large air show at Sanford's Central Florida Regional Airport on April 3 and 4.

We hope some of the discussion at the gathering will be about the name given to the event. It is being called "Air Show Orlando."

Sanford residents take great pride in their city. Many object when it appears as though big Orlando is trying to swallow little Sanford. In this particular case, the city of Orlando and Orlando International Airport are not involved with the event.

Paula Pasco, a spokeswoman for G.M. Productions, the show's organizers, indicated the name Orlando was used in order to improve overall marketing.

is Sanford considered to be so small and insignificant that people would not know where to go if it was named, "Air Show Sanford?" Certainly any out-of-town publicity will contain directions to the airport. If it doesn't, many people may go to Orlando International expecting to see the show.

Air shows at Sanford's Central Florida Regional Airport in past years have proven to be excellent events. They have been well attended and have attracted visitors from throughout the Central Florida area.

All of this was done by indicating the event would be held in Sanford. No one has reviously left using the city's name would be

The airport is officially known as the Central Florida Regional Airport. It is not the Seminole County airport or the Sanford airport even though it is located on cityowned property. It is not an Orlando airport, and this air show should not be identified as

Thanks for coverage on Adolph Coors

I want to thank you for printing the article on the front page about Adolph Coors and his testimony for the Lord a couple weeks ago. It was such a blessing to my heart to read something encouraging, and on the front page at that. It seems nowadays reporters want to report on the bad, the shocking, and the sensational news. I would love to see an experiment done by the news media on what is happening that is "right" with America like the testimony of Coors for a period of a year with tabulated results to see what kind of influence it would have on American behavior in all age and economic groups.

I want to congratulate the writers of the article. Nick Pfetfauf and George Duncan, on how well it was written, and on what they said. It was excellent. Please thank them for me.

Thank you for a job well done. Keep it coming. Our hearts are sorely in need of that kind of encouragement. You may be on the cutting edge of something new and exciting in reporting.

Most of these people solicit money for various religious cults, but this fellow had a different angle. When I asked him what he wanted, he said he was collecting money for "emergency aid for homeless children.'

Now, this happened in California, which is world-famous for its compassion, and I scriously doubted whether there really were any "homeless children" within a hundred-mile radius of where we were standing, let alone any so royally disregarded by the state that they needed "emergency aid" from members of the public.

So I indulged myself by devising a reply that I plan to use a lot in the next four years. "Stop worrying and go home." I told the guy. "President Clinton is going to take care of all that, and pay for it by taxing the rich." And then I waltzed off, leaving him speechless.

I recommend a similar response to anybody who is pestered by such bleeding hearts. For 12 years they have snarled and moaned that George strects a decade ago. They have treated the accession of Bill Clinton to the presidency as if it were a sort of secular Second Coming.

OK: as President

Clinton said in his inaugural address, this is their time: Let them seize it.

The "gridlock" excuse won't work. The Democrats control both Houses of Congress by husky majorities. Mr. Clinton is in the Oval Office, with the incomparable Hillary at his side. We are entitled to expect some pretty speciacular results.

Just for one thing, won't it be wonderful when Walking through an airport the other day. I Bush and that unspeakable Ronald Reagan were the homeless begin disappearing from the vas accosted by one of those pests that hang out responsible for the "homeless" that began streets? With four years ahead of him, Mr. Clinton will have little excuse for failure on this highly visible front. If by any chance the homeless, instead of disappearing, turn out to like the Democrats' welfare policies so much that they start proliferating instead, you can count on me to point this out. Without George Bush or Ronald Reagan to pass the buck to, the Clinton administration should and will be forced to swallow every homeless person still around in 1995 one by one, like sophomores gulping

We can also confidently expect the percentage of Americans below the poverty level to fall dramatically. So will the unemployment rate, of course. As for inflation, the sheer force of Mr. Clinton's personality will hold it at bay.

And the best of it all is that, insofar as there is any financial burden to be borne in these various connections, it will be borne by those best able to bear it: "the rich," who, candidate Clinton assured us, haven't been paying their "fair share."

What's more, we know precisely who these fat cats are: any married couple earning more than $200,000 a year, and any single individual earning more than $160,000.

Tiger, Cap acted just like sheep

A new episode of one of the nation's longest-running docudramas provides a powerful lesson that earnest new Clinton officials dare not miss. Originally billed as "The Boys from Bechtel," the episode is now retitled: "Silence of the Sheep." It's the latest in that epic series that will not end, the Iran-Contra Affair, a Reagan-Bush production.

After a half-dozen years, it is still the rage -even when you think you're watching a rerun. suddenly up pops a new twist, an unexpected

The latest: George Shultz Just came out with his book telling us George Bush was a liar. The lesson the Clinton team must learn isn't about Bush (that'd be too easy); it's about Shultz and Caspar Weinberger, the star of another recent episode. It is a lesson about how two public servants can be right on policy - yet still fail the public they really serve.

Once, Shultz and Weinberger were considered the Boys from Bechtel. Shultz was president of the huge construction corporation; Weinberger, chief counsel. Washington had assumed the Boys from Bechtel would march in lockstep in the Reagan administration. Wrong. Shultz and Weinberger were secret rivals, not pals.

It went back to the Reagan transition; both yearned to be secretary of state, but only Weinberger was a Reagan Kitchen Cabinet insider. Shultz was stunned when Reagan phoned to say he knew Shultz felt he could not leave Bechtel. So Ai Haig got State: Weinberger got Defense: Shultz got shafted - and always blamed Weinberger for misleading Reagan.

Exit Haig, wounded in intramural combat: enter Shultz. He and Weinberger were often at odds over policy. But they united against the Iran-Contratemps of Bill Casey and Ollie North - the swapping of missiles for hostages. Yet Shultz and Weinberger said nothing after Reagan and Bush began their public denials.

Misguided loyalty flourishes in Washington like mushrooms in musty places. The Boys from Bechtel, our public servants, decided that the public didn't deserve to know about their leaders' lies. So Cap Weinberger told investigators he had no notes about the Iran-Contra meetings -- when he had 1,700 pages: some showed Reagan and Bush knew things they'd denied knowing.

And Shultz withheld his revelations. While we held our elections in 1988 and 1992, Tiger Shultz held his tongue and capped his pen (and sat on his tiger tattoo) while Bush claimed that, as vice president, he'd been "out of the loop." Only now does Shultz' book recount a tense meeting with Bush on Nov. 9, 1986, six days after the arms for hostages deal was first reported:

"I put my views to him (Bush): ... I knew that an exchange of arms for hostages had been tried on at least one occasion. Bush ad-monished me, asking emphatically whether I realized there were major strategic objectives being pursued with Iran. He said he was very careful about what he said. 'You can't be technically right; you have to be right, I responded. I reminded him that he had been present at a meeting where arms for Iran and hostage releases had been proposed and that he had made no objection. despite the opposi-tion of both Cap and me. 'That's where you are,' I said. There was considerable tension between us when we parted."

Today, Shultz is being celebrated as a noble sayer of sooth. Time magazine mentioned him on its cover and bought excerpts of his book; The Washington fost made his book front-page news.

What sheepdip.

Misguided l o y a l -ty flourishes In Washington mushreems in musty places.

Let Washington's new Clintonians take note: Weinberger and Shultz could have .. should have -- resigned in protest when their prez and veep began their veils of lies. Or, at the very least, they should have told us the truth when we needed to know it - in the 1988 election campaign.

So let us not celebrate Shultz, nor Weinberger. These public servants failed the public by following silently, like sheep, while their Grand Old Party leader pulled his wool over America's eyes.

Joe knows the important stuff

If you are up on things that really matter, then you know that February is a "sweeps" month, when broadcasters hire the Nielsen Media Research firm to rate television shows so they can determine how much to charge advertisers. It is also when broadcast news operations found Things. I have to admit, though, that I've had some difficulty choosing what Really Important Stuff to discourse upon. I thought about reviewing Sonny Bono's book, "And the Beat Goes On," but when I dusted off my copy, I saw that I'm about 18 months too late. Sorry about that. I meant to read it, but things kept getting in the way. Then I remembered something about Superman dying and thought that might make for interesting commentary and went to get the comic book. The dealer said he had sold his last copy in November.

Down the list of Really Important Stuff 1 went. Madonna's sex life. Hillary's hat. The trials of Charles and Di.

Then I hit on it. The Letterman-Leno skirmish, of course. David Letterman of "Late-Night" wanted Jay Leno's "Tonight" slot or nothing. NBC said no, so Dave bolted to CBS for $14 million a year, which comes to about $60,000 per on-air hour.

How important is this? It dominated the headlines for days. Time magazine, the very pulse of America, devoted three pages to the "show-biz cliffhanger." Newsweek gave us the "inside story" in three pages. And the real tipoff? America's newspaper, USA To-day, ran a phone poll and asked us to "vote for whom you'd most like to watch in the late-night hours."

This is clearly important stuff, but I had to stick with things I know. And that's why I chose the Elvis stamp to comment on. Joe knows Elvis. Joe grew up with Elvis.

How important is the stamp story? When Postal Service officials asked us to vote for either a "young Eivis" stamp or an "older Eivis" stamp, did they do it in Washington, D.C., capital of the free world? No way. They unveiled the two designs in Las Vegas.

How important? It caught the attention of no less a naysayer than Ralph Nader, who said: "This is a costly trivialization and diversion of the Post Office a main purpose: The dependable and reliable delivery of the

How important? More than 2 million votes were east, and the winner was announced at Graceland last June 4 at 6:36 a.m., a time selected to allow the morning television shows to carry it live. # Be careful for your heart when you dream

AP Science Writer

BOSTON - A study today raises the possibility that even a good night's sleep, that last refuge of tranquility, may sometimes be harmful to the heart.

The researchers found that the body revs itself up dramatically during dream sleep - enough perhaps to trigger a heart attack. No one has proved that dreaming is actually dangerous. And even if dreaming does turn out to be bad for weak hearts. there may not be a lot anyone can do about it. Avoiding dreams entirely is hard to do and could be unwise, since dreams may play some role in keeping people mentally healthy.

But the study does reveal some startling changes that occur when people seem to be snoozing peacefully: The heart speeds up, blood pressure climbs, and stress hormones prepare the body to run or fight. The most surprising of the effects is the activation of the sympathetic nervous system. These nerves, which regulate a host of biological functions, prepare the body to respond to emergencies, and it is twice as aroused during dream time as when people are awake. "Even at four in the morning. when you think the body should be fast asleep and quiet, everything is pounding away. The sympathetic nervous system is in overdrive," said Dr. Virend K. Somers of the University of Iowa. REM sleep, the stage of sleep when dreams occur, is most common just before people wake up. If sympathetic nervous systems are often in high gear then, he said, that might help explain why heart attacks are hour after getting up.

He speculated that dream sleep may trigger a blood clot in the heart that the victim begins to feel after he gets to his feet. Somers' study, published in the New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted on eight healthy volunteers. While they slept, researchers measured their heart fates, blood pressure and sympathetic nervous systems. They found that during most stages of sleep, the heart rate and blood pressure fell and the sympathetic nervous system grew less active. The exception was during REM - or rapid eye movement - sleep.

During REM sleep, the heart rate and blood pressure rose to the level seen during waking hours. And the sympathetic nervous system spurted to twice the state normal during the day.

most frequent during the first The sympathetic nervous system causes the release of stress hormones that stimulate sweating, slow digestion and widen the airways in the lungs, among many other things. The researchers say it could also make the blood stickier, so it clots faster. While this is good when people are cut in flatfights. most of the time it's not. especially if it causes a blood clot that plugs an artery in the heart.

Researchers noticed several years ago that the hour after people rise is the most dangerous time for the heart, but they are unsure why heart attacks are so common then.

REM sleep accounts for about one-fifth of sleep time and comes and goes during the night. Periods of REM sleep are longest just before people awaken. Some researchers have reported that depriving a person of REM sleep can cause irritability and even hallucinations.

Early test helps ID babies with AIDS

By DANIEL Q. HANEY AP Science Writer

BOSTON - A cheap and simple new test allows AIDSinfected mothers to searn within a week or two after giving birth whether they have transmitted the virus to their babies, doctors reported today.

When infected mothers give birth, they pass on the virus about one-third of the time. But until now, doctors had to wait months before they could tell for sure whether the babies had caught it.

Doctors say the new test. which has been on the market about a year and costs about $80, can settle the question far more quickly. Fast diagnosis enables doctors to begin treatment soon after birth and maybe help AIDSinfected babies live longer. It also cases parents' anxiety.

"It's very important for children and probably even more important for their parents," said Dr. Steven A. Miles of the University of California at Los Angeles.

"I'm not going to allow an agent to do that," said Sgt. James "Sammy" Gibson. "Not that we're above a citizen, but for our credibility, we're not going to do that. It's not that we can't do it. We won't do it."

Roger Smith, a DeLand housing maintenance contractor, said two CCIB agents encouraged him to engage in sexual activity while assisting them in building a prostitution case. Smith admitted to finding the idea intriguing and amusing, but when agents pursued the issue, he became angered and decided to expose the practice.

There has to be respect for authority and I believe that." said Smith, 40. "But this is going over the line. This is not right. This is flat-out wrong.

Smith said the proposal arose after he contacted the Sheriff's Office in late December to pass on information about a possible prostitution operation. After he was contacted by an agent. Smith said he offered to gather additional information because he had access to the women who were involved.

Smith said he had given information to other central Florida investigators before. Lt. Walt Steeb of the Maitland Police Department acknowledged receiving information from Smith several times during the past 18 months. Steeb said he paid Smith for one undercover task.

Sheriff's counsel Dan Broderson drafted a statement to be signed and notarized by Smith's wife acknowledging the potential for her husband's sexual activity and relinquishing Eslinger, his employees and his associates from liability arising from Smith's activities with the department.

"It was solely for liability purposes," said Broderson. "It is my duty to protect the sheriff and the department from all potential situations in the event he contracted a sexuallytransmitted disease or, God forbid, AIDS.

Smith said he was also promised privileged immunity from prosecution.

"I thought to myself I can't believe they would allow people to do this," said Smith. "I was furious. Two wrongs do not make a right."

Subsequent to the meeting. Smith said he was told his wife of his outreach activities that would have to sign a statement sometimes involved going to acknowledging she was aware of her husband's participation in the investigation, which may entail sexual activity.

Smith said he took the form home and gave it to his wife.

"I told her to sign it if she wanted to and she said, 'I'm not going to sign that; b"imid Smith." "I told her I hoped she wouldn't.'

Smith's wife, who asked not to be named, declined to be interviewed, but stated "Whatever my husband has said is the

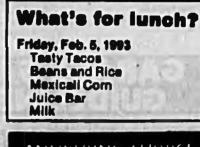

Smith contends he played along with the agents in what became an effort to expose the practice of allowing informants to engage in sexual activity.

"I was naive enough to think I could change them (agents)." said Smith. "I never intended to do this. You can't rationalize you morals, your standards, to beat them (criminals). It's blatant hypocrisy."

Gibson contends Smith backed out of the arrangement because his wife balked at signing the statement.

"If he had said no at any time. that would've been fine," said Gibson. "He was ready to go right then."

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - Lake Howell High School's girls' soccer team did the unimaginable Wednesday night. And they have to put it behind them as quickly as possible if they want to do it again.

Trailing the two-time defending Class 4A state champion Lyman Greyhounds 2.0 late in the second half of their 4A-District 3 semifinal Wednesday night at Lake Brantley High School's Tom Storey Field, the Silver Hawks rallied for a 3-2 overtime victory and a berth in Friday night's championship match.

Earlier Wednesday night, Lake Mary upset Lake Brantley 1-0 on penalty kicks.

In last week's Florida Athletic Coaches Association's Class 4A state poll, Lyman was No. 1, Lake Brantley was third, Lake Howell was ranked fifth and Lake Mary was No. 10. Lyman and Lake Brantley were the tournament's Nos. 1 and 2 seeds while Lake Mary and Lake Howell are the third and fourth seeds, respectively.

Lake Howell and Lake Mary will play for the district championship and a berth in next Tuesday's Region M.championship match this Friday night at 7 p.m. at Tom Storey Field.

When Lyman went up 2.0 midway through the second half, everyone but the Silver Hawks thought the game was over.

'We believed in ourselves," said Lake Howell coach Gerhard Tauscher, "We were not going to let ourselves get down. The girls rose to the occasion. They played their hearts out. They never gave up."

After a scoreless first half, the Greyhounds scored a pair of goals off of corner kicks, Michelle St. Louis converting six minutes into the second half and Adriane Kane netting the other.

Jenny Stewart cut Lyman's lead in half when she scored on an assist from Tammy Zegledi with 12 minutes left in the game, Kellie -Cashlon tied the score with four minutes left when she headed home a corner kick by Angle McCornick.

After the first of two mandatory 10-minute overtime periods passed without any scoring, Holly Meyers netted the game-winner three minutes into the second period. collecting the rebound of her shot off the cross bar and knocking it into the upper right corner.

Lyman actually outshot Lake Howell 33-16 and had an 8-4 advantage in corner kicks, forcing Silver Hawk goalle Lynn Smolinski to make 26 saves. Greyhound goalfe Danya Harris had 11 saves.

The key move McNamara made was having Belinda Morgan and Lohoma Fayson shadow Mainland's N. Warthen, who scored 11 points in the second quarter. With Morgan and Fayson guarding her, Warthen scored only four points in the second half.

SANFORD - It was another night for firsts for the Seminole Community College men's basketball team. Phillip Williams turned in the first triple-double ever for the Raiders and Robert Walker scored in double figures for the first time in his career as SCC turned back St. John's River Community College 85-68 in a Mid-Florida Conference contest at the SCC Health and Physical Education Center Wednesday night.

Williams, a sophomore point guard from Norfolk, Virginia, tossed in 22 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and handed out a career-high 15 assists as Seminole broke a six-game losing streak. He also had four steals.

"Phil played a great game tonight," said SCC head coach Bernard Merthle, "He's scored well for us all season. But tonight, he did the other things we need htm to do - run the offense, get the ball inside and play tough defense."

Walker, a sophomore forward from Dade City making his second start, played the best game in his two years at SCC, scoring 11 points, grabbing six rebounds, blocking two shots, taking a charge, making one steal and handing out two assists.

"Rob gives us someone who will rebound and can also run the floor," said Merthie. "He's worked very hard to earn a starting spot and it looks like that hard work is paying off."

The Raiders trailed early at 9-8, but then got back-to-back three-point plays by Walker and Lake Mary's Jason Hamelin to take the lead. Williams then scored 10 points during a 14-4 run as SCC built a 30-17 lead with 9:15 left in the opening half.

HEY, WHO'S THE MASTER

ROBOTMAN*

Chelation therapy will not improve circulation

think chelation therapy is a good treatment for poor circulation? My legs constantly hurt and my feet are always cold. I'm desperately looking for a remedy.

DEAR READER: Chelation therapy will not improve your circulation, despite the unproved claims of unscrupulcus promoters. Chelation (using substance A to combine with substance B in the body, to counteract B's toxicity) is useful in treating poisonings with copper, nickel, radium, arsenic, iron and other minerals.

No reputable scientific study has shown that chelation reduces arteriosclerotic plaque, the most common cause of arterial blockage. Ask your doctor about more suitable therapy, such as angioplasty (cracking the blockage with a balloon) or by-pass grafting (to re-route blood around the obstruction).

DEAR DR. GOTT: Last year I was diagnosed with walking pneumonia and have suffered from fatigue ever since. My doctor says I might be anemic and ordered blood tests for confirmation. I take a multivitamin every day and am no better. Why do I continue to feel this way?

DEAR READER: After a serious infection, such as pneumonia, many patients continue to feel run-down and tired for months. However, your period of convalescence seems prolonged. Therefore, your doctor should examine you and test you further.

I'd be interested in answers to the following questions, among others: Why did you get pneumonia? Do you still have some lung infection? Is your immune system working properly? Do you have an underlying disorder, such as diabetes or an underactive thyroid gland? What can be done to correct your fatigue?

Your doctor will be able to

DEAR DR. GOTT: Do you initiate the process of investigating your continuing il-l-health. If he needs help, he will probably refer you to an internist, a diagnostic specialist.

Pierre Trudeau once said. "Canada exports hockey players and cold weather, and imports baseball players and acid rain." It imports and exports bridge players. One of the best Canadian players ever is Sami Kehela. But ne reached Canada by circuitous route. He was born in Baghdad. When he was 7 years old, his family moved to India. At 17, he was sent to study in California. It was there that he learned to play bridge. After completing his studies. Kehela moved to London. Finally, in 1957, he settled in Toronto.

He has often played for Canada, and has represented North America three times in the Bermuda Bowl.

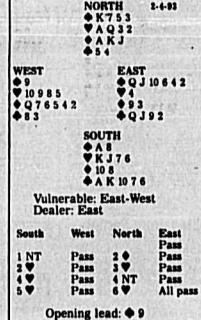

Kehela outplayed his Egyptian opponent in today's deal. It occurred during the 1980 World

Team Olympiad in Valkenburg. Holland.

Kehela opened a strong notrump with slightly unusual distribution. North, Eric Murray. used game-forcing Stayman and drove to a slam once the heart fit came to light.

Both defenders led a spade against six hearts. The Egyptian won with dummy's king, cashed the heart ace and crossed to the heart king. Now he played on clubs, but he could no longer handle the bad splits in both clubs and hearts. finishing one

After winning with dummy's spade king (the ace is needed as a late hand entry). Kehela cashed only the heart ace before turning to clubs. When he led the third round, what could West do? Whether he ruffed or discarded, Kehela could draw all the trumps and concede one club trick to East.
