Therefore unless the contrary can be formally proven, the Church

The Catholic Church recognizes and insists on the permanent and indissoluble nature of marriage. Marriage is "till death de us part." From time to time we hear of are invited to "come and bring annulments of marriage by the Church which permit reamnulments of marriage by the marriage. An annulment is not a dissolution of a valid mar- a prospective member." rene, riage but merely a judicial decision that there was never a valid marriage. There is no marriage to dissolve and strictly speaking there is not a "remarriage, but marriage for the first time if either party marries. Such annulments are comparatively rare, apart from the simple and rather obvious case of a Catholic who did not marry in the Church but they may be granted if it is proven that the contract was not property entered into because of some reasons mentioned already - force, fear, impotence, a previously existing marriage by one party or exclusion by either party at the time of marriage of the indissoluble or nature of marriage.

The Church recognizes divorce only as a legal fiction with effects in civil law. Separation may occur in a marriage for good reason and a civil divorce may be necessary to protect the rights of the innocent party. In the Church's eyes this has no moral stigma, the divorced party may still remain in good standing in the Church. But the parties are still married and are in no way free to marry again unless one dies. A further marriage would be adultery and the permanent intention of continuing to commit adultery would bar that party from the reception of the sacraments. There is not technically an excommunication, rather what is called an "irregular situation." The requirement by the Church that marriages of Catholies take place in the Catholic Church is comparatively recent, being in force throughout the world only since 1908. Its purpose is to ensure that there are no obstacles present to the validity of the marriage - to be sure that the parties are free to marry, that they understand the purpose and the permanent exclusive nature of the marriage contract and that they are marrying freely, without compulsion of any kind.

The priest who assists in the marriage is responsible for investigating these matters, and also for instructing the tions and responsibilities they assume in marriage. The Church's concern for marriage and family life is great. This is the basic society, the fundamental unit in both husth and state. It has repercussions for the parties, for the children and for society. It was established by God, it needs God's help and God's blessing at each stop of the way, and transferring. If the rights belong to someone else — in puritie of a previous valid marriage — the party is not able to really transfer what is not his. The capability of transferring must be both mental and physical — the mental compatoncy required for a contract and the physical potency to perform the act promised. If these are present at the time of marriage that is all — their later loss does not shrugate the contract.

So far we have covered the marriage contract as such—the fact that it is permanently valid or not at the time of a previous valid marriage and the physical potency.

If the point of view is from Washington, the only legical answer is negative. For the transferention not only from one president to another is taking place but it is from Democratic hands to Republican;

And the manner of the transfer is also challenging. It is antirely too soon to evaluate what the election of Richard M. Nixon to the president; will mean. We are neither hold enough or fuolish enough to try.

Nor would we do more than note that the manner of the defeat of Vice President Hubert H. Humphirey bestowed laurels on the Humphrey brow which also must await the hand of time before their meaning on he judged.

ing can be judged. If the point of view is located in Tallahasses, the results of that Election Day can be specifically noted as saying with a very strong voice that the national two-party system is now a political fact in Florida.

There is the incumbent Bepublican Gov. Claude Kirk, confronted by a Democratic controlled legislature. This is parallel in definition with the state of affairs in Washington that President-elect Nixon

However there is a vast difference in the politi cal winds blowing through the legislative halls in Florida. There is the Kirk record on which the GOP chief executive must stand. Furthermore there is the much more important fact that the Florida legislature is now operating under a revised state constitupresent problems which can be seen in the emphasis on education, the need for new roads and the like.

During these post-election days bitterly contested races have been settled. In two instances, the county sheriff and the superintendent of public instruction, the winners, John Polk and John Angel will step into situation which are very much in flux. The disturbing fact of law enforcement, involving petter preparation and better execution of the basic unctions of the sheriff's office is a matter for Sherf-elect Polk to consider.

Mr. Angel's challenge is not new to the county out has a much more important status as the number of children to be educated in our public schools increases, new educational facilities already approved are to be constructed and the whole vast area of education comes into a most critical stage.

Rich Suckers!

As the Christmas buying season approaches it is probably appropriate for the Post Office Department to tell us that Americans, "mostly in low-income brackets" are being bilked of $860 in low-income brackets" are being black of selfmillion a year by mail order schemes. Such persons, already hard-pressed, says this report, are "lured into buying merchandise they don't really need and cannot afford." This is sad but maybe it must be classified under the heading that you can't always protect the poor and the ignorant.

Coincident with this report, however, come the catalogues, not directed at the low-income bracket people. And they carry with them the suggestion that by no means only the poor and the ignorant are ready to be bilked. They offer status stuff at stupefying prices. Maybe it would be nice to serve one Scottish smoked salmon at 889 or a little over $9 a pound. But a lot of the efficurean foods, cans, jars, etc., under their containers from local supermarkets at a fraction

Certainly it is pitiful if the poor and ignorant are being "lured into buying merchandise they don't really need and cannot afford." But evidently not only the poor but the opulent also today are running to be robbed. For those who can afford it, maybe fresh Beluga caviar is worth $12 an ounce. But some of the prices, even in this day of high living costs, suggest that the suckers are not only the poor.—Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer.

Salute To SREB

The notion advanced in the 1930s that only problems has been disproved by successful interstate action during the last 20 years.

Over the years, SREB has developed joint programs on everything from mental health to teaching forestry. In our judgment, it has been a tremendous success. Not only has the SREB strained many practical goals, but it has flustrated to the country what states can do by trated to the country what states can do by working together. — Charleston (S. C.) JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)-Florida's welfare aid to the poor -second only to education in the amount of money involved—is headed for a major increase if the new welfare board dominated by Gov. Claude Kirk's appointees can swing it. The board Thursday adopted a $300 million budget for basic programs during the next two years, with $130 million of it coming from state funds and the rest from the federal government. That would be 50 per cent above current spendings. It also proposed a $169.9 million medical assistance package -851 million of it state moneytied to the new Title 19 federal Medicaid program. It would be about 70 per cent higher than medical aid now available.

Dr. M. Eugene Flipse of Coral Gables, one of the newest members of the board, pointed out that Florida currently ranks 42nd among the states in medical aid for the poor and 47th or 48th in geeral welfare to the aged, young, disabled and blind. "Florida's personal income ranks 19th in the nation, so our welfare aid should logically be 19th," Plipue said. Although legislatures have historically made drastic cuts in bers of the current board and executives of the State Welfare Department plan to fight for a "We can't move up to 19th in
